Michigan School for the Blind.

This school, located at Lansing, is maintained by the state, and affords a comprehensive education for those who are blind or of such defective vision that they are prevented from receiving instruction in the public schools.

Board and tuition are free to all pupils whose parents or guardians are residents of the state.

In all, ten teachers are employed. The literary work comprises all the branches usually taught in the common and high schools of the state.

In music, instruction is given in voice training and pupils learn to play upon the piano, organ, flute and violin. Brass instruments are used by many. Piano tuning is one of the trades taught and a large number of graduates of this school now earn a comfortable living by means of a trade acquired at the school. Plain and fancy sewing, by hand and on the machine, knitting, crocheting and similar work are taught the girls, and many are highly proficient in this difficult art. Broom-making is at present the only manual trade taught; an appropriation was made by the legislature of 1893 which when available will enable the introduction of other trades such as carpet and rug weaving, hammock, fly-net and fish-net making. It is expected that through the advantages afforded by the generous provision of the state each pupil will acquire such an education as will, in a great measure, enable him to support himself.

If any of our readers know of a child who may be entitled to admission to this school, they will confer a favor by sending the name and address to the Superintendent of the School for the Blind, Lansing, Mich.

They Met the Robber.

Farmer C. F. Hill who lives three miles south of Ann Arbor, had an exciting time with a robber Wednesday night of last week. Hill has been robbed a number of times, and to protect himself recently put in burglar alarms in his house and barn. These woke him up about midnight, and he and his son sallied forth armed with a double-barrel gun. They found a man near the barn, and the farmer let go both barrels of the shotgun. The burglar returned the fire, but the farmer was not struck. He then returned to the house to load up again.

In the meantime, his son, who had gone around the barn in another direction, ran right into the arms of the burglar, who shot at him and then knocked him down with a club. The shot struck his watch and did not injure him, but the blow on the head was a severe one. When the farmer returned with the reloaded shotgun the burglar had escaped. Sheriff Brenner has organized a posse, who are now searching for the robber.—Journal.

An exchange complains of the American way of referring to the poet Burns as "Bobby." It says it breeds disrespect for the Scotch singer most deplorable "in us, a democracy, when Burns was the poet of democracy." This is balderdash raised to the third power. It is because of his democracy that Burns frequently is spoken of in the familiar term of "Bobby." He was essentially the poet of the people. He is called "Bobby" because he is loved by all, because he loved all.

THE NEWS.

Compiled From Late Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL- Regular Session.

ON the 19th the Hawaiian resolution was called up in the senate and Senator Daniel (dem. Va.) spoke in support of it. The nomination of Senator Edward D. White, of Louisiana, as associate justice of the supreme court was received from the president and was confirmed. In the house the effort to secure a quorum to order the previous question on Mr. Bland's motion to close debate on the silver seigniorage bill was unsuccessful.

THE session of the senate on the 20th was devoid of special interest. Senator Daniel (Va.) concluded his speech on the Hawaiian question, and while supporting the course that has been followed by the administration, he declared that now there was nothing to do but recognize the new government and wish it good speed. In the house the deadlock on the silver seigniorage bill was not broken.

ON the 21st the Hawaiian resolution was further discussed in the senate after a lively debate between several members on the tariff question. In the house Mr. Bland again failed to secure a quorum on his motion for a vote on the seigniorage bill, and after four hours of fruitless roll-calls the house adjourned.

IN the senate on the 22d a resolution was offered to instruct the finance committee to prepare a bill for the free coinage of silver at the rate of 16 to 1. Also a resolution directing the judiciary committee to prepare a joint resolution, providing for the election of senators by a direct vote of the people. Adjourned to the 26th. In the house a bill was introduced to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada and one to repeal that part of the act of 1875 which authorizes the secretary of the treasury to issue bonds. Exciting events growing out of the wholesale arrest of members for being absent led to disorder and tumult, which, after continuing for hours, was suddenly terminated in an adjournment.

THE senate was not in session on the 23d. In the house the members under arrest were finally discharged from custody by dispensing with further proceedings under the call. Mr. Bland, in another futile effort to secure a vote on the silver seigniorage bill, called the filibusters anarchists, and said: "We were sent here to do our duty, and a time when the cities are thronged with mobs and the people cannot go to bed in peace and comfort is not the time when mob law should obtain here." At the evening session to consider pensions the lack of a quorum prevented the transaction of any business.

ONE OF HIS NAMES.

Never a boy had so many names; They called him Jimmy, and Jim, and James, and Jamie, and well he knew What it was that wanted him, too.

The boys in the street ran after him, Shouting out loudly: "Jim! Hey, J-i-m-m-i!" Until the echoes, little and big, Seemed to be dancing a Jim Crow jig.

And little Mabel out in the hall, "Jim-my! Jim-my," would sweetly call, Until he answered and let her know Where she might find him: she loved him so.

Grandpa, who was dignified, And held his head with an air of pride, Didn't believe in abridging names, And made the most that he could of "J-a-m-e-s."

But if father ever wanted him, Crisp and curt was the summons: "Jim," That would make the boy on his errands run Much faster than if he had said: "My son."

Biddy O' Flynn could never, it seems, Call him anything else but "Jeems," And when the nurse, old Mrs. McVise, Called him Jamie, it sounded nice.

But sweeter and dearer than all the rest, Was the one pet name that he liked the best: "Darling!"—he heard it whate'er he was at, For none but his mother called him that.

A WOMAN'S YES.

An Incident in the Love Affairs of Miss Bragg.

Miss Louise Bragg's social colleagues were fond of saying of her to one another and to strangers that she was a wonderfully clever young woman. This was meant in no qualified sense; it carried with it no contingencies; the distinction was positive. The fact of her cleverness stood prominently apart, and was a notable item in the general assets of her social set. It became one of the chief facts concerning her interesting personality, and frequently overshadowed less striking ones when she was being conversationally considered.

