A Beautiful Old Age.

Such was the thought conveyed to the minds of those who had the pleasure of being present at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Crowell Tuesday evening, Feb. 13, 1894, to give honor to the eightieth birthday of "Grandma Crowell."

It was a surprise, as one could have readily seen had they beheld the astonished look on the dear face, as, without a moment's warning, about fifty of her friends crowded around her with words of congratulations and pleasure at meeting her at the age of four score years.

The evening was spent in pleasant intercourse, with singing, and a tempting supper was passed to which all did justice, Rev. O. C. Bailey, in touching words, spoke of the love and esteem in which in behalf of those present presented her reading the following poem in honor of the occasion, written by Mr. Curran White: When age, old age comes creeping on, And we are young no mor

We'll not repine at what we've done Nor grieve that youth is o'er; But cheerfully as formally Be innocently gay,
And since we're here, with friends so dear,

We'll make the most we can of lie, Nor render it a curse; But take it as you would a wife For better or for worse.

We'll drive dull cares away.

Life at the best is but a jest, A pleasant summer's day, And since we're here with friends so dear, We'll drive dull care away.

The only circumstance in life, That I could ever find, To soften, cure and temper mirth,

A sweet content of mind.
It's of great store, we have much more

Than e're we can convey,
And since we're here with friends so dear,
We'll drive dull cares away.

After which the song, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," was sang, and as the hours began to grow old the guests departed leaving Gran and Crowell with

Rev. Walter Elliott.

The religious meetings, conducted by Rev. Walter Elliott of New York, closed last Friday evening before the largest audience that ever filled the Opera House The attendance at the meetings has been extraordinary and the interest aroused has been phenominal.

The discourses have been on subjects of the highest importance to the human mind, and the Reverand gentleman's treatment of them has been masterly. Father Elliott is a speaker of rare originality, intensely vigorous and carnest and genuinely eloquent.

It is the simple truth to say that he offended no one, as constantly increasing crowds testified. He desired to give non-Catholics correct and authentic information on subjects generally misunderstood by those outside the Catholic church.

The question box, which was a most interesting feature of the exercises, was liberally patronized, and the answers were promptly, candidly and satisfactorily given. Devotional hymns of a soothing and elevated character were beautifully sung by the choir of St. Mary's church, and were greatly enjoyed every night by large audiences. Much good has certainly been accomplished and kindlier relations established among all classes.

Father Elliott is now in Pinckney ecturing nightly to large audiences of ielighted people.

The citizens of our town will have the pleasure of hearing him again on Sunday. Feb. 25, 1894, when he will preach at high mass in St. Mary's church.

The Column Commanded by Col. Bonnier Destroyed Near Tumbuctoo-About 300 Reported to Have Seen Kitled or Captured.

SLAUGHTER OF FRENCH SOLDTERS. Paris, Feb. 12 - Premier Casimir-

Perier has admitted that the report that a French column had been attacked and destroyed by natives near Timbuctoo was correct. Many officers and soldiers were slangblered. The dispatch from the governor of the Sondan states that the information comes from Capt. Philippe, the French commander at Timbucton. The following details of the disaster are given out by the French governments

The Tuarges, Capt. Philippe reports, were armed with lances and knives, which they used with terrible effect against the French native troops. The Tuarges made their first attack upon the leading portion of the French colmmn, which seems to have been divided into two divisions.

The attack of the Tuarges was so desperate and well sustained that the first division was, apparently, cut-to pieces. The news of the disaster was brought to the second portion of the column by Capt. Nugette, a French officer, who, badly wounded in the head, managed to escape from the crowds of natives which assailed the advance guard. The second division was encamped a few miles to the rear of the advance guard, which was surprised during the darkness of early morning. The officer in com-ADMIRAL DE GAME gave forty-eight mand of the rear guard immediately ordered his force under arms, abandoned his encampments and commenced to retreat upon Timbuctoo. leaving the unfortunate vanguard, commanded by Col. Bonnier, to its fate. Reports are conflicting as to the number killed, but the official statement admits that at least nine French officers, including Col. Several of the men, in addition to those admitted to have been killed when the vanguard was cut to pieces, are said to have been either killed or left dying along the route during the retreat to Timbuctoo. The French officers fought bravely Opposed to an enemy estimated to number from 4,000 to 10,000 the French only had 300 men in the intrenchments at Timbuctoo, and this force was only supported by six small field pieces. The news of the disaster has caused a decided sensation in Paris and it is already announced that several questions on the subject will be asked as soon as possible in the chamber of deputies. The Associated Press is informed upon good authority that the French government will say, in reply to these questions, that Col. Bonnier's expedition was undertaken not only upon his own initiative but against the order of the government.

