Diphtheria Cure.

The following simple prescription was aken from a great medical journal, The London Lancet: "A few years ago, when diphtheria was raging in England, a gen tleman accompanied the celebrated Dr. Field on his rounds to witness the so called "wonderful cures" which he preformed, while the patients of others were droping on all sides. All he took with him was powders of sulpher and a quill and with these he cured every patient without exception- that is, he put a teaspoonful of flour of brimestone into a wineglass of water and stirred it with his finger instead of a spoon, as sulphur does not readily amalgamate with water, and on the sulphur becoming well mixed, he gave it as a gargle, and in ten minutes the patient was out of danger, as brimestone kills every species of fungus in man, beast and plant in a few minutes. Instead of spitting out a gargle, he recommended, the swallowing of it, and, in extreme cases, in which he had been called just in the nick of time, when the soon after and announced that he had through the quill into the throat, and after the fungus had shrunk to allow of it then the gargling. He never lost a patient from diphtheria. Or, if the the patient cannot gargle, take a live coal, put it in a shavel, and sprinkle a spoonful or two of the brimstone at a time upon it and let the sufferer inhale it, holding the head over it, and the fungus will die." If so simple a remedy as this is so ef fective it is worth knowing. Of course it is an old remedy that has proved efficient in mild diseases of a similar character, but it is probably not generally understood that it has such wonderful curative properties as the Lancet article claims for it. Passing of the Plano.

You can rent a plano now cheaper than you can rent a typewriter. Either there is a greater surplus of planos than usual or there is a marked falling off in the demand. Maybe it is both. You can get a plano as low as $2 per month. A very good instrument can be had for $3. And these prices can be applied on the purchase of a new one. A typewriter-second-hand at thatwill cost you $5 a month, says the New York Herald.

Is there any significance in this Have women begun to give up the plano for the typewriter? The latter can be bought new for from $85 to $125, while the plano comes at from $500 to $1,000. On the basis of the typewriter, the plane ought to rent for at least $25 a month. On the basis of the plano the typewriter ought to rent for 50 cents a month.

The plano has unquestionably met with severe setbacks recently. Not only has the typewriter opened a more useful field for young women than was before offered by the plano, and confungus was too nearly closing to allow sequently withdrawn many of the sex the gargling, he blew the sulphur from the career ornamental, it has been supplemented by the increasing mania for out-of-door sports. Instead of sitting down and twirling a plane stool as was the custom of her sisterhood of a generation or so ago, the modern young woman mounts her wheel and takes a spin in the park and the risk of arrest for scorching on the boule-vard. Flat life is death to the plano. The limited space forbids a musical instrument that encroaches so materially on the necessities of the family and which makes as much noise as a brass band. Besides, the courts have interdicted the piano in flat life. It has been legally decided a nuisance. Complaint anywhere is immediately followed by

Among the many grand ho ises-or "pamansions," as the fashionable Intial house agents in their ornate catalogues love to style them-which have the advantage of overlooking Hyde Park, that of Sir Richard Mortmain was by no means the least splendid or spacious. Sir Richard was alone. A handsome man enough, so far as form and features went, with no reference to expression, tall, slender and of goodly presence. He was neither old nor young-thirty-three, perhaps-with a pale, resolute face, that was almost waxen in its pallor, hair as black as the raven's wing, very dark eyes, and very white teeth. But perhaps the most prominent feature, if it may be so called, of the baronet's face, was the long black mustache, carefully trimmed often caused the lord of Mortmain to be mistaken by strangers for a foreigner. His was, indeed, a countenance rather Italian than English, eminently aristohave sufted with the character and the deeds of some subtle contemporary of Borgia and Machiavelli-one of those lied and stabbed and poisoned smilingly. to live at Mortmain Park, the majestic old manor at which Queen Bess herself had in her time been a guest. But he had a hunting box hard by Market Harborough, and a tiny villa near Newmarket, and kept up the London mansion pretty well. Wages may have been in arrear sometimes, and bills unpaid, but there ing way of old. No; I'm no tout for a were liveried servitors and carriages and horses and bachelor dinner parties, for all I one of the drivelers who maunder about that, while ever and anon there would set in a halcyon period, a sort of financial flood tide, when ready money would abound.

"A person, Sir Richard, wishes very much, if you please, to see you for a minute., From abroad, I believe," said the discreet butler, who had entered quietly. "The man is very pertinacious, and won't go away."

baronet, arching his eyebrows, "or call good deal, I am sure, while you occupied the police. One can't afford in London the honorable, if humble, position of constuff's nigh everywhere, even here in England, only you trample over it, and are blind to it. But the days are done now for your independent digger t'other side of the world. No more nuggeting: no more cradle rocking. It's a master's country how, not a poor man's, in Topsyturvy land."

"And the bush?" asked the baronet, lightly.

"What do you mean by the bush? growled Rufus, scowling at him as fiercely as a tiger cat about to spring.

"Nothing, nothing; don't lose your tem per," rejoined Sir Richard, equably, "And now, Crouch, what can I do for you? One thing I warn you of-ready money is as scarce with me as leaves on a birch at Christmas, so that I can be of little use in that way; but-

"You may spare your trouble and your smooth words, Sir R.," said Rufus, very gruxy, but earnestly. "Just now it is Fortune herself, though you may not think it to look at me, that knocks at your door, for, Sir Richard Mortmain, Baronet, I come here as the messenger of golden tidings.'

CHAPTER VI.

