WORLD'S FAIR LETTER.

Special Correspondence.
Great preparations had been made for the celebration of the Fourth of July. The new Columbian Liberty Bell, which was dedicated to the cause of universal liberty and peace, pealed forth its mellow notes for the first time; 2,000 voices augmented by a large concourse of people joined in rendering songs such as "Old Hundred," "America" and "Star Spangled Banner," and altogether the exercises were full of interest. In the evening the lagoons echoed the music of the horns and trombones, for the players of these instruments were stationed in launches on the water while the chorus of many throats took up the glad refrain until it died away amid the waves of Lake Michigan.

New Hampshire was first on the list of dedications last week, and Gov.
Smith told the people who were present at the housewarming, that his state could raise something else beside granite, for which she is justly noted.
The Yankees know how to do the handsome thing in the way of entertainment, and this occasion was no exception to their general rule.

How very much those who had had the pleasure of listening to Sousa's band, regret his leave-taking for Manhattan Beach. While others will come who will do much toward filling the vacancy, still many of us will not be satisfied until he comes among us again.

The music in Festival Hall continues to improve, if such a thing were possible. It is a treat to hear any of these concerts oratorios, and a disappointment to be absent when one has a taste for music, and has attended any of the series.

Ceylon, that isle of the sea, was among the others who put their best foot ahead, and told those interested to step into her home, and see what she produces. There was no noise or undue commotion attendant upon this opening, and yet many will be surprised to know that some of our best teas and choicest woods come that far away land.

Chief Allison and those of his friends who did not fall by the wayside, accomplished as much as George Francis Train, and did it all in four hours. In that immense manufacturers and liberal arts building they started to walk from one nation of this earth to the other, and a right royal welcome did they receive from those who represented the powers that be. The truth is the said George Francis was not in it, and ere Mr. Allison and his friends finished, I reckon many of them wished they were not
"in it" also.

What could be more conducive to fair junketing than the weather last week. Comfortable days, bright sunshine, cool, restful evenings and nights.
Don't forget your wraps and light overcoats.

We must not forget to chronicle the reception given to Miss Sophia B. Hayden, who is the architect of that beautiful building, erected through the efforts of the gentler sex. It stands out prominent among the rest, and takes rank among the best, and where most all are best, this is saying a good deal.
Of course Mrs. Potter Palmer and many other women identified with woman's work, took a prominent part in the reception.

The evident sincerity depicted on the faces of the interested audience who gathered and took part in the Sunday worship, speaks well for the stand taken and accepted, in holding these services, and it is the intention of the fair officials to continue them, and to have noted ministers of different denominations officiate from this time on.

How much we are dependent on those who till the soil, and the complete installation of exhibits in agricultural building shows to the world what mother earth can produce. The banquet served because Mr. Buchanan had set his house in apple-pie order, was made up of contributions from the exhibitors in this immense granary or storehouse, and it is safe to say that none went away hungry because of lack of variety.

Those queer little people from the island of Java have been beset with many difficulties in getting their village in shape, but now, that it is done, it is one of the great attractions.

Arkansas travelers or newspaper men ran up to see how things were going, and, judging from the reception given, they must have had a good time. Many of the bright lights in that state's journalistic circles, told us how they do things down where "Kit" lived, and where sawmills abound.

Brooklyn which is destined to be a part and parcel of "Greater New York" (when the solons at Albany so decide) held high carnival on June 27, and one would have thought that all her inhabitants had been turned loose, so great were the number wearing ribbon with the magnetic word "Brooklyn" inscribed thereon. The Arion singing society of which that city is justly proud, came all the way to lend their voices, in a specially prepared and well rendered program. Mayor Harrison of Chicago greeted Mayor Boody of Brooklyn with his well known hospitality over in the New York state building where the reception was held.
A more beautiful day could not have been chosen.

Sweeten says she has no natal or anniversary day, for almost before the the mountains were brought forth, she had been from everlasting;
therefore, emblematical of her people in a quiet way, she bid all who would come in and see her exhibits, for they are contained in this one building.

That white haired old man, Frederick Douglass lifted up his voice at the dedication of the home built by Hayti, and many distinguished personages were present.

The Missouri newspaper people came up, so that when they go home, they can advise all of their readers to make haste and come to the fair, and if the good time they had while here, is indicative of what they will write,
we can expect to have all Missouri—even including St. Louis—emptied into our lap very quickly.

Last Tuesday, "Brooklyn day" two worn out, tired, dusty men started to go through the gate at the entrance of music hall. They heard the Arion society singing inside. The doorkeeper halted them with the information: "It costs one dollar to go into the concert."
One of our tired friends turned to the other and said "Come, Jim, let's go—we don't want to go in anyway, we're too tired." If that building had been as high as the masonic temple, without an elevator, they would have climbed to the top—if it did not cost anything.
We are all looking for something for nothing.

FAIR FISH IN LUCK.

WISCONSIN EXHIBITS TO BE TAKEN HOME.

Wheat Goes Down Almost Out of Sight on the Chicago Board—Buckeye Prohibitionists Early Afield—A Ministerial Moon-shiner—Money in the New Orleans Mint Mutilated.

Will Remove the Exhibit.

WISCONSIN'S fish exhibit in the Fisheries Building at the World's Fair is to be taken out and the handsome private car Badger, belonging to the Fish Commission, will be hauled back to Madison. The Wisconsin Board of World's Fair Managers and the Wisconsin Fish Commission have split upon the rock of contention and the board has refused to pay the bills of the commission contracted in the installation of the exhibit in the Fisheries Building, and, further, has refused to accept the exhibit, which comprises all the food fishes which inhabit the waters of Wisconsin's lakes and rivers and is among the notable displays in the Fisheries Building. This decision was reached Thursday at a meeting of the Board of Managers for Wisconsin. It was not snap judgment, for the matter had kept the board in executive session for three evenings until midnight, and Governor Peck, of Wisconsin, had vainly sought to bring about peace between the warring factions.

Lowest in Thirty Years.

WHEAT broke its lowest record for low prices in Chicago Thursday. The tight money market was the cause. A large speculative long interest in the July option exists, and owing to the difficulty of getting money holders to do not want to have the article delivered to them. This brought out large offerings and the prices dropped 2 cents to 62 1/2 cents. Those who sold bought September delivery and at times had to pay a difference of 6 cents. Statisticians figure that this means an interest charge at the rate of about 40 per cent. for carrying the wheat.

Ohio Prohibition Ticket.

OHIO Prohibitionists have nominated the following State ticket: Governor, Rev. Gideon P. Mayhlin, of Germantown; Lieutenant Governor, S. H. Ellis, of Warren County; Treasurer, Abraham Ludlow, of Springfield; Attorney General, S. E. Young, of Port Clinton; Supreme Court Judge, J. A. Galbraith, of Belleaire; Food and Dairy Commissioner, S. H. Todd, of Wakefield; member of the Board of Public Works, E. H. Brosius, of Clark County.

BREVITIES.

It is now denied that the Pullman car shops at Detroit will be removed.

BURGERS picked open a window of E. F. Hart's bank at Council Bluffs, Iowa, and stole $100 and a number of drafts.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND expects to be at his cottage on Buzzard's Bay July 17, unless a message from his family summons him earlier.

THE Bedford Stone Quarries Company at Bedford, Ind., the largest producers of oolitic limestone in the world, made an assignment, but the business will not be discontinued.

THE Supreme Court of Minnesota decided that a person injured by a defective sidewalk cannot recover from the city if he was aware of the defects and did not walk around them.

LETTA RAY, a young adventuress who forged the name of a business man of St. Joseph, Mo., to a check for $100, was sentenced in that city to the penitentiary for a term of five years.

THE grounds of the Missouri State Fair Association, containing forty-seven acres, near Sedalia, Mo., were sold under a deed of trust to Charles A. Caldwell, of Alton, Ill., for $21,700.

WALTER H. LAWSON, a young man whose home is at Austin, Ill., turned up in Norwalk, Ohio. He can give no account of how he wandered so far from home. He says he has had typhoid fever.

IN one of the vaults of the United States mint at New Orleans about $20,000 in small bills are found to have been burned at the ends, and the electric lighting apparatus is charged with the fault.

GEORGE SCHAFER, under sentence to be hanged at St. Louis, was declared insane. Schaffer, who had always been known as "Crazy George," killed Henry Grattan two years ago for teasing him about his eccentricities.

JOHN HAZALENS and Harry Williams are in jail in St. Paul on the charge of passing counterfeit money. The police of the Twin Cities think they have struck an organized counterfeiting plant, and more arrests are expected.

UNITED STATES MARSHAL HUNT, of Dallas, Tex., district has received notice of the arrest of S. J. Walling, Jr., cashier of the City National Bank of Brownwood, on information filed by John J. Gannon, bank examiner, charging Walling with embezzling from said bank $70,000.

BECAUSE he wanted all the pathway for himself a man has not yet been arrested for pushing two inoffensive little Mexican burros over the edge of a precipice in the Cliff Dwellers' exhibit at the World's Fair. One of them died soon after. The man got away. Had he not done so the angry crowd would have thrown him after the burros.

EASTERN.

BOSTON banks will issue clearing house certificates to relieve the pressure for currency.

THE Rev. Dr. Charles A. Hay, professor of Greek at the theological seminary at Gettysburg, is dead.

RABIES is raging among the cows in the suburbs of Newport, Minn. A mad dog is responsible for the infection.

MURDERER FITZTHUM was executed by electricity at Auburn, N. Y., Monday at noon. He killed a young man named Raehl in Buffalo, April 7, 1892.

MRS. HOMER R. BALDWIN, of New York, will soon be in possession of $50,000 in cash, which the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad Company has agreed to pay her in settlement for the injuries she received in the railway disaster at Hastings Christmas evening, 1891. This is said to be the largest sum of money ever paid to a single individual by a railroad company in settlement for damages. The allegation that Mrs. Baldwin was traveling upon a pass makes the railroad's action all the more interesting. With her husband, another gentleman, her mother-in-law, and her sister-in-law, Miss Eleanor Baldwin, Mrs. Baldwin was on her way to Niagara Falls to spend Christmas. The young man who accompanied the party and Miss Baldwin were almost instantly killed, the elder Mrs. Baldwin died in the Yonkers Hospital from her injuries, and Mrs. Homer R. Baldwin lay at the point of death for many weeks. Before the accident Mrs. Baldwin, who was 26 years old, was a beautiful woman. She emerged from the hospital with her life, it is true, but she was marred almost beyond recognition, with every distinguishing feature gone.

WESTERN.

A WOMAN and three children perished in a small fire at Saginaw, Mich.

A COMPANY has been formed in Knobnoster, Mo., to search for $1,500,000 alleged to have been buried there by Spaniards years ago.

GEORGE W. SAMPLE, of Troop G, Fifth Cavalry, of Kansas, was drowned in the Rio Grande at Laredo, Tex., where the troop is stationed.

FIRE at Minneapolis destroyed the Bassett planing mill, the Clayton & Bassett plow factory, and the Bidwell rendering works. Loss, $50,000, with but light insurance.

A LONE horseman forced the manager of the eating-house at Coolidge, N. M., to give him $200, the contents of the safe, and then escaped into the woods. Troops are in pursuit.