CONGRESSMAN HOUK DEAD.

He Expired Suddenly in Washington Frie day Afternoon-His Career. Washington, Feb. 12.—Representative George W. Houk, of Dayton, Q., died suddenly at 4:30 Friday afternoon of heart disease. Mr. Houk was apparently a man of robust constitution, and the news of his death, which was rapidly communicated about hotel lobbies, came as an unexpected shock to his many acquaintances, and was at first received incredulously by congressmen and public men generally. He had attended to his congressional duties during the day and was, to all appearances, in the full vigor of health. Mr. Houk left his committee room in the afternoon, where he was engaged in dictating letters to his stenographer, remarking that he felt tired and would not do any more work during the afternoon. He made a social call on Mrs. A. Reynolds and her sister at 127 Connecticut avenue, and at 4:30 o'clock went to the window in the parlor and looked out, presumably to see if a car was in sight. At the window he stooped as if to pick up something from the carpet and fell forward on his face. Medical aid was at once summoned, but it was found that Mr. Houk's death had been instantaneous. Mrs. Houk is the only member of the family now in this city and was immediately sent for. During the evening the remains were taken, by the direction of the sergeant-at-arms of the house, to William Lee's undertaking establishment [Judge Houk was born in Cumberland coun- For Farmers, Miners, ty, Pa., September 25, 1825. PROVERBS.

Two proverbs in an ancient book I find, And on their inconsistency I ponder. The first says: "Out of sight is out of mind," The second: "Absence makes the heart grow ron, her ye did sae weel poison three

On turning round 1 turret, not from the hospital dome, not saw a pretty maiden-an Eva, or a from the old kirk tower; no, methought little Miss Sunshine-who could have it must be purely imaginary. Sadly seen no more than six winters. With too soon I heard it die away, but it left a merry voice she thus accosted me: me deeply meditative, though thankful and cheered. Without really divorcing | lady?" morning from midnight, it had yet ushered in a new year. So far as it was able, it had rung out the false and rung in the true. It had proclaimed me a woman at last, since twenty-one not so well, I think. Please may I years previously I had first seen the holy light of heaven. In a few hours I knew that I would be set at liberty to do just as I liked. Justice would say that I had expiated my crime.

At eight o'clock, while the east was rosy with the first blushes of a new and name is Gracie Deed-Dicconson, and I innocent year, my kind warden entered my primitive cell. The chaplain followed, and he, in his quiet way, gave me absolution. After that I sat down to a really excellent breakfast, which the matron brought to me in person.

At nine o'clock I was led forth from Dummersbra' prison by the reverend chaplain. His last words to me were:

"You have, dear child, borne up throughout your three years' confinement with a true woman's fortitude; but the world that is yet before you may owe you many a grudge, and you may be pressed to cry out: 'Oh! that I had died!" But lose not heart, for God will ever be with you on your journey, though you should see Him not!"

The prison door stood ajar. There stretched the great, great world before me, and no wonder that I was taken aback with surprise at the beauty of it; no wonder I felt like an alien at the gate of Heaven. For three long years I had almost forgotten the existence of a world so great and so fair. Surely earth must be a Paradise very little known to those who are allowed to live in luxury there! I thought just then, when I saw the majesty of the mountains, the profound depth of the valleys and the greeny black belts of scented pine woods, that I should like to outlive Methusaleh, and gain more friendships than the hairs of my head. But mine is a serious question: How will the world receive me? Not with gladness, I wot, or men, women and children, knowing this to be the hour of my release, would even have come to meet me at the prison gate.