"Golden tidings, Mr. Crouch," said Sir Richard, mildly, "would of themselves insure a welcome anywhere. Well, Rufus, let me hear your good news. In what Borgia and Machinetin who plotted and Australian gold mine, now languishing white-handed patricians who plotted and Australian gold mine, now languishing for lack of capital, ought I to take shares, Sir Richard Mortmain could not afford with the certainty of three hundred per cent annual profits? or what buried treas-ure, in some stony gully beneath the constellation of the Southern Cross, can be had for the expenditure of a few cool hundreds?". "I didn't come here to be made game of, nor yet mocked. I know your banterjoint stock concern in a bad way, nor am horse loads of the yellow dust and flakes, stowed away in far-off places of the bush, as some do. To my thinking, the old country is the richest. I never saw a rush or a placer to equal some of the snug, quiet ways of money making of which there are so many in England." He seemed to pause for breath, and Sir Richard blandly remarked: "I quite agree with you, Crouch. The home mar-"Tell him to write, then," returned the ket is perhaps the safest. You learned a

NHOROLDIND CORBANNEND jackanapes, no doubt." said the baronet, ing his white teeth

"I hate the curly-headed, dandy chap with his gentleman airs, as I have pol son!" growled Rufus; "but that's neith here nor there. I only spoke to say what a calling it is for a man who has seen better days. Well, Sir R., our captain, as we jet hunters call him, has a house in Beckdale, and that part of the coast being rich in jet, and as well known to old Obadiah as his farmyard is to any farmer, has come to be in a sense our headquarters. Now-you see I am open with you, Sir R.-in Woodburn parish, ay, and in Woodburn Parsonage, lives the young lady whom I should like to see as Lady Mortmain."

"Indeed! May I ask her name?" manded Sir Richard.

"Her name, Sir R.," returned the man grudgingly, but with emphasis, "is Violet --Violet by name, I should say, and by nature, for she is a timid, pretty young lady, nineteen years of age, and knows nothing of the world's ways, and just as little of the fact that she's a great heir-

"Upon my word," said the baronet, coolly, "you have traced a very charming portrait of rural loveliness and simplicity. And what is the amount of the fortune which she has unconsciously the power to bestow?"

"The fortune," replied Rufus slowly, and fixing his small, keen eyes upon the white, impassive face of his aristocratic host, "was at the first seventy mousand pounds. It must be a goodish bit more by this, rolling up as it has been for years. Think, Sir R., what such a heap of ready cash would be to you." . There came a flash into Sir Richard's sleepy, dark eyes, and his whole counter nance seemed to brighten. "Sure of the sum total, Crouch?" he asked, eagerly. The fellow nodded.

"Now for her surname, then?" inquired the baronet-"though if it were Sneeks or Sniggs I could condone it, if only there's no mistake as to the money.'

"No, Sir R.," interrupted the ex-gold digger, gruffly. "And there's just as little mistake as to the young lady that owns it. Miss Violet Mowbray is her name, and from all I hear the Mowbrays are as good as even the Mortmains, so far as pedigree goes. This young girl is an orphan. She has a small income, and her guardian, a tough old City bachelor, arranged for her to reside with his own niece, our parson's wife, Mrs. Langton. She has grown up in that quiet nook, and knows no more of the thumping sum she is entitled to than I do whether it will freeze or thaw next Christmas."

"How do you know of it, Rufus?" asked the baronet. "Some will, eh, that formed part of your spoil on leaving your former employers?"

"Not a will," answered Crouch, with a wink. "Wills may be revoked, and codi-cils added, but this is a snugger sort of thing. This is a trust deed. But that is about all I have to tell gratis, Sir R. Mortmain, Baronet."

And, indeed, nothing more by the most skillful diplomacy could be extracted from Rufus. He certainly had not brought the valuable document with him,. en to all comers, as you ought to fidential clerk to the late Mr. Bowman- nor would he give any further information as to its contents until a bargain had been struck, and his own recompense or share agreed to. Nor would he on that occasion, name his price-that was a matter for future consideration. What he desired to know was whether Sir Richard would "come into it" heart and soul, and take immediate steps to bring the scheme to a successful conclusion. Sir Richard was ready enough to lend his aid, but he demurred to taking what he called "a leap in the dark." "I don't ask you to marry, Sir R.," said the former coulidential clerk of Lawyer Bowman at last, "without better security than my bare word that the bride's little hand is weighted with much gold. My interest and yours go in the same groove, and what I advise is, come down to Yorkshire and judge for yourself." - "Perhaps it would be better so," returned the baronet slowly. "When first you spoke of Somersetshire, I recollected a dreary old place of my father's in those parts that I haven't seen since I was a boy, and never thought to see again-Helston, they call it. - The house his been shut up for years, but it belongs to me, after all, and it lies, I remember, just about the upper end of Beckdale and four miles from the sea. I might go down there, if this prize of yoars be really worth winning. "You never did a wiser thing in your life, Sir R., rely on it, than following up the golden clew that I have put into your hands," said Rufus Crouch, rising from his seat. "Our next talk, with your leave, had better be in Yorkshire. Meanwhile, your humble servant." And with no more formal leave taking,

Visited General Getty.

"General George W. Getty, our old division commander," said Major Auson, "who commanded the Sixth corps at the battle of Cedar Creek, while General Wright was commanding Sher-Idan's army, when Sheridan was 'twenty miles away' but coming like the wind, lives ten miles from Washing ton, at Forest Glen. I reached there at 1 o'clock one day and talked with the old hero for four hours.

