STORY OF A FAMOUS RACE.

Fast Time Made by the Rival Boats Lee and Natchez in 1870.

One of the most famous races was that between the Natchez, Captain Leathers, and the Robert E. Lee, Captain Cannon, which occurred in 1870. The race had its origin in a spirit of rivalry which had existed between the two captains for a long time. Each having built what he considered the fastest boat, nothing but a trial of the speed of the two would satisfy Captain Leathers, so he sent Captain Cannon word to get his boat ready, as he expected to pass him under way. Every possible preparation was made by Cannon on the Lee for a genuine race.

All surplus weight was removed; spars, fenders and the doors from a portion of the cabin, as well as the sash from the pilothouse—in fact, everything that could be dispensed with which would cause resistance was removed from the boat, even to portions of the "fore and aft" bulkheads in the hull and the splash bulkheads. Nothing was left undone to have the Lee in perfect condition, while, on the contrary, little or comparatively nothing was done with the Natchez to prepare her for the race.

To sum it up in a few words, Captain Leathers and his engineer were too sanguine of winning the race, or, in other words, they overestimated the capabilities of their boat, and at the same time underestimated the Lee. Just before the boats left port Captain Leathers and one of his pilots went down to the Lee to see if her hull was greased, as reported, and while viewing her he was recognized by one of the Lee's firemen.

The two boats left New Orleans June 30, 1870. The Lee was 3½ minutes in advance of the Natchez, and for the first three hours there was no perceptible difference in their speed, but about this time the Lee suddenly began to widen the space, and when they were seven hours out from port she had distanced the Natchez 13 minutes, and they were running a fraction more than 17 miles an hour. When 10 hours out, the Natchez gained 9 minutes on the Lee, but after this the Lee gained steadily until the end of the race, and when Cairo was reached the Lee was 1 hour and 14 minutes in advance of the Natchez.

The Natchez gained some after Cairo had been passed, and it is probable that, had it not been for fog, she would have reached St. Louis very close to the Lee. As it was, however, she was 1 hour and 20 minutes behind. The Lee arrived at St. Louis at 10:20 o'clock on the morning of July 4, 1870, having made the trip in the phenomenally short time of 3 days 18 hours and 14 minutes.—St. Louis Republic.

Polite People of St. Jean de Losne.

For a town to be mentioned particularly on account of the civility of its inhabitants is no small honor. Philip Gilbert Hamerton thus distinguishes the village of St. Jean de Losne in his book, "The Saone." When it rained, they invited him into their houses, an attention which he contrasted favorably with the rudeness of the people in a northern city. He says: "I went into a cafe and found myself unable to pay for what I had taken, so I explained my case to the lady. I owed 5 sous and possessed but 4. Having paid all but the last sou, I was leaving when by accident I discovered just 1 sou in another pocket, which enabled me to clear myself of debt. Then the lady said:

"This is a disappointment for me, monsieur, for so long as you were my debtor I was sure to see you again, whereas now I am no longer sure."

A trifle, but pretty in the thought and extremely neat in the expression.

Another trifling incident pleased me. I was drawing the Saone with a steam tug in the foreground, and the tug was ready to start with its train of boats. The captain, however, saw me at work and came ashore to say he would postpone his departure a little if my sketch were not yet finished.

The destination of one of the Duchesses of York's wedding cakes was a poor home in the east end of London. One of the cakes was 7 feet 6 inches high and weighed between eight and nine hundredweight.

What Life Insurance Costs.

The primary object of life insurance is protection not investment, and life insurance at actual cost—on a reasonable basis of expense of management—is never a heavy tax on any one, in fact it is so cheap that a man with a family depending upon him largely for their support, cannot afford to go without insurance; especially when his neglect is bound to be at the expense of those to whom he is otherwise devoting a large share of his life-work.

Statistics show that the grand average death rate of nations—less forty per cent of those who die before they arrive at an insurable age—is only between 13 and 14 per each 1,000 per annum of all the people on the face of the earth; then $1,000 could be paid to the beneficiary of each and every person that is of insurable age that dies in the entire world and the cost per annum would only be about $14, and by selecting a preferred class of risks, the death rate per thousand has been reduced to six and a fraction. This has been accomplished by the Banker's Life Plan reducing the cost to $7 per thousand per annum at the age 35, and $8 at age 40.

The Preferred Bankers Life Assurance Co., of Lansing, Mich., is incorporated by one hundred leading bankers and business men of Michigan, and this company is starting out with very flattering prospects, furnishing the insurance for actual cost void of speculative features, with a Guarantee Fund, as a foundation, which is accumulated by a deposit of an amount equal to fifty cents on each year of the insured age. Thus a man at 40 puts $20 into this fund on each $1,000 taken, which may be carried in notes for two years; thus providing a fund that is something more than a mere promise to pay.

As practical demonstration—take 5,000 members at an average age of 40 years each depositing $20 in the Guarantee Fund, or a total of $100,000, suppose that one-half of this number, or 2,500, stop paying—these then forfeit their guarantee amount or $50,000 which is transferred to the Surplus Fund to pay death losses of remaining members—are not these remaining 2,500 better protected by 50 per cent? Suppose all but 100 stop paying, we then have $2,000 in the Guarantee fund and $98,000 transferred to the Surplus Fund for protection of the steady paying remainder.

Hon. Geo. P. Glazier, of Chelsea, Mich., is First Vice President of this company and said company has several prominent business men of Chelsea as policy holders.

She Could Never Come to Want.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York has just issued an entirely new form of policy, by which the Company will pay to the beneficiary a fixed amount each year for life, after the death of the insured. Any one who will send his age (nearest birthday) and also the age of wife or other beneficiary (nearest birthday) will receive, free, a proposal which will illustrate what can be done. The Mutual Life is the largest and oldest Life Insurance Company. Assets over $17,000,000. Schuyler Grant, General Agent. Address, W. H. & H. C. Brearley, Managers for Eastern Michigan Number 80 Griswold St., Detroit Michigan.

"Backward, turn backward, O time in thy flight, feed me on gruel again, just for to-night; I am so weary of restaurant steak, petrified doughnuts and vulcanized steak; oysters that sleep in a watery bath, butter as strong as Goliath of Gath; weary of paying for what I don't eat, chewing up rubber and calling it meat. Backward, turn backward, for weary I am, give me a whack at my grandmother's jam; let me drink milk that has never been skimmed; let me eat butter whose hair has been trimmed; let me but once have an old-fashioned pie, then I'll be willing to curl up and die."

GREAT DAY FOR OHIO.

CITIZENS OF THE BUCKEYE STATE CELEBRATE.

Think the Lake Shore Robbers Are Cornered—Complete Destruction Threatens Several Wisconsin Towns—Frightful Story from Bohemia—Shot an Editor.

Buckeyes at the Fair.

WITH military display and patriotic demonstration worthy of a great and prosperous State, Ohio celebrated its day at the Columbian Exposition Thursday. At the head of the Ohio troops Governor William McKinley and his brilliantly uniformed staff besieged the White City. Almost before the authorities were astir the conquering host had passed through the gates of Jackson Park and marched triumphantly over the broad avenues of the Columbian municipality. On to the Buckeye Building the Governor led the procession and there planted the banner of his State amid the cheers of thousands of his people. Then began one of the most successful State days at the Fair.

Two Towns on Fire.

LATE Thursday night telegrams were received at Milwaukee from Marshfield, Junction City and Powers' Station, stating that forest fires had at last gotten beyond control, and the entire towns were burning. Marshfield is on the main line of the Wisconsin Central Railway in Wood County, and has a population of 5,000. It is a lumbering town, and considerable furniture is manufactured there. Six years ago the town was almost wiped out by fire. For many days forest fires have raged incessantly in that vicinity, burning many cords of wood, but Thursday, heralded by a gale from the west, the flames were at their worst, and by night, in blinding smoke, a score of families were homeless and mothers with their little ones fled from the fiery element to Marshfield. At midnight the flames were met by every male citizen at the outskirts of the town, but to no avail. Latest reports indicate the complete destruction of the place.

Is Dalton Corralled?

FOUR of the desperadoes who held up the Lake Shore train near Kendallville, headed by none other than the notorious Bill Dalton, of train and bank robbing fame, are now believed to be hidden somewhere in the hills north of Spencer, Ind. On account of the broken and wild country in that locality and a certain class of sympathetic, lawless woodsmen, who have inhabited those parts since the depredations of the famous Reno gang, it is thought almost useless to follow them. This is the old stamping ground of the Dalton boys before they were driven West after the Reno gang lynching.

Horrible Traffic in Bohemia.

TWO WOMEN living in separate villages in the district of Kutenburg, Bohemia, who have been arrested, were engaged systematically in the business of murdering children whose parents desired to have them get out of the way. The two women appear to have had many clients, and to have accumulated considerable sums of money. One of them kept a ledger account, and by the help of this horrible record the authorities will be able to make a larger number of arrests.

The last member of the Lobach family, which has owned the place for 150 years, has died and to settle the estate the wide domains will be sold. In 1745 Peter Lobach purchased forty-nine acres of land where is now the town that bears his name. The last male member of the family, S. David Lobach, died six years ago. He was survived by two sisters, Anna Lobach and Mrs. Sarah Wiley. They died last spring. Each was about 70 years old. Neither is survived by any children. Seth A. Brown is administrator of Anna Lobach, who made no will. He is also executor of the Sarah Wiley estate. Brown, through his attorneys, offers the whole town at Sheriff's sale to the highest bidder to close up the estate.

Ralston was taken to the County Hospital and was delirious for many hours; he may die.

AT Bay City, Mich., the saw mill and salt block of Eddy, Avery & Eddy was destroyed by fire. It is not known how the fire started. The property had been inspected by a watchman half an hour before the flames were discovered. The lumber docks were saved. BARRETT SCOTT, the defaulting Treasurer of Holt County, Nebraska, who is said to be short in his accounts $104,000, has been captured in Mexico and is now in jail at Juarez. Extradition papers are now on the way from Washington. As soon as they arrive Barrett will be taken back to Nebraska.