Having no relative in the land of the living, where should my first steps lead me but to Roderick Mc l'avish's, whose son used to love me so well ere I had to submit to the seal of a murderess? I knew the house again; it stood immewith its whitened, irregular walls, its mind to stand up before judge and jury diately on the outside of the old town, weathercock over the ancient granary. brae, and patch of dead heather all at mitted me to prison for three years. I felt that I you ought to have been where naughty must hear from his own lips that he could not marry a murderess.

There was a great dog's-head knockdishevelled hair beneath, answered.

"Can I see Mr. Duncan?" 1 inquired. "No, ye cannot," she replied.

"But if he knew I was here I feel sure he would see me directly."

"No, he would not." "May I have a glass of new milk?"

The old coo isn't milked." "May I sit down on that stool for few minutes?"

"It isn't my own." "Do you take me for a vagrant, then?" I pleaded.

"I ken ye well. Ye have just left the prison-hoose. Mind ye Nairnie Came-year agone?" "In the name of our presbyters, don't taunt me so."

"Ye are willing to forget your sins. Others cannot. I thought ye wad have learned more sense."

"But Mr. Duncan. Is he still in Dummersbra'?"

"No. His home is in Heaven noo, where the good go. It was Heavenward speed to him when the news about you reached him from the court."

Here, then, on the threshold of my over's old home, I learned that I had been the cause of his early death. Tearing my hair, and not knowing whither to direct my feet, I lamented that I had entered upon the track of loveless liberty.

The sound of the pipes came skirling up the hillside. The pibroch and the highland reel captivated me, but when "Auld Lang Syne" came I shed tears rapidly. The music died away as twelve o'clock and dinner time neared, so I mounted higher and higher, without the excelsior banner, to perform my midday devotion before some snowy altar. A friendly robin accompanied me on my walk, piping a kind of childish welcome. But in my native place, as I saw by just passing through it, how unwelcome I was! Boys pointed me out, girls whispered, old men snarled, the local patriarch and pedagogue both moralized, Miss Mounsell would not so much as lift up her eyes; everybody spurned me. I was now making up my mind to go right away as soon as possible. Taking off my thin, threadbare gloves, I tore up some roots from beneath the snow, and elsewhere I found some frozen hips and haws belonging to last autumn, which, how-

"Are you going up Ben Mochiel,

"No, dear, not to-day. I am too tired already, and I am not a quarter of the way up Ben Mochiel yet.'

"You look very tired * know your name?"

"It is Robina Cameron," I answered. "O, how strange! I heard my papa say you were coming out of prison today, and he thinks you are the wickedest lady anywhere; but I don't. My play 'The Blue Bells of Scotland' on the piano, but I was born in England, and so was papa."

"Perhaps he would be displeased if he were to find you with me."

"Very likely he would. But 1 wish you would tell me before I go why they sent you to prison."

"I will tell you a true tale, Gracie. Three years since to-day, when only just eighteen years old, I was put into a dark and lonely prison. Three months before that a Dummersbra' lady had suddenly and mysteriously died. She was my own stepsister, Nairnie Cameron, and she had last been seen in my company among the rowan trees of Coodie haugh. We had never

"IT IS ROBINA CAMERON," I ANSWERED. been great friends since she fell in love with my lover Duncan McTavish, who did not really admire her at all. That same night she was found dead in Coodie haugh, and traces of prussic acid were on the grass close beside her head. There was overwhelming evidence of my having poisoned my stepsister in a spasm of jealousy or a fit of temporary insanity. I had scarcely presence of and tell them I was innocent. They called me guilty of crime, and com-again, and have a living companion by my side with the sweetest little lips. But the sight of the blue ribbon sent a chill through the marrow of my bones. I knew the exact shade and size of itit had been worn by my stepsister, the wretched Nairnie, at the very time she professed to be engaging Duncan's attentions. I looked at it intensely. It was not only faded, but somebody had taken the vast trouble to perforate a string of capital letters on it. These were as follows:

DDEEEEDDDEIHDT.

