FARM CROP REPORTS

SECRETARY MORTON IS HAM PERED BY LACK OF FUNDS

Recognizes that the Present System Is Faulty, but Does Not See His Way Clear to Make Any Radical Changes Without Finances.

Has No Money.

Secretary Morton and Statistician Robertson have not yet had an opportunity to consider the recommendations made by the various representatives of the commercial organizations which recently presented plans looking to more accurate crop reports by the Department of Agriculture. While the suggestions of the commercial men may be taken into consideration, and some of them adopted, the department has already considered plans for improving the service and has found that the trouble lies in the fact that there is not sufficient money to carry out any method of reform that would greatly improve the service. Statistician Robertson says that it would not be best to abolish the State agents while there are still but a limited number of reporters in each county. He thinks it well to increase the number of reporters, but this is something that the department had under consideration.

Millers Forced to Assign.

The North Dakota Milling Association of Grand Forks, N. D., owning and operating twelve flouring mills in North Dakota and Northern Minnesota, made an assignment Thursday afternoon to William F. Honey, of Park River, N. D., as assignee for North Dakota, and A. D. Stephens, of Crookston, Minn., as assignee for Minnesota. The officers of the association are: President, Hugh Thompson, Crookston, Minn.; vice-president. John M. Turner, Grand Forks; secretary and treasurer, George F. Honey, Grand Forks. It is said the assignment was caused by an attachment levied upon the association for $100,000 by the Mandan Roller Mill Company, to secure the payment of a note given for that sum by the association, through General Manager Turner. Other debts amounting to $26, 000 are pressing, of which $20,000 is open accounts and $6,000 due the First National Bank of Mandan. Approximately the assets are $700,000; liabilities, $400, 000. This association is organized under the laws of New Jersey. It owns and operates mills at Mandan, Bismarck, Casselton, Mayville, Park River, Northwood, Minto, Milton and Grand Forks, N. D. and at Moorehead, Crookston and Fisher, Minn. The attachment and mismanagement are causes of the assignment. The assignee will continue the general offices in Grand Forks until the affairs of the association are closed up.

James W. Scott, proprietor of The Times-Herald and Chicago Evening Post, died suddenly of apoplexy Sunday afternoon in his apartments at the Holland Honse in New York. Mrs. Scott and her roung niece, Grace Hatch, were with him when he died.

Women have entered the ranks of day laborers and are proving themselves so efficient they receive higher wages than have been paid men for the same class of work. Half a dozen Welsh women began work last week in the rolling mill of the Monongahela tin plate works at Pittsburg. They receive the plates as they come from the rolls and separate the black sheets. This work heretofore has been done wholly by men. It is hard and rough. The women wear great leather shields on their hands, leather aprons and hob-nailed shoes to protect them from the heat and metal. The women are paid $1.50 a day. Men received for the same work $1.85. The forewoman gets $1.75. This is the first time women have been employed at such work in this country.

Chief Justice Albert H. Horton, of the Kansas Supreme Court, has resigned. Judge David Martin, of Atchison, has been appointed to succeed him.

An unknown man, while waiting for a train on the platform of the Lake Street Elevated road in Chicago, fell off the structure and was almost instantly killed. William Headrick, wanted in Ohio, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky for bigamy, has been arrested at Middles boro, Ky., on a charge of horse stealing. Seven deserted wives are on his track. Headrick's method was to travel about the country, and when he found a woman with money he would marry her. Then, as soon as he could get her money in his possession he would desert her.

Georgetown, Tex., dispatch: The last train load of meal-fed cattle for this season will be shipped from here Wednesday, and there will be no grass-fed cattle to ship this summer on account of drouth. The supply of stock cattle on hand to be fed next winter on cottonseed meal is 25 per cent. less than last year. Prominent cattle men do not attribute the rise in beef to any combination, but to the supply of cattle, which has fallen off greatly during the past two years on account of the drouth.

The body of Jefferson Davis, Jr., was reinterred Friday afternoon beside that of his father. Young Davis died in Memphis a few years ago of yellow fever. Mrs. Davis and Miss Winnie came on from New York to the interment. They were joined at Richmond by Mr. James Richardson, of New Orleans, to whom Miss Davis is said to be engaged to be married. Simple religious services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Hartley Carmichael, rector of Old St. Paul's. On the bier rested a silk Confederate flag, the same used when the body of Jefferson Davis was interred. All the dead Davis children are now interred at Hollywood.

WASHINGTON.

The Treasury Department has decided that it has no power to extend the time for making income tax returns.

The sale of postage stamps for the last quarter of 1894 was the largest ever known and indicates a revival of business. The Interior Department has overruled former decisions in holding an acting assistant or contract surgeon during the civil war has not performed such military service as entitles him to a pension under the act of June 27, 1890.

Secretary Morton reports that there is a shortage of about 300,000 head of cattle for slaughter; and to check the tendency to excessive prices for dressed beef, without injuring the interests of the producer, has ordered the free admission at certain California and Texas ports of properly inspected cattle from Mexico.

ate battle followed and, according to offi-cial reports, lasted two hours. At the end of that time the rebels retreated, were pursued by the Spanish troops and Maceo captured. His secretary was also taken and all the personal and private papers of the rebel leader confiscated. The battle was a hard-fought one, and the insurgents battled desperately against odds. The Spanish soldiers resisted with remdykable panish soldiers resisted with remarkable courage the onslaught of the rebels. In a hand-to-hand conflict a number of Cuban officers, one of whom was a colonel, were killed.

If Nicaragua's counter proposition to Great Britain for the submission of the whole question in dispute to arbitration has been rejected by the latter Government, as reported, administration officials will expect another strong appeal for assistance from the weak republic. The whole question has now reached an acute stage and no one at the State Department ventures to predict what the outcome will be. Nicaragua cannot well afford at the present time to pay the $75,000 indemnity demanded without borrowing the money. There has been much talk from Nicaraguan sources about the necessity for ceding Corn Island to Great Britain in lieu of the indemnity. This talk may be only a trick on the part of Nicaragua to force the United States into coming to her res cue. Although Nicaragua might of her own motion suggest the cession of Corn Island to Great Britain as a means of escaping the payment of the indemnity demanded, such action would nevertheless be indirectly the result of coercion on the part of Great Britain. Hence the authorities would consider a move of this kind a violation of the Monroe doctrine and, as one official remarked, the administration would be compelled to step in and prevent by force, if necessary, the consummation of any such deal. This is no doubt what Nicaragua would like.

IN GENERAL

Seven A. R. U. men at Fergus Falls were found guilty of obstructing the mail during the Great Northern strike last April. They were fined $100 each, on the installment plan.