BEAR'S EARS, a Sioux private of Company I, Second Infantry, stationed at Fort Omaha, has been missing since Tuesday. Officer Bruce reported that a farmer told him some Indians had been stealing watermelons at Zeller's farm near the fort, and one of them had been shot. It is now thought the missing Bear's Ears is lying dead in some ravine, the result of the shooting. An investigation is in progress. Who fired the shot is not known. The missing Indian bore a good name.

AT Akron, Ohio, the Adam's Express Company's safe was left practically unlocked Thursday night, and a package of money belonging to the city of Akron containing over $5,000 and nearly $3,000 of the company's money was taken. Harry Langhead, a discharged messenger of the company; Harry G. Miller, editor of the Akron Tribune; Frank X. Brahm, known as "Skate," a sprinter; and E. L. Llewellyn, a Cleveland, Ohio, sprinter, are under arrest. All claim they can prove alibis.

RICHARD M. HOOLEY, the veteran Chicago theatrical manager, died Friday at his home. Tears of sorrow at his sad taking away have been shed on both sides of the Atlantic, and strolling players the country over will revere the memory of the man who was always their friend, whose purse was as open as his heart, and whose bounty went out in times of prosperity and failure alike to the lowliest of them all. Mr. Hooley lived out his three score years and ten, but the allotted age is not enough for one whose unusual good deeds and goodwill have been felt so widely in the society which he graced.

UNTIL Tuesday night the memory of the last shower at Chicago was but a dream. The just and the unjust were dry as the Congressional Record. For 108 days the skies had been as brass. The parks and grass plots looked like the lots for salting sheep, and the surrounding prairie yawned with crevasses cavernous in depth and appalling in width. But on Tuesday, the Weather Bureau announced that there would be no rain until October, and this was just what was needed. The rains descended, the floods came, and the parched citizens' faces absorbed moisture enough to wear a smile rivaling that of a simian.

TWENTY masked men held up a Lake Shore train 140 miles from Chicago near midnight, Monday, and after wounding the engineer, blew open the safe in the express car and stole its contents. The express car robbed was one used by the United States Express Company, and is supposed to have contained a large sum of money. At 4 o'clock Tuesday morning the Chicago officials of the road had not heard the details of the robbery. The only information had been the mere announcement that the train had been robbed. One of the Lake Shore officials hastened to the home of Manager Wygant, who started at once for the train-dispatcher's office at the depot, where a special train was being made up for the officials of the railroad. At 5 o'clock this train left the Twelfth street depot to make a quick trip to Kendallville, Ind., the scene of the robbery.

HEAVY losses in collapsed World's Fair hotels and inability to secure payments from others not collapsed forced Nelson, Matter & Co., one of the oldest furniture houses in Grand Rapids, Mich., to give chattel mortgages aggregating $179,382.74. Real estate mortgages to the same parties and for a like amount were also filed. These papers were executed to secure local creditors and Michigan banks. The amount of unsettled indebtedness will foot up about $200,000, making the company's total liabilities about $400,000. The assets will probably exceed that sum. Ever since the World's Fair hotels furnished by this company began tumbling right and left it has been in a critical condition financially. It was hoped that the worst was over, and that it would manage to pull through. A few days ago a sample line of goods carried by the company in New York was attached, and this precipitated a raid by worried Eastern creditors.

SOUTHERN.

"DOC" TAYLOR, who murdered the Mullins family in Virginia, has been sentenced to be hanged Oct. 27. He wants to preach a sermon on the gallows.

ANGUS MCSWEAN and his wife, Mary, were robbed and murdered at their country home four miles from Newton, Ala. There was evidence of a hard struggle, a sledge hammer being used.

GINNERS in the northern part of Waller County, Texas, having paid no attention to a notice to discontinue ginning cotton until the prices for the staple was advanced, have lost seven houses by fire.

NEAR Fairview, Southwest Virginia, Mrs. Wilson Berry was shot and fatally wounded by a neighbor woman, Mrs. John Scott, and young Berry was shot and killed by the Scott woman's son. Mrs. Scott some years ago stabbed her brother to death with a pair of shears.

EGBERT HAWKS and Richard E. Clay, prominent farmers of Nottoway, Va., fought a duel from horseback in a public road, which resulted in the fatal wounding of the former. An old family feud existed between them, and Hawks had threatened to kill Clay on sight. When they met both opened fire after a few words, and Hawks fell at the first shot.

JAMES O'NEAL and wife, colored, living six miles from Versailles, Ky., went away from home and left John Banks in charge of four children. During the night the house caught fire and was quickly consumed. The four children were burned to a crisp. Banks was painfully burned, and saved his life by jumping from a second-story window. The origin of the fire is unknown.

WASHINGTON.

PENDING further legislation by Congress, President Cleveland has called a halt in the execution of the Geary law against unregistered Chinese.

CHARLES ROBINSON, of New York, one of the editors of the North American Review, is said to be slated to succeed Assistant Secretary Quincy in the State Department.

THE second child of the President will not be named Grover Cleveland second. It is a girl. Baby Ruth's sister was born at noon Saturday. Both mother and child are doing first-rate, and Mr. Cleveland is expected to make a rapid recovery of his dignity, which, from all accounts, was totally lost when the news was first conveyed to him. The little one weighed ten pounds at birth, was lusty and strong, and has already broken a record, as she is the first child born to a President in the White House. Gossip has already named her Dorothy.

GOVERNOR MCKINLEY opened the Republican campaign of Ohio with a big meeting at Akron, Tuesday. Delegates were present from Cleveland, Canton, Youngstown, Massillon, and other cities in Eastern Ohio, and a large number of Republicans came also from Pittsburgh. There was a street parade at 1:30 o'clock, the procession marching to Grace Park, where the meeting was held.

IN GENERAL.

THE general impression that the skeleton of Giteau, President Garfield's assassin, is on exhibition in the medical museum at Washington has been removed by the statement of Deputy Warden Russ, of the District jail, that the body is buried beneath the floor of the jail.

THE rebel squadron at Rio Janeiro finds itself in a trap. The vessels are unable to leave the harbor because the entrance is blocked by forts manned by troops loyal to Peixotto. The rebels tried to make a landing at Niethory, a suburb of Rio, but were repulsed with a loss of fifty-one killed and thirty wounded.

R. G. DUN & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

Improvement has extended from the banks to the mills. The condition of great industries has distinctly mended, though still seriously depressed. More important by far than any rise in stocks is the fact that more works have resumed operation, so that the producing force of the country after months of constant decline has begun to increase. Dispatches mention twenty-eight textile and thirty metal works which have resumed, some only with part force, while twenty-five textile and nine iron works have stopped. It is expected that most of the Fall River mills will start soon, the hands assenting to reduced wages. The money market is more healthy, the premium on currency has almost vanished, the embarrassments in domestic exchanges have well-nigh disappeared, and while little money is yet available for commercial or industrial loans there is some relief in that respect also.

NEW BABY IN CHARGE.

GROVER KEEPS CLOSE WATCH ON HER.

Lake Steamer Ashore in the Smoke—Wolverines Turn Out in Enormous Crowds—To Settle Argentine's Boundary Gov. Tillman and His Label.

Keeps Grover Awake.

BABY RUTH's little sister is behaving very much like an ordinary infant these days. The fact that the President of the United States is ready to leave Senators and Representatives at any moment to soothe her to sleep when she is tired of staying awake or to extract the unclasped safety from her tenderness doesn't seem to have the slightest effect upon her. It doesn't matter to her whether her papa has been up half the night trying to save the country and has just fallen into his first nap; if she wakes and feels lonely some she will immediately set up a yell that will bring papa to his feet and an anxious look to his face in the twinkling of an eye. It is true that she is a nurse, and a very capable one she is, but G. C. often beats the nurse by a full length in a rush for the cradle when the blessed infant gives the signal.

Michigan People at the Fair.

MICHIGAN had a multitude at the fair Wednesday. The people came in by every train and boat, and from the remotest back yard to the last structure in the State row it seemed a majority of the folk present were the yellow ribbon with the State's name flying down its center. Pennsylvania had a jam and Wisconsin nearly equalled the host, but with no attraction save the Governor and his loyal proclamation to his constituency Michigan turned out and filled the grounds from fence to lake front. The total, 160,000, did not reach the enormous figures scheduled on the recent fete days, but it nevertheless is a fact that nearly 100,000 Michigan people registered and reported at the State Building. Each train of the half-dozen lines from the two peninsulas was loaded to standing and the single boat which brought the Governor's party from St. Joseph had on deck 2,500 souls. From the south and from the north, whence it takes nearly two days to make the journey, the host came, and never did a governor of the State see so many of his kin as faces Governor Rich Wednesday.

Ashore in Green Bay.

TUESDAY night the steamer City of Ludington of the Goodrich Line went ashore at Wigginton Point, Green Bay. The City of Ludington was bound from Chicago to Manitowish and has about fifty passengers on board. The stranding was caused by the smoke from forest fires, which has hung thick over the lower end of Lake Michigan and Green Bay, making navigation very dangerous. The Ludington was pulled off by the tug Monarch without much damage.

Gov. Tillman's Liquor Labels.

PATENT COMMISSIONER SEYMOUR has been served with a summons to appear before the District Supreme Court and show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue to the State of South Carolina to compel the registration of the trade-mark "Palmetto." The application for the registration was, it will be remembered, refused an examiner on the ground that the State has no right to deal in liquor outside of its own limits. The decision in the case will establish an interesting precedent.

President Cleveland as Arbitrator.

DR. DON ESTANESLAV S. ZEBALLO, the new Minister from the Argentine Republic, who has been formally presented to the President, is credited on a special mission in connection with the arbitration convention which will meet in this city to determine the boundary between the Argentine Republic and Brazil. President Cleveland has consented to act as an arbitrator.

SCENES IN THE SENATE

SCENES IN THE SENATE

Engaged in Parliamentary Duels—Debates Bristle with Sharp Retorts—Conferences that Indicate Silent Warfare.

The Great Debate.