She was of the slender, willowy type; tall as most men, and graceful after an unconscious, unstudied fashion. Her face had straight, angular lines, and was not essentially pretty. When she smiled it revealed many surprising curves and subtle charms of expression. Wondrous power lay in her brown eyes, power under complete subjection of her will. Her hair was of the bright yellow tint of over-ripe wheat, the tint that somehow suggests artificiality. Little curling wisps defied the imprisonment of the dainty coilure in which her tresses were fastened.

She was original and clever and, therefore, unconventional and Bohemian. Men she chose to regard in a humorous light, as rather amusing animals, charming under certain circumstances, but ordinarily dull and vulgar. At little social gatherings of her sex, her coming was always awaited as an event which would give breeziness and vigor to the conversation. She was not at all unpopular among her own sex. This was doubtless due to the heartless manner in which she rejected the lovers of a great many other young lady friends.

Miss Bragg's love experiences had been numerous; but she had managed with her cleverness to give them variety. Every man she had ever known well had attempted to make love to her. She thought it very amusing, and her women friends agreed with her in this view when she told them of her experiences, omitting names. She was not without conscience in the matter, however, and contented herself with believing that all of her admirers would get over their weakness without permanent hurt.

A brief note from one of these admirers received one morning just as she was going out produced marked effect upon Miss Bragg. She gave up her intention to go out and sat down to read a second and a third time the very brief and conventional epistle. It was a very concise note from Mr. Philip Newmann, asking her to walk with him in the afternoon.

These walks, it must be explained, formed one of Miss Bragg's characteristic social institutions. Besides being clever she was peculiar. She went walking with young men much oftener than she went driving or to the theater with them. Mr. Phil Newmann had been one of the first young men to enjoy the pleasure of these walks, and the sight of him promenading with Miss Bragg had inspired countless other young men to aspire to the same privilege. But for three years, although she had walked often, Newmann had not been her companion. She had seen him occasionally at balls, parties, the theater and elsewhere, but had had little communication with him. The day before receiving his note she had passed him on the street and he had bowed in a distantly polite manner.

After reading the note the third time and vainly trying to comprehend its meaning she took from the cabinet, in which she kept all her letters, a letter in the same handwriting, and, putting the two together, studied them. Though totally different in tone and apparent meaning she believed them to be of practically the same import. The first, written by Newmann just after their last walk together three years before, was a timid, half fearful proposal of marriage. It had a tremulous note of fear in it—fear that she would refuse. The last—just four lines—asked her to walk, nothing more. Yet, Miss Bragg's logic gave the two the same meaning. "Well," said Miss Bragg, as she finished her note of acceptance, "the answer's the same to both letters."

scure 'yes'—he didn't recognize in its disguise. This time—I don't like this—I'll make it plain for him."

She tore up what she had written, and penned in scrawling, careless characters: "Yes—Louise Bragg. I like that better," she said. She read Newmann's note again, half smiling. "I wonder if this last phase in the evolution of Mr. Newmann's feelings is as complimentary to me as the first," she speculated. "He's a man of moods, phases and periods. It's hard to make out the meaning of this last. It sounds like a last appeal. He is a human paradox."

Of all her love affairs, this was the most interesting to Miss Bragg. This was due to its novel history and to other reasons. Newmann was a society man of a not remarkable mental caliber. He measured up to the average of his set. He was rather tall and handsome, with a face typically southern. What particular quality of his that drew her toward him, Miss Bragg herself could not say—but she was conscious of liking him. Their walks, as has been said, were frequent, and their talks, while confidential, had never touched upon matrimonial topics.

He reserved the mention of this subject for the letter that has been referred to. Miss Bragg was a bit disappointed at having so important a question treated after the manner of a business negotiation. It seemed a little cowardly to write. Her reply was characteristically worded. To a few men in the world it would have meant "no," but to the generality of men "yes"—a woman's yes.

A call the next day would have accorded with Miss Bragg's idea of what the behavior of a young man in Newmann's place should have been, but he did not call the next day, the next week, the next month or the next year. Indeed, three whole years passed and he neither wrote or spoke to her upon the subject. After a short time she repented of having replied as she had done. Her letter now seemed so hasty, so ill-considered. If she had waited a month to reply it would have been different, she felt. Still she could not understand Newmann's conduct, and it was far from her to ask him for an explanation.

Miss Bragg dressed with great care, and calmly self possessed, she sat awaiting for Newmann. She read his last two letters again, but the repudiation of them left her puzzled still. From her cabinet she fished out a package of letters she had received from him. She had not seen them since first receiving them, but now she read them with peculiar interest. In the package were three or four written while Newmann was away on a business trip, others were written to her at mountain resorts, others still were nothing but mere formal notes asking for an engagement—all breathed the spirit of love. She could understand his actions even less as she read them, which she did with marked eagerness. Out of the confused tangle of odds and ends that filled her cabinet she searched for letters in Newmann's well known handwriting. The letters had been tossed in promiscuously and hidden from view since.

A bright, crisp, new-looking envelope dropped from her fingers as she drew out a bundle, and, picking it up, she examined it curiously. As her glance fell upon it the blood left her face and her heart stood still. It was in her own handwriting addressed to Newmann—her answer to his letter of three years ago.

As she sat there regarding it in bewilderment Mr. Newmann's card was handed to her.

No traces of agitation were visible in Miss Bragg's manner when she smilingly greeted Newmann a minute later. He nervously shook hands. Miss Bragg did not sit down. "I believe we are to walk?" she said, as if the matter was of so little importance that she had almost forgotten. "Yes," he said, getting up hastily.