In all fourteen letters, mostly D's and E's. Had they been perforated wantonly in that ribbon? or were they significant (if read aright) of some curse on the late owner of it? or did they give some cryptographic clew to Nairnie Cameron's real murderer?

"Guess what that means!" exclaimed Gracie, half with fear and half with heroical pride.

I tried to please her by guessing, but I only made several ridiculous mistakes. For ten minutes the letters floated in a jumbled little mass before my eyes. At last I felt sure they had no meaning at all. Then I felt that they told a story about somebody being dead, there were so many D's and E's; though not a single A. Then I felt sure that this was a cryptograph that would perhaps take an expert weeks to puzzle outand yet had not Gracie found the key to it? How I wished that I could have seen into her mind for the space of half a minute!

"Gracie, darling," I cried, in despair, 'won't you save me this trouble? I never was very good at deciphering puzzles and problems. Besides, it is so cold standing here, and I am not very strong at present. These letters may give a clew to the murderer. I should like to be popularly freed from the stigma of crime, and then I think I should stand a chance of being taken back into Miss Mounsell's millinery house."

"O, Miss Cameron, I daren't tell you anything about it. I'd like you to know, I really would; but -"

"Then just tellome where you found the ribbon, Gracie."

So I accompanied him to his house, ou the way there putting the perforated blue ribbon into his hand.

He stared at it blankly for a moment, then I saw his lips part, and distinctly heard him say:

"Deed did the deed, Deed did the

"What do you mean, Mr. McTavish?"

I cried in alarm. "Deed did the deed. 'Tis plain enough, as these letters tell. My eye fell on the key in a minute. There are fourteen letters in 'Deed did the deed.' You take the first one, then the last; the second one, then the last but one, the third, then the last but two. And so you go on moving the letters into order, until you stop in the middle of 'em. When that's done, you find 'em in the order they're picked through this ribbon. It's plain to me that Maister Deed Dicconson poisoned Nairnie Cameron. My lassie is saved." My eyes swam, my heart went pit-apat, the steam hammers began to strike inside my head, as they last did when I heard my sentence in the criminal dock. Here was a clew to the mystery, and it had been concealed in the murderer's Bible, and then Gracie had found, stolen it, deciphered its meaning (perhaps from a mere verbal slip on her father's part), passed it to me, and I had passed it to Duncan's father.

As we walked through the town we saw a body being carried along on a stretcher.

"Here is the man who blurred thy fair name, lassie! Rest sure, they've found him at last, and he hath no mind to escape the coward! See, here is a note for thee!"

Yes, a constable was thrusting a note into my hands. I stood tongue-tied, and, glancing from the constable to Mr. McTavish, with trembling fingers

I got the envelope open: DEAR MISS CAMERON: I am shooting my self over Nairnie's grave. My child tells me that piece of blue ribbon is in your hands. Ido not wish to recover it. You may be able to decipher the letters with a little ingenuity or the truth may flash before your eye at once. Howother year in disgrace. I cannot endure my present mental state and the stings of my conscience There is nothing out a premature Because I love your race, and because I love your race, and because you would not climb up here nearer to heaven if you had done wrong, and—and because I found this blue ribbon."

often by saying that Duncan McTavish would be a better matrimonial speculation for her than Henry Deed Dicconson, the widower While she lay dead I wept over her. I carried away a piece of blue ribbon she wore. It became a more permanent and valuable keepsake after I had perforated on it the clew of the crime, which I should not have objected to becoming patent to the world after my death. For present safety, however, I secreted it in my little Bible.

Now I ask your pardon for all the damning evidence that I gave against you three years ago. You have suffered: but you will soon be popularly acquitted by the most scrupulous of those who think a murder never sufficiently atoned for, and you may yet gain your golder crown in the world that is to come. As proof that you to some extent forgive me, will you, being now of age, execute my affairs on behalf of the child of my predeceased wife? To her, to my Gracie, through you I send the message Yours, etc.,

"HENRY DEED DICCONSON." After I had recovered from the brunt of this two-faced surprise Roderick said

"My missis is dead, Robina, and thou shalt come to keep my house for me, and thou shalt be Gracie's mother, and I will be her father."