The scenes in the Senate since the opening of the extra session have been remarkable for the regular and steady attendance of the Senators, the sincere interest of each of them in the utterances of their associates, and the crowded galleries. Each speaker is given strict attention of the Senate. The logic of the speech is followed and analyzed. Seldom has any debate been so carefully followed and studied as that which has been going on for the past two weeks. Those who have been fortunate enough to be present in the Senate galleries have seen the men of the nation at their best. There has been a struggle of wills to make for each party the most of the political capital that is certain to result when Congress adjourns upon a subject of not only national but international import. At every point, every word has meaning, and before such a critical audience one is bound to think before he speaks, for he appreciates that should make a misstep would be at the mercy of those who are of a different mind, who are ever on the alert to seize the opportunity to embarrass him. The Senator is bristling with repartee, and he is to the sessions of the Senate a process and brilliancy that is unequalled in the history of the body.

Senator Wolcott, in the Senate, the data and statistics are analyzed. Seldom has any debate been so carefully followed and studied as that which has been going on for the past two weeks. Senator Sherman seems to have aged since the last session, but it was apparent from his recent speech that he has lost none of the fire and clear-headed manner of speech that has marked him as one of the most able men in this country has produced. He is one of the parliamentarians in Congress, and is always ready to suggest the proper method of disposing of any question that comes before the body of which he is a member. Though he had a portion of his speech written out, he seldom referred to the notes, except for statistics or figures, and though he talked for nearly three hours he never hesitated or had to change his style of expression. He is seldom absent from the Senate, and is regarded as one of the most valuable men that there are on the Republican side of the chamber for that party.

Perhaps, next to Senator Voorhees, the Democrat who is taking the most active part in the financial discussion is Senator McPherson of New Jersey. According to his own statement he appreciates that his party is now in control of the legislative branches of the country, and that it is responsible for all that is given to this country from Congress during this Congress at least. He has come forward as a strong friend of the administration in the present emergency, and on account of his experience and long service on the Finance Committee is one of Mr. Cleveland's most helpful lieutenants on the floor.

CORN CROP IS COOKED.

Great Maize Belt of the Country Much Affected by the Drought.

The September report of the statistician of the Department of Agriculture shows a decline in the condition of corn to 76.7 from 87 in the month of August and 93.2 in July, being a decline of more than 10 points from the August and over 16 from the July report. The change is marked in nearly all of the surplus corn States. The present condition is 75 in Kentucky, 64 in Ohio, 65 in Michigan, 59 in Indiana, 64 in Illinois, 96 in Iowa, 92 in Missouri, 74 in Kansas and 71 in Nebraska. In comparison with the September reports of the last ten years only three were lower—70.1 in 1890, 72.3 in 1887, and 76.6 in 1886. In the same month in 1882 the condition was 79.6 or nearly three points higher than the present month. There has been a general decline in the condition throughout the country due to the prevailing drought. The condition of wheat, considering both winter and spring varieties, when harvested was 74 against 85.3 in 1892. The general average is the lowest since 1885, when it was 72.

The reported conditions from correspondents in the principal wheat-growing States are as follows: Ohio, 98; Michigan, 80; Indiana, 88; Illinois, 60; Wisconsin, 80; Minnesota, 65; Iowa, 85; Missouri, 64; Kansas, 42; Nebraska, 55; South Dakota, 66; North Dakota, 67; Colorado, 89; and Oregon, 93. In the East, New York has 76; Pennsylvania, 93; Maryland, 98; Virginia, 96; and Texas, 68. In the New England, Eastern, and most of the Southern States the crop was harvested in good condition and the yield averaged well. The same can be said of Ohio. In Indiana the quality is good, but crop light, while in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska the yield is small and of an inferior quality, much of it grading No. 3 and under, while in some places it is reported to be worthless. In the Dakotas the yield is light, while the quality is generally good. In Iowa and Wisconsin the winter variety yielded well and was of good quality, while the spring yield was poor and of an inferior quality. In Minnesota the yield has been poor and not up to expectations, the quality generally being good, with some complaint of shriveled grain. In California and Oregon the quality of the grain is good up to an average, and the yield has been good except on lowlands, where it was greatly damaged.

Presiding Elder Shoots Himself.

The Rev. W. A. Ambury, presiding elder of the North Platte, Neb., district, shot and almost instantly killed himself Monday afternoon. He was riding in a Union Pacific caboose on his way to keep an appointment, and for amusement had been shooting at telegraph poles as the train passed by. While the train was standing at a station the crew heard a shot and, entering the caboose, found Mr. Ambury breathing his last. His friends scoffed the idea of suicide.

NO VOTE FOR WEEKS.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND REJECTS A COMPROMISE.

Silver Senators Will Delay the Vote as Long as Possible—Majority of the Body Will Not Attempt to Limit the Debate—Senators Seek Rest.

Will Be No Cloture.

Washington correspondence:

ALL hopes of the passage of the repeal bill in the Senate during the next two weeks seem to be at an end. The situation is less satisfactory than it has been for some time. The silver men have made overtures to the President for a compromise, or for some concession on the part of the administration and have been denied in such positive terms that they are filled to overflowing with anger, the sort of anger which finds vent in a determination to talk the repeal measure to death. The proposition for concession on the part of Mr. Cleveland was made through Senators Gorman and Smith, the latter of whom has often before been a medium of communication between the White House and the coteries of silver Senators. But Mr. Cleveland was not in a compromise mood when this proposition was broached to him by Senators Gorman and Smith. With the scent of victory in his nostrils he stood pat and said it would be time enough to talk of concession or of further financial legislation when the repeal bill was safely passed. He absolutely declined to be a party to any compromise or to any concession, even the Faulkner amendment or any less important salvo to the wounded pride of the silver advocates.

When this decision was reported to the silver men they became exceedingly wrath. They expressed their opinion of Mr. Cleveland in lurid words, and accused him of trying to bulldoze the whole party for his self-glorification. While they were willing to stop the flood of talk and permit the repeal bill to pass within a few days if any disposition were shown on the other side to concede a trifle to them, now that Mr. Cleveland had refused to listen to their peaceful overtures, they would be—before they would stop talking and clear the decks for a vote.

The last extremity of cloture is not to be invoked. A heavy majority of the members are in favor of unconditional repeal, but this majority has been carefully polled, and it has declared that the conditions are not such as to warrant the radical departure from the time-honored traditions of the Senate that would be necessary to secure a cloture of debate and force the repeal bill to the final vote, consequently the indications at the time this is written are that the talk will proceed. Senator Gorman will start within a few days for Chicago. Senator Palmer is going to Chicago also. Senator Smith has gone home. Other Senators will leave the capital for a little rest. No one expects a vote before October now.

The Senate was again occupied Monday in its silver discussion. The repeal bill was opposed by Senators Peffer, Stewart, Jones and Pugh. In the House Mr. Murray asked for the immediate consideration of a joint resolution appropriating $200,000 to enable the secretary of war to purchase rations and medicines and distribute them among the sufferers from the August cyclones against the south Atlantic coast; referred to the Committee on Appropriations. Mr. Richardson, from the Committee on Printing, reported back a resolution providing that all documents and books ordered by the Fifty-second Congress and remaining undistributed at this time shall be distributed among the members of the Fifty-third Congress. The resolution was adopted.

The house Tuesday transacted only routine business. A letter from the postmaster-general relative to valueless papers which have accumulated was referred to a special committee. Mr. Hepburn, of Iowa, attempted to secure consideration of a resolution calling on the secretary of the treasury for information as to the amount of merchandise transported from one United States port to another over Canadian territory. Mr. Geary, of California, objected, and the resolution was referred. The Senate was prompt in getting to the debate on the repeal bill. The routine morning business was unusually small and the Stewart resolution as to senators holding stock in national banks was laid over. In the Senate Wednesday the resolution of Mr. Stewart for a committee to ascertain whether senators were interested in national banks was then laid before the Senate and that Senator addressed the Senate in advocacy of it. After a few moments he diverged into a general discussion of the silver question. It being apparent that the House would adjourn again without transacting any business, Mr. Talbot, of South Carolina, offered a resolution that the banking and currency committee be instructed to immediately report the bill introduced by Mr. McLaurin, of South Carolina, providing for the issue of $125,000,000 in treasury notes for the relief of the people. A chorus of objections went up from all parts of the House. The House then went into the committee of the whole for the consideration of the public printing bill.

The Federal election law caused a skirmish in the House Thursday, but no action was taken. Senator Daniel, of West Virginia, occupied the time of the Senate in a carefully prepared argument against the repeal of the Sherman law; he spoke to crowded galleries and a good Senatorial audience. During the course of his speech many members of the House came into the chamber and took seats in the rear of Senators' chairs, or stood against the wall. When the routine morning business was concluded Mr. Stewart, of Nevada, moved to take up his resolution for a committee to investigate whether senators were interested in national banks. Mr. Voorhees' counter-motion to proceed to the consideration of the repeal bill was agreed to on a viva voce vote which was quite unanimous, and Mr. Stewart sat down.

ROBBERS' BIG HAUL.

ASTOUNDING RAID ON A LAKE SHORE TRAIN.

The Bandits Get $300,000, Shoot the Engineer, and Make Their Escape—Inadequate Reward Offered by the Road—They Were Professionals.

Story of the Deed.

When the Atlantic express on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, which left Chicago at 7:45 o'clock Monday evening for New York and Boston, reached Kessler, Ind., at 12:40 o'clock, it was stopped by an open-switch signal. A gang of men boarded the train; shot Engineer Stewart Knapp and blew open the United States Express Company's safe with dynamite, stealing its contents. It is believed that these amounted to nearly $300,000, including a shipment of $250,000 from a Chicago to a New York bank. The robbery was a bold one, though it was probably the work of a gang of tramps, according to the belief of the best-known thief catchers. The train carries express, mail, day coaches, and sleepers. It is the heaviest express train on the road, and frequently carries a half million dollars in currency and bullion. This fact must have been known to the robbers, as they were prepared in every way to make a big haul. The robbers numbered eighteen or twenty men, all armed and prepared for their desperate work. At the fall of the engineer, who was shot in the back by a masked man, who boarded the locomotive from the opposite side, the fireman was covered with a Winchester and ordered at the cost of his life to stop the train, which he did.

When the train stopped Messenger West thought the train had reached Kendallville, and threw open the south door to unload and take off express matter, but seeing that it was the siding he apprehended danger and slammed it shut; but almost at the same instant there was a loud report and the north door of the car flew off its hinges by the explosion of dynamite cartridges. Messenger West and his helper, named Hamblin, were covered with Winchester and ordered to open the small safe, which they did.