Between 700 and 800 negro families have recently arrived from the United States at Tiahualilo, State of Durango Mexico, as colonists under the Federal concession granted to W. H. Ellis, an American citizen.

The jury in the case of Anna F. Dickinson, for confinement in an insane asylum, against Dr. Underwood, Dr. Hillman, John M. Bryden, George B. Thompson and others, after being out for seventeen hours, was discharged, not being able to agree.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Progress toward better business continues, but it is slow and meets many obstacles. In speculative aspects and in wholesale demand for goods the week shows improvement. Money markets are undisturbed and a little more active. But among the chief obstacles is the anxiety of operatives to secure better wages, even while many manufacturing works are running without profit and others at the risk of loss. In a number of establishments better wages have been conceded, thus increasing the purchasing power of the people, but strikes have largely overbalanced settlements, several of importance having thrown about 12. 000 workers out of employment this week. Retail trade has improved on the whole since March. Eighteen months from the present time, when the frisky calf of to-day is ready for the slaughter house there will be a fall in the present high price of beef, whether purchased on the hoof or at retail. This assertion is borne out not only by the assertions of the interested packers of Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis and Kansas City but by the statistics prepared quarterly by the Government concerning the shipping, receiving and killing of cattle in the four American cities which control the delivery of beef dressed or on the hoof to the remainder of the country and Europe. The statement that a combine among the four principal packers of the West has caused the increased prices is indignantly denied by them, and the devastated grass and sage brush ranges of the West pointed to as irrefutable evidence of the absolute lack of cattle in comparison with the demand.

The Hotel Raymond at Pasadena, ten miles from Los Angeles, Cal., was destroyed by fire at 3:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Not a stick of the famous resort is left. The hotel was crowded with tourists, but they all escaped with their lives, although wardrobes and other possessions were consumed. The Raymond was one of the most famous health and pleasure resorts in the United States. It was located on a hill commanding a magnificent view of the San Gabriel Valley, and cost over $1,000,000.

Policeman Charles J. Poole, of the Desplaines street station, Chicago, has been suspended from duty and orders have been issued for his arrest. Circumstantial evidence gathered by detectives from central and Desplaines street stations indicates the policeman was connected in some way with the gang of burglars of which Clarence White, alia's "Whitey, is the head. White is now under bonds on charges of participation in the Ream and Keith burglaries and the evidence against Policeman Poole is regarded by Assistant Chief Ross and Inspectors Shea and Lewis as strong.

With enthusiastic cheers, the author of "Linsey Woolsey," Mr. Joseph Arthur, was called before the curtain on Monday evening, after the second act of the play at McVicker's Chicago theater. It was the first presentation on any stage of the production, and it scored an immediate success. It was a novelty in every way. Hypnotism had never been seen on the stage before in a Chicago theater, and the audience at first did not know how to take it, but the acting was so superb that but one verdict could be given. The stage settings are beautiful and the many different mechanical effects were foudly applauded. A laughable incident is the riding of a bucking horse by an English groom who gets thrown into a hog-wallow. Another incident is the parade of the volunteer fire department and the Fourth of July celebration. The play from start to finish as a success

A dispatch to the London Times from Shanghai says Li Hung Chang's son-inlaw telegraphs that a peace convention was signed at Shimonoseki Monday by the plenipotentiaries of China and Japan. Following are the terms of the convention:

The independence of Corea. 2. That Japan retains the places she has

6. An offensive and defensive alliance United States Consul General de Kay, at Berlin, reports that Dr. Louis Waldstein, of New York, has discovered the means of curing consumption, lupus and perhaps cancer. The doctor announces in the German'medical papers an extraordi nary action of minute injections of pilocarpine, a crystallized extract from the Brazilian jaborandi plant, on the lymphatic system. This, in a sense, completes the celebrated "heil serum," acting favorably on patients whom the serum does not cure. The key of the discovery is this: By successive injections of minute doses of pilocarpine in the veins he arrives at gradual stimulation of the lymphatic system. That system increases the white corpuscles in the blood, which, in some way not agreed upon, certainly overcomes particles in the blood that produce disease. The report closes with a statement of a case of lupus of twenty-two years' duration, regarded as incurable, which was relieved immediately after the first injection and is now almost cured.

A dispatch from Shanghai to a London news agency says that a proclamation bearing the emperor's name has been issued describing the empire as finished and asserting that he is unable to govern any longer and that the officials he trusted are corrupt. It is added that the proclamation has caused great excitement and that there are signs of rebellion. The document, however, is said to be the work of the secret societies. Little doubt is felt at the State Department in Wasington that the proclamation posted in Shanghai announcing that the Ohinese empire is finished is really the work of the secret societies, for there is no record in history of the voluntary abdication of a Chinese emperor. It is said that these secret societies, aimed at the existence of the present dynasty, are numerically strong in the central provinces, and it is apprehended that upon the conclusion of peace their ranks will be swelled by the disbanded soldiers influenced by the Hunan, or war, party, and that sporadic revolutionary movements may be expected in arious parts of the country.

Chairman Harvey of the Bimetallic Longue Replies to the President.

W. H. Harvey, chairman of the ex-scutive committee of the Bimetallic League, has prepared a reply to the Pres-ident's letter to the Chicago committee of ousiness men. It says in part:

"In reply to your letter sddressed to the committee of business men of this city, we wish to say that the committee that waited on you, and the persons who attached their names to the invitation did not represent the majority of business men and citizens in this city who take a ep interest in the welfare of the republic. They represented that class that owns money and securities payable in fixed incomes. We respectfully submit that your letter does not present the true merits of the controversy. You call the attention of the farmers and the wage earners to the fact that the rising prices, while enabling them to sell their products and labor at higher prices, will also cause them to pay equally more for what they may purchase, but you neglect to say that your statement is not applicable to debts. With prices coming down regularly and steadily since the demonetization of silver, our merchants, manufacturers and people generally have been doing business on a falling market, so that the time intervening between their purchase of their merchandise or raw material and placing it months after on the market, removing the margin they would have had otherwise. This shrinkage in values added to the ordinary risk and expense in business, has led to the over-increasing volume of debt-to the money lending period-until it has increased all told, public and private, to about forty billions of dollars, or about two-thirds the total value of all the property in the United States. Money, and those debts payable in money have been steadily increasing in exchangeable value with the property of the people. Taxes have increased as expressed in dollars and have doubled and quadrupled as measured in the property people surrender with which to pay it since 1873. We have constantly pointed the people to the ever-increasing exchangeable value of the creditors' dollar, and to the reason why it was increased, but the influences of these creditors have dominated your administration and you insist on such currency as they have established as a sound currency. We respectfully submit that it was the intention of the founders of this Government that it was safer that all people should do the thinking for it than that any one class should do it for them. We but express your own opinion as President of the people when we say that all people should have an opportunity to investigate and intelligently pass

TEXT OF HIS LETTER TO THE RISE IN PRICE OF MEAT DUE TO WORK OF THE STATE LEGISLA-

The President Very Plainly Defines His Position on the Silver Question. -Is Unquestionably in Favor of "Sound Money."

