One of the guests, a man, came to me to give an order, saying at the same time that he had recently dined here and was much disappointed. Should Study the Horse.

Berlin equestrian statues have been examined by a veterinary surgeon of Potsdam named Bougert, who asserts that the position of the horses' legs is wrong in all of them, not excepting the statues of the Great Kurfurst, of Frederick the Great and of Frederick William III and IV. He finds the same faults in many of the paintings in the Berlin National gallery. In Egyptian, Assyrian, Babylonian and Persian work of art the positions of the horses are natural and right. In those of the Greeks and Romans they are not always correct. The equestrian statues of the two Balbi, father and son, in the Naples museum have the legs of the horses in the proper position.

Redskins on a Bender. Brainerd, Minn., dispatch: Five In dians, including Chief Wee Sug, are dead at Malone's Point, on Millo lake, and several others are expected to die as the result of drinking pain killer, hair tonic and other preparations containing alcohol. The Indian payment has been going on there and the redskins gorged themselves with this stuff, which was brought from Malone's trading post. Indian riders are scouring every part of the reservation to bring the band together at the Point, and serious trouble may result, as the redshins think Malone is to blume for the deaths: and if whisky can be got there is no telling what will happen. Pension Certificates Held Back.

For more than a month all pension certificates issued by the Government have been held up in the pension bureau. The suspens'on ended Thursday, when an immense batch of certificates was mailed to the various agencies. This terminates the operations of an order which, taking effect May 31, was designed to avoid mcreasing the existing deficiency in the pension appropriation by crediting the pay ments which would follow the issuance of these certificates to the new fiscal year, instead of to the fiscal year ended Wednesday. The deficiency is said to be over $300,000. Between 12,000 and 15,000 of these certificates have accumulated since the order took effect, and all those dated up to June 24 were mailed. The suspension included every class of pension certificates, but from now on the regular issuance and mailing of them will be resumed.

Gone are the claims for glory of the English stroke, it would seem, for Mr. Lehmann's crew from Harvard, its avowed exponents, finished, exhausted and half dead, lengths behind Yale. And Yale's crew rowed a plucky race, but was never in it with Cornell. Cornell's time, 20 minutes 34 seconds, was not record breaking. but was good considering the condition of the water.

There was an exciting battle with fire on the Anchor liner City of Rome, which came into New York Sunday evening. It was a struggle in which a resolute and self-possessed captain and a well-drilled crew showed to great advantage, and the 296 passengers who are safe from the dire peril of flame and wave heartily extol the brave work of the hardy mariners. The fire appeared on board when the vessel was nearing the end of her journey from Glasgow, and for five toilsome hours the crew fought it manfully, while throughout that thrilling period the passengers stood in excited groups about the boats, which had been swung out ready for lowering.

A fresh attempt on the part of the sultan to secure Germany's support of the retention of Thessaly has met with refusal and the advice to conform to Europe's wishes on the subject. An incident typical of the situation occurred at Constantinople Tuesday. During the panic caused by the salute fired in honor of the jubilee of Queen Victoria, the Mussulmans trooped into the streets, armed with bludgeons, and asked the police whether the Greeks or the Armenians were to be attacked.

Emperor William gave a dinner Sunday evening at Kiel, on board the imperial yacht Hohenzollern, in honor of Queen Victoria's jubilee. The guests included King Leopold of Belgium, the imperial chancellor, Prince Hohenlohe; the British ambassador to Germany, Sir Frank C. Lascelles, and others. After the dinner the emperor informed King Leopold that he had been appointed a la suite in the German navy, and then his imperial majesty called for three cheers for Queen Victoria. Ohio Valley League Couvenes at Cin cinnati and Hears Speeches. The Ohio Valley Bimetallic League met Tuesday at the Pike Opera House building in Cincinnati, and chose George Washington of Newport, Ky., temporary chairman. Delegates were present from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and West Virginia. Ex-Congressman H. F. Bartine made an address. After an outing in the afternoon to Coney Island the principal event was the ovation to William J. Bryan. Mr. Bryan arrived late in the afternoon, and with his friend, Horare B. Mr. Bryan was driven to the Pike Opera House. His reception was one long, protracted, deafening roan of enthusiasm. He said he was not there to speak, but to exhort. Senator Pettiger silver Republican of South Dakota, m stricken with paralysis of the vecal con which brought his vehement speech is close with a sentence half sitered. On motion of Mr. Platt of On necticut of the Finance Committee fuller earth, wrought or manufactured, was all ed to paragraph 38 at $3 a ton. This pa-cipitated a lively controversy between Mr. Platt and Mr. Pettigrew (silver Republican) of South Dakota, which can to an impressive climax when Mr. Pett

The debate proceed ed, but no further progress on the tan bill was made, and the awe-like feelag occasioned by this incident led to an ap journment at 3 o'clock. The Senate made good progress on the tariff bill Monday, disposing of the pan-graphs relating to hides, which have been the source of much controversy. As final ly agreed on the duty on hides is placed at 20 per cent. ad valorem in place of 14 cents per pound, as originally reported by the Finance Committee. The discuss drifted into a general debate on truth and from that back to the sugar trust Mr. Smith of New Jersey spoke against the duty on hides, while Mr. Allen of Nebraska supported the duty. The new paragraph was agreed to, 39-20, one Democrat, Rawlins of Utah, and several Populists and silver Republicans voting with the Republicans in the affirmativ Among other paragraphs disposed of wee all those relating to gloves, a substitute for the paragraph on live animals, ins ore and stained glass windows. The re-

Several hundred pension bills were reported to the Senate Tuesday as the result of the first meeting of the Pension Committee since the present Congress assembled. Three general pension bills were included, two of them amending the law of 1890, and another referring to proof in pension cases. The tariff bill was then taken up, and the paragraph 189 relating to watch movements, clock, etc., perfected by striking out the clauses on watches and on jewels for making watches and confining the paragraph to those articles not made of china or por-celains. Pineapples were changed to 7 cents per cubic foot in barrels and packages and $7 per thousand in bulk. The committee rates on lead ore (114 pound) were agreed to, 30 to 23. Mes.m.

To take this census the Russian Government employed an army of 150,000 persons and its completion in three months is regarded as a great achievement, in view of the vast expanse of territory covered and the illiteracy of the population.

General Land Commissioner Hermann has formulated regulations for the goverument of forest reserves in the United States. The estimated area of the exist ing forest reserves is 18,993,280 acres and of suspended forest reserves 19,951.360 acres, making an aggregate area of 38,-944,640 acres. Schweinfurth, the so-called "Messiah" of Rockford, Ill., has just returned to Monett, Mo., from Benton County, Ark ... where, it is reported, he contracted for the purchase of 2,000 acres of unimproved land of Senator Blackburn, with the view of removing his proteges from Illinois and establishing one of his "heavens" there. A negro named Moseley, who killed Farmer John Strong near Crystal Springs, Miss., a few days ago, and who was arrested at that place Thursday and confined in jail, was hanged by a mob there at 9:50 o'clock Friday morning. The negro had been guarded by 100 armed men, and two calls for troops had been sent, but, owing to the absence of Gov. McLaurin and the fact that it was impossible to establish communication with Lieut. Gov. Jones, who was at his home in Woodville, the troops did not start for the scene until morning, when the moving order was received. The troops received orders to stop as they were boarding the train.

An attempt at Key West, Fla., to lynch Sylvester Johnson, colored, who pleaded guilty to assault, resulted in an uprising of the negroes and the capture by them of the town. The local militia were rendered powerless by the loss of their armory and equipment. Up to Friday night several conflicts had occurred, one white being killed and several whites and negroes being wounded. The whites declared Johnson should be lynched if it took every Caucasian on the island to do it; while the blacks, largely in the majority, were successful, up to that time. in the defense. The sheriff wired Gov. Bloxham for permission to call upon the Government for help from the artillery and infantry companies stationed there, to prevent the blacks from rising and burning the town.