"Dear Mr. McTavish," I said, "then if that is to be my lot, no longer is my liberty a loveless one. It was spreading like wildfire in quaint Dummersbra' that I had no more to do with the death of Nairnie Cameron than had either the late Duncan M. Tavish or his present father. I was besieged now by old enemies turned suddenly into new friends, by all those

The Postmaster's Subterfuge. "One of the most pathetic scenes that ever came under my observation," said a southerner, "was at a country store on the Big Sandy river in West Virginia. I was there as a special post office inspector, and was sitting in the store one bitterly cold night. A feeble old woman, wearing a thin calico dress and a faded sunbonnet, came in timidly as if fearing bad news. 'I don't reckon you ain't got nothin' for me,' she said to the storekeeper. 'Yes; I've got a letter,' and the old woman clutched it to her bosom as if it was the dearest thing on earth to her, and with a quick step born of happiness she walked out. 'I wrote that letter myself,' said the storekeeper to me. 'Her son went down the river on a raft three years ago and was drowned. The old woman could never understand that the boy was dead, and she writes to him every week, just backing her letters: 'My Boy Bill, Down the River.' It hurt her so not to get any answers that every week I write to her and sign Rill's name." -St. Louis Globe-Demo-

A Lost Hunter's Story.

"I had been fishing for trout one day in a North Carolina mountain stream," said a sportsman, "and was entirely unsuccessful. Upon trying to reach camp I became lost and took refuge for the night in a small cave near Grandfather mountain. The cave was dry and comfortable, and making a pillow of my coat I soon fell asleep. The next morning I was awakened by something pulling at the coat, and opening my eyes saw that it was a cub bear. A few feet distant was a large bear sitting on its haunches, and another cub playing around her. I had no weapon of any kind and was completely at the mercy of the animal, but she was not in the humor to dispose of me just then. She sat watching the cub as it pulled at my coat, and I was careful to make no motions that might be considered as hostile. -Jacob Stullenger, who lives near Piedmont, W. Va., lost a good many chickens last November, owing to a big owl's fondness for poultry. He set a steel fox trap in the top of a cherry tree, fastening it with wire, to catch the owl. One night the trap disappeared, and after that the chickens were not molested. Stullenger supposed the owl would starve with the trap on his legs, but he was mistaken, for on the 9th of January the owl was caught again, twenty miles from Piedmont, this time by Ebenezer Kitzmiller. Ebenezer had been annoyed by an owl since Christmas and set a trap for the bird near the chicken house. The owl got caught and found two traps too much baggage to carry away. It had one on each leg.

-It is ever a surprise to the novice in the painting of human studies to find out, let his subject be blond or brunette, the large proportions of blue he must mix with his white and carmine colors to produce the natural tints of the human face divine. Where this ingredient is lacking, a Chinesedoll effect, unnatural and unpleasing, is produced. This truth would appear to be often unappreciated by those silly women who use paints with the purpose of beautifying the face, though it may be that the showy red and white tints they choose precisely satisfy the taste of the kind of person who would thus try to enhance her charms. At all events, the woman on the street is unfortunately frequent whose glaringly pink and white cheeks challenge attention to their unredeemed artificiality.

Boston's bean diet and epidemics of profauity have not served the purpose as advertising mediums. She now proposes to have one of her sons circumnavigate the globe, starting naked and penniless and returning within a year with $5,000 earned by his own hard labor. Starting a man out into the world naked is perhaps brilliant and effective way to boom a dead town. But is it not original. It was practiced 6,000 years ago by the residents of the Garden of Eden. In Wisconsin experiments the effect of the hard wood ashes and bone meal fed to pigs with corn was to save about 28 per cent of the corn in producing 100 pounds of grain, live weight. By feeding the bone meal the strength of the thigh bone was doubled; ashes nearly doubled the strength of the bones. These experiments point to the great value of hard wood ashes for hog feeding, and show that they should be regularly fed. Bone meal is even better than ashes, but the latter are sufficient, and do not usually cost anything.

