It was voted to raise $5,000 by direct tax, and also to cut the insurance on the school buildings and contents from $13,850 to $9,350.

The next business was the election of a member of the board of education in place of William Bacon, whose term of office had expired. Mr. Bacon was unanimously re-elected, no other name being presented in opposition. This is the first instance in Chelsea of but one man's name being presented for election as member of the board of education.

This ended the business before the meeting which then adjourned.

WOULD-BE OFFICERS.

A List of Those Who Would Like to Work for the County.

There is considerable talk already about those who will get the nomination on the various tickets for county officers this fall, and the following list of would-be officers was taken from the Washtenaw Times. There may be others, but they have not made their desires known.

Susan McIntyre Baldwin.

The death of Mrs. Susan McIntyre Baldwin occurred at Chelsea, Mich., about two weeks ago. She whom we think of and speak of as Miss McIntyre had her home in Ellicottville about twenty-five years, and during that time by her cheerful disposition, kindly manner, her interest in all the people and in every good work, won for herself a place in the hearts of all. Her home was in the family of the Rev. Courtney Smith, who was pastor of the Presbyterian church in this village for fifteen years. She was the sister of Mrs. Smith.

As was natural, she was specially interested in the work of the church of which Mr. Smith was pastor. This church remembers, with gratitude, the good work she did during the years her home was in Ellicottville. She always followed after the things which made for peace and the things wherewith one may edify another. So much confidence was placed in her sincerity and good judgment that she naturally became a leader whom others took pleasure in following. One who was so helpful in many ways will always be pleasantly remembered.

About two years ago she married Truman Baldwin of Chelsea, Mich., where her home was at the time of her death. Mrs. Baldwin had a severe fall, the early part of last winter. From that time her health gradually failed. Her life had been a peaceful one, and in peace she passed from earth to the abiding rest and peace of her heavenly home. We are thankful for the life she led, and the good work she did while she was with us.—Ellicottville (N. Y.) Post, June 29.

SOLDIER RETURNS AFTER MANY YEARS' ABSENCE.

He Was Said to Have Been Killed at Antietam—Surprised His Sister-in-Law in New York by Visiting Her—News in Brief.

Returns After Many Years.

Jacob Traub, after an absence of thirty-six years, during which time he was supposed to be dead, walked into the rooms of Mrs. Charles Traub, at 985 Third avenue, New York, the other day and announced himself as her long-lost brother-in-law. Hearing that he was shot at the battle of Antietam, Mrs. Traub had long ago given him up as dead, and his returning so unexpectedly gave the family of the late Mrs. Traub a great surprise. The late Mrs. Traub, who was a member of the New York Turn Verein, whose club house is in East Fourth street, volunteered for service in the civil war in 1862. Among its members was Jacob Traub, then 29 years old. Just before the battle of Antietam, Mrs. Traub received a letter from her brother-in-law saying that his regiment would soon return to the city and that he would be with it. When the Twentieth marched through East Fourth street to the club house Mrs. Traub anxiously watched for her brother-in-law. She did not see him in the ranks, and later when she questioned his companions she was told that he had fallen at Antietam. One of the members of the regiment told her that Traub was beside him when struck by the fatal bullet. Then Mrs. Traub and her husband gave him up for dead, and many a night she has told her two daughters the story of how their uncle was killed in battle. "He told me he had been shot and had passed several months in the army hospital," said Mrs. Traub. "When he was discharged he worked in Indianapolis until he had accumulated money enough to purchase a farm. Since then, he tells me, he has made money enough to keep him for his remaining days. He is 65 years old."

Hawaii Comes into the Union.

Secretary Long at Washington has given orders for the departure of the Philadelphia from Mare Island for Hawaii. She will carry the flag of the United States to those islands and include them within the Union. Admiral Miller, commanding the Pacific station, who is now at Mare Island, will be charged with this function of hoisting the flag. The ship will be ready for sea in a few days, and should make the trip in a week.

BREVITIES.

Dr. Cornelius Herz, of Panama Canal notoriety, died at Bournemouth, England. At Newark, Ohio, David Miller whipped Levi Lock for insulting his wife. Lock died shortly afterward.

Fire at Rogers, Texas, destroyed about twenty places of business, causing a loss of $60,000, partially insured.