One of the most sensational tragedies ever enacted in north Texas took place in the Methodist Church in Pleasant Valley, twenty-two miles north of Dallas. during the services Sunday. As a result, Augustus Garrison and Frank Jones are dead and Thomas Jones probably fatally wounded. The Garrison and Jones familles are among the most prominent planters in that section of Texas. They own adjoining plantations and had been on the best of social relations for many years. Frank Jones had been partial in his attentions to Garrison's daughter. Recently the girl charged him with breach of promise of marriage. Garrison and the Jones family worship at the same church. Just as the preacher had read his text Garrison stepped to the doorway, and the congregation was startled by a fusillade of pistol shots. Nearly a dozen were fired in about as many seconds. When the firing ceased Augustus Garrison and Frank Jones were lying dead in front of the church steps and Thomas Jones was stretched on the lawn near by, probably fatally wounded. Thomas Jones says he and his brother Frank were approaching the church door and were within ten feet of it when Garrison appeared and opened fire. His brother Frank was hit by the first discharge. Thomas drew his pistol and shot Garrison, but not until he had received three bullets from Garrison's pistol.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: "There is no step backward in business, although the season of midsummer quiet is near. Improvement continues, gradual and prudently cautious, as before, although in many branches evident where no signs of it appeared a few weeks ago. Business men of the highest standing is all parts of the country, having gradually perceived that the tide has begun to rise, are regulating their contracts and investments and their plans for the future with a confidence quite unknown to them a short time ago. Great changes before the adjournment of Congress are hardly expected, but removal of uncertainty is with reason expected to bring into operation buying forces which have been restricted for months. The main factor at this time is the steadily brightening prospect for crops."

As a result of the rapid work on the tariff oill Wednesday the close of the long debate in the Senate and the final vote on the bill is felt to be very near at hand. Two of the most important provisions -those relating to the Hawaiian treaty of reciprocity and the duty on coal-were perfected, while another source of much conflict, the reciprocity section, was matured by the Finance Committee and pre sented to the Senate. Aside from these larger items a great many minor ones which have caused more or less conflict were disposed of. The Hawaiian provision of the House bill was restored after brief debate and without the formality of a vote. This has the effect of leaving the Hawalian treaty of reciprocity in full force and effect. During the day Mr. Turpie of Indiana spoke in support of the amendment for a 2 per cent. tax on inheritances. His speech was notable for the picturesque metaphors and the virulence of his denunciation of the pending bill. The Finance Committee suffered sereral unexpected reverses during the progress of the tariff bill Thursday, being de feated on three important votes. Cotton bagging was placed on the free list, 30 to 25, and cotton ties also, by a vote of 29 to 23. The duty on white pine lumber was reduced from $2 to $1 per thousand. 32 to 31. Sichigan Roads Opposed Home-Seak ers' Excursions-Peculiar and Fatal Accident ito a Farmer's Wife-Odd Fallows Systematically Robbed, Against Emigration.

The matter of home-seekers' excursion Michigan points to Southern and Western States has made its annual apmenter in Michigan railway circles. For tour years past the home-seeker excursion has been a thorn in the side of Michigan mads. For three seasons efforts have been made to sit down heavily upon the scheme and each year the concerted plan has fales through. This is the fourth season. renewed effort will be made to boycott the home-seeker scheme. There is just a ibility that the present effort will be more successful than the earlier ones. At the meeting of the Michigan Passenger Association a lengthy debate was held upon this subject. It ended in a resolution that the railroads should not allow me-seekers rates from Michigan points. The tendency of the home-seekers' excursions, the railroad men say, is to take people out of the State. It is to the inter-est of the Michigan roads and to all other classes of business, on the contrary, to keep citizens here. Hence the roads will not help to diminish the population of the State. 'The home-seekers' excursions are managed by and for the profit of the Southern and Western roads. Michigan mads have hitherto been dragged into the scheme by reason of their traffic relations. It is hoped to strengthen the opposition to such an extent that traffic relations will be kept intact without making concessions that in the long run prove injurious to the roads making them. Strenuous efforts will be made by the Southern and Western roads to break down the movement. The outcome will go far to show how much strength is behind the Michigan Passenger Association.

The Bell Fell on Her.

Mrs. William K. Munson, the wife of well-known fruit grower near Grand Rapids, met with a peculiar acident the other day, which proved fatal. Mrs. Munson discovered that bees were about to swarm on the farm and she started to call the farm hands from the field to hive them by ringing the farm bell. The bracket holding the bell had become loosened from long usage, and as she jerked the rope the bell slipped from its rack and tell. It weighs about 150 pounds and it fell over her head, crushing her to the ground. A deep gash was cut in her head, and another in her back. Her face was also seriously lacerated, and her right leg broken near the hip. She died shortly after being taken to a hospital.

Clever Thie'.

Officers of Phoenix lodge of Odd Fellows Grand Rapids, discovered that they have been systematically robbed. For some time the Odd Fellows of the State have been preparing to build a home for the orphans, and mite boxes have been hung in the lodge rooms of each lodge in the State. Friday the box in this lodge was opened and not a cent was found. Upon examination it was found that a false inside made of tin had been fitted to the slot in the top of the box and all contributions easily extracted. It was one of the most ingenious inventions yet seen. The lodge rooms are rented frequently to other associations, and it will be hard work to find the thief.

Mrs. F. W. Funnington, of Hillsdale, while at supper, saw a mouse. She jump-ed up to run away, but twisted her foot and broke her right leg.

R. E. Emmons, one of the best known contractors of Southern Michigan, died at Jackson of apoplexy, aged 57 years. He leaves a widow and three sons.

Mrs. Kate Treat, a demented woman of Oxford, was instantly killed by a Michigan Central train. She was facing the train and did not seem to realize her danger.

At the Cheboygan tannery James Mc-Kinsey had his right hand caught in one of the machines. His wrist was badly cut and the hand almost severed from the wrist.

The factory building of the Valley City Desk Company at Grand Rapids burned causing a loss of $20,000, with insurance of $13,000. Alonzo R. Hodges was the principal owner.

Rica. Barrett, paying teller of the Na-tional Lumberman's Bank, Muskegon, was sailing in a canoe and his frail craft was upset. The life-saving crew brought him safely to shore. Barrett was about exhausted.

At Lapeer, Gearle Shaffer, aged 15, living two and one-half miles south of Vassar, had his right hand taken off by the cars. He was looking for work, but failing, started back home. It was his first trip away from home.

A Lake Shore train was saved from being wrecked in a washout near the Kaiamazoo paper mill by C. A. Poland, who fell in a faint on the track as he signaled the train. The south side celery marshes were flooded.

The Holland Furniture Company has placed a machine in its factory which does away with hand carving. The carvers being notified that their services could be dispensed with at the expiration of another month, walked out, with the exception of Gerrit Vandenberg, who will be retained to operate the new machine.

A terrible calamity overtook the family of Alvin Leach, a farmer who lives near Birmingham. Mr. Leach was away at his work, and his wife had stepped out in the yard, when one of their little boys ran out of the house, saying it was afire. The terrified mother tried to gain admission, but the smoke and flames drove her back and the house and all its contents were soon consumed. A 6-months'-old baby was in the house and was also burned.

The Auditor General has been dunning the Treasurer of Montcalm County for something like $10,000 which he claimed the county owed the State. The Treasurer has written Auditor General Dix several times that he owed no such an amount and he'd better overhaul his books, and he has received from him a letter acknowledging the omission to credit to the county the sum of $8,500 received in three installments in April. 'The necessary correction has been made.