"I rang the bell; an old man came to the door and welcome-1 mg. 'General Getty, I don't suppose you remember me,' 'I am satisfied that you are one cf my soldiers, but my sight has failed the last few months so I cannot see you distinctly.' Then I told him my name. 'Why, certainly; member of my military family. Come right in; 1 am delighted to see you.' And there we sat those four happy hours and talked over old times. You know how lovely it is to sit down with a man you served with; how the time files and that you take no note of it. I want to say that my visits to Generals Wright and Getty convinced me of this fact as I never realized it before. The men who word stars on their shoulders and who commanded corps, divisions and brigades, and even armies, find just as much pleasure in talking with their comrades, whether generals or privates, as the men of the line and of the rank and file do, and you know what that means. I feel that it should be one of our duties, as it certainly is one of my greatest pleasures, to never miss an opportunity to call upon and chat with our old commanders-men who commanded our companies, regiments, batteries, boats, brigades, divisions and corps. "Do you remember that Generals Getty and Gibbon were very close and warm friends? They were. I had met General Gibbon at Chicago at the time we elected General Lucius Fairchild commander-in-chief of the Loyal Legion, and was introduced to him. In the course of our conversation I mentioned that I had served on the staff of General George W. Getty. Gibbon's eyes brightened and he extended his hand and said: 'We will shake again. George W. Getty was one of the best friends I had in the army. His friends are my friends.' I told General Getty of the incident and he said: 'Yes, Gibbon told me about that the last time we army and attack Howard's Elev s. Jackson seems to be anim and making an carnest appeal, while Lee is listening attentively. History tells us that Jackson carried his point and won for the Confederacy one of its great battles. It was not the pictur that caught my attention and touche mo. On either side hung the flag of the republic, the stars and stripes, and over the painting was another flag tastlly festooned. - I said to a Confederate colonel who happened to be there at the time: I am as well pleased as I am much surprised to see the stars and stripes by the side of and over that painting, colonel." Why, you needn't be. We down South think as much of that flag as you up North do." Wouldn't that warm the heart of the average Yankee soldier?"-J. A. Watrous in

Chicago Times-Herald, Pension Business

The history of the Pension Bureau at Washington would make a highly interesting book, it it could ever be writ-ten. Tragedy and comedy would jos-tle each other in its pages. The New York Tribune, in an extended account of the business of the Imseau, says that great numbers of strange and amusing letters are received. Thus one man wrote: "One night on picket duty at the slege of Vicksburg I saw by spiritual sight a light shining on the side of my face and the bottom of my feet. I was sanctified, and what ailed me was Christianity. I have it in my head, heart and whole system, and it troubles me most when I have the ague and attending church. I feel there is something in my head which may run out when it gets loose."

In the investigation of this case it was shown that the claimant had suffered a severe sunstroke at the siege of Vicksburg, and was insane. The pension was granted.

Another man wrote to the Law Division of the bureau to obtain advice on what was to him a very important matter:

"I took my money," he wrote, "and bought me a pig and some seed potatoes, and I kept the pig all summer and he has become a fat hog, and I dug my potntoes last week, and now John Jones has levied on my pig and he wants to take my potatoes. I want the government to protect me. Has he a right to take government property?"

What reply the lawyers made to this inquiry we are not informed. As an example of the pains taken by-the bureau to get at the truth in all doubtful cases, the Tribune cites the following:

A man applied for a pension for a wounded knee which he had received near Lexington, Kentucky, while on a will God in very deed dwell with me special detail. The man was asked to the earth? behold, heaven and the be Binns the butler coughed apologetically under his employer's rebuke.

"I should not have thought of such a thing, Sir Richard," he said, mildly, "only that the party insisted that his name was well known-name of Crouch, please, Sir Richard, and-"

"I do remember such a name. Show him in," said the baronet, with a frown.

The visitor was promptly inducted into the room. A broad, short man, roughly dressed, in spite of the heat of the weather, in a coarse peacoat, such as North Sea pilots wear, and with heavy boots besmeared by what was certainly not the mud of London streets-a man with a shaggy red beard that fell upon his breast, with a head of unkempt red hair, and with little restless eyes, like those of a wild boar at bay.

Sir Richard Mortmain, leaning against the corner of the massive marble chimney-piece, might have posed for an ideal portrait of aristocratic disdain as he languidly turned his handsome white face toward the importumate visitor.

"You-wished to speak to me-Mr.he said slowly.

"Crouch, Rufus Crouch," coolly returned the newcomer, as, uninvited, he "No new name to selected an easy chair. you, Sir R., now is it? But we may as well make ourselves comfortable before we begin our chat, mayn't we?" And as he spoke he threw himself back in the softly padded chair, and set down his battered hat among the gewgaws on the other fish to fry. Far off in the brush, pretty little table within reach. "We were pals once; thick as thieves; as the saying is, hey, Sir R.?"

The face of Sir Richard Mortmain, as with haughty surprise he looked down have made the fortune of the painter who gard, while the penciled brows contracted of dismay in his tone. frowningly, and the well-cut lips tightened beneath the shade of the black mustache. So might Caesar Borgia have looked at a vulgar tool of his who presumed to be insolent.

The words were offensive, and the manner in which they were uttered was more offensive still. Sir Richard Mortmain was a proud man, apt to resent a liberty on the laughed now.

Old Mr. Bowman had ceased to be my father's country solicitor full two years before your hasty journey to the antipodes, and I am pretty sure that the Mortmain deed boxes had been transferred to lurking places in another office." "Now, Sir R.," said the ex-gold digger, grimly, "you must take me for a new chum, indeed, as we say in Australia, if you think I would have burdened myself with such rubbish as that. #### Geese, Pigs and Plums.

A gentleman living in eastern Georgia owned a pair of geese and some half-grown pigs, both of which resorted to a small plum thicket on the hillside, to pick up the fallen fruit.

A small branch of one of the trees was broken and bent down to the ground, and the geese had somehow discovered that by catching the end of the branch in their bills and shaking the tree by means of it, they could bring down the plums.

The pigs, seeing what was going on soon found it for their interest to follow

The geese would shake the tree, and the sound of a grateful shower of fruit would be heard; but before they could eat the plums the pigs would have greedily gathered up most of them. Greatly exasperated, and with good reason, one of the geese would seize a pig by the ear, while the other marched on the other side of him, screaming part of his social inferiors; but he merely | incredulously; "I never contemplated you | and scolding. In this way, beating poor piggy with their wings at every step, they would escort him to the top of the hill and there let him go.