In the meantime ten masked men, all armed, had entered the car, three of whom went to work boring holes for dynamite cartridges in the large safe in which all through shipments of money and bullion were kept. The work was accomplished in a professional manner and speedily. In a few moments after the explosion of the cartridge the large safe door fell to the floor, opening up a large amount of money and bullion, which the robbers proceeded to load themselves with, together with that found in the small safe, which was taken on at local stations, and amounted to several thousand dollars. No attempt was made to open the inner vault to the large safe, where the bulk of the currency was kept.

President and General Manager J. Newell, of the Lake Shore Railroad, has ordered that 2,000 posters be printed offering $1,000 for the capture and conviction of the robbers, and that they be posted broadcast over the country. He also ordered that advertisements offering the same reward be published in all local newspapers along the line of the Lake Shore Railroad between Elkhart, Ind., and Toledo.

CEREALS ADVANCE IN PRICE.

Unfavorable Crop Reports Send Wheat and Corn Up Two Cents.

When the bell struck in the Chicago Board of Trade Monday it made things rattle in the pits. On top of an advance of 2 to 3 cents the wheat market jumped 1 1/2 cents in an hour. On top of a jump of 4 cents in four days last week corn got a further whirl of 2 cents at the same time. Oats were advanced 1 1/2 cents. Pork was bid up 40 cents. Nearly everything closed at nearly top prices. There was more excitement of a legitimate order than any day since Cudahy and Wright tumbled the first week in August. There was a surprise in the official figures on wheat. From the August figures the crop was figured about 385,000,000 bushels. Then the month was so excellent for the late harvest that the trade thought the final September report on condition and yield would raise the total to 400,000,000. Instead, the average was cut to 74 per cent. of a crop, and the total for the country reduced to 371,000,000 bushels. This was 12,000,000 off from the August estimate, and makes the crop 150,000,000 short of 1892, and nearly 250,000,000 short of 1891, the banner year.

GID DRISCOLL, of Manistiquet, ran a band saw. Some one drove a railroad spike into a log. The saw broke and cut Gid's forehead into the brain. Although some of the gray matter escaped, the man is not only alive, but nearly as well as ever.

At Lansing, Alfred Wise, father of William W. Wise, formerly of Chicago, and of Prof. Samuel L. Wise, of the art department of Elvett College, committed suicide by hanging. He was a leading manufacturer and one of the best-known prohibitionists in Michigan.

CAPT. KELL has closed the recruiting office at Grand Rapids. He says there has been a great rush of unemployed men into the army. Many of these, he thinks, are undesirable, for the reason they soon become homesick and want to leave the ranks the minute times pick up.

WARREN KIRKLAND, of Monroe, met a stranger riding one of his horses on a public road. He told the fellow to give it up. The thief refused to do so and pulled a revolver. Kirkland knocked the weapon out of his hand, putting him to flight. It was the first he knew of the theft.

JAMES DEGRAFF deserted from his company at Fort Brady two months ago. A few nights ago a Sault officer spied him and attempted to arrest him. Degraff made a lunge at him with a knife, and it took six men to bring him into subjection. His revolver had slipped down into his pant leg, which, the officer thinks, saved somebody's life, as Degraff was regarded as a dangerous man.

FROM all portions of the State there is rejoicing at the coming of the red-winged insect that walks into the anatomy of the potato bug, or Colorado beetle, and leaves nothing but a striped plaything for the winds. It is right and proper that the farmers should celebrate now, for perhaps now is the accepted time. When that beneficent red-winged fellow gets his potato bug job done, what will he eat next? Possibly he may take a notion to potatoes as the next best thing.

THE Globe Furniture Company of Northville shipped school furniture to Oromia, Persia; Singapore, Asia; and Alaska, last week. This company employs over 200 men, and is several months behind on orders.

FRANK COTTON, a young farmer of Chesterfield, tried to climb a fence with a gun in his hand. The weapon was discharged, tearing away the palm of the hand. Three fingers were amputated by the surgeon who attended him, and it is probable that the rest of the hand will have to come off also.

Counterfeits of the new quarter dollars are now in circulation. They have a fairly good ring, but can readily be detected by the unfinished condition of their rims, the milling of which is imperfect and which are noticeably smaller than those of the genuine coin.

That Unadilla man who stole an article from the STANDARD of September 8th, and sent it to the Pinckney Dispatch and signed his name to it as the author, ought to get a job with some of the gangs that are robbing express cars. They need men with nerve like his.

The city papers are all right if you want them, but it is the local paper that advertises your business, your schools, your churches, your numerous societies, sympathizes with you in your affliction and rejoices with you in your prosperity. In short, it is your local paper that mentions thousand and one items in which you are interested during the year, and which you do not find in the city papers.—Ex.

"Why is the weariness you feel from the continued talk of a light brained young man like a modern bicycle?" is the conundrum a visitor gave us the other day. We thought it was something windy but could not get it into quite the right shape so he said, "It is a pneumatic tire."

One of our exchanges pays the girls the following compliment: "The Michigan girl is of the right sort. She is not afraid to go into the orchard to pick fruit, nor the packing house to pack, nor the cannery to can. They are the sugar of the earth, roses of Sharon, the lilies of the valley, the in short, they are the World's Fair."

A rush of work has compelled us to neglect our news columns this week. Again we request that if you have an item of interest let us know about it instead of making us go at you like an highwayman and make you disgorge. If you will assist us a little in this matter we can fill the STANDARD each week with matter interesting to everyone. Try it.

The practice of carrying concealed weapons is a dangerous one. But if the tramp nuisance is not dealt with firmly, and right soon, too, every man and woman will be forced to carry one to protect themselves. Tramps increase in numbers every year, and yet our law makers have never done anything to protect the law abiding citizens from this class of outlaws.—Ann Arbor Democrat.

Jenkins says that his neighbor's chickens in "droves, herds and swarms" pasture on his lawn, litter up his walks, eat his tomatoes, peck his apples, and scratch up his vines; that they are as defiant as Turks and swift as Arabs, but he declares that if they do not stop it, some day they will go home "mit their ears split," and more than two will go home missing. Take warning, O ye chicken farmers.

The market the past week has been steady and wheat runs at 62c for red and 61 for white, rye 42c, oats 27c, barley is now wanted at 90c to $1.05 per hundred, beans are active at $1.10 to 1.25 per bushel, cloverseed brings $5 for prime, potatoes 40c, onions 50c, pears 50c to 75c, peaches 50c to $1, eggs 12c, butter 20c, chickens 7c, veal calves 5c, fat hogs 5c, cattle 3c. Trade is now active and will increase when seedling is over.

The following bit of advice is from the Manchester Enterprise: Every person must know there is a scarcity of money and business men are having hard times in getting enough to pay their bills. If people who owe accounts would pay a portion, even a small amount, it would give business men confidence besides affording assistance in paying their obligations. Farmers should try to pay something on their accounts to show the merchants that they appreciate the accommodations they receive from them.

Judge Moon, of Chattanooga, in his charge to the grand jury, has created a sensation in social circles by declaring progressive euchre a gambling game. He says: "Not only is gambling carried on in regular gambling resorts, but people in high standing and respectability gamble. They may not put down money, but they set an example to others in playing for prizes and awards. Examples are set that are a violation of the law and it is just as demoralizing as common gambling. A conviction of one man of the higher class is better, as an example, than the conviction of only ordinary people for common gambling."

Who has not read or heard of Grime's Fairy Tales? His charming little story, "Snow White" has been set to music and will be presented at the Town Hall, Friday and Saturday evenings, September 22 and 23, with a large chorus of Chelsea's fairest little ones. This is to be a complimentary benefit tendered to the Ladies' Library Association by Mrs. W. J. Hubbell, who has completed her musical instructions in Chelsea after over two very successful terms. The admission is only 25 cents down stairs and 15 cents for the gallery. The prices have been placed thus in order that every one can see a good show and likewise benefit an excellent local organization.

Mr. Hough, of Manchester, built a cement walk in front of his residence recently. He went out the other morning to take a look at and found that it had "got its back up" over something and he is trying to find out what that something is. It has drawn itself up like a caterpillar, and Mr. Hough is thinking of chaining it down so as to keep it at home.

A complete outfit of clothing covered with blood, was found near the depot at Ann Arbor, one night last week, and the reporters of the various papers thought the time had come when they could trace out some bloody crime, and thus make an undying name for themselves. The mystery was explained by finding a young man who had had nine teeth extracted, and had afterwards gone out and filled up with Ann Arbor budge, and then undressed on the street, going home in the costume first made famous by Adam.

John Avery met with a rather serious accident last Friday. He was at the barn caring for his horses and as he stepped into a stall beside a colt and spoke to it, saying stand over, and as the colt did not obey, like in thousands of cases he put his hand upon the colt and spoke again, but no sooner had he touched the animal than it landed one of its feet against the side of Mr. Avery's face, the foot struck against the side of the mouth, breaking off and knocking out nearly all the teeth, and on the lower split the jaw bone the whole length of one side, tipping the teeth and jaw over into the mouth, also cutting several holes through the face. Plucky and full of energy as he was, he came up town and went to Dr. Heller who after considerable of careful work succeeded in getting the jaw bone in place and the teeth of the lower jaw back into the cavities, the upper ones he found necessary to extract, and his patient has since been doing finely.—Saline Observer.

An Album and Its Contents.

The Parma Reflector.

The album of itself is easy to describe; it is not one with an embossed morocco cover and silver clasp and dainty decoration; but rather, it is numbered with that modern host of plush goods which has made for itself a place of such large dimensions on the counters and in the show cases of our stores, at Christmas time. It is one such as young people are wont to present their schoolmates on the occasion of his or her birthday party; or scholars rejoice when they can present such a one to their "dear teacher" on the last day of school.

Such albums as these have relegated the old leather affair, studded with white headed tacks and inlaid with a colored picture, to the attic; but though it is gone, provisions have been made in the new album, for its contents; or else we would have lost a treasure.

