THE GRIM DESTROYER

HAS BEEN IN OUR MIDST AND TAKEN TWO OF OUR CITIZENS.

L. E. Sparks and Jacob Stabler Have Gone to Their Reward—Two Tickets Placed in Nomination—They Will Get Their Old Flags—Other Items of Interest.

Leman E. Sparks.
Mr. Leman Erastus Sparks passed quietly away last Sunday morning at eleven o'clock. He had not been well for many months, and his strength gradually failed though he made a heroic struggle for life. Few men could have lived as long as he did with his disease. He became unconscious Friday night and so remained till his death. Mr. Sparks was born at Green, Trumbull Co., Ohio, August 7, 1844. He came to Michigan with his parents thirty-nine years ago next April, and settled at Leoni, Jackson Co. He entered the army in 1862 and fought in Burnside's division of the Army of the Potomac. With it he crossed Cumberland Gap five times. The last fourteen months of his service he was in the hospital. He returned to Leoni. He was married June 16, 1867 to Miss Delia E. Burchard at Sylvan, and resided there for a time, as well as at Leslie and Michigan Center. He first came to Chelsea in September, 1879, and returned here three years ago last August. He leaves a wife, four children, Burchard E., May P., Burnett D. and Erma Belle all of this place, his parents, who are still living at Leoni and one brother in Kalamazoo. Mr. Sparks was known as an upright man, a tireless worker, and one whose influence always counted for every good cause. He united with the Methodist church when only about fourteen. During the war he drifted from his religious faith, but renewed his christian vows by uniting with the Congregational church at Michigan Center twenty years ago. At his death he was a member of the Congregational church of this place. The funeral services were held at his late home Tuesday afternoon, conducted by Rev. W. H. Walker assisted by Dr. Thos. Holmes. "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them."

Jacob Stabler.
The subject of this brief sketch was born in Germany, July 30, 1830. In 1847 he emigrated to this country, residing for a time in Freedom—his life subsequently having been spent in Chelsea. After a month's illness he peacefully passed away to the heavenly home on Saturday, March 2, 1895, at the age of 64 years, 7 mos. and 3 days.

In the death of Mr. Stabler it is universally conceded that our community has lost an honorable, upright and highly esteemed citizen. Caring little for social position or the prominence which wealth or lineage may give, he was rather content to practice the graces and virtues of a quiet home life—his religion being "A psalm of labor—a psalm of love." His constancy and ever devout demeanor at church gave proof that he truly revered the house of God, and highly prized its manifold blessings. He was wholly submissive in the time of suffering. To a friend alluding to the possible approach of death, he replied "I have left all that to the will of God."
He loved his Bible. Morning, noon and night, he perused its holy pages.
At the funeral services held at the Baptist church, Monday, March 4th, a large congregation assembled in token of respect for the departed one, and sympathy for the afflicted family. Services conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Whitcomb. Text, "Neither shall there be any more pain." Rev. 21:4.

A "C" Supper.
The M. E. church society will have a Free-seat Offering at the Town Hall, Wednesday, March 13th. A "C" supper will be served from five until eight, after which a short entertainment will be given. The following will be the bill of fare: Coffee, Cream, Cut-loaf sugar, Crackers, Cheese, Corn beef, Chicken pie, Cold boiled ham, Catsup, Cabbage salad, Cucumber pickles, Chopped pickles, Cornstarch cake, Chocolate cake, Cream cake, Coconut cake, Coffee cake, Cookies, Crullers, Cranberry pie, Custard pie, Currant pie, Calf's foot jelly, Currant jelly, Cranberry jelly, Crabapple jelly, Cold raised biscuits, Corn bread, Creamery butter, Cold boiled eggs, Cold water. Cordial invitation extended to all.

The Way to Vote.

The question of whether the Village shall construct an electric light plant or not will be submitted to the electors at the bottom of the regular ticket, and will be as follows:

Shall the Village of Chelsea avail itself of the provisions of Act 186 of the Public Acts of Michigan, approved July 2, 1891, and construct, operate, and maintain its own Electric Lighting Plant?
[] Yes.
[] No.
The electors that want to vote to have the village bond the town and construct a village plant will make a cross [x] in the square in front of "Yes." Those opposed to the village owning plant will make a cross [x] in the square before the "No."

Three Old Flags.

The Seventeenth, Nineteenth and Twentieth regiments of Michigan volunteer infantry will get back their old war flags. The bill went through the senate the other day, and on Tuesday the house suspended the rules and passed the bill through. It only needs the President's signature and this will be given. The Twentieth regiment will hold its reunion at Chelsea next fall and it has been assured by the authorities that its flags will be on exhibition there before being turned over to the state authorities at Lansing.

Back to His First Love.

There is a queer divorce suit on in the Kent county court. A short time ago Frank Guibert, cabinetmaker, had a wife and two children and they were not friendly, to say the least. Guibert wanted to try farming, and he did, buying a farm near Chelsea, and hiring William Thomas to help him. Then he grew suspicious of Thomas, said unkind things about his wife and Thomas, and finally got a divorce. Mrs. Guibert went to Chicago and there married Thomas. Thomas was no good and he deserted her. Guibert got a divorce from the second woman he married, found his former wife, now Mrs. Thomas, and they proposed to be married again as soon as Mrs. Thomas can get a divorce from Thomas, who has been lately sent up to the works from Grand Rapids as a vag. True love isn't any more a railway than it used to be, and its course is not smooth.

THE MINISTERS WON,

BUT GAVE THE SHOW A BIG ADVERTISEMENT.

Two Alabama Girls Killed for Their Smartness - Trying Period for the Wheat Crop - Awful Accident Near the City of Mexico.

It Packed the House.

The ministers of Port Huron, Mich., succeeded in hiding the startling show bills of a "Black Crook" company which opened there the other evening, but at the same time gave the show a big advertisement. When the bills were posted Monday the ministers appealed to the chief of police to have them removed, but he was powerless. Then they visited Manager L. T. Bennett of the theater, and he consented to have all the tight-clad figures adorned. The garments were made of tissue paper of all sizes and colors. They were deftly pinned on every show bill in the city. Instead of the gay dancers with pink tights one saw the demure girl, of good church society, with neck yokes, puffed sleeves, and flowing skirts. The window hangers were adorned in the same manner. Long tea gowns, Mother Hubbards and loose wrappers concealed the pictures of the pink burlesquers. As a result of the unique advertisements the show had a packed house.

Wheat May Freeze.

The Cincinnati Price Current summarizes the crop situation for the past week as follows: "A trying period for the wheat crop is now inaugurated. Enlarging areas report more apprehension of injury from freezing and thawing in Kansas and Missouri and somewhat in Illinois and Indiana. The average condition has evidently been lowered. There is almost uniform reference to low wheat supplies, and that they are held for better prices. The week's packing of hogs amounted to 370,000, against 300,000 for the corresponding week last year. The indicated total for four months is 7,100,000, against 4,885,000 during a like period in 1894."

Down the Mountain to Death.

An excursion train going into the City of Mexico on the Inter-Oceanic Railroad met with an accident Thursday afternoon. While rounding a curve on the side of a mountain, five coaches jumped the track and went down the canon. Forty-two people were killed, and thirty or more seriously injured. The accident occurred about forty kilometers from the city.

Intended to Frighten Their Beaux.

As a party, the worst for liquor, was returning from a dance at one of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railway Company's mines at Pratt City, Ala., going up the company's tracks a company train came along. All the revelers left the track except Lizzie Binford and Rena Jones, who remained in bravado to frighten their beaux. The train ground them to pieces.

BREVITIES.

It is denied that Mrs. Cleveland has joined the W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Isaac Reynolds, a society leader, dropped dead at Cleveland.

General William Booth was tendered a monster reception at New York previous to his departure for Europe.

General Mason Brayman, aged 81 years, ex-Governor of Idaho and the oldest Mason in the United States, died at the home of his son-in-law in Kansas City, Mo.

Mme. Modjeska, the actress, has been forbidden to appear at the Warsaw Theater in Odessa, because while at Chicago she lectured at the World's Fair on Russia's oppression to Poland.

A bill has been introduced in Congress to appropriate $10,000 for the erection of a monument in memory of the late Commander Timothy Green Benham at Richmond, Staten Island, N. Y.

Mrs. Annie Moody, of Chicago, has begun suit against ex-Congressman Ralph Plumb to recover forty acres of land in the heart of Stretcher, Ill., valued at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

The Southern Pacific Company's (Morgan line) steamer William G. Hewes, from New Orleans, ashore on the Colorado Reef, off Cape San Antonio, probably will prove a total loss. Passengers and crew escaped.

