Michigan Man's Appetite.

It would appear from the following in the New York Herald of recent date that certain Michigan men eat only when they visit New York:

The guests of the Stadt Berlin hotel a No. 81 Fourth avenue were treated to a rare gastronomic performance given by John Hall yesterday morning. In the short space of half an hour he devoured five sirloin steaks and drank several glasses of whiskey and vermouth.

Hall is a long, lean man of middle age and hails from Michigan. He used to work in the lumber country up there, and of course dined upon the regulation fare of salt meats. He had been stopping at the Stadt Berlin Hotel but a couple of days and nothing eccentric or unusual was noticed in his behavior until yesterday.

Proprietor H. Hensing said that at breakfast Hall ordered a sirioin steak. He devoured it and then ordered a second, and as soon as he had disposed of that he demanded a third.

The fame of Mr. Hall's ability to devour steaks spread, and the guests, waiters, cooks and other attaches of the house gathered to see him dispose of his tourth and fifth steaks.

He finished them with ease, tossed of eight glasses of whiskey and wound up with two glasses of vermouth. He then retired to his room and for two hours afterward sang "After the Ball is Over."

The proprietor requested him to desist but he only sang the louder and was finally arested.

Hall acted so violently that the policeman concluded he was insane and summoned an ambulance and had him removed to Bellevue hospital, where he was placed in the insane payilion.

following explanation will be of interest: The act purports to amend;Act No. 159 of 1891, so as to forbid fishing "in any of the inland lakes and streams of this State" in any manner except with hook and line But it only amends section 1 of the law of 1891, without changing its title, which is, "An act to regulate the taking and catching of fish in the inland 'lakes' of this state," instead of "inland waters," as incorrectly given in the act of 1893. The old title therefore still remains as the title of the law, and as the provision of the act of 1893 in regard to streams is not expressed in that title, it is contrary to article 4, section 20 of the constitution of Michigan Game Warden Hampton therefore holds that where there is no local act, fishing in streams is still governed by sections 4 and 5 of the general fish law, act 111 of 1889, which permits the spearing of certain fish in streams, and also taking them with dip net. The mistake was evidently due to an attempt in the closing hours of the session to change Senator Mear's bill relative to Clam Lake into a law governing the whole state.-Star.

Winter Cabbages.

There are many ways of wintering cabbages, varying with the construction of the apartments in which they are stored. Following is what Country Gentlemen says on the subject: In a cellar with an earth Lottom they may be taken up and the roots set in the soil. This answers well for early use or during the winter. For late winter or spring trench them inverted. Select a dry place and dig a shallow trench about 4 feet wide and deep enough to contain the cabbages set upside down or slightly above. Place the inverted heads in this trench as compacily together as practicable. The work of securing them must be commenced just before the ground freezes late in autumn or even later and throw earth over the whole. When the ground freezes quite hard so as to reach the heads, cover with straw. Properly cared for in all particulars and with the work well done, the heads will keep even as late as May. The best straw to cover the cabbages

HOKE COMPLAINS.

The Secretary Says He Has lien Woefully Misrepresented-He Is Not Opposed to Pensions, But Is Determined to Purge the List of Fraudulent Claimants.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25. - Secretary Hoke Smith has made a statement regarding his position upon the pension question. He says he has often been grossly misrepresented in this matter and held responsible for acts about which he knew nothing until they had been committed; and he makes particular mention of the case of Charles T. Bennett, a private in Company F, Thirteenth Indiana volunteers, upon which an important order was issued and about which so much has been said.

Mr. Smith says it is wrong to suppose he is a common enemy to pensions. He conscientiously believes there have crept upon the pension rolls, through one avenue or another, the names of an enormous number of persons who are not entitled to pensions. "These are the ones I am after," declared the secretary, "and they are the ones I intend to weed out of the pension list, if they reduce the total number of pensioners one-half."

Referring to the order of Commissioner Lochren, that pensioners whose claims were not good upon the presentation made should be dropped from the rolls for a period of sixty days, when they must make their claims good or suffer permanent suspension. SecretarySmith says that this action was taken when he was absent from Washington, and that it did not meet his approval. He believed that a pensioner. after being once placed upon the rolls, should have notice before being dropped. Secretary Smith states that his original idea in having the list of "suspects" prepared was to have stricken from the rolls those who had failed to present prima facie evidence that they were entitled to pensions. He believes that investigation into all these cases will lead to the discovery of much fraud, and that fully half of those who have not made prima facie cases will fail in their efforts to show that they were entitled to pensions.

Many of those who were being notified that they must furpish new evidence had so little to stand upon that

It Is Thrown Into a Sallor's Boarding House in San Francisco-The Building Wrecked and Five Inmates Killed-Another Badly Hurt.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25 .- One of the worst crimes in the annals of this city, resulting from a long-standing feud between union and non-union sailors, was perpetrated Saturday night. Shortly after midnight the southern part of the city was shaken by a terrific explosion. A dynamite bomb had been fired in front of a water-front boarding house filled with non-union sailors.

The front of the building was blown to atoms. Six of the inmates were horribly mangled, two of these instantly killed and three others died from their wounds. By whom the bomb was fired is not definitely known, but the owners directly charge the deed upon some members of the Seamen's union. One of the union men by the name of John Terrell has been arrested.

The boarding house was kept by John Curtin. It was Curtin's custom to secure berths for his patrons on ships employing non-union men. In this way he incurred the enmity of the sailors' union. Less than a week ago his place was entered by a crowd of union men led by John Terrell. Curtin was threatened, and when the men left his house they told him the house had only a short time to exist. Saturday night all the inmates had retired as usual and the house was quiet when the explosion occurred, shaking the city for blocks. The entire front of the boarding house was torn away, carrying the front of an adjacent structure with it.

