Medical Slavery.

Henry Wood, in the Arena: "The toils of legislative restriction and monopoly are often woven so subtly that the average citizen is quite unaware of possible, and even present, abridgements of his personal freedom. In any one of a great majority of the states of this glorious, free Union, if one is healed of disease by means of any treatment denominated "irregular," the person who has done him such a service is liable to arrest, punishment, and classification as a felon. Legislative monopoly makes it an offense to practice healing irregularly. The cure is as much a violation of the law as to kill. The various laws now in force in the several states for the "regulation" of medical practice, without exception, are contrary to the spirit of the age, subversive to true progress, and a disgrace to any government that is theoretically liberal. They are belated reverberations from the seventeenth century.

It is obvious that there should be a general and systematic effort put forth by the friends of liberty and progress to restore the democratic principle in therapeutics. The monopoly is strongly entrenched, but if the people can be awakened to the real issue, the despotic mandates may be expunged from the statute books."

After "husking" potatoes all day and enjoying his pipe in the evening, he marked: "I have spent much of the last thirty-four years in farmers' homes, and have seen that boy—the country lad as he is. He rises early, he is acquainted and interested in all the stock and poultry; he knows all the country around; he is acquainted with every bug, and worm, bird and animal, tree and flower, weed and cereal on the farm. He has a good appetite and good digestion, and his sleep is sweet and refreshing. He reads thoughtfully the great book of nature, whose leaves open before him day by day. He loves his father and mother and calls them such.

DEATH OF GEN. RUSK.

Wisconsin's Noted Citizen, Soldier and Statesman Is No More.

He Passes Away at His Home in Viroqua Somewhat Unexpectedly—A Short Sketch of His Notable Career.

A GREAT LOSS.

VIROQUA, Wis., Nov. 23.—Ex-Gov. Jeremiah Rusk died at 8 a. m. Tuesday. He had been ill for two months, suffering from inflammation of the prostate gland. Dr. John Hamilton, of Chicago, performed an operation on Mr. Rusk about ten days ago which for a time promised to be successful. The ex-governor was possessed of a powerful constitution and rallied after the operation to such an extent that the friends and even the physicians hoped for ultimate recovery. As late as Monday night callers at the residence were told that the patient was improving and favorable reports were sent throughout the country. Mr. Rusk was exceedingly weak, however, from the effects of morphine and almost constant pain, and when he suffered a relapse during the night it was known that the end must soon come.

HON. JEREMIAH M. RUSK.

Ex-Gov. Rusk was one of the most popular men in Wisconsin and the news of his death has been received with the utmost sorrow throughout the state.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 22.—Ex-President Harrison received the news of Gen. Rusk's death and was much affected. He expressed the deepest sorrow at the taking off of the venerable member of his late official family. Gen. Harrison at once sent Mrs. Rusk a telegram of condolence and stated that he would probably, with ex-Attorney General Miller, attend the funeral of the ex-secretary.

Jeremiah McLain Rusk was born in Morgan county, O., June 17, 1830; and his youth was that of a farmer boy acquiring a common school education. In 1853 he located lands in the then new and distant region of Vernon county, Wis., where he has since resided. He entered the ranks of the Wisconsin volunteers in 1862, and was major and lieutenant colonel of the Twenty-fifth Wisconsin, which was a part of Gen. Sherman's command from the siege of Vicksburg till the close of the war, and in 1866 he received from the president the brevet of brigadier general for gallant and meritorious services.

In 1868 he was elected controller of Wisconsin, and continued in that office two terms; and in 1870 he was elected to congress, where he remained an active and useful member three terms, in one of which he was chairman of the house committee on pensions. He declined the tender of appointments from President Garfield, and in 1882 was elected governor of Wisconsin and reelected in 1884 and 1886. In the discharge of his duties as governor, and particularly in the trying days of riots at Milwaukee, he won the commendation of the country, and with the zealous support of the delegation from his own state he was prominent as a candidate for the presidential nomination at the republican national convention of 1888 in Chicago.

President Harrison, who was then nominated, gratefully remembered Gov. Rusk by inviting him to a seat in the cabinet as secretary of the department of agriculture; and this department, which had just been raised to a cabinet dignity, found in him for four years an efficient head in organizing and developing its resources and possibilities of usefulness to agricultural interests. One feature of his work in this direction was to introduce the system of microscopical examination of meats, whereby the foreign market for the American product was enlarged. The governor retired from office with the Harrison administration, and there was good promise that his public career was not closed.

HUNDREDS SLAIN.

The Earthquake in Persia Finds at Least 1,000 Victims.

LONDON, Nov. 23.—A special dispatch to the Times from Meshed brings further details of the earthquake that occurred Friday at Kuchan, in the northern part of the province of Khorassan. The town was completely destroyed and the loss of life was immense. Great crevasses were opened in the earth through which water flowed in torrents, causing the Atrek river to overflow its banks. The fertile region around the city was inundated and the large gardens and extensive vineyards were swept out of existence. The people of Kuchan had no chance to save anything. The shock was so severe that the largest houses in the town, including the residence of the governor, were almost instantly toppled over, crushing hundreds of people to death. The town had a population of between 20,000 and 25,000 persons, and it is thought that at least 1,000 perished. Many persons were carried away by the flood that flowed down the valley.

It is not known yet what damage was done in the valley, but it is feared that many of the villages below Kuchan have been destroyed. A short time after the disturbance the entire water supply of the town disappeared.

MOTHER'S THANKSGIVING

SUCH a quaint little Mother, in a gown of silver gray. Her snowy hair smooth-parted, in the dear old-fashioned way. And on her head a lint-white cap, of softest, flimsiest lace. That made a picture-frame about her sweet and placid face.

Such a brave little Mother! So many a year had fled Since her husband, leal and loving, had been numbered with the dead. So many, many summers had she borne a lonely heart That her fair age and his bright youth were half a life apart.