The Japanese minister of war, Count Oyama Iwano, has recalled to Japan all the Japanese officers who have been serving in the German army. The Japanese envoy to Germany, Count Aoki, gave a farewell dinner at Berlin.

Judge John W. Black, of the Second Judicial District of Wyoming, died at the age of 49 years. He was sick but two days, and died of heart failure. He was a native of Maine, served in the civil war, and went to Wyoming in 1875.

The estate of Sarah Towney, or Shea, in New York, valued at $15,000, awaits the claim of the dead woman's son, who went to California fifteen years ago. The will provides that the entire sum shall be spent in searching for him if necessary, and that if he be dead the fortune shall be expended in building him a monument.

The National Council of Women has selected the following officers: President, Mary Lowe Dickinson, New York; vice-president at large, Rev. Anna Shaw, Philadelphia; corresponding secretary, Louise Barnum Robbins, Michigan; first recording secretary, Emiline Burlingame Cheney, Maine; second recording secretary, Mrs. Helen Finley Bristol, Quincy, Ill.; treasurer, Hannah J. Bailey, Maine.

EASTERN.

Patrick McCaffery, a day laborer at Hornellsville, N. Y., has entered a claim for the $500,000 estate left by John McCaffery, who died in Chicago last June without heirs.

At a meeting of the United Labor League of Philadelphia a resolution condemning the police authorities for suppressing the speech of Anarchist Mowbray was adopted.

The annual address at the Vanderbilt University commencement in June will be delivered by Chauncey M. Depew and the sermon will be preached by Dr. A. C. Carmen, general superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada.

An epidemic of grip prevails in Lynn, Mass., to an alarming extent, there being at present at least 500 cases; physicians reported upwards of 200 cases in three days. There have been many fatalities, especially among aged people.

Three men, of whom no description can be obtained, used dynamite to blow off the doors of the Thomaston, Conn., Savings Bank vault at 1 o'clock Friday morning, securing all the cash in the vault. Citizens were aroused by the explosion and were driven back at the muzzle of revolvers in the hands of the men. The bank refuses to give any statement of the loss, except that it was small, but it is known that $200 in gold was taken, besides other cash. The men are supposed to have driven towards Waterbury, but no trace of them has been found. The town has offered a reward of $200.

The romantic side of a wedding a few days ago came to light at Providence, R. I. Thursday afternoon George McLellan Whitney, a commercial traveler for a Boston shoe house, engaged a room at a boarding house, and during the day was introduced to Miss Grace Seavening Grant, daughter of William H. Grant, of Indianapolis, Ind. Twenty minutes after the introduction he was engaged to her and they were married by the Rev. Dr. J. V. Vose, of the Congregational Church, the same afternoon. The young woman is 24 years old and good looking. Whitney is 28 years old.

In his new private quarters in the German Hospital at Philadelphia, Pa., James B. Gentry, the murderer, passed his first Sunday since the shooting of Madge Yorke in an uneventful way. His general condition showed marked improvement, and it is the opinion of the hospital staff that there is no longer any reasonable doubt of his recovery. Gentry has become a lion in a queer way. Women send him flowers by the armload, together with photographs and cologne. The mawkish sentimentality is remarkable. Friends are paying for his private attendance and money is flowing in to Gentry.

Gov. Morton, of New York, thought Friday a most excellent day to sign the flag bill and make it a law. He said it contained nothing but patriotic sentiments and was truly American. It provides: "It shall not be lawful to display the flag or emblem of any foreign country upon any State, county or municipal building; provided, however, that whenever any foreigner shall become the guest of the United States, the State, or any city, upon public proclamation by the Governor or the Mayor of any such city, the flag of the country of which such public guest shall be a citizen may be displayed upon such public buildings."

WESTERN.

C. Farnum & Son, leather dealers of Providence, R. I., have assigned with heavy liabilities. Failure of a State bank led to the suspension.

William Walsh, 60, who lives in a hotel at St. Joseph, Mo., and who is known to keep a great deal of money, was overpowered by six masked men, and under threats of death ordered to reveal the hiding place of his wealth. He stubbornly refused. The robbers finally kindled a fire and his feet were thrust into the flames, but he remained obdurate. The robbers beat him into insensibility, but were obliged to leave without securing his money.

Schulz's wagon works at Dalton, O., were burned Wednesday. Loss, $5,000. Aid sent from Massillon and Wooster prevented the fire from spreading. A business block at Great Falls, Mont., owned by L. G. Phelps, was damaged $15,000 by fire. Two men were arrested on suspicion of incendiarism. At Lowell, Mass., crossed electric wires set fire to the four-story brick building owned and occupied by W. H. I. Hayes as a cigar manufactory. Loss on stock, $50,000. Fire in the basement of the building at St. Louis, Mo., occupied by Friedman Bros. & Schaefer, boot and shoe manufacturers, caused a loss of between $50,000 and $75,000.

The attention of Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, being called to reports that he had some knowledge of the defalcation of Treasurer Taylor of his State, he said that all the information he possessed was that known by other South Dakota men. The day before Christmas Charles McCoy had told him that Taylor was short $100,000, and that it was to be made up, $50,000 to be paid by Taylor's relatives and $50,000 by his bondsmen. "Under these circumstances," added Mr. Pettigrew, "I did not think it wise to make the matter public. There is no truth in the report that I ever borrowed a dollar from Taylor. I never had any financial transactions with him."

Three men supposed to be the burglars who looted the First National Bank of Griswold, Iowa, Sunday night, fought a desperate running battle with deputy sheriffs on the streets of Council Bluffs Monday. It began at the court house yard, where the desperados, who had been passive captives, opened fire and made a break for freedom. In the conflict that followed one of the robbers and one of the deputy sheriffs were probably fatally wounded; another of the gang was captured unharmed, and a third, supposed to be dangerously wounded, succeeded in getting away. The battle raged in many parts of the city, renewed at intervals as the robbers made a stand for an interchange of shots, and then resumed their flight. A stray bullet in one of the fusillades nearly killed a motorman on a passing car, and many other lives were in peril.

Partly devoured by dogs, soaked in kerosene and badly burned, the murdered body of Fred Holzheuter was found at Western avenue and Ninety-fifth street, Chicago, at 9 o'clock Monday morning. The man's skull had been split, his wrists were tied together with cords, and a deliberate attempt had been made to burn the body by pouring kerosene upon it, stacking brushwood about it and setting fire to the pile. To make recognition more difficult, kerosene had been poured over the upturned face and into the mouth of the murdered man. Fred Holzheuter was in the saloon and commission business at No. 3901 Honor street. He was last seen in "Nick" Mertzzen's saloon, No. 3517 South Halsted street, Jan. 30. That day he showed a roll of bills, and told some of his friends he had an engagement with Mertzzen to go to Manhattan Park in the morning and buy some cows.

Driven half crazy by the loss of $880 which had been stolen from her, Mrs. Annie Miller, of Chicago, rushed frantically onto a witness cell at the Harrison street station, striking her head against the stone walls and tearing at her hair and clothing. It was all because Mrs. Miller and her husband do not believe in banks. Miller and his wife have been married twenty years. They had succeeded in saving a good sum of money, which until recently was deposited in a bank. A few weeks ago they became worried as to the safety of their money and determined to take it out of the bank and keep it where they could personally watch it. Mrs. Miller went shopping, and in a restaurant was robbed of her cash, which she carried tied up in a handkerchief. Four years ago Mrs. Miller was robbed of $600 which she had concealed in her dress. This sum had also been taken from a bank because the woman and her husband feared the institution was not safe.

While performing the "human target" act Sunday night at Engel's Pavilion on North Clark street, Chicago, William Haderle, aged 17, was shot and fatally injured by "Prof." Alfred Rieckhoff, "champion rifle shot of the world." Haderle was Rieckhoff's assistant. Strapped across his breast was a steel plate twelve inches square, in the center of which was a bell. Rieckhoff, at a distance of twenty paces, was supposed to fire at the target twenty times in rapid succession, hitting the bell each time. All went well to the twentieth shot, when Haderle threw up his hands and fell to the floor, crying: "My God, I am shot." In an instant the crowded house was in confusion. Women screamed and men jumped on the tables and attempted to reach the stage. The curtain was hastily lowered and the police summoned. A young physician made his way to the stage and a moment's examination was enough to show that Haderle was fatally hurt, the ball having entered his stomach. He was removed to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital. Rieckhoff was arrested and taken to the Larrabee street station.

SOUTHERN.

Mrs. W. T. Leachman, of Louisville, Ky., is trying to establish her claim to an eighty-six-acre tract of land on Broadway, New York. There are over twenty other claimants, among them being Chief Justice Fuller. The claim to the estate, which is worth from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, is based on a grant from King George I.