It is a somewhat curious thing, observed a commercial traveler, that even the most fastidious individual, who will reject with indignation a tumbler that had been used by another diner at a hotel, will not hesitate to drink out of a cup or glass on a railway train, although it may have been used by thousands of persons, many of them of not over cleanly habits. The same thing applies to the persons who use the ice-water coolers in public buildings or

The weather during January was variable but not severe. The ground in the southern and central counties was bare from about the 25th of December until about the same date in January. On the 23d, 24th, and 25th of January it snowed generally throughout the State and covered the ground to depths varying from lightly to several inches. The average depth of snow in the southern counties an the 31st of January, was about 4 inches; in the central counties, 51/2 inches; and in the northern, 7 inches. The average depth on the 15th of January in the northern counties was over 5 inches. Correspondents are about evenly divided as to whether or not wheat has been injured at all during the month. At this date, February 8, the weather is warm with indications that the snow, in the southern part of the State at least, will all be melted off.

the Destroyer of the Robel Privateer Alas bama Strikes a Reef and Is Loat -Her Officers and Crew Saved.

PATE OF THE KEARSARGE. COLON, Isthmus of Panama, Feb. 9 .-The wooden corvette Kearsarge of the North Atlantic squadron is lying "broadside on" on Roncador reef off the coast of Nicaragua, and by this time with a moderately heavy sea pounding her on the ragged coral edges of the shoal is a total loss. Rumors of the wreck reached here two days ago and were confirmed Wednesday by the appearance of Lieut. Frederick Brainard and a portion of the war vessel's

The Kearsarge struck "head on" early on the morning of February 2. She had left Port au Prince January so for Blewfields, Nicaragua. When the vessel struck the reef it was soon seen that she was doomed and all hands were ordered to the boats. Five days provisions were taken and the erew ordered to proceed to the island of Old Providence, a few miles due west of Roncador.

From that point Lieut. Brainard with the first cutter, went to Colon for assistance, that being considered wiser than asking any help from Blewfields under the present circumstances Lieut. Brainard reported to the American consul that none of the officers or crew were missing and not a man injured in the wreck. He admits that the vessel is a total wreck.

Admiral Stanton was on the Kearsarge. When the New York and Detroit were dispatched to Rio, it was made the fit gship of the North Atlantic squadron and Admiral Stanton, after the secretary of the navy had acted on his report of the salute of Mello in Rio bay, was ordered to proceed to Port au Prince and transfer his flag to the Kearsarge and assume command of the sta-

Cherbourg, France. The Kearsarge, in business did the rest. Capt. John A. Winslow, then lying at Flushing, L. I., sailed for Cherbourg to watch the Alabama, and on June 15 her commander received a note from Capt. Semmes, of the privateer, announcing his intention to fight the Kearsarge. This pleased Winslow, and consequently at 10:20 o'clock Sunday morning, June 19, 1864, Commander Winslow saw the Alabama standing out from Cherbourg harbor, accompaand followed by the English yacht Deerhound, which served as tender to the Alabama. The Kearsarge put to sea for a distance of 7 miles, put about and steered straight for the Alabama, which opened fire at a range of 1 mile. Winslow ordered more speed and the Alabama fired again, doing little damage. At a range of 900 yards the Kearsarge sheered and opened a broadide on the Alabama, but Semmes did not seek close action. The Kearsarge forced the Alabama into a circular movement, throwing the Alabama farther from shore and cutting off escape. The Alabama's firing was rapid but wild, and the Kearsarge's heavy guns were trained on her waterline, while the lighter ones swept the Alabama's

LITTLE CHANGE.