THE Attorney General of Minnesota has decided that no funds are legally available for the proposed State elevator at Duluth, but the State Railway and Warehouse Commission purchased a site.

THE colt Boundless, owned by J. E. Cushing, of St. Paul, captured the tenth American Derby at Chicago, Saturday, winning $50,000, in 2:36; St. Leonards second, Clifford third. Fifty thousand people saw the race.

A FORTUNE of $250,000 has been left Martin S. Martin, a livery stable foreman of Tacoma, Wash. The fact was advertised throughout the country, but Martin never heard of it, and it was common report that he was dead.

AS a result of a fire due to a dust explosion in the Baker Bros. building, Chicago, four employees were more or less injured and $20,000 damage done. Wm. Fuhrwerk, could not be found and is supposed to have been burned to death.

JUDGE HANFORD, of the United States Circuit Court at Seattle, Wash., has rendered a decision declaring that the law of the State prohibiting the sale of cigarettes is in contravention of Art. 1 of Sec. 8 of the Constitution of the United States, and null and void in so far as it prohibits or attempts to prohibit selling, giving, or furnishing to any one by an importer.

A CHICAGO special telegram of June 30 says that the owners of No-to-Bac, a proprietary medicine sold under an absolute guarantee to cure the tobacco habit in every form, have met with such wonderful success that a syndicate offer of one-half million has been refused. It is said that their sales are enormous, and that there is hardly a drug store in this country and Canada but what sells it. They differ from any other proprietary concerns in the fact that they promptly refund money when No-to-Bac fails to cure.

A WOMAN calling herself a "female detective" and displaying a tin badge as her credentials frightened Miss Adeline Evans, of Chicago, into hysterics at the St. Louis (Mo.) Union Depot. Miss Evans was on her way to Kansas City. The detective waited until Miss Evans had got on a Kansas City train, and then accosted her roughly with the assertion: "You are Mollie Irwin. I have been looking for you," at the same time displaying her badge. The young lady began crying, and several passengers gathered around her, whereupon the "female detective" made herself scarce.

AN enterprising reporter for a Chicago morning newspaper arrived at Waterloo, Iowa, a few days ago, to accompany on his bicycle the cowboy racers through the homestretch to Chicago. They were expected a certain night, and when a lone horseman on a tired-looking steed came into town in the early evening, preceded by the young man on a bicycle, a congratulating crowd surrounded the pair. The bicycle rider spared no money in lavishing the best the hotel afforded on the horseman, and was considerably chagrined on the subsequent discovery that the horseman was a Cedar Falls wag, well pleased with the success of his little hoax, and not a cowboy racer.

GOV. ALTGELD of Illinois has pardoned Samuel Fielden, Oscar Neebe, and Michael Schwab, the Chicago

anarchists confined in the Joliet penitentiary for participation in the Haymarket massacre on the night of May 4, 1886. The Governor declares that in his belief the conviction of these men, and also of those who were hanged, was unjust and illegal. The trial judge, court officials, jury, prosecuting counsel, and the police are sharply criticised in the Governor's message of pardon. The petitions for pardon contained over 17,000 names, many of merchants, bankers, lawyers, and clergymen.

WITHOUT warning a carriage containing four persons, Mrs. Inholsen, her two children and a girl friend, was run down by a Chicago, Burlington and Quincy milk train at the Millard avenue crossing in Chicago, and the children were instantly killed. The mother was thrown a distance of ten feet and badly hurt, while her 13-year-old companion was caught in the wreck and so badly hurt that her recovery is doubtful. The bodies of the children were terribly mangled and were strewn along the track. The unconscious forms of Mrs. Inholsen and Maggie Slavin were quickly removed to a place of safety until the patrol-wagons arrived.

FAITH in the faith cure has secured another victim in Omaha. Only the barest chance prevented its securing seven. Miss Lydia Matilda Lehnig died from the effects of an unknown poison at four o'clock on Sunday afternoon. Six other members of the family are seriously ill, and two of them are not expected to survive. The Lehnigs were poisoned while eating supper Thursday, by what is not known. Conrad Lehnig, the head of the family, is a firm believer in the power of faith to effect cures, and it was owing to his obstinacy in this respect that no physician was summoned until Saturday night. It was then too late to aid the girl who died. Mrs. Conrad Lehnig is in a precarious condition, and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Theodore Lehnig, of Winona, Minn., is thought to be dying. It is believed the poison was on some lettuce had Thursday.

COVERED with dust and with the perspiration rolling down his bronzed face and dropping on the neck of a faded, mud-spattered bronco who could not be urged into a trot, the winner of the great cowboy race rode up to the gates of the Buffalo Bill show in Chicago at exactly 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. Clad in a dirty white shirt, a pair of mud-covered yellowish jeans and wearing on his head a worn-out, limber-rimmed cowboy hat, John Berry, the victor, half tumbled from his saddle in front of Col. Cody's tent, so weak and tired that he was unable to rise to his feet or grasp the proffered hand of Cody, who welcomed the little man who had ridden 1,040 miles and won a race that will doubtless be famous in history. Berry was hardly able to hold his head up and was supported through the crowd by two sturdy cowboys to the mess tent, where he was laid upon the sofa and stimulants given him. The two horses Berry rode are owned by Jack Hall, and were ridden alternately. Berry claimed that he had not closed his eyes for ten days, but his backers stated that he slept while riding.

MONDAY morning, at Fort Scott, Kan., without a moment's warning, the Tremont House, a four-story brick structure, collapsed, burying nearly seventy-five people in the debris. Suddenly the walls of the building began to waver and totter and then they fell. The walls seemed to first spread apart so that the floor joists were drawn out of the brick walls. The three upper floors fell on top of one another, carrying their contents down with them. At the first cracking noise of the parting timbers the people in the hotel and in the stores beneath sought safety by flight. Those nearest the entrances, doors and windows made good their escape, some of them missing but by an inch being caught by the tumbling masonry. For those who were in the middle parts of the stores and for the servants at work in the rooms of the hotel escape was impossible. They went down with and were crushed beneath the ruins. The horror of the thing seemed to daze and paralyze the people for a moment, when the work of rescuing the living and recovering the bodies of the dead was begun. Under the command of the Mayor and Chief of Police the citizens went to work. The fire and police departments did all in their power to hasten the work. It is thought that at least twenty were killed.

SOUTHERN.

THE crevasse at Rescue Plantation, Iberville Parish, La., is 600 feet wide and has caused $1,000,000 damages.

IN South Carolina, after July 1, all saloons must go out of business, the State dispensary system undertaking to supply liquors to the extent needed.

H. R. MARTIN, from Memphis, Tenn., committed suicide by jumping from a ferryboat at St. Louis, Mo. In the pocket of his coat, which he left, was a pathetic note to his wife at home complaining of lack of work and money.

WASHINGTON.

SURGEON GENERAL WYMAN, of the marine hospital service, thinks the United States stands an even chance of escaping cholera altogether this year, and says that even should it arrive it will be quickly stamped out.

SECRETARY CARLISLE discovered a few days ago that the Bureau of Engraving and Printing was printing 4 per cent. bonds. The plates were made ready months ago, and everything was in shape to meet an emergency promptly. But there was no need of printing bonds until their issue was actually decided as a matter of administration policy. Investigations show that the presses had been started under a mistaken order. This had come about naturally enough in the transfer of the bureau from Capt. Meredith, the outgoing chief, to Mr. Johnson, his successor. Both Meredith and Johnson were in New York arranging some details of the bureau's business, and the order to print the 4-per-cent. had been given through some misunderstanding. This is all there is to the story, which has caused something of a sensation in financial circles.

FOREIGN.

IT is now stated that the engagement of Princess Alice of Hesse to the Czarowitz is definitely settled.

A SPANIARD who arrived in Monte Carlo from New York last week killed himself, after having lost £100,000 in gambling.

ADVICES from Manila show that a desperate fight has occurred on the island of Mindoro, the largest of the Philippine group. A force of 6,000 rebellious natives under the leadership of their Sultan made an attack upon Fort Munnungan, Mindoro. The Spanish garrison succeeded in repulsing the natives after a stubbornly contested fight. The natives lost eighty-seven killed, including the Sultan, while 300 of their number were wounded. The Spanish loss, if any, is not known.

IN explaining to the India Council the bill providing for the stoppage of the free coinage of silver and other monetary measures, the adoption of which was announced Monday, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Viceroy of India, said he hoped the Government would not be criticised for disposing of the important question at a single sitting. The keynote of the scheme, according to Simla advices, was rather to prevent a further fall in exchange than to raise the value of the rupee. The fixing of the provisional rate of exchange at 4s 4d provided an automatic means of preventing the closing of the mints and the violent disturbing of exchange rates. The rate of exchange had been fixed high enough to relieve the Government of its most pressing necessities, while it was well within the limits of the recent fluctuations. There should be no mistake, the Viceroy said, about the facts. It is not proposed to substitute gold for silver currency. No attempt would be made at present to fix a legal tender price for gold. While the ratio of value was mentioned it was only provisional. In conclusion, the Viceroy expressed the Government's sense of the gravity of the step it was about to take. The importance of the action of the government of India in dropping the coinage of silver cannot be overestimated at this time. It was the only country, with the exception of Mexico, in the world, the mints of which were open to the coinage of silver without limitation. It is the general opinion that the closing of the mints of India against the free coinage of silver cannot fail to depress the price of that metal.

IN GENERAL.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND has accepted an invitation to attend the centennial celebration of Williams College, at Williamstown, Mass., Oct. 9.

PRESIDENT DIAZ, of Mexico, is making preparations to visit Europe this summer. He will probably pass through the United States and spend a few days in Chicago.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

The improvement expected from the issue of clearing-house certificates, thus utilizing credits instead of cash in local dealings, has not been realized. Other cities, especially at the West, have not taken similar measures to relieve the pressure, and the demand for money from the interior continues unabated.

ONE WAS CAPTURED.

UNSUCCESSFUL ATTEMPT AT TRAIN ROBBERY.

Many Hurt in a World's Fair Accident—Michigan Town Swept by Flames—Hay for France—Ohio Town Treasury Looted—Telegraph Company Must Pay Damages.

Fireman Killed, Robber Captured.

A DARING and tragic attempt to rob a train was made Wednesday on the Corpus Christi passenger in sight of Breckenridge, Tex. As the train pulled out of Breckenridge a man presented a couple of revolvers at the engineer, Mike Tearney, and Fireman Frank Martin and commanded them to run the train across San Antonio River, about a quarter of a mile away, and stop. The engineer reversed his engine and ran out on it followed by the fireman. The robbers fired upon the latter, shooting him through the heart. The train had by this time stopped when the robber sprang to the engineer's seat, and pulled the throttle wide open. The conductor applied the air brake from one of the coaches, bringing the train to a standstill, whereupon the robber left the engine and ran down the track in the direction of the river. There were three men in the gang, and J. D. May, one of the robbers, was captured.

Augusta, Mich., Scorched.

SIXTEEN business places and four dwellings in Augusta, a village of 500 inhabitants in Kalamazoo County, Michigan, were destroyed by fire Wednesday morning. The aggregate loss is $50,000 and the insurance but $15,000. Only a few of the buildings will be rebuilt. All the buildings between the Michigan Central track and Clinton street, on both sides of Webster street, were burned except the elevator. Seth Gregory came near losing his life. He was sleeping in a burglar-proof bed and was not awakened until the walls of his building fell in.