Three lives were lost and $75,000 worth of property destroyed in a fire at Hot Springs, Ark. The dead: Mrs. Sammon, Mrs. McLeod, unknown lady. The fire originated in a bakery on Ouachita avenue, over which were furnished rooms. Here Mrs. Sammon, who kept the rooms, was burned. There is very little insurance, the loss being practically total.

William Dobbins, a penurious old market gardener of Birmingham, Ala., was the victim of the gold brick sharper Friday to the extent of $6,000. He was so afraid some one else would get hold of the "snap" that he introduced the sharpers as his relatives. He still believes the bricks genuine and says he is going to the New Orleans mint to have them made into coin.

Walter G. Hamner, for twenty years the trusted teller of the Lynchburg, Va., First National Bank, was arrested Sunday charged with embezzling $23,000 of the bank's funds. The bank officers are engaged in making an investigation and will make public an official statement. Hamner is bonded for $15,000, and the bank, which is one of the soundest in the South, will lose only $8,000.

A Henry County, Georgia, farmer named C. B. Cook was held up by a woman in the outskirts of Atlanta Thursday night and robbed of $15. She walked up to him in a dark place, and before he realized her purpose she threw her arms around him, held him with one hand as in a vise, and rifled his pockets with the free hand. Netta Heard has been arrested on suspicion of being the footpad.

Tuesday was the most exciting night in the history of Savannah, Ga. For five hours the city trembled on the verge of religious riots because of the lecture of ex-Priest Slattery on Catholicism. The entire white military force of the city except the artillery was on duty. There were ten infantry companies and the Georgia Hussars, the latter being dismounted. A mob estimated at from 3,000 to 5,000, the greater being Catholics, challenged their forbearance to the extreme. But for the coolness of Mayor Meyers and the officers commanding the troops blood might have been the result. Bystander charges were made several times to clear the streets, but the mob which had gathered about Masonic Temple, one of the prominent buildings of the city and situated in the heart of Savannah, retired only after the most stubborn resistance. Slattery and many of the audience were escorted to the hotel under strong guard.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith has granted permission to Chief Noshirt, Peo, and Young Chief of the Umatilla reservation to go to Washington to ask that money due for reservation lands sold to white settlers be paid to them in cash. Two hundred thousand dollars in the hands of the Interior Department remains to the Indians' credit, $25,000 having been already distributed.

Senator Blackburn, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported an amendment to the naval appropriation bill authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to use other metal than steel or an alloy in the construction of the proposed new torpedo boats. The amendment is made at the suggestion of the Secretary, who desires that the department may be free to avail itself of any improvements in naval construction so far as relates to the material best adapted for use in the building of torpedo boats. He thinks that an alloy lighter than steel may be used.

Some pretty plain Anglo-Saxon language was used by a committee of the House of Representatives Friday in disposing of an application made by a citizen of Michigan for an appropriation of $80,000 to reimburse him for eight acres of land near Portage Lake Harbor of Refuge. There were letters filed from prominent attorneys and others of the vicinity protesting against such a claim being allowed, and Gen. Casey, chief of engineers, put another spoke in the claimant's wheel by declaring the alleged farm to be nothing more than a pile of sand at its best. The Claims Committee declared: "We have no hesitation in saying this claim is the most unblushing attempt to defraud the Government that has ever come under our notice. This statement is made with a knowledge gained by years of experience with this class of claims."

Letters on the subject stated the land in question was absolutely worthless, besides being fully half a mile from the canal. "It is simply an attempt to bleed the Government out of so much money," wrote a correspondent of Congressman Moon, "and furthermore nearly all the land that could have been made available has floated out into Lake Michigan. At the very fairest valuation the land which the claimant asks $80,000 for would not bring $50 at a private or auction sale."

IN GENERAL.

Dr. A. De Martigna, sent by the Quebec Government to investigate Dr. Raux's diphtheria cure, is convinced of its efficacy.

Standard Oil barge No. 58, which parted from the steamer Maverick, off Barnegat, during the blizzard of Feb. 8, has arrived at Bermuda.

Cadets Thomas Mahoney and Thomas Hart, of Michigan, and Arthur Wessels, of Iowa, are imprisoned at Annapolis, Md., on the naval academy ship Santee. The young men are charged with annoying an officer by placing a chemical jar in front of his room.

A little Maltese cat is beating its way around the world without the expenditure of a cent. A tag attached to a cord around its neck tells the story thus: "Came on board at Minneapolis on my trip around the world. Please take the best of care of your passenger. Via Boston, thence to New York steamer, 'Kitty.'" From Minneapolis the kitten went over the "Soo" line to Montreal, via the Concord and Montreal and Boston and Maine to Boston. Friday night it left Boston for New York in care of the baggage men, who will see that it gets to New York via the Fall River line. When it arrives in New York it will be transferred to some ocean steamer.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "The surprising success of the new loan and the great confidence it has given to investors on both sides of the water and to the business men here encourage many to hope that it may be the beginning of a real recovery. In twenty-two minutes at New York subscriptions are supposed to have been at least five times the amount of bonds offered, and in two hours at London they were twenty times the amount there offered. Considering the power which control of these bonds gives to regulate foreign exchanges and to prevent exports of gold, the transaction has indeed greatly changed the financial situation in spite of the fact that government revenues are still deficient and that domestic trade shows scarcely any gain as yet. The industries are not enlarging production, nor have prices of farm products improved. But a very important source of apprehension and hindrance has, for the time at least, been removed."

MARKET REPORTS.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

A Week's Proceedings in the Halls of Congress—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—An Impartial Resume of the Business.

The National Solons.

Appropriations for the maintenance of Indian schools was reduced Friday by the Senate 20 per cent. The bill is still under discussion. Senator Mills has given notice of an amendment to the sundry civil bill to prohibit the further sale of Government bonds. Senator Blackburn has introduced a bill providing for the payment of the full sugar bounty for the crop of 1893. The House considered the proposition to appropriate money to pay marshals for services during the Chicago railroad strike.

An attempt to take up the railroad pooling bill was defeated in the Senate Saturday and the measure is dead for this session. An amendment was offered to the sundry civil bill in the Senate authorizing the President to appoint commissioners to attend an international monetary conference, should one be called. In the House the general deficiency bill was further considered, and eulogies were delivered on the late Senator Vance. A resolution was introduced in the House looking to reversal of its approval of the President's course during the strike. Chairman Reilly reported the bill agreed on by the House committee for settlement of the debt of the Pacific roads.

The deficiency appropriation bill was passed by the House Monday. An amendment to pay Great Britain $425,000 in settlement of the Bering Sea award was defeated. A number of amendments to the tariff law designed to remove ambiguity have been suggested by Secretary Carlisle. President Cleveland is annoyed because Congress has not authorized him to seek a way out of the Samoan entanglement. Ambassador Eustis has been instructed to make a vigorous protest against the exclusion by France of American cattle.

Amendments providing for payment of the sugar bounties prematurely cut off by the tariff law were added to the sundry civil bill in the Senate Tuesday. All the correspondence relative to Samoa since the ratification of the Berlin treaty was sent to the Senate. McGann's railroad arbitration bill was passed by the House without division. Eulogies were delivered on the late General Post. Mr. Fithian made a speech eulogizing Governor Altgeld and condemning President Cleveland for sending troops to Chicago. A minority House committee submitted a report giving their reasons for opposing the Pacific Railroad bill. House and Senate conferees again report their inability to agree on the Hawaiian cable amendment to the sundry civil bill.

After sharp debate in the Senate Wednesday, the financial issue which had blocked the progress of the appropriation bills was swept away by the withdrawal of both Mr. Gorman's amendment and Mr. Mills' proposition to repeal the laws authorizing the issue of bonds. The day was wasted in the House, so far as the purposes for which the day was set aside were concerned, namely, to consider bills reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The conferees reports on the bill to prohibit the importation of goods in bond through the United States into the Mexican free zone, and on the pension and post office appropriation bills, were agreed to. Several pension and other bills of minor importance were passed by unanimous consent.

The Senate Thursday passed the sundry civil bill, including the items appropriating over $5,000,000 for sugar bounties. The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill was also passed. In a speech in the Senate Mr. Chandler declared Senators Murphy, Roach and Martin had been elected by fraud. The House decided to further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the diplomatic bill providing for a cable to Hawaii.

The following incident is said to have happened on a Southern railroad, and is reported in Harper's Magazine. The conductor must have been a humorist.

A traveler had come to the station to board the 11:15 train, and much to his surprise, promptly at 11:15 the train started.

"Well," he said to the conductor, "that worthy passed through the car 'they libel you up North when they say your trains never start on time.'"

"I guess not," said the conductor. "They tell the whole truth. We never got a train off on time yet."

"Why, this train got off on time. It's the 11:15, isn't it?"