As they reached the sidewalk they stopped undecided which way to go. "It's a nice walk out in the vicinity of Jefferson Heights," Newmann said, hesitatingly. "We used to walk there often, you remember." "Oh, no, not Jefferson Heights," she said, as if the place was not to be considered, "it's so stupid—I detest the place." She slowly set off in an opposite direction. Newmann walked silently beside her for a few moments. Presently he announced the discovery that it was a fine day for walking. Next he observed that the day was just like that on which they had taken their last walk together. This was followed by another and a longer pause, broke by Newmann's question: "You remember what a fine day it was, Miss Bragg?" She made an effort to remember, knitting her brows and looking thoughtful. Utterly failing to recall it, she excused herself. "You see we walked together more than once and the days were always fine—I knew they were, because I wouldn't have gone otherwise. And then three years is too long to remember such a thing as the state of the weather."

After that Mr. Newman evaded the weather and that last walk as perilous topics. He talked about people, and had the air of a man who wanted badly to talk of something else. He grew nervous when Miss Bragg at last turned round and faced homeward. The walk had grown to be dull. "Miss Bragg," had grown to be dull. "I'm going to Europe in a few days, and there's something I want to ask you before I go. If your answer is what I hope it will be I will not go. Why did you not answer my letter three years ago?" Miss Bragg's face assumed the expression of one who has an unpleasant something to say. "Such letters are not easy to answer," she said. "One has to think before replying. I did write a letter to you, but did not send it. I thought I would wait—I thought I could tell you better." "But you did not tell me," Newmann burst out eagerly. "You did not ask me," she said, quite calmly. Newmann looked flushed and disappointed. "What did you write me?" he asked as they walked on. "Can you guess?" she asked. His face showed his disappointment. "Oh, I guess I know what it was," he said, bitterly, "and it has caused me hours of anguish and pain, nights of sleepless unrest. Oh, Miss Bragg, you can't guess how much it has cost me. I have seen no pleasure, no peace, no rest. It will always be the same. You will pardon me for bothering you again, but I had hoped, after waiting three years and seeing that there was no other man, that you might change your answer. I could not go to Europe without asking you."

They walked along in silence. They were already within sight of Miss Bragg's home. At the door he stopped before her and asked, half imploringly: "Am I to accept your answer as final?" She nodded an affirmative. "My answer is final," she said. "Miss Bragg," he said, tremulously, "I can never forget you. I shall think of you constantly while I am abroad. I'm sorry to have caused you the pain of rejecting me a second time. Good-by."

He held out his hand and took hers in a strong grasp. "Good-by, Mr. Newmann," she said. "I trust you will have a pleasant trip abroad." "Thank you," he said. "Good-by." He gave her a last look and turned to go. "Mr. Newmann, stop a moment," she called. He walked back to her, his honest face flushed with pain. "I am awfully sorry," she said. "Believe I esteem you highly and regret that this has occurred. Your letters—I want to return them. Wait a moment till I get them." "You may burn—" he started to say, but she was gone.

She found them just as she had left them in her cabinet. She picked them up and evened their ends so as to make a square bundle. She tied the package with a small satin ribbon. Her own letter lay on the cabinet. She picked it up and held it undecidedly for a moment. Impulsively she tucked it beneath the ribbon with the rest.

"I think you will find all of them here," she said, handing him the package. "And I happened to find my answer to your letter of three years ago. You were curious to know what I had written, so I put it in with your letters. Good-by."

They shook hands. "I will read it, even though it gives me pain," he said in a low tone.

He hurried down the walkway, the very image of an unhappy man.

But the steamer for Europe that left a few days later did not number Mr. Newmann among its passengers. He had read in Miss Bragg's answer a "woman's yes."—Robert L. Adamson, in Atlanta Constitution.

No Matrimony for Them.

It is a remarkable fact that the greater number of most distinguished painters have lived and died free from the thralldom of Hymen. Take, for example, the presidents of the Royal academy. Sir Joshua Reynolds was a bachelor; Benjamin West, his successor, was a bachelor; so was Sir Thomas Lawrence; so, too, Sir Edwin Landseer, for he, be it remembered, was elected president, and his refusal did not take effect until thirteen days afterward; so, also, Sir Francis Grant, and, as everybody knows, Sir Frederick Leighton. Maclise, too, who was offered the presidency and a knighthood and refused both, was no more amenable to the idea of marriage. Then Turner, Etty, Sir David Wilkie, Sir William Boxall, Sir W. Gordon and Sir W. C. Ross, all of them regarded matrimony with the same aversion as Reynolds, who, when he heard of Flaxman's engagement, exclaimed: "Then he's ruined for an artist."

The efficacy of Raphael and Michaelangelo was to him a sacred example, as sacred as it is to the priesthood.—Westminster Gazette.

The Pie and the Knife.

It was in a Washington restaurant and the gentleman at the table may have looked a congressman to the waiter who served him. In any event, the waiter was very polite and attended to his duties promptly. When the dinner had been disposed of the guest ordered his dessert, which included pie. The waiter brought it and with it a knife. The guest looked at the cold steel and then at the waiter reproachfully.

"Waiter," he said, in a tone of disappointment rather than resentment, "what did I ever do to you that you should have thought I was a western congressman?"—Detroit Free Press.

—A mendicant approached a benevolent-looking old gentleman the other day and said: "Dear sir, I have lost my leg" to which the benevolent-looking gentleman replied as he hurried away: "My dear friend, I am very sorry, but I have not seen anything of it."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Got a Judgment for Salaries.

In April, 1891, the Wayne county board of auditors, which was then exclusively democratic, adopted a resolution declaring that every republican employe in the county, seventeen in number, was incompetent, and discharged them on short notice. All of the discharged employes brought suit against the county for their salaries for the balance of the year. The court directed a verdict for the plaintiffs in a test case and the county will have to pay the men their salaries.