Following is the text of President Cleveland's reply to the invitation of Chicago business men to address a meeting to be held there ratifying the President's attitude on the money question:

Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C.-To Messrs. Wm. T. Baker, George W. Smith, John A. Boche, T. W. Harvey, David Keily, and Henry S. Robbins: Gentlemen-I am much gratified by the exceedingly kind and complimentary invitation you have tendered me on behalf of many citizens of Chicago to be their guest at a gathering in the interest of sound money and wholesome financial doctrine.

doctrine. My attachment to this cause is so great and I know so well the hospitality and kind-ness of the people of Chicago that my per-sonal inclination is strongly in favor of ac-cepting your flattering invitation, but my judgment and my estimate of the properties of my official place oblige me to forego the enjoyment of participating in the occasion you contemplate. I hope, however, the event will mark the beginning of an earnest and aggressive ef-fort to disseminate among the people safe and prudent financial ideas. Nothing more important can engage the attention of pa-important can engage the attention of pa-triotic citizens, because nothing is so vital to the welfare of our fellow countrymen and to the strength, prosperity and honor of our

The situation confonting us demands that those who appreciate the importance of this subject, and those who ought to be the first to see impending danger, should no longer remain indifferent or overconfident.

Sound-Money Sentiment.

Sound-Money Sentiment. If the sound-money sentiment abroad in the land is to save us from mischlef and dis-aster it must be crystallized and combined and made immediately active. It is danger-ous to overlook the fact that a large num-ber of our people, with scant opportunity, thus far, to examine the question in all its aspects, have nevertheless been ingeniously pressed with specious suggestions, which in time of misfortune and depression find will-ing listeners prepared to give credence to any scheme which is plausibly presented as a remedy for their unfortunate condition. What is now needed more than anything else is a plain and simple presentation of the argument in favor of sound money. In other words, it is a time for the American people to reason together as members of a great nawords, it is a time for the American people to reason together as members of a great na-tion, which can promise them a continuance of protection and safety only so long as its solvency is unsuspected and honor unsullied and the soundness of its money unques-tioned. These things are ill-changed for the illusions of a debased currency and ground-less hope of advantages to be gained by a disregard of our financial credit and com-mercial standing among the nations of the world.

If our people were isolated from all others, and if the question of our commal others, and if the question of our currency could be teated without regard to our relations to other countries, its character would be a matter of comparatively little importance. If the American people were only concerned in the maintenance of their precious life among themselves they might return to the old days of barter, and in this primitive manner acquire from each other the materials to supply the wants of their existence. But if American civilization is satisfied with this it would abjectly fall in its high and noble Packers Deny that a Combination Has Been Formed to Corner the Product. -Long Drought Has Proved Destructive on Ranges in the West.

Eighteen months from the present time, then the frisky calf of to-day is ready for the slaughter house and the packing in-dustry or an exhibit on a butcher's marble slab, there will be a fall in the present. high price of beef, whether purchased on the hoof or at retail. This assertion is borne out not only by the assertions of the interested packers of Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis and Kansas City, but by the statistics prepared quarterly by the Government concerning the shipping, receiving and killing of cattle in the four American cities which control the delivery of beef dressed or on the hoof to the remainder of the country and Europe. The statement that a combine among the four principal packers of the West has caused the increased prices is indignantly denied by them.

Clay Robinson & Co., from the Union Stock Yards of Chicago, have issued a circular referring to the cattle scarcity, in which they estimate the shortage at 40 per cent. for the whole country in comparison with 1894. The same estimate, is made by Cal Favorite, of Armour & Co., and is partially sustained by the figures of the Government given out in January of this year. These figures show the number of cattle in the United States, being a comparison of January, 1895, with January, 1894. In beef cattle the decrease in the whole number in the country was 2,243,953, or 6 per cent.

Large Decrease Shown.

The Government cattle report includes all classes and grades, while the estimate of the Chicago packers as to the decrease is in reference only to cattle fit for immediate sale. By the Government report it is shown that the decrease in cattle in Nebraska has been 18 per cent. since 1894, 16 per cent. since 1893, and 18 per cent. since 1892. In Wyoming the decrease is 9 per cent. since 1894 and 29 per cent. as compared with 1892. In Tez. as a decrease of 7 per cent. since 1894, 5 per cent. since 1893, and 12 per cent since 1892. Montana has lost 4 per cent. since 1893, 5 per cent. since 1892. The State gained 2 per cent. in comparison with 1894. Iowa's loss is 6 per cent. since 1894, 5 per cent. since 1893 and 6 per cent. since 1892. Colorado has lost 6 per cent. in comparison with 1894 and gained 12 as compared with 1893.

If the coming scarcity of cattle had not been foreshadowed by the January Government report data of a similar nature would not be lacking now. For the week ending March 30 the decrease in the receipts of cattle at the Chicago stock yards a comparison with the same week in 1894 was 8,583 head. Since Jan. 1 there have been received at the stock yards 572,857 head, a decrease of 119,068 for the same period in 1894. Shipments during the same period of time decreased 51,080 head and the actual slaughter 66,970 head. The figures are official. On April 11 the estimated shortage in the receipts of cattle at the Union Stock Yards since Jan. 1 in comparison with the receipts for the same period in 1894 was 270,000 head. The shortage in pounds of dressed beef for the same period was estimated to be 175.000.-000 pounds, or an average of 2,000,000 pounds decrease a day. On the same day

The Law-Makers.

Strong language was used in the lower house of the Legislature Thursday during the discussion on the Aplin liquor bill. The bill provided for a uniform license o f$400 on both whisky and beer and per-mitted dealers to keep open saloon on election days and the civil holidays of the year. Discussion was warmest apon an amendment to make the tax uniform at 500. Representative Chamberlain, of Gogebic, declared that the amendment would lose the Upper Peninsula to the Republican party, and in reply was told by other Upper Peninsula members that he was telling a faisehood. The consideration of the bill occupied the entire after-noon. A large lobby representing the Brewers' Association was behind the bill, but the beer interests received a complete defeat, the House passing the bill as amended by a vote of 72 to 22, and struck out all reference to the opening of saloons on holidays.

That the cause of civil service is making great headway was shown in the Michigan Legislature Friday, when the Wildey bill providing for the creation of a civil service commission for the examination of applicants for clerkships in the State departments was favorably reported by a House committee. The opponents of the State Board of Health in the Legislature have been making some pretty broad charges against Secretary Baker and the management of the department generally. Representative Campbell, who has faith in the capability and integrity of Secretary Baker, secured the adoption of a resolution to investigate the affairs of the board.