Such a gentle little Mother! Ah! the boys remember now. Sorrowfully, every shadow on that tender, tranquil brow. They remember how she taught them, how she kissed them each at night, And they felt no need of angels keeping watch till morning light.

Such a trustful little Mother! There were dark days now and then. Though the dear lads never dreamed it until they were bearded men: She would go away alone, kneeling in her chamber dim. And would tell the Lord her troubles, casting all her care on Him.

Such a happy little Mother! With a laugh like bells a-chime. Ever swift to see the bright side, ready with a quip and rhyme. Oh, so quick with love's own pity! oh, so earnest 'neath the jest! Ever lavishing her kindness, giving ever of her best.

Such a winsome little Mother! Why the village children came Trooping merrily about her; she knew every one by name: Baby faces smiled to greet hers, by some subtle impulse stirred, As if fledglings knew the brooding of the tender mother bird.

Such a true little Mother! Never dallying with wrong: Honest to the very heart's core; bearing burdens late and long: Paying every debt with interest; filling every day with work. With a deep disdain for any who the day's demand would shirk.

Such a blessed little Mother! Through their tears her sons to-day Thank the God she served and honored that she sleeping passed away: Lifted to the home in Heaven, to the comrade gone before. Just as earth's Thanksgiving greetings floated through the open door.

—Margaret K. Sangster, in Harper's Bazar.

TWO THANKSGIVINGS

[Original.]

"ON'T you go and do no such thing, Judson Wilmot; you just stay where you be."

"Well, I just won't. I am tired and sick of it; the same thing year after year; drudge, drudge, and no end to it when there ain't a bit of use of it; I tell you, Ike Staples, such a life ain't worth living, and I won't stand it any longer."

"Why, Jud Wilmot, how kin you talk that air way? Such a life ain't with living; land sakes! what on airth do you want? Here you be with as good a hum as any feller kin ask fer; a good dad and mar and allers a plenty to eat and—say Jud what 'bout Mandy? Be you forgettin' her? You know your dad'll give you that west eighty-acre piece when you and Mandy gits hitched and by 'n by you'll hev the hull farm; why Jud, you orter be the contentedest feller in Injany."

"Yes, Ike, that's all very fine, but just the same I want to see some of the world before I settle down; it's grub, grub, all the time; here it is Thanksgiving to-morrow, but I don't feel very thankful I can tell you; I can see nothing ahead of me but feeding hogs all winter, plowing in the spring, harvesting and haying in the summer, shucking corn in the fall, and then do it all over again the next year. No, Ike, I have made up my mind to go and have one whirl anyway, and the folks hadn't ought to object; but they will. I expect there'll be a fuss, but I am going, and right away, too, after Thanksgiving."

Ike Staples continued his advice and backed it up by a relation of an experience of his own, winding it up by saying how glad he was to get back home.

Judson Wilmot glanced at the crossroads storekeeper, for Mottville was nothing but a crossroads, with a pitying look, and evidently thought there was a vast difference in the chances of himself and the little old weakened fellow seated in front of him on a cracker barrel. He said nothing, however, except to ask for the mail, and picking up a package of raisins he had purchased turned to leave. As the postmaster handed him a farm journal and a New York paper, he said, with real earnestness, while yet he chuckled:

"Well, Jud, I 'spose you'll go, so I'll bid you good-by; but you had better eat a big Thanksgiving dinner to-morrow, for you'll not git any sich cookin' as your mar's 'till you git home again."

The Wilmot farm was located about four miles from the post office. 'Twas perhaps the most prosperous place in the country, and the Wilmot family stood high in the esteem of everyone. The family consisted of Father Wilmot, called "squire" by his neighbors, the mother, a kindly old lady whose whole happiness was bound up in her only son Judson, and her only daughter Mattie, a bright girl of eighteen, at home now from school, to eat Thanksgiving dinner with the family.

Judson was just twenty-one years old on Thanksgiving day, and this fact and one other had caused Mother Wilmot to try and outdo all previous efforts at making the event a particularly festive one. Judson had been given every advantage for obtaining an education, fort was lot perceived. His sister Mattie was the first to remark it. "I wonder is it the weight of years pressing upon Judson that makes him so serious—or is it—say, Mandy, do you know what it is?" said the lively sister.

Mandy blushed a deeper red than ever, and Judson, with an ill-concealed frown, said: "Never you mind about my looks, Mat. I have trouble enough on my mind."

Everyone looked their surprise at Judson's remark, and all stared at him for a moment in blank wonder. Then Father Wilmot broke out into a hearty laugh.

"Trouble!" he exclaimed. "Trouble on your mind! Well, my son, if you are worrying about how you and Mandy are to get a living you can feel as happy as you like, for I have had the papers all fixed to give you that west eighty acres, and the money to build a good house is already in the bank for you," and the good old farmer chuckled as he passed Mrs. Morton a plate heaped with turkey dressing and sweet potato. Mother Wilmot looked at her son, as she paused with the coffee pot in her hand, to see his sober face wreath itself in smiles. To her surprise it grew gloomier than before, and at a remark from Mattie it flushed with anger, and a hot retort broke from his lips.

"THE QUICKER YOU GO THE BETTER; GO!"

but he was by no means studious, and with the acquirement of such learning as he could acquire from the district school his parents were compelled to be satisfied. It had thus become a settled matter that Judson should relieve his father of the burden of the care of the farm. This he had now done for three or four years, and no one of the household had any suspicion that the young man was not entirely satisfied with his quiet, uneventful life. He had, however, for a year been secretly chafing at the humdrum existence, as his conversation with Ike Staples plainly indicated.

Besides the fact that the coming Thanksgiving was the date of Judson's attaining his majority, the other reason alluded to for making the event especially festive was in connection with Mandy Morton, the daughter of a well-to-do neighboring farmer. Mandy and Judson had known each other from infancy, and with the exception of seasons when little quarrels had come between them they had always been considered lovers. They had been keeping "steady company" now for a year or two, and it was generally expected by the families on both sides that a formal engagement would be made and announced on Thanksgiving day, and the Morton family were therefore to be the honored guests of the occasion.