A great many sportsmen are under the erroneous impression that the revised game laws passed by the last Legislature contain a provision prohibiting the killing of deer in Michigan until Nov. 10, 1899. The amended law contains a provision to that effect, which, however, only applies to Bois Blanc island and the counties of Alcona, Lapeer, Huron, Sanilac, Tuscola, Macomb, Allegan, Ottawa and St. Clair. This probably accounts for the error into which many have fallen .- Soo News. Many of the barrels containing coppe on the steamer Pewabic were more or less burst open by being pitched forward when the steamer went to the bottom thirty-two years ago, when she sank bow first off Alpena. Diver Smith also finds the barrels weakened by age. He is having built what he terms a clam grapple. It is like an immense clam shell, and is placed in position by an arm from the bell. A trip line on the steamer Root above is pulled and the clam, by powerful springs, will lift a barrel of copper or a mass of copper on the bottom. The State Board of Auditors considered the case of Alpena County, which wants credit for $11,569 it claims to have overpaid in the State taxes because of the erroneous equalization of the county by the State Board in 1891. Representative Gustin appeared for the county. Attorney General Maynard told the board that it had the power to direct that the desired credit be made, but he doubted the advisability of so doing as the error was that of a county official, and it would be a bad precedent to establish. The matter went over to the latter part of July. The heaviest pine land owners in the lower peninsula, aside from David Ward. are John Canfield and E. G. Filer of Manistee and D. A. Blodgett of Grand Rapids. Their aggregate holdings are estimated at $20,000,000. In the upper peninsula Theodore M. Davis of Newport. R. I., holds 400,000 acres of the old canal grant, valued at $15,009,000; J. M. Longyear of Marquette, 200,000 acres, $5,000,-000; Michigan Land and Iron Company. 464,000 acres, $10,000,000; Dr. J. D. Ayer estate, 200,000 acres, $3,500,000; Ohicago and Northwestern land grants, $1,000,-000. David Ward, in the lower peninsula is said to have 400,000,000 feet of cork pine and 600,000,000 of hardwood. Montmorency County may not pride itself on any spectacular embezzlement, but when it comes to a steady flow of shortages it has no reason to take a back seat to any other county in the country. An expert accountant has just discovered that four County Treasurers holding office from 1887 to 1896 were all short in their accounts for an aggregate sum of nearly $14,000. None of the shortages age at once, for it is then probably was very large, but it seems to have become the regular thing for the retiring Treasurer to leave a shortage of some kind, and no one has been found with enough strength of will to interrupt the practice. The county officials appear to be hesitating whether to begin legal proceedings or not, and apparently they are afraid if they discourage these small steals that some irate Treasurers will retaliate by going off with some large sum and bankrupt the county. It is more difficult to determine which would be the prudent course, but perhaps it would be well to try the experiment of prosecuting the embezzlers just by way of varying the monotony of the county. Coroner N. G. Vanderlinde of Muske-gon investigated the matter of the death of Mrs. Fred Stark, and jound the cause to be heart failure. Mrs. Stark was in her kitchen alone at the time of her death. The rivalry between the Salvation Army and American Volunteers at Manistee has been bitter, and their demonstrations

Sugar Beet Culture Requires Deep. Fine Soil-Weedy Hay Should Be Cut When in Flower - How to Cure Sprains in Horses.

Growing Sugar Beets.

Sugar, like the garden variety of beets require a deep, finely pulverized soil, and dressed in the drill rows with twelve two-horse cartloads of rich, well-rotted manure, made from grainfed cattle. After the seed is sown and the plants are up, the after-culture consists in keeping the ground mellow between the rows, and the best plants are free from weeds. The harrow-tooth cultivator, with the flat steel weed cutter attached to the rear, is the best implement to work the crop with when the plants are small. It fines and mellows the soil and cuts up the young weeds in the one passage. After the plants grow larger use the horse cultivator, with the narrow teeth first, and afterwards the larger ones. Amateurs in beet culture should visit some large trucker and see how the work is done. One visit, with a careful inspection of the crops grown, will be worth to any observant farmer at least fifty dollars in experience. The beets, after they have reached the fourth leaf and the bulbs are about the size of your thumb, should be thinned out when the soil is moist. Sugar beets should be thinned out to stand six inches apart in the row, and stock beets thinned to eight inches. In thinning or hoeing the plants, the roots must not be cut, as it will cause them to rot.

The truckers, in growing the early market beets, use large quantities of liquid manure, running it in between the rows after the ground has been deeply cultivated. In a few days the rows are again run through with the cultivator. Under this double system of manuring the beets grow very rapidly, and are soon ready for market. In growing beets for feeding to stock, the ground must not be allowed to crust over, or the plants will be covered up with weeds. Beets can be grown and put into the cellar for four cents per bushel. From six hundred to eight hundred bushels can be grown to the acre under careful culture.-Baltimore

Cats and Poulizy. When there are occasional disappearances of young chickens, especially at night, it is most likely that the family cat will prove to be the thief. Cats are treacherous animals, and cannot be depended upon. The same cat that during the day will allow little chickens to eat from the same dish will also at night kill and eat the chickens with as hearty a relish as their owner would eat them when cooked. But the lack of moral sense may be partially supplied if the slightest interference with poultry by the cat secures for her the chastisement she needs. If this is done while they are young, the cat may be taught to discriminate between birds which equally with mice are her natural prey, and young chickens. Poultrymen who have an admixture of game blood in their fowls do not need to give their cats any lessons to let yonug chicks alone. If the mother hen cannot fight off the intruder on her brood, her call will quickly bring to her assistance the game rooster, who finds in such scrimmages just the kind of excitement he wants.

Pruning Young Pear Trees.

Much depends on how a beginning is made in pruning pear trees. It is for this reason best to take them at not more than two years from the bud. and if a very dwarf habit is desired a one-year stock from the graft is better. The thing to most persistently fight, either in dwarfs or standards, is the tendency of the central shoot to take most of the sap. This means large wood growth and little fruiting. On the other hand, a little pinching back of those shoots that grow too fast, which will always be the uppermost, will send the sap to branches lower down, and these will fill with fruit spurs and begin to bear the following year. The pear tree does not need high manuring. Give it plenty of mineral fertilizers, and any ground that will grow good grain or corn crops will be found fertile enough.

The difficulty with early spring planting is always because the soil is too cold. This causes the seed to germinate too slowly. But so soon as the seed begins to sprout warmth is generated by the act. Carbonic acid gas is developed, and this aids in making the soil warmer. Hence the advantage of putting some manure under the seed when it is planted early, so as to hasten germination. There is the further advantage of doing this early in spring

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS DIE RIFLED THE SAFE AT AGRICUL-IN A WRECK.

Three Killed and Fifteen Hurt in a Crash on the Northwestern at West Chicago Wednesday Morning-Tremendous Crush of Travel.

Death Comes to Excursionists. An awful rear-end collision occurred at West Chicago, Ill., at 12:45 Wednesday morning. Section No. 5 of the Christian Endeavor excursion to San Francisco ran into section No. 4. Three were killed and fifteen seriously hurt. Courtney, engineer of section No. 5, was fatally injured. Limbs and flesh of unknown people were taken from the wreck. A tramp was caught between the baggage car and engine and crushed to death.

Details of the Horror.

A rear-end collision on the Chicago and Northwestern marked the departure of the Christian Endeavor delegates for the convention at San Francisco. As soon as the wreck was reported to the Chicago offices of the Chicago and Northwestern. Superintendent J. C. Stewart of the Galena division ordered a special train and proceeded to the scene.

Other officials dispatched messenger for the company's doctors, and at 3 o'clock Assistant General Superintendent W. A. Gardner and a corps of surgeons left for West Chicago.

The various sections of the Northwestern specials vere crowded with young Endeavorers from all over the United States, but the presumption is that the majority of the passengers were Easterners.

Running Without fchedule.

Owing to the crush 'caused by the rush of Christian Endeavor business all schedules were abandoned and trains were sent out as fast as filled. Nine sections left the Northwestern depot at intervals of fifteen minutes, beginning at 10:30, to say nothing of trains sent out earlier in the evening. Sections Nes. 1, 2 and 3 got through West Chicago safely. Section 4 was made up of a baggage car, day coach anu seven sleepers, containing about 400 passengers.

Inasinuch as there were about 400 peo ple to a section the blockade is serious. Sections Nos. 4 and 5 were unable to proceed, and sections Nos. 6, 7, 8 and 9 are blocked between Chicago and West Chicago, thus delaying nearly 2,500 people.

Enperintendent Gardner Talks. Assistant General Superintendent William A. Gardner said he could give no tangible reason yet as to the cause of the accident.

"The road is run on a semaphore block system all the way to Turner Junction." said Mr. Gardner. "This blocks a train every 1,600 feet, and in addition we were using what we call the positive block because the abundant rains that fall system. This consisted in the operators

TURAL COLLEGE.

Sons of Secretary Butterfield and of Dr. Miller of Cadillac the Culprits-Both Confess and Disgorge-Fast Living Their Undoing.

Boys the Culprite.

Shortly before midnight April 6 last the vault in the office of Secretary Butterfield of the Agricultural College at Lansing was blown open and $2,300 in college and postoffice funds was stolen. A suspicious feature of the robbery was that there was nothing to indicate that the vault had been drilled, a fact which convinced the detectives the work was done by persons who knew the combination of the vault, and that the money was taken before the explosion took place, dynamite being used by the robbers for the purpose of covering their tracks.

Several weeks of patient work on the part of Postoffice Inspector Larmour and Deputy United States Marshal. Abels failed to unravel the mystery, and the investigation was about to be abandoned when the purchase of a diamond ring, a gold watch and a bicycle by Clinton D. Butterfield, a member of the graduating class and the son of the secretary, caused the detectives to turn their attention to him.