The bill-permitting the new Detroit Railway Company to occupy the tracks of the Citizens' Company within certain limits was favorably reported in the House Wednesday, and, despite the determined opposition of the representatives of the latter company, the final consideration of the bill was made the special order for Thursday. Both companies have maintained powerful and extensive lobbies for weeks, and their presence has practically demoralized legislation. It is desire to rid themselves of this lobby that makes the legislators so determined to dispose of the matter. The House has killed the bill changing the county seat of Emmet County from Harbor Springs to Petoskey. The bill providing that convicts in Jackson prison be employed at diking the river in the vicinity of the prison and improving the sewerage facilities has been reported without recommendation. Gov. Rich has appointed Claude W. Case and Arthur A. Henderson, of Newberry; Henry W. Jones, of Houghton; George L. Loupe, of Bessemer; Charles T. Fairburn, of Ishpeming, and Theodore W. Burdick, of Sault Ste. Merie, trustees of the Upper Peninsula Asylum for the Insane.

The Denver open air meeting addressed Tuesday afternoon by the silver champions was the largest ever assembled in that city. Congressman Sibley was the first speaker, and plunged deeply into the subject at the very beginning. He adrised the debasement of partisanship and the elevation of patriotism. Frantic appeals have been made to educate the people in regard to "sound money," but he thought there were so many people who needed education in that way that the goldites had a hopeless task and one that was daily becoming more so. The speaker told many amusing stories illustrating the points made, but the burden of the entire speech was that it was necessary to unite if hope was to be entertained for the ultimate redemption of silver. "Shake off party spells," he said, "and unite under the free silver banner, not as Republicans, not as Democrats, nor yet as Populists, but as free-born American citizens."

He warned his earers against putting their trust in an international conference, "As well," he said, "for our protection friends to proe an international conference on the tariff. Both speakers were frequently interrupted with bursts of applause.

HAVOC ALONG THE MERRIMAC.

New England Rivers Overflow and Spread Destruction.

The most terrible flood since that of 1869 has inundated the valleys of Connecticut and the reports that have begun to come in show that it has been particularly disastrous. More than fifty families in Concord alone are practically homeless. The waters that have overflowed the banks of the Merrimac are eddying through their homes and they have been abandoned. A score of buildings have been washed away and carried down the river on the flood. More than 300 persons were taken from upper floor windows in boats and carried to the uplands. Along the line of the Concord and Montreal Railroad enormous damage has been done by the washing away of tracks and rolling stock.

Twenty-five houses in the village of Huntonville have been washed away and the Merrimac at that point is six miles wide and sixty feet deep. Much stock has been drowned. The Granite Railroad Company has lost all its tracks and rolling stock. The twin bridges at Boscawen are gone and at Seawall's Falls the water is thirty feet deep.

Not a spindle or loom is working along

Temptation of the Farmer.

In these restless days the farmer is tempt-ed by the assurance that, though our cur-rency may be debased, redundant and uncertain, such a situation will improve the price of his products. Let us remind him that he must buy as well as sell; that his dreams of plenty are shaded by the cer-tainty that if the price of the things he has to sell is nominally enhanced, the cost of the things he must buy will not remain sta-tionary; that the best prices which cheap claims are unsubstantial and elusmoney pr ive, and that even if they were real and palpable, he must necessarly be left far be-hind in the race for their enjoyment. It ought not to be difficult to convince the wage earner that if there were benefits arising earner that if there were benefits arising from a degenerated currency, they would reach him least of all and last of all. In an unhealthy stimulation of prices an increased cost of all the needs of his home must be long his portion, while he is at the same time vexed with vanishing visions of increased wages and an easier lot. The pages of his-tory and experience are full of this lesson. An insidious attempt is made to create a prejudice against the advocates of a safe and sound currency by the insinuation, more or less directly made, that they belong to financial and business classes and are there-fore not only out of sympathy with the comfore not only out of sympathy with the com mon people of the land but for selfish and wicked purposes are willing to sacrifice the interests of those outside their circle. I believe that capital and wealth through combinations and other means, sometimes gain an undue advantage; and it must be conceded that the maintenance of a sound currency may, in a sense, be invested with a greater or less importance to individuals ac-cording to their condition and circumstances. cording to their condition and circumstances. It is, however, only a difference in degree, since it is utterly impossible that any one in our broad land, rich or poor, whatever may be his occupation, whether dwelling in a center of finance and commerce or in a remote corner of our domain, can be really beneficial to all our people, or that any one should be excluded from a common and uni-versal interest in the safe character and ver al interest in the safe character and value of the currency of the country.

All in Business.

In our relation to this question, we are all in business, for we all buy and sell; so we all have to do with financial operations, for we all earn money and spend it.' We can not escape our interdependence. Merchants and dealers are in every neighborhood, and market are in every neighborhood, and not escape our interdependence. Merchants and dealers are in every neighborhood, and each has its shops and manufactories. Wherever the wants of man exist, business and finance, in some degree, are found, re-lated in one direction to those whose wants they supply and in another to the more ex-tensive business and finance to which they are tributary. A fluctuation in prices at the veaboard is known the same day or hour in the remotest hamlet. The discredit or de-preciation in financial centers of any form of money in the hands of the people is a signal of immediate loss everywhere. If reckless discontent and wild experiment should sweep our currency from its safe sup-port, the most defenseless of all who suffer in that time of distress and national dis-credit will be the poor, as they reckon their loss in their scanty support, and the laborer and workingman as he sees the money he has received for his toll shrink and shrivel in his hand when he tenders it for the neces-saries to supply his humble home. Disguise it as we may, the line of battle is drawn between the forces of safe currency and those of sliver monometallism. I will not helieve that if our people are afforded an intalizent believe that if our people are afforded an iligent opportunity for sober second not believe that if our people are afforded an intelligent opportunity for sober second thought they will sanction schemes that, however cloaked, mean disaster and confu-sion, nor that they will consent by under-mining the foundation of a safe currency to endanger the beneficent character and pur-poses of their government. Yours very truly, GROVER CLEVELAND.

Cal Favorite, speaking for Armour & Co., said: "The Big Four is a mythical organization. I do not know that it exists. If you view the situation in the light of an actual shortage of marketable cattle existing-40 per cent. less than a year ago in the whole country-it is not difficult to explain why there is a scarcity in beef and higher prices. It is simply impossible for us to get choice cattle in any uantity."

