Of Much Importance.

The State Board of Health did a good thing, says the Livingston Herald, when they got after the last legislature and persuaded it to pass a new act which takes effect August 30, and requires the board annually to send to public school superintendents and teachers throughout the state printed data and statements, which will enable teachers to teach their pupils the modes by which the dangerous communicable diseases are spread and the best method for the restriction and prevention of such diseases. The same law provides a fine and forfeiture in cases where any school board willfully neglects to comply, and such neglect by any superintendent or teacher is sufficient cause for dismissal. A four-page leaflet, supplying in concise form the information required by the law, which had been prepared by the secretary of the board, was thoroughly discussed and approved for publication by the board at its meeting in Lansing recently, and a large edition of the same was ordered to be printed and placed in the hands of public school superintendents and teachers. There are about 16,000 teachers in the state who will thus be required to spread sanitary information to their pupils.

Notice.

Examinations of candidates for admission to the Michigan Agricultural College will be held at the time of the regular teachers' examinations, and will be conducted in the same manner as these examinations. The work of each and every candidate, together with the name and address, will be forwarded by the commissioner, within five days from the date of the examination, to the president of the college, who will examine and grade the answers and report to the candidate, within five days of the receipt of the paper, the result of the examination. A standard of 70 per cent in each branch will admit to the freshman class of the college without further examination.

WM. W. WEDEMEYER,
Commissioner of Schools.

Mulching.

This is an important matter for fruit-growers and gardeners. For trees newly set out a green mulch is the best. Pulling weeds and placing them around the roots is an excellent plan, and in towns using new-mown lawn grass is equally good, as both form rich mulches and add plant food to the soil. We have never lost a tree where this was done. The soil is kept moist and cool during the hot weeks of summer. The exact change which takes place in the soil when a covering is placed over the surface is not generally understood. A chemical change occurs and the soil is enriched for a time. In some of the gardens of France the benefit derived from shading a portion of the soil is understood and carried out successfully. Tiles are used to cover strawberry beds, and holes made through them for the plants to grow out of. Flower gardens are likewise covered with tiles or cement, leaving no part of the soil exposed except where the plants come through. Expert horticulturists are said to find this method of great advantage. A less expensive way is using prepared paper for covering the garden soil—brown paper dipped in sulphuric acid, as it is then made tough and waterproof. In drouths this mulch acts splendidly. It retains the water, keeps down the weeds and accelerates the growth of the plants. It is believed that experiments with mulches will make gardening easier and more profitable. The paper mulch is recommended for small places as the simplest, cheapest and most effective of any that has yet been experimented with. The idea was obtained from nature, which in the forests supplies mulches from the leaves and on the prairies from grasses.—Jackson Patriot.

A LONG LIST.

Many Persons Thought to Have Been Victims of Holmes.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Every day brings to light one or more atrocious murders committed by H. H. Holmes. In all, so far as known, circumstantial evidence of the strongest character points to the man as the slayer of the following:

Connor, Julia L., who lived with Holmes as his wife; supposed remains found in basement of Holmes' building, 791 Sixty-third street, Chicago.

Connor, Gertrude, daughter of above; supposed to have been murdered in Holmes' building, 791 Sixty-third street, Chicago.

Cigrand, Amelia, Holmes' secretary; disappeared.

Pitzel, Benjamin F.; dead body found at 1816 Callowhill street, Philadelphia.

Pitzel, Howard, 11 years old, son of Benjamin F. Pitzel; disappeared; supposed to have been murdered in Indiana.

Pitzel, Alice, daughter of Benjamin F. Pitzel; dead body found in the cellar of St. Vincent street house, Toronto.

Pitzel, Nellie, daughter of Benjamin F. Pitzel; dead body found in the cellar of St. Vincent street house, Toronto.

Williams, Minnie, disappeared from 701 Sixty-third street, Chicago, where she lived with Holmes; supposed to have been murdered.

Williams, Annie, younger sister of above; disappeared as did her sister.

Wild, Miss, formerly a clerk in Holmes' employ at the "Castle"; she disappeared two years ago and has never been heard from.

In addition to this Holmes is believed to have been concerned in the murder of Mrs. Cron, the old woman who was so ruthlessly killed at Wilmette two years ago.

Other persons known to have been identified with Holmes at Englewood and other places have disappeared, but as yet little evidence has been found to show that Holmes had a hand in their sudden retirement from usual scenes.

TORONTO, July 26.—The inquest into the murder of the Pitzel children was concluded Wednesday night before Coroner Johnson and a jury. Some evidence was taken and strong and vigorous summing up was made. The jury was out only fifteen minutes, and there was from the beginning no disagreement among them. They returned the following verdict:

"That Alice Pitzel came to her death on or about the 23th of October, in the city of Toronto, and that H. H. Holmes, alias Mudgett, alias Howard, did on or about the day last aforesaid at the city of Toronto, unlawfully, wilfully and with malice aforethought, kill and murder her, the said Alice Pitzel, contrary to the peace of her sovereign lady, the queen, her crown and dignity."

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS., Has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds a remedy that cures every kind of Humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor.) He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston. Send postal card for book.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, like needles passing through them; the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul or bilious it will cause squeamish feelings at first. No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it. Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bedtime. Sold by all Druggists.

Beecham's pills are for biliousness, bilious headache, dyspepsia, heartburn, torpid liver, dizziness, sick headache, bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, loss of appetite, sallow skin, etc., when caused by constipation; and constipation is the most frequent cause of all of them.

Go by the book. Pills 10c and 25c a box. Book FREE at your druggist's or write B. F. Allen Co., 365 Canal Street, New York.

Annual sales more than 6,000,000 boxes.

THE WHIP-POOR-WILL.

How often I think of the bright summer eve
When the moon in full beauty looked down,
And all of the stars in the dome of the sky
Gave a cheer to the sleepy old town.
Ah! well I remember the cottage and gate
Where I stood when all nature was still,
And heard from the wood by the side of the stream.
The voice of the dear whip-poor-will—
Whip-poor-will! whip-poor-will! whip-
poor-will!

Oh, happy the maid when her lover has pressed
His lips to her blushes and brow.
Oh, happy the thoughts that can never be told;
I feel their heart-echoings now.
A picture of days I see by the path
That led to the tumble-down mill
Where gathered the boys who are distant or dead.
To list to the dear whip-poor-will—
Whip-poor-will! whip-poor-will! whip-
poor-will!

Though winter may come and some pleasures
seem cold,
I yet have a dream in the night
That I live in the fields that my boyhood hath known.
Where daisies were blossoming bright,
At close of the day when my labors are o'er,
I gaze on the wood with a thrill.
Where murmur of pines and the echoing past
Bring voice of that dear whip-poor-will—
Whip-poor-will! whip-poor-will! whip-

AN M. P.'S INFATUATION.

A DOMESTIC DIFFERENCE.

The general impression among Jim Percival's friends was that he might have done a good deal better for himself than he did in his matrimonial venture.

An M. P., with a safe seat and decided abilities, young, good-looking, well connected, but having only a limited income, he was just the man who should have married money, and this is exactly what he had not done. He met his wife in Paris during a holiday trip. She was a pretty, vivacious Irish woman, lady-like and attractive, but she had no fortune, and was of no particular family. The M. P.'s friends shook their heads over the match, and all felt convinced that before long he would find out what a mistake he had made.

There could be no doubt that under the circumstances his marriage was an imprudent one. With his eight hundred pounds a year Percival had subsisted comfortably enough as a bachelor, but as a married M. P. he found that his income went simply no way at all. To cut himself off from society and to live with his wife in economical seclusion was, of course, out of the question. It would have made him unpopular with his constituents, as well as with certain influential friends in town, to whose good offices he looked for securing some post in the government when his party came back to power. And as he had no profession, but had launched himself for good or ill upon a parliamentary career, it would have been madness in him to prejudice his chances of political preference.

The natural consequence followed. Percival got into debt. He consoled himself first of all for outrunning the constable by the consideration that his party must soon return to power, and then he should be able to recoup his present expenditure. But the radicals remained "in" session after session; the looked-for general election came no nearer, and Percival began to feel very lugubrious indeed. He already owed nearly one thousand pounds—a crushing liability to a man with a small income and no capital; indeed, he did not attempt to disguise from himself that unless something very unexpected turned up he must soon be hopelessly insolvent. His wife had long been urging immediate and rigid retrenchment, but each time she mentioned it Percival shook his head. The house was in committee on a bill which was being fought tooth and nail by the opposition, and urgent whips had been issued to the members of both parties to be as frequently as possible in their places. But there were many dreary intervals of debate, when no big division was imminent, and during those intervals Percival did not always remain in the precincts of the house.

He might no doubt have spent them at home or in escorting his wife to one or other of the numerous social functions which, for his sake, she so religiously attended. But in his worried state of mind the dullness of a domestic evening, or the yet deadlier boredom of a political conversation, was uninviting. He preferred to forget his troubles in more enlivening scenes. Within a mile of the Palace of Westminster there is, as all the world knows, a famous theater of varieties. It is under unexceptionable management; it puts forward the strongest and most enterprising programme of the kind in London. One evening during a particularly drowsy debate a fellow M. P. had suggested to Percival that they should run across to the X. and see the Rainbow danseuse. Percival had complied. After that night he went to see her pretty regularly.

Just before the dance the stage was darkened; behind loomed a background of murky clouds, gloomy as the sky before an impending thunderstorm; then a brilliant blaze of sunlight burst upon the shadowed scene, and whirling wildly in its dazzling rays appeared the famous Rainbow danseuse. What a sight that was! How dexterously she managed her mass of gorgeous draperies, which floated all about her, and swirled and spun like a revolving wheel. At times nothing but the flashing hues of these robes was visible; at other times a lovely face, crowned with golden yellow locks, stood out among them, radiant, spiritual, superb—and then, while this entrancing apparition smiled and the audience clapped and shouted, rumblings of thunder rolled upon the air; clouds overcast the sunlight; and amid their gathering gloom, the Rainbow goddess faded slowly from the scene.