Men were thrown from their beds across the street. The room where the explosion took place was ripped to atoms. A black hole with smoldering beams about it showed where the bomb had torn its way. Four groaning victims lay in the street near by. Beside them lay two corpses, stripped of nearly every bit of clothing. An ambulance was soon on the scene and the victims were quickly rescued from the debris and taken to the hospital. Three of the men who were wounded died Sunday, making the total fatalities five.

was so long since she had had her own way in anything that she was easily father's dead."

The following day, as Old Dad put the harness on his rawboned white horse, he observed to 'Mandy Ann, who happened to be within hearing:

"I'm goin' over to see Josh Cole. He's got a big dorg as he wants ter trade with me for some hens, an' I guess we kin make a dicker."

"Whut you want of a dorg, pa?" "I want him ter keep that putterin" Jed Smith from breakin' the hinges off my gate," replied the old man, as he pulled himself into the rattletrap wagon. "Git up, Ketury!" Away he went.

'Mandy Ann was frightened. "I must tell Jed abaout that dorg." she said.

Hurrying down the lane and across the fields, she came upon a comely young fellow who was stretched in the shade beside a murmuring brook. He sprang up smiling and holding out his hands as she approached.

"I've succeeded, 'Mandy, dear!" he cried, joyously-"I've finished the puzzle! I'll be rich as soon as I can find a capitalist to back me!"

Then a cloud came over his face, as 'Mandy hurriedly told him of her father's resolution.

"Do you love me, 'Mandy, girl?" asked the youth, taking her rather pretty face between his shapely hands and looking straight into her eyes, which drooped before his ardent gaze. "'Course I do, Jed," she murmured, plucking the yellow flower from the stem of a small buttercup.

"More than all the world?" "Yes."

"And you will wait till I come back from the city a rich man?" "Yes."

"Then we'll get married, and your father won't object."

It was past noon when Old Dad Brown returned with a big, fierce-looking yellow dog in his wagon. In a few days, the dog was quite at home about the place, and Mr. Brown had no further fear of Jed Smith's hanging on his gate.

One night, just after the family had retired, the dog suddenly gave tongue. There were fierce barks and growls, mingled with cries of distress in a mastwo ways culine voice. Out rushed the old farmer, a big whip in his hand, and he found the dog and a man suspended across the

Without a word the young man returned to the carriage, which whirled him away in a cloud of dust.

It was some months later that the Browns heard Jed Smith had married the handsome and accomplished daughter of Randolph Gordon, the inventor, who was said to be worth a million. It was also reported that Jed had made something like twenty thousand dollars out of his "Hens in the Kitchen" puzzle.

"Who'd ever thought it of him!" sadly murmured Old Dad, scratching his frowsled head. "An' he was only a putterer-never seemed to care 'baout plantin' an' diggin' taturs an' seeh kind of work, like respectable boys. An' him wuth all that heaps of money, with Nat havin' only three thousan' arter all his father's diggin' and scrimpin'! 'Mandy might 'a' hed him, too, if you hadn't made such a fuss 'bout their hangin' on the gate, Marthy Jane Brown. You're to blame for it all!" And Martha Jane didn't dare deny it. Mandy Ann wept in private when she learned the truth, but it was a case of "crying over spilled milk."

THE VILLA CASTELLO.

Flowers and Vines in a Beautiful Resort Near Florence.

The Villa Castello is about three miles from Florence, and built in a gently undulating country. The flower garden is its interesting feature, and it is one of the most beautiful in Italy. It covers a large area, several acres, and it is placed at the back and north of the palace on rising ground. It is protected at the north by an architectural terrace, above which is a grove of ilex and cypress trees. A large fountain marks the center of the parterre, with circular seats and statuary surrounding it. In the center of the terrace, at the north, is a grotto and fountain very remarkable and dignified in character. An orangerie forms a part of the east wall. The arrangement of the flower beds is as simple as possible, and the effect of the whole is very full in regard to the plantation, and very remarkable as to bloom, for so large a garden. One is conscious only of the principal paths, so well concealed is the necessary network of small ones by which the gardener reaches his plants. The arrangement of vines on the high stucco wall is an exceedingly good one -the lower part of it covered with climbing roses, which are fastened to it the wall, and the upper part for grape vines, which, having grown up to a point above the roses, are made to grow laterally in lines, one above the other, forming a sort of frieze. The grove of Castello is reached by two stairways, one at either end of the terrace. It is quite unpretentious in character, its one embellishment being a fountain, now very much overgrown with moss.-Charles A. Platt, in Harper's Magazine.

FOUR SCORE DEAD.

The Haytian Cruiser Alexandre Petion Goes Down, and Eighty Men Perish-Story of the Sole Survivor.

NEW YOBH, Sept. 23,-A report of the sinking of the Havtian warship Alexandre Petion was received in this city Friday. All aboard, with one exception, were lost. All told, eighty were drowned. Among the number were many prominent officials and diplomates of the republic. The cause of the disaster is unknown. Late Friday it was stated that the Haytian minister in this city received a dispatch confirming the story. The lost vessel was doubtless of the mitrailleuse type of gunboats so popular with the Haytians.