"Yes, it's the 11:15, my friend, but it's last Tuesday's 11:15. We're three days late. To-day's 11:15 won't get off much before Monday, I reckon."

Does the Boys Good.

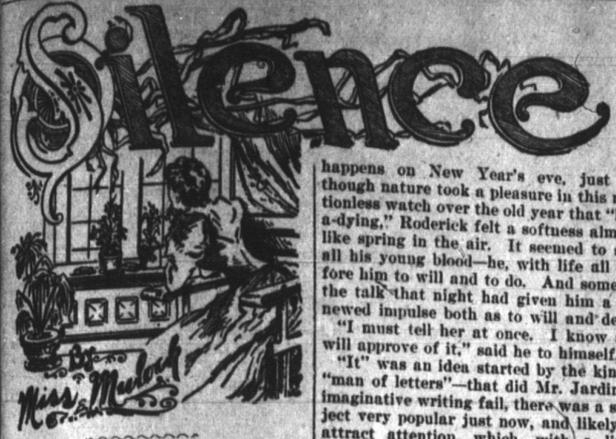

An interesting result of the military instruction at seventy-five or eighty colleges in this country has been the noticeable improvement in the carriage of lads that enter college without previous military training. It is noticeable, too, that the youth at those agricultural colleges that have but recently had enough students to entitle the institutions to have an army officer detailed as military instructor show very better discipline under such instruction than when the department of military tactics was in charge of civilians.

CHAPTER XIV.
When Roderick found his sister had gone, he sat down to write a letter to her. "Good-by and thank you," he looked at the envelope, but neither surprised nor angry. "We will not judge her," was all he said. "We ought not—we that are so happy."
"But there is something beyond both happiness and misery—the question of right and wrong."
"Nevertheless, I still say, 'Judge not, that ye be not judged,' especially in a question of husband and wife. Each individual case has its different aspect, which no outsider can quite understand. My darling, let us say no more about it."
And she knew by his manner that he was determined to say no more about it; she, being a wise woman, she also held her tongue.
But all that evening they seemed to breathe freer—certainly he did—thoroughly enjoying the empty house and the quiet fireside, where there was no need to make conversation, but the two sat together in the sweet unreserved and complete rest of married life, as free as being alone, and yet without any of the dreariness of solitude.
"Nevertheless, I mean you to go out into the world to-morrow night," said Silence. "Have you forgotten the dinner at Symington?"
This was the New Year's eve party which had been discussed before, and which Silence had urged him to accept, as it was half pleasure, half business. A certain "man of letters" (good old-fashioned words, and very appropriate in this case, as contra-distinguished from "man of genius") who had talked much with Roderick at the first dinner, had been rash enough to express a wish to see the rejected novel, now lying, forlorn and dust-enshrined, on the top shelf of the old oaken press. Silence made her husband lift it down, and watched his eye brighten as he turned it over.
"Nothing venture, nothing win," said she, as she rearranged it tenderly and tied it up afresh. "As you say in this very book, dear, 'Take the world at its best, and it will not give you its worst; believe in it, and it will believe in you.'"
"To convict me out of my own mouth, you traitor!" said he, laughing. He had been half inclined to hide his head at home, having grown very weary of late in body and mind, but the light in his wife's eyes lighted up his own courage once more; he consented to do as she wished. "But you, my darling!"
"I shall be glad to get rid of you—I have plenty to do at home."
"Only too much," said he, sighing. "Tell me honestly, was your visitor a trouble to you?"
"Yes, in some ways. But she could not help it, and I did not mind."
"Why did you not tell me?"
She smiled in his face with that half-playful, half-tender, yet wholly determined look she had at times. "Roderick, if you think I shall inform you of all my little household affairs—you, a man with quite enough cares of your own—you are greatly mistaken; I never shall. We will have fair division of labor—you, the bread-winner, I, the bread-dispenser. Did you not once tell me 'Lady' was a Saxon word and meant 'loafer'?" which implies that the wife should manage the house and take care of the money. I intend to do it. I can't do your work, but I should be ashamed of myself if I could not do my own without laying the burden of it upon you, who are—slightly incapable."
Roderick laughed outright. "My queen!—as I used to call you—you are beginning to govern in good earnest. But your husband is not afraid."
"He need not be," she said, softly, taking his hand and kissing it. "He will always be stronger and wiser than I, in his own way. And now go to your grand dinner at Symington."
Though he had not liked going, when he really was there Roderick found he liked it very much. He had always been that best type of his sex—a man whom women appreciate, even as the woman whom men are fond of is certainly the noblest kind of woman. And now that his fate was settled, his wife chosen, his home made, taken his place among men as a man and a citizen, ready to help on the world's work, without doubts or drawbacks, he found his position both pleasant and honorable. Sure of it and of himself, and finding himself among people who evidently neither knew nor cared how much he had a year, and whether he kept two servants or twenty, the young man's spirits rose, and he enjoyed himself heartily—so heartily that it was not until Lady Symington said something about a New Year's gift to his wife, that he remembered what night it was, and how Silence was sitting alone at home. All the party were to wait up together, in Scotch fashion, to see "the old year out and the new year in," but he hastily made his adieu and walked off, rather vexed with himself, and yet not much, since he had good news to bring home. And he knew his wife was not one of those foolish women who exact endless outside observations; she was content to lie safe in his heart, knowing that she was as completely a part of himself as that true heart which went or silently beating, keeping fresh all the springs of life, whether he ever noticed it or not.
Walking rapidly through the starlight on a night, strangely mild and still, as often happens on New Year's eve, just as though nature took a pleasure in this motionless watch over the old year that "lies a-dying." Roderick felt a softness almost like spring in the air. It seemed to stir all his young blood—he, with life all before him to will and to do. And some of the talk that night had given him a renewed impulse both as to will and deed. "I must tell her at once. I know she will approve of it," said he to himself.

"It" was an idea started by the kindly "man of letters"—that did Mr. Jardine's imaginative writing fail, there was a subject very popular just now, and likely to attract attention, which, with a little pains, he might examine, read up for, and write about, so as to make an excellent quarterly article, sure of at least a moderate audience. The first step on the ladder, which, if taken cautiously and firmly, might lead him either by literature or politics, or both, to the very top.
"Pain would I climb, but that I fear to fall."
Only she will never say to me
"If thy heart fail thee, do not climb at all."
She would keep my heart up so that I could not fall. Bless her! I am sure of that.
So thinking, he came to his own door, stepping lightly across the grassy lawn, half in boyish mischief to look in at the parlor window—she liked to keep her light visible—and see what his wife was doing now the household has all gone to bed.
Sitting quietly and alone, beside her a pretty box of sandalwood, which looked like a present, for it had a Christmas card on the top, she was emptying it, layer after layer, and spreading its contents on her lap. Only little clothes—the little clothes that women and mothers think the prettiest in all the world. One after the other she unfolded them, putting her fingers through the tiny empty sleeves, looking at them admiringly, smilingly, and yet again with a strange sadness. All at once Roderick called to mind what Lady Symington had said to him, and her tone of saying it; he had been full of his own affairs just then, and had not noticed much else, but now, as he slipped quietly in-doors, and kneeling down beside his wife, helped her to examine her New Year's gift—man as he was—it touched him deeply.
"And the little fellow only lived seven years, yet his mother has remembered him all this while! Poor Lady Symington!"
He said it with a curious awe, as with his slightly awkward fingers he helped his wife to refold the wonderful little garments, and replace them, as they had lain, untouched, for nearly forty years. Then they put the box away and sat down by the fire, hand in hand, and he told her all his new hopes, new ambitions—the life that somehow seemed opening before him, if only he had strength to carry it out.
"I shall do nothing rashly. 'Authorship,' they say, 'is a capital stick, but a very bad crutch.' I shall stick to the mill at present. But you were right to send me away to-night. It does me good to have something beyond the mill, to mix with men and feel myself one of them, with life all before me, and power to do my work in it, with what poor old Tommy Moore calls, conceitedly,
"The mind that burns within me,
And pure smiles from thee at home."
That quiet home smile, serene and pure, it beamed upon him now, and his whole heart was satisfied.
"This is the first new year we ever spent together, my wife. Shall we go outside and greet it in the open air, as is our Scotch fashion? My father always did so, and my mother, too—my poor mother!" he sighed. "I wonder whether Bella's being with us will do good or harm? whether they will be thinking of me just now? We always had a grand family gathering at Hogmanay—my two elder sisters, their husbands and children. They never cared for me much; I was a mere boy when they married. Still, to have quite forsaken me! Well, well, I wish them all a happy new year—my 'ain folk,' as we say in Scotland."
Silence had no "ain folk"—only two far-away graves—but she had her husband. He and she walked up and down in front of the ball-door talking of this and that, and especially of his work in the future, which seemed already to have taken a strong hold on his imagination, till in the dead stillness the distant stable clock at Symington was heard beginning to strike twelve.
Until then there had not been a breath stirring, the night was so wonderfully calm and mild, and dusk rather than dark; the half moon, slowly sloping westward behind the house, still showed faintly the belt of trees round the lawn, and even the dim outline of the distant hills. Above, the sky was parseme—no English word expresses it—with myriads of stars. When the last stroke of the clock ceased, there seemed to descend from it, right down from these mysterious stars, a sough of wind equally mysterious. It rustled through the tree-tops, wandered round the house, and then passed away into stillness, almost like a living thing.
"Listen, listen, Roderick!"
"It is the sough of the air—the old year's last breath. I have often noticed it, and heard other people notice it, too. And now—our new year is begun. May it be a very happy one to you—to us—my darling!"
He kissed her, and then seeing how quiet and passive she was, made a little innocent joke, about not being able to add the usual Scotch wish of "a happy New Year, and afore the end on't," and must she had already got her "man," and must make the best of him, bad as he was, to the end of the chapter.
"Which is such a long way off, my love. Quite alarming. Only to think that thirty, forty, even fifty years hence, you and I may be standing—two old people, old and gray-headed—under these very stars. I remember looking up at them this time last year, and thinking of you, and wondering if we should ever be married."