Then they would return to shake the tree again, with a similar result. This scene, says a Youth's Companion correspondent, I have witnessed daily during the plum season.

"General Getty has a 200-acre farm, lives in a fine residence, his wife and only unmarried daughter making up the family. His other five children are married. One is a paymaster; another a prominent St. Paul business man. The general spoke of a number of our regimental officers, including General J. M. Warner, the millionaire merchant of Albany, N. Y., who recently retired as postmaster; Colonel Aldace F. Walker, who holds a $40,000 position with a Western railroad; Rev. Arthur Little, formerly a Chicago Congregational minister, now of Massachusetts, and others. When it was nearly time for my train the general ordered his carriage and drove to the station, a mile distant. When we were ready to part, he said very nearly what General Wright had said to Captain Gould and myself. I repeat it so that others of the old division and corps who visit Washington may be led to call on the old general, 'Major, you don't know how much good it has done me to have you make this visit. It renews my youth, Please never come to Washington without dropping out to see the old farmer.' In answer I said: 'General, I shall visit you whenever an opportunity is afforded, not only from a sense of pleasure, but a sense of duty. The man's story was so straightforward, and his claim apparently so just, that in spite of the difficulties attending a search for "Possum" and "Coon," the bureau went about it systematic-

After considerable correspondence all the non-commissioned officers in the detail were found, except one man by the name of Adams. It was subsequently found that Adams had been in Mexico. A letter was written asking him who "Possum" was. The letter was returned uncalled for. It was then ascertained that Mr. Adams, who was an engineer, had gone to some mining town in Nevada, where he was finally located. When he was written to, it was found that he had moved again, but no one knew where. It was developed, however, that he had told some one that he lived somewhere in the vicinity of a certain small village in Maine. The postmaster of this town was cor-

One member of the family, he said, had been in Kentucky, was a mining engineer, and was expected home soon. A letter was addressed to this Mr. Adams in the care of the postmaster, who delivered ward.

It subsequently appeared that this Mr. Adams was "Possum," and he described the accident of the ammunition-wagon so clearly that the claim in HOW'S THIS FOR A CABBAGE? Everything in California seems to be big. Every school geography tells of the big trees which grow there-trees larger than are found in any other spot on the globe.

This story has to do with an enoraous cabbage. It has grown so tall that it is really a tree. It is 12 feet high and the stalk is as large as a man's waist. For nine months this remarkable plant has been growing, and it has not stopped yet. It is not the common cabbage, but belongs to sembles cabbage in many respects, but the leaves do not form the solid head which is characteristic of the ordinary cabbage.

In many Southern States kale is highly esteemed as "greens," The small shoots are tender and edible, tasting much like cabbage, which it resembles while growing, as well as after being cooked.

The Isle of Jersey is the home of the kale plant. It is used there as a food for the diminutive buff cattle, which have made the name of the island known all over the world.

The giant California kale tree was grown on the grounds of the State Agricultural College at Berkeley. The college authorities say that the leaves are much relished by chickens, and as it produces green leaves the year around, in the mild climate of California, it is highly regarded. The particular plant which has attained such an enormous growth does not differ from scores of others on the farm, except in the matter of size. The stalk has been stripped of leaves to a point 10 feet from the ground. It tapers gracefully and resembles a young hickory tree. The top is surrounded by a bunch of yellow, feathery flowers.

Some years ago a cabbage plant was exhibited at the Ohio State Fair, which was 7 feet high. It took a prize, and was supposed to be the largest cabbage ever grown, but it was small com-

East-Bound Flyer on the Northwestern Crashes Into an Excursion Train -Twenty-eight Persons Are Killed and Fifty-one Injured.

Horrors of the Disaster.

The overland flyer on the Chicago and Northwestern road crashed into a heavily laden picnic train near Logan, Iowa, forty miles east of Omaha, early Saturday evening. Twenty-eight people were killed and fifty-one injured, many of whom will Twenty-four of the dead are identified and the others are so badly mutilated that identification is hardly possible. The list of the injured is a lengthy one. It contains twenty eight or more names, of persons who were seriously hust, dahgerously so, to a greater or less degree. In addition there were at least fifty, if not a greater number, who received injuries of a minor nature. These consisted of bruises and cuts or slight disfigurements which will practically amount to nothing. A considerable number also were shaken up severely, but beyond this were uninjured. This was especially the case among the passengers who occupied the cars immediately behind the one which was demolished.

The scene of wreck and death occurred in a piece of dense woods about three miles west of Logan. Both trains came together head on while traveling at the rate of fifty miles an hour and was caused by Engineer Montgomery of the picnic train mistaking orders. He should have waited on the siding at Logan until the passenger train and the fast overland fiver had passed. He only waited long enough for the passenger to fly by and then pulled out on the main track with the throttle wide open and a full head of steam on. The crash came so quickly that Montgomery had barely time to jump. The excursion train was composed of seventeen passenger cars, loaded with 1,500 men, women and children, mostly from Council Bluffs and Omaha. They were making merry, singing and shouting. The weight of the excursion train and the speed of the freight made the wreck a fearful one. The two engines were completely demolished and the first two cars of each train telescoped. The work of death was wrought in the first coach of the excursion train. In this were nearly 100 people and but a few of them escaped without injury, There was no warning, and with the wreck of the car came death or dangerous injury to almost every occupant. All of the coaches were badly shaken up, but the dead were confined to the first passenger coach.