The news of the catastrophe was brought to this city by the ex-minister close of the year was $2,437,371. to Hayti, J. S. Dunham, who arrived on the steamer Prinz Wilhelm I. from Fort-au-Prince. The disaster to the Petion occurred on September 6, about 50 miles south from Cape Tiberot. The cruiser had just been put into condition. She left Port-au-Prince September 4, bound for San Domingo. She had on board many distinguished passengers, among them being Gen. Molini, San Domingo's envoy to Hayti; M. Cohen, the Haytian minister to Mexico, and other wellknown diplomates.

The suddenness and completeness of the disaster, only one sailor escaping, makes the affair most mysterious, and it is probable that the real cause of the wrecking of the ship will never be known. According to the testimony of the sole survivor there was absolutely no warning. Neither collision with another vessel; submerged coral reef nor storm can account for the occurrence.

The day was fair, the wind was nothing more than a gentle breeze and the passengers were enjoying themselves in the cabin. Suddenly the vessel began to sink. The officer on the watch ordered the men to pass the word in the cabins and forecastle to reach the deck as quickly as possible and jump overboard. It was already too late.

There was terrible confusion in the cabin as the panic-stricken passengers struggled to reach the deck, blocking the passageway as they did so and preventing one another from escaping from what was destined to be their tomb. For only a moment and at the proper time the usual sixtythe awful struggle lasted. In one in which he could ask for a medical examminute and a half from the time she began to sink the vessel was entirely with slender bamboo sticks attached to under water. One sailor, as the ship sank under him, snatched a pair of oars from the lifeboat and threw himself into the water. He caught a plank as it floated by and looked around, but not a man arose from the swirling waters which engulfed the warship. The sailor drifted for thirty-six hours on the plank with nothing to eat or drink, and when picked up he was almost exhausted. The place where he was picked up was about 50 miles southeast of Port Roment. For a long time the castaway was unconscious after he was taken aboard and could not speak. Brandy was administered to him, and after a hard fight he rallied a little. When he was able to speak he told a terrible story. He said he was one of the sailors of the Alexandre Petion. When the warship was off the Tiberon, on September 6, a gale arose. The sailor said the ship went down head foremost in the waves, without the slightest warning, and that all on board but himself were drowned. He was brought to Port au Prince and put aboard another warship.

THE PENSION BUREAU.

Its Work for the Year Reviewed by Com. missioner Lochren.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.-Pension Commissioner Lochren has submitted his annual report to the secretary of the interior. The number of pensioners on the rolls of the bureau is 966,012, a net increase of 89,944 for the year. During the year 24,715 claims for increase of pensions and 31,990 for additional pension under the act of June 27, 1800, were allowed. In the same time 115,221 claims for pension and for increase were rejected. Claims pending consideration July 7 numbered 711,150. The amount of money paid for pensions during the year was $156,740,467, and the balance at the Appropriations for the next fiscal year, Commissioner Lochren states, will be ample, and the estimates for the fiscal year 1895 amount to $162. 631,550, as follows:

Clerk hire at pension agencies...... 500,000 Contingent expenses 59.570

The commissioner enumerates the various reforms inaugurated -the abandonment of the completed files system and the modification of order 164 of October 15, 1890, as to disability pensions, etc. He says on this latter point:

"It is perfectly clear that under this order 164, in granting pensions under the act of June 27, 1890, the act itself was set aside and disregarded, with the result of granting pensions not authorized by any law."

The board of revision is now disposing of an average of about 1,600 cases per week of those suspended under the recent orders of the bureau. At this rate it is estimated that practically all of those heretofore suspended will be disposed of by October 10. It is also estimated that at least 75 per cent. of those suspended will be retained on the rolls, though not all of them at their old rates of pension.

In regard to the temporary suspension of order 164 he says:

"In cases where it was believed that a pension could not be sustained and another medical examination was thought necessary the payment of the pension was ordered to be suspended pending inpending investigation, according to the practice of the bureau from the beginning; ination or supply further evidence right to his pension. This practice of the bureau, always followed, is the correct practice. It is not the withdrawal or taking away of a pension, but the temporary withholding of its payment where it appears to be unlawful, pending a proper inquiry. Upon your suggestion that even this temporary withholding might work hardship where, upon the face of the papers, it appears that the pensioner is entitled to at least some less rating, the practice has been modified and changed as to the cases under this act so far that suspensions of payment pending the sixty days are only ordered when on the face of the papers it appears prima facie that the pensioner is not entitled to any pension. The sixty day notice in suspending pensioners was not for the purpose of withdrawing a penston, but temporarily withholding it, where it appears to be unlawful, pending inquiry. Special examiners are now investigating wholesale frauds in New Mexico and Iowa." The commissioner recommends a codification of pension laws, with a few changes; that promotions be made with regard to merit alone, and in utter disregard of influence; and the repeal of the act of congress providing that no pension shall be paid to a non-resident who is not a citizen of the United States, except for actual disabilities incurred in the service. Commissioner Lochren concludes as follows: "I recognize to the fullest extent that my sole duty is to execute and administer the laws as they are enacted, fairly and honestly interpreted."

"Oh, pa!" half sobbed 'Mandy Ann. "Don't 'oh pa' me!" went on the angry old man, shaking one long crooked finger in the shrinking girl's face. "I've sed it, an' I mean it!"

"Jed's a nice feller," timidly ventured the girl. "He's eddycatin' of hisself, an' he knows heaps.

"Huah!" ejaculated the father. "Lots of good his eddycashun 'll do him when he has to saw wood an' cut hoop-poles fer a livin', the way his father did afore him."

"But he's goin' ter be rich-he's goin' ter be a great inventor. He says there's lots of money made in little things, if they only ketch the public fancy, an' now he's gittin' up a puzzle game he calls 'Hens in the Kitchen.' The puzzle's to git the hens out. It's marster cute."