The particular album that I am about to describe, lies on a center table, among odd bric-a-brac, which is preserved—no one knows why. It lies there in a precise way—diagonally across the corner of the table. Perhaps it is thus laid so that the light may strike favorably the goblin blue plush cover and also show to advantage the nickel letters which form the legend "Our Friends" across the cover. The clasp is undoubtedly a patent arrangement. It contains a spring that allows the album to expand and make room for more pictures.

Now let us see the internal plan of this album and examine its contents.

One can but hesitate to take it from its place on the table; for it lies there so precisely, and the nap of the plush lies all smoothed in the right direction, and to rub it the least would change the color as quickly as it would change a cat's temper were you to rub her fur the wrong way. But should we venture; we take it tenderly in our lap and raise the cover with the nickle letters. The first page that we come to contains something that is never used but is always there. It is the place for the index to the portraits and is so announced at the top in fancy gold and scarlet letters, interwoven with a fantastic design.

We pass this page and come to the first picture in the album.

It is a young lady sitting on a portion of a fence. Her feet are resting on some curled up excelsior, presumably meant for grass. From the expression of the face and the far away look in the eyes, we conclude she is engaged in the occupation of thinking. The thought is undoubtedly poetic; for poetry has been attributed to her. It is not intended that the thought shall escape for the large fence post is to be used as a desk. Thereon sits an ink-bottle and there is paper and the young lady's hand grasps a tiny gold pen, probably a present. The artist caught her before the thought came and so she still goes on thinking in the picture. The likeness is one of the teachers to whom the little boy of the family first went to school.

We turn the page and there, side by side, on one page and the other on the other, is the picture of a distinguished looking gentleman and his wife. There is nothing particular to remark on these pictures unless it is the primness of the woman who is attired in a stiff black silk and sits as though the silk were Russian-iron instead. We have no doubt but that it is as shiny.

We turn to the next page. Here we find a picture such that the same one would do for all albums; for it is hard to distinguish wherein it differs from many others. It is the baby picture. The salient features of this picture is the lack of features. All except the mouth which has an India-rubber tendency, and displays toothless gums to an alarming extent—or rather, to alarmed beholder. A perfectly hairless head, an absence of eyes, flying hands, marked by a blur; and a stiffly starched white dress go to make up the picture. And yet this is the darling of the household.

We again turn the leaves and among the friends and relatives of the family, we find other pictures of this expressionless baby. In one we find him a little boy in kilts with an expression on his face that nothing but the dark hall and stairway that leads to the photographer's den could inspire.

Again we find him in the various phases of school-boy until as last the series culminates in a full length picture. It represents the High School Graduate. In one hand is grasped the imitation parchment roll that makes him a H. S. G. The other hand fondles the new watch chain that leads to a new watch nestling in his vest pocket. This picture is the last one we find representing this young man; but we feel sure if we were to again inspect this album in a year or so we would find this same young man and this time, encouraging an incipient mustache. Perhaps a few more pictures would follow this; but if we were to trace him further we would have to look to another album on another center table, and in that we would find him with a full fledged mustache and a young lady for a companion. Then again we would find him and her; but this time both would be somewhat obscured by a cloud of young candidates for photographic fame.

But this is mere speculation and not describing our album.

A few pages after the high school graduate comes one of the most interesting parts of the album. It is that part where provision has been made for the contents of the old album—the two by four photographs and tin-types.

Here we find relics of by-gone days; such as our fathers and mothers prized in their day, and from even farther back than that, come some of them; for among them we find all the great aunts and uncles in the family. Among these pictures are comical ones of women with dresses, the skirts of which must have taxed the negative to show them all. Such coiffures as are shown! With some the hair is combed straight back, giving an austere and frigid appearance, while in others of different date—I will not attempt to describe them! Perhaps they are called waterfalls and many other equally appropriate names.

The men of these pictures are in no wise behind the ladies in appearance. It is comical to notice that gentlemen in those days considered themselves sufficiently well dressed for a picture if a colored gingham shirt were graced by a paper collar. They are not all this way, however for among them we find ruffled shirt fronts and gorgeous vests; but most of the pictures remind us of "Uncle Sam."

Before we pass the small pictures we must notice a certain tin-type. It is of one who if he were living would be numbered among our country's nobility, and that can be no other class than the Grand Army of the Republic. Yes it is a picture of a soldier, who now sleeps, far away in an unknown grave, marked with naught but wild roses and covered over with creeping vines. This picture, a we turn from it, reminds us that Patriotism is not always kind to her children and yet we cannot look upon this picture without feeling it was a glory to die as he did, and it is a silent, though eloquent appeal to us to reverse the memory of that division of the comrades who have moved on before, to welcome the rear-guard of the G. A. R. as it fords the last river.

After the small pictures we come once again to the larger and more modern pictures, the cabinet. Among these we find the most interesting pictures found in the whole album. The small pictures we have noticed were the relics of the past; now on these last few pages we find the pictures the subjects of which are the relics of the past. Here we find the last pictures of grandfather and grandmother. These old people when they sat for these pictures probably climbed to the photographer's den for the last time.

The grandmother is a peaceful, kindly looking old lady. Care and time have wrinkled her face and many hard trials have bent her form; but as she sits there, her glasses in her lap, and looks a kindly benediction upon us from eyes that seem contemplating an anticipated rest, thoughts of what all these old people have done for us comes to our mind and we wonder if, when we sit for our last picture, it will be with the same serene and loving countenance we see before us.

On the opposite page we find the old gentleman. The once ardent and hopeful spirit that prompted him to take her, his efficient helpmeet, whose last likeness we have just viewed, and come to this state, build their cabin in the "oak openings," subdue the wildness and make for himself and children a home to enjoy, such a spirit at last allows him to rest. He has been a stern though kindly man and the lines of his old face show this as they are delineated for the last time upon the negative. The old broadcloth coat with the velvet collar is not filled by the same manly proportions as when he first donned it, and the velvet vest, that was once his pride, shows a round, worn spot over his pocket where the old silver watch has been harbored so long.

The picture is one from which if we look at it aright, we can take many a lesson of fortitude, patience and purpose, and it reminds us that we as well as the young man in the fore part of the album, must come for the last time to the gallery.

This is not all of the album, but we have seen enough so that with the help of our imagination, we can read an epitome of life, with its hopes and aspirations, friendships and loves, the tears, the joy and the grief, the dimples and gray hairs of a man's life time.

AN IDYL OF HONOLULU.

A Bold Stroke for a Husband. Written for This Paper.

BY LEON LEWIS.

CHAPTER IX.—Continued.

That Keeri had foreseen about how the matter would turn, was sufficiently evinced by his conduct. Beyond the observations we have recorded, not a word escaped him; but he stood leaning calmly against the door of a pew, in the attitude of a man who considers himself master of the situation.

As to Alma and Ralph, they had taken very little notice of the intruder, the prompt action of Bullet having assured them that he would do all that could be done in his own interest and that of the bridal couple. Alma, it is true, could not refrain from darting sundry glances of scorn and indignation at the rejected suitor, and Ralph was only restrained by a sense of dignity from the instant chastisement of the intruder; but both of the contracting parties may be said to have rather endured than resented the intrusion.

"Well, what is decided?" whispered Alma to her father, as Bullet returned, flushed and excited, to her side.

"We must go home immediately," was the answer, in a correspondingly low voice. "The conveyance is still in waiting. I'll explain all as soon as we are by ourselves."

This conclusion was so different from that expected by Alma that she could neither restrain her tears nor her anger.

"Is that tawny rascal, then, so high and mighty that we must be his humble victims?" she demanded, excitedly.

"Hush! Let us have no further scene here," enjoined Bullet, nervously. "Nothing is particularly amiss—if you do as I tell you. The priest has given me instructions. We must leave at once."

The gravity of her father's tones impressed the girl even more than the words, and she no longer delayed the departure. Keeri waited in his serene attitude until the bridal couple and Bullet had returned to their carriage, and then he stalked quietly away, paying little heed to the suppressed jeers and reproaches of which he was the object from the younger portion of the guests, whose pleasure he had thus troubled.

In three minutes more the little church was deserted, and the bridal party were leaving the town behind them.

"To go home is our first step, of course," whispered Bullet, indicating by a nod an unwelcome listener in the person of the driver of the carriage. "It's only at home that I shall be able to talk with you freely."

Hardly a word passed until the ride was over, although it was one, it will be remembered, of nearly an hour's duration.

"You may wait," said Bullet to the driver, when the party had alighted. "I shall probably require your services further."

The bridal couple were soon seated with Bullet in the privacy of their little sitting room, and then the bold and still angry eyes of Alma turned inquiringly to her father.

"I can now tell you all," said the ex-sailor in a whisper, after looking nervously around. "That wretched Keeri had the basement of the church full of sailors from the dock and Kanakas from all points of the compass. He must have had, the pastor thinks, fifty or sixty armed men at his heels, and he came there intent upon an unheard of disturbance. To kill Mr. Benning outright, and to carry you off again to the hills, Alma, were two well-defined points of his plan; and my own life, of course, was not accounted of the value of a feather. To save not only our own lives but those of our invited guests, the pastor enjoined me by everything sacred to take the course I have taken."

"You have done well in heeding the pastor's advice, of course," said Ralph; "but it is not necessary that Alma and I should abandon our idea of getting married. We can all slip off quietly to some near village of the interior, and there have the marriage ceremony performed, and the whole affair ended. I should say, within two or three hours."

"The very course I was intending to take—the very course, in fact, advised by the pastor," cried Bullet, jubilantly. "It was in this view that I have kept the carriage in waiting. In this way we shall turn the tables completely upon Keeri; for after you are once married, of course, all his schemes and machinations will fall to the ground, for the simple reason that they will be utterly futile."

"Let us be off at once," proposed Alma, arising. "There's the little chapel on the other side of Pearl Bay—Mr. Hapgood's—scarcely five miles distant, and that is probably as good a place for us as any other."

"At any rate, it is the place I have mentally selected," said Bullet, giving his daughter a look of secret intelligence. "You and Ashley had better look to your toilets, and we'll be off for Mr. Hapgood's in a few moments."

It seemed to Ralph that Bullet was anxious to say a few words in private to Alma, and he accordingly availed himself of the suggestion about his toilet to retreat to his own apartment. Alma, in like manner, was about retiring to her room when her father intercepted her on the stairs.