"You were 'in love' with me then; you love me now. And you will love me even when I am 'old and gray-headed' as you say. I shall love you, Roderick, even when you are an elderly gentleman, and not handsome at all. Nothing on earth could ever part us; nothing—nothing—"
"What is wrong, dear? Are you cold? We will go in."
"No; wait—just one minute."
He wrapped her closely in his plaid, and she nestled in his arms, but still kept gazing up, far up, into that mystic floor of heaven, where, though we see it every night of our lives, never loses its wonder, glory, and beauty.
"I should like to live to be an old woman; I should like us both to be old, and yet love one another as dearly as when we were young. It makes one feel immortal, this love. I should like, as you say, fifty years hence to stand with you under these stars, feeling that nothing could kill our love—or us. But if things were to be different; if this time next year I am—not here, but away—beyond the stars!"
"What do you mean?"
She turned upon him those eyes of hers—"heavenly eyes" he had called them since the day he first saw them on the Terrace at Berne.
"I may die this spring. Sometimes, you know, women do."
He shivered, but violently controlled himself.
"Yes, I know that; but—you are not afraid?"
"No, I am afraid of nothing—neither life nor death—now. And I would have died, if I might have chosen—died gladly! to have been for this one year—this one happy year—my Roderick's wife, and—his child's mother."
There was such a rapture in her face, that whatever dread her words might have aroused in him sunk down. It was one of those supreme moments when two who are wholly united, as these were, feel that no real parting is possible, that "whatever happens" (as people say), they are one through all eternity.
"Hush!" Roderick said at last, in a broken voice. "God knows best. Let us leave it all."
And then taking her in-doors, he declared that the first of January was no time for moonlight rambles, and that he should abolish them altogether till the summer nights came.
Which seemed a long way off now; for not unusual in the north,
"As the days lengthened,
So the cold strengthened, and a long frost and snow shut up Silence entirely within her own peaceful home. A dull time to most people; but nothing ever seemed to make her dull. Not even when some weeks after Bella's departure, her husband was restless and troubled, evidently expecting some news which never came. One formal letter of thanks, announcing her safe arrival, a month after date, but explaining nothing further, was all Mrs. Alexander Thomson vouchsafed to her brother and sister. She never mentioned her mother at all.
"Evidently Blackhall is tabooed," said he, with a bitter laugh. "Never mind, my darling. Let us give it up, and not vex ourselves about the inevitable."
And by that she knew how, until this moment, he had not given it up; had never ceased to hope and crave for something—the one blessing which no man gets twice in a life-time. He may have as many wives and children as fate allows; he never can have two mothers.
But—and some mothers would do well to remember this—when a man has a wife and his home, his interests and his work, he does not mourn eternally; as Roderick said, he "accepts the inevitable," and turns his mind to other things. Though the young Jardines had a shut-up and rather lonely life, it was anything but an idle one. The MS. novel came back once more—alas! historical novels always do come back nowadays—but the "solid" article did not, until it had become transmuted into a bundle of those delightful proof-sheets which raise into the seventh heaven of happiness young authors, and even old authors can hardly see, without a certain thrill of pleasure, a faint reflection of the time when, as now with Roderick,
"The world was all before them, which to choose;
Reason their guard and Providence their guide."
And both reason and Providence seemed to have taken in charge this young author. Roderick had "no nonsense about him." He did not start in literature with a picturesque and imaginative view of his own deservings, and how they were to be appreciated; he worked heartily at whatever came to his hand to do, and consequently he did good work. It might not have been the highest work, or the utmost he was capable of doing—Silence often thought so. She copied his MSS., taught herself to criticize them fairly, to see all the faults she could, "in order to prevent the world from seeing them," as she one day said.
"You see, dear, if you had to be killed, I would much rather kill you myself than let another person do it."
At which he laughed heartily and submitted to all fault-finding and subsequent correction with the best grace in the world. "Who knows! Such a severe domestic critic ought to make me a celebrated author in no time. I think I will begin another magnum opus—not a novel, though; and by working at all leisure moments I may finish it before the year is out."
"Before the year is out," repeated Silence, softly. "Yes, yes; but will you not begin it now?"
And she not only got him to begin it, but she kept him steadily at it, copying in the mornings what he wrote over night, and arranging all that he had to "read up," according to his literary friend's orders, so as to give him the least trouble possible. It was hard work, but the mill-work happened to be slack just then, and Mr. Black was very kind and friendly—touchingly so. And thus, from day to day, Roderick's time was kept full, and his mind also.

MANY DIE IN A MINE.

TWENTY-SIX KILLED IN A LOS CERRILLOS, N. M., SHAFT.

Forty-two Miners Entombed by a Fearful Gas Explosion—Caught in a Trap the Workmen Are Blown to Pieces or Suffocated by Smoke.

Death Roll May Increase.
A frightful explosion of gas in the White Ash coal mine, three miles southeast of Los Cerrillos, N. M., occurred at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, and as a result many homes in the valley are desolate. Twenty-six miners are known to have been killed, and eleven have been taken out alive. But these are more or less bruised or burned, and the death roll may increase. This mine is the soft coal producer of the valley and is operated by the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company. From it all markets south of the place, including the Southern Pacific and Mexican Central Railways, are supplied. The output averages sixty cars per day.

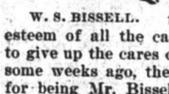

The mine has four levels, which branch off from the inclined shaft, and the men were at work scattered in all of them. The fact that there is 3,400 feet of working and no air shaft accounts for the accumulating of the gas, and for three hours after the explosion the deadly vapor poured forth from the single entry in such volume as to indicate that the mine had caught fire. When this was announced as a probability the pitiful cries of both men and women who had gathered around the entry were heartrending. Frankie wives, many of them carrying babies in their arms, having children clinging to their skirts, or to them, stood at the entrance of the mine for hours amid tears and prayers, watching and waiting, while hundreds of men vainly struggled to gain an entrance further into the mine.

Usually 160 miners are employed in the Ash shaft, but the day being Ash Wednesday there were only forty-two men inside at the time of the explosion. Five of these made their way to the outside before the gas reached them. Some of the bodies taken out were burned almost to a cinder and others so badly mangled and burned that recognition has been very difficult. It is thought the explosion was caused by the miners breaking through into some old abandoned working, thus liberating the gas that had accumulated. The mine was worked through a single incline of 30 degrees, and seems to have been defective as respects ventilation.

GIVES UP HIS OFFICE.

Postmaster General Bissell to Return to His Law Practice in Buffalo.

The President has accepted the resignation of Postmaster General Bissell, and has nominated Representative William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, to be his successor. This change in the cabinet has been decided upon for some time. Postmaster General Bissell, a Washington dispatch says, retires from office on the best terms with the President and with the confidence and esteem of all the cabinet. His decision to give up the cares of office was reached some weeks ago, the chief reason therefor being Mr. Bissell's unwillingness to sacrifice more time and money for the honor of holding a seat in the cabinet. He has been influenced to a large extent by the discovery that a considerable share of the law business of the firm in Buffalo of which he is still a member is drifting into other hands, and Mr. Bissell thinks it time for him to return home for the purpose of looking after his own interests. He is not by any means a wealthy man, and his expenditures in Washington have amounted to at least three times his salary as a cabinet officer, more than swallowing up his salary and his private income together.