"'Hens in the Kee-e-chin!' Now hain't that a nice thing for a young man to be fritterin' away his time over! I swan! the idee makes me wanter take a club an' knock some sense inter his head! Him an inventor. The idee!"

"Why not him, pa? You know Mr. Gordon, as is comin' here to board next week, is an inventor. That's how he made his money, an' he tole me last summer he uster go barefoot when he was a boy and never had no money till he got up that cultivator riggin'.'

"That's all right. He invented a cultivator, but he didn't fiddle away his time on a 'Hens in the Kitchen' riggin.' It's no use to talk to me, 'Mandy Ann, I'm dead sot agin' Jed Smith. If he comes raound here any more, him an' me'll have an argument an' he'll wish we hadn't. If you've got ter have a feller to spark up to, take Nat Bates."

"Oh, pa. He's awful humbly, an' his best suit of clothes is skimigilious. He's the most gaumin' feller I know, an' he's so ignerent he can't write his own name.'

"But his old dad's wuth much as fifteen hundred dollars, 'sides his farm, an' that's good for nigh two thousan'. He's a rich man, 'Mandy, an' Nat'll get ev'ry dollar bumby. You've got to look arter them little p'ints, gal. . Now ou put yourself ter bed, an' don't you let me hear no more about Jed Smith."

'Mandy Ann had never disobeyed her father, but the time had come when she felt like rebelling. However, she went to bed, as directed, where she sobbed herself to sleep and dreamed of Jed Smith all the night.

"Don't you think you was jest a leetle peaked on the gal, pa?" timidly asked Mandy Ann's mother. "It hain't no ways likely Jed Smith an' her'll be "Good Lord!" gasped Old Dad, as he caught the snapping dog by the collar. 'It's-it's Mr. Gordon, the inventor!"

Mr. Randolph Gordon did not accept Old Dad's explanation and apology. Instead, he made his way to the nearest house, which happened to be Daniel Smith's, and spent the night there. In the morning, he saw the puzzle Jed had worked so long over, and he grew strangely interested in it. Two days later, Mr. Gordon returned to the city, and Jed went with him.

Two weeks after, Reuben Bates, Nat Bates' father, died suddenly of heart failure, leaving all his possessions to his only son.

"Now," said old Dad Brown to 'Mandy Ann, "if you don't snap him you're a itarnal foolish gal, I'll 'low. You'll never hear northin' of that putterin' Jed Smith no more, an' it won't mount to little apples if you do."

'Mandy may have begun to think so, too, for she straightway "set her cap" for Nat, and when another spring came around they were married.

One beautiful June day a handsome team drew up at old Dad Brown's door, and a tastily dressed, rather elegant young man walked through the gate, ascended the front steps and knocked. Mr. Brown had just eaten an early dinner, and he came slouching to the door, the stem of a clay pipe between his teeth.

"How do you do, Mr. Brown," said the young man, calmly. "I have come for 'Mandy. She promised to marry me when I returned wealthy. I am ready to keep my part of the contract."

Impertinence of Course.

You all remember that old story of the apple pie, the waiter enumerating the several kinds and the guest saying: "I'll take mince, cranberry, custard and huckleberry," and the waiter exclaiming: "What's the matter with the apple pie?" Well, the other night at a dinner party a fellow entertained the table in this way: "Coming over last summer I told an Englishman that story. You know where the waiter asks the guest at a hotel if he will have apple or mince pie and when he replies: 'Mince pie' the waiter says: 'What's the matter with the apple pie?' and do you know the Englishman couldn't see the point of it at all." We all looked at each other in silence and at last the host said: "What's the point of it?" "The point," he replied; "I supposed anyone could see that; the point of it is the impertinence of the waiter, of course."-Quips.

The Man Girls Like.

You couldn't get a girl to confess it, but it certainly is true, that the man she most admires is often:

He whose ideas never coincide with her own.

He who tells her point blank that he hates to see powder on her face. He who appears blissfully unaware of her existence. He who tells other people that she dresses in good taste.

He who never says that some other girl looks pretty.

He who always appears interested when she airs her little tribulations.

He who declares she looks beautiful when she knows positively that her hair is all out of curl.

He who does not overlook a slight or forgive a hasty word too quickly .-Chicago Record.

THREE MEN SLAIN.

A Battle to the Death Over a Claim in the Cherokee Strip.

HENNESSEY, O. T., Sept. 23 .- James A. Liddle, a prominent business man, has received a telegram from Waukomis stating that his brother, father and nephew were killed in a fight over a claim near there. Eight men were on one claim and the younger Liddle was struck with a broadaxe by a man named Williams, of Texas. Father and son then jumped to his rescue and Williams pulled his gun and killed them both. He then drew his knife and plunged it into the heart of the boy. A posse left here last night for Waukomis, and if Williams is caught he will be burned at the stake.

Citizens are wild with excitement, as several people have been killed, robbed and have mysteriously disappeared since the strip was thrown open for settlement. The body of a young man was found hanging to a tree on Skeleton river Thurday afternoon. A placard on his breast reads: "Death to the man who cuts this body down." Inquiry made among the settlers in the vicinity shows that the young man had a fight with a grayhaired soldier and that he killed the man and the soldiers lynched him.

There has been a strong effort to turn public sentiment in favor of the white caps and the board of supervisors refused to assist the state's attorney in prosecuting the case. The men are all indicted however, and Attorney General Maloney has said that he would appear and help prosecute. Gov. Altgeld offered $200 reward for the arrest and conviction of each member of the mob. Ten of the most prominent attorneys of the district have been engaged to defend the murderers. The case will be tried at the present term of court and promises to be a famous one.