"Just one word, but a very important one," he whispered. "All I've said about Keeri's band of desperadoes is a lie, made up under the spur of the moment. The real difficulty is, as the pastor informed me, that Keeri came to the church with the intention of declaring who Ashley is, and with the further intention of showing that we also know who and what he is."

"But how can Keeri have learned Ashley's identity?" breathed Alma.

"The Lord only knows; but, perhaps, from the three sailors of whom I have spoken—the three who have been hanging around Honolulu all these weeks, and who have shown clearly enough, in one way and another, that they are in the secret of Ashley's identity. You see, therefore, that it was very considerate of the pastor not to force Keeri to bawl out all he knows about Ashley, and you also see that it was equally incumbent upon me to beat a retreat."

"Exactly," breathed Alma, with a fiercer look of resolve upon her countenance than Bullet had ever before seen upon it. "I see! I see! No time is to be lost. Let us be off for Mr. Hapgood's at once. By this movement we shall beat the Kanaka and make a success of our project."

In five minutes more the trio were on their way in the carriage around Pearl Bay to the little chapel of Mr. Hapgood. Not a soul had been seen approaching from the town, and the hearts of Bullet and his daughter beat high with the hope that their conspiracy would be crowned with success.

But Keeri was not to be so readily beaten.

The carriage had reached a lonely point of the road, in one of the valleys bordering Pearl Bay, when three ruffian-looking men suddenly bounded from a place of concealment by the wayside, and hurled themselves upon Ralph and the ex-sailor, while the driver of the carriage turned like a tiger upon Alma, thus showing that he was in Keeri's service.

That Ralph fought with as much ability as courage will be taken as a matter of course, but what could he do against such odds and at such a disadvantage? The old sailor fell insensible at the first onslaught, and a crushing blow upon our hero's skull soon stretched him beside Bullet. Of what further then and there followed he knew nothing.

At least two or three hours must have passed subsequent to this furious assault before Ralph recovered his senses, but he finally gathered himself up into a sitting posture, after sundry preliminaries, and bent a keen glance in every direction around him.

"The villains!" he ejaculated. "They've fled, of course! They've not only given me the compliments of Hank Ripple, as they said, but they've doubtless robbed me."

He felt hastily in his pocket.

"Yes, they have taken purse and papers," he added. "And Maida? Ripple, too? Can it be that he has smuggled himself aboard the Norwester, as these deserters stated?"

Wiping his bruised head, he arose to his feet and bent his steps in the direction of Honolulu.

He had gone scarcely a hundred rods, however, when he met Kulu, that other Kanaka of our acquaintance—the servant of Bullet—the very man, it will be remembered, who had first encountered the young Chicagoan after the memorable injuries, many weeks before, which had robbed Ralph of his memory.

"Can I be of any use to you, Mr. Benning?" asked Kulu, after looking the wonder he felt at seeing him in such a plight.

Ralph halted with an inquiring glance.

"Are you speaking to me, sir?" he asked.

Kulu nodded.

"Then I beg to inform you that my name is not Benning, but Kemplin—Ralph Kemplin!"

"Oh, indeed?"

The Kanaka was silent a moment, re-rolling in his amazement, and then he cried:

"You are aware, of course, that Mr. Bullet—has been seriously injured—taken home in an insensible and dangerous condition?"

It was now Ralph's turn to recoil in astonishment, as he replied:

"No, I know nothing of any Mr. Bullet. Never heard the name before."

"But surely you must know that Miss Bullet has been carried off to the hills again by Keeri?"

"Miss Bullet? Keeri?" repeated Ralph, wonderingly. "Never heard the names before. I know nothing of these parties. What are they to me? Are you drunk or joking? Or do you take me for a fool?"

The Kanaka was reasonably brave, as we have asserted in a former page, but things were now getting too mixed for his comprehension, and he turned and fled in silence.

"Well, let him go," muttered Ralph. "He probably finds his fool's game a losing one. Let's see—let me think a little. This business with these three ruffians has really confused me. Ah, I have it all now. Maida—my dear Maida—has just sailed in the Norwester for the Arctic Ocean. The Yokohama is to sail for China to-morrow. Feeling lonely and gloomy I came out here to look at the fish-ponds and other curiosities, and here I have been nearly murdered, at Hank Ripple's suggestion, by those three runaways from the Norwester! Well, well," he added, with a glance at the sun, "there are still several hours at my disposal, and it will be strange if I cannot bring the villains to justice before I leave the island!"

With this resolve uppermost in his mind, he started anew at a brisk pace for the capital.

"And Maida? How can I reach her? How save her from that vile Hank Ripple?"

As indicated by his words, the recent blow upon Ralph's head had counteracted the injuries he had received from a former one from the same assailants. All that had passed since that memorable day was now in its turn utterly obliterated from his consciousness, while his old memory had been restored! He no longer knew anything about Benning, Alma, or Bullet! In a word, he was "himself again!"

CHAPTER X.

THE SITUATION CLEARING.

As Ralph Kemplin, "clothed and in his right mind," although bruised in body, continued his brisk walk towards the capital, he was struck with the length of the road.

"Seems to me I ought to have reached town before now, or at least be in sight of it," he muttered. "Queer enough!" He continued to trudge on resolutely, notwithstanding the weakness induced by his injuries and the heat of the afternoon, and at length came out upon the crest of the hills adjoining Kalka Bay—the scene, it will be remembered, of the first assault he had experienced at the hands of Ripple's three ruffians long weeks before.

From this point Punch Bowl Hill is plainly visible, looming up behind and beyond the capital, and the amazement of the young Chicagoan, as he saw where he was, almost took away his breath.

"Why, I'm further from town after all these miles of travel than I was when these ruffians attacked me," he exclaimed, involuntarily. "Yes, yonder is the spot where they waylaid me! Doubtless I shall see our traces in the sand and other indications of the struggle."

He failed in this expectation, of course, but he did not relax his steady pace toward the town.

"They must have carried me inland a few miles to rob me at their leisure," was the conclusion he soon reached. "It may be they had a wagon in waiting."

As this theory made the whole situation plain to him, he dismissed the subject from his mind and began to look forward to what he should do upon his arrival at the capital.

"I'll first see the agent of the Norwester, who is also the agent of the Yokohama, and he will assist me in setting things to rights," was his speedy and natural reflection. "As to the question of money, that can be managed readily enough, even if I do not recover my drafts and other papers."

He held to his course with such resolution that he made prompt entry into town, arriving there before the agent to whom he had made reference had left his office, although it was now late in the afternoon.

Beards.

The Moors hold by their beards when they swear, in order to give weight to their oath, which after this formality they rarely violate. The length of beard seems to weigh with them more than the stock of brains.

Admiral Keppel was sent to Algiers to demand satisfaction for the injuries done to His Britannic Majesty's subjects by their corsairs; the dey, enraged at the boldness of the ambassador, exclaimed "that he wondered at the insolence of the English monarch in sending him a message by a foolish, beardless boy."

The admiral, somewhat nettled, replied that "if his master had supposed wisdom was to be measured by the length of the beard, he would doubtless have sent the dey a he-goat."

This answer so enraged the dey that he ordered his mutes to attend with the bow-strings, saying that the admiral should pay for his boldness with his life. Nothing daunted by this threat the ambassador took the dey to the window, and showing him the English fleet said, "If it was his pleasure to put him to death, there were Englishmen enough in that fleet to make him a glorious funeral pile." The dey, who wore a long beard, took the hint from the man who had none.

Clergyman and Baker.

A clergyman in Scotland desired his hearers never to call one another liars, but when anyone said the thing that was not true they ought to whistle. One Sunday he preached a sermon on the miracle of the loaves and fishes, and, being at a loss how to explain it, he said the loaves were not like those nowadays; they were as big as some of the hills in Scotland! He had scarcely pronounced the words when he heard a loud whistle.

"What is that," says he, "ca's me a liar?"

"It is I, Willy MacDonald, the baker."

"Well, Willy, what objection have ye to what I ha' told ye?"

"None," said he; "only I want to know what sort o' evens they had to bake those loaves o' bread in."—New York Ledger.

What "Bankrupt" Means.

The word bankrupt comes from two Italian words, signifying a broken bench. The populace of Venice, Florence and other Italian cities often became greatly incensed with the money lenders, who were frequently Hebrews, and bursting into the market places, would steal the change and break or overturn the bench. A broken bench implied a money changer without funds, hence the term.

MICHIGAN'S BIG DAY.

THE TWO PENINSULAS CAPTURE THE FAIR.

Palmer, Rich, Alger and Other Notables Greet Their Fellow Citizens—Enjoyable Features of the Event—All Out for a Good Time.

Thousands Were There.

Garbed in a bright raiment of state and national colors Michigan celebrated her first fete at Jackson park Wednesday. From the windows and broad verandas she flung the flags of many nations. She welcomed the world as befitting a state whose building has never been closed night or day since the opening of the exposition. And her sons were there in thousands—over 100,000. Every railroad ran dozens of excursion trains out of the state.

For awhile it looked as though it would cease to be Michigan day and become "Tom Palmer day." That is what they call the President of the World's Columbian Commission over in Michigan, and the Michiganders gave indisputable evidence of their affection for him. In return he said all kinds of nice things about them. And all the morning he was the boss of the day. He was a bigger man than the Governor. In fact, when the Governor introduced him as "The Hon. Thomas W. Palmer, better known to you as genial Tom Palmer," he said there was only one bigger man in this country and that was the President of it. In his speech he talked about everything from Grecian history to methods of child education, and was altogether wise, witty, and paternal, as a Senator and diplomat should be.

On a platform off the north veranda they built another big platform, and on it they put flags, palms, Turkish rugs, two ex-Governors, two ex-Senators, the present Governor, and director general. Then the band played and 3,000 people packed themselves around the platform to see the effect of the decorations and the dignitaries.

While the speeches were going on hundreds of Michigan men, women and children struggled through the building and admired it despite the heat and crowd.

President Palmer's Speech.