After ascertaining where he had expended more than $400 since the robbery, the detectives put him through a severe examination, which yielded sufficient information to warrant them in arresting G. Devere Miller, a sophomore, son of Dr. Carroll E. Miller of Cadillac. When the boys were brought together Miller, made a clean breast of the matter and Butterfield indorsed his story.

The two boys had committed the robbery, Butterfield-unlocking the vault, being familiar with the combination and having a key to the inside door. They pried open the drawers with a jimmy and secured the money. This done, Butterfield left the remainder of the job to Miller, who had purchased a stick of dynamite and a fuse in Grand Rapids on his return from his spring vacation.

Miller placed the dynamite on the crossbar of the inner door and ran the fuse out into the office door. He then closed and locked the door and applied the match. He left the building by a window because the door squeaked, and was in bed when use fire reached the dynamite. The explosion. blew the door off and wrecked the office badly.

The young men have been bound over to the fall term of the United States District Court, each giving bail in the sum of $2,500. Butterfield, who had spent the most money, returned $700 to the officers. while Miller gave up $860. The remainder will be made good by their fathers, Both boys come from as good families as there are in the State, their fathers being prominent and widely known. Their downfall is due to a desire to fly high. Butterfield was so hampered by the secret he was keeping that he was unable to pass his final examinations and failed to graduate. He acted as college correspondent for several newspapers in Lansing and Detroit, and in this capacity wrote several versions of the crime at the time of its commission and subsequent accounts of the efforts that were being made to find the perpetrators. He is 19 years old and Miller 20.

Minor State Matters.

From the ruin of the large dry kiln at the stave and heading factory, which burned at Clare, has already arisen the frame for another of increased capacity. A large force of men is employed.

While playing in Exstine's feed mill at Warren, the S-year-old son of Louis Sim was caught in one of the shafts and instantly killed. The body was one mass of jelly when thrown from the shaft.

Genesee County in the vicinity of Flint is stirred up over the boldness of horse thieves. Thursday night a large bay gelding was stolen from the farm of John Donovan, ten miles north of Flint. Friday night the thieves returned to the farm and exchanged the bay, which had been driven nearly to death, for a fine. large black belonging to Mr. Donovan. There is no clew to the thieves. A reward has been offered for their arrest.

Ernie West of Battle Creek defended the union in the great railroad strike of 1894 and was fired. He opened up a little shop and has just paid $4,200 for the property. He keeps everything imaginable in the shape of odds and ends. Among them is a petrified woman in a coffin, purchased from a stranded show. He says she is the only woman he could ever get along with; that she minds her business. does not talk back and does not gossip. He has money to burn.

At Adrian, burglars croke into the tabernacle of the German Catholic Church. Incy attempted to break open the iron safe from the back, but were unsuccessful. They then defaced the valuable frescoing on the walls, broke down the front doors and carried off a box containing the holy oils. They also stole a quantity of medals belonging to the women's society and dumped them into the closet of the school house next door. Father Koenig and Catholics generally are highly indigmant.

J. N. Stearns of South Haven says that the outlook there for peaches is for a rather light crop on the whole. While some orchards are heavily laden, others have but little fruit set. The crop all over the country is light, so that in his opinion there would be a tendency to good rices, which would be much better than last year when peaches were an enormous crop and could hardly be given away, many growers allowing them to rot on the tree. Cherries will be also a light crop. In regard to pears, Mr. Stearns said he never had a better show for a good crop. Other fruits will be an average crop.

At Grand Rapids, the Hamilton-Kenwood Cycle Company filed a trust mortitors to the amount of $67,000. Charles R. Sligh, president of the company, was the fusion silver candidate for Governor last fall.

for a day. Rake them up the following day, and stack them with alternate layers of straw or old hay. Each load should be salted at the rate of one peck of salt to the load. Make the stack to hold six or eight tons, or twelve twohorse wagon loads of it as gathered. The stack should be run up threefourths of the way, and then left over night to settle. After the stack settles top off with long hay, rake down hard, and then run two wires over the top and the down securely. A stack of this fresh hay will smoke for several mornings after it is put up, but if the hay has been well salted and several layers of dry hay put in between the green hay, there will be no danger of combustion.

Sprains in Horses.

All recent sprains of the joints and tendons are generally best treated by the application of cold water. This is best applied by means of a hose. This should be used frequently, but not for more than five minutes at one time. The horse's rug should be put on at such a time, or he is liable to take cold. If the horse shows symptoms of much pain, it may be necessary to foment the part; that is, apply warm water instead of cold. This will ease the pain, but will probably increase the swelling, and the reduction, afterwards, of this swelling will retard recovery. The inflammatory processes at the seat of the lesion mean increased blood supply to the part, and consequent effusion into the surrounding tissues. Thus, with a sprain, we always get more or less "thickening," and the getting rid of this "thickening" is often more troublesome than relieving the actual pain. The application of cold water by constring. ing the blood vessels has the effect of lessening the amount of blood which would otherwise be conveyed to the part, and so result in less effusion and swelling. After applying the cold water, a woolen bandage should be bound fairly tight round the affected part, preferably interposing a layer of cotton wool between limb and bandage. Should the animal show symptoms of being in much pain, remove the bandpressing too hard on the injured part. The bandage, however, must not be left off, but replaced. Bandages in sprains, other than in these of the limbs from the foot to the trunk, are out of the question .- Saddlery and Harness.

To Increase the Milk.

To make a large quantity of rich milk, the cows must be full fed. Where the milk, cream or butter can be sold at good prices it will pay to feed grain. The following ration can be given to each cow dally all through the summer: Seven quarts of bran and one quart of corn chop, divided into two feeds. Onehalf is fed in the morning and the other half at night. The bran is made into a thick slop and seasoned with a little salt. The cows are at pasture day and night. When the pasture gets short, the cows are given a large rackful at night of oats and peas or corn fodder, then make the manure soluble, and greatly increase its effectiveness.

Regulating Salting of Cows. Salt in moderate amounts is doubtless an aid to digestion. The craving for it is natural with all herbivorous animals, and is especially strong in those that chew the cud. If cows are not salted regularly the cream from their milk will not make butter so quickly. This is possibly because lack of salt allows food in the stomach to ferment before it can be digested. This always causes fever and increases the feed to dry. Cows should be salted at tem." least twice a week. It is better still to keep some where they always can have access to it. They will not eat too much for their good.

Farm Notes.

Potatoes nearly always do well on clover sod land, and are much less liable to disease than when grown with stable manure. Land that has been in clover should produce a good crop of potatoes without the application of manure.

Why not have some competent man legally appointed in every community to spray trees and destroy insect pests and fungus diseases, taxing each man for the number of trees grown? . The thrifty man would then no longer suffer from the habits of his negligent neighbor.

It is a favorable indication for sheep that the supply of rams of the mutton breeds is below the demand. This points to the fact that farmers are becoming convinced that sheep will pay in the forms of mutton and lamb, and that wool will be but a secondary considera tion in sheep raising.

Every sheep farm should be well provided with gates; bars are dangerous as well as too wasteful of time in letting down and putting them up. There is a great risk when sheep are crowding through bars, only partly let down, that a leg may be snapped. A good light gate may be made for 50 cents more cost than a set of bars, and if properly hung will last a great many years.

There is nothing better to make young pigs grow than a patch of peas. into which they may be turned an hour or so every day until the peas become so scarce that all day is required to satisfy them. They furnish the same kind of nutrition that milk does, and at a scuch cheaper rate. When thus fed their frames will grow rapidly, and they can be given corn feed later in the season, without the injury that comes to hogs summered on grass and clover and suddenly changed to corn.

It costs about 13 cents to send a bushel of wheat to Liverpool from Chicago. Fifty years ago the cost of sending a bushel of wheat from sections near Philadelphia now reached in an hour by rail was much more. Great Crush of Travelers.

The Northwestern road took out over 7,000 passengers, bound for the convention at San Francisco. The depot was crowded all day Tuesday and the excursionists were in the best of spirits at the prospect of a pleasant trip across the continent. At 6 o'clock the first train went out. It was of nine sleepers, filled with Chicagoans. Immediately following was another of ten sleepers, also filled with Chicagoans. Then came the New York delegation in a train of eight sleepers. This left at 6:15, and then at 9 the Pennsylvania crowd followed in a train of nine sleepers. Two trains of nine sleepers each went out at 10 with the Massachusetts delegation, and then came the regular train in three sections of eight, nine and ten sleepers respectively. These went out at 10:30. Eight sleepers were in the train that took the Farm, Fire and Fireside party at the same hour, and two trains of eight sleepers each took out the Michigan people immediately after, Nine sleepers were in the Wisconsin train that followed at once.