Here he will rise just after the dawn, be at his desk several hours before breakfast, and remain there, with an interval of an hour for a walk, the whole day.

THE Cherokee Strip is 180 miles long and fifty-eight miles wide, which means that it contains 10,440 square miles, or 6,680,400 acres. One-third of the strip is said be of no value except for a cattle range. That is, about 4,-500,000 acres is fit for farms. At a quarter section, or 160 acres, to a settler, there is land for 27,000 families aside from those who build towns.

A NOVEL entertainment in England recently at an earl's country seat was the evolutions of a ladies' fire brigade. Twenty-six young women, among whom some honorable misses were included, went through what was pronounced a most creditable exhibition of pumping, hose practice, and ladder and blanket practice. Of course they wore a picturesque uniform.

THE Bank of England note is not of the same thickness all through. The paper is thicker in the left-hand corner, to enable it to take a better and sharper impression of the vignette there, and is also considerably thicker in the dark shadows of the center letters and under the figures at the end. Counterfeit notes are invariably of one thickness.

May Disrupt Many Corporations.

Secretary of State Jochim declines to accept the articles of association of the Senate of the Happy Homes Clubs of America because that corporation is formed under a special act of the last legislature instead of under the general law. If Jochim is sustained in the supreme court, fourfifths of all corporations of this nature in Michigan will have to reincorporate, as the constitutional prohibition has never been enforced.

Death of a Jurist.

Eight weeks ago Judge Albert Miller was stricken with paralysis. He died at an early hour the other morning in Bay City. Judge Miller was born in Vermont in 1810 and came to Michigan in 1830. He built the second sawmill in what is now Bay City. He was one of the first members of the Presbyterian church, and has had more to do with the development of northern Michigan than any person now living. He was 83 years of age.

Lumber Burned.

Fire started in John Welch's lumber docks in West Bay City, spread rapidly to adjoining property, and before it was got under control had destroyed 2,-500,000 feet of lumber and other property valued at $46,000. Balling, Hanson & Co., of Grayling, and Fisher & Co., of Bay City, were the owners. There was no doubt that the fire was of incendiary origin, as two explosions were heard just before the fire started.

A WARM RECEPTION.

It Is Tendered a Gang of Train Robbers in Missouri Whose Plans Were Known in Advance-They 'Attack a "Dummy" Train Loaded with Officers-Two of the Thieves Are Killed and Three Captured ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Sept. 25 .- The Kansas City, St. Joe & Council Bluffs railroad foiled an attempt to rob one of its passenger trains, killed two of the bardits and captured three others at Francis, 1½ miles from this city, at 1:30 a. m. The dead are Ed Kohler and Higo Indall. The captured men are Frederick, Hersh and Harvey.

Train No. 3 was the intended victim. It left Kansas City at 9:05 Sunday night and arrived here at 12:30 Monday morning. The officials of the road had been notified that the robbery of the road had been planned and they notified the police. When the train arrived here a dummy train was made up and sixteen police officers under command of the chief of police were put aboard. In order to thoroughly deceive the robbers the train was made an exact duplicate of train No. 3 and consisted of an engine and tender, an express and baggage car and the usual coach and Pullmans.

When the dummy reached a point 2 miles north of St. Joseph the engineer's attention was arrested by a lighted lantern moving to and fro between the rails. He obeyed the signal and six masked men surrounded the engine. One of the six mounted the engine, and presenting one revolver at the engineer's head and another at the fireman's held them in subjection while the other five men hastened to rob the express car. They ordered the messenger to open the door, which he did forthwith.

Three of the bandits entered the car, leaving two without to keep guard. The policemen who were guarding the train were distributed in the various cars, the majority of them being concealed in the express car. Upon the three bandits who had undertaken the work of robbing the car entering the door the police within ordered them to surrender.

The robbers were taken completely by surprise, but they opened fire at once upon the police. The police returned the fire and a general fusillade followed. About twenty-five shots were fired on both sides. When the state board of health indicated that smoke cleared away the lifeless bodies placed in jail, where Drs. Letherman typho-malarial fever, influenza, cholera of Kohler and Indall were found lying on the floor of the car. Both had been shot through the head. The bullets which pierced Kohler's head produced instant death. He never stirred after he was hit. Indall was still breathing, but he died shortly after he was brought here. Frederick, the third robber engaged in the fight in the car, was uninjured and was placed under arrest. None of the officers were injured. While the fight was going on in the car those of the police not engaged in it were looking after the two robbers who had been left outside to keep watch. The police quickly took them in and placed them under arrest. The bandit who had been detailed to guard the engineer and fireman quickly realized the situation when he heard the battle going on in the express car and promptly made his escape. A detail of officers was put on his track and quickly took up the pursuit, with every prospect of capturing the fugitive. A remarkable feature of the fight in the express car was the escape of all the officers from injury. The three robbers in the car were each armed with a brace of revolvers and used them freely, but still they did no damage. The bodies of Kohler and Indall were brought here on the dummy train, which returned to the city soon after the encounter. They were taken to an undertaker's. The prisoners, Frederick, Hersh and Harvey, were brought here on the same train with their dead comrades and locked up at the police station. All of the train robbers lived here. The place picked out by the robbers is an ideal one for train robbery. The district immediately north of St. Joseph is not thickly populated. The road runs through a series of sand hills along high embankments flanking the Missouri river. In the riprapping that is necessary to keep the river banks intact at this place huge piles of stone and rubble have dumped on the one been side and banks of sand flank the tracks on the other. The strip of land is so poor agriculturally as to offer no inducement to farmers, and hence after leaving St. Joe the passenger sees rather a dreary prospect until the railroad branches away from the river a little. The chances for robbers to escape at this place are also good. The Missouri river can be easily crossed and with a boat in waiting a party of maraudcould be in Kansas in half ers hour. Directly opposite St. an Joe and for 15 miles down the stream the only evidences of life are jack rabbits. The territory between St. Joe and Atchison, Kan., was a favorite one for desperadoes twenty years ago, who would pillage in the wealthier sections of the state and lose themselves in the tenantless wastes not far away in the adjoining counties.