Governor O. Vincent Coffin, of Connecticut, is said to be the best-dressed executive that the State has had for many years. He is very popular with the clerks and employes at the capitol at Hartford.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

SERIOUS SUBJECTS CAREFULLY CONSIDERED.

A Scholarly Exposition of the Lesson—Thoughts Worthy of Calm Reflection—Half an Hour's Study of the Scriptures—Time Well Spent.

Lesson for March 10.
Golden Text.—"Seek ye first the kingdom of God."—Matt. 6: 33.

The Rich Young Ruler is the subject for this lesson—Mark 10: 17-27.
Here comes another man who wishes to do something that he may inherit eternal life. Indeed, this one seems so like the lawyer who called forth from our Saviour's lips the story of the Good Samaritan, recently studied (Luke 10: 25-37) that we might be inclined to think them one and the same person, were it not for the fact that Matthew in his gospel describes both interviews and distinctly separates them (Matt. 19: 16, and Matt. 22: 35). In the case of the young man considered in the lesson before us the motive seems to have been higher and nobler. But the failure to close with our Lord's overture seems on this account all the more sad. May it warn and at the same time win many of our young men to-day.

Points in the Lesson.
Christ loves the young. He has just proven it in the verses preceding by taking up a child in his arms and caressing it. He goes yet further to prove it by beholding (Greek, looking at) a young man, and loving him. O, that look of love! How could the young man resist it? How can you? And yet the young man first sought the Lord. He came running. There is a right as well as a wrong impulse in the soul. Is it a relic of Eden? The lower nature dominates, but there is a sweet instinct in the soul, apparent most of all in childhood, that lifts the eye and the hand heavenward. There is not enough in it to save us, but just enough to bring us thoughtfully into the way where Jesus is standing waiting and ready to impart his own efficient spirit of complete devotion.

"Good Master," cried the young man, and in that he spoke well. "There is none good, but one," quoth Christ, "that is God." O, why did not the young man take the blessed clue and go and cry out and soul-surrender, like Peter, "And thou art God! Thou art the Son of the living God!" But it was just this positive and affirmative committal that he was unwilling to make. He seems a worthy young man on the negative side. "All these have I observed," he said, "from my youth." But notice the negatives: "Do not commit adultery. Do not kill. Do not steal"—not, not, all the way. It was Old Testament piety, merely, not the positive faith and fealty of the new dispensation. Our Lord tells him at once his fatal lack. "Come out," he says in effect. "Make a plain and open surrender to the new kingdom of righteousness, sell what you have, break with the old and come, take up the cross and follow me." What was that cross? The connection clearly indicates. It was his wealth of the giving up of his wealth. What is your cross? The thing you are not willing to give up for Jesus' sake. Give it up and it is a cross no longer; it resembles a crown rather.

And he went away sad and sorrowful. There were two people that were deeply grieved here, three indeed. The young man was grieved because in his own way, without a positive and public committal of all he was and all he had to the Lord, he could not obtain what seemed so desirable. The Saviour was grieved because he could see what the young man was turning his back upon, for he had greater riches to impart.
Hints and Illustrations.
A lesson for young men. Christ wants the young men. His heart yearns toward them. Looking upon them he loves them. Will they not love him in return? Plainly a large per cent. of our young men in this country are not Christians and evidently also a large per cent. do not attend church worship. Why do they not go to church? Mr. Bok, editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, has been recently trying to tell us, in the Cosmopolitan. A young man himself, and with warm sympathies for young men, he has chosen to take the side of the pew rather than the pulpit—the empty pew. It has seemed to him that the preaching of the day is too dry, or distant or dismal. There is too much talk about the prodigal son, and sins from which ordinary social restraints will withhold self-respecting youth. One reply that has been rendered to this statement of the case is that it is a simple though honest plea for the ethical guild, the moralistic conscience, and it forgets that the carnal heart is in enmity against God, naturally so. To such a one rules of moral behavior are more acceptable than the preaching of a self-denying cross. The young man who came to Christ would probably have come again had not Christ put the question of sinful unbelief and of personal cross-bearing so closely to him. Undoubtedly if the pulpit would go to preaching ethics and the improving of the moral nature, and would clothe that preaching in persuasive doctrines, it would have a larger following—at the first at least. But just this Paul said he would not do. He spoke of the human heart as prodigal and sinful, and of the necessity of new birth by the power of the Holy Ghost. Let preachers and teachers in this clamorous day of criticism note Paul's words, "And I brethren when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God. For I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." Keep on telling the story of Jesus. It is sure to win, whilst it winnows. It is the one message that will call out those who are the Lord's. Sing the song and in due time get the token of lost souls found.

Die!, Wednesday, February 27th, Adam Seigrist, aged 72 years. Mr. Seigrist had been a resident of this town about three years. The funeral was held at the M. E. church Saturday. He was buried at Bancroft Monday.

Thanks.

For the third time within two years, by a fatality to us inexpressibly sad, we are placed under a solemn obligation to tender our deepest gratitude and heartfelt thanks to our neighbors and friends for their sympathy and aid during the long illness of our dear little Charlie.

We have been deeply affected by the intense interest his many friends and associates have manifested in his sad case. They have spared neither time nor means to procure for him every device to tempt his appetite and every device to cheer his drooping spirits.

We know that Charlie's unfeigned appreciation of all these generous favors will be a sufficient reward to his friends, yet we who are left desire them to know that we are not unmindful of these tokens of their regard and love.

While we sincerely hope the day may be far distant when a similar experience on the part of any may afford us an opportunity to repay them, yet if by some misfortune the occasion should arise, it will be eagerly embraced.

To his kind teachers and classmates we tender especial thanks for their presence in a body, and their beautiful floral tribute on the occasion of his funeral, and we recognize them as touching evidences of their esteem and love. JAMES TAYLOR AND FAMILY.

The new street lights were turned on Saturday night. They are a success. Now, as quickly as possible, the number should be increased to 30 or 35. This number would light the town well. We have the cheapest lighting in the United States. It is only $5 per lamp per month, every night, all night, 2,000 candle power arc lamps.—Grand Traverse Herald.

Union City became tired of paying contractors a big price for the use of an electric light plant, and the common council finally decided to purchase it. Five thousand dollars was the price paid, for which 5 per cent bonds have been issued. The town also owes $20,000 on account of her water works. The council propose to double the present street lighting service, by placing a 32-candle light at every street intersection. The commercial circuit will also be greatly increased.—Detroit Journal.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy gives the best satisfaction of any cough medicine I handle, and as a seller leads all other preparations in this market. I recommend it because it is the best medicine I ever handled for coughs, colds and croup. A. W. BALDRIDGE, Millersville, Ill. For sale by F. P. Glazier & Co. Bank Drug Store.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery, for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed.—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys, Bucklin's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them, and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at F. P. Glazier & Co.'s drug store.

"Perhaps you would not think so, but a very large proportion of diseases in New York comes from carelessness about catching cold," says Dr. Cyrus Edson. "It is such a simple thing and so common that very few people, unless it is a case of pneumonia, pay any attention to a cold. There are a great many cases of catarrh and consumption which have their origin in this neglect of the simplest precaution of every day life. The most sensible advice is, when you have one, get rid of it as soon as possible. By all means do not neglect it." Dr. Edson does not tell you how to cure a cold but we will. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It will relieve the lungs, aid expectoration, open the secretions and soon effect a permanent cure. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by F. P. Glazier & Co., Bank Drug Store.

Worth Knowing.

Many thousand people have found a friend in Bacon's Celery King.

If you have never used this great specific for the prevailing maladies of the age, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, Costiveness, Nervous Exhaustion, Nervous Prostration, Sleeplessness and all diseases arising from derangement of the stomach, liver and kidneys, we would be pleased to give you a package of this great nerve tonic free of charge. F. P. Glazier & Co., Bank Drug Store.

A severe rheumatic pain in the left shoulder had troubled Mr. J. H. Loper, a well known druggist of Des Moines, Iowa, for over six months. At times the pain was so severe that he could not lift anything. With all he could do he could not get rid of it until he applied Chamberlain's Pain Balm. "I only made three applications of it," he says, "and have since been free from all pain." He now recommends it to persons similarly afflicted. It is for sale by F. P. Glazier & Co., Bank Drug Store.

A New York clergyman, Rev. Madison C. Peters, gave his congregation these wholesome truths on a recent Sunday: "The wealth of this nation is in the hands of the few, and these few are marrying off their daughters to titled nobles. This is the most successful way of making a nation poor. A marriage for money or title is a humiliation to the dust; a hollow mockery that blushes to heaven. Most men as a rule marry for love; the royal scoundrels always for money. With them Cupid has changed his name to Cupidity. There is no record of an international marriage, where hard cash was the consideration for empty titles, that did not end unhappily. Yet ambitious fathers and managing mothers and heartless daughters are constantly playing the same unlucky game."