If it had ended with his merely admiring this ravishing beauty from a distance, all might have been well. But such infatuation as Percival's was not satisfied to confine itself within those modest limits. A strong desire came over him to make her personal acquaintance. He ought, of course, to have withstood it. It should have been perfectly obvious to him that, in giving way to his desire, he was voluntarily thrusting himself into the path of danger.

But he gave way, nevertheless. He went farther. He actually addressed one or two letters to the young lady. To his great chagrin she sent him no reply. At last, in desperation, he procured an introduction to the manager of the X., and besought that gentleman's aid in his foolish and culpable project.

"Just so," said the manager, rather coldly. "Well, Mr. Percival, I will communicate your wish to the young lady, and will then let you know her reply. I cannot hold out hopes that it will be favorable, for a number of other gentlemen have desired introduction to her, and have all been refused. You see, she is a simple, modest girl, who is merely using her talent to support her family, and has no desire for a circle of male admirers. However, as I said, I will tell her that you wish to be introduced."

The following night when he ought to have been in his place in the house, listening to the ministerial leader's statement, he was hovering near the stage door of the X. He had made up his mind to follow his goddess home, and so find out her private address.

Percival had a cab waiting for him at the corner. He noticed another cab drawn up opposite the stage door. He strolled up and accosted the driver.

"You're a lucky man to have such a charming fare," said Percival carelessly. "Oo said I 'ad a charmin' fare?" retorted the man, suspiciously. Then he added: "If that's your sort, young feller, you may save yourself the trouble of doin' the civil to me. For she's a thoroughly good young 'ooman, I can tell yer, and won't stand no followers foolin' around—not she!"

Percival affected to laugh and strolled away. In a few minutes he saw the girl hurry out and get into her cab. Then he jumped into his own—having instructed the driver to follow the other vehicle and keep it carefully in sight. His heart was beating fast. He was in an almost uncontrollable excitement. Yet he felt ashamed of himself at the same time. To persecute a virtuous and modest girl with unwelcome attention was shabby conduct in anyone—especially in a married man. And Percival was conscious that he was committing a contemptible action. Yet, somehow, he could not help it. His ridiculous infatuation had bound him hand and foot.

When they had driven about a mile his cab stopped. The M. P. got out. He saw the young lady alighting from her cab about a hundred yards ahead. She turned and walked rapidly away. With a beating heart and trembling steps, he followed her, keeping an interval of seventy or eighty yards between them.

She had not alighted at her own door, but at the end of a street of private houses, down which she was now walking. Percival realized with a certain thrill of uneasiness that it was P—street, the street in which his own house was situated. But something worse was in store. The young lady stopped, appeared to be carefully scrutinizing the numbers, then, after some evident hesitation, she walked straight up to the door of Percival's house and rang the bell. A minute later she was admitted.

All at once the truth flashed upon the unhappy M. P. There could, of course, be no doubt upon the subject. This young lady, annoyed and frightened by his persistent attentions, and seeing that silent disdain had no effect in stopping them, had taken the ready and effective method of reporting him to his wife!

Percival leaned against some iron railings, near which he stood and wiped his clammy forehead with his handkerchief. His dismay was all-handkerchief. If he had together beyond words. If he had been on either side had ceased between them—if she had not been perfectly fond and trusting toward him he could have stood the thing better. But as he felt like a man who had suddenly received a knock-down blow. His knees were trembling violently; a sense of sickness, of faintness, stole over him; in the face of this fearful exposure his infatuation for the danseuse seemed to die; for the first time he seemed to realize what an abject idiot he had been.

It was a long time before he could make up his mind how to act. He had patrolled the street for more than half an hour before he had decided—and a bad half hour he found it. Then he took a sudden resolution. He would go in and make a clean breast of the whole affair to his wife. That, after all, was the most honest, and, probably, the most prudent course. She might, or she might not believe him; but he would tell her all the truth, express his sincere penitence, and throw himself upon her mercy.

He nerved himself to the effort. He went in. He entered the drawing-room. His wife was now alone. She looked up at him with a cold, altered expression, that made him wince. But he persevered. He spoke. He told her all. She averted her face, and heard his confession to the end in ominous silence.

"And so, Jim, my make-up, my golden wig, and my wedding draperies—to say nothing of the shifting lights and the shadows thrown upon one, baffled even your penetration, eh, sir?"

Jim was staring at his pretty wife, who had now risen and stood before him, smiling archly, in evident enjoyment of his obvious relief and astonishment.

"And you fell in love with my make-up. For that is what it comes to, doesn't it, Jim?"

"By Jove!" he exclaimed with emphasis, "that explains it. It was your eyes that did it, little girl. They drew me to the theater night after night to worship you. I could not resist their spell. I could not explain it to myself. Yet I felt there was something half familiar in their magnetic influence upon me. To think I never guessed. By Jove! I was a duffer. I ought to have known that no such other eyes were to be found in all England!"

"Or in all America, either?" questioned the Rainbow danseuse, playfully. Jim's explanation was, unconsciously, the most diplomatic that he could have devised. Those incomparable eyes beamed upon him with tenderness and loving humor.

"But, I say," asked Jim, an idea striking him, "these social functions which you have been attending so assiduously for the past few months—have they been simple blinds to dupe your unsuspecting husband—eh, Jennie?"

"Not at all, sir. I went to them all. But as my 'turn' at the theater lasted only ten minutes or so, I was able to go there as well. Besides," she added, with the slightest tinge of playful reproach in her tone, "you have not been at home enough lately to miss me very much, have you, Jim?"

"By Jove!" he cried, "I'll turn over a new leaf in that respect to-night."

He went up, placed his arm round his wife, and kissed her fondly. She leaned her head upon his shoulder and held up a pink slip of paper to his eyes.

"There! Dear old Jim!" she exclaimed. "Mr. Y— has paid me—what do you think? Fifty pounds a week. That is a check for ten weeks' salary. At this rate your Rainbow goddess will soon dance you clear out of debt—won't she, Jim?"

And she soon did.—London Truth.

A Romance.

The Knight of the Golden Lance drew rein upon his richly caparisoned steed in front of the ancient castle of Doonderborg.

The portcullis was batted down and the drawbridge was reefered close to the jamb of the battlemented doorway.

The castle presented a fearsome gray front, and the knight was so impressed by it that he did not observe the daughter of the seneschal, who was working in a small garden plot beyond the moat.

As no one appeared to greet the knight, he concluded to make his presence known by word of mouth. "What, ho there!" he shouted.

The daughter of the seneschal looked up suddenly. She had not before observed the knight. No response being forthcoming the knight shouted again: "What, ho there!"

"Tain't no hoe," sung out the girl; "it's a spade." And she shook it at him.

Being thus called down the Knight of the Golden Lance felt himself so hurt at his misadventure that he threw a brick at the daughter of the seneschal and withdrew in sullen silence.—N. Y. Sun.

She Rebuked Him.

Miss Jane Addam—the "Saint Jane" of Hull house fame, whose work shows her to be anything but an injudicious or demoralizing philanthropist—tells a story at the expense of those who are afraid to help anybody for fear of hurting somebody. The incident occurred in Boston, where Miss Addam had been visiting the homes of the poor. Her companion was a well-to-do Bostonian, who had theories as to the danger of "pauperizing" the poor, which forbade him to give anything, whatever the need. In one house they found a destitute old woman, whose condition moved them both to pity. The young man stood firmly to his principle, however, and after leaving the house expressed to Miss Addam the difficulty with which he had restrained himself from giving, and so, perhaps, "pauperizing" the woman. Immediately afterward the two took a horse car, and the young gentleman started at once to pay his companion's fare; but Miss Addam stopped him. "I do not recognize class distinctions," she said to the discomfited theorist, "and I object to being pauperized." And she paid her own fare.—Youth's Companion.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Health in Michigan.

During the week ended July 20, reports sent in by fifty-six observers in various portions of the state to the state board of health indicate that dysentery and whooping cough increased and pleuritis, inflammation of the kidney and influenza decreased in area of prevalence. Consumption was reported at 174 places, typhoid fever at twenty-nine, diphtheria at sixteen, scarlet fever at twenty-one, measles at nine, and smallpox at Detroit, Olivet and Battle Creek.

Ghostly Find in a Box.

A sensational find was made at Mitchell's bay at Algona by Capt. Raymond and a companion. They discovered a small packing case floating in the water, and after towing it ashore broke off the cover, which was securely nailed down. In the box they found the legs and lower half of a man's body. They were carefully wrapped up in newspapers. The body had been chopped in two just below the ribs, and the chest, head and arms were missing.

Goes for Life.

The most sensational trial ever held in Traverse City closed when Woodruff Parmelee was sentenced to state prison at Jackson for the murder of Julia Curtis. When sentence was pronounced the prisoner exclaimed in response to the usual question that a great mistake had been made, that he was not guilty of murder. Parmelee was the lover of Julia Curtis. On April 29 she was found dead from strangulation in the woods near her home.

A Village Burned.

Holton, Muskegon county, with a population of 250, was destroyed by fire. The losses were: J. P. Utters, D. P. James, barn and hotel; Kingstaad's saloon, Thompson's blacksmith shop and house, Dr. Block's office, L. P. Murphy's store. The loss is about $7,000, with an insurance of $2,000. The grist mill, two drug stores and a meat market are all the business buildings left. A cigar stub in a barn was the origin of the fire.

Michigan Insane People.

Fourteen of the twenty-four trustees of the state asylums attended a joint board meeting in Kalamazoo. Reports showed 4,350 insane people in the state, of which 1,438 are at Michigan asylum. In ten years the expense of maintaining the insane asylums in Michigan has increased from $100,000 to $380,000, which is paid by the state. The rate charged in the upper peninsula was fixed at sixty cents per day and forty-five in the lower.

Pay Dirt Found Accidentally.