A ROBBER SHOT DEAD.

Two Brothers Try to Loot the Safe in the Normal School at Valparaiso, Ind.-Chased by a Posse and One of Them Killed-The Other Wounded and Captured.

VALPARAISO, Ind., Sept. 25 .- Two masked men entered the office of the Northern Indiana normal school Saturday and tried to rob the large safe. The secretaries, Misses Kate Corbery and Emma Jones, were in the front office, and when Miss Jones passed through the door to the private office to put away some papers she was confronted by the masked men, one of whom placed a reyolver against her face and commanded her to throw up her hands.

She struck at the revolver, knocking it out of his hand, and ran screaming out into the street, followed by Miss Corbery. As they passed through the door one of the robbers at them. The robbers seefired further efforts were useless ing coolly walked out the front door and down the steps. A mail carrier here blocked the way. Both of them pointed their revolvers at him and he retired They then jumped the fence and started east. Arnold, the carrier, gave the alarm and in a few minutes students started in pursuit.

Word was sent to the city and in a short time officers and hundreds of citizens, armed with every kind of firearms, were scouring the country. When about a mile east of this city the robbers were overtaken by the first of the pursuing party, who demanded of them to halt, and were answered by shots. Nathan O. Howe, of Michigan City, was coming to this city with a load of peaches, and seeing the masked men followed by a number of others who were shooting drove to a farmhouse, borrowed a rifle and joined in the pursuit.

His aim was good and the first shot fired hit one of the robbers, passing through his body and his right arm, killing him instantly. The next shot struck the other robber in his right hand, knocking his revolver to the ground, which he picked up with the left and fired at Howe. He then stooped over his companion and upon finding him dead threw up his hands and surrendered.

The injured man was brought back to this city by Sheriff Stoddard and and Pollock dressed his wounds. His Brakeman Unaccountably Throws Switch at the Wrong Time, Allowing Wabash Express Train to Crash Into a Freight at Kingsbury, Ind.-Eisven Per. sons Killed and Many Injured. KINGSBURY, Ind., Sept. 23.-Every house in the town is either a morgoeor a hospital. Two trains came together on the Wabash siding just after day break Friday. The freight train, with twenty-two loaded cars, stood on the side track and was headed eas For more than an hour it had waited for the second section of the No. 55 passenger train, west bound. All the passenger trains have been going in sections because of the heavy world's fair traffic. After the first section went by at 4:40 o'clock all the trainmen knew that another section was coming. Herbert Thompson vas head brakeman. It was his work a look after the cast switch. No ma can tell why Thompson went an turned the switch after the first train had passed. It was the act of a crazy man-so say the railroad men. But he did it. Thompson cannot tell, for no one has seen him since the dead and dying were thrown high in the air with the shattered fragments. Thompson ran away. Some one saw him an hour later sitting on the iron bridge in the deep timber country to the east. He had his head between his hands and was looking down into the water. The second section came at 5:40. The switch was open, but the signals did not say so. The trains met. In one instant of crash and explosion two engines and three coaches were heaped in a mountain of splinters. There followed all the scenes of blood and suffering known to railroad wrecks.

TORONTO decided that she will not permit any street cars to be run in that city on Sunday. The decision was made at the polls, and it was a most animated contest between the Sabbatarians and the street car company and "the world's people." The friends of Sunday cars were defeated by the following vote: For Sunday cars, 13,060; against Sunday cars, 14,085.

The boys of San Francisco are probably in for plenty of work. Last fall a few of them were employed in the vineyards around Fresno, and their work was so satisfactory that 1,500 are called for. They do their work better and more rapidly than the Chinese. Girls are also eager to work, and by another year they are likely to be called into the vineyards and orchards.

CONTRARY to the general belief, it is said that L. Hung Chang, the viceroy and real ruler of China, is most kindly disposed toward the Christians. Two of his daughters were educated in Massachusetts, and both were converted to Christianity. Subsequently one married a Frenchman and the other an Englishman. Their influence has made their father very tolerant of their coreligionists.

For the three months ending September 1 the shipment of shoes from Brockton, Mass., aggregated 91,461 cases, which falls below the shipments in the corresponding weeks of 1891 and 1892. In 1892 the shipments for the same weeks footed up 91,846 cases and in 1891 98,411 cases. The shipments for the present year up to date, however, show an increase over the two previous years even in the face of the present business depression.

Frank Robinson, the man killed, was a student at the school for three terms ast year, and came back about three weeks ago and entered school. He was joined by Moody about ten days ago, but he did not attend school. When Moody was searched at the jail it was discovered that he had two suits onone a fine dress suit covered with a well-worn suit. His companion was dressed the same way.

Some time ago one Webster, of Chicago, was arrested for robbing places on the hill and sentenced to the penitentiary. All his effects were in the same shape as those of these two men, and the officials think that they were members of the same gang, and that there were more persons interested in the bold attempt to rob the safe.