State Officers Removed.

Gov. Rich has dismissed from his cabinet Secretary of State Jochim, State Treasurer Hamblitz and Land Commissioner Berry. When Gov. Rich called court to order the attorneys for the three state officials waived arguments and submitted their case as it stood, so that it might go to the supreme court at once. Gov. Rich said: "The defendants are found guilty and are hereby formally removed."

Forgot His Gun.

An absent-minded Traverse City sportsman went out hunting the other day, and after he got about two miles from home his dog started a rabbit. The hunter got behind a tree near the animals runway and waited for the dog to drive him around. Soon bunny came tearing along, the sportsman whistled, the rabbit stopped short, and then the man said a great, big word. He discovered that he had left his gun at home.

DEATH OF STEELE MACKAYE.

The Famous Dramatist Passes Away in Colorado.

TIMPAS, Col., Feb. 27.—Steele Mackaye died here Sunday morning at 7:45 o'clock from complete exhaustion. His wife, known on the stage as Helen Marr, Dr. H. N. Parker, of Chicago, and a professional nurse were with him. He died in a private car on the Santa Fe road, in which he was being conveyed to Los Angeles, Cal., where it was believed his health, could he have lived to reach there, would have been benefited. Owing to his weak, wasted condition, however, the exertions and excitement of the trip were more than he was able to stand. The body was taken from here to La Junta, where it was embalmed and prepared for burial. Dr. Parker and the widow have started east with it and arrive in Chicago Wednesday morning. Dr. Parker and Dr. Finney, the Santa Fe surgeon at La Junta, held an autopsy and found the cause of death to be a cancer in the stomach.

[Mr. Mackaye was born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1836. His oratorical and literary inclinations were of early development. After a course at Yale university he was sent to Paris, with the assistance of friends, and for seven or eight years he studied under Deisarte. Returning to New York, he was taken in hand by Lester Wallace, "Larry" Jerome and other notables. He became the lion of the clubs and the pet of bohemia. Several lectures on oratory and the drama which he delivered in New York and Boston attracted great attention and much favorable comment. Then he went to London, where, in collaboration with "Tom" Taylor, he produced a series of successful plays. It was during this time that "Won at Last" was brought out by Mr. Mackaye.

After several years he returned to New York and wrote "Hazel Kirke," which made him famous. Other plays, such as "A Noble Rogue," "Col. Tom" and "Paul Kaurav" followed, in each of which startling stage contrivances were introduced by the author.

Subjoined is a list of the plays, in addition to those already mentioned, written by Mr. Mackaye alone or in collaboration, giving the date of the production of each: "Marriage," 1872; "Rose Michel," 1873; "Queen and Woman," 1876; "Through the Dark," 1878; "A Fool's Errand," 1891; "Dakota," 1884; "In Spite of All," 1893; "The Drama of Civilization," 1896; "Rinzi," reconstructed and rewritten for Lawrence Barrett in 1896; "Anarchy," 1887, produced again in the same year under the title of "Paul Kaurav"; "An Arrant Knaves," 1889; "Money Mad," 1890.

Mr. Mackaye's latest project, the Spectatorium, was the most stupendous failure of his career. It was designed to be a great attraction conducted supplementary to the world's fair, in which his recent invention for graduating electric light as to counterfeiting natural light were to be utilized in a scenic history of Columbus and the discovery of America. Prominent capitalists furnished the money, but the undertaking was projected upon too large a scale and it failed last June, losing its backers a sum estimated at $80,000. The pile of ruins at the north end of Jackson park remains a monument to Mr. Mackaye's impracticability. Only a few weeks ago the Spectatorium, modeled on a much smaller scale, was opened on Michigan avenue, Chicago, where it is now running.]

VICTIMS OF FIRE.

A Total of Ten Persons Burned to Death in Various Localities.

GURDON, Ark., Feb. 27.—News has reached here of the burning of a farmhouse and its occupants 10 miles west of Murfreesboro, in Pike county, on Wednesday night. John Wert, a farmer, his wife and five children occupied the house and all perished in the flames. The building was constructed of logs, with a large fireplace built at each end. While the family were asleep fire flew upon the floor and in that manner the dry timbers and other inflammable material soon became ignited. When discovered next day the entire building was reduced to ashes and only the charred bodies of the occupants remained.

VINELAND, N. J., Feb. 27.—Two lives were lost and a score placed in imminent peril by a fire which consumed a portion of the state home for feeble-minded children at this place Sunday. The victims were J. H. Sage, the engineer of the institution, and his wife, who acted as landress. The fire was discovered in the basement of the handsome three-story brick structure known as "the Robinson memorial college."

New York, Feb. 27.—A fire attended with loss of life occurred early Sunday morning in the three-story frame house at 1952 Amsterdam avenue. On the first floor of the tenement lived Michael Wundt and his wife, who was sick in bed with her infant child, and Annie K. Laub, a servant. It took Wundt a long time to make his family realize that the house was on fire, and by the time they understood the situation it was impossible to reach the street by way of the stairs, so they started for the roof. Mr. Wundt had to carry his sick wife. Wundt jumped to the roof of the next house, which is only two stories high. Their 9-days-old baby was tossed to him by the servant, after which she made the 12-foot jump. Mrs. Wundt was left on the roof of the burning building and was rescued by Policeman Donovan and Barber Schloeder. Annie K. Laub was so excited that although she was practically safe she jumped to the ground. Both her ankles were broken and she was removed to the Manhattan hospital. After the fire was extinguished the firemen found in the place where the butcher shop had stood the remains of William Leiter, Wundt's neighbor, who had been forgotten and burned to death.

Peschmann Sentenced.