Gov. John T. Rich presided at the formal ceremonies. He made a brief, straightforward speech. He then introduced President Palmer, who said:

"It is a good thing to be born. It is a goodly thing to look upon the sun, to be one among neighbors, to be a citizen of a community, but it is better than all to be a man, and if one is a man he is certain to recognize the obligations which the above imply. He believes in his country, because he believes that his country's welfare is essential to the good of those whom he holds dear. Men have cause to believe that the philanthropist must be a patriot. Within his country it is natural that he should take special pride in and have an affection for his immediate surroundings, that part of the country where he lives, where his interests are, where those who have interests in common with himself, which in our political fabric, is called a state. As long as this feeling is subordinate to loyalty to the flag it cannot be productive of any but good results. Hence we speak of state pride and resent any imputation on our state's good name. It is a goodly sentiment and it is well to come together, at times to recite our advantages, blessings, and achievements, and mayhap consider our defects."

The ex-Senator then reviewed the romantic and tragic early history of Michigan and paid a glowing tribute to the Indian chief and friend of the early settler, Tecumseh.

Eulogy on Michigan.

He urged gentler and more liberal methods in educating children. In conclusion President Palmer said:

"Men, women and children of Michigan—citizens of no mean State—this is your day and mine. In this culmination of an epoch of human progress never approached in the history of the race we may enjoy it among these surroundings without shame or fear of comparison. The State of Cass, Houghton, Tappan, Chandler, Watson, Howard, and Custer, dead, and many equally broad, bright and courageous living, may well stand in the line of the final parade of the nineteenth century and challenge inspection. If a peninsula is sought, fertile in honor, morals, loyalty, material resources, education and all the forces that make for human betterment, let them look around our State."

At 4 o'clock Gov. Rich, assisted by members of his staff, I. M. Weston and other Commissioners, received in the main reception room. In the evening there was music and dancing at the building. A brilliant display of fireworks closed the first day of Michigan's celebration. The next morning the festivities were resumed with a band concert at 9 o'clock. At 10 o'clock there was a formal inspection of Michigan's exhibits by prominent officials and citizens of the State. At 2 o'clock there was another band concert, and in the evening at 8 o'clock a very elaborate display of fireworks in honor of Michigan.

The cholera scare has abated at London.

PERIL IN ROUNDING THE HORN.

This Season the Ice Is Farther North Than Ever Known Before.

Vessels arriving at San Francisco from Europe report that the ice field in the region of Cape Horn is greater in extent and extends farther north than ever was known before. The field extends for nearly 1,000 miles from the northeast to the southwest, its width being nearly as great. It is in this terrible sea that the British ships Talisman, Ivermark, and MacMillan are believed to have met their doom, as they are long since overdue and nothing has been heard of them since they hailed from this coast. George E. Clayburn, who went out in the British ship Waterloo, and who returned to San Francisco a few days ago overland, said the ice down off Cape Horn was far worse this year than ever known before.

"I have rounded the Horn fifteen times," said Mr. Clayburn to an Examiner reporter, "but the last trip beat them all. We were on deck day and night, and as soon as we got clear of one pack we ran into another. It was 'hard up' and 'hard down' every few minutes, and it seemed as if all the ice that ever formed around the South Pole had broken adrift and was bound up north. One morning 119 big icebergs were counted from the deck of the ship, to say nothing of the small ones, which seemed as thick as grass in a meadow. We could generally pick a passage through the bergs, but we ran across several that made us crowd on all the canvas we could carry to get out of the way. Some of the big fellows towered 300 and 400 feet above the water, and as there was five times as much ice below you can form some idea of their size. The rapidity with which one of those big bergs will go sailing along before a strong breeze is almost beyond belief, but a speed of eight and ten knots is nothing unusual."

"A bark that arrived at Queens-town from Callao a few days before we did had a very narrow escape from destruction, as she was hemmed in and lifted several feet out of the water by the enormous pressure of the ice floes, which held her prisoner for five days and nights."

"The crew had no hope of saving the vessel and the boats were got out on the ice, and provisions, water, and instruments, placed in them in readiness to leave at a moment's notice."

"The weather was bitter cold, and hail, rain, and snow made life on the ice anything but pleasant, but the men refused to desert the vessel, and at last a shift of wind caused the ice to separate, and with the boats towing behind her, the bark sailed out into open water, only to be hemmed in by the ice again a few hours later. Two of the boats were stove to pieces, and one man was so severely injured by slipping on the ice while trying to save one of the boats that he will be a cripple for life."

"The ice was pretty bad off the Horn in 1839, and there was lots of it, but I never heard of it getting so far north as it is this year. I see by the reports that some of the vessels have been driven 500 and 600 miles out of their course by it, and God only knows how many vessels have been lost. No one unless he has been among the ice can form any idea of the grandeur of it, but the men who get into it have seldom any time to think of or admire the sublime, for they have to get out as soon as possible. The strongest ship that ever floated would be crushed as easily between the big bergs as a sledgehammer would crush an egg. The worst of it is you can't tell which way to steer to get clear of some of the bergs, for they will go sailing along across your course at a good speed one minute and then seem to stop as if they had struck the ground. It is very dangerous to get close to them at any time, for no one can tell the moment they are going to capsize, and when they do they raise an awful swell. Sometimes two of the big fellows will collide, and the shock will break them both to pieces and the crash can be heard many miles away. A collision with one of those big masses of ice is almost sure to send a ship to the bottom and her crew has a very small chance of getting out the boats before she goes down."

The Quilt Was a Hoodoo.

During the last Egyptian campaign, Queen Victoria and the ladies of the household employed themselves in knitting quilts, which, at the end of the war, were sent to Netley Hospital for the use of the wounded. One of these, made entirely by her majesty, and bearing an elaborate "V. R." in the center, was the coverlet par excellence of the institution, and in universal demand for a time. In assessing the claims of the candidates for the honor of sleeping under it, the medical staff naturally gave the precedence to the most severely wounded, and, as the most severely wounded was the one most likely to die, very soon an evil omen attached itself to the distinction, the climax of which was reached one night when a poor soldier, feeling something touching his bedclothes, woke up with the perspiration pouring down his face, and cried out: "Oh, sir, do anything you like with me; but, for God's sake, don't give me the quilt!"

THE STRIP IS OPEN.

WILD SCRAMBLE FOR CHEROKEE LANDS.

Scenes About the Registration Booths Before the Start—Description of the Beauties of One of the Fairest Spots on American Soil.

The New El Dorado.

Talk about "rushes" for free land! The scenes just enacted at the opening of the Cherokee Strip surpassed anything of the kind ever known. For a week a constantly growing crowd surged about the registration booths; for no one could secure land without having first registered. Men, women and children, to the number of 20,000 or 25,000, formed in lines and remained there day and night; many were overcome by the heat and dust; some died from exhaustion. Anything eatable commanded World's Fair prices, and water was 10 cents per cup. Still the mass of humanity waited and grew, restrained from premature encroachment by United States marshals and cordons of soldiers. There were half a dozen places for registration along the northern boundary of the Strip, and the scene at one was but a duplicate of the others.

When the last moment arrived, and the word "Go" was given, with a yell that tore a hole in the heavens the crowd started. Some on horseback, some afoot, some with wheelbarrows loaded with goods, some on bicycles, and thousands in the picturesque prairie schooners.

Flowing with Milk and Honey.

Comparatively little is known of the Cherokee Strip or "Outlet" by the average American, despite the fact that it lies almost in the very midst of the nation, at the thresholds of five great States of the Union—Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Colorado, and Texas. And yet it is pronounced by experienced judges to be the finest body of land of its size on the whole American continent, with soil of surpassing richness and depth, mineral resources of great value and inexhaustible quantity, natural scenery that is unrivaled, and a climate of delicious mildness and salubrity. The temperature there in winter varies from 35 to 48 degrees, and in summer from 77 to 82. All the extravagant things that have been written in rapturous praise of Oklahoma are said to be more than true of the Cherokee Strip, for it is regarded as equal in its entirety to the very choicest portions of Oklahoma, while its best lands are said to be veritable garden spots.

The strip is 200 miles long and 50 miles wide. It lies between the 96th and 100th parallels of west longitude, with the southern border line of Kansas as its northern boundary and the Creek country and the Territory of Oklahoma as its southern. Topographically it is rolling, broken by hills and uplands and interspersed with valleys and Eden-like bottoms. Its many water courses are skirted with fine timber, oak, walnut, cedar, ash, beech, and hickory. The soil of the bottom lands and prairies is soft and loamy, black as ink, and of marvelous fertility. Upon the ridges and divides the land is not so well adapted to agriculture, but as the forest growth is slight they furnish splendid grazing pastures for sheep and cattle, being profusely clothed with succulent "bunch grass." Owing to this self-cured "bunch grass" and to the mildness of the climate and the abundance of water, the hilly regions are claimed by old sheep-growers to afford the best sheep country in the world.

Indian Neighbors.

Prospective settlers in the strip may now prepare to get acquainted with the Cherokees, Creeks, Choctaws and other tribes or nations of Indians in the Territory, who, with the white homesteaders of Oklahoma, will be their nearest neighbors. They are as tribes exceedingly wealthy, and are now rapidly adopting American manners, customs, usages and garments. The Cherokees number about 20,000, the Choctaws 16,000, the Creeks 15,000 and the Cheyennes and Arapahoes 7,000, and all the other tribes 22,000, making altogether 80,000 Indians resident in the Indian Territory.

The price to be paid the Cherokees by the government is $8,595,736. There being 8,144,682 acres of the land, the net price per acre is $1.05.

Each settler on the new lands, before receiving a patent, is required to pay, beside fees, the sum of $2.50 per acre between parallels 96 and 97, the sum of $1.50 per acre between 97 and 98, and the sum of $1 per acre between 98 and 100, together with four per cent. from the date of entry until the final payment. Some of the lands between parallels 96 and 97 are worth $50 per acre in the wild state. They are splendidly watered and within easy distance of several thriving towns in Kansas and Arkansas, and every foot of it is capable of cultivation.

PITIALE SCENES.

Good Work of the Children's Aid Society—Help It Along.

One of the most touching sights on the streets of Chicago is the too common one of a poor woman with her little one in her arms, hungry, but unable to buy food, and without any prospect of work. The office of the Children's Aid Society at room 510, 167 Dearborn street, presented a few days ago, a much similar scene. A German woman carrying her little baby, applied for work. She could not speak a word of English, and while she sat waiting for an interpreter to come the tears rolled down her cheeks and fell on the baby's little hands.