Says His Hide Is Tough.

WHEN asked by a United Press representative if he had anything to say to the attacks made on him by the papers because of his action in pardoning the anarchists, Governor Altgeld said: "Let them pitch in and give me the devil if they want to. They could not cut through my hide in three weeks with an ax."

A GANG of would-be train robbers were captured at Omaha. They had planned to hold up the Missouri Pacific night express, but quarreled among themselves, and one of the gang gave the plot away to the police.

AN explosion of gas occurred at Green Ridge Colliery near Mount Carmel, Pa. Dominick Enderley was killed, Chestira Kesner fatally injured, and Adolph Menepack, Anthony Patso, Ignatz Grosky, Joe Carline, Cashmere Allinosky and an unknown Poleander seriously injured. The last named is frightfully scorched and it is thought cannot recover.

EIGHTY persons fell fifteen feet with a temporary flooring in the building of the color department at the World's Fair grounds Wednesday afternoon, and eighteen of the number received injuries which necessitated their being taken to the Emergency Hospital. Hardly a single one of the other persons escaped without injury of some nature in the way of bruises. No one was killed in the accident, though one man is seriously injured and five of the number suffered broken legs.

IT is claimed the new city directory of Chicago will show a population of nearly 2,000,000.

CHAPTER XXIV—Continued.

The book was brought, and Ralph Denham, who knew the characteristics of every man on board, called out the fifty, or rather forty-nine names he wanted, and Valentine wrote them down.

"Now, have them assemble quietly in the ward room," said the captain. Within ten minutes the sailors were gathered in the ward room, where lights were lit and the doors guarded.

Captain Denham removed his disguise before meeting the men, but as they supposed he was in New York, their surprise and joy may be imagined at seeing him.

As has been said, he knew every man present, and they had been boys together. He could trust them as implicitly as he could Mr. Hedges or Mr. Valentine. They were more than a lot of ordinary young sailors, they were men of rare intelligence, any one of whom could manage the Sea Hawk if occasion required. They were volunteers, fighting for the honor and safety of the province in which they were born.

Subterfuge was out of place with such men, so Ralph wisely concluded to tell them the whole truth, which he did, after first cautioning them to silence and secrecy.

He told of his own adventures, who Fox was, and the plan he, Captain Denham, had decided on to capture the pirate and bring him to justice.

While Ralph was speaking, the comments of the men, and the many shakes of the head, told that they were not taken by surprise so very much.

"I have chosen you, my shipmates," said Ralph, in conclusion, "not because you are braver and more reliable than the rest of the crew, but I wanted, or rather Fox wants, only fifty men, so as we have all been friends since boyhood, you will understand me when the time for action comes as others might not."

The men would have broken into a cheer had not Ralph checked them in time.

Believing that Fox would not permit the sailors from the Sea Hawk to use arms, or that he might try to lock them up when the fight came, he made each man conceal two pistols and a long dirk on his person. A rallying cry was agreed on in the event of a fight at night, and the conduct that should govern each man; also the name Captain Denham was to go by, and the fact that they were to take no more notice of him than of their other companions till the time came.

The arrangements were not perfected when day broke. Soon after Mr. Frenaud came on board with a letter from Captain Fox to Lieutenant Hedges, asking if the men required would be sent on board.

"Our men are volunteers," said Mr. Hedges, "and I have not the power to send them to another ship without their own consent. But last night I explained to them that there was a chance, if they went with the Wanderer for a week, to have a brush with that traitor and dog, Kidd; so fifty of the lads are ready."

"Ah, that is good news. If we don't show them Kidd," laughed Frenaud, "then that fellow will be harder to catch than the Flying Dutchman. We have fifty or sixty men on the sick list whom we shall leave with you for a few days. They are not much under the weather, but I fear they have been indulging too much on shore. I suppose you are all anxious to have Captain Denham back."

Honest George Hedges could not reply to this with a straight face, so Valentine answered:

"Oh, yes. But we can get along without him for a while."

Within two hours the boats of both ships made their transfers, and Ralph Denham and his gallant boys were on the Wanderer.

The sixty bearded ruffians who came on board the Sea Hawk did not look like men that ever had been sick, but they had a part to play, and it can be said, whether to their credit or not, that they played it exactly as Capt. Fox wished.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE WANDERER AGAIN WEIGHS ANCHOR.

Captain Fox believed that he had Colonel Graham wholly in his power, and he bled him accordingly. In addition to the large sums the Colonel had already paid to his tool, he now gave him more, not so much, Fox thought, for gratitude as to insure his silence about the crimes on Long Island, Bermuda, and Long Island, New York.

Fox would not have been quite so comfortable with his aristocratic guest could he have known the truth.

Before leaving New York, Graham had arranged with one of his tools to notify the governor at a certain date that Captain Kidd would be about that time off the eastern end of Long Island; and this tool did his work well.

The governor's object in sending for Captain Denham was to put him on Fox's track; but as there were no other ships in the harbor suited to this work, and Ralph Denham neither reported in person nor by letter, the authorities were perplexed, and the young captain was in disgrace.

After Graham felt assured that Ralph Denham was out of the way, he would have given hundreds could he have communicated to Mr. Hedges, without danger to himself, that the Wanderer was commanded by Capt. Kidd.

Graham loathed and dreaded the man whom he had used so many years to further his own designs; and now as Fox told of his plans for the future, the Colonel was amazed at the man's audacity and ingenuity.

It was arranged that by daybreak of the morning that Ralph Denham and his men went on board the Wanderer, that Colonel Graham and his servant should go ashore to the inn, and make immediate preparations for returning to New York.

Othello, or some other servant equally skillful, was as essential to Graham's comfort as his clothing and his meals. But when daylight came, and Othello did not report at his master's door, as was his habit, that choleric gentleman was highly indignant.

In obedience to the Colonel's request, a search of the ship was made for Othello, but he failed to reveal himself. One of the most active of the searchers, and the only one who could have thrown any light on the matter, was the shrewd Scotch boy, Don; and he did not think it to his interest to tell that he had seen Othello vanishing through an open port the night before, and swimming in the direction of the Sea Hawk.

"Depend upon it, that old hag, Dinah, has seduced the boy off," said Fox. "And my advice to you is to go ashore and inyoke the assistance of Uncas. The old woman has been adopted by his people, and the boy is with her. Strange that the woman should live so long and never seem to grow older."

Graham said he thought she was a devil, if ever one appeared in human form. "Yet," he added, "it is strange, knowing us as she does, that she did not tell the people. Supposing she were to say that your name was not Fox, but William Kidd."

"Why," laughed Fox, "the people would say she was insane. But if she had told them before Ralph Denham's death the story of his father's murder and the fact that he was Lord Paliton by right of birth, why, then the people would begin to investigate, and, egad, they might find it to be true; eh, Colonel?"

Col. Graham made no response, but the glitter of his cold gray eyes told how Fox's words maddened him.

To get out of this man's hateful company, as well as to institute a search for his runaway servant, Graham went ashore before breakfast, immediately after the men arrived from the Sea Hawk.

He would not have descended to the boat so steadily had he known that one of the men on whose shoulder he laid his hand to steady himself was Ralph Denham, whom he believed to be dead. As soon as Graham left, Captain Fox and Guy Frenaud went down to the cabin, where they found Don in attendance, looking as docile and innocent as if never a thought of revolt had entered his mind.

"Go out, Don, and see about breakfast, Mr. Frenaud and I wish to be alone," said Fox, and the lad bowed low and retired.

"Egad, Frenaud," said Fox, striking the table, "we are in luck. If the powers in New York don't visit me inside of twenty-four hours with a strong fleet—and I know they haven't got one—I'll sail within the week with my two ships right into the harbor, and unfurl my flag before their eyes, to show I set them at defiance."

"But will that pay?" asked Frenaud, alarmed at the Captain's proposal.

"Pay!" Confound it, man, the true sailor doesn't think all the time of prize money; he must give some thought to glory."

"Then you feel that we are sure of the Sea Hawk?"

"As sure, Frenaud, as that you are sitting there. Why, sir, the ship is at this moment virtually in our possession. Our fellows will do their work when they see my signal. Hedges cannot have more than eighty men left on the Sea Hawk, and suspecting nothing, they will be wholly unprepared for our onset."

"It is certainly a splendid scheme, and I cannot see why success should not crown it," said Frenaud.

"Success will crown it, sir. Never feel half-hearted or in doubt about a matter in which you are interested. Your own confidence inspires success, and men who enter battle determined to win always succeed if they are well led."

"You are quite right there, Captain. And now as to the plans?"

"It will hardly do, Frenaud, for us to put the Sea Hawk's men on board between the decks till we get out of sight of the town. When the fellows see that their choice lies between walking a plank and taking service with me, they will swear allegiance to the black flag; but for that I care nothing one way or the other."

"These fellows are brave, but they are Puritans, and so will not make contented freebooters. Gad, Hedges! he is a gallant sailor, but it is inevitable. Well, as to our movements—we get under way when the tide is on the turn, and go down with the ebb."

"That will be at half past 5."

"About that."

"And as to this reception?"

"It comes off, Frenaud. Don't you understand it?"

"I must confess I cannot see what you are to do with the people that come on board, unless you land them here," said the lieutenant.

"To land part and hold the rest would be to alarm this and all the adjoining settlements, with their swarms of castles and boats, and also to place in doubt our success with the Sea Hawk. We must take all hands and land the party, except Miss Hedges and Miss Condit, at the eastern end of Gardner's Island. A bold scheme, but you do as I say, you are told, and leave the rest to me."

Captain Fox rang a bell, and Don came in at once with the breakfast. This over, the officers went on deck, and the arrivals from the Sea Hawk were set to work preparing the Wanderer for the cruise she was to begin that day.

It was still early in the morning when Captain Fox went ashore. Nearly the first man he met was Dr. Hedges, who told him that the people were very much divided as to the propriety of arresting the post-rider the night before, and that he, Dr. Hedges, thought it would be wise to let the man go.

"I did not arrest him without orders, and I cannot release him without breaking them. The man is well cared for, but he is a criminal, and he will hang as soon as I get him to New York," said Fox.

"Ef 'at man don't die till den, ee'll lit forever," croaked a voice directly behind Fox, that made him jump and turn as if he had been pricked by a sword.

"Ha, you hag!" he said, recognizing Dinah. "Where is your grandson that you caused to run away from Colonel Graham?"

"Ye'd better go ax Cap'n Kidd dat question. Ha, ha, ha!" and Dinah laughed and shook herself, and with her head to one side peered up in Fox's red face.

"Old Dinah is crazy, Captain Fox; you must not heed her," said Doctor Hedges, leading his friend away.

"I am sorry," said Captain Fox, "that the people of Sag Harbor, to whom I am indebted for so many courtesies, should think I would do anything unbecoming an officer in her majesty's service. He was feeling in his pocket as he spoke, and now, to the doctor's surprise, he pulled out a large silken purse, filled with gold, and continued: "I have been anxious before starting on this cruise, from which, as there is chance of a heavy fight, I may never return, to do something for the poor and dependent of your beautiful town. Take this purse, my dear doctor. I know not how much it contains, and give it to those who may need it."