On the historic eastern steps, where the Presidents of this country, one after another, have stood to deliver their inaugural addresses, a trained chorus of 4,000 men and women raised their voices for an hour in songs of praise to the Great Master. A great deal of nonsense has been going the rounds of the press about the lleydlauff-Moeckel murder and the friendly feeling existing between young Heydlauff and the parents of the murdered girl. It has been said that Moeckel's people were unwilling to prosecute Heydlauff and that they would be glad to drop the case it they could do so. Most of this is false and originated in the head of imaginative reporters, who are always ready to fill their papers with sensational news, getting their cue from the fact that young Heydlauff wanted to shake hands with the Moeckel family after his examination, and they saw no harm in gratifying his whim. Mr. and Mrs. Moeckel are both anxions to see justice done and will do all that is required of them to that end. They are, howwithout an enemy on earth, and they Decoration to a Captain Who, Would Not Descri a Wounded Seaman. The Queen has conferred the decoration of the Albert medal of the firstclass on William John Nutman, late master of the steamer Aldar of Liverpool. The following is an account of the services in respect of which the decoration has been offered: At 2 a.m. on Jan. 19, while the steamer Staffordshire of Liverpool was on a voyage from Marseilles to Port Said, signals of distress were observed to be proceeding from the steamer Aidar, also of Liverpool, and the Staffordshire imme-India. diately proceeded to her assistance. As the Aidar was found to be sinking fast, three of the Staffordshire's lifeboats were at once launched, and, with great difficulty, owing to the darkness and the heavy sea, succeeded in rescuing her passengers and crew, twenty-nine in number. At 6:10 a. m. the only persons left on the Aidar were Mr. Nutman (the master) and an injured and helpless fireman whom he was endeavoring to save, and whom he absolutely refused to abandon. The steamer was now rapidly settling down, and as it was no longer safe to remain near her the officer in charge of the rescuing boat asked Mr. Nutman for a final answer. He still persisted in remaining with the injured man, choosing rather to face almost certain death than to leave him to his fate.' The men in the boat were obliged to pull away, and immediately afterward, at 6:17 a. m., the Aldar gave one or two lurches and foundered. After she disappeared Mr. Nutman was seen on the bottom of an upturned boat, still holding the fireman. Half an hour elapsed before the rescuing boat could approach, but eventually Mr. Nutman and the fireman were picked up and taken on board the Staffordshire, where the injured man was with difficulty restored by the ship's surgeon .- Pittsburg Dispatch.

Terse Criticism.

Charles Frederick Robinson Hay ward, a Denver editor, wrote learnedly of the drama and could keenly analyze every phase of the actor's art. But his shortest criticism will probably outlive any other written by him. It was as follows: "George C. Miln, the preacher-actor, played 'Hamlet' at the Academy of Music last night. He played it till twelve o'clock." The only other critism that seems to class with this emanated from Leadville, where a performance of "Richard III." by a barn-storming troupe was chronicled under the glaring head-line of "Many Lives Lost."

Newell Clark, aged 85, was picked up inconscious where he had fallen unatended and alone in his humble home at Ravenna, O., Thursday. Death relieved his sufferings. Mr. Clark was at one time a leading business man of Northeastern Ohio, and was president of the First National Bank 'or thirty years.' He was swindled into buying a gold brick, and lost all of his fortune in buying $50,000 worth of bonds from a banker in New York, which, it is alleged, proved to be worthless. He has been dependent upon charity for several years. He had just returned home from New York, where he began a suit for $100,000 damages against the banker.

Commanding officers of Chicago police stations are now wondering to what extent they will be asked to assume the custody of money belonging to the business houses after banking hours. The example set by Capt. Shippy of the Woodlawn district in taking care of the day's receipts at the Coliseum Gardens is being followed by many who fear raids from robbers. Almost every police station in the city has a fireproof safe, and it has for many years been the practice of building and loan acsociations to keep their books, money and papers locked up there. Speaking about the matter, Captain Shippy said: "It has not been the custom among business men of my district, but I will accommodate them in any manner possible."

The water at present supplied to the city of Duluth is bad. Not as bad as before the water company put in its new intake well, but still entirely too bad for use as a beverage. So says the analysis just concluded by Prof. A. J. Woodman. The Professor has discovered in the samples submitted to him bacteria to the number of 10,000 to the cubic centimeter. This a vegetable growth and is significant when present in such quantlties, as indicating the presence of a large amount of o.ganic matter in the water, from which these minute plants draw their nourishment. Normal Lake Superior water contains about forty-four to the cubic centimeter. In addition there are large numbers of animalculae found. These are present in such numbers only when there is a large amount of organic matter for them to dispose of. They are nature's scavengers.

The Governor General of Canada, at Ottawa, received a cable message from the Rt. Hon Joseph Chamberlain regarding certain press dispatches published in London which stated that some Canadian papers had accused him (Chamberlain) of interfering in Canadian politics in Tupper's favor and reques that an absolute contradiction of this false statement should be made known. Lord Aberdeen desires that the widest publicity be given to this denial.

The total production of crude petrole um in the United States in 1895 was 52, 983,526 barrels, valued at $57,691,279, against 49,344,516 barrels in the previous year, valued at $35,522,095. All important producing districts shared in the increase except West Virginia and New York, which showed slight decreases. Since the beginning of operations in Titusville, Pa., in 1850, the enormous total of 709,713,408 barrels of crude petroleum have been produced in the country, of which 516,657,260 barrels represent the product of Pennsylvania and New York oil fields. The stocks in the Appalachian oil field at the close of last year were 5,344,734 barrels, a decrease from 6,499,S80, the s'ock on hand at the close of the preceding year.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"The wheat market advanced a little, while other speculative markets were stagnant or slightly declined, but its small advance was mainly due to reports of foreign crop reports and need. There are many who believe that the decrease in yield this year has been underestimated, and part of the dispatches gathered by Dun's Review last week tends to support that view, though practically all the returns from what are now those chief wheat growing States were cheering. Less favorable accounts appear this week from Minnesota and Dakota. It is wise on both sides to remember that in spring wheat States, which have this year to make up for some loss elsewhere, the crop will not be out of danger for some weeks. American farmers may be confronted with another troublesome weed somewhat similar to the Russian thistle in its destructive extent unless immediate steps are taken to creck the further progress of tumbling mustard. Further disorders occurred at the Brown Hoisting and Conveying Works at Cleveland Wednesday morning. The strikers and their sympathizers attacked the nonunion men while the latter were on their way to work. In numerous cases the non-unionists were beaten with clubs and felled to the ground. C. W. For a time the police, who were greatly outnumbered by the rioters, were unable to cope with the mob. The officers on duty around the works were finally reinforced and succeeded in driving the enraged strikers back and r scuing the non-union men. Two companies of militia have been ordered under arms.