The day before Thanksgiving had been particularly unpleasant for Judson Wilmot. Everything seemed to go wrong, and the desire to cut away from it all reached a climax; he determined he would go at any cost of feeling, either to parents or others. At home in the evening he was sober and quiet; his mother, who naturally noticed it, attributed his manner to a far different reason than the truth. He went to the store for the mail and it was there he relieved himself by his talk with Ike Staples. As he rode home he worked himself into a high state of irritability trying to frame the excuses he should make for going, as he owned to himself he had no good reason for doing so.

With one exception it was a happy lot of people who sat down to dinner that Thanksgiving day. Mrs. Wilmot had indeed surpassed herself, and there was a feast in waiting to satisfy the appetite of a gourmand. Mother Wilmot looked her happiness, and it was with no little feeling of pride that Father Wilmot took up the big carving knife and attacked the two great turkeys before him. Mandy was blushing in her loveliness, and for all the world could not help appearing a trifle conscious. Sister Mattie had a roguish twinkle in her eyes and her glances, cast from Mandy to Judson and back again, added in no small measure to the former's restlessness. Papa and Mamma Morton did their best to seem at ease, but it was plain that they were also in a semi-quiver of happiness.

Judson alone was moody and silent. He had all day done his best to appear cheerful and pleasant, and in the general atmosphere of joy his strained

"Well, I declare, I would go and have my face changed if I were you, Jud," was Mattie's laughing speech; "a farm, a new home and twenty-one years of age all at once ought to be enough, even without the prospect of a pretty wife."

"I shall be obliged to you, Mattie, if you will mind your own business," said Judson, crossly, and then continued, addressing his father: "Father, I am much obliged to you, but I shall have to wait awhile before I take your offer; I want to go away and see something of the world before I settle down. I am tired of farming; let things rest as they are until I come back."

This was like a clap of thunder in a clear sky. "What does this mean, sir?" exclaimed the farmer; "do you intend to insult our guests who were asked here to dine for a special reason to-day, to say nothing of your mother and myself? What does it mean, sir?" and the squire dropped his knife and fork and looked fiercely at his son.

"Father," said Judson, "mother, all of you, I beg for pardon for this untimely announcement. I had no idea of making a scene at our Thanksgiving dinner, but, sir," and here Judson rose to his feet and addressed his father: "I can only say, sir, that I have resolved to go away for a time, and matters must remain as they are for the present; I feel that I must go; I am far from contented now."

"You feel that you must go, do you? Then go, sir. I feel that you have outraged and disgraced us in the eyes of our friends, and the quicker you go the better. Go!" and the wrathful father pointed straight to the outer door.

"Father, don't, don't speak like that!" cried the mother, her voice choking with tears; but Judson had sprung away from the table and left the room. He was heard upstairs for a moment, and throwing open the dining-room door said: "Mandy, may I speak to you for a moment?"

Then up rose Mr. Morton, and, turning to Judson, said, with much dignity: "Sir, it is my wish that my daughter has nothing whatever to say to you now or ever; Mandy, remain in your seat."

Judson's mother would not let him go without a word, and she followed him into the hall. She was too late, however, for the front door closed with a bang, and Judson Wilmot had gone out from under his father's roof in anger and perhaps forever. The almost untouched Thanksgiving dinner was left to spoil, for none had any heart to eat. Mattie alone appeared to mind this.

"A grand dinner all spoiled for the whim of a man," she cried, as she, the last one, left the table.

For Judson Wilmot, seeing the world was not an exceptional experience and yet it was not a common one. He had something over one hundred dollars of his own money and this he took with him to the city. He realized now that he had his own fortune to make, and he wasted no time in foolishness. Being a farmer he was naturally interested in the wheat market, and chance threw him in the way of an option broker. He invested a portion of his capital and came out a winner. Again he ventured and again won. Fortune appeared to smile upon him and in less than two months he had accumulated over ten thousand dollars. He wrote a line to Ike Staples to this effect, for though he would not write home he wanted his folks to know that he was independent of them all. Of course this was all duly reported with such additions as Ike's friendly imagination could invent. Matters were very lively in Mottville, too, just at this time. For months there had been a fair prospect of a railroad going through the section, and early in the spring it was rushed through and a real town sprang up. Ike Staples was made rich by the rise of property and the sale of goods and was a prominent man in the young city. Blocks of buildings had been erected and business was thriving generally. Again Ike heard from Judson; this time that he had ventured his money in a theatrical company and that there was no chance for anything but a big fortune for him. Thus the people of Mottville became accustomed to the idea that Jud Wilmot was a very rich man and that when he came back home it would be to start a bank in the city that had grown up in his absence.

The summer flew by and November once more came around. A few days before Thanksgiving a group of idlers at the new depot saw a stylish young fellow alight from an afternoon train and start on foot toward the Wilmot homestead. Ike Staples was at a little distance when the stranger passed, but he recognized him.

"Say, that there young feller is Judson Wilmot," said he. "You bet he has struck it rich and we will have a new bank for sure. Did you notice them there clothes?"

It was Judson Wilmot, sure enough. He went directly home and had a quiet talk with his father, asking pardon for his waywardness a year before. His mother received him of course with open arms and Mattie, who was now home from school for good, could not help welcoming her spruce-looking brother. Judson also hastened to make peace with Mandy and her parents. All was forgiven and forgotten, and Mother Wilmot began her preparation for another Thanksgiving dinner, happy in the belief that the expectations of the year before would now be carried out. The Mortons were, of course, invited, and this time there was no lack of hilarity.

"Come now, Jud," said his father, "you have been home several days and yet you haven't told us any of your experiences in seeing the world; let's hear about 'em."