The following paragraph, going the rounds of the papers, is certainly worth thinking over: "Whisper a slander to your friend and although you stand upon the hill the next day and proclaim with a loud voice that it was not so, you cannot call the bad story back. If you have no pity for those who did you wrong, have a little self respect and don't gossip about them. In the majority of cases they are innocent as you are, but some evil minded persons started a report that found believers. People who do wrong are punished enough even if there is no gossip about them."

Eclipse of the Moon.
The moon will pass through the earth's shadow and be totally eclipsed Sunday evening, March 10, the phenomenon being visible entire to North and South America, the Atlantic, and more or less to Europe, Africa, and the eastern Pacific Ocean. As the eclipse will be of considerable magnitude, its duration being nearly the longest possible, it will be an interesting spectacle, well worth observing, should the sky be favorable. It will also be the privilege of observers to view the exhibition without any optical assistance whatever, and all will be able to witness the imposing spectacle with advantages equal to those enjoyed by the professional astronomer in his well-equipped observatory. The total phase will continue a little more than one hour and a half. Over the eastern portion of the country the eclipse will begin on the evening of March 10 and end on the following morning, but the various phases will occur earlier the farther the place of observation is located westward from the Atlantic coast. In the extreme west the eclipse will begin near sunset, the moon rising immersed in the earth's shadow and appearing dimmed, as if covered with a dark veil.—Detroit Free Press.

Marvelous Results.
From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderson, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at Rives Junction she was brought down with pneumonia, succeeding a gripe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in its results." Trial bottles free at F. P. Glazier & Co.'s drug store. Regular size fifty cents and one dollar.

AN ALPENA MIRACLE. STARVING IN OHIO.

MRS. JAS. M. TODD, OF LONG RAPIDS, DISCARDS HER CRUTCHES.

In an interview with a Reporter She Reviews Her Experience and Tells the Real Cause of the Miracle.

(From the Argus, Alpena, Mich.)

We have long known Mrs. Jas. M. Todd, of Long Rapids, Alpena County, Mich. She has been a sad cripple. Many of her friends know the story of her recovery; for the benefit of those who do not we publish it to-day.

Eight years ago she was taken with nervous prostration, and in a few months with muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. It affected her heart, then her head. Her feet became so swollen she could wear nothing on them; her hands were drawn all out of shape. Her eyes were swollen shut more than half the time, her knee joints terribly swollen and for eighteen months she had to be held up to be dressed. One limb became entirely helpless, and the skin was so dry and cracked that it would bleed. During these eight years she had been treated by a score of physicians, and has also spent much time at Ann Arbor under best medical advice. All said her trouble was brought on by hard work and that medicine would not cure, and that rest was the only thing which would ease her. After going to live with her daughter she became entirely helpless and could not even raise her arms to cover herself at night. The interesting part of the story follows in her own words:

"I was urged to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and at last did so. In three days after I commenced taking Pink Pills I could sit up and dress myself, and after using them six weeks I went home and commenced working. I continued taking the pills, until now I begin to forget my crutches, and can go up and down steps without aid. I am truly a living wonder, walking out of doors without assistance.

"Now, if I can say anything to induce those who have suffered as I have to try Pink Pills I shall gladly do so. If other like sufferers will try Pink Pills according to directions they will have reason to thank God for creating men who are able to conquer that terrible disease, rheumatism. I have in my own neighborhood recommended Pink Pills for the after effects of the grippe, and weak women with impure blood, and with good results."

Mrs. Todd is very strong in her faith in the curative powers of Pink Pills, and says they have brought a poor, helpless cripple back to do her own milking, churning, washing, sewing, knitting, and in fact about all of her household duties, thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c. per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

THE DISTRESS AND SUFFERING AMONG IDLE MINERS.

Sorrow and Want Stalk Through the Hocking Valley—An Appeal for Aid Which Has Not Been in Vain—Relief Supplies Pouring In.

Need Food and Clothes.

In the Hocking and Sunday Creek valleys of the Ohio, where prosperity and happiness once held sway, backed by healthy industry and good fellowship, at least 10,000 miners and their families are now destitute and dependent entirely upon charity, and their condition is so serious that starvation must come to some ere relief can reach them. Hunger and sorrow and suffering have taken the places of wealth, happiness and health. The miners' troubles began about a year ago. There was some difficulty with the mine operators regarding wages and the workmen struck. The strike continued for weeks and months, until all the savings of the miners and the unions were exhausted. During the last part of May the difficulty was settled and the miners returned to work, the operators agreeing to pay 60 cents a ton to miners in Ohio and 65 cents in Pennsylvania. Presently the operators of Pennsylvania violated this part of the agreement and refused to pay more than 55 cents a ton. This gave them a chance to underbid the Ohio operators and work began to be slack in Ohio.

Things went from bad to worse in the Hocking and Sunday Creek valleys. The miners had been in the custom of receiving their pay in the form of "scrip" good for purchases at the company's stores.

MINING SCENE IN THE HOCKING VALLEY.

When work began to slacken the stores carried the men on their books for a time, hoping for better times. But finally this was no longer possible and the miners were refused credit. The miners of this part of Ohio are noted for their proud spirit. Their earnings had always been good, thus keeping them above every want, and their spirits had never been crushed by reverses. So when they found themselves in so serious a plight they were too proud to ask aid, until finally they were practically on the verge of starvation. So far people outside of the immediately affected district had no idea how bad was the condition of the miners. The first inkling they had was Jan. 8, when a delegation from the Hocking Valley Trades Assembly called on Gov. McKinley and stated to him the facts of the case, and asked for aid.

A Generous Response.

Gov. McKinley immediately ordered a carload of provisions sent to Nelsonville, the Columbus Board of Trade assuming the expense. Carload after carload of supplies has since been sent to the sufferers in response to urgent requests, until to-day the number of loads is nearly a score.

The present indications are that it will be necessary to send several carloads of provisions into the valley every week for not less than three months, and possibly longer. It was the first intention of Gov. McKinley to issue a general appeal to the people of the State for contributions. He decided, however, not to do so at once, but to call on the various cities in turn as general as possible, and then to issue a general appeal if it should become necessary. His idea in this method of procedure was to preclude the possibility of there being a great flood of contributions sent into the valleys, which might encourage waste and exhaust the supply before the time of need had passed.

The capital city, as before stated, was the first to respond. Then Cincinnati was called upon by the Governor, and the Chamber of Commerce of that city sent seven carloads to the sufferers, John McLean, of that city, alone contributing $1,000 worth of flour to the district of distress. The city of Cleveland gracefully came into line; Toledo followed, with Chillicothe, the ancient capital, abreast, and Dayton came next. Since then there were generous contributions from many other points, and the situation is now much brighter, although there is not yet any permanent improvement, inasmuch as there can be no final solution of the dis-treasing problem until there is a general revival of the mining industry of the valleys. There is now no promise of this.

The miners are largely of Scotch and Irish descent, and above the average in the matter of intelligence. However, there are many foreigners of low origin among them, and to these are charged almost all the acts of violence committed. During the strikes there are often desperate measures brought into play by the miners. Railroad bridges have been burned, trains held, militia companies taken captive, and almost everything but outright theft or downright murder resorted to. When there are no ruptures between the mine operators and miners the coal sections are notable for peace and decorum.

The articles of food given out to the miners and their families are bread in case of immediate need, flour if the applicant has facilities for and is able to bake it, side meats, beans, hominy, coffee, sugar, rice, crackers and cheese. Of course each applicant does not receive all of this variety, as the distribution of supplies must be governed by the character of the articles contributed. In many instances it is found by committees of the churches

The Feudal Sentiment.

I shall probably be charged with exaggeration if I say that the recent aristocratic development in the United States, with its truly mediaeval inequality between the classes, is in no small measure due to the recrudescence of the feudal ideal among us, which is again, in a measure, due to the romantic fiction that our youth of both sexes consume. It is the feudal sentiment of good Sir Walter and his successors which makes our daughters despise the democracy which their fathers founded, and dream of baronial castles, parks, and coronets, and a marriage with a British peer as the goal of their ambitions.

It is the same feudal sentiment which makes their mothers share and encourage their aspirations and equip them, in Paris, with all the ethereal ammunition required for the English campaign. Half the novels they read glorify these things, and it would be a wonder if the perpetual glorification did not produce its effect. For the idea that literature of amusement is a neutral agency which affects you neither for good nor for ill is a pernicious fallacy. What you read, especially in youth, will enter into your mental substance, and will and must increase or impair your efficiency. Much you will outgrow, no doubt, but there always remains a deposit in the mind which you will never outgrow.