MILWAUKEE, Feb. 27.—Judge Walther imposed the life penalty on Rudolph J. Peschmann, who murdered Mrs. Anna Schums at the Cream City hotel on the morning of January 13, and then set fire to the house in the hope of hiding his crime.

The scholars of Mrs. B. McClain's Sunday School class tendered her a very pleasant surprise party last Friday evening. A very nice time was had.

Last Friday night was the coldest since 1885. At daybreak Saturday morning the thermometer showed that the temperature had gone down to 11 degrees below zero.

Mrs. John Schieferstein, of Dexter, has purchased the Hunter property, corner Madison and Washington streets, this village, and will move to the same this spring.

A number of our young people attended the school exhibition at the Jewett school house last Friday evening, given by the teacher, Miss Luella Townsend and her scholars.

The total attendance at the university this year cannot yet be definitely settled, but there is no question that it will be over 2,650, about a hundred less than last year. If the country was prosperous it would probably have reached 3,000 and upwards.

The new law, backed up by Attorney General Ellis' opinion, which says that "no person shall act as an inspector of election who is a candidate for any office to be selected by ballot at such election," will cause a general change in many of the election boards this spring.

Rev. Walter Elliott, of New York, who is a most welcome guest at St. Mary's Rectory this week, will leave for Hillsdale, Mich., next Saturday morning. He will officiate in St. Mary's church next Friday evening, when the beautiful devotion of the "Way of the Cross" with congregational singing will be given.

The next meeting of the County Horticultural Society will be held in the supervisors room at the court house, Ann Arbor, on Saturday afternoon, March 3rd. Assurances have been received from Senator Palmer, late President of the World's Fair Commission, that he will be present and address the meeting upon the important subject of Good Roads.

Report of Sylvan Center school for the month ending Feb. 23, 1894: Number enrolled 38; Average daily attendance 29; scholarship and deportment above 85, Emmet Dancer, Bert Kellogg, Delos Spencer, Jacob Forner, Herman Forner, Emma Forner, Austin Gray, Bert Gray, Lewis Heselchwerdt, Carl Kalmbach, Edith Young, Effie Ludlow, Ada Wiley, Laura Knoll, Belle Ward, George Hafley, Luke H. Hagan, teacher.

Rev. Walter Elliott officiated at St. Mary's church last Sunday before large congregations of people. He preached a most eloquent sermon at high mass. In the evening he introduced congregational singing and it was a decided success. Book racks had been placed permanently in each pew and the words of the hymns were furnished to all who participated. It was an inspiring scene when the large congregation sang splendidly the beautiful hymns. Father Elliott gave an instructive and interesting address, and the people joined in the prayer, sometime in unison, and again alternately. This congregational singing is to be a feature of the Sunday evening services at old St. Mary's and will, no doubt, be successful.

The proposed improvement of country roads, by laying steel railway tracks to be used by wagons and electric cars, will hardly satisfy the wheelmen, to whom all the credit for the agitation in favor of better roads is due.

To measure hay in the mow, multiply feet in height by feet in width, and that product by feet in length. Divide by 512, and the answer will be in tons or parts of tons. Some allowance should be made for condition of hay. The above is for dry, compact, but not pressed hay. This may be relied on as an approximate mode.

A New York woman contracted with a hair coloring firm to change her raven tresses to a beautiful brown. A mistake was made in mixing the chemicals, and the woman who wanted the change finds herself the possessor of a shock of fiery red hair. Very naturally this red headed condition has led her to sue the firm for damages.

They come on your premises and squat, track mud all over your carpet, scratch your furniture, eat all your winter supplies and with a big speech present you with a knock-kneed rocking chair tied with red ribbon, which must have cost $1.75. Then the party go away and say you knew it all the time and just acted surprised."

Maple syrup time is near at hand says the Hudson Post. It is sweeter than a convention of school ma'ams, and stickier than a bare-legged boy seated on a sheet of fly paper. There is much happiness in sugaring-off time. Church socials are popular, for the raw product of sweetness is at its best when two spoony young people both bite the same piece of solid syrup, at the same time, and try to pull it apart. There is also a pleasant financial side to maple sugar time, for many a farmer gets a good supply of pin money from maple trees.

THE California Midwinter fair exhibits many curiosities, but probably none more surprising than this: "The only building on the grounds put up by trades union labor is the Chinese building."

THE French Astronomical society has just awarded to Prof. Barnum, of the University of Chicago, the Arago gold medal, in recognition of his discovery last year of Jupiter's fifth satellite. This medal has been conferred only once before, and then on the distinguished French astronomer, Leverrier.

Among the many vessels which have been driven ashore and wrecked on the English coast since the winter's storms began was the schooner Draper, which was lost with all on board. The Draper was more than 114 years old, having been built in 1779, and was one of the oldest vessels regularly engaged as a freight carrier.

THE secret codes used by the United States state department are the most carefully guarded of all the nation's secrets. One of them is called the "sphinx"—it is so guarded. The "sphinx" was devised by a New Yorker now in the state department, and is as susceptible to changes as the combination lock of a safe. Hundreds of messages have been sent by it, and it has never leaked.

VICE ADMIRAL LEFEVRE, French minister of marine, estimates that by about 1905 the type of ironclad now being constructed by the nations of the world will have reached its apogee, naval armaments along present lines will be completed, and the nations will have armed, for the sea, up to the limit. The naval budgets will, he thinks, attain their maximum by that time, and will then diminish for some time.

It is now proposed to put the whale-back boats to a use other than that of carrying grain. The navy department is casting covetous eyes at these whale-backs and wondering whether or not it would be a good idea to stiffen up their backs and arm them with big guns. The latest plans in naval warfare provide for considerable submarine business and when submarine business is considered the whaleback may be regarded as considerably in it.