FOR ANOTHER CONVENTION.

Gold Men Levie an Address to the Voters of the Country. Democrats who believe in a gold stand-ard have issued a call for a national sath-ering of the members of their wing of the party for the purpose of putting a gold Democratic ticket in the field. The call was given out for publication by the members of the executive committee of the gold Democracy of Illinois. The call is issued by the Illinois Democracy which advocates the cause of the yellow metal to the gold Democracy of the other States. In part it is as follows:

"A national convention couvened under the constituted authority of our party has just closed its session in the city of Chicago. It entered upon its work by violating all party precedents in the rejection of a distinguished Democrat as its temporagy presiding officer. It deprived a sovereign State of a voice in its deliberations by unseating without cause or legal justification delegates elected with all the egularity known to party organization. It refused to indorse the honesty and fidelity of the present Democratic national administration. It adopted a platform which favors the free and unlimited coinage of silver by this country alone at the matio of 16 to 1, and thereby it repudiated a time-honored Democratic principle tains from four to eight feet of water. which demands the strict maintenance of a sound and stable national currency. Finally, to make it still plainer that although in name it was not in fact a Democratic convention, it nominated for President one who is not in his political convictions, and has not always been even in his professions, a Democraf.

"This has made such a crisis, both for the nation and the Democratic party, that sound-money Democrats at once must decide what political action they will take for the protection of the honor of the nation, the prosperity of the people and the life and usefulness of the party. The sound-money Democrats of Illinois have fully made up their minds that a new Democratic national convention should be called for the earliest feasible day to nominate Democratic candidates for President and Vice-President and adopt a platform of Democratic principles.

"We hope," continues the document, "that out of the responses to this public statement of the views of the lilinois Democracy there can be gathered so much of the judgment of the leading sound-money Democrais of the United States as can be formulated into a plan of action."

The call is signed by the "Executive Committee of the Houest-Money Democracy of Illinois"

Statistician Ford, of the Treasury Department, has been asked by a Chicago inquirer if the wheat brought into the United States from Manitoba and shipped out again is included in the year's total exports. According to the Chicago party this is an important proposition, and he advances the statement that the wheat brought in from across the border during the last fiscal year aggregated 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels, against next to nothing in previous years, and that it is of value to the trade to know all about it. Mr. Ford says the Manitoba and Canadian wheat is kept separate from United States wheat, merely going through the country-in bond and not being included in the year's total of export. According to the treasury figures the total is only a little over 2,000,000 bushels anyway, instead of over 10,000,-000, as stated by the Chicagoan. Manitoba wheat, if it went into our home consumption, would have to pay 20 per cent. duty, equal to about 8 cents a bushel Exports for the year in wheat and corn aggregate 125,000,000 bushels, against 143,000,000 bushels two years ago.

Sheriff Stratton Wins the Prize. In the Circuit Court at Grand Rapids, Judge Adait gave a decree awarding the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad and United States Express Company reward for the capture of the Kendall-ville train robbers to Sheriff Stratton of Allegan County. The amount is $1,-318.45. Sheriff Grey and G. W. Crane, of Isabella County, and George Zibble, of Grand Rapids, were also claimants for the reward, but the court awarded the prize to Stratton. James Brown was arrested at McBain last fall on suspicion of being one of the gang that held up the Chicago and West Michigan train at Fennville in August. When in the Allegan County jail awaiting investigation he confessed to having been involved in the Kendallville job in 1802, and he conducted the officers to his home in Mc-Bain and raised a plant of $2,500 and turned over other property to a total of $3,184.75 as a portion of the plunder he secured upon that occasion. He was tried at Elkhart last January, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to prison for fifteen years. The companies offering the reward were unable to decide among the conflicting claims and referred it to the court. and Sheriff Stratton, to whom Brown made his confession, is awarded the money.

Red Letter Day for Detroit.

Evacuation day was celebrated at De troit under superb weather conditions. Public and private buildings were decorated for the occasion and the people assembled by thousands around the new Federal building, where the memorial tablet placed in the entrance of the building was unveiled by the chairman of the committee on arrangements, Gen. R. A. Alger. The tablet commemorates the evacuation by the British 100 years ago of old Fort Lernoult, which stood on the site of the new Government building. After the unveiling a huge American flag was run up on the new building and the revenue cutter lessenden fired a salute of twenty-one guns. Col. Henry M. Donovan delivered a historical address. Gov. C. T. O'Ferrall, of Virginia, was to have delivered the oration of the day, but was unable to be present, and United States Senator Burrows was the orator. He said that every such celebration was an auspicious omen and exerted potent patriotic influences upon all generations to come. President Angel of the University of Wisconsin was introduced. He picked up and held to view the old spyglass of Commander Perry, the hero of Lake Erie, and declared that as a native of Rhode Island, the State which Perry halled from, he could not refuse to add tribute to the American heroes of those early days. Vast crowds assembled along the line of march to witness the parade. It included Gov. Rich and staff, the regulars from Fort Wayne, crews of the Unit--ed States steamship Michigan and revenue cutter Fessenden, State troops, naval reserves, all military and patriotic bodies and many civil bodies, veterans of the wars and a living flag of red, white and blue, composed of children wearing and carrying patriotic colors. MATTERS OF INTEREST TO FARM. ER AND HOUSEWIFE.