P. D. Armour said: "The Western ranges have been denuded of cattle, and I believe it will take four or five years to have a reduction in the prevailing beef prices. The scarcity of cattle, in my opinion, will continue for that length of time. I do not see how it is to be avoided. Months and years will be required to restore to the barren ranges the catle which once kept the supply ahead of the demand. The situation is the logical end of a series of disasters on the cattle ranges and destruction of crops needed for feeding purposes."

Comparative tables were secured showng the figures of the receipts, shipments and killings in the Chicago, South Omaha, Kansas City and East St. Louis markets for the three months ending March 30, 1895, with the same periods in 1894. These are the tables:

A Fast Runner.

In a recent article on sprinting Walter C. Dohm tells the following story to show how fast a man can really cover ground:

I have in mind, he writes, the case of a well-known athlete who once surprised a number of people by showing them how great a man's speed really is. The young man in question was passing from one car to another of a train in motion, when a gust of wind blew off his new hat. Without thinking of the risk he incurred, he grasped the rall of the platform, swung to the ground with the dexterity of an old. train hand, dashed back a few steps to where the hat lay, and almost before the astonished pasengers could get their heads stretched out of the windows was in pursuit of the rear end of the train, which had just passed. Very wonderful it seemed to the spectators of the strange race between muscle and steam when the sprinter, after a hard race, grasped the rear rail and swung himself, panting but triumphant, to the platform. ' No one knew he was a champion runner. They thought only of the fact that the train was rolling along at the rate of eighteen or twenty miles per hour, and wondered how he did it. And one stout old gentleman declared he never saw anything like it before in his life.

The Umbrella on the Congo. No article sent out to the Congo state, where there are forty millions of people and any number of small potentates, s so popular or sells so readily for a large sum as the huge gay umbrella, of which Brussels now produces tons every year. These umbrellas are in a certain sense the insignia of royalty: that is, they are much prized by the black kinglets who sit beneath their grateful shade. What the canopy used to be to the traveling monarchs in the time of the Crusades the umbrella is to the innumerable feudal chieftains of the Congo.

Barbara smiled, and had Lady Bayne ham watched her attentively she would have seen the firm lips quiver as they smiled. Claude rose hastily; his face flushed deeply. The countess, serenely unconscious, continued her remarks.

"I should like to have your portrait, Barbara. Mr. Seaton is one of the first of living artists; we will speak to him about it to-day. We shall be side by side then in the great gallery."

Barbara made no reply. She was thinking of the fair young face that would be next to that of the stately lady before her, while she, Barbara Earle, would never be portrayed as one of that race. Claude walked uneasily up and down the room, longing to make an end of the painful scene, but not knowing how. At last, to his intense delight, Lady Bayneham rose and quitted the room, still screncly "This is intolerable," he cried; "Bar-bars, I cannot forgive myself for allowing you to go through such a scene. My mother must be told at once."

Barbara raised her clear, dark eyes to his face, and though the warm tears shone brightly in them, she smiled and said bravely: "It cannot be helped; do not be vexed, Claude, I was wondering if diamonds looked well with golden hair. And that reminds me that time is precious. Take a cousin's advice, and see Miss Hutton to-day. We may still call at Storr & Mortimer's, you know."

"But, Barbara," said Claude gently, "I think more of you than you do of your-abruptly, not knowing quite what to say. "While I am unhappy, you mean, I suppose," said Barbara, half haughtily, yet with a smile of amusement. "How candid you are, Claude. Never fear for me. The past is all dead; its ghost will never haunt me. With all my heart I intend to help you; and when you marry Miss Hutton I shall stand by her side, for two reasons. One is, that the sight of your happiness will more than repay me for any pain I may suffer; and the second is, that no one shall say Barbara Earle fied like a love-sick girl. No one shall ever know the truth of this affair but you and I, Claude." "The truth is," said her cousin, with a smile, "that you have dismissed me. Your reasons for so doing concern no one but yourself."

"I will speak to my aunt," said Barbara; "she will take it better from me than from you. And now, Claude, go. I can see impatience in every line of your so eat it "till he comes." "Amen. I ven face. I venture to predict, if you call you will find Miss Hutton at home.'

For once Barbara was wrong. When Lord Bayneham reached Lady Hutton's. he found both ladies absent, and was obliged to wait until two o'clock, when he intended to be at Mr. Seaton's. Nor was Barbara more fortunate. She made several efforts to obtain an interview with the countess, but on that particular morning her ladyship was unusually engaged, and when they left home Lady Bayneham was still in happy ignorance. Barbara knew her aunt too well to attempt any communication of that kind in an open carriage. She knew what the storm of

Scholarly Exposition of the Los Thoughts Worthy of Calm Reflect tion-Half an Hour's Study of the Scriptures-Time Well Spent-

Lesson for April 28. Golden Text .- "This do in remembrance of me."-Luke 22: 19.

As the text given would indicate, the subject of this lesson is "The Lord's Supper," Mark 14: 12-26. The Lord's supper in its true conception emphasizes the Christ rather than the meal. It is not the elements that are to fix our attention but the person suggested by the elements. "This do in remembrance of me." Mind and heart must be clear and active, or we will miss the blessing. "Take, eat, this is my body"-not in substance but in shadow. For when Christ spoke the word he was still in the body. And so, just as the disciples at the first looked beyond and above the bread at the real Christ, so will we in humble trust "till he come.

"And as they did eat Jesus took bread and blessed and brake it." He brings his own and our provision with him. Or rather he takes our poor providing and turns it into heavenly substance. The passover is changed into the Lord's supper. The bitter is turned to sweet; in other words, he takes the bitter and leaves us the sweet. Right in the midst of the old supper he institutes the new. And how happy we are that in our pain and penary we let him in! O believe it: "Behold I stand at the door, and knock, if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."

"Take, eat, this is my body." Christ says it. Fix the eye upon him. How could Luther have made the mistake of supposing that Christ then and there, or at any time after, since he even liveth to make intercession, transferred himself into the midst of the material bread and wine? The disciples understood him and reverenced not the bread but the Lord. Their eye was not down upon the elements, but up toward the face of their Master.

And forward to. "Until that day," says Jesus. This lifts the heart away from the damps and fogs of earth to the glorious light of the throne. Christ is coming again. The Supper looks forv ard to it. It is not a funeral occasion; t is a glad feast of anticipation. So tak it, so come Lord Jesus."

"You will be pleased to see so many mutiful flowers," said Lord Bayneham, ing that he must break the silence, which had grown painful.

Hilds looked up at him; their eyes met; and he saw tears shining in hers. Then he saw, too, that her beautiful face had lost some of its bloom, and that she looked sad and sorrowful.

"You have never been to see us, Lord Hayncham," she said, in answer to his mok, for he said no more. "I half expected you, for you seemed like an old

There was a tone of reproach in her words. He could not withstand the lovely, innocent face and quivering lips.