MISS ALICE WOODWARD, of Shelton, Conn., who hiccoughed herself to the point of death, despite physicians' efforts, is now out of danger. In consequence of the circulation given the case, remedies were sent from all parts of the country. Many were tried, and that suggested by Frank W. Mack, of the Associated Press, New York, was effective. The remedy is "nitrate of amyl," a few drops to be inhaled from a handkerchief.

THE secretary of war has transmitted to congress a report on the condition of the militia of the country which contains some interesting facts. It shows that on the 1st of January last there were in the United States and territories 9,900,000 able-bodied men available for military service. Of this number 112,190 are organized into regiments and could be mobilized on very short notice. The conclusion is that in case of war the United States could organize the largest army in the world.

ONE of the most striking phenomena of the Adirondack region is the carrying power of the human voice in still weather upon the lakes, great and small. Persons ashore easily hear the ordinary conversation of others who are so far out upon the lake as to be indistinguishable, and, as a great many Adirondack visitors habitually violate the law touching the slaughter of deer, all such offenders are extremely careful not to even whisper a word that might betray their guilt when rowing upon the lakes.

THE ordinary Oolong tea, costing sixty or seventy cents a pound, has a capacity, says the Philadelphia Record, of about 110 half-pint cups to the pound, while the same amount of Ceylon, silver-tipped tea, costing $32, will supply over 1,500 half-pint cups, and in addition the beverage is vastly superior to that of common brands. The intrinsic value of imported teas rarely exceeds that figure, but in certain instances, where the tea market has been cornered, as high as $175 for a pound has been paid in London.

THOSE persons who have seen the original copy of the declaration of independence may consider themselves fortunate, as very few will ever see it hereafter. For many years it has been on public exhibition in the state department library at Washington, but the rapid fading of the text from exposure to the light and the deterioration of the parchment on account of age have caused it to be withdrawn from public view. It has been made into a roll and placed in a tin box for filing with the archives of the government.

THEY MUST ANSWER.

Indictments Returned in the Michigan Election Fraud Cases.

True Bills Found Against the Secretary of State, the Attorney General, the Treasurer and Several Other Suspected Persons.

INDICTED FOR FRAUD.

LANSING, Mich., Feb. 26.—Indictments were found by the grand jury Friday in the election frauds case against Attorney General Ellis, Secretary of State Jochim, Treasurer Hamblitz, Land Commissioner Berry, and Clerks Warren, Potter and Bussey. These indictments had been prepared with great care during the last two weeks by ex-Justice Edward Cahill of the supreme court, ex-Justice M. V. Montgomery of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, Richard A. Montgomery and Russell C. P. Ostrander, of this city, counsel for the state, and are ironclad in every respect. They were made to cover all phases of the case, blanks being left for the insertion of the names of the persons indicted.

The indictments found are authoritatively reported to be as follows:

First—An indictment charging Attorney General Adolphus A. Ellis with forgery in connection with the Gogebic county return.

Second—An indictment against Secretary of State John W. Jochim, State Treasurer Joseph F. Hamblitz and Land Commissioner John G. Berry for making false public record of the vote cast for the constitutional amendment of 1893.

Third—An indictment for the last-named offense against Clerks Frank A. Potter and George B. Warren, who did the clerical work on the canvass.

Fourth—An indictment for conspiracy in connection with the frauds of 1893 against Ellis, Jochim, Hamblitz, Berry, Potter, Warren, ex-Clerk Marcus Peterson, of the board of state auditors; County Clerk William May, of Detroit; Sergeant-at-Arms George H. Bussey, and Bill Clerk James G. Clark, of the senate.

Fifth—An information charging Ellis and May with the destruction of Wayne county records while they were in the custody of May in this city.

The first witness examined Friday was Clerk Jackson, of the board of state auditors, who had been before the jury twice before. He was detained but a moment and was followed by H. D. Wheaton, of the state department, G. L. Sumner, of the auditor-general's office, and ex-Clerk Frank A. Potter, who had charge of the canvass of 1893. The latter was in the room but a short time and made no confession. These witnesses completed their testimony before noon, and in the afternoon State Senator Joseph Weiss, of Detroit, was questioned as to his relations to Sergeant-at-Arms Bussey and his knowledge of the latter's movements about the time the Wayne county returns were falsified last spring. Weiss was also questioned about the conspiracy entered into by numerous state officers and clerks to carry the amendment of 1893. The last witness examined was Postmaster Healey, of Ironwood, who explained how he was induced by Attorney General Ellis to alter the Gogebic returns of 1891, and he acquitted himself so creditably that he escaped being indicted. As he several days ago conceded that he would be indicted he is the happiest man in Michigan. The examination of Healey was concluded at 2 o'clock, and the jury at once commenced its deliberations, which continued for two hours, at the end of which time the work of signing the indictments was commenced.

BOLD THIEF CAUGHT.

Henry Guy Fernald, Supposed to Have Robbed a 'Frisco Pawnbroker, Arrested.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 26.—Henry Guy Fernald, alias Wentworth, who claimed to be the son of a wealthy Boston banker when he came here from Chicago a few months ago, has finally come to grief. He was arrested in Los Angeles Thursday night, in company with a woman known as Mrs. Garnier and her son, Harry Earl. The police here expect to prove that Fernald and Earl robbed Simon Jacobson, the pawnbroker, last Saturday and made away with a trunk containing $1,000 in coin and pledged diamonds worth $11,000. The Jacobson family gave a party Friday night, and it appears that Fernald, who was known to the family as J. W. Spence, and Earl were among the guests. Fernald, Earl and the woman left the city the next day, all having plenty of money, whereas they had previously been unable to pay their hotel bills. Diamond robberies have also occurred here in the St. Nicholas and Langham hotels, fashionable family houses, while Fernald and the woman were guests there. Fernald was once arrested for a big diamond robbery in Chicago.