"Yes, Jud, let's hear what you are going to do," said Mr. Morton; "they say down to Mottville that you intend to start a bank; is that a fact?"

"Well, Mr. Morton, about starting the bank I can answer that very promptly; I am not going to do so; as to what I am going to do, that remains to be seen. Father," and here Judson turned squarely to the farmer, "a year ago to-day I had the big head and thought I knew it all; I wanted to see the world. Well I have seen all I want of it; I don't want to tell you my experiences, for you might lose another of mother's good dinners for laughing at me. I want to say this: I have never told a soul that I had made money, and all that has been said has come from Ike Staples, who imagined it was so. I have told him my experiences while away and the whole town will know them by now. Father, all I have in the world to show for my year's absence and my one thousand dollars is this suit of clothes and if you will let me have that west eighty acres I take these duds off and go to work like a man."

The usual group were in Ike Staples' store on that same Thanksgiving afternoon.

"Well, Ike, how about the new bank?" asked one.

"There ain't a-going to be nary new bank," responded Ike. "I sized young Wilmot up wrong; he ain't got no money; he did make a strike, but arter that he jist played 'angel,' as they call it, for some theater folks, and he went broke. He told me hisself that he had to walk near all the way home and that all he had wuz that slick suit of clothes, and that he wuz a-going to work that west eighty of the squire's, and I bet, boys, he wuz as glad to git hum as I wuz when my old man offered me a dollar a day and board; but Jud is a good feller, and he and Mandy air going to get spliced between now and Christmas."

Improved. They must have been engaged at least an hour, inasmuch as she seemed to have grown weary of asking him if he would love her always.

She was silent for ten seconds, while she thought to devise some other inquiry to propound.

Suddenly her face brightened.

"Darling," she cooed, "do you take me for better or for worse?"

He smiled patronizingly.

"Dearest—"

He pressed her hand lovingly.

"—it must be for better always in case of a lady or you don't sell the pictures."

For a time she was puzzled by his reply, but she eventually reflected that he was a photographer, and it was all plain to her.—Detroit Tribune.

TO THE TOMB.

Gen. Rusk's Remains Are Interred at Viroqua, Wis.

VIROQUA, Wis., Nov. 27.—A great gathering of people bared their heads to a brisk cold wind that blew steadily from the west while the last earthly tribute was paid to Jeremiah M. Rusk, ex-governor, ex-congressman and late secretary of agriculture in President Harrison's cabinet. The ex-president, who was very fond of Gen. Rusk, journeyed all the way from Indianapolis to this little village in northwestern Wisconsin, 300 miles northwest of Milwaukee, and followed the remains to their last resting place, walking with the family as one of the chief mourners.

Three heavy special trains arrived during the day, the first from La Crosse at noon. The second from Madison brought Gov. Peck, the most of the state officers, judges of the supreme court and a number of prominent people of Madison, where Gen. Rusk spent six years as governor, and where he was a familiar figure, both before and since.

The third and largest special came from Chicago and Milwaukee, bringing several hundred notable people, including ex-President Harrison, ex-Attorney General Miller, Capt. Meredith, the ex-public printer; Edwin Willets, assistant secretary of agriculture, and ex-Senator Philletus Sawyer and John C. Spooner, ex-Gov. W. D. Hoard, Gen. Lucius Fairchild, Henry C. Payne and a large delegation of the Loyal Legion and masonic fraternities.

After the private services at the residence Thursday afternoon, the remains were conveyed to the little village church. They rested in a handsome but plain cedar casket, draped with a silk flag and fairly buried under floral emblems. At the church a delegation from Alexander Lowrie post, Grand Army of the Republic, all associates of the dead soldier, stood guard while the remains were lying in state all night and during the forenoon until the time of the burial service at 3 o'clock. A continuous stream of the dead man's friends viewed the remains. The little town showed every evidence of the great loss its people had sustained in Gen. Rusk's death. Flags were at half-mast on the public buildings and factories, and nearly all the stores were draped in mourning. Crepe and black and white bunting fluttered on all sides. Business was entirely suspended and citizens hospitably offered entertainment to the thousands of strangers who had come to join with them in the last honors.

Immediately upon the arrival of the presidential special Mr. Harrison and party were driven to the Rusk home, where they personally offered condolence to the members of the stricken household. Then they repaired to the church, occupying the seats reserved for the family and the distinguished strangers.

The public services were of an extempore character and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Nazum, of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Prof. D. Butler, a warm personal friend of Gen. Rusk. Prof. Butler was for many years with the Wisconsin university and was previously a Congregational minister. He is 80 years of age, and made a feeling and beautiful address, a last sad tribute to his lifelong friend. A choir rendered a number of favorite selections and there were one or two solos. The religious services were followed by the reading of the beautiful burial service of the Masonic Blue lodge by E. H. Benzenberg, commander of Wisconsin consistory.

The honorary pall-bearers were ex-Attorney General Miller, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Edwin Willets, ex-Senators Angus Cameron, Philletus Sawyer and John C. Spooner, ex-Governors Hoard and Fairchild, Justice John B. Cassoday, Gen. Frederick Winkler and Henry C. Payne.

The acting pall-bearers, all members of the Twenty-fifth Wisconsin, Gen. Rusk's old regiment, were: Maj. W. H. Joslin, Surgeon W. A. Gott, M. B. Gage, Capt. C. A. Hunt, Capt. R. J. Whittleton, Capt. J. R. Casson, Capt. J. B. McCoy, E. I. Kidd, J. W. Degraff and J. G. Burnell.

Immediately following the impressive service the funeral procession formed. It was headed by an escort of Knights Templar from the Robert McCoy commandery, Madison, of which the general was a member. Then came the honorary pall-bearers. The active pall-bearers came next, then the funeral car with four black horses, and immediately following the carriages containing the family and the carriages occupied by ex-President Harrison and Col. Henry Casson, the governor's private secretary. Then Gov. Peck and staff, the masonic bodies, the military order of the Loyal Legion, the Grand Army of the Republic, the odd fellows, and the neighbors and visiting friends. The procession was over a mile long.