Col. B. F. Montgomery of Colorado was elected president of the International Mining Congress at Salt Lake, Utah.

The Hyde Park Electric Light and Power Company of Chicago has confessed two judgments aggregating $29,891.52.

John J. Burke, the comedian, died in Bellevue hospital, New York, from injuries received while diving in the ocean at Sea Cliff, L. I.

The financial report of the Southern Pacific company for the last fiscal year shows an increase in profits of $4,000,000 over the business of the preceding year.

Three socialist workmen have been arrested at Budapest, charged with high treason. One of them has confessed that he took part in a conspiracy to attempt the life of Emperor Francis Joseph by the use of dynamite during his expected visit to the city.

The national turnbund elected the following officers at San Francisco: Emil Wallner of Milwaukee, president; William W. Johnson of Pittsburgh, vice-president; C. L. Rhoads of Los Angeles, first secretary, and Paul Paul of Chicago, second secretary.

President L. Meulenbaert, on application of Thomas Leary of Minneapolis, one of the stockholders and creditors, has been appointed receiver of the Duluth Street Railway Company. It is explained that this is the beginning of reorganization made necessary by an excessive capitalization and shrinkage in Western business and values since the panic of 1903.

At Racine, Wis., the large tannery of the A. Platz Sons' Leather Company was nearly destroyed by fire. Finished stock valued at $30,000 is a total loss; unfinished stock valued at $15,000 partly destroyed; machinery and buildings valued at $40,000 nearly a total loss. There is an insurance on the total valuation of $80,000. During the fire Frederick Platz fell from a window and was badly injured.

Marshall Field has given the women financiers of the Women's Temple in Chicago until Jan. 1 next in which to meet the amount due on their bond July 1. They needed $250,000 and are short $50,000. Mr. Field promised to give the women $50,000 if they raised $350,000 by July 1. Mrs. Carke is now in the East collecting for the Temple.

Ex-Senator Peffer has written a letter accepting the prohibition nomination for governor of Kansas, recently tendered him. Senator Peffer says he will devote two months to making a thorough canvass on the single issue of prohibition.

EASTERN.

William K. Castle died at the home of his father, John G. Castle, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, in New York.

A firecracker thrown into the open window of a shed at Orange, N. J., started a fire which entirely destroyed the large hat factory of Austin, Drew & Co. and a number of frame dwelling houses, causing a loss of over $50,000.

The small excursion steamer Surf City, with about sixty passengers on board, while half way over from Salem Willows to her wharf at Beverly, Mass., a distance of about two miles, was struck by a terrific squall and capsized. Of those on board a large majority were rescued by boats from the Salem and Beverly shores. Six bodies have been recovered.

One life was lost and two persons are lying at the point of death as a result of a fire in the dwelling house of Patrick H. Flannery, 3602 Locust street, West Philadelphia. The fire was started by the ignition of coal oil, with which Mrs. Flannery was bathing her arm to relieve rheumatic pain. The flames spread rapidly and a child was burned to death before it could be rescued.

A tornado struck a section of Hampton Beach, N. H., causing immense damage to beach property and great loss of life. Cottages were blown flat, horses were picked up bodily and dashed against buildings, vehicles carried many feet, barns unroofed, large trees snapped off at their roots, while others were torn up bodily. The tornado cut a swath 100 yards wide in a westerly direction, moving in rotary shape until it passed out to sea. Twenty cottages were torn down, and several small hotels completely wrecked. The greatest loss of life and injury came with the demolition of an old skating rink, a single story structure of wood, 500 by 100 feet in size. Here from 75 to 125 persons were seriously injured, an unknown number slightly wounded, and seven persons are dead. A yacht was sailing off the beach, and was in the path of the storm. It was in nine persons, and of these five were drowned. The list of dead on shore reported at this writing was as follows: Morn, the actress of New York, who was playing in a piece entitled "The Blowing Up of the Maine"; Miss Mae Prosscutti, Samuel Cannett and William F. Karlson, Exeter. Karlson was taken out dead, but Morn, the actress, was alive when found and died shortly after.

WESTERN.

Fire at McPherson, Kan., destroyed the First National Bank Building. Loss, $75,000.

R. H. Lancaster, a painter of McPherson, Kan., died suddenly the other day. He had drunk wood alcohol, which he thought was Benedictine. He was 28 years old and leaves a widow and three children.