A cave-in at the Ashland mine in Ironwood occurred by which a great thing will be realized. An enormous body of ore was exposed and is easy of access. Work will be commenced at once to get the ore on the surface. More men will be hired and the present wages raised. No one was hurt by the cave-in and very little damage done.

Children Eat Poisoned Meat.

Fred Whitney, a farmer of Banker, 4 miles west of Hillsdale, scattered paris green on his potatoes to kill the potato bugs. His 4-year-old daughter and her sister, 8 years old, went into the field and ate some apples that had fallen from the tree into the potato patch. The younger girl died.

Imprisoned Miners Rescued.

The nine imprisoned miners at the Pewabic mine at Iron Mountain were released and none of them was injured. The men suffered no inconvenience. All heard the crash of the timbers and made their escape to a dry drift on the first level.

AT AN END.

Practical Close of the Horr-Harvey Debate—Saturday's Arguments.

Copyright, 1895, by Axel F. Hatch.

CHICAGO, July 19.—There was an attendance of between seventy-five and 100 listeners Saturday when Mr. Horr inaugurated this next to the last session of the great silver debate. Mr. Horr opened by quoting a report of the finance committee of the United States senate for the purpose of showing that gold had not appreciated since 1873 and challenged his opponent's sincerity in basing his arguments in this matter upon Sauerbeck's tables, which are compiled by an Englishman and based upon English values. In his reply to these charges Mr. Harvey scored one of the hardest hits that has yet been placed to his credit. He produced an article written by Mr. Horr in answer to a correspondent which had appeared in the weekly and monthly editions of the New York Tribune in which Mr. Horr scoffed at the idea which he has advanced in the present debate that human labor formed a trustworthy standard of value. Mr. Horr's reply to the correspondent, as quoted by Mr. Harvey, concluded with the words: "Your system seems so absurd that I can hardly treat it soberly."

In reply to the charge that he had unfairly based his arguments upon a foreign table, Mr. Harvey produced a comparative statement that his argument would have been even more forcibly emphasized by the Aldrich report to the United States senate, and further stated that his selection of Sauerbeck's figures was based upon his belief and the generally accepted opinion that they were more authoritative.

Mr. Horr accused his opponent of being tricky in quoting one sentence from the article which he had written for the New York Tribune, and assuming that it showed the gist of the whole article. What he said in reference to the man's theories being ridiculous did not relate to his measure of value at all. It was his attempt to substitute a paper dollar based on nothing with which to do the business of the country.

Saturday's debate was full of byplay, and there was no little wit and sharp retort that kept the audience in excellent humor. In a nutshell the arguments of Saturday were along these lines:

Claimed by Mr. Harvey—That panics are due to our system of bank credits; that supply and demand, not cost of production, fix prices; that the relative value of the dollar now is greater than in 1865; that there is a constant increase in debtors, in tenants, in homicides, insanity, suicide and crime; that, in short, the logical outcome of the tendency of present events must be the substitution of a monarchy for the present republic.

Claimed by Mr. Horr—That the volume of currency in circulation is not closely related to the volume of business; that there is no such thing as an unlimited demand for anything in the world, not even of money; that there are other uses for money than as a medium of paying debts; that the panic of 1893 was caused by a fear that this country might return to a silver basis; that the business of the country does not depend upon the per capita of the circulating medium; that the debt of the country is decreasing; that eleven items in Mr. Harvey's table of debts are millions of dollars wrong in the aggregate and wholly misleading.

At the close of the day's session Mr. Harvey presented Mr. Horr with a silver dollar of 1799, as a souvenir of the debate. "In the early days of the debate," said Mr. Harvey, "you claimed the silver dollar was never the sole unit or standard of value. I hereby present you with a silver dollar coined in 1799, upon the rim of which, in place of the customary milling, is stamped by the government, these words: 'One dollar or unit, hundred cents.' Mr. Horr accepted the dollar, and announced he would have a hole bored into its middle and then hang it with a string about the neck of a granddaughter born the first day of the debate.

The debate will close to-day. On Saturday Mr. Harvey announced that he would confine himself on that day exclusively to the discussion of the advisability of independent action on the part of the United States in the matter of the free coinage of silver. Mr. Horr, on the other hand, said he would prove to the people of the United States that gold is the natural money for great business transactions and is the chosen money of all civilized nations; its use in preference to silver is an illustration of the survival of the fittest. These questions alone will form the basis of the concluding arguments to-day.

REV. DR. BEECHER IS DEAD.

Brother of the Famous Brooklyn Divine Passes Away.

NEW YORK, July 19.—Rev. Dr. Edward Beecher, brother of the late Henry Ward Beecher, died at his home, 183 Macon street, Brooklyn, early Sunday morning, aged 91 years. He was taken ill three days ago, and his family physician found him in a serious condition, due largely to advanced age and the fact that the digestive system refused to act. Rev. Dr. Beecher for some years had been in poor health, due to injuries received in a railroad accident.

Dr. Edward Beecher was born at East Hampton, L. I., August 27, 1803. In 1830 he accepted the presidency of Illinois college at Jacksonville, Ill., which position he held for the succeeding twelve years. He was the first president. During the Alton riots in 1838 an attempt was made to murder Dr. Beecher on account of his pulpiter utterances. His next call was to the Salem Street Congregational church, Boston, where he remained until 1855, when he accepted the offer of the Congregational church at Galesburg, Ill., retaining that position until the 70th year of his age. He came to Brooklyn in 1872 and was associated with his brother in the publication of the Christian Union.

NINE KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Fatal Work of a Storm That Swept Over Missouri Towns.

CAIRO, Ill., July 19.—Reports just received say that on Saturday afternoon a cyclone passed over the village of Three States, situated on the Mississippi river, 45 miles south of here on the Missouri state. Lightning struck a shanty boat tied at the bank, killing the owner, George McClelland, and his wife, and fatally injuring their three children, who are since reported to have died. Their home was said to be Kenosha, Wis. At Barnes Ridge, 3 mile west of Three States, the lightning struck a farm house, killing a man and wife named Thomas. The wind came from a western direction.

St. Louis, July 19.—A special to the Chronicle from Fort Worth, Tex., says that J. B. Pritchard and wife were killed by lightning while driving home from Gainesville Friday night. Their sleeping babe was not injured. One of the horses was also killed.

A camping party, consisting of the following named persons, go to North Lake this week for a ten day's outing: Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Shaver, Mr. and Mrs. Milo Hunter and daughter, Mrs. Sam. Guerin and children, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark and children, and Mr. Arl Guerin.

Farmers who were in the village Saturday, after the glorious rain, looked and talked more cheerful than for months, as a fair crop of beans, a good crop of late potatoes and a fine yield of corn are confidently expected, and the parched pastures will soon show the value of a plentiful supply of water for fall feed.

The surviving members of the Fourth Michigan Cavalry will have a reunion in Ypsilanti August 15. James T. Hurst, president of the association, requests a full attendance, as the meeting will be an important one. Arrangements are to be made for the dedication of the monument to those of the regiment who fell at Chickamauga, Tenn. The Fourth had a total of 2,489 men enlisted during the war. There are now about 740 survivors.

The Ann Arbor Times says: "According to the posters which are out for German day, which will be celebrated this year in Ypsilanti, Aug. 22, it will be a peculiar celebration for Germans. It will be a regular speech making day, and that, too, in English. Mayor Wells, John P. Kirk and James Gorman will orate in English, and L. J. Lisemer will wind up with a short address in his mother tongue. Mr. Lisemer's speech will perhaps be the only one some of those present can understand. There is another thing which it is rumored will put a peculiar aspect to the celebration, and that is those who are thirsty will be compelled to go to the well or drink out of a circus lemonade barrel.

Go where you may you will find the kicker. No trade or profession or calling in life is without him. He is omnipresent and assumes omniscience. Carry an undertaking to a successful end he will sulk because it was not a failure; fail and he knew it would be a failure long before the inception of the enterprise. He kicks because it is dry, and should it rain more than an hour, he is sure of a flood. Wheat looks well in the fall, but he is sure the winter will not leave enough for next year's seed; should it survive and promise an abundant crop, then the price will be so low that it will scarcely pay to harvest. Propose a public improvement and he sees ruin staring him in the face in the shape of an increase of a fraction in the rate of taxation. Should the proposition carry, he thinks the wiser plan would be to divert the funds so raised to induce the location of manufacturing institutions in the town. Ask him for a subscription to a bonus for this purpose and his shell shuts with a snap, and from the interior comes the information "that it is no worse for other people to work for their start than it was for him; nobody ever gave him anything." He bewails dull times and takes the next train to a neighboring town to do his trading. To him prosperity is a reminiscence of the past, and adversity and downfall the heritage of the future. All localities are more highly favored than his own, and the officials wiser than those under whose administration he lives.

BIG PROFITS ON Small Investments.

Returning prosperity will make many rich, but nowhere can they make so much within a short time as by successful Speculation in Grain, Provisions and Stock.

$10.00 For each dollar invested can be made by our Systematic Plan of Speculation originated by us. All successful speculators operate on a regular system.

It is a well-known fact that there are thousands of men in all parts of the United States who, by a systematic trading through Chicago brokers, make large amounts every year, ranging from a few thousand dollars for the man who invests a hundred or two hundred dollars up to $50,000 or $100,000 or more by those who invest a few thousand.

It is also a fact that those who make the largest profits from comparatively small investments on this plan are persons who live away from Chicago and invest through brokers who thoroughly understand systematic trading.

Our plan does not risk the whole amount invested on any trade, but covers both sides, so that whether the market rises or falls it brings a steady profit that piles up enormously in a short time.

WRITE FOR CONVINCING PROOFS, also our Manual on successful speculation and our Daily Market Report, full of money-making pointers. ALL FREE.

Workmen of the Chelsea Stove Works, in course of an excavation, uncovered a stone tomb, twelve feet long, six deep and five thick. It contained a skeleton of human resemblance. The Chelsea papers touch the subject gingerly, and there is a suspicion that the skeleton is that of an editorial room bore.