She never forgot the startled look he bent upon her.

"Hush, Miss Hutton," he said, "you torture me. You ask me why I do not visit you. I will tell you. I never seek you because I am pledged to marry Barbara Earle."

He saw the lovely face grow pale and death-like, the dark, violet eyes become shaded and dim, the sweet lips quiver and then grow strangely still. He saw all this and would have given his whole life for power to have uttered one word, but honor bade him be silent.

"Hilda," he said, gently, "in years to come you will perhaps realize what it has cost me to tell you this. I never thought much of my future or my fate until I met you in the woods of Brynmar. It was all settled then."

She tried to say she wished him all happiness, but her trembling lips could atter no words. He saw Lady Hutton and Barbara Earle coming toward them.

Lady Hutton was utterly unobservant. but Barbara Earle's dark eyes saw the strange pallor upon the beautiful young face saw that some keen, sharp pain had taken all brightness and happiness away. ie saw, and her noble, womanly neart to me than my own; therefore, I release pitied the fair girl and wondered what you from your promise-from all the ties her sorrow could be. "Hilda," said Lady Hutton, "are you tired? If not, Lady Bayneham has asked us to dine with them. She is going to the opera, and we can form one party. What do you say, my dear?" Hilda said something, but the words were so faint and indistinct that Lady Hutton did not hear them. Just then she caught sight of the girl's white face, and uttered a cry of surprise.

Barbara waited in the drawing room until her cousin came in. He looked care worn and tired, as though no sleep had visited him. "I shell soon take that look from his face," thought Barbara, "though I tram-an hour in the library with me?" Poor Barbara! she saw a shadow cros his face, but he spoke kindly.

They went into the library. There was silence for some minutes; then Miss Earle, turning to Lord Bayneham, said: "I want to talk to you, Claude, that is why I asked you to come here."

He waited wonderingly, for he saw her face was full of deep emotion.

"Answer me truly," she said, "what do you love best in the world ?-speak truly." "I always do," said Lord Bayneham, proudly; "but you startle me, Barbara." "If you were to ask me whom I love best in the world," continued Miss Earle, "I should say my betrothed husband, Claude Bayneham. It is because I love you so well that I have asked you to come here."

Lord Bayneham did not know what reply to make. He was prepared to marry his cousin, to be true and kind, but he had nothing to say about love. The vision of a sweet young face, framed in bright golden hair, came between him and the noble woman by his side.

"Claude," continued Barbara, laying her hand gently upon his arm, "I will tell you whom you love best in the world. It is that fair young girl you met in Brynmar woods, Hilda Hutton. You love her as you never have-never can love another.'

"I should never have said so," replied Lord Bayneham sorrowfully.

"I know it," said Barbara; "you would have married me and tried to forget her. I prefer making the sacrifice myself, Claude. It would be useless," she continued, "for me to affect that I do not love you. As long as I can remember, you have been all the world to me. The strength and depth of my love will be best proved by what I am going to do. Your welfare and happiness are dearer that bind you to me: I give you your freedom. You are at full liberty to love and marry whom you will; and I do this because I love you and wish to see you happy.'

"What is the matter, Hilda?" she asked hurriedly; "you look quite ill."

Barbara Earle, whose keen instinct told ther there was something wrong, interpos-

"You have been stooping over the flowers, Miss Hutton," she said; "the perfume and warmth together have been too much for you.

Lord Bayneham looked gratefully at his cousin.

"I will see about the carriage at once, if you like," he said to Lady Hutton. "I am sure my mother will be quite ready to return.

'Barbara Earle walked by Hilda's side, and talked gayly to her until the faint color came again into the fair face, and the startled, frightened look vanished from the sweet, tender eyes.

CHAPTER X.

Lady Bayneham's dinner party, was a very pleasant one.

Bertie Carlyon was there, and no one could be dull or listless in his presence. He had the happy faculty of brightening and amusing every one. He talked gay and agreeable nonsense. The Countess of Bayneham was in one of her most gracious moods. Barbara Earle had her own reasons for trying to make the party a pleasant one, and Lady Hutton never failed in being both agreeable and entertaining. No one noticed Hilda's silence and Claude's depression, except Barbara; nothing ever escaped her.

"Mr. Seaton wants Hilda to sit for her portrait," said Lady Hutton to her hostess. "I am quite willing, but I cannot decide as to her costume.'

"The more simple the better," said Lady Bayneham, in a low voice. "Miss Hutton needs nothing in the way of ornament."

persisted Lady Hutton, "But," should like her to represent one of my favorite characters. I prefer fancy picthres to simple portraits. I am only puzzled upon which to decide."

"Take my advice," said the countess, "and let Miss Hutton appear as her own simple charming self. She will make a picture then; do not spoil it by disguising her as some one else. We are going to Mr. Seaton's to-morrow to see Lady Diana Foreclerc's portrait; will you join

Lord Bayneham, who had overheard this conversation, loved the countess better as that moment than he had ever done before. He could see that she admired Hilda, and she had given him another "Yet I must go away," he said to him-

elf. "If I linger here I am lost. I may talk to her this evening, and to-morrow I will look upon her face for the last time for many years."

"But, Barbara," remonstrated Lord Bayneham, "I would have never asked for this-I cannot consent."

Even as he spoke Barbara saw a half flutter of joy in his face, and her own grew paler.

"I know that," she said, "but do you think, Claude, I could marry you, knowing full well that you love another? It would be impossible," she continued, for he made no reply; "if you were to kneel and ask me to be your wife I would not. I do not blame you for loving her; she is a thousand times more fair than I; but, loving her, could you be so unjust as to offer to marry me?"

"I wish I were dead!" cried Lord Bayneham; "I wish I had died rather than have brought unhappiness to you, Barbara. I do love you, but in a different way."

"I shall be very unhappy for a little time," said Miss Earle sorrowfully, "but then I am a brave woman, and brave women have to live down sorrow. All my happiness will come from seeing vours." "You are a noble woman, Barbara," said Lord Bayneham. "You are as noble as you are true."

He held both her hands in his, and, for the last time, his lips touched her brow, and Barbara grew deadly pale as he did

"Go now," she said gently, "and leave me to speak to Lady Bayneham."

Claude turned away; he could not have spoken another word. She watched him with eyes that grew dim with tears. How quietly he had taken his dismissal! He had nothing to say.

With joy and sorrow strangely mingled in his heart, Lord Bayneham did not then know the value of what he on that morn ing lost.