No money, no work. It was the same story. During the month just passed there were more than fifty mothers who were willing to go anywhere if they could only find a home for themselves and their children. Many are able to cook excellently; some have had homes of their own; all are anxious to provide against the winter soon to come and the suffering that otherwise must be their's at that time. The Society is looking for families in the country needing domestics or second girls, and willing to take a woman with a child. High wages are not asked; only kindness and charity, in view of the needs of the servants, and a home, with its protection against the threatening winter.

BABY ON THE SCALES.

Interesting Ceremony in the White House—Grover Makes a Close Guess.

Baby Ruth's sister was weighed the other day. Dr. Bryant held the scales, and lifted the precious weight, but he set it down at a sign from the President, who said:

"Wait a minute. Let's guess her weight."

"Ten pounds," said Mrs. Cleveland.

"Eleven," Mrs. Perrine said.

Dr. Bryant looked at the youngster critically, and said: "Nine and a half."

"I should say," Thurber remarked, with the air of a connoisseur, "I should say, well, now—"

"Oh, guess, Thurber," the President

MRS. CLEVELAND AND THE BABY.

interrupted. "It's not a matter of life or death."

"Twenty pounds," Thurber said, somewhat rattled, and he blushed like a girl who had just been kissed and caught at it.

Then the President, who had insisted on having the last guess, put on his glasses and bent over the basket. With the air of a man who hasn't been catching and weighing bass all summer for nothing, he said:

"That's a nine-and-a-quarter pounder or there's something wrong with the scales."

The Doctor then lifted the basket once more. The indicator stopped short at the figure 8.

"Good heavens!" the President exclaimed, in a frightened tone. "Only four pounds. Why, Doctor?"

"It's all right," the Doctor said. "The basket got caught on my arm."

He freed it and the indicator shot down to twenty with a thud.

"Well, I'll be —," the President began. Just then he saw that Baby Ruth had hold of the basket. "Go away from there, Ruth," he said, gently pushing her off.

The basket rose as he did so and settled at thirteen and a half.

"Gee whillikens!" Thurber exclaimed, "that's a bouncer—thirteen and a half."

"Hold your horses, my boy," the President observed, "you must allow for the basket. Let's see, four from thirteen and a half leaves nine and a half."

"Just my guess," Dr. Bryant observed.

"Yes," the President replied, "but you haven't allowed for her breakfast. That weighs a quarter of a pound, so you see that I take the prize."

And with the proud step of a conqueror he strode from the room, and went into his office to resume his work.

Women Barbers.

"The lady barber," said Louis Edmonds, who is at the Lindell, "cannot be called a success. In almost every city women have opened barber shops with a great flourish of trumpets, and have been patronized very liberally by the youth of the city, who regarded the idea as distinctly novel. But the cases where the project has proved anything like a permanent success are very rare. I have been shaved twice by a lady barber, and would not go through the ordeal a third time even if paid liberally for so doing. It is not because a woman cannot shave so much as because she cannot keep a razor in good condition.

"It looks very easy to strop a razor, but every man who has tried to shave himself recoils how he has absolutely failed to produce the desired effect, in spite of the most vigorous applications of energy and what he regards as skill. A woman is at still greater disadvantage, and can seldom sharpen even a penknife, let alone a hollow-ground razor. The only possible chance the average woman barber has is to keep a man busy sharpening her razors, and by so doing she has to pay away the bulk of her profits in the way of superfluous wages. In addition to this, most men who are expert stropers are also expert barbers and prefer to complete the operation themselves."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Saffron-colored Index

Of the condition of a bilious stomach and sluggish liver is the human countenance. Not only the skin, but the eyeballs, are tinged with the yellow hue when the bile gets into the blood. Besides this, sick headaches ensue, the tongue becomes furred, pains are felt in the liver and through the right shoulder blade, and dizziness is experienced upon rising from a sitting or recumbent posture by the bilious invalid. For these and other indications of biliousness, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is a sovereign remedy. It is also efficacious in chills and fever, dumb ague, acute catarrh of the kidneys and bladder, rheumatism and nervousness. It stimulates, restores digestion and sleep, and tends greatly to mitigate the infirmities of age.

It may pass for a maxim in state that the administration can not be placed in too few hands, nor the legislation in too many.—Swift.

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, MASS.,

Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Read the Label. Send for Book.

Western Pleasure Seeking.

When the main line of the Northern Pacific was finished to Garrison Junction, in Western Montana, a reporter of a Helena paper noticed a dilapidated prairie schooner, covered with burs and alkali dust, and loaded with a cargo of tow-headed youngsters.

"Going back East?" inquired the reporter.

"No. We heard there is going to be a circus in Helena this week," said the proprietor of the strange vehicle. "I own a mine on Stony Creek, eighty miles south of here."

"Eighty miles! Why, you must have had a rough trip?"

"Pretty tough, but the children cried and teased till I had to do it," said the pater-familias. "As soon as ever I can make a stake, I'm going to move where a person can see a monkey without having to kill his horse doing it."—Philadelphia Times.

WORLD'S FAIR LETTER.

Special Correspondence.

There is very serious talk of prolonging the Columbian exposition to January 1, at least. The heavy gate receipts of the past weeks and the sudden increase in the regular daily crowds has given the directors encouragement to justify the serious consideration of the project. All difficulties that have hitherto been in the way have been smoothed over, and even the French people who principally objected to the plan have been won. In order to accomplish their object under conditions that will assure the co-operation of foreign governments the directors have found it necessary to go before congress and secure its sanction for the extension. A meeting of the directory will be held next Monday to discuss the method of approaching congress, as well as to consider whether the suggested date of closing is the best possible.

Fred W. Peck, chairman of the finance committee, has been the chief mover in the new plan. He is enthusiastic over the possibilities of the scheme and believes it can be made profitable as well as of value to the people. According to Mr. Peck, he believes that the early fall and winter months could be made as enjoyable as the summer months. The people who have been abroad and returned from their vacations; the school children with their Saturday holidays, a great number of the residents of the territory adjacent to Chicago—all these, Mr. Peck believes, would be glad of the opportunity to attend time and again during November and December. In addition, Mr. Peck believes it good business policy to utilize the exposition plant as long as possible without destroying it. He argues that it will cost comparatively little more to carry on the fair for two extra months than it would to maintain it with closed gates. Figured on this basis, the receipts for November and December would be almost clear gain and would furnish that much more time for the final disposition of the buildings. The exhibitors who have been consulted at all say it would be to their advantage to remain through to the end so long as it does not interfere with engagements they may have elsewhere.

This has been another week of state celebrations. Kansas and Colorado, Ohio, Mexico, Costa Rica, Maryland, New Mexico and Texas, have each enjoyed their special day at the fair. Kansas, indeed, made a whole week of it, and thousands of sunflower state patriots came over to celebrate. A big celebration was that of Ohio Thursday when Gov. McKinley and regiments of the Ohio National guard came to Chicago to honor the day. Attendance on that day aggregated nearly 225,000. The leather men also celebrated on Tuesday and the railroad boys were given another chance on Saturday.

The three caravels were formally presented by Capt. Concas of the Spanish navy to the United States government. The ceremony took place in the court of honor outside of the administration building on a platform at the end of which drooped flags of the nations. On the raised seats were Spanish and American naval officers in uniform, President Palmer, of the National commission; Senor Dupuyde Lome, Spanish commissioner general, Capt. Concas, who brought the caravels across the ocean, Capt. Berry, of the United States Exhibit, and W. H. McAdoo, assistant secretary of the navy. All these official representatives spoke to the large assemblage of people, which included the national commissioners and lady managers.

An exhibitor in the gallery of electricity building has a patent door-mat which opens the door when anybody steps on the mat. Some 3,000 or 4,000 people walk over the mat every day to see it work. The exhibitor says he will make affidavit that 999 out of every 1,000 stop to say as they are leaving: "Great scheme for the man who can't find the keyhole." Moreover, the exhibitor says that every one of the 999 thinks his comment is funny and original.

tional commission voted to comply with Director General Davis' request for an appropriation of $3,000 to be used for illustrating his report to congress. The illustrations will cover the buildings and some of the exhibits, and will be the best that can be made for the purpose. A communication was received from the secretary of the treasury notifying the national commission that in future all vouchers for members of the board of lady managers and for women jurors should be approved by the president of the board of lady managers instead of by John T. Dickerson, secretary of the national commission, as has been the method heretofore.

About the most interesting thing about railway day, Saturday, was a tug of war between two locomotives. One of the machines was an eighty-tonner of the newest type, and the other an electric engine of 600-horse power. The two were put on a special track by the Baltimore & Ohio, and pulled until something cracked. Speeches were made by Director General Davis, Chief Willard Smith of transportation department, President Ingalls of the Big-Four, R. B. Brocklebank, of the London & Northwestern and H. S. Haimes of the Plant System.

About the most interesting of the many pleasing exhibits in the Japanese section is that shown in raw silks. This material is exhibited in quaint, pretty packages, just as it is made for export. The daintiest of all the silks shown, are made for summer wear. They are almost as light as cobweb, with shimmering iridescence when held to the light that is the despair of the manufacturer who seeks to imitate designs in colors and woven patterns peacock's feathers. A series of wind-down panels made of dyed silk looks as though the work might have been done in oils, while another series, showing the fashions of Japanese women, is as fine as if it were meant for an art exhibition. The most pretentious of all the designs are two large patterns in brocades, resembling in effect the goblin tapestries.

Do not wear impermeable and tight fitting hats that constrict the blood vessels of the scalp. Use Hall's Hair Renewer occasionally and you will not be bald.

The Trouble Over.

A prominent man in town exclaimed the other day: "My wife has been wearing out her life from the effects of dyspepsia, liver complaint and indigestion. Her case baffled the skill of our best physicians. After using three packages of Bacon's Celery King for the nerves, she is almost entirely well." Keep your blood in a healthy condition by the use of this great vegetable compound. Call on F. P. Glazier & Co., sole agents, and get a trial package free. Large size 50c.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla does what no other blood medicine in existence can do. It searches out all the impurities in the system and expels them harmlessly through the proper channels. This is why Ayer's Sarsaparilla is so pre-eminently effective as a remedy for rheumatism.