Every car was filled to overflowing, and the depot master had all he could do to find the proper accommodations for the immense throng. The scenes in the depot as the trains were being filled were exciting, and only experienced men could know how to properly handle such a crowd. Ali the preliminaries passed off without a hitch, however, and the road officials were congratulating themselves on the success with which they had handled a big job, when the news of the accident came.

Sam Parkinson, mail clerk, of Columbus, and Frank Owens, fireman, of Terre Haute; are fatally injured.

From Salt Lake comes a report that a passenger train on the Oregon Short Line road was wrecked near Glenn's Ferry, Idaho, and several people injured.

ROBERT FULTON'S FIANCEE.

What Betrothal Meant to a Girl Early In he Century.

For Helen Livingston there remained hardly one more year of happy girlhood free to go and come, dance and be merry, in the old innocent girlish fashion At Owosso the Ann Arbor railroad for at that time betrothal was as sacred as marriage itself and much more restrictive of privileges. That is, the freedom of girlhood was lost and that of the matron had not come. If the lover were attached ten other brakes, with their present, of course these restrictions were not felt, but in his absence the poor girl had little more liberty than a Hindoo widow. She must not accept even the most ordinary attentions from any man, must dance with no one except her father or brother, and she must always wear, conspicuously displayed, hanging from her neck face outward, the miniature of her future husband. These miniatures were often skillfully painted on ivory and were usually oval in shape and about 81% inches by bee business is booming.-Grass Lake 21% in size, without counting the gold frames, which were sometimes quite heavy. The broad remarks which it was considered in order for even chance acwere intolerable to Helen Livingston, and rather than subject herself to them she resolutely refrained from accepting an invitation even to her loved "Cousin Chancellor's" during the few months of her engagement, which ended in a hap-py marriage in the spring of 1809. On one occasion, when a large and most interesting company of American and foreign guests was expected at Clermont, Helen vainly sought her mother's of wickedness and woe?"-Livingston to attend without wearing the telltale portrait. Finding that this would not be allowed and realizing that her sister's disappointment would be great, "Sister Patty," only 15, but already tall and stately, heroically volunteered to wear the obnoxious picture, Rhea Fiber.

The claim is put forth by the London Times that the Gomess process for treating the rhea fiber is completely successful in rendering that plant a most valuable source of textile material. This process adopts zincate of soda for the elimination of the resins and effects it without the slightest injury to the fiber. After the "ribbons" or strips of bark have been freed from dirt they are placed in weak acid baths for a night. Next morning they are passed through a mild alkaline bath and then boiled in weak solutions of caustic soda to which zinc has been added. When washed and dried by the usual mechanical means, the fibers emerge as a long silky floss, entirely free from the outicle and resinous gums in which they were imbedded, being also clean, white and ready for the comb of the spinner. They likewise take the most attractive dyes and can be worked into every variety of fabric, from the finest quality of velvets to cheap drills and delicate laces. The whole of that next year I spent in exploring South America. From time to time I still received letters. The lawyer, the nurse, and the governess, Mrs. Gray, were my correspondents. It was in the autumn of that second year that the accounts of Joan began to improve. She had grown much stronger she began to notice places and persons-to ask questions-to interest herself once more in One day I received a letter from Darby The large, strangely formed herself. words had an odd look. She said:

"Dear Sir Ralph-This is the first letter I have ever written, and I write it to give you good news. Joan is so much better. Soon, I think, she will be quite well. I have a fancy, dear Sir Ralph, that one thing would make her that, and very soon. It is you. I talk to her about you often and often, and she says: 'I know him. He was very good. I think he was the best man in the world.' So, you see, she must remember you. We are at Nice again, and-is it not funny ?-papa got the very same house for us that we had before, when you and Jo were married. I think she remembers it. Every day she asks more questions, and seems thinking out things for herself. Oh, I wish you would come! You have been away such a long, long time, and I miss you very much. Papa is not a bit like you. He is always writing. Do please come. Your loving little

"DARBY." As I read those simple words the hard crust about my heart seemed to be broken up. I looked back on those two years with a sense of wonder. How lonely they had been! How devoid of anything like love, or comfort, or sympathy! Yet even now, if I obeyed this summons, and went back to my wife's side, what would that life be like henceforward? However well I might hide the fox, its teeth would gnaw at my heart beneath the cloak of indiffergirl again!" Her voice thrilled to my heart. I dared not look at her.

"To go back,' I said presently, "is im possible. That is the worst of it. With all its mistakes and follies, it pushes you on-on remorselessly. You cannot stayyou cannot return-you can only go forward, bearing the pain and the regret as best you may."

"We," she said, humbly, "have had to bear both, I fear."

Then she rose and stood before me. Her face was white and anxious, her hands were clasped tight, and hung before her; the folds of the soft gray dress caught light and shadow from the flames.

"There was something," she said, and har eyes looked at me piteously, like a child's. "It was about-about myself. things that were passing around her. have tried to remember, but I cannot. I can remember the girl you met here. I know every walk we took. I know the very tracks of the sea. I-do not think I was bad then," and her voice grew anxioux. "I did not mean to be, I know. I was happy, too, in a way, and I had faith and hope, and life did not seem so hard and sad a thing. Now," and she put her hand to her brow and pushed the loose curls back, while her eyes grew clouded -"now it is all so different. Yet I cannot tell why-I only feel as if my life had all gone wrong-as if, somewhere on its road, I had missed happiness; and, when I long for it there is a gulf between-a gulf I can never pass. The words, and the young, sorrowful voice, smote me to the heart.

"My poor child," I said, brokenly, "I would it were in my power to give it back to you!"

"Why should you care?" she said, and half turned away. "I was not good to you. I have thought of that very often. And I never cared about your feelingsmy own seemed to fill up everything, and when I did-" Again the cloud came over her face, her eyes drooped, her little hand moved with restless touch among those soft white curls. "When I did," she said, "it was too late."

I was silent. I seemed to have too many words to speak, yet something kept me from speaking even one. "In all my thoughts and dreams of you," she went on, "I always knew how good you were. I-I hope you believe There are things I have told you I told no one I was coming. I resolved that I felt you did not believe. Sometimes it is so hard for a woman to speak, on sunset when I arrived at Nice, and and when we feel we are misunderstood next comer. leaving my baggage at the station, I drove it makes it harder. I-I have often tried to tell you of my feelings, but you chilled me. You did not mean it, I know; but Keeping behind the sheltering laurels | always I felt, as I told you just now, that you were so good, and so true, and so strong. Oh, always-always I felt that! "It is Joan's journal," she said, and

"Heaven forgive me," I said, "If I have aisjudged her!

I took up with trembling hands the jour nal that the child had brought to me. Th record of those years of anguish lay there. yet I feared to read it. It seemed to me dishonorable to pry into the secrets of a woman's heart-to take advantage of her lessness, and tear ruthlessly the veil from her simple confidences, meant as they were but for her own eyes. I had respected Yorke's-how much the more then, should I respect those of my wife my other self? The girl who had held my heart, and shared my life, whom still lovde and fain would have believed.

As I thought of these things I resolutely put the book away.

I knew very little of women; but thought that no woman would respect the man who wrung from her ignorance and helplessness the secrets of her past, whether the past were innocent or guilty. "She told me she has always trusted me," I said; "I will not fail her now. If confidence is to unite us again it shall be a voluntary gift from her heart to mine

POSTMASTER WAS IGNORANT.

Ought to Have Known that Blackbird and Oisean Noir Were the Same. In the mining camps in Upper Michigan people of every nationality under the sun are employed, and the mail that arrives at the nearest point of delivery is as incongruous as a crazy patchwork. That is what an amateur postmaster thought as he looked it over in the candle box in the rear of the board shanty which served as a grocery store and postoffice combined. He was looking for a letter for a half-breed, who sat on a soap box and waited.

"There never was such a name in the world," said the postmaster in a grumpy voice. "Who ever heard of Blackbird for a name?"

"Dat eez so-dat my name-me," said the man who wanted the letter. He spoke with a strong French accent. "Peter Blackbird, my fadder, he make it, too." "And I tell you Blackbird ain't no kind of a name-heathen or otherwise. Say, Frenchy, what you done to pick up a name like that? Howsomever, if the letter was here it would be plain readin'. Mebbe it'll come next week. Who d'ye expect it from, ennyhow?" "Me fader-an' it zee money got-dat

I len' him-me." "Well, get out now with your jargon.