No Decided Improvement in General Business Shown. New York, Feb. 12.-R. G. Dun & Ca's weekly review of trade says:

"Improvement in business still appears in many directions, but it seems to be in part balanced by loss in others. The gradual gain, which began some time ago and was strengthened a little by the success of the treasury loan, has scarcely answered expectations. Reports of resumption of work continue to indicate that the industries are doing more than in December, and yet the record of their actual gain is disappointingly small. The marked increase which appears in offerings of commercial paper has almost wholly ceased, and the accumulation of unemployed funds continues so that indorsed mill paper has been taken at 2% per cent. The bond operation has not advanced stocks nor stimulated speculation, and the lowest price ever known for wheat has been recorded. Doubtless the uncertainty which remains, with the tariff bill yet in the senate and currency measures of importance pending in the house, has some hindering influence, but there is still seen an increase in the demand for many kinds of goods because of the exhaustion of the stock in the hands of the dealers.by a consumption which, though less than usual, is nevertheless more than in any other country.

"Crop reports were expected to cause a great advance in wheat, but the price has dropped to 631/4 cents cash, the lowest point ever known in this market, and both here and at Chicago May wheat has gone lower than ever. The fall in wheat for the week was 2 cents, with sales of 8,000,000 bushels in one day and 14,000,000 for the week. Sales of corn were small and the price declined less than a cent Hog products and coffee were substantially un-

"The volume of domestic trade does not materially increase, exchanges indicating a decline compared with last year of 19.5 per cent. elsewhere and 34.9 per cent at New York. The earnings of railways in January were 12 per. cent smaller than last year.

"Textile manufactures are gaining a little. Inquiry discloses larger stocks of cotton goods held by dealers than was supposed, and quite a large proportion of mills likely to close before long unless orders increase, but the number reported starting is again several times the number reported closing.

"Foreign trade does not improve, domestic exports at last falling below those of the corresponding week last year, though for the year thus far the increase is 7 per cent., while the imports are 40 per cent. less than last year. "The failures for the week were 38; in the United States, against 222 last year, and 60 in Canada, against 44 last year, several being of

in Their Father's House. BLOOMIURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—The house of Bert Croman, together with his two small children, was burned at Light street, a small village near here. The parents had gone to call on a neighbor and had been absent but a short time. A passer-by noticed flames in their nied by the French ironclad Couronne house. He gave the alarm and every effort was made to save the little ones, but without avail. When the door was finally broken open the flames were beyond control. The house was completely destroyed. The bodies of the children, charred beyond recognition, were found in the debris. It is supposed a lamp either exploded or that it was accidentally knocked from the table.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

May Unravel a Mystery.

Horace Mansfield, a colored man, and Mrs. Anna Alguire are in jail in Kalamazoo charged as principal and accessory before the fact respectively with the murder of Louis Schilling. The crime was committed about noon Tuesday, March 21, 1893, in Mr. Schilling's meat shop. There is also in jail a man named William Alguire, who has furnished the clews that promise to unravel the mystery surrounding the crime.

Christian H. Buhl's Money.

The will of the late Christian H. Buhl, a Detroit merchant, bequeaths $25,000 to the Harper hospital, $10,000 to the home of the friendless, $2,500 to the Protestant orphan asylum, $2,500 to the working women's home and $2,-500 to the woman's hospital and foundling's home. The sum of $10,000 is given to the regents of Michigan university, to be devoted to the enlargement of the law library.

Murdered by Robbers.

At Holmesville, 10 miles north of Detroit, a wealthy bachelor named Gustave Johnson, who was living alone on his farm, was found with his skull crushed, and died a short time after, never regaining consciousness. An empty pocketbook was found on the floor with other indications that he was murdered for his money, as he was known to have quite a sum about him.

Big Dairy Farm.

A company is being organized at Grand Rapids by O. A. Ball, S. S. Bailey, M. L. Sweet, D. P. Clay and others, with a capital of $150,000, to operate a 3,000-cow dairy farm on the river north of that city. The company will begin with 300 cows and some hens, and will produce milk, butter, cream and eggs on a wholesale scale, with a depot in the city.

Farmers' Clubs Combine.

The Michigan State Association of Farmers' clubs was organized in Lansing by delegates from the various farmers' clubs of the state. William Ball, of Hamburg, was elected president. Concerted action is intended to be taken by the various clubs, through the state organization, upon questions of general importance to the farming three times a day.