With breezy over-confidence the Salvation Army says that it will attack Ann Arbor Aug. 1. The defenses there are very formidable, and the devil is too sharp to be lured beyond his intrenchments. It is moreover extremely difficult to conduct a successful war against the enemy in his own country, if he is thoroughly equipped and has the sympathy of the inhabitants.

Michigan Registration Report.

A copy of the Vital Statistics Report for 1893 has been received from Secretary of State Gardner. The compilation has been completed at an unusually early date, the long interval between the year covered by the Report (1893) and the appearance of the book being caused by the unnecessary delay in returning the data under the present law. Following are some of the general results of registration for the year:

GENERAL SUMMARY FOR THE YEAR 1893.

Total number of marriages.....	19,197
Persons married.....	38,394
Persons married per 1,000 estimated population.....	17.4
Total number of births.....	47,722
Births per 1,000 estimated population.....	21.6
Total number of deaths.....	21,982
Deaths per 1,000 estimated population.....	10.0
Natural increase of population.....	25,740
Natural increase per 1,000 estimated population.....	11.6

From the beginning of registration, April 5, 1867, to the close of the year covered by this report, 1893, there have been registered the following total numbers of returns of each class:

Total number of marriages registered.....	382,580
Total number of births registered.....	994,482
Total number of deaths registered.....	417,623

Aggregate number of births, marriages and deaths.....1,794,635
Compared with the previous year, we observe a decrease in the number of marriages returned, amounting to 910 couples. The marriage rate (persons married) fell from 18.4 to 17.4 per 1,000 population. The number of births increased 1,501, and the number of deaths increased 253 over 1892.

The most notable feature of the year is the sharp decline in the marriage rate, consequent on the hard times prevailing throughout the State. Great distress was experienced during the winter of 1893-94 in the iron mining counties of the upper peninsula on account of the shutting down of the mines, and the number of marriages, usually very large, which is returned from that part of the State, fell off abruptly. A corresponding decrease or rather lack of increase in the number of children born of foreign-born parents took place, although the total number of births for the year showed an increase over 1892. While there were 1,248 more births of children of parents both native-born reported for 1893 than for 1892, there was an increase of only 20 in the number of children born to foreign-born couples. The effect of the hard times on the birth rate of children born to foreign-born parents cannot be expected to be as immediately and abruptly apparent as the effect on the marriage rate, but will rather be progressive for a series of years to come.

The increase in the number of deaths returned for the year is no more than is justified by the increase of population. The death rate, 10.0 per 1,000 inhabitants, is the same as last year. No epidemics prevailed, although quite a large number of deaths was again reported from influenza ("la grippe"). The total number so returned, however (555), was much less than the deaths reported from this cause in either 1890, 1891 or 1892. It is probable that our method of collection of data in this State tends to a larger return of indefinite causes, such as "la grippe" has fairly become, than when the statements of cause of death are derived from physicians' certificates. Three deaths were returned from smallpox, a greater number than has been reported for some years past. It is premonitory of the prevalence of this disease in the State during the following year, when sixty deaths occurred according to reports made to the State Board of Health.

CAUSES OF DEATH.

The most important causes of death from a practical standpoint are those that the State Board of Health is endeavoring to restrict—the "communicable diseases dangerous to the public health" as defined by law. Especial prominence is given to these in the tables, and in the following summary the number and percentage to total deaths from all specified diseases are stated for the leading ones:

Deaths from specified diseases.....	17,911
Deaths from communicable diseases dangerous to the public health.....	5,053 or 28.2 per cent.

This number includes only those at present so defined by the State Board of Health. It will probably eventually include all specific infectious diseases. The principal diseases now included are:

Consumption.....	2,154 or 12.0 per cent
Diphtheria and croup.....	1,218 or 6.8 per cent
Typhoid fever.....	689 or 3.8 "
Scarlet fever.....	360 or 2.0 "
Whooping-cough.....	172 or 1.0 "
Measles.....	127 or .7 "

Certain other diseases and groups of diseases of special importance are:

Cancer.....	644 or 3.6 per cent
Influenza.....	555 or 3.1 "
Pneumonia.....	1,385 or 7.7 "
Lung diseases (including pneumonia and consumption).....	4,020 or 22.4 "
Bowel diseases.....	2,035 or 11.4 "
Brain diseases.....	1,709 or 9.5 "
Heart diseases (not including "heart failure").....	1,076 or 6.0 "

The report has several interesting diagrams and a colored map, showing the distribution of mortality from typhoid fever, by counties, for a period of five years past. It should be in the hands of every health officer and persons interested in public health in the State. While a limited number of copies is sent to the clerk of each county for distribution to the supervisors and other officials entitled to them by law, the majority of these reports are distributed directly from the office of the Secretary of State, to whom application should accordingly be made by any persons desiring a copy.

Keeping Old Age at Bay.

A few years ago an Italian bacteriologist proclaimed that he had discovered the "germ of old age." The idea was scouted by all scientific men, but there may be something in it after all. At any rate, says Modern Medicine, there seems to be good ground for believing that germs, if not a specific germ, are at least one of the most important influences which bring on old age. It has long been known that the ptomaines or poisonous substances produced by microbes are capable of setting up various degenerative processes. Degenerative changes in the joints, the liver, the kidneys and other organs have been directly traced to this cause. The writer has for some time held the opinion that the degenerative changes incident to advancing age are due to the same cause, namely, the poisons absorbed from the alimentary canal. These poisons are constantly present in greater or less quantity, according to the extent to which fermentative and putrefactive processes prevail in the stomach and intestines. These considerations suggest at once the thought, while all human beings must necessarily be constantly subject to the influence of poisonous substances generated in their own alimentary canal, and consequently must grow old and succumb sooner or later to the degenerative process of old age, these processes may be greatly accelerated by subsisting upon a diet which favors the production of poisonous substances in the alimentary canal.

AFTER August 1 any Michigan girls under 18 years of age wanting to get married will have to get the written consent of her parents, or have her intended husband get it for her. A new law going into effect on that date requires that such a document be filed with the county clerk before the marriage license may be issued.

RECENT natural gas explosions have alarmed certain members of the Chicago school board, and caused the continuance of fuel gas in the public schools to be regarded with disfavor. Chief Engineer Waters filed a report with the board of education committee on grounds and buildings recommending that the use of fuel gas be abandoned.

THE International Mining and Industrial exhibition which was to be held in Denver next summer, and which had been widely advertised, has been abandoned. The reason given by the committee is lack of public spirit. One citizen gave $50,000, and about $150,000 was to have been appropriated by the city and county, but the Denver people did not back up the project.

Two dozen officers of every grade, from colonel down to sergeant, and representing every branch of service in the German army, have just left Berlin for Valparaiso. A NEW society, which has for one of its cardinal principles the belief in the possession by animals of a soul and in the immortality of that soul and its activity in a future state, is being organized in Baltimore for the protection of animals from cruelty and ill treatment. ONE of the vegetable marvels for July is the fraxinella, an old fashioned flowering plant, native in southern Europe and Asia, and much cultivated in the gardens of our grandmothers. The plant has showy flowers, white red and rosy, and an odor that belongs to the leaves as well as the blossoms. The plant, if visited at night with a lighted match, is suddenly enveloped with blue flames.

A NEW YORK food reformer insists that the human body needs a bone starchy as food just as much as does certain kind of vegetation. He holds that under the existing regimen, the bones of the human frame are not properly supplied with the chemical elements needed to keep them in sound and vigorous condition, and that these elements can most easily be obtained by consuming the powdered bones of animals ordinarily used for food.

THE Puget sound region of Washington is preparing to enter into active competition with Southern California in supplying the east with fruit. Successful experiments were made in shipping strawberries to eastern markets early this season. Recently several trial shipments of cherries were made, and plums and prunes are to be sent later. Some kind of superiority over the southern grown fruit seems to be claimed in the announcement of the new productions as "Puget sound unirrigated fruit."

AT Delphi a colossal headless statue of Athene in porous stone was discovered recently, bearing traces of polychrome coloring. Fragments of an archaic group in marble, representing a lion tearing a bull to pieces, were also found. Of the reliefs that adorned the scene of the ancient theater, representing the labors of Hercules, so far the shooting of the Stymphalian birds, the struggle with Antaeus, the contest with the sea monster to deliver Hermeion and a part of the battle with the Centaurs have been recovered.

THAT relic of the medieval ages, hazing, has received an abrupt check at West Point in the punishment handed out to a member of the third class, who had abused the authority given him by custom over a student of a lower grade. The third class barbarian has by an order from the officers of the academy lost all privileges of upper classmen by being assigned to camp duty this year and next. Moreover, he is required to walk extra guard hours each camp day and every Wednesday and Saturday afternoons during the winter.

HARVEY AND HERR.

The Debate in Chicago Over the Silver Question.

"Coin's Financial School" Defended by Its Author—A New York Financier Attacks Every Position Taken Therein—A Synopsis.

Copyright, 1895, by Axel F. Hatch.

CHICAGO, July 24.—Although the weather was cool and pleasant Monday the attendance at the Harve-Harvey debate dwindled down very perceptibly. There were just fifty-three persons present when Mr. Harve-Harvey reopened the discussion, for the first time since the beginning of the debate reading from manuscript. During the nineteenth century all the great countries had adopted a gold standard, he asserted, but had not discarded silver. However, none of them had opened their mints to silver. He then dipped into the history of finance in France and was still talking of it when interrupted by the bell. An attack on Senator Morrill followed. He was not very careful of the truth, said Mr. Harve-Harvey, when he stated that no silver dollars had been coined for many years prior to 1873. Copies of the mint reports for several years previous to 1873 were here submitted showing that several millions of dollars had been coined during these periods. "Now," said the author of "Coin," "Senator Morrill couldn't tell the truth in one particular I have a right to assume that he could not tell it in any."