The doctor, who was an exceedingly kind-hearted man, took the purse—its weight surprised him—and as he hid it away, he said:

"We all hope that you will return, and, though some may be angered by what they do not understand, I am sure you will not leave a foe behind you."

"I know I shall leave one true, earnest friend," said Fox, seizing the doctor's hand and shaking it effusively. "Now, my dear doctor, as I have business with her Majesty's messenger, Colonel Graham, I must leave you, and shall expect to greet you and your estimable family on board the Wanderer this afternoon."

The doctor said he would surely be there, and then he hurried home to give Lea and her mother another evidence of Captain Fox's princely generosity and Christian thoughtfulness.

He found Ellen Condit at his house, and told her that he would go up soon to see her father, whose extraordinary conduct of late puzzled him not a little, and made him extremely anxious for his old friend's health.

"I think," said Ellen, "that father is feeling very well; but if you go up to the place this morning you will not find him."

"Where is he?"

"On board the Sea Hawk."

"Why, he spends half his time there," said Ellen, "and I tell him, Doctor, and we should not be at all surprised to see him return, at any time, dressed as a sailor and walking with a rolling gait, while he shouts to us that he has enlisted," said Ellen, smiling.

"Oh, Heaven forbid. But, of course, Ellen, you will attend the reception on board the Wanderer this afternoon?" said Dr. Hedges.

"Yes; Lea and I were talking about that. We think some of the officers and men on that ship are the most delightful."

"Ah, Ellen, Ellen," laughed the gratified doctor. "I'll not tell Valentine; but don't say that again. And so you really think that some of the officers and men on the Wanderer are very nice, eh?"

"I do, indeed," replied Ellen.

Mrs. Hedges, up to this time, had never kept a secret from her husband. She would not have kept this one were it not that she feared he might give it publicity and so defeat the plans of those who were working to beat Captain Fox at his own game.

A Costly Fifteen Seconds.

"The greatest transformation scene I ever saw," said a railroad engineer, "was on the Pennsylvania Railroad, near Rohrerstown, Pa. It was a lightning change, too, if there ever was one. A long train of loaded jumbo coal cars was going east, and running at a high rate of speed."

"Suddenly a brake rigging on one of the cars near the head of the train came loose in some way and dropped to the rails. The collision of the wheels or the car with the obstruction snapped an axle, which threw the car from the track. Instantly car wheels, brakes, timbers, rails and coal were flying thick in the air, as car after car went piling upon the first one and one on another. Ten cars were torn to splinters."

"Two others were hurled over on the other track, and two tumbled down an embankment. Not a truck or bit of brake apparatus was left on a single one of these cars, and the ten others were simply piles of stove wood and scrap iron. The rails were completely ripped from the ties for a distance of 400 feet on the east-bound track, and for 200 feet on the west-bound track."

"The roadbed for that distance was covered two feet deep with coal. The whole thing was done in less than fifteen seconds, and it cost the company $10,000.—New York Sun.

Money in Swans.

Swans are now hard to raise. They sell at $40 to $75 per pair. A Yankee farmer at Biddeford, Me., is making quite a success at swan breeding, and his profits must be quite large each season. The average hatch yields from three to six young swans. They hatch usually about June and mature in fourteen months from birth. They are very cross when with a brood, and need watching constantly unless penned up closely.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL MICHIGAN MATTERS.

AN INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE LESSON.

Reflections of an Elevating Character—Wholesome Food for Thought—Studying the Scriptural Lesson Intelligently and Profitably.

Paul at Philippi.

The lesson for Sunday, July 9, may be found in Acts 16: 19-34.

INTRODUCTORY.

Timely, indeed, is this lesson. Our brother in the pulpit hard by was speaking, the other day, on the text, "The love of money is the root of all evil," and he characterized it as a Scripture peculiarly fitted and adapted to these times. It is the inordinate love of money that is giving this civilization of ours the "sweat-shop," the rum-shop; that is sending whisky to Africa, as it forced opium on India.

POINTS IN THE LESSON.

Who was this damsel? A soothsayer, a diviner. Where have we seen it—"when the gods appear, the half-gods go?"

There may have been some truth in what this woman spoke. Certainly she told the truth when she said, "These men are the servants of the most high God, which show unto us the way of salvation." Our contention with these cults is not that they are wholly erroneous, but that they do not, cannot, go far enough. They give, at best, but half-truths. This woman reached her highest, best inspiration when she pointed to the apostles, saying, in substance, "These are the men. They can tell you more than I."

A strange inspiration for a demon-possessed soul. And yet the devils believe and tremble; and not only in Christ's day but many other times they betray their fear and God's majesty and power. Paul was grieved that this woman was still under the bonds of the evil one, as is all earthly religion, so-called, and he employed his miracle-working power to dethrone Satan and bring her wholly into the peace of Christ. The half-hearted being became whole-hearted.

This is the way the world acts, but now how of God? Just such knavery and high-handedness he meets and, at the proper time, overturns. It may not be by a physical earthquake, but nevertheless it is by a strong hand, stronger than man's, and the puny arm of rebellion is brought to weakness and the enemies of the truth to discomfiture. Only wait, wait and sing and pray. It seems, at times, as if all were going Satan's bad way. Yet God is not dead, and he shall yet come with rebuking energy to declare that he himself rules in the affairs of men. There may be a season of incarceration and captivity. We seem to be in it now. Let the prisoners of home have faith and sing psalms. God will come; he is coming even now.

And good came out of it all. A genuine revival in the jailer's family, and multitudes led to Christ since through the story of that great household awakening. But read the story rightly. How many were baptized? All the house, "he and all his straightway." Does that mean the little children? Yes, if there were such and if they believed. For the word that follows is just as explicit and as widely inclusive, "And rejoiced believing in God, with all his house." That is to say, as many as believed and gladly received the word were baptized. That is what it says of the Pentecost multitude. There is, after all, but one way into the kingdom for young and old, rich and poor—faith.

HINTS AND ILLUSTRATIONS.

If last Sunday's lesson was about Paul's first prayer-meeting in Europe, this week's Scripture tells us of Paul's first after-meeting on the continent. It was held amid strange surroundings and following upon a peculiar sort of a service. The surroundings were those of a prison and the service just held had been a praise-service, but not of the processional sort, for the participants' feet were fast in stocks, and their hands, possibly fettered, could scarcely have held baton or hymn-book. But their lips were free, and their hearts. And what songs were those in the night! Believe it, that little midnight song-service was just as great and valuable as the enthusiastic meeting that came later. Do not neglect the songs in the prison and in the dark. The Chinese have a motto, "As we live we grow older." It well represents the Chinese civilization, and it is about the limit of ambition some Christians seem to have. Not so Paul. His was a life full of good works. As he lived he grew stronger, nobler, and the world grew better.

Save the fragments of time. Sing when you cannot work. The writer will not soon forget that last conversation at the bedside of that devoted brother pastor and worker, J. Calvin Johnson, whom God so early called to his reward. "If my work is done I want to go," he said. "I do not wish to stay after the opportunity of labor is gone, but O," he added, "the joy of doing something for the Master!" His brother came away saying, "Lord, help me to fill the life full of words and deeds in Christ's name!"

"Twenty people to save one soul." That was the entry made in our everyday book after visiting a certain association. The ministers registered 2,400 members of Baptist churches, and 120 conversions among all the churches. That is, it took twenty people a whole year to save one soul. Is it entirely as it should be? Was it Paul's way? In contrast there stands the declaration of the young man at the St. Louis Christian Endeavor Convention. "I expect to make 18,000 testimonies for Christ before I die." Was he extravagant? Not unduly. He had started out to speak a word for Jesus every day of his life, and if he lived to be sixty he would accomplish it. Figure it up and see. Or rather try it yourself, and see.

From Far and Near.

W. P. COOKE, of Monroe, and Miss Marie Le Dansard, were married.

INDICATIONS point to a splendid crop of huckleberries in Crawford County.

THE stove mill on the Alvin Shaver estate at Ola was burned, loss about $1,500.

THE rear of the Rifle River log drive has reached Omer. This is the earliest in many years.

GEO. W. BROWN, the Sault politician who was reported dangerously sick, is recovering.

T. GLEASON, a farmer of Riverton, is thrown out of his wagon and instantly killed in a runaway.

MARTIN E. FITZPATRICK, of Lansing, is applied for the position of superintendent of public building in that city.

Z. M. ZINSER, of Norrisville, was kicked in the breast by a horse, and sustained injuries which will probably prove fatal.

THE huckleberry crop, which forms a large industry in Roscommon County, may be a total failure on account of the intense heat.

FARMERS in Monroe County are greatly disappointed over the price of wool. All they can get is from 10 to 20 cents per pound.

WM. BUTLER, a Pontiac negro, attempted to commit suicide by stabbing himself in the abdomen with a butcher knife. He may recover.

FLORA, the 2-year-old daughter of Peter Werner, of Frenchtown, Monroe County, was missed several days ago. She was found dead in a cistern.

THE houses at Grayling in which there were cases of diphtheria, were burned by order of the Board of Health to prevent the spreading of the disease.

FARMERS generally are pretty well convinced that a long, cold winter, even if the ground be frozen three feet deep for three months, is no preventive against the ravages of potato bugs.

THE commencement at St. Mary's Academy, Monroe, was of great interest to a large number of friends of the academy from abroad as well as to the citizens. The graduating class was addressed by Bishop Foley.

AT Mason, Robert Moon, aged 51, committed suicide by taking opium and alcohol. Moon was a penniless miller, and despondent on account of being out of work. Mrs. Moon is a domestic at the Hotel Horton. There are two grown children.

GOV. RICH refuses to discuss the opinion recently given by Attorney General Ellis regarding the encampment of State troops at Chicago. He has, however, called a meeting of the State Military Board, at which the matter will be discussed.

AN engine on the Lake Shore Road struck and killed an unknown man about eight miles south of Monroe. The man was about 75 years old, wore full gray beard and was about 5 feet 8 inches tall. In his pockets were $1.25 and a silk handkerchief marked "O. G. Peters."

A YOUNG man at Thomas is in bad straits. First he paid out $1,400 for a doctor bill for his father. Then he helped a brother-in-law to the tune of $2,200. To cap the climax, it cost him $6,000, which he had inherited a short time before, to settle a breach of promise suit he had on his hands.

ESCANABA has enlarged its fire limits.

A YOUNG son of Charles Eppert, of Monroe, fell recently and broke his thigh bone.

THE Brown City village dads became so excited that they indulged in a free-for-all fight.

A TWELVE-YEAR-OLD son of Frank Sherwood, of Menominee, was drowned while fishing.

FARMERS in the vicinity of Raisinville and Monroe are greatly bothered by sheep-killing dogs.

WHILE fifty men were raising a barn at East Bay, the whole structure collapsed. A number of legs were broken.

DAVID VOLZ killed three bears near Sebawaing. This is the first time in years that bears have been seen in that section.

BENJAMIN HARRISON has escaped from an insane asylum. This is not the ex-President, but a namesake who was at the Pontiac asylum.

WHILE the 10-year-old daughter of Mrs. Alcorn, of Harrisville, was lighting a fire with kerosene her dress caught fire. She can hardly recover.

JOHN ROOSEN, of Ontonagon, while scuffling with a companion, fell in such a manner as to throw his weight on his left foot, breaking his leg at the ankle.