GIVEN TO THEIR STOCK

Illinois Farmers Are Feeding Wheat to Cattle and Hogs.

MASCOUTAH, Ill., Feb. 26.—The low price of wheat during the last few years has caused many farmers in this section of the state to hold their grain in the vain hope that prices would go higher in the course of time. Many farmers have thousands of bushels of wheat stored away in their granaries. With the prices lower than they have been in years and the prospects favorable for another good crop the ensuing season farmers have generally given up hope of securing better prices for their wheat. Some farmers are hauling wheat to the market for what it will bring, while others have determined to feed it to stock.

IN MURDERER'S ROW.

Erastus Wiman Is Treated Like a Common Felon.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—When the town Thursday morning read the startling headline telling of the arrest and imprisonment of Erastus Wiman they naturally expected to learn that by some means or another, which seem accessible to men of standing when under arrest, Mr. Wiman had been comfortably lodged by the warden during the night. The shock of the announcement of his arrest was therefore increased when it became known that like an ordinary felon he had been locked up in a common cell. Not a common cell, however. Mr. Wiman had been given the distinction of quarters in "murderers' row." Alone with his thoughts through the night, he had rested as best he might in cell No. 3 on the tier usually occupied by men convicted of murder or sentenced to be executed. Mr. Wiman refuses to be interviewed.

Warden John Fallon, who has charge of the tombs prison, stated Thursday morning that Mr. Wiman had passed a good night and was bearing up bravely under the circumstances. When asked why Mr. Wiman was placed in a cell in "murderers' row," Warden Fallon said it was not for the purpose of subjecting him to any uncalled-for indignity, but it was absolutely necessary owing to the crowded condition of the prison.

SIX MEN KILLED.

Terrible Result of an Explosion in a Mine in New Mexico.

RATON, N. M., Feb. 24.—At 9:30 Thursday morning a terrific explosion occurred in the coal mines at Blossburg, 3 miles southwest of here, and soon a band of rescuers were at work to investigate the amount of damage, and, if possible, give succor to those within. Six bodies have been recovered, and it is believed that two Italians who are missing are in the mines and probably dead. Three others were injured by being burned, bruised or inhaling fire damp.

From the best information obtainable it is probable the explosion was caused by gas in an entry being ignited by a miner's light. It is reported that Joseph Fotheringill, the fire inspector, had but a few minutes before the explosion notified William Graham, the pit boss, that this entry, which is 1 1/4 miles from the opening of the mine, was dangerous on account of being filled with gas. Whether the pit boss forgot to notify the miners or they went into the entry without his seeing them is not known. A coroner's jury has been impaneled and is taking evidence.

Luckily only a few men were in the mines on account of it being a holiday or it is believed over a hundred would have perished. The Blossburg coal mines have been operated the past thirteen years by the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe company and are the largest in the territory.

GROW'S PLURALITY.

He Has 180,133, with Nine Counties to Hear from Officially.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 24.—Official returns from all but nine of the sixty-seven counties in this state send Grow's plurality to 180,133. This is a gain of 47,000 over the plurality given the republican candidate for state treasurer. It is believed the official figures from the nine missing counties will produce increases that will give Grow not less than 185,000 plurality.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The farmers of the country have become alarmed at the suggestion that congress will not make appropriations for continuing the work of the agricultural experiment stations. To urge a continuation of government support for the stations and to combat the proposal to place them under the management of the department of agriculture, George J. H. Brigham, of Delta, O., addressed the house committee on agriculture Thursday. He pointed out the great advantage to farmers of the work done,

BEDLAM IN THE HOUSE.

How Washington's Birthday Was Observed by Statesmen.

The Session the Most Disorderly of the Present Congress—Protests Against Arrest Cause Much Confusion and Sensation.

A HIGH OLD TIME.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The Washington's birthday session of the house Thursday was marked by the most turbulent and disorderly scenes. After the reading of the journal Mr. Pence (Col.), rising to a question of personal privilege, corrected newspaper statements to the effect that members of the populist minority attended the democratic caucus on the 19th.

Mr. Cummings (dem., N. Y.) arose and in a most vigorous manner denounced an attempt made to arrest him. He said:

"This morning at 11 o'clock while on the floor of this house, I was approached by an assistant sergeant-at-arms and informed that I was under arrest. I refused to acknowledge the service, and told him and his bosses to try to arrest me at their peril. I have been on the floor of this house and day after day in my committee rooms three hours before the sergeant-at-arms has been in this capitol and have been here for hours after he has left. I denounce this attempted arrest on Washington's birthday as unbridled tyranny. In the name of the American people I protest against holding a farcical session on this national holiday, and, in honor of the memory of George Washington, I move that this house adjourn."

On a rising vote the motion was lost; 102 to 124. Mr. Cummings demanded the yeas and nays. The republicans and democratic opponents of the bill voted for adjournment, but it was lost, 117 to 140.

Upon the announcement Mr. Reed suggested that the sergeant-at-arms bring to the bar such members as were under arrest. "We ought to have the regular daily jail delivery," he added amid laughter.

Before the sergeant-at-arms could bring the prisoners to the house bar Mr. Sikes moved to adjourn. The sergeant-at-arms was called on to clear the aisles and restore order. Mr. Dockery ruled that the motion was not in order, but finally concluded to put it. Again the motion to adjourn was defeated—107 to 135.

Mr. Blair (rep., N. H.) asked unanimous consent that the clerk, in honor of the day, read to the house the farewell address of Washington. Mr. Pendleton objected.

The chair then stated the question to be upon Mr. Bland's demand for the previous question upon his motion to discharge Mr. Hulick from custody.

As the house was dividing Mr. Sikes (dem., N. Y.) loudly called for recognition. "I am informed," said he, "that I am under arrest. I demand to know by what authority."