Mr. Harve-Harvey warmly defended Senator Morrill. He said: "When Senator Morrill made the assertion that there had been no silver dollars coined for many years prior to 1873, he did not mean to be taken literally. He meant that in comparison to the amount of gold coined there had been practically none coined, and that is true. Mr. Harve-Harvey has a way I do not like of trying to smirch the character of everybody who differs from him in opinion. Mr. Harve-Harvey admits that he made one bad misstatement in his book, and according to his method of argument, I have a right to assume that he is wrong in everything."

Mr. Harve-Harvey turned to the discussion of bimetallism, taking up first that branch of it relating to unlimited coinage, and went into the history of the matter among other nations. "It makes no difference," said Mr. Harve-Harvey, "what the history of unlimited coinage is. It is admitted on every hand that all nations have now closed their mints to silver and that is the main point."

Mr. Harve-Harvey quoted from Mr. Harve-Harvey's book that "the objection to independent bimetallism is that the parity between the two metals can not be maintained at our ratio of 16 to 1, that is, the gold 23 3/10 grains in the gold dollar will be worth more than the silver 371 1/4 grains in the silver dollar," and "with silver remonetized, and a just and equitable standard of values, we can, if necessary, by act of congress reduce the number of grains in a gold dollar till it is the same value as the silver dollar. We can legislate the premium out of gold." He asked what becomes of Mr. Harve-Harvey's ratio of 16 to 1. Here is what he virtually says: "The gold dollar may be cut down if need be so that the ratio shall be 16 to 1/4." His mathematics, however, are as defective as his veracity. Mathematically 16 to 3/4 is the same as 32 to 1, so it is not the ratio he cares about.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—Mr. Harve-Harvey says that the two metals can be kept in circulation at a fixed ratio. I have not said that, for they can be, as they have been in this country. I know they have attempted to make you believe that there was no gold in circulation in this country, or seeking the mints after 1873, but both were misrepresentations. Mr. Harve-Harvey lies in the face of history when he says that silver was not used prior to 1873 as a measure of value. Silver was the unit in that coinage system regulating the size of the gold coins, but the two together were the measure of values, and that is what we mean by the double standard. Mr. Harve-Harvey alludes to something I have said before, and then adds: "Cut the yardstick in two and it will make twice as many yards of cloth in the world." Now, in 1875, you doubled the length of the yardstick. You can see no harm in destroying the price of a man's property, cutting the price of his property half in two, but your eyes are wide open when any man proposes to even up with you by proposing to cut the gold-dollar half in two. We don't wish to do that, either; we wish to put back in the coinage system the money that you demonetized in 1873.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—It is possible that Mr. Harve-Harvey believes that the act of 1873 when it demonetized silver cut the price of the property of the world in two, and that prices immediately dropped 50 per cent. I was around the world in 1873 and I know that did not take place, and he knows it. You destroy one-half of the wheat in the world and the chances are that you will increase the value of wheat probably four times; but wheat is an article that people consume from year to year, or after a short time, Gold has been accumulating for ages, and if you should destroy the primary money quality of half the gold in the world you would not change the price of the metal one-half. As soon as the price would go up there is an enormous store laid away over the entire world that is not being used for money purposes that would at once seek the channels and be coined into money and take the place of the money that had been destroyed.

Referring to his previous quotations from Mr. Harve-Harvey's book, Mr. Harve-Harvey said he read them for the purpose of getting at what the author desires to reach by the free coinage of silver, and said that what "Coin" is really after is a cheap dollar. He would reduce the value of the money unit of this country one half. Mr. Harve-Harvey protested against the whole scheme, because it is an effort to cheapen labor. The greatest commodity ever placed on the markets of the world is labor. Is it best to cheapen the unit of value and decrease the purchasing value of our dollar? He was a believer in cheap prices and only opposed them when the cheapening of the price is at the expense of the men who do the work. Mr. Harve-Harvey said that his opponent argued that the dear dollar is of more benefit to laborers than a cheaper dollar. He did not intend to let Mr. Harve-Harvey cloak himself behind the laboring man. "You have cut in two the number of days that it is possible for men to find labor," he said; "you have put any where from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000 laboring men out of employment in this country entirely, and to those laboring men who are now destitute, and many of whose leaders are now lying in jail, you sing the sweet songs of the high purchasing power of the gold dollar—when he gets it. Mr. Harve-Harvey then delved into question of ratio and bimetallism and reviewed the historical position of silver in European countries.

Returning to the relation free coinage bears toward the laboring man, Mr. Harve-Harvey said: "In 1879, when the question of metallic money became prominent in this country, we resumed specie payments, and the only money of final redemption was gold. Do you tell me that distress was abroad in the land from that on? Any man who says that must be ignorant of the history of work in the United States. Since this nation began, the years from 1879 to 1892 found our people better employed and at better wages than in any other same number of years since this government was formed. Four millions of men to-day out of employment. Where did you get your figures?"

Mr. Harve-Harvey—I said from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000. Mr. Harve-Harvey—There isn't any truth in either statement. In the years 1889-92 I was in thirty-one states of this union and during the entire time I did not visit a city where the people were not well employed at good wages and I know that any man who says that from 1879 to 1892 this country was in financial distress and that the laboring men were not then well employed is not well qualified to talk upon the subject, because that is not the fact.

Mr. Harve-Harvey congratulated the people on Mr. Harve-Harvey's frank admission that over-production cuts no figure in this controversy. Mr. Harve-Harvey—I never said that. Mr. Harve-Harvey referred to the national elections from 1884 to 1892 and said: "Now, since 1892 a flood of calamities has come. Don't you in this debate refer to the prosperity of this country from 1873 to 1893; don't you refer to the prosperity that has built up millionaires and multi-millionaires and strewn this country with millions of tramps and paupers and men that don't know how they are going to provide for their families in the coming year."

Tuesday.

CHICAGO, July 25.—No evidences of fatigue or lack of breath were apparent in either of the principals in the Harve-Harvey debate when time was called for the sixth round Tuesday.

Mr. Harve-Harvey led with a vindication of the importance of the debate, which, he said, rested upon five historical reasons:

1. For 200 years prior to the demonetization of silver in 1873 silver was seeking the mints of the world for coinage into money.

2. For 200 years prior to 1873 there was no variation between the commercial and the legal ratio of 15 1/2 to 1. During the twenty-two years since 1873, however, the two ratios had separated widely, and gone from 15 1/2 to 1 to about 32 to 1.

3. For 338 years prior to 1873, the quantity ratio between silver and gold ranged from 56 of silver to 1 of gold to 4 of silver to 1 of gold, but notwithstanding this wide variation the commercial ratio had clung tenaciously to the legal ratio.

4. The price of silver in the London market, as measured in gold, up to 1873 was practically steady, while since that date silver had declined from 60 pence per ounce to 28 7/8 pence per ounce.

5. That this violent fluctuation in the price of silver has been going on ever since its demonetization and is going on to-day.

Mr. Harve-Harvey did not reply directly to his opponent, but took up Mr. Harve-Harvey's statement of Monday that but one error had been found in his work, saying that there were myriads of mistakes, not in express statement of facts, but by false implication which any man of sense would repudiate on sight. At this point Mr. Harve-Harvey created some derision at the expense of Harve-Harvey by saying that he did not deny that his opponent believed all he had written. As a matter of fact, it was impossible for him to tell what a man in Mr. Harve-Harvey's state of mind might be capable of believing. The statement in "Coin's Financial School" that every ounce of silver produced up to the present time had cost the producer two dollars an ounce was quoted by Mr. Harve-Harvey. If the mine owners had been producing silver at this cost and selling it, as they had been doing, at from $1.30 to $1.57 an ounce, they had lost by the transaction during the past three years some $250,000,000.

The next point of attack was the statement of page 83 of Harve-Harvey's book that the people of this country are annually paying to England $300,000,000 in interest on national and private bonds. Mr. Harve-Harvey denied this proposition flatly, and challenged anyone to produce evidence that the indebtedness of the people of this country to all the nations of Europe involved anything like such an amount of interest.

Harve-Harvey then took his opponent to task for skipping about the book to find substance for his remarks instead of confining himself to the regular order of proceedings as agreed upon, and said that he would not be diverted from his original plan by such tactics.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—The answer in your book of hedge-podge and errors that the "government can create a demand for a commodity" has misled thousands of honest and unthinking people. My friend here, Dr. Robinson, says it is using a seeming truth to lie with, which is the most crafty and dangerous kind of false statement. You used an illustration to teach that free coinage would create an unlimited demand for silver and increase its value in the markets of the world. Under such coinage as you advocate silver would be received by the government, coined, and then, in effect, returned to the owner again. He might not get the same dollars coined from the identical silver which he took to the mint, but he would get those coined from silver received and treated precisely as his was. Your illustration of the government buying 100,000 horses is a fraud on its face, that is all. You say the average price of wheat in 1891 was 85 cents. The Statistical Abstract gives the New York price as $1.09 in 1891 and the average price in Chicago in 1891 was 97 cents. If you are teaching the people the truth, explain this discrepancy.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—Mr. Harve-Harvey will make nothing by abusing or ridiculing me. The intelligence of the American people demand something higher than that. Mr. Harve-Harvey should have thought of how the government fixes the price on gold. We ask the same thing for silver, that's all. When we get to the wheat table I will satisfy Mr. Harve-Harvey that it is right, as he has already been satisfied of everything we have touched.