THE St. Ignace hose cart company was making a practice run the other evening when Wm. La Fountain, one of the firemen, tripped and fell violently on the edge of the sidewalk, breaking his collar bone.

A MANISTIQUE teacher recently received the following excuse from a parent whose little girl had been absent from school: "Dear Miss—, I wish to apprise you of the fact that the indisposition of my little daughter operated to prevent her from presenting an appearance at your recent pedagogical exercises; and hence this concise explanation is respectfully offered to subserve the interests of justice and in hopes that, in the kindness of your heart, you may be induced to accept this excuse as valid, sufficient and satisfactory, and may feel inclined to graciously condone the offense, if one has been committed."

CHELSEA, FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1893.

LOCAL BREVITIES.

Lewis Klein is now book keeper for H. S. Holmes Mercantile Co.

The Chelsea Cornet Band furnished music for the celebration at Manchester the 4th.

The Reports of 4th of July casualties are now coming in from all parts of the country.

Born Thursday, June 29th, to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schumacher, of Ann Arbor, a daughter.

The young son of Jacob Bolinger, of Freedom, had one of his feet cut off by a mowing machine, Monday last.

A union temperance meeting will be held next Sunday evening at the M. E. church. Address by the pastor, L. N. Moon.

The marshal will be at the village room in the Town Hall, every Saturday until further notice for the purpose of collecting taxes.

Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Glazier are receiving the congratulations of their friends over the arrival of a son at their home Monday, July 3d.

Jenkins wonders why some people forsake the streets, and annoy their neighbors by crossing their yards, and thus making public highways of private property.

The Fourth in Chelsea was a very quiet one, nearly every one going to some of our neighboring towns or lakes; and during the day it was quieter than on Sundays, but in the evening things livened up and fire crackers and fire works, made it noisy enough.

A cure for love: Take two ounces of dislike, one pound of resolution, two grains of common sense, two ounces of experience, a large sprig of time, three quarts of the cooling waters of consideration, set them over the gentle fire of love, sweeten with the sugar of forgetfulness, skim with the spoon of melancholy, put in the bottom of your heart, cork it with the cork of a clean conscience.

A very pleasant private wedding was that celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Benj. Winans on Wednesday afternoon. It was the marriage of their daughter, Miss Nettie Winans to Mr. Ford Brown, of Lansing. A few friends of the family were present and partook of an excellent lunch after the ceremony. The bride was the recipient of numerous and valuable, ornamental and useful presents. Rev. L. N. Moon tied the knot.

One who believes in signs says that a spider's web is an infallible barometer. When the air is moist and rain is about to fall, the spiders, by some peculiar process of their own, roll up the web out of the way and you can scarcely see them, though when the weather clears again each spider is at his old stand prepared to capture every insect which is persuaded to enter his parlor or not. A man, who has kept an eye on the webs, says he hasn't been caught in the rain without an umbrella since he observed the ingenuity and foresight of the spider.

Jackson Patriot: A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's church, Wednesday, June 28, the contracting parties being John J. Cunningham and Miss Mary L. Ferguson. A large number of friends were at the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Fr. Buysse. The bride wore a dainty costume of white nainsook, and her attendant, Miss Frances Ferguson, was becomingly attired in a costume of cream wool. Frank Riley assisted as best man. Following the nuptial high mass the wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. M. Daly, on Railroad street, where a large and enjoyable reception was also given in the evening. Among the guests were the groom's parents and family, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. Clark and Mrs. H. V. Heatley, from Chelsea. The bridal gifts were numerous and handsome. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham went immediately to their future home on South Pleasant street.

The Bauer house about two-miles west of Chelsea on the Territorial road, was consumed by fire last night.

Died, at his home in Sylvan township, Wednesday July 5, 1893, Geo. Savage, aged 74 years. The funeral was held at St. Mary's church to-day.

Word was received at this place Tuesday that Wm. Campbell, a former resident of Chelsea, had been murdered at Kansas City by Homer Baker. The murderer, on learning the fatality of his act, committed suicide.

The Saline maiden who is so modest that she will not go to bed while the observer is on her table, has been outdone by the bashful Dexter belle who declines to walk up a steep hill because it makes her breath come in short pants.

At the fire department headquarters Ann Arbor Monday, a cannon burst and seriously injured four of the firemen. Frank Knapp was holding the cannon on his leg and Charles Carroll was ramming the charge home. The cannon was hot and exploded prematurely. The butt was blown through Knapp's right leg, blowing it off nearly to the thigh so that it hung only by a thread of flesh. Carroll had both hands blown off with the exception of the fingers on the left hand. Henry McFarren and William Rettich, two other firemen who were standing near, were struck by pieces of the cannon and badly cut, but not seriously.

The anarchist milk in Atgeld's cocoa nut is now accounted for. Not long since three Illinois judges, including Judge Gary, who tried the anarchists, had occasion to decide a claim against Atgeld amounting to several thousand dollars. He thereupon wrote a letter to these judges assailing them in most bitter terms. He probably would have pardoned the anarchists in any event, but he made it the occasion to revenge himself on Judge Gary by accusing him of a judicial crime and comparing him to the infamous Jeffreys. Before he has finished his term he will probably get even if he can with the other judges that found he was on the wrong side of a lawsuit.—Detroit Journal.

Report of school in district No. 7, Sylvan, for the month ending June 24: No. enrolled 30; attending every day, Dave and Edwin Laubenguyer, Anna and Amelia Gutekunst, Chauncey Freeman, for the winter term Oliver Killam and Chauncey Freeman. In old times it came to be that a medicine must be nauseating to be effective. Now, all this is changed. Ayer's Sarsaparilla, one of the most powerful alteratives, is agreeable to most palates, the flavor being by no means medicinal.

WHAT

is Zinc? What is Lead?

Zinc is a very hard metal.

Lead is a soft metal.

The oxide of zinc makes a paint that is too hard for outside work.

The carbonate of lead makes a paint that is too soft and that will chalk and rub off.

We combine the two metals and strike a happy medium which we call Peninsular Ready-mixed Paint.

It will not chalk or rub off, will not crack or peel off.

It is the paint that wears the best. Guaranteed to be gold strictly pure lead, zinc and linseed oil. n f d

CHURCH NEWS.

The subject for the B. Y. P. U. prayer meeting for next Sunday evening is "Singing for Jesus."

The subject for the Y. P. S. C. E. prayer-meeting for next Sunday evening is "How to meet trouble."

Rev. L. N. Moon will give a sermon on "Unconsidered factors in the drink problem," at the union service at the Methodist church next Sunday evening.

Children should not be sent to church at 11 o'clock to rattle around in the Sunday school room while the minister is preaching. Bring them to the morning service or else not let them come until the service is out.

It is said that there are at least eighty places on the World's Fair grounds where alcoholic liquors are sold and the Sabbath is no bar to this iniquitous traffic. All good people have strenuously opposed Sunday opening, and though the gates are now wide open, we cannot think the scheme a financial success. God is not mocked—men will reap as they sow.

The Baptist Young People's Union has put itself on record regarding the liquor traffic. One of its resolutions reads "We favor the speedy and entire prohibition of the liquor traffic, and we oppose license for this traffic in any and all of its forms, through which men buy the right to destroy human hope and happiness and blight human souls, as an offense against public morals and a sin against God."

Cures Others

Will cure You, is a true statement of the action of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, when taken for diseases originating in impure blood; but, while this assertion is true of AYER'S Sarsaparilla, as thousands can attest, it cannot be truthfully applied to other preparations, which unprincipled dealers will recommend, and try to impose upon you, as "just as good as Ayer's." Take Ayer's Sarsaparilla and Ayer's only, if you need a blood-purifier and would be benefited permanently. This medicine, for nearly fifty years, has enjoyed a reputation, and made a record for cures, that has never been equaled by other preparations. AYER'S Sarsaparilla eradicates the taint of hereditary scrofula and other blood diseases from the system, and it has, deservedly, the confidence of the people.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

"I cannot forbear to express my joy at the relief I have obtained from the use of AYER'S Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with kidney troubles for about six months, suffering greatly with pains in the small of my back. In addition to this, my body was covered with pimply eruptions. The remedies prescribed failed to help me. I then began to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla, and, in a short time, the pains ceased and the pimples disappeared. I advise every young man or woman, in case of sickness resulting from impure blood, no matter how long standing the case may be, to take AYER'S Sarsaparilla."—H. L. Jarmann, 33 William St., New York City.

HIS KNIFE IN THE CONTRIBUTION BOX

How a Salvation Army Man Followed Staff Captain Cox's Exhortation.

"Put your hands down deep in your pockets and pull out all you have in them, even your jackknives," said Staff Captain Blanche Cox at the Princess rink during a Salvation Army meeting one evening during her campaign in the city. She was asking for a collection.

Miss Cox had been telling in her picturesque and entertaining way about army work in India, where the lassies dress and live as the natives do. They eat without other utensils than those primitive implements, the fingers; drink by pouring water from a bowl into their mouths, if they aim straight, down their necks otherwise; sleep on mats laid on the floor and have for bedfellows rats, lizards and other clammy reptiles, and are startled in the night by the howls of wild animals just outside the thin mat doors of the mud huts in which they live. Such a life, the staff captain considered a pretty hard thing, but she loved the Lord enough to endure it.

There were tears in many eyes when Miss Cox told how, amid such hardships, there were those who remained true to their faith, while in this blessed United States there were people backsliding every day for the most trivial of causes. She wondered how many of those who sat before her and professed to be Christians would be willing to give up their all and go to India to work for the salvation of the lowly natives. She thought there would not be many of them, but she suggested, with charming ingenuousness, that while such were the facts those who were in her hearing could help the cause by giving of their substance. She noted the fact that a collection was rather in the nature of a sandbagging operation after the audience had been charged 10 cents a head to get into the rink, but she concluded to pass the tambourines. It was then that she said:

"Put your hands down deep in your pockets and pull out all you have in them, even your jackknives."

There was a substantial looking man with gray hair and sandy red beard who had peered intently through platinum rimmed spectacles at the slender staff captain as she told about her hardships in India. He seemed much affected. When opportunity had afforded, he had given applause. He had even asked the man next to him to follow suit, so much did his heart grow warm. It was not long before the jingling tambourine, which a lassie was passing in front of him. Down went his hand into his pocket.

A look of surprise and chagrin spread quickly over his face. It was followed by a look of relief. "Thump!" went something heavy into the tambourine. It made the pennies, nickels and dimes dance and jingle. The lassie looked at the contribution interrogatively. He nodded his head, as much as to reply:

"Yes, I meant to do it."
The lassie giggled and went on collecting. The man with the sandy red beard had followed the staff captain's advice. He had dropped his jackknife into the contribution box. —Chicago Tribune.

People Who Can't Cry.

One of the most curious facts connected with madness is the utter absence of tears and the insane. Whatever the form of madness, tears are conspicuous by their absence as much in the depression of melancholy or excitement of mania as in the utter apathy of dementia. If a patient in a lunatic asylum be discovered in tears it will be found that it is one beginning to recover or an emotional outburst in an epileptic who is scarcely truly insane; while actual insane persons appear to have lost the power of weeping, it is only returning reason which can once more unloose the fountains of their tears. Even when a lunatic is telling one in fervid language how she has been deprived of her children or the outrages that have been perpetrated on herself her eye is never even moist. —New York Press.