At the grave the masonic service was read by officers of Labelle lodge, No. 84, the home lodge of which the general was a member. Then a military salute was fired, and the last scene in the eventful life of Gen. Rusk was enacted.

Great Cotton Mill in Austria Burned. VIENNA, Nov. 27.—The great cotton mill at Pottendorf, 20 miles south of this city, was burned Thursday. The mill was the largest of its kind in Austria and gave employment to 1,000 operatives.

Storing apples in barrels lined with newspapers is an experiment made by a Michigan farmer. He opened barrels that had been packed for a long time and found that in those unlined more or less of the fruit was decayed, while in the paper-lined barrels every apple was sound and in fine condition.

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Runciman and little son, Lyle, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Conklin Saturday and Sunday.
Last Monday a maiden fair, with sun kissed hair, came tripping down the street, the air was keen, her age "steen," and readers, she was sweet. The sidewalk was sleet and she went off her feet, with a jolt that shook out her curls, and the words she used must be excused, for she's one of our very best girls.

The paid admissions to the world's fair were 21,477,112, representing as estimated only about 4,000,000 people. The net profits to the stockholders was something like $1,000,000, but the money subscribed by Chicago people was of course not refunded. The total expenses of the fair were over $30,500,000.

One of our exchanged remarks: "A three-year-old girl was taught to close her evening prayer, during the temporary absence of her father, and 'please watch over my papa.' It sounded very sweet but the mother's amazement may be imagined when she added 'and you better keep an eye on mama, too.'"

Upon the approach of winter the tramps who infest the country towns are becoming a source of terror. As it grows more and more difficult for them to get food without working for it their acts become more and more desperate. But the professional tramp will reach the very limit of desperation before he will go to work.

Mr. John Adam Kalmbach, an old pioneer of this township, died at his home in Sylvan Thursday, Nov. 23, 1893. Mr. Kalmbach was born in Germany in 1827, and was married in 1854. He leaves a wife and seven children, four boys and three girls. The funeral was held Sunday from the M. E. church, Francisco.

Rev. O. C. Bailey entertained the Chautauqua Circle on Monday evening with a very interesting account of his European trip. He took them across the ocean to Liverpool, London, Antwerp, Geneva, Lucerne, Rowen, Paris and down the Rhine. In spite of the inclement weather, a delightful evening was passed.

The state board of pharmacy has decided to make the qualifications of pharmacists still more stringent. Registered pharmacists must have three years' experience in a drug store where physicians prescriptions are compounded; assistant pharmacists must have two years' experience in such a store, though one month in a pharmacy college will count as two months in a store.

So soon as the stock of Columbian postage stamps is exhausted the country will welcome another extreme in the way of size. Instead of having a stamp as large as a campaign banner, let us have something artistic in the way of a small stamp that will not encroach on the space on the envelope reserved for the address. A postage stamp about a third as large as the Columbian stamp is large enough.

Girls, if you want to be fin de siecle, just twist your back hair into a high loop that will stand up nine inches above your head and surmount this with a shell dagger. Your hat or bonnet is put on in front of this so it does not interfere with your outdoor toilet. All the rest of the hair should be scrambled and fluffy, with a bang of soft curls slightly parted, on one side or dragged back from the forehead in a plain space.

It is a strange fact, but one said to be true, that every one of the week days is, for some nation, a Sunday or day of rest. Monday is the Greek Sunday; Tuesday is the day of rest among the Persians; Wednesday among the Assyrians; Thursday among the Egyptians; Friday is the Sabbath day with the Turks; and among the Jews Saturday is kept. Hence the people who use the word Sabbath as denoting the name of any particular day of the week are in error.—Ex.

There is one lady in the state who will probably never be seen at the cell door of a Latimer or an Arno with a bouquet. Mrs. Crough, editress and proprietress of the Brooklyn Exponent, writing of the murder of Carter Harrison says: "Insanity is becoming a cloak for many atrocious deeds. Is it not time that insanity of this kind be declared criminal and punished accordingly? Hanging might prove an effectual cure for this insanity, or at least make it less prevalent."

The girl that gives away to a desire to gad about the streets, cultivate the acquaintance of young men and act the simpering simpleton, is laying the foundation for a senseless after life. Ten to one when married she will develop into a slatternly gossip, if no greater misfortune befalls her. It is the girl of good sound sense, the girl who loves home and helps mother that wins the model man and becomes an ornament to womanhood. The girl who does this and devotes some of her spare time to reading, and strives for the graces of mental culture, commands the respect and esteem of everybody, while the street-gadder only wins the admiration of those whose admiration is not worth having.—Ex.

The railroad magnates who are morally responsible for the long series of deadly wrecks of trains bound to and from the world's fair should be placed in charge of guardians for weak-mindedness. Anyone with a grain of sense would have been able to foresee that six months' business could not safely be crowded into six weeks.

The air brakes on railroads are being built with a view to the use on trains of 100 cars. The plant on each train is being built so that it can be used in such a way as to bring the speed down from 60 to 30 miles per hour within five seconds. Great power has to be used, and every part of the apparatus has to be perfect to stand the strain.—Star.

Prof. Hicks says the man who begins early and prepares well for a disagreeable and hard winter will have no regret, but cause for rejoicing. By this Hicks says he does not intend to sound a sensational alarm. There is no cause to apprehend any results out of the course of nature, but nature's normal methods are often trying in the extreme, and justify all prudent provisions of man against her severity. The severity of winter will end the last of March, and a seasonable and early spring will follow.