Mr. Harve-Harvey then entered into an argument on what he regarded as scientific bimetallism, advocating the option of the debtor to pay in either metal as a vital principle, the most important essential in the success of bimetallism, preventing corners on either metal, always increasing the demand for the cheaper metal and thereby restoring it to parity if there should be a break. To give the option to the creditor would cause the dearer metal to be used and a parity would be permanently broken, the gap growing wider all the time. With silver discarded as it is now we must go to the men who own the gold to get it and submit to their terms. A corner on gold could not, as it does now, threaten the credit of this nation if silver was in competition with gold as primary money. If we used the $300,000,000 of silver now in the treasury there would be no borrowing of gold.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—Mr. Harve-Harvey on Monday called attention to the great increase of farm tenancy in the United States since 1830, making that one of the points of his book to prove that the country is going to the dogs. It is from his point of view, but not from mine. He calls this increase evil and I call it good. Mr. Harve-Harvey sees in tenancy, as it is in the United States, the rising of men by hundreds of thousands, from low to a high condition. He calls that a national calamity. Is it? I do not so regard it. If you would show the people that this increase in tenancy had been at the expense of farm owners you would have made a point, but that is not the truth. Undoubtedly in Massachusetts men have left their lands in the hands of tenants, but they have gone to the west. They make up the best people in the western country. Persons who have graduated from the farms of New England have helped to build up this great country of ours in the west. They are the saviors of this nation.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—By the rules of this debate Mr. Harve-Harvey had no right to go to that tenant subject now. Its logical place in the debate is elsewhere. The statement he has just made, I promise to show at the proper time, will appear plainly unfair and inconsistent with the facts. Primary money is the measure of values. Gold (our present primary money) is now the measure of values. Mr. Harve-Harvey and I agree as to that. Silver and gold working together, virtually as one metal, were formerly the measure of values.

Mr. Harve-Harvey in the Weekly New York Tribune of June 19 (the paper is here, Mr. Harve-Harvey) "paper money is worth only the value of the money in which it is redeemed." And Mr. Harve-Harvey is right. I do not mean to say that paper money cannot be made primary money, as we may see later, but it does not become the measure of values when only representing primary money. To be a measure of value it must represent itself only.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—Any business man will only need to look at the table of production of silver and gold since 1873 to be able to ascertain that the law operates in reference to silver as well as in reference to every other commodity. Silver does not represent to-day the same amount of labor, of work, that it represented in 1873. It is cheaper because the demand and the supply are in such relations to each other that it makes it cheaper, just as wheat has been cheaper, and for the same reason. Prices are not governed or controlled by the amount of primary money in any country or in the whole world so far as I know. Why, when we passed the law of 1873 there was at that time only about $135,000,000 of gold in the country—all the primary money we had and if his doctrine is true prices should have been doubled instantly. If your doctrine is true every product in this country should have been reduced in price by this cheapening of silver.

Thursday.

CHICAGO, July 27.—At the opening of the Harve-Harvey silver debate Thursday it was announced that but two more sessions would be held. And for this reason the daily bouts would be somewhat lengthened in order to admit of the delivery of the number of words originally agreed upon. The debate Thursday was marked by a more than usually sharp encounter between the two contestants. Mr. Harve-Harvey called his opponent's attention to a statement which he had made in his criticisms upon Senator Morrill, wherein he stated that the silver dollars of 41 2/3 grains were largely coined previous to the demonetization of silver in 1873 and after the passage of the law of 1873, making subsidiary coinage of less value than its face. Therefore he inferred that Senator Morrill was mistaken in stating that none of the 41 2/3 dollars had been coined from silver mined in this country. Mr. Harve-Harvey said that the old dollars of 41 2/3 grains were coined for the people of Nevada and California, notwithstanding that at that time the bullion was worth more uncoined than coined. Mr. Harve-Harvey then said that these dollars were coined from silver mined in this country and sent to the mint for that purpose. Congress had provided that foreign coin should be received by the government at a certain fixed value, and further that such coins should not again put into circulation but should be re-coined at the mint. The report of the director of the mint showed that over $5,000,000 in silver had thus accumulated, having been found in the gold during the process of assaying it.

At this point Harve-Harvey challenged Mr. Harve-Harvey's statement, saying that he had not brought his authorities with him, and therefore his arguments were entitled to no standing in debate. He then handed Mr. Harve-Harvey a statement of the director of the mint, which he said reported that during the year 1870, 418,422 silver dollars had been coined at Carson City. Mr. Harve-Harvey again called his opponent to task for not confining his remarks to the order of debate originally agreed upon, and said that he would not be diverted from this order. He then entered upon a discussion of primary and credit money, saying that an overissue of credit money caused a drain upon the primary money for redemption purposes. An example of this had just been witnessed in this country in the issue of bonds by the present administration for the purpose of maintaining the gold reserve.

Mr. Harve-Harvey said he had received a letter within the last few days from a large New York manufacturer in which the writer stated that all the money the bank sent him to pay off his men was in silver certificates. The run on the United States treasury must continue till the credit money outstanding, estimated at $1,000,000,000, was reduced to the quantity of gold in this country, which was variously estimated at from $400,000,000 to $600,000,000, or the stock of primary money was increased. To bring order out of confusion the first necessary step was to build up the stock of primary money. All credit money rested on primary money, and if the gold standard was adhered to the people must look to gold alone to sustain its credit. Each national gold loan was a step towards national bankruptcy, temporarily restoring confidence, but finally resulting in an increased demand for gold. To correct this system the remonetization of silver was necessary. Every moment's delay endangered the safety of the republic.

Mr. Harve-Harvey took his opponent to task for making a mistake in his figures regarding the amount of silver dollars coined in 1870 at the Carson City mint and asserted that the mint report from which the silver champion had quoted sustained Mr. Harve-Harvey's proposition that not any of the silver produced in this country and sold by silver owners, or taken to the mint for coinage, was embraced in that money which Mr. Harve-Harvey said was coined after 1853. The mint report showed that from 1870 to 1874, in the mint of Carson City, there were only coined 19,283 of the old silver dollars. The report showed they were coined from the silver accumulated in assaying the gold taken to that mint. Mr. Harve-Harvey added: Up to this moment Mr.

Harve-Harvey has not said one word upon the real question in debate. He spent hours to prove that the law of 1873 was conceived in sin and brought forth iniquity. I gave a short, succinct history of the bill and the steps taken in its passage. He has not controverted a single statement of mine. He has nowhere proven any act of bribery or the influence of money in a single step taken during the progress of the bill through congress. He or no one else ever will, because there was none. He has now printed long tables to prove that when the entire world, except England, was attempting to control the price of silver by legislation, they succeeded in keeping the legal price within five cents on the dollar of the market or commercial price, and that generally the variation between the market and the legal price was only about two cents. I have virtually shown—and he virtually admits, at least he has nowhere denied it—that a variation of one-quarter of one point has thus far been sufficient to drive the dearer metal from every country in the world. My proposition is that gold has remained nearly stationary in price since 1873 and that silver has fallen in price in accordance with the great law of supply and demand, and that the cheapened processes of production, with the increase of the supply, has driven down the price of silver.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—I want to say to Mr. Harve-Harvey, while disputing all that he has said, the silver derived from gold in refining gold at the mine was not coined into dollars, but was coined into fractional silver. When he says that the government was willing to lose that 2 or 3 per cent. premium he says that the government was willing to do something that the individual was not. The country needs $34,800,000,000 to meet the normal demand for money. It needs it just as it needs a normal supply of wheat. For each dollar in existence we are paying the banks interest on two dollars. This is the way the banks work up the actual volume in existence to the normal volume. With $100,000,000 in existence, the people are using it and paying interest on $3,300,000,000 additional. This interest varies from 5 to 12 per cent. The banks are interested in holding down the volume of money and supplying the remainder needed with their credit system. They take the quantity of money in existence and stretch it like a piece of rubber. And they sometimes let loose of their end. It is used to mould public opinion in their interest. It can be truthfully said that all money in circulation represents borrowed money. It is human nature, known to all men, that most debtors are moral cowards. Money is the lash they are afraid of and the money lenders hold the whip hand.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—Whenever silver mining costs two dollars an ounce, men who are in it paying their expenses and can only sell it for sixty cents will quit that business the world over. The mines that are mining silver at less than sixty cents will keep right on in the business. Now, Mr. Harve-Harvey, the fact that these mines have been running since 1873, according to your own statement, when the full effects of demonetization took place, with silver going down and down, if the production is increased from year to year, that of itself proves, and no man can gainsay it, that they are still making money at the price, or they would not stay in that business. They could not. Hence this effort of Mr. Harve-Harvey to get $1.19 out of the entire people of the United States for an article that costs the men who are producing it less than sixty cents an ounce. Was there ever such class legislation attempted in any country, to compel the people to pay for a thing three times as much as it costs to produce it? The men who own mines and those who own sums of money in excess of the money due them may be benefited by this cheap money scheme, but the rest of the people will receive nothing but injury.

Mr. Harve-Harvey—What Mr. Harve-Harvey has said about the cost of producing silver he could have said with a great deal more force about the cost of producing gold. Gold, dollar for dollar, costs a great deal less than silver to mine. Over 50 per cent of all the silver produced comes from prospects where men are trying to make mines, mines that are not paying for either gold or silver, or both, and they are shipping that to get back what they can. There are only three or four silver mines left in the United States that are paying, and they are running precariously. Why? Because all mines are uncertain and uncertain may be lost in a week from now. The shoylocks of old loaned their own money. The shoylocks of to-day have a system by which they loan other people's money. They are defending that system.

MADE HER A TARGET.

American Schooner's Exciting Experience Off Cape Antonio.

BREAKWATER, Del., July 26.—Capt. Quick, of the American schooner Carrie E. Lane, upon his arrival here Wednesday night had a tale to tell about a thrilling encounter in Cuban waters with a Spanish gunboat. Two shots were fired at the Lane by the man-of-war, and one of the schooner's crew narrowly escaped being killed by one of them. The vessel was made to heave to and give an account of herself before being allowed to proceed.

Capt. Quick says that he could not get the name of the gunboat. He adds that after the first shot was fired at the Lane he caused the stars and stripes to be hoisted at the peak, but the only response the Spaniards made was a second shot. The gunboat did not hoist her colors until after the first shot was fired.