THE FARM AND HOME

Profits from Crops Must Always Include that Which the Soil Gained-Farmers as Lawmakers-Room for Dairy Improvement-Odds and Ende.

Relative Cost of Crops.

Any crop that leaves the soil in good condition will cost less than one which apparently pays, better, but which largely draws upon the soil for plant food. Ordinary wheat straw takes more fertility from the soil than potatoes, if compared by weight, because the potato is composed more largely cf starch and water. The soil should pot be considered as a source of food for plants, but rather as a location for growth, the food for the plants to be provided by the farmer, according to the requirements of the crop.

No crop pays that leaves the soil o'clock. During the winter months the poorer, unless sold at a price which will canble to restore the plant food and also receive a fair profit for his time and labor. The soil is the storahouse of the farm on which is stored the raw material for future crops, and the real wealth of a farm is in its soil, as it can be drawn upon in the future for crops that may be in demand. Whether a farmer receives a large re turn or fails altogether during any year, he has the soll as a savings bank, representing much of that which has been applied to it previously.

Water is a staple article on farms, and is sold more extensively than avything else. Milk contains about 87 per cent. of water, and fruits of all kinds are considered more valuable if whter predominates in their composition. Even a grain crop is not free from water, while grass and vegetables are mostly composed of water. Water is therefore the cheapest substance procured by good cultivation (for he obtains more of it by good cultivation than would be the case otherwise), and next to water is carbon. When oil, butter, sugar and starch are produced on the farm the leaves of the trees and plants derive carbon (carbon dioxide) from the air and store it in their cells. When the animals consume plants they convert this carbon into compounds familiar to all, but the cost of which so far as the fertility of the soil is concerned may be very small, and when the soil can be made to do service. without loss the gain is correspondingly as great to the farmer as from a sale. The real cost of crops on nearly all farms is that of labor, but labor is prof-Itable according to the uses to which it is applied, and the labor-saving imple-

Feeding Corn and Beets.

An extensive cattle feeder of Nebraska, who feeds 1,000 acres of corn of his own raising and 100 tons of beets a year, has kept a careful account of his operations for the last ten years. From that record the following facts are given:

For the first nine years the cost per head tanged from $14.09 to $32.39; but in 1803 he began feeding beets and corn which had been cut and cured in the shock and then run through a shredding machine, ear, stalk, blade, all of which is by the machine reduced to the condition of coarse hay. The cost of harvesting, shocking, shredding and feeding 1s 3 cents per bushel of grain and $1.87 per ton of fodder. The 1,900 acres averaged forty and one-half bushels of corn and a ton and one-half of fodder per acre. The bets (sugar beets) yield thirty to fifty tons per acre counting tops and all, and are fed whole. Both cattle and hogs are foud of them, and it was found that after cutting them the first few days the cattle learn to bite them off as a boy bites an apple. Since adopting this ration the cost of fattening cattle has never exceeded $10 per head. No cholera has ever occurred among hogs following the cattle while feeling beets. It is estimated that beet tops from beets used in sugar making are worth an average of $3 per acre for cattle food .-- Missouri

Agriculturist.

While it is not desirable to set hens late, where they are allowed a wide range some nests will be stolen, and large broods of young chickens may come off as late as September or October. We have had such and made them profitable. The most important thing with late-hatched chickens is to feed them liberally with wheat. This will keep them growing and cause them to feather early. Corn should only be fed after really cold weather makes it necessary. If the young fowls are induced to feather early they will need less corn. The work of feathering exhausts their strength very rapidly, and should be finished lefore cold weather.

On the lifth day of the Chicago convention and on the fifth ballot, Arthur Sewall of Maine was named as the Democratle candidate for Vice-President. A few minor motions were speedily disposed of, the gavel fell announcing adjournment and one of the most noted political conventions ever held in this country had passed into history. And Saturday afternoon it was the South and West against themselves to-placate the North and East in the nomination of a candidate for Vice-President. Geography made Sewall the nomince. TURNED DOWN BY A WIDOW

The Old Man Did Not Seek to Dis cover the Reason.

I had been stepping for a day or two with a mountaineer named Collins, who had been a widower for severa years, and had grown-up children, and as I was ready to proceed on my journey he said he'd go along for a couple of miles, says the Detroit Free Press. As we walked along he suddenly broke out with:

"See here stranger, do yo' think I'm fitten to git married ag'in?"

"Why not?" I queried in reply.

"Dunno, but I thought I'd ax yo"." "You are not an old man yet, are fairly well off, and unless the children raise a row I don't see why you shouldn't marry again."

"No, the chill'en won't raise a row about it."

"Who is the woman in question, if I may ask?"

"The Widder White, who lives up yere 'bout a mile. Powerful nice woman, the widder is. Bin sorter junin' up to her for a y'ar past, but hain't cum to the p'nt. I sorter reckoned-sorter reckoned----"

"Sorter reckoned what?" I asked, as he stammered and paused.

"Sorter reckoned I might stop and ax her this mawnin', if yo' reckoned I was fitten," he finished.

"Why shouldn't you be fitten?"

"Dunno, but maybe I ain't." I did all I could to assure him on that point, and before we reached the widow's house it was agreed that I should go on a piece and wait for him, and after he had talked with Mrs. White he should come on and tell me the result. I hadn't waited ten minutes before he came hurrying along, and I knew by his looks that something was wrong.

"Well, how did you come out?" I asked, as he took a seat on the stone beside me.

"I wa'n't fitten,' 'he replied.

"But why not?"