Deep in Lord Bayneham's heart there lingered a half feeling of regret for Barbara. Not that he loved her; he had never cared more for her than he did at this present time. Her true nobility of character struck him, as it had not done before. He could not quite forget her words-so true, so free from all affectation, so full of love for him. While they lingered that day in his ears he did not seek Hilda. Barbara Earle was not one who did anything imperfectly. The rest of that day-the one on which she had siven her lover his freedom-was spent in her own room. What it cost no one ever knew. Barbara shut herself up with her sorrow, and spoke not a word of it. The morning after, when she came down to breakfast, there was new beauty in her face, the beauty of calm, serene resolve; the storm had passed over, and all outward trace of it had disappeared. "We are going to Mr. Seaton's to-day, aunt," she said to Lady Bayneham. "You said two o'clock, I think. Are we to call for Lady Hutton?"

"No," replied the countess, "we are to meet her at the studio. I hope Miss Hut-anger would be. . . . . . .

"I should be better satisfied," said Mr. Seaton, as the group of ladies stood round his easel, "if Miss Hutton had the same bloom upon her face that she had when I first saw her She looks pale something like a drooping flower Late hours and much dancing do not improve our fair and fashionable ladies."

Lady Hutton looked anxiously at her ward; then for the first time she noted how changed was the fair young face. There could be no mistake about it. Hilda might laugh and sing, but that look could only come from sorrow-sorrow, too, that had taken deep root. What could it be? Surely the child could not have fallen in love-she, so innocent, so fresh and pure, so untouched by the world, so utterly unconscious of all passion. Yet nothing but love could have stolen the bloom from that lovely face, and yet have left greater beauty in its place. When Mr. Seaton spoke a deep flush covered Hilda's face, and her eyes fell.

While the ladies examined a wondrously executed sketch of a contemplated picture, Claude drew near to Hilda. Before he spoke to her he noted the flush that rose to her fair young face

"Hilda," he said, gently, "may I call and see you now?" Then he lowered his voice, and in a passionate whisper added, 'say yes, my darling, for I am not to marry Barbara Earle.'

With a heart beating high with triumph he noted the sudden and beautiful flush that lighted the young tender face, the light that shone in the clear, pure eyes, the trembling lip that could find no answer for him. He could say no more. Hilda understood all those few words implied.

"May I call this evening?" he asked, gently; but the "red ripe lips" never moved in reply. Mr. Seaton gazed at the changed face in wonder. The half sad look, the pallor, and the dim eyes, had disappeared as if by magic. It was a beautiful, radiant girl upon whom he gazed, whose features glowed with happiness. The artist knew something of the world and its ways, and he gave a shrewd, quick glance at Lord Bayneham; then, for him the mystery was solved. A .....

When all details of time, costume, etc. were arranged, Lady Hutton and Hilda drove away. Lord Bayneham would not accept his mother's invitation to drive with her; he wanted to be alone with his newly found happiness.

gloom, neither mirth; but a kind of gla solemnity or solemn joy. That blesse old hymn puts it well:

"Father, what'er of earthly bliss Thy sovereign will denies, Accepted at a throne of grace, Let this petition rise.

"Give me a calm and thankful heart, From every murmur free; The blessings of thy grace impart, And make me live to thee.

'Let the sweet hope that thou art mine My life and death attend: Thy presence through my journey shine. And crown my journey's end."

The Lord make no mistake in his prelictions. The disciples found it "as he had said unto them." Did they ever find it else than so, and shall we ever find it otherwise? There be those who are endeavoring to convince us that our Lord's humiliation included much of human ignorance and liability to error. Our lack of conviction here may be due to dullness, perhaps, yet we have never been able to think comfortably, and as we believe rightly, of our Lord, in such a conception of his theanthropic nature. His humanity took not away from his deity, his deity did not thwart or submerge his humanity. He was always everywhere wholly God, wholly man. Deal with the mystery as you will, but leave us our Christ, perfect God, perfect man, able to save unto the uttermost. Says John Reid, "We sometimes compare one man with another, but Christ can be compared with no one. He cannot even be described."

The Lord's supper was both a fulfilment and an advance upon the passover. The significance and worth of each depended on this, that there should be a distinct step of progress here. Dr. Trumbull, when a soldier, took his boy to one of the great saviours of our country and said: 'I want my boy to meet you, general, so that in after years he may feel, when he knows of your fame, that he has taken you by the hand." 'The officer's pregnant response, as he took the boy's hand was, "I hope you will make a better man than your father." Quick came Dr. Trumbull's rejoinder, "Unless he is, general, both our lives are a failure."

"A large upper room furnished and prepared." How have we let the Lord into our lives? Has he come in at the rear door to be overlooked and forgotten, like a wayfaring man that tarries for the night; or have we let him in at the front door and given him the choice upper room, an honored guest? According as we let him in and welcome him does he uplift and bless us. He glorifies us as we glorify him. Dr. D. M. Stearns has aptly said, "Just as the Lord asked Simon for the loan of his boat that he might speak from it to the people, so he is asking us for these bodies of ours carthen vessels (Rom. xii., 1-2. 2 Cor. iv., 7), that out of them he may continually preach his word through us in the power of the Spirit. It is ours to yield to him, be filled with the word and the Spirit, and let him work in us "both to will and to do of his good pleasure."

Novel-Writing Under Difficulties. Cesare Cantle, who died at Milan this month, ninety-two years ago, was the author of a colossal "Universal History," and of a novel, well known and still popular in Italy, whose title is "Margherita Pusteria." This story he wrote when in prison for a political offense in 1833-4. He wrote it on pleces of torn paper, such as he could pro-care, with a toothpick and ink made from the snuff of a candle, which he diluted with cesspool water. The work is a monument of indefatigable industry. He was a native of Brivio, in the Province of Como.

LABRADOR ICEBERGS.

Seen by Moonlight and in the Flash of the Aurora Borealis.

The "iron-bound" coast of Labrador is guarded by groups of islands-barren, hopeless, and forlorn-looking rocks, all the more desolate in appearance for the miserable fishing-huts or "tilts" that have been thrown together on them. Entering through some narrow passage between these islands, the steamer anchors for the night in a rockbound basin; for it is too dangerous work to navigate the Labrador waters after dark. The narrow passages between the islands, both along the Labrador and in the Newfoundland bays, are called "tickles," and aptly so, for is seems as if the sea had reached out foamy fingers and tickled the rocky ribs of the coast until it split its sides with grim, stormy laughter.