If it comes I'll save it for you. Come agen when you can't stay so long," and the letters were packed away for the "Old Abe" and the Hill Boys. "Here is an echo from Corinth." Saying that, the Past Commanderin-chief A. G. Weissert proceeded to relate an incident full of interest and one not lacking pathos.

"While at the Eau Claire encampment I met the Hill boys, brothers, Thomas J. and John F. You know ours was the Eagle regiment, Eighth Wisconsin. The Hill boys belonged to C, the Eagle company, the proud bird of liberty having been purchased of a Chippewa Indian by Captain Perkins. The engle was with us all through the war. He was a friend of every man in the regiment, but outsiders had to keep out of his reach. 'Old Abe'-that was his name-never missed a battle. When the bullets began to fly and cannon to roar his wings would flap and the eagle scream was heard. Sometimes he would remain on his shield, carried by a man detailed for that purpose, throughout a battle, flapping his great wings and giving his orders in the eagle language-screams that could be heard by the whole regiment, even when the din of cracking muskets, whistling bullets and the roar, and bursting of shells was the loudest. The next time he would insist on leaving his perch and gracefully soar high above the regiment to sound orders that were inspiring. When the battle was over 'Old Abe' would settle down in our midst and strut around among the men to be petted and commended for the part he had taken in the contest.

"I didn't start in to tell about 'Old Abe,' but to speak of two members of his company-the Hill brothers.

"I was chatting with Mayor Frawley the second day of the encampment when Street Commissioner Tom Hill approached, accompanied by another veteran. 'Excuse me, Mr. Mayor, I want Comrade Weissert to meet this man,' said Tom. 'Do you know him?' I didn't. 'Don't know my brother John?' Then I recalled the young hero of Corinth and other battles. After a few words with John I said: 'Mr. Mayor, let me tell you something .about sitions as absolutely neces even to the discussion of terms of pence: "1. Restoration of a national anthority throughout all the States. 2. No receding from the position of the national executive on the subject of slavery. 3. No cessation of hostilities short of an end of the war and the disbanding of the forces hostile to the government." These official statements of the substance and purport of the conference should set forever at rest the stories about Lincoln's willingness to obtain peace at any terms. There might have been a time earlier in the conflict when he would have been ready to make some concession, but never to the extent of allowing the Southern slave-owners to retain their property interest in human beings.

Our War Histories.

It has been one of the misfortunes of the South that she has yet to produce a writer who would describe her part in the civil war intelligently, faithfully and justly. Victor's chronicles, written while the echo of battles was still ringing in his ears, is an absurd performance. Some critic long ago remarked of him that if he had been told that one Southern soldier had confronted a Union army and had demanded instant surrender, and the army had immediately laid down its arms to him, Victor would have swallowed the yarn, hook, bait and sinker. Pollard's "Lost Cause" is a more interesting and better written book, but it is infected with this exaggeration and with a partisanship which did the South much harm when it was published, and which even now, when we can be calm over these things, seem very foolish. Jefferson Davis' history is a cumbersome affair, which probably not fifty persons have ever even read after tolling through the first volume, and Alexander H. Stevens' narrative is too philosophical for popular comprehension. There has been a swarm of small writers in the South who have evidently made Pollard their model. I have come across one or two of their histories for schools. or for the people, within a year or two. It is impossible to read them without exceeding anger or convusions of laughter. Dr. Jones, a clergyman, has prepared one which is a continuous rhapsody of Southern valor from the first to the last chapter and a gross exaggeration of Northern faults. It is intolerable that a new generation in the South should be fed on such stuff as this at the hands of a member of the sacred profession who has about as much fitness for writing history as George Francis Train has to discourse on the philosophy of human reason, It is a remarkable fact that Homce Greeley's "American Conflict," written post haste in his spare hours from editorial work, and in large part while the rebellion was still on, and with Frank Moore's "Record" as chief authority, is really at this late day the best narrative from the pen of a Northern man. Contentious partisan that he was, Greeley nevertheless, with his powerful memory, his comprehension of the whole subject from its beginning in the early slavery agitations and his newspaper instincts, produced two volumes which, if they were edited in order to excise the inaccuracies of hasty composition, would still be one of the very fairest accounts we have as to how we got into the war and how we got out of it. The truth is that a complete, accurate and impartial history of the rebellion has yet to be written. The Count of Paris has come nearer to it than any one, but he lacks insight into the civil and social conditions of the people, and the great value of his work is from the standpoint of the military critic, writing largely for tacticiaus in the art of soldiership and for scholars. The amount of Northern literature on the subject from the pen of word mongers and partisan backs is appalling, but in the past fifteen years, since Northern newspapers and magazines began to find that it was safe for them to give the Southern versions of battles, sieges and campaigns, there has been a vast winnowing of the chaff, as well as an accumulation of a great repository of solid information. There could be nobler task for a scholar of leisure than to apply himself to it for twenty years and evolve from it the history which both the people of the North and the South will accept, which will have the spirit of the bench and not the bar, in which the author will look to 2000 and not 1900 for his fame, and which, like Hallam's "History of the English Constitution," will win the encomium of all parties and sections, as it did seventy years ago, of being in its class the most impartial book ever written.-Philadelphia Bulletin.

SERIOUS SUBJECTS CAREFULLY CONSIDERED.

A Scholarly Exposition of the Lesson -Thoughts Worthy of Calm Reflection-Half an Hour's Study of the Scriptures-Time Well Spent.

Lesson for July 11.

Golden Text .- "Believe on the Lond Jeans Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house."-Acts 16: 31.

This lesson treats of Paul and the Phil. ippian jailer-Acts 16: 22-34. As a wom. an was the first convert in Europe, so an. other woman was the cause of the first persecution in Europe. The verses 16-21 relate how the disturbance arose which led to the arrest of Paul and Silas, A roung woman afflicted with a peculiar form of mental and physical derangement which led to incoherent atterance supposed by the ignorant to be prophetic, was heated by Paul. Her masters, who were then deprived of their income, angrily attacked the meddling Jews and accused them before the magistrates of attempting to proselyte Roman citizens to the Jewish religion, which was an offense against the laws. Apparently without the formality of a hearing, the magistrates or dered them to be beaten with many stripes, and then east them into prison. There was at this time intense feeling in some parts of the empire against Jew. ish proselytizers, who were making converts. In Rome itself there were persons of noble birth, chiefly women, who had accepted the Jewish religion and worship ed in synagogues. The authorities while willing to allow subjects already of other faith to remain therein, would not permit the desertion of native Romans to the Jewish ranks; nor did the public look on such a proceeding with anything less than scorn and hatred. This feeling, and the frequent lack of distinction on the part of pagans between Jews and Christians, explaine the violent attack at Philippi.

"To keep them cafely": for a further hearing and punishment at some later "The inner prison": not an under day. ground dungeon, but an inner room with heavy walls, without windows or ventilation, dark and disagreeable; a place reserved for dangerous criminals, while ordinary offenders were confined in the outer prison, lighted by windows,

That Paul and SEas could pray and sing while in great pain from the scourging, the stocks, the close air and the dampness, showed of what stuff they were made. We are sometimes apt to attribute all the endurance of ancient Christians to semi-miraculous strength from heaven. Doubtless they had such help at times, but a good store of sound manly courage was not wanting. That which the prisoners sang was probably extracts from the Psalms.