The cigarette is to be banished from Georgia if the house of representatives has the power to enforce its will. A bid for bidding the sale of cigarettes in the state was passed by that body last week. As introduced the bill only made it unlawful for any person to sell cigarettes, but the committee on hygiene and sanitation, to which it was referred, emphasized the rigid moral sense of the house by amending it so as to include under the ban cigarette tobacco and cigarette paper. Then the house passed the bill by 101 to 45. It is interesting to note that this same body has been using every effort to encourage the cultivation of tobacco in the state.

Correspondents should be careful in writing names, above all else, says an exchange. If the n's, m's, u's, r's, s's, in fine, all little letters without loop or stem, are made alike, we can usually decipher anything but proper names. At least we attempt to do so. People in general have little conception of the number of possible names from one of five or six letters indistinctly written. For example, a B followed by a scrawl may become in the typesetter's hands, Barnes, Bornes, Barrus, Borrus, Bawns, Bowns, Burns, Burrus, Burras, Burner, Barner, Bonner, and so on for two or three hundred more variations. Whatever else you do, write proper names plainly.

In Texas they are debating whether farmers would not better live in villages as they do in Germany and Switzerland, driving out to their fields round about. This would relieve the monotony of farm life.

A style much affected by the younger members of congress, particularly those from the south, is to wear low-cut vests with expansive shirt fronts, Prince Alberts coats, broadbrimmed soft hats and smooth shaven faces.

The supreme court of Massachusetts has declared that a creditor has no right to invade his debtor's room, wake him up untimely and dun him for his due. A Springfield milkman who thought otherwise has thus ascertained that damages can be assessed against him for assault.

Miss ELLA KNOWLES, who was defeated for the attorney generalship of Montana by a small majority and was then appointed assistant by her successful competitor, recently secured in favor of her state, before the interior department in Washington, a decision involving about $200,000 worth of school lands in Montana.

COMMANDER MONTEIL, the French officer who is to make an expedition into Central Africa, has had a flat-bottom ferryboat constructed which has a capacity of fifteen tons and weighs only 2,000 pounds. The metal part of the vessel weighs 1,800 pounds, and its hull is made of plates of aluminum 4 feet long, 2 feet 4 inches wide and 0.13 of an inch thick.

Of the 9,585 men who enlisted in the United States army last year twenty-five per cent. were laborers. Other callings were represented as follows: School teachers, 62; students, 26; druggists, 39; photographers, 13; musicians, 214; lawyers, 7; printers, 95; bookkeepers, 52; typewriters, 2; engineers, 75; cooks, 108; machinists, 106; farmers, about 1,200; and no occupation, 86.

The financial burdens of government are said to be lighter in Alabama than they are in any other state in the union. The tax rate next year will be only five mills for state purposes; while the counties are prohibited by law from levying a tax of more than five mills, or at the rate of 50 cents on the hundred dollars. There is a special tax in some of the counties that makes the rate a little higher, but in no case is it over one and a quarter.

M. JULES HERMIT, the celebrated French aeronaut who succeeded in reaching the unprecedented height of ten miles above the earth, has made over 1,100 successful ascensions. The most remarkable, however, was the last one in many respects. At an altitude of ten miles he found an atmosphere sufficiently dense to support life continuously, which fact leads him to believe that there is an atmosphere surrounding the moon.

L. H. DEWEY, assistant botanist of the agricultural department, has started on a trip to the northwest to investigate the extent of the damage done to the crops of that part of the country during the present year by the Russian thistle. This, though one of the least known generally, is one of the most dreaded of all weeds, and it is said this year has inflicted a loss of over $4,000,000 on the farmers of the United States. Unless speedily checked it promises to spread all over the entire country.

It may not be known to the general reader, says a medical journal, that a rifleball deflected from its course immediately resumes its line of flight after rimming the object it is unable to pass directly through. That is to say, a ball turned from its course by a rib, passes under the skin until it reaches a point mathematically opposite to the point where it entered the soldier's body, and then passes out, retaining its exact line of flight, if enough of its initial velocity remains.

"COLUMBIA, the gem of the ocean," has a new meaning since the extraordinary performance of Uncle Sam's new warship. The rate of speed which she achieved in her trial trip, an average of thirty miles an hour part of the time, has never been equalled by any water craft. It would be a very high rate for a merchant vessel or an ocean passenger steamer, but for a huge man-of-war it was simply wonderful. It shows that our ship-building facilities and engineering skill are fully equal to those of any other country.

At a recent meeting of the Quill club in New York Charles Emery Smith, ex-United States minister to Russia and editor of the Philadelphia Press, said that a representative of a great European power in St. Petersburg remarked to him that he considered the three great coming nations to be China, Russia and the United States, which has the whole western hemisphere in its grasp. In extent of territory and population they are already the greatest. Great Britain's conglomerate races scattered over the globe do not count in this estimate.

ILL-STARRED HUMANS.

The Story Told by Three Sad Disasters.

A Railway Train Kills Three Girls at Xenia, O.—Fire Causes as Many Deaths in Tennessee—Two Men Swept Over Spokane Falls.

FATE OF THREE YOUNG LADIES.
XENIA, O., Nov. 24.—Three young ladies of this city, Misses Sallie and Sophia Kelso, daughters of S. M. Kelso, teller in the Xenia national bank, and Miss Leila McDill, daughter of Dr. David McDill, professor in the United Presbyterian seminary, were killed Wednesday afternoon by a westbound Pan Handle train at the edge of this city while on their way home from a visit to a sick girl.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 24.—Fire at Newberne, Dyer county, Tuesday night destroyed the business houses occupied by the Wilson Dry Goods company, J. H. Swindle, furniture; H. F. Williamson, undertaker; Wilson & Bradshaw, dry goods, and B. Cox, general merchant. The total loss is $40,000. Lee Bradshaw and Pat Moffatt, white, and Ed Gilbert, colored, lost their lives during the fire. Bradshaw ran into a house to get some money and papers from the safe, and just as he emerged from the building the walls fell on him. It is believed that there are other bodies under the ruins. Pat Hooper, Pettis Holland, E. M. Hall and George S. Preights were seriously hurt and some of them may die. The origin of the fire is not known.