Campes' Defeat at Valenzuela.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 27.—A cablegram from Key West received by private steamer Mascotte, from Havana, confirms the report of Martinez Campos' defeat at the battle of Valenzuela. Of the 1,000 Spanish troops that went into battle, only 300 escaped to Bayamo, where they are surrounded by 6,000 Cubans under Maceo, Maso, Quinlan, Bandera and Goulet. The insurgents' loss at this battle was 280 killed and wounded.

Lynched an Innocent Man.

FORD, Ky., July 29.—It developed Friday that the negro, Bob Haggard, who was lynched here last week, charged with having outraged Miss E. McKin, was innocent of the crime with which he was charged. The story told of how the deed was done has been proven to be utterly false. The work was done by a few hot-headed men who did not take time to inquire whether Haggard was guilty or not.

William Stoke, 85 years old (colored), who is serving life imprisonment at Providence, R. I., for having killed Joseph Barron June 7, 1894, has become insane.

HOLMES' BONES.

He Employed a Man to Dig Up Skeletons of His Victims.

Charles Chapman, Found by the Police, Gives Damaging Evidence Against the Famous Fiend—His Grewsome Story.

CHICAGO, July 26.—By far the most important person found by the police to bring the crime of murder home to Holmes was found Saturday and told a startling story, corroborated by the material fact of a human skeleton.

His story in substance is as follows: About the time of the disappearance of Anna Williams and Miss Cigrand from the "castle" of Holmes at the Sixty-third and Wallace streets, the man answered an advertisement in the Chicago papers in the name of Harry Gordon, which was one of the names Holmes assumed.

The advertisement was to call at Fifty-third and Wallace streets. The man went there and was given the body of a man to articulate by Holmes. He performed the work and was paid for it. Then he was given the body of a woman with the flesh of the face torn off. He articulated this body and received pay for the work from Holmes. He was given a third body, which was that of a woman and the flesh of the face of this one was also torn off. Holmes did not pay the man for doing this last work and he retained the skeleton.

The man gave the skull of the woman, which he had kept in his possession, to Inspector Fitzpatrick. Detectives were at once sent to the man's house to bring the remainder of the skeleton to the city hall, and the ghastly proof of Holmes' fiendish murders is now at police headquarters.

The police believe the skeletons of the women were those of Anna Williams and Emeline Cigrand, because both were missed about that time, according to the man's story. The male body is supposed to have been that of Robert E. Phelps, who is said to have been Holmes' business manager in the copying concern and to have married Minnie Williams.

The name by which the mechanic is known is Charley Chapman. He has not been formally placed under arrest but probably will be as soon as the police get from him all the information he will give. It is said that he knows entirely too much of Holmes and his skeletons to be an innocent man.

Chapman further says that Holmes offered him $250 to set up the skeletons of two children and that he refused to do it. When asked his reasons, he became confused, and said he simply disliked the job.

It was what he claims to be the skull of Mrs. Conner which he brought to Inspector Fitzpatrick. He claims that the balance of the bones are now in the hands of a young medical student to whom he loaned them. The entire skeleton will probably be in the hands of the police to-day.

Upon information obtained from Chapman, Inspector Fitzpatrick got possession of the trunk in which Holmes claims to have put the Williams girl when he said he threw it into the lake. The body was put into the trunk, but instead of being sunk in the lake it was sent to a house on Westworth avenue near Twenty-second street for Chapman to work on.

In the trunk were found a tin-type picture, it is supposed of the girl whose body was in the trunk, although the police will not say so. A bangle of three-cent pieces was also found in the trunk, and the presumption is that it was the property of the same murdered woman.

Chapman was taken to the Holmes house in Englewood. He has pointed out two spots, one in the northeast corner of the cellar and another under the sidewalk, where he claims the police will find beneath the surface two bricked graves, and he is of the opinion that a body may be found in one or both of them. An extra force of men will be put to digging for them this morning.

On the second floor Chapman went direct to the place where he had got the bodies. It was the "blind" room toward the west side of the house and just opposite the quarters occupied by the Quinlans. The witness talked freely. He said:

"On my first visit Holmes brought me in here. The body of the woman was stretched out there against the west wall. It was so disfigured that identification would be impossible. The skin on the face was out around and then torn back like a mask over the forehead. The flesh was also backed to an inch above the roots of the hair. The body and limbs were not mutilated. I cut the arms off and carried them home, and Holmes brought the trunk and lower limbs to me, also quartered, after midnight. Each of the other bodies was found in the same position and similarly treated. Holmes made a great deal of money out of how he supplied the college boys with 'cadavers' and 'full-rigged' skeletons at cut rates. That was why I asked no questions, and as I was not an expert I was glad for his trade to learn the business. Holmes had two acid vats in the basement where he got rid of flesh and bleached bones."

The latest alleged victim of the murderer was Emily Van Tassel, the girl whose name the police withheld from publication until Sunday. She lived with her mother on North Robey street and was employed in a candy store on Milwaukee avenue. A man supposed to be H. H. Holmes made her acquaintance in the store and after he had visited her a few times she too disappeared and has been seen no more.

NOT A MASSACRE.

Reported Slaughter of Whites at Jackson's Hole Untrue.

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T., July 29.—The wild rumors received Saturday that a general assassination of whites had occurred at Jackson's Hole appear to be without foundation in fact, and a short dispatch received at an early hour Saturday morning from Market Lake saying that all was quiet at Jackson's Hole and no fighting had occurred has since been confirmed. The fact is the settlers are well armed and ammunitioned and strongly entrenched and can in all probability hold out until the soldiers arrive. The latter are in the neighborhood of Market Lake and ought to make Jackson's Hole Tuesday afternoon. The Indians, to the number of about 300, are encamped on the ground where their fellows were killed a week ago and are hungry for vengeance. There are also considerable bodies of Indians scattered all over the Teton basin, and the signal fires for their assembling are burning. They are, however, short of ammunition.

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Telegrams received at the war department Sunday from the seat of the Indian troubles are of an encouraging nature. The denial of the reported massacre at Jackson's Hole is followed by reports of a pacific nature that are gratifying to the department.

A telegram from Gen. Coppinger, received Sunday evening, says that the troops left Market Lake Saturday evening at 5 p. m. and will reach Mary's Dale on Little Grove Tree creek Tuesday evening. Gen. Coppinger has arranged to have constant communication with the department by means of courier service to Fort Russell.

It is extremely dangerous to reach the point where the Indians are encamped. Twenty miles of dense forest lie between the main body of settlers and the Indians, who are ensconced in the most rugged portion of the Rocky mountain system, rivaling in ambush facilities the lava beds of the Modoc war. If the Indians are inclined to be hostile it will require several thousand troops to dislodge them, and the "starving out" process is the only one that will be successful. According to the scouts who accompany the troops, Indian scouts well acquainted with the country where the Indians are encamped fear the present quiet of the Indians means that a trap has been prepared for the troops, but every precaution will be taken to prevent a repetition of the Custer affair.

Indians are pouring into Jackson's Hole country from all directions, though they are not at present molesting the settlers. Agent Teters wires the Indian department that many Indians are joining the Indians in Hoback canyon and that they occupy a position that is practically impregnable.

RUIN BY A STORM.

Great Damage to Property and Crops in the Northwest.

CHICAGO, July 29.—Storms, combining cyclones, cloudbursts, hail and lightning, raged generally over the northwest and west late Friday night and early Saturday morning. At Kewanee, Peoria and near Princeton, Ill., cyclonic wind demolished city and country structures, snapped off trees and did great damage to crops. Corn and fruit were ruined in many places. Barns were torn down and at least two dozen horses were killed at various points in the storm's path.

In Iowa the storm was the heaviest known for years, and the damage to property and crops is enormous. Wisconsin, too, had a taste of the blow, but across the lake, in Michigan, the reports are only of a grateful rain that broke a partially protracted drought.

A cyclone raged in parts of Indiana. Near Indianapolis considerable damage was done. At Alexandria the mill of the Union Iron & Steel company was partly demolished. Patrick Sears was caught in the ruins and severely injured. Three hundred men are thrown out of employment.

North Dakota farmers estimate their loss on corn and wheat at $500,000. Hail accompanied the storm here, beating down the crops so they looked as if they had been crushed by a steam roller.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 29.—This section was visited about 4:30 Sunday morning by the worst rain and lightning storm in the history of the weather bureau. The rainfall was 4.57 inches, the heaviest on record. No damage was done on the Missouri side, but across the line in Kansas great damage was done to private and public property. Reports from all over the city indicate that the damage will foot up into the thousands. Street pavements were washed out like so much kindling wood, sidewalks were carried away, small woodsheds and outhouses were moved to the creek bottoms and destroyed and the homes of a number of families were flooded.

SLAIN IN HIS PULPIT.

Assassin Shoots Rev. E.H. Williams at Mitchell Station, Ala.

MITCHELL STATION, Ala., July 29.—Services were being conducted in a negro church near here, when a pistol shot rang out and the preacher, Rev. E.H. Williams, fell dead in his pulpit. The ball entered his heart. The assassin is believed to have stood outside the church building at the time he fired. His identity is not known.

The Golden Now.

There's a time to wake and a time to sleep, A time to labor, a time to rest; There's a time to give and a time to keep, Ere the hands at last clasp over the breast And the form is still on the still white bed, Ere the dull orbs under the lids no more May kindly lead where the weary tread— The good we do must be done before The stars are out, and the night is nigh Wherein we never may still a sigh.

Some day the hands so quick to caress Will clasp each other no more; some night The brow that the brows locks love to press Will lift no more in the war for right; The lips that offer sweet words of hope To hearts encumbered will smile for none— No aid from these for the lost who grope Through the fog of sin, for their day is done. We may wound or heal, we may scold or pray, But that we would do must be done to-day. —Charles Eugene Banks, in Chicago Post.

He Will Not Drown Himself.

(From the Troy, N. Y., Times.)