This miracle must have aroused the most mingled feelings in Paul himself as well as in his fellow prisoners. To see the doors, behind which some had le hope forever, suddenly flung open, to feel the chains snapped and the stocks split, would astonish all beyond measure. But Paul, who quickly surmised that the Lord had come this act of deliverance, as for Peter many years before, did not lose his presence of mind. The escape of prisoners was commonly punished by the forfeit of the keeper's life .--- "Supposing that the prisoners had been fled": an expression not in accordance with present grammatical usage. Better, "that the prisoners bad escaped." Superstitious fear of the earthquake probably had as much to do with the jail er's fright as the thought of his prisoners' supposed escape. The question, "What must I do to be saved ?" certainly had not the full meaning which we commonly attribute to it. The jailer was thoroughy frightened, connected his danger with some fault of his own, perhaps some neglect of his pagan worship rather than any sense of moral lack, and asked what he must do to escape the impending calamity -not punishment after death. Nevertheloss, Paul and Silas gave him an answer suited to his case. He was answered better than he knew. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ"; when they "spake unto him the word of the Lord," we may suppose that there was a sufficiently full explanation to enlighten him and his family, whom he sent for after seeing to the refastening of the doors and the replacing of the fetters on the other prisoners. Paul probably to'd them the story of Jesus and his teaching about sin and the cure for it, then explained the meaning of baptism, When in his gratitude the jailer took Paul and Silas out into the court where there was a tank used for bathing putposes, to relieve the pain of their wounds by washing them in the cool water, be or Paul suggested that there was no need to wait for the performance of the initial rite of which they had been speaking Accordingly he and the members of his family-all of whom were of sufficient as to understand the instruction which Paul had previously given them-were baptized in the reservoir or cistern close by A homely but beautiful picture is this of a jailer's breakfast party to his sorry looking wards, now his benefactors. The action of Paul and Silas in refusing to depart secretly in the morning, demand ing a public acknowledgment of the wrong done them as Roman citizens, was not due to petty pride or obstinacy. "In asserting so strongly their personal rights, they may have been influenced in part by a natural sense of justice, and in part by a regard to the necessity of such a vindication of their innocence to the cause of Christ st Confederacy, the object of the meeting 17 Grant was sitting in front of his Philippi. It was important that no stain should rest upon their reputation. It was notorious that they had been scourged and imprisoned as criminals; and if, after their departure, any one had suspected or could have insinuated that possibly they had suffered not without cause, it would have created a prejudice against the truth.

and arbutus, I made my way slowly to the house. The door stood open. I met not a single soul; I passed in. On the right of the hall a door stood ajar. From the room within came the sound of voices. I listened. Only too well I knew them. The child's sweet plaintive tones, and those of my wife. I crept up to the door and looked in. The room was half dusk. There was a couch drawn up by the fire, and lying on it a little shadowy figurethe child's figure. Joan sat beside her on hands. a low chair.

"I am sure he will come," Darby was saying. "You will be glad, dear, will you not?

"Vory glad," came the answer in quiet, even tones-the tones I remembered of

"Because he will take care of you, and be good to you," the child went on. "Only, Joan, you must promise to tell him everything. He will not be angry. He is too kind and good for that."

"He was always good," said Joan soft-"And you! What should I have done Jy. without you all these years? You held me back from sin and from despair. You gave me strength when I was weakest. and hope when I was hopeless, and patience when I was well-nigh desperate, and love when all other love failed. Oh, my child-my blessing! It is heaven's mercy that gave you to me! I see that every day I live." The next moment I entered the room.

A sort of constraint came over me. The fond words that had longed for utterance were frozen on my lips. Darby came to the rescue with a torrent of questions and 'remarks, and a few moments afterwards Mr. Templeton entered.

We all sat down then, and the conversation became general. They would not hear of my going to the hotel; so my luggage was sent for, and I did my best to return the cordiality of my welcome, and to seem at home and content once more. Joan was very quiet. Each time I look-

In a week the half-breed was back as before looking for a letter for "Peter Blackbird." And, as before, no letter awaited him.

"Can you read writing? asked the postmaster, angrily, as he flipped the letters on the rough counter.

"Whaffor I hev lettre come eef I no read?" asked the half-breed in return. "Then you look here and see that there isn't anything for "Peter Blackbird." The woodsman took each letter in his grimy hands and with infinite pains and difficulty spelled out the hard names to which the one had given seemed an easy one. At last he seized one with a yell of delight, and began tearing it open when the postmaster insisted on seeing it."

"Hello!" he said, "this ain't your letter!"

Rings.

Collectors are eagerly seeking the fron mourning-rings that were generally worn in Germany in 1813, as they are now worth more than their weight in gold. These rings are testimonies of the heights to which German patriotism rose against Napoleon in 1813. In that year the Princesses of the Royal House made an appeal to the nation to sacrifice all personal ornaments for the sake of the treasury, themselves setting the example. This appeal has its parallel in our own history, the Long Parliament having, at the beginning of the struggle between Parlia- H. Stephens and Messrs. Hunter and mentarian and Cavalier, made a similar call upon English patriotism. In consequence of the personal example of the princesses, an immense number of mourning rings were sent to the treasury at Berlin, each sender receiving an iron ring in acknowledgment, bearing the words, "Gold I give for iron." From a place called Swinemunde, no less that one hundred and Southern Confederacy was practically fourteen gold rings were sent, the in a state of collapse at the time the same number being dispatched in ex- conference was held. "At the battle of Corinth our regiment, after holding its line for some time, was compelled to fall back. While making this movement Johnny Hill was shot through the body and fell as one dead. One of the boys near himhis brother was at the other end of the company-stopped a moment to see how badly he was hurt. When we reached Fort Robinet he reported that Johnny was dead. The enemy had taken possession of the field over which we had come and there was no chance to bring in our wounded or bury the dead until we had defeated Van Dorn and Price. It was about forty-eight hours after Johnny had been killed that Tom, with pick and spade, set out to find and bury his brother. I can see now how the poor fellow looked as he moved away from the company. He was heartbroken at the loss of his brother and seemed to have become an old man in a night. With the pick and spade on his shoulder he walked like one infirm from old age, his form bent, step unsteady and eyes on the ground. So he was moving when something happened. Tom heard a footstep in front of him. Looking up he saw the white, pinched face of his brother. Both stopped and stared at each other.

"'Great God, Johnny, is that you?" "When the boy with a bullet hole clean through him could master his voice he answered, not much above a whisper:

"Yes, Tom, but I'm badly hurt. Where are you going?' "'I was going out to bury you, John.

"Then those two soldier boys fell into each other's arms.

"As I looked up the mayor was using his handkerchief and tears were dampening the wrinkled faces of the Hill boys, then something took my voice away for a second, when Tom came to the rescue by saying: 'Augey has told it just as it happened." -- Chicago Times-Herald.

Domestic Architectu In planning a house with a tower on the corner, the difficulty in the design is to keep it from having a club house appearance. In a corner house it is sometimes desirable to have a bay so situated that a view may be had on two sides of the house from one window, and in this case the only way to top it out is to make a tower of it.

The accompanying design is of a tenroom house, with a circular bay on the corner, forming a tower. There are four rooms on the first floor, four chambers on the second, and two servants' rooms in the attic. The exterior is of light buff brick, with a sea-green slate roof and pearl white trimmings.

Silver the Keynote.

"The people of Ohio, and indeed, of the Union, are to be congratulated upon this large assemblage, for it is a convention of representatives of the whole people, the masses, and not of bosses, of trusts, of syndicates, or of hired tools of the despotism of Wall and Lombard street greed. This convention comes from the commonpeople, and owes its allegiance alone to them. In these respects what a contrast it offers to the late convention at Toledo. for that convention was not called, organized or controlled along the lines of what the fathers of the Republican party taught, but merely to obey the mandates to do the will of Mark Hanna. It is expected that your temporary chairman shall strike the 'keynote' of the coming campaign. Well, that 'keynote' shall be sounded on a silver chord. It will be no new note but a prolongation of that sounded by the national convention at Chicago last summer and one that has grown voices to the polls last November." Just before the convention was called to order a large gold cross was carried into the hall. It had as ornaments the crown of thorns and a clock indicating 16 minutes to 1 o'clock. The speech of Chairman Sloane was frequently interrupted with the wildest demonstrations of applause, especially in his references to silver.

James Gilmore of Eaton presented the report of a conference had between the central committee and a committee from the silver Republicans, at which the latter asked for representation on the ticket. He was almost cried down, but protested with much vigor until he was fully heard. He was followed by Gen. Warner and Charles Fillin in the same strain and bed'am broke loose. Allen O. Myers reminded the delegates that they had settled the question in the morning, and if they reconsidered it and recognized the silver Republicans they must recognize the Populists and cease to be a Democratic convention. Otway J. Cosgrove of Cincinnati followed, indorsing all Mr. Myers had said. Pertinent Questions. Why Will a Woman Throw Away Her Good Looks and Comfort?

Why will a woman drag out a sickly, half-hearted existence and miss three-quarters of the joy of living, when she has health almost within her grasp ? If she does not value her good looks, does she not value her comfort?

Why, my sister, will you suffor that dull pain in the small of your back, those bearing-down, dragging sensations in the loins, that terrible fullness in the lower bowel caused by constipation proceeding from the womb lying over and pressing on the rectum? Do you know that these are signs of displacement, and that you will never be well while that lasts?

What a woman needs who is thus affocted is to strengthen the ligaments so they will keep her organs in place. There is nothing better for this purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The great volume of testimony which is constantly rolling in, proves that the Compound is constantly curing thousands of just such cases.