The speaker pro tem. ordered Mr. Sikes to take his seat. Mr. Sikes declined to sit down. He said: "If I am under arrest I can be no worse off if I am in contempt. I am under arrest now, sir, and in custody of the sergeant-at-arms."

All this time Mr. Sikes had been standing and the clamor that he should be heard grew so irresistible that he was recognized. "I am informed by the sergeant-at-arms that I am under arrest. I desire to know if this is true. I ask that the report of the sergeant-at-arms be made now." After a wrangle the report was heard.

"I demand a separate trial," said Mr. Sikes, after the reading of the report was concluded. A dozen members were clamoring for recognition. Others were pushing and crowding in the aisle, not paying the slightest heed to the continuous gavel-pounding of the speaker pro tem.

"This is the house of representatives," shouted Mr. Dockery, "not a beer garden. The gentleman will have a separate trial as he desires, but the rules must be observed. The gentleman will take his seat."

It was then decided to call the prisoners in their order.

Mr. Adams (Pa.) came forward, starting the confusion afresh by saying: "I was absent in Pennsylvania exercising the highest right of citizenship, voting to elect a citizen to membership in this house, and I am proud to say I helped roll up a republican majority of over 176,000."

"I move the gentleman be discharged," said Mr. Reed, "and that his name be stricken from the warrant."

"No," interrupted Mr. Sikes loudly. "His name should not be stricken from the warrant. The warrant is null and void. There are no names in the warrant."

This statement created a sensation. Mr. Dockery ordered the warrant to be read. The names of the absentees were not mentioned in it.

The excitement grew apace. Members crowded about Gen. Sikes. The noise and confusion were deafening.

"There ought to be some way of squelching him," shouted Mr. Meredith, but Mr. Sikes stood firm.

Mr. Springer insisted that Mr. Sikes should take his seat.

During all this time Mr. Dockery had been counting the house and at this point he announced that the demand for the previous question had been carried—97 to 0.

Order seemed to be out of the question and in the midst of the din Mr. Bland moved to adjourn. As Mr. Bland, the recognized leader of the fight, had made it, his supporters voted with him. It was carried—132 to 101, and at 3:05 the house closed one of the most disorderly sessions of this congress by adjournment.

HISSED MR. BLAND.

Members of the House Unlike the Missourian's Bitter Words.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 26.—The members of the house under arrest were finally discharged from custody Friday by dispensing with further proceedings under the call. It required four hours to accomplish this and although the scenes of disorderly turbulence which characterized Thursday's proceedings were not repeated Friday the proceedings were fully as interesting.

After the arrested members had been discharged Mr. Bland returned to the silver bill, but his motion failed again for lack of a quorum. He lacked only two votes, however, and this is the high-water mark.

After some preliminary skirmishing the speaker pro tem. declared the pending question to be the motion to discharge Mr. Adams from the custody of the sergeant-at-arms.

Mr. Reed called attention to the fact that the question had not been properly stated. It was to discharge Mr. Adams because the warrant under which he was arrested was unauthorized. Mr. Springer attempted to interpose an amendment, which had for its purpose the discharge of all members under arrest, as the most expeditious way out of the tangle, but Mr. Reed demanded the previous question and he was cut off.

The previous question was voted down—95 to 159. Mr. Bland then offered as a substitute for Mr. Reed's motion a motion to discharge all members arrested by authority of the resolution passed by the house on the 19th inst. Mr. Reed made the point of order that Mr. Bland's amendment was not germane, and the point was argued at some length.

Mr. Bland decided to withdraw his substitute and confine it to the discharge from custody of Mr. Adams. On this modification of his motion he demanded to be heard. He got the floor and delivered a scathing arraignment of his side of the house.

Mr. Bland's speech was sensational in its criticism of the disorder which reigned in the house on Thursday. He declared that the men who are obstructing legislation and defying the house were anarchists and revolutionists. They were worse than the criminal who would throw dynamite bombs from the galleries. There were hisses at this statement which grew louder and culminated in the cries of "shame."

Mr. Bland proceeded in his impassioned utterance. He said mobocracy had taken possession of the house. The mobism of anarchy was being given an object lesson. The anarchist was being invited to parade the streets and commit his deeds of violence. Mr. Bland proceeded with frequent characterization of those members who had obstructed legislation as "anarchists," and "revolutionists."

Mr. Bland said that since the deadlock the suggestion that the speaker should count a quorum had been advanced on the democratic side of the house. Quorum counting, he maintained, was an invitation to absenteeism. It was an invitation to members to go fishing and wandering up and down the earth. He insisted that it was the duty of the house to keep members in their seats. The democratic party had a majority of eighty in the house and ought to do business.

"I don't think it is the duty of the gentleman from Missouri," interjected Mr. Dunn (dem., N. J.) "to lecture the democratic party."

"If that is a lecture," retorted Mr. Bland, "the people will read it to the gentleman and every other man who is now obstructing business to his heart's content. [Democratic applause.] While the opposition has a perfect right to break the quorum, what a spectacle we present to the country, with eighty majority, rising in our congressional dignity and defying the authority of the house! We should proceed to do business or acknowledge our incompetence. If we don't the people will read the riot act to us."

Mr. Bland then drifted into a discussion of the merits of the silver seigniorage bill, which was being opposed by a portion of the democratic majority, in the course of which he was three times called to order by Mr. Coombs (dem., N. Y.).

"I thought the gentlemen on this side," said Mr. Bland, "would realize that they could not afford to be revolutionists and anarchists. I say we should either do business or surrender." [Republican applause and shouts of: "Give it to them!"]

"It will be no outrage for the people to rise up in a mob and cast us down, for we are exercising mobocracy here. If this is a bad bill vote it down. If you want more debate we will give it to you, but to stay here and not vote is simply political suicide."