SPOKANE FALLS, Wash., Nov. 24. James Kendrick and Patrick Quirk, employed by the city in excavating rock for the Post street bridge, just above the falls, met with a terrible death. They were working on a narrow ledge of rock 40 feet above the Spokane river, at this time a raging torrent, when Kendrick slipped and fell into the water, carrying Quirk with him. As soon as they struck the water the rapid current bore them quickly to the 30-foot falls and in a twinkling, before their horrified companions could make a move to aid them, they were carried into the "Devil's Caldron," a bottomless, seething, foaming pool at the base of the falls and from which no body has ever been recovered. Both were single men, Kendrick coming from Buffalo, N. Y., and Quirk from Springfield, Ill.

SAY THEY WILL WIN.

Strikers on the Lehigh Valley Road Confident of Success.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 24.—At 12:30 a. m. the local board of strikers issued the following bulletin:

"Every operator between Sayre and Buffalo, except five agents who are under bond and one non-union man at Rochester, all other men, are out on the whole territory covered by this board.

"Nonunion men, who have been imported to take strikers' places, have all been won over to our side and gone out.

"The whole territory is completely tied up. Not a wheel is being turned at this hour. The Rochester division is now completely tied up. The conductors went out at 11 p. m."

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Many of the new men put to work by the Lehigh Valley road are from the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road. It is stated, and some of the new men confirm the story, that the exodus from the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy has been in the nature of crews rather than individuals. In many instances conductors, engineers, firemen and three brakemen, making up a regular freight crew on the big western road, started for Buffalo in a party and made application to be put to work on a train on the Lehigh.

One of the new men made the following statement to a reporter before the train pulled out:

"Most of us are men who went out on the great Chicago, Burlington & Quincy strike. Men from the eastern roads, who claim to be brotherhood men, and some of them from the Lehigh, came west and took our places. The company gave them the preference over such of us as they took back. When the strike was finally settled the new men were given all the regular runs and we had to go on the rounds, first in, first out. The company had about twice as many men as they could use when times were good. Things were very dull this fall, and we were lucky if we got in four days a month. We could not make a living. Just as soon as I heard of the strike I started for Buffalo. I guess that is the same story that all of our Chicago, Burlington & Quincy boys could tell you."

It is stated that a party of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy men who arrived in the city were met at the hotel by a committee from the strikers and offered $500 if they would return home. The reply was: "We have come here to get work and we will not go home. We are going to make a living and if it is 'scabbing' it's the most of it."

The penalty is a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment of not more than one year or both.

THURSTON HITS BACK.

The Hawaiian Minister's Reply to Commissioner Blount.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—Minister Thurston, the representative of the Hawaiian provisional government, is out in a statement to the public in reply to Mr. Blount's report. On the main question of fact as to the landing of the American naval forces before or after the revolution Thurston flatly contradicts Blount, and declares that the revolution had been an accomplished fact for two days before the American marines landed. He acquits Minister Stevens of any foreknowledge of the revolution, and he generally denounces the Blount assertions of a conspiracy as false. He says:

"I desire to call attention to Mr. Blount's method of constructing his report. Although he in several places states that I was the leader of the revolutionary movement, he has never asked me a question concerning the same nor given me opportunity to make any statement, although I have at all times been ready and willing to do so. The same is true of a large number of other men who took a leading part in the movement of January.

"In the second place, his evidence consists exclusively of prepared affidavits, or of answers to leading questions put by himself at private interviews, no one being present but the stenographer. In no instance has there been any cross-examination of witnesses, opportunity to give contradiction or explain evidence given, or present as evidence.

"First, Mr. Blount charges that the American troops were landed under a prearranged agreement with the committee of safety that they should so lend assistance in the overthrow of the queen. In reply thereto I hereby state at no time did Mr. Stevens or Capt. Wilkie assure me, or the committee, or any sub-committee thereof that the United States troops would assist in overthrowing the queen or establishing a provisional government, and, as a matter of fact, they did not so assist. The troops were landed to protect American citizens and property in the event of the impending and inevitable conflict between the queen and the citizens, and not to cooperate with the committee in carrying out its plans. In fact the troops did not cooperate with the committee, and the committee had no more knowledge than did the queen's government where the troops were going nor what they were going to do.

"Second, Mr. Blount charges that the queen had ample military force with which to have met the committee, and that but for the support of the United States representatives and the troops the establishment of the provisional government would have been impossible.

"In reply thereto I hereby state that although the presence of the American troops had a quieting effect on the rough element in the city and may have prevented some bloodshed the troops were not essential to and did not assist in the overthrow of the queen. The result of the movement would have been eventually the same if there had not been a marine within a thousand miles of Honolulu.

"At 2 the afternoon of Monday, the 16th, a mass meeting of 3,000 unarmed men was held within a block of the palace. The meeting was addressed by a number of speakers, all denouncing the queen. The meeting, with tremendous enthusiasm, adopted resolutions declaring the queen to be in revolution, and authorizing the committee to proceed to do whatever was necessary.

"Never in the history of Hawaii has there been such a tense condition of mind or a more imminent expectation of bloodshed and conflict than there was after the adjournment of these two radically opposed meetings. Mr. Blount's statement that the community was at peace and quiet was grossly inaccurate. It was at this juncture, two hours after the adjournment of the above meetings, that Capt. Wilkie and Mr. Stevens, acting upon their own responsibility and discretion and irrespective of the request or actions of the committee, landed the troops, which were distributed in three parts of the city instead of being massed at one point, as stated by Mr. Blount. The reason that the queen's government took no action against the committee or its supporters was that they were overwhelmed by the unanimous display of indignation and determination shown by the citizens and were the king and his supporters were cowed under precisely similar circumstances by the same citizens in June, 1897."