One evening we found one of these tickles nearly blocked by a huge iceberg which had drifted into it and grounded. We passed near enough to feel its chilling breath, and to have thrown a biscuit on it, as the sailors say. We had hardly anchored in the harbor before we heard loud reports in rapid succession, like the firing of field artillery. Looking in the direction from which they came, we saw above the heights that surrounded the basin the peak of the iceberg swaying slowly and majestically to and fro, and finally disappearing, a peak of different shape rising up from behind the height and taking its place. They say that an avalanche is sometimes so delicately poised that the vibrations from a shout or a hand-clap will start it on its destructive course, and possibly the wash from our steamer had disturbed the iceberg's equilibrium. At night the moon rose and the Northern Lights throbbed in the sky; so that the iceberg's peak was at times bathed in silver, at times in a clear translucent crimson. It isn't often you find a combination of iceberg, moonlight, and Northern Lights; and feeling that I might never again behold such an exquisite scene, I-remained for hours on deck watching it.-St. Nicholas.

Grecian Enterprise.

It is the way of travelers to complain of the food they are obliged to eat in foreign countries. Whether it is an American in Europe, or a European in America, the result is much the same. We like the things to which we are accustomed. When Edmond About was in Greece, he carried matters so far as to object to eating green peaches. He was in the bazaar at Athens.

"Wouldn't it be possible to get some ripe peaches?" he asked the vender. "I think not," answered the Athenian.

"But pray tell me why?"

"We have no good roads. If the farmers should try to bring ripe fruit to market on mule-back, it would arrive in the shape of marmalade."

"But at Corfu, also, the peaches were green, and there they have good roads, and bring the fruit to town in wagons."

"Ah, well," said the man, "there is another reason. The farmers have no money, and they have creditors. They can't wait for fruit to get ripe."

There, says About, you have a fair example of the state of Grecian agriculture.

A French gardener, being at Smyrna, noticed that the Greeks had almost no vegetables in their gardens-tomatoes everywhere, and scarcely anything else.

"Why don't you raise other things?" he asked. "Asparagus, now. Your soil is just right. You would make a fine thing of it. I will furnish you with seeds."

"How soon should we get crops?" "In four years at the longest."

"Four years! Are you crazy? Do you suppose we would spend money to get something back in four years? We should be bankrupt twenty times over."

UNWISE POSTPONEMENT.

Neglecting a Duty Which Ought to Be Done Now.

On general principles there is no more foolish method of taking life easy than by deferring an obvious duty. Especially foolish is the person who postpones the work of cleansing his blood. There are many reasons why this work should be done in the spring. This is the cleansing season, and the blood needs cleansing before all things else. That tired feeling is due to a vitiated condition of the vital fluid. The pimples and other eruptions which appear are indic that the blood has become loaded with impurities which should be expelled at once. In no other way can health be maintained. Now there is but one true blood purifier prominently in the public eye to-day, and that is Hood's Sarsaparilla. By taking a few bottles of this great blood cleansing medicine the bodily health can be built up so that when the warm weather comes the system will be able to resist the debiliating effects of the heated season. Those who start with good health in the spring, given them by a thorough cleansing of the blood by Hood's Sarsaparilla, will be likely to pass through the summer without serious illness, and when the autumn comes they will find that they are supplied with strength which they had never known at that season before. The work of cleansing the blood in the spring is one of the most important duties of the season, because pure blood means good health, and good health is essential both to happiness and to the highest usefulness in the

There are several cases where human skin has been used to bind books, the skin used being nearly always that of some notorious criminal, who has suffered the last penalty of the law in England. There are two books so bound, namely, Sir John Cheek's Hurt of Sedition, and Braithwaite's Arcadian Princess, which were both bound in the prepared skin of Mary Bateman the Yorkshire witch, who was executed in the early part of the century for murder. #### Affection.

We sometimes meet with men who seem to think that any indulgence of affectionate feeling is weakness. They will return from a journey, and greet their families with a distant dignity, and move among their children with the cold and lofty splendor of an iceberg, surrounded with its broken fragments. There is hardly a more unnatural signt on earth than one of those families without a heart. A father had better extinguish his boy's eyes than take away his heart. The miles of tree-lined streets give to the urban portions of the city an almost rural appearance. The frequent parks are fresh and bright with green leaves and flowering shrubs. The neatly trimmed beds of spring flowers show like oases in a desert of asphalt. It is no wonder that the Washingtonian is proud of his city, for with a wholesome climate and with its admirable plan of streets and avenues, and its multitude of small reservations, there is scarcely any feature lacking to make the capital a spring paradise. The old Washington is being improved every season. The unsightly spots occupied by ugly shanties are being gradually filled up with substantial, handsome buildings The city is spreading, too, into the country, and the surrounding areas are taking on the beauties of the city proper. There is a great future for Washington. It lacks some things, but the budding of the trees now puts reverse desires out of The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type in-dicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine pre-pares especially for such persons s whole volume of new ideas, con-densed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates music, poetry, and fation. A person with this type of thumb will thor-onghly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Ar-tistic Type indicates a love of heauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-pict-ure of roses, 16½ x 24 inches, repro-duced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine from the cost of this superb work of art was $550.00 ; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original, Beaides this, an exquisite of or water-color picture is pub-lished in each number of the Maga-zine, and the articles are so pro-fusely and superbly illustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a port-folio of art works of the highest of ideas, who will be deeply inter-ested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every poneositis field, chronieling every for ideas, who will be deeply inter-sted in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, in every for ideas, who will be deeply inter-sted in your subscription; it will cost only $2.00, and you will have a dozen Magazines in one. Address Wich cover the entire artistic and scientific field, chronieling every for family and domestic matters, will be of superlative interest to those a dozen Magazines in one. Address Wich belong essentially to the strong which indicates in its small size, slenderness, soft mall, and smooth, rounded tip, those traits the mind, for nature is at her prettiest and she never appeared at better advantage than in Washington. Presumably the Lansing incident is closed. No ceremonies perhaps, have been held in the state department, for the proceedings could hardly be described as diplomatic and, as we all know, nothing in the slightest degree undiplomatic is ever so much as recognized in the south end of the big granite building near the White House. But in a borrowed department phrase, the incident is closed The Rev. Scandal-Monger Lansing with draws his remarks touching the president's sobriety, explains that they were based entirely on hearsay, and seems really sorry that he spoke. He will now disappear from public observation, greatly to his own advantage and to the relief of the country at large. The question remains, however, what possible good did Dr. Lansing expect to accomplish by his indecent attack upon the executive head of this nation? Abuse is not the housemaid of morality nor persecution the lieutenant of religion. A doctrine exploited by violence condems itself Dr. Lansing should utilize his retirement by considering these things. It may do him good. It is not likely, from the present indications; that the treaty between Great Britain and the United States, under which a settlement may be had of the claims of the Canadian sealers against this country, will be formulated before next autumn. Meanwhile, the rules

Those persons who are now urging Mr. Cleveland to call an extra session of congress seem to forget that he had a little excitement of this sort in the year 1893. Mr. Cleveland is by no means a glutton.