R. W. Edwards, of Lansingburg, was prostrated by sunstroke during the war, and it has entailed on him peculiar and serious consequences. At present writing Mr. E. is a prominent officer of Post Lyon, G. A. R., Cohoes and a past aide de camp on the staff of the commander-in-chief of Albany Co. In the interview with a reporter, he said:

"I was wounded and sent to the hospital at Winchester. They sent me together with others to Washington—a ride of about 100 miles. Having no room in the box cars we were placed face up on the bottom of flat cars. The sun beat down upon our unprotected heads. When I reached Washington I was insensible and was unconscious for ten days while in the hospital. An abscess gathered in my ear and broke; it has been gathering and breaking ever since. The result of this 100-mile ride and sunstroke was heart disease, nervous prostration, insomnia and rheumatism. A completely shattered system which gave me no rest night or day. As a last resort I took some Pink Pills and they helped me to a wonderful degree. My rheumatism is gone, my heart failure, dyspepsia and constipation are about gone, and the abscess in my ear has stopped discharging and my head feels as clear as a bell when before it felt as though it would burst, and my once shattered nervous system is now nearly sound. Look at those fingers," Mr. Edwards said, "do they look as if there was any rheumatism there?" He moved his fingers rapidly and freely and strode about the room like a young boy. "A year ago those fingers were gnarled at the joints and so stiff that I could not hold a pen. My knees would swell up, and I could not straighten my leg out. My joints would squeak when I moved them. That is the living truth."

"When I came to think that I was going to be crippled with rheumatism, together with the rest of my ailments, I tell you life seemed not worth living. I suffered from despondency. I cannot begin to tell you," said Mr. Edwards, as he drew a long breath, "what my feeling is at present. I think if you lifted ten years right off my life and left me prime and vigorous at forty-seven, I could feel no better. I was an old man and could only drag myself painfully about the house. Now I can walk off without any trouble. That in itself," continued Mr. Edwards, "would be sufficient to give me cause for rejoicing, but when you come to consider that I am no longer what you might call nervous and that my heart is apparently nearly healthy, and that I can sleep nights, you may realize why I may appear to speak in extravagant praise of Pink Pills. These pills quiet my nerves, take that awful pressure from my head, and at the same time enrich my blood. There seemed to be no circulation in my lower limbs a year ago, my legs being cold and clammy at times. Now the circulation there is as full and as brisk as at any other part of my body. I used to be so light-headed and dizzy from my nervous disorder that I frequently fell while crossing the floor of my house. Spring is coming and I never felt better in my life, and I am looking forward to a busy season of work."

"Do you think that Blickeens would deceive a friend?" "Of course not. None of his friends would believe a word he says." —Washington Star.

USE NO SOAP advertisement. Text: 'with Pearlina. 'Twould be absurd. It isn't necessary. Pearlina contains everything of a soapy nature that's needed or that's good to go with it. And Pearlina is so much better than soap that it has the work all done before the soap begins to take any part. You're simply throwing away money. It's a clear waste of soap—and soap may be good for something, though it isn't much use in washing and cleaning, when Pearlina's around. Millions now use Pearlina'.

Here and There.

Whipped Cream Baking Powder at Freeman's. Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Rowe, of Manchester, visited friends here the past week. The average yield of wheat in Michigan this year will be about 12 bushels per acre. The dates for the Washtenaw county fair have been fixed for September 24th to 27th. Here's another word for the dictionary makers. A bicycle store is called a "wheelery."

Pay your village taxes. Treasurer Beissel has his office in the store of Beissel & Staffan, where he can be found every day in the week except Sunday.

Advertisers get the cash trade. When a man wants to beat a merchant he will take that miserly fellow around the corner who thought advertising a luxury.

The large saw mill at Milan belonging to C. H. Wilson was struck by lightning Saturday morning early and burned to the ground. There was no insurance, and loss is estimated at from $2,500 to $3,000.

A sagacious genius has invented an appliance which, when attached to the big sleeves worn by the summer girl, is so pleasingly constructed that though the sleeves be hugged flat will immediately puff out again when the pressure is withdrawn. This removes a great obstacle to the full enjoyment of summer outings.

The best cream to use for ice cream, says an authority, is that skimmed from milk 24 hours old. This is called double cream, and is used by the best professional ice cream makers as soon as possible after it is skimmed. It gives a cream of the best consistency, and one that will not melt rapidly when exposed to the air.

Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Ohio and Georgia farmers must prepare for war. So says Chief Entomologist Howard, of the Agricultural Department. The present is the "locust year" for these. Those of the west central group will be invaded by vast armies of the seventeen-year brood, which last appeared in 1878, while Georgia will be visited by the nineteen-year or Southern brood, last seen in 1882.

One of our correspondents sends the following extract from the latest game laws, which may be of interest to some of our readers: Book agents may be killed from March 1 to July 1, scaldmongers from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, inclusive; umbrella borrowers from Feb. 1 to May 1, and from Aug. 1 to Nov. 1; open season all the year round on life insurance agents and the people who borrow their neighbors' papers.—Caro Democrat.

Bicyclists have no right upon sidewalks at all, any more than have other vehicles, but they have the same rights upon highways and streets that all other conveyances have. If a bicycle is left leaning against a curbstone, the man who runs into and damages it does so at his peril. Upon the highway and streets a wheelman is entitled to his share of the roadway, and the man who negligently or recklessly runs him down must answer to the law.

Agriculture can only be made successful by adopting the same methods that apply to any other business or profession. Wherever the farmer has adopted labor saving appliances, systematized methods, looked after his employes just as well as the mill owner does after his, made every moment of his working time count, and allowed no material or product to go to waste, he has been successful. This applies as well to the man who has a farm of 50 acres as it does to the one with 500, and where you see a small farmer paying off the mortgage on his land and "getting ahead" in other ways, you will find a good business man and one that works his farm just as another works his mill or factory.

The Vital Statistics Report for 1893, just received at this office from the Department of State, Lansing, is issued unusually early and contains matter of much interest and importance to physicians, health officers, sanitarians and to all persons interested in the sanitary and social conditions of the State. There were registered for the year 1893 19,197 marriages, 47,722 births and 21,982 deaths. Of the deaths returned, 3,154, or 12.9 per cent of the number returned from specified diseases, were due to consumption; 1,218, or 6.8 per cent, from diphtheria and croup; 689, or 3.8 per cent, from typhoid fever; 200, or 2.0 per cent, from scarlet fever. There were 644 deaths from cancer, 555 from "in grippe," and 1,385 from pneumonia. These causes of death are fully discussed in the Report, and illustrative diagrams and maps are given for certain important ones. Persons desiring copies of this report should make application to Hon. Washington Gardner, Secretary of State, Lansing, Mich., as the former wasteful custom of distributing them through the county clerks has been discontinued.

How to Get Rid of the Blues.

The blues, like the person suffering from their presence, are extremely uncomfortable, and her discomfort in a subtle way acts upon others, so that nobody is quite cheerful in her neighborhood. People who are "blue" are quite often cross as well, and unable to accept pleasantly the ups and downs of every day. Now, when you think of it, you must admit that it is a very humiliating experience to be cross, for cross people are disagreeable, and none of us wishes to be that.

The best way to get rid of the blues is not to own that they have you. Put on your hat and go for a walk. Call on a friend and take her the piece of music you are to try together, or the book you have just finished, which you would like to lend her. Do something kind for somebody, and stop thinking about yourself. The greatest waste of time in this world, dears, is to think too much about one's self. Mrs. Browning gives the right idea in her poem, "My Kate," where she says: "Twas her thinking of others made you think of her."

Don't laugh at me, girls, when I tell you that half the low spirits one hears of springs from a very prosaic source. That pound of chocolates, that rich pudding, that piece of frosted cake, all of them very delicious, but all very indigestible, are to blame, in most instances, for a young girl's depression. Try what Emerson called "plain living and high thinking," and see how cheery life will become.—Harper's Round Table.

Karl's Clover Root will purify your blood, clear your complexion, regulate your bowels and makes your head clear as a bell. 25c., 50c., and $1.00. Sold by Armstrong & Co.

La Grippe.

During the prevalence of the Grippe the past seasons it was a noticeable fact that those who depended upon Dr. King's New Discovery, not only had a speedy recovery, but escaped all of the troublesome after effects of the malady. This remedy seems to have a peculiar power in effecting rapid cures not only in cases of La Grippe, but in all Diseases of Throat, Chest and Lungs, and has cured cases of Asthma and Hay Fever of long standing. Try it and be convinced. It won't disappoint. Free Trial Bottles at F. P. Glazier & Co's Drug Store.

"This is a peculiar world," says a philosophical exchange. "One man is saving money to build a house, and another is trying to sell his for less than it cost to build it. One man is spending all he can make in taking his girl to the theatre and sending her flowers, with the hope of making her his wife, and his neighbor is spending what gold he has got in getting a divorce. One man escapes all diseases flesh is heir to and gets killed on the railroad. Another escapes a scratch and dies with the whooping cough. One man stands off all his creditors and goes traveling, while another pays his debts and stays at home."

How to Learn the Piano Keys.

All the G and A keys Are between the black three's. And 'tween the two's are all the D's. Then on the right side of the three's Will be found the B's and C's; But on the left side of the three's Are all the F's and all the E's.

Spend your Outing on the Great Lakes

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland, for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D & C Boat Line routes. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot; its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, annunciators, bath-rooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity, and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petosky, Chicago, "Sun" Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Detroit. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. A whole family of toothless people has been discovered near Anderson, Ind. James Leonard, the toothless father, was born fifty years ago, and has passed through this much of life a sound and healthy man, but never had a tooth of any kind in his head. Twenty years ago he married a woman who had as fine a set of teeth as could be found, and still has them. They had four children, all of whom are grown, but all like their father in regard to teeth. Their gums, however, come down much further than is ordinarily the case and are as firm and hard as bone. Mr Leonard is able to crack nuts in his jaws without any apparent effort, and seems to get along as well as though he had a good set of teeth. The others are able to do the same thing.