One of Nature's Economies.

Birds with long legs always have short tails. Writers on the flight of birds have shown that the only use of a bird's tail is to serve as a rudder during the act of flight. When birds are provided with long legs, these are stretched directly behind when the bird is flying and so act as a sort of rudder. Nature is economical and never provides two organs for the same purpose, so when the long legged birds began to use their legs as steering apparatus nature cut off their tails and made the leg rudder a permanency. —Exchange.

Using Expressive Adjectives.

A Boston young lady, scarcely older than 10 years, had a beautifully colored toadstool pointed out to her in the woods one day. "Yes," she said, "it's rather brilliant, but don't you think it looks a trifle morbid?" —Boston Transcript.

Astrology May Be a Fad.

Astrology may be the fad ere long—if not the astrology of the ancients then a modern adaptation of it. Not a few of the great men of Europe consult stars and seek answers to grave questions in the stars. —Edgar Lee in Arena.

Is a Thundercloud on the Alps.

The atmosphere was very turbid, the ground was covered with half-melted snow, and hail began to fall. We were about 9,000 feet above the sea when I noticed a curious sound, which seemed to proceed from the Alpine pole with which I was walking. I asked the guide next me whether he heard it and what he thought it was.

The members of the guide fraternity are very hard pushed when they have not an answer ready for any emergency. He replied with great coolness that the rustling of the stick no doubt proceeded from a worm eating the wood in the interior.

This answer did not appear to me satisfactory, and I therefore applied the test of reversing the stick so that the point was now uppermost. The worm was already at the other end!

I next held my hand above my head, and my fingers yielded a fizzing sound. There could be but one explanation—we were so near a thundercloud as to be highly electrified by induction. I soon perceived that all the angular stones were hissing round us like points near a powerful electrical machine.

I told my companions of our situation and begged one of them to lower his umbrella, which he had hoisted against the hail shower, and whose gay brass point was likely to become the lightning rod of the party.

The words were scarcely out of my mouth when a clap of thunder, unaccompanied by lightning, justified my precaution. —"Travels Through the Alps."

Neapolitan Canzoni.

To tell the truth, the Neapolitan canzoni, or ballads, become a nuisance at times. One hears them caroled forth in all the Neapolitan province. They are an industry of considerable importance. The authors and composers do well by them, for are not the broad sheets sold in the streets as commonly as matches or glasses of water with lemon juice? And hundreds of muscular rascals who ought to turn their bodies to better account make a capital livelihood by singing them through the city.

On a warm evening one's dinner at the restaurant would be incomplete without the thrumming of two or three guitars or mandolins outside or even in the dining room. When the songsters have started echoes in every corner, which take many minutes to die away, they gather their harvest of coppers and bravas and depart to leave the arena open to a new troop of minstrels with another ballad upon their tongues.

All the world sings these catches—in the train cars, on board the steamers, as a sort of stimulus for work of every kind and as a vent for the inexhaustible happiness which is part and parcel of the Neapolitan temperament. —All the Year Round.

Basking in the Sun.

"Basking in the sun" is in itself of real and considerable benefit, and it is no compliment to our human intelligence to find that cats and dogs understand that fact much better than we do. The love of sunshine is naturally one of our strongest instincts, and we should be far healthier and happier if we followed and developed it instead of practically ignoring and repressing it. How a sparkling sunny morning exhilarates us and makes us feel that "it's too fine a day to spend indoors," and yet how few holidays are taken for that reason.

The wealth of the sunbeams is poured out lavishly all around us, and we turn from it to struggle for a few pitiful handfuls of something else that is yellow and shining, but not half so likely to bring us happiness and often has strange red spots upon it. Give nature a chance, and we shall find that there is more than a mere fanciful connection between natural sunlight and that "sunny" disposition which, after all, is the true "philosopher's stone." —Million.

Early Experiences in a Big City.

In New York there is a professional man who makes a handsome income. Only three people in the world know that for months after he came to New York he literally starved himself, eating sometimes for days in succession only bread or bread and oatmeal, that he might contribute to the support of some of his people in a little New England village. He has lied repeatedly about his early experiences in fear of the pain it would cause those people to know of his sacrifices for them. —New York Tribune.

The Portuguese Rebanadas.

A dish as much eaten by the Portuguese as mince pie by Americans is the rebanadas. It is of Moorish origin and is easily and quickly prepared—as befitted the habits of a nomadic race. Thick slices of bread are soaked in new milk, fried in olive oil and then spread with honey and eaten hot. The result is something delicious, and those who have once tasted the rebanadas will want to taste it again. —New York Press.

Swarms of Locusts in China.

When the locusts make their appearance in one of the Chinese districts, there is consternation among the unfortunate peasantry, who assemble in the fields with wild clamor and din of gongs, armed with long bamboos with streamers attached and vainly endeavor to drive off the terrible invaders who are setting down in myriads and devouring their crops before their eyes. Every leaf and twig is covered thick, giving the appearance of some hideous yellow fruit or plant. A faint sour smell like that of fermenting vegetable matter is always perceptible in the neighborhood. It comes no doubt from the droppings of the insect.

There is a curious and widespread belief among the Chinese in the existence of a "king" locust—Wang, he is called—of colossal size and quasi supernatural character, who hovers invisible in the upper regions of the air, directing and controlling the migration of the different swarms. At some places the leading officials have publicly sacrificed and made offerings to the king of the locusts in order that he might be influenced to spare their localities. —Washington Letter.

The Study of English.

How shockingly our beautiful language is maltreated, even by those who ought to know better! And, by the way, why does it never occur to the nouveaux riches to study English instead of attempting to acquire French, as they invariably do, or to devote a little time to the rudiments of grammar before joining Shakespeare classes or Browning societies? A resident of Commonwealth avenue was asked by an acquaintance how she liked the teacher or leader of the Shakespeare class and replied: "Oh, very much. He don't put on no airs!" She was at the time a member of a class for the study of French, and remarked in discussing the teacher, "She ain't got no kind of style, but she's real nice." —Boston Advertiser.

The Ownership of the Engagement Ring.

It has been decided in a Harlem police court that a man gives an engagement ring at his own risk. If the girl choose to break the engagement the next day, it does not affect her proprietary interest in the ring, which has become her own for evermore. This view has been generally accepted outside of Harlem, and the justice's decision will confirm it in that locality as well. It may not seem exactly fair to a man, but the man should discount all these chances before he commits himself to a woman and a jeweler. —New York World.

The Problem of the Near Future.

The problem which faces all philanthropic workers and thinkers and which must be solved is to provide some scheme by which the aged poor, who are past work and who have done good and honest work in their time and yet have been unable to lay by any adequate provision for old age, should have some alternative offered them other than that which the present inelastic and in some cases terribly Draconic system provides. —London Queen.

ABIJAH'S FOURTH OF JULY.

Abijah Stone strolled off alone
While yet the morn was hazy;
The neighbors' boys made such a noise,
They almost drove him crazy.
"I love my country well," he said,
"But think it is a sin, sir,
To spoil July's sweet jubilee
By making such a din, sir!"

So, in a nook beside a brook,
Serenely sound asleep, sir,
Abijah lay the livelong day,
Curled in a little heap,
Sir.

While in the town the brass band
brayed,
And cannons boomed their thunder,
Until a very small boy made
A most tremendous blunder.

For, just at dark, he dropped a spark Where sparks are very worst, sir;
A blinding flash—a frightful crash—
A powder keg had burst,
sir!
Abijah found but scattered shreds
When he returned to town, sir,
And people standing on their heads
Where they had just come down, sir!

THE 4TH AT THE FAIR

"Hurrah for the Fourth of July, George Washington, Christopher Columbus, and the great World's Fair!"

Timothy John Putterbaugh uttered the words in a ringing cheer as he entered the grounds of the Columbian Exposition on the morning of July 4. He was the most patriotic celebrator in America, the happiest man in the whole world, for Revolutionary blood ran in his loyal veins. Timothy and his family had come to the Fair to celebrate, and they were determined to make a gala day of it.

There was Betsey Jane, the wife, proud as a peacock in her new red gown, Caleb Aminadab with pants solemnly lonesome about the ankles, little Ike with pockets bulging with firecrackers and doughnuts, and pretty Matilda, slightly "miffed" because her father had sent her beau adrift as "not good enough for a family that had brought Plymouth Rock over with them."

"Betsey Jane," announced Timothy, oratorically, "here's the World's Fair."

"What's going to happen then?" "Fireworks, they say. Then you shall hear from me! I came prepared." And Timothy tapped a mysterious-looking parcel he carried.

"What you got there?" asked the perplexed Betsey.

"Never you mind—you'll know when celebration begins. I'm bilin' over with enthusiasm, and it's got to bust out somewhere! Look, Betsey, there's the genuine, original and only liberty bell that rang out the independence of this great country over a hundred years ago!"

As they passed relic after relic of revolutionary fame, Timothy got warmed up and a battle-scarred flag evoked a terrific strain from "Hail Columbia."

Timothy was growing enthusiastic, when shrieks and firecrackers mingled in a sudden and exciting chorus.

"Land o' Goshen! What's broke loose?" gasped Timothy, grabbing up his youngest scion.

Ike was blubbering, and Ike was on fire. Some mischievous boy had slipped a lighted match into his pocket, and "set off two packs!"

"Dad! you won't wallop me, will you?" he sniffled.

"I would remark not!" cried Timothy, smoothing out about a foot of charred cloth. "A glorious salute at the very baptismal font of liberty! Come to my arms, my son! I'm proud of you!"

At dark they followed a crowd to where some elaborate fireworks were to be sent off.

"Timothy, what are you going to do?" said Betsey Jane, alarmedly, as the old man made a spring for a platform.

Stripping the covering from his mysterious parcel, he waved it at the throng—an old rusty musket.

"Fellow-citizens," declaimed Timothy, "I wish to speak a few words. I'm Timothy Putterbaugh—biggest farmer in Grundy County, law-abiding citizen, direct descendant of Captain Ozziah Putterbaugh, who fought, bled and died for his country at Lexington, and served later in the war of 1812."

"Good for Ozziah!" sang out a chair-pusher.

"In my hand," muttered Timothy, excitedly, "I hold what? A gun. When you gaze at the great Krupp cannon, the fifty-shots-a-minute rifles on exhibition here, and see how easy it is to have a whole war over and done inside of an hour, do you consider that our noble forefathers had no such—no such—"

"Cinch," suggested a bystander.

"Cinch! I do. No; they had a gun like this. This very gun. Yes, fellow-citizens, this identical gun was at the battle of Bunker Hill. My grandfather fired it. I loaded it this morning with a royal old charge. They've squelched the old man all day. Amid all this grandeur of all nations, scenes showing how great our beloved country has become, with the gun that celebrated in 1776 I fire a salute to the grandest Fourth of July the world has ever seen—1893!"

"Here, none of that!" cried a guard pin-wheels encircle him with their spitting tongues of flame—they saw a spurt of Roman candles strike his hat and riddle it. They saw Timothy John Putterbaugh aureoled with a circle of blue, red and green lights like a phoenix, and then he uttered one rousing yell of triumph amid a whole battery of exploding rockets.