"Dunno. I jest went in and axed the widder if she'd have me, and she said I wasn't fitten and run me over the bresh fence with a broomstick."

"And you didn't ask for any explanation?"

"Nary one. When a man hain't fitten, and a woman says he hain't fitten, what yo' gwine to do? If yo's fitten yo's all right; if you's unfitten then yo' ain't fitten and it's no use to ax about it or waste time. Mawnin', stranger; I'm gwine back home and git to work at the co'n."

Allegan people were treated to an object lesson the other day which will result in a more strict enforcement of the truancy law in that village. Farmers as Lawmakers. The present personnel of Congress shows that there is one farmer to six lawyers, and still the farmer wonders why it is so difficult to secure legislation on agricultural matters. While the proportion of representatives in State Legislatures is not quite so much | tor several days if closely covered with in favor of the lawyers, neither is there as large a proportion in favor of the farmer when the representatives of oth- than baking powder, cream or butter er occupations are considered. should it be allowed that there are not equally intelligent and able men among the farmers as are to be found in any other vocation. The lawyer, the manufacturer, the capitalist, all have their different interests, and are supposed to know the needs and requirements of legislation to protect and foster those interests. It is but natural that they should make these interests paramount in their labors as represenatives of those who elect them. They know little of the practical side of agriculture, and cannot be expected to enact laws affecting it with the same wisdom and judgment that those familiar with its practical workings can. The fact that youngsters ruin the appearance of their digits by the exercise which is known as "cracking the joints," is well-founded. This habit stretches and weakens the ligaments and so enlarges the joints that the entire hand becomes knotty in consequence.

Among the delegates there was no desire to punctuate the day's proceedings with pyrotecanics. The convention did not get under way until after 11 o'clock. "The delegates were slow in arriving and the public apparently had had a sufficiency of convention amuse ment. The smallest crowd of the week, probably less than 3,000, was ranged on the shelving sides of the amphitheater. Sound money delegates from the East nearly all had departed. Silver delegates were absent by the score, leaving the delegations to pick for them a vice-presidential candidate out of the mass of uncertainty. The small attendance was due to lack of interest. There was no limitation on admission to the hall. Before the convention began business Senator Ben Tillman of Sont's Carolina pried open the doors with his famous pitchfork and allowed all who wished to enter. In detail, he offered a motion, which was passed, that the hall be opened to the public without restriction. This was received with much enthusiasm.

Despite an apparent lack of enthusiasm the contest for second place would have stood out as a notable convention struggle had it not been overshadowed by what had been done before. Thirteen candidates were placed in nomination: Williams of Massachusetts, McLean of Ohio, Clark of North Carolina, Fithian of-Illinois, Pennoyer of Oregon, Sewall of Maine, Sibley of Pennsylvania, Bland of Missouri, Daniel of Virginia, Boies of Iowa, Blackburn of Kentucky, Harrity of New York and Pattison of Pennsylvania. Nominations scarcely were completed when withdrawals began and the contest finally narrowed down to Sewall and McLean. Everybody expected a nomination on the fifth hallot, but before roll-call was finished a telegram was read announcing McLean's withdrawal and the proposition was made that Sewall be declared the nominee by acclamation, and it was done. The chairman laid down his gavel and the Democratic national conrention of 1896 was over.

JONES IS CHAIRMAN.

Democratic National Committee Se lects Him as Its Leader.

Senator James K. Jones was elected chairman of the Democratic national committee. The new chairman was called in and made a speech, saying he was deeply sensible of the honor, and accepted the position because of the interest he felt in the cause of silver. The members from the gold States did not generally attend the meeting, although there were some notible exceptions. Mr. Harrity was meeting was the fact that the temporary organization was presided over by Mr. Harrity, a gold standard man.

Charles N. Dugger, one of the oldest and best known marshals in Oklahoma was killed in the Osage Nation while at tempting to arrest a band of whisky peddlers. Deputy Marshal Joe Boyle, of Missouri, is also reported killed, but this latter report cannot be verified. A party of officers have left for the scene of the of one of our naval stations to hold a survey on one of the horses belonging to the station. The board met, examined the horse, found that he was suffering from "the scratches" and "stringhalt," and was generally run down. An examination of the navy regulations showed that only certain recommendations could be made by the board, as follows:

"To be turned into store for use," "To be retained in or for use," "Sold," "Used for scrap metal," "To be issued for any other purpose," "To be thrown on the dump," "To be transferred to some other station," "To be used for repairs for some other article," or "To be extensively repaired." Since it was the unanimous opinion of the board that he ought to be treated by a veterinary surgeon, it was recommended, in conformity with the regulations, "that he be extensively repaired."

This was three or four years ago, and he was "extensively repaired" by a veterinary surgeon, but evidently the "repairs" were not lasting, as the se quel will show.

Recently there came a recommendation from the present commandant that the horse be shot, as he was old and worthless, and that it would be a kindness to put him out of his misery.

In the same mail came a requisition from the same commandant asking for authority to buy ten tons of A1, firstclass fertilizer.

It was then that the navy department indorsed on the requisition "Why not use the horse to produce the fertilizer?" The commandant promptly returned the paper with the endorsement, "Since the horse is not an A1, first-class horse, being old and decrepit, he is incapable of filling the bill."

And here the matter stands for the present.--Washington Star.

Thinning Grape Bunches.

Every bud of last year will make this year a shoot, and by the first of June will be_set with two, three or four buds for blossoming, thus showing how many clusters may be expected from it. The quality of the fruit will be greatly benefited by removing from each shoot all the buds except the two that are largest. These will grow to larger size and ripen earlier if the full strength of the shoot is concentrated into them. It is the multiplication of seeds that makes grape fruiting so exhaustive to the vine. It requires an abundance of potash to form the seed and to ripen and color the fruit. When an overloaded vine mildews just about there, having the proxy of E. C.