State Board of Health.

From various portions of the state the reports of fifty-seven observers for the week ended February 3 show that diarrhea increased and that scarlet fever slightly decreased in area of prevalence. Scarlet fever was reported at fifty-eight places, measles at twenty, diphtheria at thirty-eight and typhoid fever at twenty-six places.

Odds and Ends.

One of our ministers thought out a novel way to exercise his chickens and so make the hens lay more. He suspended a cabbage from the coop ceiling and derived much amusement watching the chickens jump for it but somehow the increase in eggs, that was expected, failed to materialize. We don't know, but think he exercised the wrong muscles.-Ypsilantian.

When the world's fair in Chicago closed there was much speculation as to what would become of the numerous buildings which were erected near the grounds for the accommodation of visitors to the exposition. Investigation shows that families have been moving into the hotels and flats by hundreds, and that but few of them are left vacant. Everything is fish which comes to Chicago's nest.

The irresponsible person who inserted a "fake" "ad" in a Chicago paper calling for 2,000 men to work, when there was no work for them, may have thought he was perpetrating the joke of the season, but he was toying with suffering and playing with destitution; laughing at despondency and making merry with want. No language is strong enough to express one's feeling of contempt for the wretch, and it is a pity there is no law covering such a crime.

A plan is on foot to convert the Hudson into a salmon river. Perhaps it can be done, but if done it will be contrary to the popular idea that the salmon delights in clear water. The Hudson has come to be so much of an open sewer for Troy, Albany Poughkeepsie and a dozen other cities along its banks as to make the ice harvested from its surface a constant menace to health. Is it the idea to transform the salmon into a sort of marine scavenger?

The Veterans.

Hon. George L Douglas, the brilliant young speaker of the Kansas House o Representatives, was much too young to go into the army, but he stands second to none in his admiration of the brave men who rescued the country. He said in a speech at a Reunion at Baxter Springs

The debt we owe to the armies of the Union is the debt not alone of this but of every land: The Greenlander on his barren coast, the Russian peasant in the heart of the mighty Empire of the Czar, the British workman at his forge, the Hindoo in his distant home, the dweller in the remotest island of the sea, are alike beneficiaries of the bravery and the sacrifices of the men who saved the Union and stamped from the face of modern civilization the blot of American slavery.

The historian who would measure the results of that war by the mere political fact of the preservation of the Union, and the immediate emancipation of 4,000,000 of slaves, is shortsighted indeed. Vast as was the gift of freedom to 4,000,000 of black men, the gift to the white race by the consequent change in the whole course of American thought, education, civilization and influence was infinitely greater and grander. And when I take the grayhaired veteran by the hand I reverently think of him not only as one to whom my devoutest thanks are due for the preservation of the Union in its integrity and the flag in its glory, but as one of the of Christian civilization throughout the world than any other army that ever battled on American soil. It is no demagogy to say this; it is but the acknowledgment of an everlasting truth. he honors the men whose valor saved to

A quarter of a century now and more, since the battered regiments turned homeward from the great war—a generation to be filed, and a copy thereof to be served on said complainant's solicitors, within twenty has come upon the earth since then. One by one the old heroes drop by the wayside and we hear the footfall of younger man and we hear the footfall of younger men in the haunts and places of the brave men who are passing away; and, in the not far distant future, I can see the last old soldier of the grand army of the Union. It may be 30 or 40 or 50 years, but a day will come, some day, when the last old hero of the great war, with whitened hair and wrinkled face and bended form will stand solitary and alone amid fhe people of the Nation he fought to save. Glorious and solemn thought! What Monor will be too great for him then? What matter where in this broad land he may be, the whole Nation will claim him. Each tottering step will be watched by the eyes of thousands. Each faltering word will be caught and treasured. How reverently even great men will uncover before him and honor themselves by honoring him. And how small, and petty, and selfish, how incomprehensible, to the men of that day army that did greater service to the cause will seem the din and controversy of this generation over the question as to how much this country owes, or whether it still owes anything, to the heroes who