An examination of the robbers' trunks showed a peculiar state of affairs. The one belonging to Moody was found to contain about thirty suits of underclothing and a lot of wearing apparel, besides a cloak, which is thought to have been stolen from some place.

Nathan O. Howe, who did such effective shooting, is a son of the veteran detective Frank Howe, now living in Michigan City.

Late Sunday night young Moody was identified as Claire Robinson, a brother of the dead man. A Kalamazoo dispatch says that he was not a resident of that city, as claimed by him.

WILD DAY IN THE HOUSE.

mid Stormy Scenes Speaker Crisp Suc coods in Breaking the Deadlock by the Use of Tactics Similar to Those Once Employed by Ex-Speaker Reed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21. When the house met the democratic benches were well filled. The committee on rules had held a meeting at which, against the protest of its republican members-ex-Speaker Reed and Mr. Burrows-Mr. Catchings (Miss.) was instructed to report, if necessary, a rule that would disarm filibustering. As soon as the journal had been read

Mr. Loud (Cal.) asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolation calling on the secretary of the treasury to know how many ounces of silver had been purchased under the Sherman law in July and August, and also what amount of silver had been offered for sale during these months, and if the government had not purchased the 4,500,000 ounces required by law to know under what authority the secretary had acted.

Filibustering Begins.

Mr. Fitch (N. Y.) objected and thereupon the struggle began. Mr. Burrows moved to dispense with the call of committees for reports, and immediately Gen. Catchings from the committee on rules presented his report, which provided that no other business should be in order until the reports of committees had been received. Mr. Burrows attempted a flank movement by raising the point of order that the report was not in orhad ever been sent to the committee for action

Reed Still Defiant.

Although realizing that they were baffled the republicans persisted in their stubborn fight. Mr. Burrows moved to lay the report of the committee on the table. The speaker ruled the motion out of order and also declined to entertain an appeal. Some confusion followed. A dozen members were on their feet and the speaker, who was in a hot altercation with Mr. Payne, brought down his gavel and ordered all members to take their seats. Every member instantly seated himself except ex-Speaker Reed, who loomed up defiantly in the midst of the minority.

Mr. Reed Sat Down.

"Gentlemen will resume their seats," again shouted the speaker. Mr. Reed was pale with rage. For a moment he stood eyeing the speaker as though hesitating whether to obey the order, and then sank into his seat. This evoked more democratic applause, and der because no proposition of that kind then the roll-call began on ordering the previous question.

In spite of the vigorous efforts of the whip the democrats failed to muster a quorum on this roll call. Synopsis of the Discussion in the United States Senate.

of the Sherman law.

He made the point that for sixteen years, up to 1892, no political party had gone before the people favoring the free coinage of silver or the destruction of gold as the measure of value. an experimental law also, in one sense Nobody believed at the time that it would stand long on purchasing silver and putting it in the treasury as bullion, it is only a question of a few months (or a few years at most) when we will fail to redeem our obligations in gold; and then we will be at a silver standard. He continued:

"I want to repeat my belief now, that all history discloses the fact that when you make even a small divergence between the established ratio and the true commercial ratio, the result is disastrous. I undertake to say that it is utterly impossible for us to deal with this question of ratio at this time. The ratio of 2) to 1 would be an increase of ratio because we have known the price of silver to change by 20 per cent, in a single day. The moment the action of the India council was known silver went down 20 per cent. In the next week it went up 15 per cent. How, then, can we make a ratio that will measure the value of all debts and all credits on the basis of the bullion value of silver? The situation in India has changed the situation here. We are trying now to keep up the price of a thing that will go down below the cost of production, whatever that may be.

"If we continue the silver purchases we uphold the British policy in India. The inevitable effect of what we are doing here is either to uphold or to destroy or impair the ability of England to maintain its policy in India. If we cease to purchase silver it will be impossible, in my opinion, for England to carry out that policy and it will become an utter failure.

"If this government will undertake the policy of an international agreement between silver and gold I believe that that policy will be accomplished, that within a brief period we will be able to restore the parity between the metals and practically to rehabilitate silver. My belief is that if we are to have an international agreement we must make it appear to the nations of the world that we ourselves do not mean to take care of silver."

On the 19th a lengthy discussion was had on a proposition by Mr. Voorhees for a set time when a vote should be taken on the repeal bill. Mr. Voorhees gave notice that he would ask the senate to remain longer in daily session, perhaps at night.

Mr. Mills (dem., Tex.) then spoke, advocating repeal. The Sherman law was an unwise law and as such should be repealed. It had been said in this debate that (according to the president) we stood face to face with bimetallism against a single gold standard. That statement was not accurate. The president had not made the issue. The facts had made the issue: and it was for congress to determine between bimetallism on the one

"Nothing can be gained by ordering he clerk to read a report when he has oright to do it." yelled Mr. Reed defantly. "The speaker decided that the report of the committee on rules was eccivable by a ruling," he said, raisng his voice impressively, "which is he most surprising statement ever made in legislative history." (Demoratic jeers.) "Oh, you have got to orce your action," he continued, turnng fiercely on the democratic majority. "We are ready," a chorus of voices shouted back.

Crisp Is Sustained.

The speaker then went carefully over the parliamentary status, following it thronologically, and concluded by sustaining the point of order made by Gen. Catchings against Mr. Burrows' motion take a recess. This ruling was reeted with democratic cheers. Mr. Payne attempted to appeal from this ecision.

"Two appeals cannot be taken," houted the speaker. "The question before the house is the appeal of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Burows). The clerk will call the roll." The tactics of the minority had been unavailing. By a vote of 172 to 56 the house sustained the decision of the chair.