"E pluribus unum, star-spangled banner, hurrah for the Fourth of July!" screamed the grand old patriot. "Betsey Jane, on this grand and glorious occasion—"

When they got Timothy John to a tank and put him out, and to the emergency hospital and greased him all over, one ear was missing, one eye was closed and one arm was in a sling. But a happier man never left the World's Fair grounds. A happy couple lingered behind—pretty Matilda and her "company," who happening to be snooking around, had found the old revolutionary gun, and Timothy took him to his arms literally for restoring the time-honored relic.

"Betsey Jane," chuckled Timothy, as he looked back from the elevated railway train at the glare of the World's Fair grounds, "I did my duty! I fired the grand national salute, I went up in a blaze of patriotic glory, and I never had and I never will have a Fourth of July equal to the Fourth of July, 1893!"

Be Wise in Time.

A recent letter to this paper—doubtless many others have received a copy of the same—contains what purports to be a recipe for putting up fruit without heating or sealing. The pretended recipe is as follows:

"Get fresh fruit, wash it clean, put it in common three or four gallon jars, and press it down what you can without injuring it. Take two ounces Comp. Ex. Salix, which you can get from any druggist, dissolve it in four gallons of boiling water, when cool, pour on enough to cover the fruit."

The letter goes on to give a very flattering testimonial of this method, closes with a woman's name and a postoffice address. As many of our readers may see the letter in full in some other paper, a word of caution or explanation will be in place. This is the "blind recipe" game. The housewife will call on "any druggist" for the article named. He has not got it and does not know what it is, although he may have something of a similar name. Then she writes to the address given in the published letter, and receives in reply an offer to send the stuff on receipt of a certain sum of money or is told where to send for it. Anxious to try a new and easy method of keeping fruit, the housewife sends her money. In return she may receive nothing, some worthless compound, or possibly some preparation of salicylic acid, an unwholesome and dangerous article to use in food. The innocent-looking letter is an attempt to get free advertising from a paper and swindle its readers. Don't take a hand in the "blind recipe" game; the cards are marked and you are certain to lose.—Farm and Fireside.

Professional Poisoners in India.

A band of poisoners is believed to be at work on the railways in the Northwest Provinces, says a local paper. According to a correspondent, "there have been during the last few months a large number of deaths in carriages among the native third-class passengers traveling on the East India railway. The bodies are handed over by the railway authorities to the police, who dispose of them as expeditiously as possible. In most cases there is little or no property found on the bodies, not even railway tickets, and generally they are found in an empty carriage. These facts do not appear to have awakened the suspicions of the police, or perhaps they have recognized their incompetence to prevent or detect such crimes. As, however, the native passengers contribute over 90 per cent. of coaching receipts, it is time some efforts were made to protect their lives and property."—Bombay Gazette.

Encampment Notes.

N the arrangements for the Twenty-seventh National Encampment of the G. A. R., to be held in Indianapolis, September 4 to 9. We find that the headquarters for each corps of the Union army will be located in the Court House square, in the center of the city. Arrangements will be made for reunions in halls and tents in the vicinity. Officers of all corps and army associations desiring to arrange for reunions are requested to communicate, as soon as possible, with W. A. Ketcham, chairman of Committee on Reunions, giving full information as to what arrangements are desired, the exact time of the reunion, the probable number of persons who will be in attendance, the names of the officers of the association, etc. Prompt attention to this request will facilitate the work of the encampment organization, and will assure satisfactory arrangements.

All National and Department Headquarters will be established in the State House, thus avoiding any confusion. Below we give number and location of rooms to be occupied as headquarters:

Electricity on Battlefields.

The ubiquity of electricity is becoming almost proverbial. From the "brightest spot on earth" to the blood-stained battlefields is rather a far cry, but there is no end to the application of electricity. A recent telegram from Austria described some experiments of great interest which have recently been carried out successfully there. The difficulty of searching for the wounded on the night after a great battle has been one which has long occupied the attention of military reformers, and the army medical service in Austria has been endeavoring to determine how far the electric light may be utilized for this humane end. The value of search lights with reflectors has been proved in naval affairs, and at Suakim and elsewhere soldiers have found them very effective on open ground. They would be equally effective, under similar conditions, for assisting in picking up the wounded, but when the battle has raged over a wide extent of country, or when the fighting has occurred amidst woods and brushwood, the use of this class of light is attended with difficulty. The need for a special form of light for this purpose having been recognized, the Austrian medical service have been experimenting with portable electric lanterns, fed by secondary batteries contained in the knapsacks of the men who carry them. These experiments, concludes the Electrical Review, have been carried out under conditions as nearly as possible similar to those which would occur in actual warfare, and the results were so encouraging that it is highly probable that the portable "search-light" will be taken up in earnest by the military authorities in other countries.

Marvelous Projectiles.

The ancient and obsolete projectiles are displayed in great number in Uncle Sam's department of the World's Fair. They include everything from what is known as the old "bar shot" and "chain shot" down to the ingenious explosive projectiles invented during the war by the confederates, some of which were very novel. The "bar shot" was made by splitting a cannon ball in two and connecting the two halves by an iron bar; their purpose was to cut rigging ship spars. The chain shot was on a similar principle, except that two cannon balls were connected by a long heavy chain. This was for the same purpose. When Farragut attacked the forts below New Orleans, these things were fired from the guns of the enemy in great numbers, and the horrible noise that they made was well calculated to wake the dead or turn a strong man's hair gray. They came through the air like shrieking demons, and anyone who ever heard one will cheerfully forego a repetition of the sensation. Another curious exhibit is an old-fashioned furnace for heating shots to fire at ships. These two are relics of by-gone ages. Probably the last time a red-hot shot was ever fired at a ship was at this same battle of New Orleans. They used to tell a funny story about a confederate officer who had charge of a red-hot shot battery at Fort Jackson. The science of war was new to the Confederates in those days, as well as to the Federals, and he was not expected to know all about firing red-hot shot. His battery consisted of two guns. For two hours he blazed away at the passing fleet, and after the affair was over every shot that had been put into his guns was found in the ditch below the muzzles of the guns. The secret was that the men, in their supreme haste to get rid of the red-hot shot after it had entered the gun, would run the gun out quickly and with such force that before the captain of the gun could reach his lanyard to fire, the hot shot would roll out at the muzzle, and the result was that nearly every shot he fired was only a blank cartridge.

Buttoned Up Behind.

The Rev. Dr. Storrs, in an anniversary address before a Massachusetts audience, said that a returned prisoner told him once that while at the South he could endure the taunts of men, but never before had he realized how terrible was the stinging hate of women, and he had come back with additional mercy for which to thank God, namely, that the devil was not a woman. That soldier was not alone in his experience. The women of the South furnished what may be called the nerve-force of the war. From the very beginning they made it disgraceful for any man of fighting age to stay at home without sufficient cause, and though it might rack their heart strings they sent their fathers, husbands, brothers and lovers to the field. Their earliest organization were soldiers' sewing societies, and it wonderful to observe how soon they learned to cut, and stitch, and knit, and pick lint, and roll bandages for the boys in camp. Yet not all ladies of the South at the beginning of the war were adepts in fashioning men's attire, and sometimes curious results followed. Stockings wouldn't match, and the buttons would be sewed on the wrong side of a man's shirt. In one instance my respected side partner, who was then a young girl, turned over to the matron President of her society in Charleston a pair of trousers with one leg. "Why, who in the world did you make that thing for?" was asked by the old lady. "Oh, that's for a one-legged soldier, of course," gasped the young lady, in her confusion. "That's all right, Miss Georgia; very thoughtful, very thoughtful, but," looking at them quizzically through her spectacles, "Miss Georgia, you've got 'em buttoned up behind."—"Personal Reminiscences."—Blue and Gray.

Pat Was a Martinet.

One day during the war, while a Middle Tennessee regiment was stationed in the city of Nashville, an Irish recruit was put on guard duty on one of the principal streets in the city. He thought it his duty to challenge every one who came along, just as he would in camp. By and bye a well-dressed citizen approached. "Halt! Who goes there?" says Mike. "A citizen," answered the man. "Advance, citizen, and give the countersign!" "But I don't know the countersign," said the citizen; "and if I did I think it very strange and unusual that it should be demanded in a public place like this." "Well, be jabers then," said Mike, "ye don't pass this way till ye've said 'Boonker Hill!'" "Bunker Hill," said the man, with a grin. "Right! Pass on!" said the sentinel at "present," and the citizen went on about his affairs.

TIMOTHY FIRES A SALUTE.

the great and glorious aggregation of architectural magnitude that shows what a big country we've got. To hum the crops are booming, and money's no object for anything you want, from peanuts to pop. We've come to celebrate. Your old dad will set 'em up. Whoop, by gosh!" and Timothy lit an enormous firecracker.

"Here, old man, no firing off young cannons allowed," called out one of those promiscuous young men known as Columbian guards.

"No firing! No snap, boom, bang on the glorious Fourth! What have I struck? An alien shore, or the rock-bound coast of my native land?" demanded Timothy, with pathetic irony. "You stop me? Timothy J. Putterbaugh is prohibited from letting off the bottled-up fizz of patriotism swelling in his bosom. Gosh all hemlocks! is this the land of Washington and pumpkin pie? Suffering Cornelius! think of '76! If the firing had stopped then where would we be?"

Just then a dapper youth snatched the remainder of the pack from Timothy, and applied his cigarette to the fuse.

Pop—bang—boom! A small cyclone seemed to rend the spot.

"Didn't I tell you not to fire any more crackers?" roared the guard, rushing back and drawing his cheese knife.

"I didn't fire any more crackers," grinned Timothy, "I'm busy speechifying. Reckon they went off by spontaneous combustion! Young feller, to the real culprit, 'shake! You've saved the country, and if there's a 'for drinking purposes only' barrel handy, I'll fill you up free."

The Putterbaughs wandered on, but Timothy was not subdued.

He spoke too late. Bang!—1,893 distinct reverberations seemed to follow a flare like a cannon, a report like the explosion of a powder magazine.

Children shrieked, women fainted. The gun kicked and knocked the irrepressible Timothy flat, flew from his hand, whacked the guard over the head, and fell in the midst of the crowd.

"I arrest you—" began the officer.

"No, you don't!" retorted Timothy.

"Betsey Jane, 'tend to the kids; your old man's got to hustle."

"Stop! stop!" A hundred voices sounded the warning, as the spy Timothy leaped to an adjoining platform.

ANARCHISTS ARE PARDONED BY GOV. ALTGELD.

Fielden, Schwab and Neebe Doff Their Prison Garb and Walk Free from Joliet - The Governor Scores the Presiding Judge, Jury and Detectives.

Shed Their Stripes.

The Chicago anarchists, Schwab, Fielden and Neebe, have been pardoned out of the Joliet Penitentiary by Gov. Altgeld. The news of the pardon caused the most profound surprise at Joliet, according to a dispatch, but it is said to have been anticipated in Chicago by the friends of the imprisoned men.

Schwab, according to MICHAEL SCHWAB, the Joliet correspondent, has been looked upon as one of the most dangerous men in the horrible conspiracy that led up to the Haymarket massacre; Fielden was always considered a misguided but honest man; and Neebe was looked upon as one of August Spies' misguided tools. It would have caused no surprise to have pardoned Neebe. In extending executive clemency the Governor seems to have acted without conference with or advice from anybody of influence or authority. The act is his alone, apparently. The pardon message contains 17,000 words. The Governor takes the ground that these men did not have a fair trial and that the court was prejudiced. He scores Judge Gary and Chief of Police Bonfield severely.