Mr. Thurston then at great length presents facts and arguments to prove that the queen and her supporters were demoralized and devoid of leadership, and that the committee and their supporters were united, had ample force to execute their purpose and proceeded with deliberation and confidence to do so. He continues:

"It is unnecessary for me to here restate the details of the bitter constitutional conflict which had been carried on between the queen and the legislature during the seven months prior to January last, nor to speak of the intense indignation existing among all classes of citizens by reason of the open and successful alliance of the queen with the opium and the lottery rings. The political liberties of the people were trampled upon and their moral sense shocked. It simply needed the added provocation of the arbitrary attempt to abrogate the constitution and dispossess every white man in the country to that was irresistible."

"In reply to the sneer that the persons taking part in the movement were aliens, I would say that every man of them was by the laws of the country a legal voter, whose right to franchise was by the proposed constitution to be abrogated; a large proportion of them were born in the country and almost all had lived there for years, owned property there and had made it their home. They were the men who had built up the country commercially, agriculturally, financially and politically, and created the leading citizens of the country and the progressive communities of the United States, with interests as thoroughly identified with the interests of Hawaii as are the interests of native and foreign-born citizens in similar communities in this country identified with it."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Set the Fire Himself.

George Wristley, 15 years old, was locked up at Flushing for housebreaking. He made a desperate effort to escape by setting fire to the building near the door, and by the time a stream of water was thrown on the fire he was smothered. His lifeless body was taken out from a corner with his head wrapped in a quilt. He had evidently emptied a straw tick near the door and set it on fire, expecting to burn a hole through to liberty.

For Safety on Railroads.

Railroad Commissioner Billings addressed a circular to the managers and superintendents of all railroads operating in Michigan on the subject of heating and lighting passenger coaches. He urges the equipment of coaches, baggage, express and mail cars with fire extinguishers adapted to hand use, and sounds a warning against the use of oil which will not stand a test of 300 degrees. All fuel heaters must be abandoned forthwith.

Lumber Burned.

A furious fire, and one that in loss of property has seldom had its parallel in the North woods, broke out at Keno, Newaygo county, and was not extinguished until $200,000 worth of lumber, the property of William Peters, of Toledo, had been destroyed. There was only $47,000 of insurance. The fire is thought to have been of incendiary origin.

TWO DIE BY FIRE.

Loss of Life Accompanies a Million Dollar Blaze at Columbus, O.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 27.—About 1 o'clock Friday evening the orchestra was playing the opening overture at the Henrietta theater for the opening of a play by Felix Morris' company the manager announced there was a fire in the rear and requested the audience to quietly retire. All passed out in order. The fire originated in the auditorium and uncompleted portion of the structure and communicated to the theater proper. It soon became evident that the new Chittenden hotel, which was a portion of the same structure connected by a bridge, would also burn. Within two hours the whole of the quarter block had been burned over, entailing a loss estimated at more than $1,000,000.

The guests of the Chittenden hotel had ample time to escape, but few of them saved any property. Steadily the flames worked away at the time hotel, the fire department being apparently helpless. In an hour after the fire broke out in the Henrietta the hotel was fast falling in ruins.

Just north of the hotel on the High street front stood the Park theater, Gray and Stephens, with their trained dogs and ponies, were giving an exhibition there. The curtain was suddenly rung down and the audience was informed that the hotel adjoining was on fire. So far was the audience from being panic-stricken that they refused to go out and demands were made that the performance proceed. They finally went out slowly. A half hour later this theater, which was a frame building and very combustible, was in ruins. Here also the company lost its property but saved the animals.

The loss on the Henrietta theater and auditorium is $600,000, that on the Chittenden hotel, including furnishings and property contained, $400,000, and the Park theater $10,000. There were also in the buildings the Ohio savings bank, the Star shoe store, Rice's drug store and Goodman's clothing store. The losses on these will aggregate $800,000. There was insurance on all the buildings and property burned, the exact amount of which could not be secured in the confusion.

A man who was recognized as Andrew Armstrong, a stage hand and who worked above the scenery, appeared at a fourth-story window of the theater and cried for help. He was told not to jump and he would be saved. He disappeared from the window and was not seen again. The walls of the theater fell in soon after.

Harvey Thompson, a janitor engaged about the Henrietta theater, was killed. He was trying to lay a hose to fight the fire inside the building when he was cut off by the flames and perished.

The fire takes from Columbus her best theater, her best hotel and a number of flourishing business enterprises. The ticket office of the Columbus, Hocking Valley & Toledo Railway company was burned out, with a comparatively small loss.

The fire destroyed the whole square bounded by High, Spring and Front streets and the first alley north of Spring street. It is not known how the fire originated, but it was probably from a defective flue in the theater.

A JURY SECURED.

CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—With the adjournment of court Friday afternoon the first act in the drama of the second trial of Daniel Coughlin, charged with complicity in the murder of Dr. Patrick H. The securing of the jury occupied just three weeks, and during that time 343 veniremen were examined. Of these 372 were challenged for cause by the state and 226 by the defense. Nine were excused by agreement. The state used seventeen preemptory challenges and the defense nineteen. After the jury had been sworn in court adjourned until Monday, when the hearing of testimony will be begun. In this line both sides promise something sensational, but neither will disclose the nature of its evidence.

Getting Rid of Rats.

An Ohio farmer, writing to the American Agriculturist, says: On the barn floor I placed a 36 gallon kettle filled half full of rye. A plank 6 feet long led from the floor to the top of the kettle. The rye was left in the kettle for about a fortnight, until the rats had become thoroughly familiar with the kettle and were making it the headquarters for their nightly revels with seeming confidence that no harm was intended, when, very treacherously, one evening water was substituted for the grain, add a half-inch of chaff from the barn floor concealed the water. The result was that 21 drowned rats were forked out the first morning and 63 within a week, and after that no rats were seen for a year.

Half a pint of very hot water with a squeeze of lemon or lime in it before breakfast is also good. Both remedies are well worth trying.—Liverpool Mercury.