It is therefore of the utmost importance that that which you read should tend to put you in rapport with the present industrial age, in which, whether you like it or not, you have to live, rather than with a remote feudalism, whose ideals were essentially barbaric, and certainly cruder and less humane than ours.—H. H. Boyesen, in The Forum.

The late M. Duruy, the French Academician, was Sardou's schoolmaster, and it appears that the dramatist-to-be was a refractory pupil. Once when his teacher chided him for not taking an interest in Egyptian history Sardou answered: "As a pupil I think I ought to know what suits me best and what does not."

In the man whose childhood has known caresses and kindness there is always a fiber of memory that can be touched to gentle issues.—George Elliot.

March April May

Purify Your Blood

And the Best Blood Purifier is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Which Purifies, Vitalizes and Enriches the Blood.

At this season every one should take a good spring medicine. Your blood must be purified or you will be neglecting your health. There is a cry from Nature for help, and unless there is prompt and satisfactory response you will be liable to serious illness.

This demand can only be met by the purifying, enriching and elements to be found in Hood's Sarsaparilla.

My mother-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Wolfe, at the age of 72 years, was attacked with a violent form of salt rheum; it spread all over her body, and her hands and limbs were dreadful to look at. At the same time my little daughter Clara, who was just one year old, was attacked by a similar disease, like scrofula. It appeared in large sores, which disfigured each side of her neck; we had the attendance of the family physician and other doctors for a long time, but seemed to grow worse. I read of many people cured of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla. As soon as we gave Hood's Sarsaparilla to Clara she began to get better, and before the first bottle was gone the sores entirely healed up, and there has never been any sign of the disease since. She is a Healthy, Robust Child.

Her grandmother took Hood's Sarsaparilla at the same time, and the salt rheum decreased in its violence and a perfect cure was soon effected. It took about three months for her cure, and she ascribes her good health and strength at her advanced age to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has certainly been a godsend to my family." A Solicitous Bird.
One of the most interesting birds of southeastern Asia is the baya. This bird's distinguishing characteristic is its wonderful skill as a nest builder, and in this it seems only to further the comfort of the female bird and its young. The home of these birds is a two-story three-room nest, which is suspended from a limb or secreted in the eaves of a cottage. There is an entrance at the bottom to a large room where the whole family gather when the young have been hatched. Above this are two rooms, one where the female lays her eggs and hatches them, the other is the bed-room of the male. Curious as this nest may seem, its most remarkable feature is its wall decorations. No sooner is the nest completed than the male goes away and catches fireflies, which he confines in the woven mass without killing them. The walls of his wife's chamber are brilliantly lighted up by these living lamps. Moreover, the living room and even the outside of the nest is also decorated in the same way, and a more beautiful decoration was never used by man. When a firefly dies its body is cast out and a fresh one put in its place.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only medicinal cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence

The lower house of the fifty-fourth congress will be a legislative kindergarten. But the pupils are precocious and the assemblage is rich with promise. It might not be a bad idea for Mr. Cleveland to call them together early to give the many new men time to learn some of the mysteries of statesmanship. Of the three hundred and fifty-six members-elect to the house, one hundred and sixty-two have never before served in congress. Only twenty-seven of the men entirely without congressional experience are democrats. The republican majority will, therefore, be composed of one hundred thirty-five raw recruits and only one hundred and six veterans. Should the recruits take it into their heads to mutiny and run things in their own way they would have a majority of twenty-nine in the republican caucus and could do exactly as they pleased. If the veteran republicans absented themselves from the house the new men of that party would outnumber all the democrats in the house by a majority of thirty-one. If report be true, there are some original characters among the army of new men, and they will be unruly, as well as inexperienced. Some in districts the republicans had not the least idea of carrying were nominated as a joke, or because of some trait that gave them a local reputation for peculiarity. On this principle an itinerant doctor and vendor of patent medicines was nominated in one district, and in another a music teacher and piano tuner was nominated. Both took nominations as a sort of advertisement, and both were elected. Both may make excellent representatives. Among the new members are many young men, and not a few are men who have made money in business or speculation, and took the nomination because it would give them some distinction. It is decidedly a new house. Not only is it new but it is unknown. A very large proportion of the recruits are entirely unknown outside of their own neighborhoods. Secretary Gresham has decided that he will make no further effort to induce congress to pass the bill appropriating $425,000 to pay damages sustained by British sealing vessels seized by our naval ships in Bering sea before the making of the modus vivendi. He will proceed to draw up a treaty for submission to the senate, creating an arbitration commission to adjust the claims. The United States will have no other course open than this, for we should be dishonored among nations if we failed to carry out the obligations imposed upon us by our voluntary act in submitting the sealing question to the Paris arbitration. The Secretary believes that if all these claims are submitted to a commission for adjustment the United States will fare much worse than under the terms of the pending bill, but Congress in this as in many other instances shows an utter disregard of practical economy.

Senator Hill went in a roundabout way to the capitol the other morning. He walked down the park side of Lafayette place to take a cable car. This brought him in front of the White House. He was evidently in good spirits and not in a reflective mood, till he saw the White House. At the first sight his restless eyes caromed off and struck the state, war and navy building. But there have been a magnet in the White House, for in a moment his eyes returned to it. They became fixed. So he did. His hands were thrust deep in his overcoat pockets. His cane was under his right arm and on the horizontal. His head was bent slightly forward. Several persons who knew him passed and nodded. But he saw them not. His cable car came up and passed unnoticed. Suddenly there came from his lips an eloquent sigh as one could wish to hear. A look of sadness came into his face. But hope must have chased the sadness away, for a smile appeared in its stead. Then he boarded the next car and disappeared without another look at the cherished mansion in white. ington. That Frederick Douglas was one of the great men of the country, measuring magnitude by the influence which he enabled to exert through a long and memorable contention, cannot be questioned. He may not have been at all times discreet, adroit or diplomatic in the formulation of policies on which to conduct the cause to which he consecrated himself at an early period in life, but in the shaping of events which finally culminated in the triumph of the abolition crusade no leader in the fight was more potent. Douglas, of course, lacked the scholarship of Wendell Phillips and the masterful rhetoric of Lloyd Garrison, but the eloquence which he did possess, and which was felt in two hemispheres for a generation or more, was of such apostolic earnestness that it asserted over the sympathies of mankind an almost resistless spell. He who had been a whipped slave was capable of sending a thrill of emotion through the very platform from which he spoke. The end came at last. Frederick Douglas retired from the front and settled down in his cottage on the outskirts of Washington. He became a thrifty man of affairs and accumulated valuable property. But he never lost his interest in the cause of human suffrage as having no limitations in color or sex.

The National Council of Women has been in session here for over a week. It is a great convention, and nearly all the old war-mares of the women's suffrage movement are in evidence. I fancy the few old-fashioned people who have never really seen our modern advanced women would be surprised to know that Miss Susan B. Anthony is one of the best dressed women in America. Her clothes are very best of their kind, well made, and perfectly fitted. There is always an air of natural elegance about Miss Anthony that is delightful to contemplate and this faithful old high priest of the movement looks for many years yet.

Mortgage Sale.

Whereas default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage dated the 15th day of February, A. D. 1876, made and executed by Richard M. Nowland and Frances Nowland, his wife, of Ypsilanti, state of Michigan, to Luther James, of the township of Lima, county of Washtenaw, state aforesaid, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of said county of Washtenaw in said state of Michigan, on the 24th day of February, A. D. 1876, in Liber 51 of mortgages on page 615, which said mortgage was duly assigned by Thomas S. Sears and Lewis W. James, executors of the last will and testament of said Luther James, deceased, to James L. Babcock, by assignment thereof dated the 28th day of August, A. D. 1893, and recorded in the office of the register of deeds for said Washtenaw county, on the 28th day of December, A. D. 1894, in Liber 12 of Assignments of Mortgages on page 70, by which the power of sale in said mortgage has become operative and, whereas, there is now claimed to be due the sum of two thousand two hundred eighty-six dollars and fifty-five cents ($2,286.55) for principal and interest and thirty-five dollars as an attorney fee as provided by law, and whereas no suit or proceeding at law or in equity, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and the laws of this state, on Monday, the 25th day of March, A. D. 1895, at 12 o'clock noon at the east front door of the court house, in the city of Ann Arbor, county of Washtenaw, State of Michigan (that being the place where the circuit court for said county of Washtenaw is held,) I will sell at public vendue to the highest bidder the lands and premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as shall be necessary to satisfy the said amount due. Interest, costs and expenses of said sale, said premises being situated in the township of Ypsilanti in the county of Washtenaw and state of Michigan, and described as follows to-wit: being the south half of the south-east quarter of section number nineteen (19) in township number three (3) south of range number seven (7) east, containing eighty acres of land more or less. Dated Chelsea, Michigan, December 26, 1894.