The following letter from Mrs. Marlow is only one of many thousands which Mrs. Pinkham has received this year from those she has relieved-surely such testimony is convincing:

"My trouble commenced after the birth of my last child. I did pot know what was the matter with me. My husband went to our family physician and described my symptoms, and he said I had displacement and falling of the womb. He sent me some medicine, but it did little good. I let it go on about two years, and every time I did any hard work my womb would come down. Finally a lady friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did. The first bottle helped me so much, I continued to take it right along. My back was almost the same as no back. I could not lift scarcely any weight. My life was just a drag to me. To-day I am well of my womb trouble, and have a good, strong back, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."-MRS. L. MARLOW, Milford, Ill.

Finally the family considered the sprain of enough consequence to call in the family doctor, who is a distinguished surgeon. He was out of patience with anything so trivial as a sprain when he was daily concerned in scientific operations of the most important character, and his first performance was to give the sprained foot a vicious twist in a surgical way to find out if any bones were broken. Then he said :

"Get up and walk!" "But, doctor, I cannot take a step."

"Get up and walk!"

There was nothing for the patient to forth.

"You're not walking; you are limp-ing," said the doctor. "Walk!"

"I think," said Marcia, "that you are almost as pretty as you think you are and when you don't try to be you are the most charming girl in the world."

"How awfully good of you!" rejoined the other. "And do you know that when you came in I was thinking that you looked just like one of those big feather dusters which had taken a notion to walk? Only your feet are so very large that the illusion was not quite perfect."

He Would Not Be Undersold. Colonel James Tamplin, a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars, is a veri-table walking history of the wars, in which he bore himself with much honor. Colonel Tamplin was reading a paper recently, when he saw a mention of the president of one of the great railroads centering in Chicago. "T'll tell you a story about that man," he said. "When we were hanging around Vicksburg looking for trouble with the 'Johnnies,' there was more or less foraging. I remember this man, then a private in our company, while nosing about the adjoining farms ran across a barrel of prime cider. Being a good soldier, he promptly confiscated the cider and employed an aged darky to tote it into camp.

"Cider was scarce in those days, and he rigged up a temporary bar and was soon doing a lively business retailing it at 10 cents a cup. The barrel stood well back in his tent, and for a time he was do but obey, and she stepped lamely so busy filling orders that he paid no attention to a disturbance in the rear of the tent. Then the crowd began to dwindle and he realized that something was wrong. He importuned a passing soldier to sample his wares, but the fellow shook his head and said the price was too high. 'There's a fellow around here selling cider at 5 cents a glass,' he bies.

"The owner of the barrel took a turn around his tent and found a great crowd gathered in the rear. Another member of the company had driven a spigot into the other end of the barrel and was doing a land office business. Well, he saw the game was up, and rather than be outdone he invited the whole crowd around in front and told them to pitch in. He was willing to meet competition, and rather than be undersold on his own goods he would ladle out the

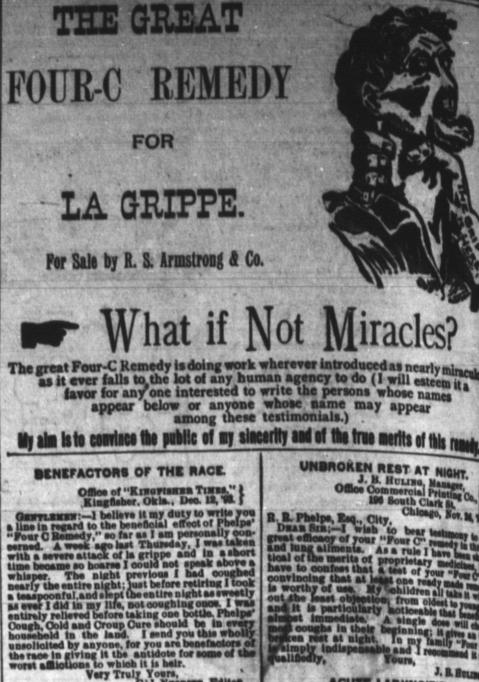

"I reckon, however," added Colonel Tamplin, "that he had made enough before the trick was discovered to give him a start in the railroad business, for I see he has been doing quite well ever since."-Chicago Times-Herald.

said Bishop Williams, "who had been six weeks in coming, most of the way by cance. He rose and began by saying that he would speak for himself and for a brother bishop who, unfortunately, could not be present. He was sorry to say that his brother's diocese had gone to the dogs. A general gloom followed these words. He went on to say that the bishop had found so many inquirers after religion among the Eskimo north of Hudson bay that he had to build a church. As there was no wood he used whale's ribs for rafters, covering them with tanned walrus hide and so made a church to hold 80 persons. 'All went merry as a marriage bell' for a time until-the dogs grew famished and ate the church."-Troy Times.

An Elk Horn Fence,

At Mammoth Hot Springs, in Yellow stone Park, there is a fence made of elk horns. It incloses the greater part of the grounds of Photographer F. Jay Haynes' studio. The fence is composed of over 800 selected elk horns. All of them have 12 points, and a great many have the royal 14 points. They were shed in March, 1895, and were gathered in June of the same year by Mr. Haynes and three of his men within a radius of ten miles of Mammoth Hot Springs and within four days' time. There are about 2,500 elk in the park now. Each pair of horns would bring $7.50 at the railroad at Cinnabar, about eight miles, or at least $10 a pair in the east or south .-Kansas City Star.

He Put Out the Light.

Many stories have been told about the mistakes made by greenhorn telegra-phers, but one of the worst we ever heard was that made by a young man who had received his diploma at a telegraph college. He passed an examination and was assigned a position, and the very first night caused a bad wreck. He received orders to put out his red light and give orders to conductor of No. 77 to meet No. 62 at M----, and he obeyed this important message by blowing out the light and letting No. 77 go by unsignaled, and then he wondered why the conductor did not stop to get his orders. -Pittsburg Post.

Young, but Thoughtful.

The new woman begins her career at an early age. A child of 4 was spreading butter on a cracker on the luncheon cloth when her grandfather-at whose table she was-remonstrated with her, telling her that was not the proper place to do it. She never lifted her eyes, but went calmly on with the operation. and when it was finished and she took up the cracker to eat she said quietly to nobody in particular, "Men don't always know what's best."-New York Times.

Righteous Indignation, playing with some companions they were startled by the booming of guns, and rushing to the, front yard they be-held great smoke wreaths drifting away from the United States ship Tallapoosa. Without further ado Richard applied the fuse to his gun and acknowledged the salutation. While thus employed the kneeling boy suddenly felt three light blows on his back, and looking up beheld the figure of the president standing beside him. In one hand the nation's chief held a lighted cigar, while in the other the astonished boy saw a toy sword belonging to his sister Ethel.

"Rise, Richard; I dub thee knight," said the rugged old warrior, amid the laughter of several friends who attended

Then, returning his cigar to his lips, he smiled grimly and resumed his way. -Atlanta Constitution.

Historic Trees In New York.

On West One Hundred and Fiftyninth street and St. Nicholas avenue, Washington Heights, stand a number of remarkable trees. They were formerly the grounds surrounding the old Jumel mansion, which is now known as Earle Cliff. They are Egyptian cypress, and have a history, like everything pertaining to this remarkable mansion and its grounds. They were sent as a present to Napoleon Bonaparte from the sultan of Egypt as a gift of honor, but arrived in Havre, France, after the battle of Waterloo. Stephen Jumel, who was in France at the time, and a personal friend of Napoleon, succeeded in gaining an audience with the emperor the night before he was banished to the island of St. Helena. Napoleon presented these trees to Jumel, who brought them to America on the clipper ship Eliza, which he had chartered with the hope of aiding Napoleon to escape to this country. These trees, when brought here, had their native earth still clinging to their roots. They were planted as described above, where they flourished and grew to a large size, sprouding out their peculiar branches wide over their adopted soil—a mute reminder of the decay of empires as well as people.— New York Times.

A King and His Crown.

The sovereign who makes use of his crown most frequently is that most simple, unaffected and democratic of all monarchs of Europe, King Oscar of Sweden, who dons it each time that he opens parliament at Stockholm or at Christiania.

It scarcely adds to his appearance, for it comes down too far over his nose, and somewhat gives one the impression of a derby hat worn on the back of the head and pulled down over the ears. Indeed it is only the king's majestic stature and dignified bearing that preserve him from looking ridiculous when he has got it upon his head.-London Letter.