Schwab, Fielden and Neebe were sentenced to State's prison on the charge of complicity in the Haymarket massacre on the night of May 4, 1886.

The details of the trial are too well remembered to demand recounting. Spies, Fielden, Parsons, Fischer, Lingg, Schwab and Engel were sentenced to death and Neebe, whom many thought innocent, to fifteen years in the penitentiary. The case was carried up and fought with great desperation in the Supreme Court of Illinois by the prisoners' lawyers, but the court finally adjudged the verdict correct in law and the sentence of the court was carried out in respect to Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Engel and Neebe.

Louis Lingg killed himself horribly with a fulminating cap in the jail on the day preceding that set for the hanging.

A determined attempt to secure a commutation of sentence was made before the execution. It was joined in by many, especially in behalf of Parsons, who was well known and popular, and it might have been granted if that wild fellow had consented to recant in his faith. But he refused to do so, and Gov. Oglesby was obdurate in refusing to grant a commutation to any who did not weaken. Spies, worn as his friends say by long confinement, consented to admit his error, but Oglesby, considering him the leader, would give him no mercy.

Fielden and Schwab made terms and sentence was cut down to life imprisonment. Spies, Parsons, Fischer and Engel were hanged from the same gibbet in the north corridor of the jail in Chicago, on Nov. 11, 1887. They were buried on Nov. 13 in Waldheim Cemetery, where a monument in their memory has just been unveiled. The others were quickly taken to Joliet Penitentiary.

For the last three or four years strong efforts have been made to secure their pardon, and an amnesty association was formed in Chicago, which has worked unceasingly to this end. Many petitions were presented to Gov. Fifer during his term of office praying for executive clemency in the case of these men, but he refused to listen to the appeals.

Unveiled Their Monument.

Sunday afternoon, in Waldheim Cemetery, near Chicago, a stately monument to the memory of Spies, Parsons, Fischer, Engel, and Lingg, the executed anarchists, was unveiled. It rested on the same spot which marked their several graves. President Schmiedinger, of the society which erected the monument, delivered an address, reciting matters of interest in connection with the movement. About 3,000 persons witnessed the ceremony. The monument was draped in the red which the organization so fondly clings to as an emblem of its order, and the men, women, and children who were grouped around the monument wore red in profusion and talked of "martyrs to the cause of human rights."

FEES OF LONDON SURGEONS.

Some Light Thrown on the Cost of Attendance in a Recent Trial.

Some rather interesting testimony concerning surgeons' fees in England was given in a suit which was tried in the London High Court a few days ago. Charles Keetley, the senior surgeon of the West London Hospital, sued Prof. Banister Fletcher for $2,000 for attendance upon the latter's son, who was badly hurt in the terrible railway disaster at Burgos some time ago. Prof. Fletcher paid $500 into court, declaring that to be an adequate payment for the services rendered. Dr. Keetley is quoted by the New York Evening Post as testifying in his own behalf that he thought $150 a day was a fair remuneration for his undivided attention, and that he would charge no less for a day's work in London. He received $75 a day whenever he attended court for an insurance company with which he was connected professionally. Alfred Cooper, F. R. C. S., consulting surgeon of the West London Hospital, said that in his opinion Mr. Keetley's charges were moderate in the extreme. For himself, he should charge $2,000 for a trip to Paris, and $150 or $200 a day while he remained there. For going to Burgos he should charge $5,000. For bringing a patient home from Burgos and taking care of him during a three-days' journey he should charge $2,500. For devoting his whole time to a patient in London he should not consider $40 an hour an excessive charge. Other surgeons gave similar testimony, and finally the jury decided that Mr. Keetley was entitled to $1,750, a verdict that gave him a substantial victory.

Wave Tossed.

Sea sick voyagers suffer unspeakable tortures. Then if Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is resorted to the tortures cease. Yachting parties, ocean fishermen, nervous, sickly people, whom the jarring of a railway train affects much in the same way as the tossing of the surges do one who crosses the Atlantic for the first time, should be mindful of this and be provided with an adequate supply of the Bitters. This incomparable stomachic will promptly settle a stomach outrageously disturbed, is a capital antidote to malaria and nervous complaints, remedies constipation and biliousness, and counteracts a tendency to rheumatism. Besides this, it compensates for a loss of energy consequent upon undue exertion or nervous anxiety, and averts the effects of exposure in inclement weather and the wearing of damp clothing. Both appetite and sleep are promoted by it, and general health rapidly improves through its use.

Sticks to Custom.

For 200 years the paper from which Bank of England notes are made has been manufactured at Laverstoke in Hampshire.

The scrofulous affection of the lungs that's caused Consumption, like every other form of Scrofula, and every blood-taint and disorder, yields to the "Discovery." It is the most effective blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder that's known to medical science. In all Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, if it ever fails to benefit or cure, you have your money back.

A perfect and permanent cure for your Catarrh - or $500 in cash. This is promised by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

HOT SPRINGS, SOUTH DAKOTA.

What Hon. Samuel W. Allerton Thinks of Them.

[Hot Springs (S. D.) Star.]

The Hon. Samuel W. Allerton, the noted capitalist of Chicago, arrived over the Burlington Route a few days since, and during an interview with a Star reporter said: "You people do not begin to realize what you have here in these waters. I have had the opportunity of traveling some over the United States, and have visited a great number of health resorts with springs which are claimed to have medicinal properties, but in my opinion you have water here that is superior to anything in this whole country, if not in the world, for the cure of rheumatic affections and diseases of the skin. My attention was first called to these springs by an intimate friend, Mr. Spencer, who owns a large cattle ranch west of here. He had a man on his ranch that was so badly afflicted with rheumatism that he was hauled here in a helpless condition. He was bathed in the old Indian bath for several weeks, and he went home entirely cured up, and I resolved that if ever I had rheumatism in my family I would try Hot Springs, S. D. We brought Mrs. Allerton here as soon as she was able to come at all, and I have found that all Mr. Spencer said in reference to the curative properties of the waters has been realized in my wife's case. She said she feels as though she had just been turned loose from a prison where she had been called upon to endure excruciating torture - every joint and muscle racked with pain so that life was a burden. No, I think Hot Springs' future is a grand one. Its air is pure and wholesome, its scenery lively and inspiring; sleep comes without any effort and it is just the place for rest and building up a shattered constitution. You do not talk enough about the value of your waters for skin troubles. I, myself, received great benefit from them last year in a short visit there. Your climate makes you infinitely superior to the Arkansas Hot Springs, and in a country where so many thousands are afflicted with rheumatism and other kindred ailments, if your advantages are made known, there is no question but that you will become the foremost health resort in the United States. We are delighted with our trip here and what your waters have done for us and will make frequent visits to your pleasant little city."

COUNTY AND VICINITY.

The Dexter papers threaten the to publish the names of people who disturb meetings in that place if they do not desist.

Bay county had the honor of being the first to vote on the local option, new county roads question, and carried it by a good majority. Its success in improving the roads will be watched with great interest.

It is suggested that slates be hung in the vestibules of Dexter churches, whereon the young ladies may register when they enter the church. This will save time and no end of anxiety on the part of many young men of the town who now experience difficulty in locating their charmers on Sunday evenings.—Dexter News.

A Reading ex-soldier, to illustrate how cannons were rammed during the war, thrust his cane into an old piece mounted in the cemetery, when the old thing discharged a volley of hornets which bombarded him in the back of the neck and under his coat tails, putting him to a complete rout. It was another rank case of "didn't know it was loaded."—Adrain Press.

Many beautiful clover meadows in the county are being injured from the work of a worm in the blossom. As soon as the head begins to shape this insect begins its work, thus preventing the plant from blossoming. The work of this insect is so great that many meadows show the appearance of wilting. Our informant's attention was called to this a few days ago while passing by a thrifty meadow. On examination it was found that the head of the plant contained several small worms, similar in size to the weevil in wheat.—Ex.

A Dream Riddle Solved.

A lady who was fond of riddles dreamed that she met another lady, a stranger to her. "I shall not tell you my name," said the strange lady, "but I'll put it like this: If I had a tame hare which escaped and you caught it and asked me if you might chain it up—that's my name." "Letitia Harrop," answered the dreamer at once; "let I tie a hare up." There was no pause for reflection in the dream any more than in another case. The dreamer, walking with a friend, met an acquaintance of ovine appearance, who saluted with a curious duck. "What a queer bow!" said the companion in the dream. "Sheep dip," answered the dreamer; a kind of pun which perhaps nobody would have made when awake any more than he would have solved the idiotic riddle of Letitia Harrop.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Need of the Bench.

Man milliners and ladies' tailors are common among us, but a barrister sleeve cutter is indeed a novel type of social development. It all arose from a question at law between two rival claimants for a sleeve cutting device. Claimant No. 1 held a patent for the device which claimant No. 2 copied, but claimed to have improved upon. And to prove to the worthy judge and jurors the truth of the matter the bewigged barrister took the chartlike arrangements and cut a sleeve by each in the presence of the court. Questions of this kind and lawsuits over the fit of gowns demonstrate the need of women on the bench, for the fine points at issue are not within the province of the masculine understanding.—New York Sun.

An Ohio Man's Queer Hen.

An Ohio man has a queer hen. Near the barnyard there is a large "cooler" hanging on a crane, and the hen in question insists on regarding this cooler as her nest. She does not get into it, however, but sits perched on its rim, in consequence of which her eggs are all broken by the fall.—New York Tribune.

No Creature Can See In the Dark.

Those versed in the science of optics tell us that no living creature can see in absolute darkness. Some representatives of the animal kingdom have eyes extremely sensitive to rays of light of low intensity, but there must be some light present or no vision.—St. Louis Republic.

Great Triumph.

Instant relief experienced and a permanent cure by the most speedy and greatest remedy in the world—Otto's Cure for lung and throat diseases. Why will you continue to irritate your throat and lungs with that terrible hacking cough when F. P. Glazier & Co., sole agents, will furnish you a free sample bottle of this great guaranteed remedy? Its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. Otto's Cure is now sold in every town and village on this continent. Samples free. Large bottles 50c.

Homes for World's Fair Visitors.

In view of the crowded condition of Chicago and its hotels during the World's Fair period, Poole Bros. have done a public service in issuing a very carefully prepared list of the homes in Chicago that are thrown open to the public upon this occasion. The list is complete and gives the name, location, number of rooms, etc., so that correspondence may be had and arrangements made before the visitor comes to Chicago. This list is accompanied by splendid sectional maps of the city on a large scale, by which the location of every house can be accurately found. Copies can be obtained at the Michigan Central Ticket office at the publishers price, 50 cents—less really than the value of the maps themselves. 17

From Sire to Son.

As a family medicine Bicon's Celery King for the nerves passes from sire to son as a legacy. If you have kidney, liver or blood disorder do not delay, but get a free sample package of this remedy at once. If you have indigestion, constipation, headache, rheumatism, etc., this grand specific will cure you. F. P. Glazier & Co., the leading druggists, are sole agents and are distributing samples free to the afflicted. Large packages.