Mr. Hepburn moved to take a recess or two hours. The speaker ruled this be out of order. Mr. Hepburn appealed from the decision of the chair. ome of the impatient democratic members, chafing under the slow progress that was being made, did not want for the consideration of the bill. Then chair to entertain the ap with a sigh of relief the house adbut Speaker Crisp announced journed. that he inclined to the greatest liberality in the matter of appeals in cases ike this where practice was not well established, and accordingly he submitted the appeal to a vote. On the

"We have occupied a peculiar coign of vantage in this contest, you on the other side were between two fires. We stood to win either way. You had to resort to everything you had denounced or be beaten, and with character-"I object," shouted Mr. Reed again | istic determination you chose humiliation: you settled yourself deliberately in the traces against which you stormed and howled.

"Is doing so you not only violated the precehe desk with his gavel and ordered the dents of 100 years, but all the principles of parlimentary law with which you had ever. come in contact. You decided that the speaker can vitiate a motion because it is dilwithout his mouth pronouncing atory the odious word, and you sanctioned the violation of the sacred right of appeal for which the present occupant of the chair contended so impetuously four years ago. That is the situation. You refused the system of rules which we offered you under which you could have done business, and instead you chose to accomplish the same ends by special acts of violence. Is that the sort of thing worthy of a great party? What a spectacle you have made of yourselves to-day I leave to your own imagination to decide. The object of this action has been unworthy the methods employed to accomplish it, for it has been the destruction of the power of the federal government in fed-"The speaker has decided contrary to eral elections in order that corruption and fraud might have free rein."

Catchings' Reply.

Mr. Catchings, on rising to reply to Mr. Reed, said:

"It is unnecessary for me, after the clear statements of the speaker in his rulings, to go into a defense of the course of the majority. It is cruel for Mr. Reed to suggest that we have humiliated ourselves. If we have I had not discovered it. The chagrin. I think, lies on the other side of the house. The ex-speaker has discovered that there are other methods by which the house can do businessmethods just as effective and infinitely more reference to the struggles against his fair than his own. He is himself humiliated because we have not been forced to resort to his methods, but under the code we have adopted, despite all the filibustering that his skillful parliamentary knowledge could devise, have been able to bring this matter to a Vote.

The Fight Ends.

Mr. Henderson (rep., Ia.) and Mr. Payne (rep., N. Y.) also denounced the speaker's action, and then Mr. Burrows, who had reserved the motion to matter of fact it could not be denied adjourn, which the speaker was willing that they made it impossible to transto entertain until the last, made the motion. It was lost-73 to 179. The vote then recurred on the adoption of brought to the attention of the senate, it was the report of the committee on rules and it carried-176 to 91. had been victorious after their five days' struggle. Silently the republicans watched the committees make their reports to the house, including the report of the Tucker bill. The committee on president, vice president and the election of members of congress also presented a resolution asking the committee on rules to make a special order and a single silver standard on the other. The president had been charged with having deserted the democratic platform. The president stood squarely with both feet on the platform of the party that had elected him and was ready to execute the pledges which his party had made to the people. The men who were attacking the president were the men who were off the platform. There was a demand in the country. for the repeal of the Sherman lawfor its unconditional repeal. The democratic party had arraigned the Sherman law as an unwise law and declared that it should be repealed. The democrats were pledged to revise the McKinley act. Was the senate to wait before it repealed the Sherman act until the house of representatives acted upon the tariff? It was said that Arizona and New Mexico should be admitted as states. Was the senate to wait until this was done before it relieved the distress of the people?

Mr. Mills then proceeded to argue that bimetallism could not exist when intrinsic value and money value were not precisely the same. If they were not the same, how could they be made the same, except by international agreement? He was in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver, but free and unlimited coinage must result in bimetallism. And bimetallism would not the result of the United States be alone of all nations of the earth opening her mints to coinage. In conclusion, Mr. Mills said he was going to vote for the repeal, and he would vote against every amendment to it that human ingenuity could suggest. He could not conceive of any amendment that could be offered that would not impeack the integrity of the president, and would vote against every one.

Mr. Stewart (rep., Nev.) protested against any closure proposition. If the silver men went down they would go down protesting.

On the 20th the senate remained in continuous session six hours and a half, the longest session since the repeal bill was taken up. Mr. George (Miss.) addressed the senate in opposition to repeal. He read his remarks to a slim audience and several times roll had to be called to develop the presence of a quorum. Mr. Gray (Del.) spoke in advocacy of the repeal bill.

On the 21st Senator Platt (rep., Conn.) offered an amendment to the senate rules providing for closure. He said the rules of the senate, as of every legislative body, ought to facilitate the transaction of business, while as a act business. When the necessity and propriety of a change of rules so as to reasonably facilitate the transaction of business was the best plan to 'enter upon that work: He knew it would be said that in the present condition of affairs in the senate such a rule could not be adopted, but he believed it could be adopted by a vote just The fight was over. The democrate as easily and quickly as the repeal bill could be passed. While he had not consulted senators upon the republican side, he thought a large number on that side favored the adoption of that rule. Senator White (dem., La.) then spoke on the repeal bill, claiming that there were other causes for the financial panic be sides the Sherman act.

On the 22d Senator Allen (pop., Neb.) introduced a bill making the dollar (which may be coined of 412% grains of silver or 25 8-10 grains of gold) the unit of value. The bill also repeals the Sherman act. and provides that owners of silver bullion may deposit in the mint, and such silver, less 20 per cent. (to be deducted for seignorage and coined into silver dollars and put in the treasury), shall be coined into standard dollars for his benefit.