Henry Whitefield, alias Perkins, and K. B. Brooks, colored, were hanged with the stroke of the United States jail at Muskogee, I. T. It was the first execution in the history of the federal courts in the Indian Territory.

Elijah T. Bennett, aged 85 years, a veteran of the Mexican and Florida wars, was run over and instantly killed at Central, Mo., by the Columbia branch train. He was heard of hearing and did not hear the train, although walking toward it.

Henry C. Payne, who returned from Washington to Milwaukee, gave it as his opinion that an extra session of Congress would be called for next March for the purpose of financial legislation, providing there was a Republican majority in both houses.

A severe north wind did considerable damage to grain and fruit in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, Cal. The greatest loss will fall upon the growers of wheat. Some conservative farmers estimate that 40 per cent. of the wheat has been thrashed out by the storm in certain localities.

Miss Anna Forrester, a charming young lady 23 years of age, living in Cleveland, selected a horrible method of ending her earthly existence. She visited a pleasure resort near town, and, entering the barn near by, saturated her clothing with coal oil and set herself afire, kneeling in the midst of the flames, apparently praying that her life might be taken away. Farmers and their wives witnessed the awful deed, but could not rescue her. Only a mass of charred flesh and bones was found in the smoldering ruins.

A bridge crossing the Mohican river at Shelby, Ohio, fell with 1,000 people. Four were killed outright and 100 injured, some of them seriously. A public wedding was being celebrated on the bridge as one of the features of the Fourth of July celebration. Just as the ceremony had been completed the bridge went down with a crash, precipitating the people a distance of eighteen feet. The panic which ensued after the bridge fell was indescribable, and it was impossible to get anything like a correct list of the wounded.

The board of directors of the Pullman Palace Car Company has adopted resolutions for a quarterly dividend of $2 per share, payable on and after Aug. 15, and also a special dividend of $20 per share. The board recommends that the surplus assets of the company to the extent of $18,000,000 existing at the end of the current fiscal year should be distributed to the stockholders of the company, and that for such purpose the capital stock should be increased to the sum of $54,000,000, and that increase on stock should be issued to shareholders in the ratio of one share for each two held by them.

SOUTHERN.

The official dispatches to the marine hospital service at Washington from Camp Pontchartrain, the yellow fever detention camp near McHenry, Miss., give a most favorable outlook for the fever situation. The cases have been reduced until now there is but one, and there are no new cases.

The preliminary examination of the frigate of the postmaster at Lake City, S. C., last March, when the postoffice was burned, Baker killed and his family wounded, began Friday. Four privates of the South Carolina volunteers, charged in Columbia with complicity were arraigned, with others arrested.

The People's party paper of Atlanta, Ga., publishes an address from the national organization committee calling for a national convention at Cincinnati, Monday, Sept. 5, to nominate candidates for President and Vice President and outline a plan of campaign to cover the next two years in anticipation of the election of 1900.

WASHINGTON.

Under the Curtis bill, which has passed Congress, the Cherokee government and judiciary system of Indian Territory are dissolved and all business is transferred to the United States court. There is much complaint about the townsites feature of the bill, and there will follow strong protests and litigation. As a result of the new law, however, citizens are building on their vacant lots by the score. A Washington correspondent says that the total proposals for the new government loan of $200,000,000 aggregate $790,000,000. Of this amount there have been received and absolutely accepted subscriptions for amounts of $500 and less $40,000,000. Subscriptions in amounts over $500, subject to future allotment, are $250,000,000. A proposal for a round lot at a premium of 1 per cent., $100,000,000. Two syndicate propositions for any part or all of the bonds offered, $200,000,000 each, $400,000,000.

Commissioners Harlow and Brewer, of the civil service commission, had a long conference at the White House with the President, Attorney General Griggs and Secretary Bliss in regard to a number of proposed changes in the civil service rules. It is understood that the heads of a number of the executive departments had recommended the extension of the rules so as to include certain specified places in the service and that other places be exempted. No definite decision was reached on all of the questions involved, but it is expected that a conclusion will have been arrived at within a few days, when the President will issue an order covering the cases under discussion.

FOREIGN.

The Arctic expedition headed by Walter Wellman, which left Tromsø, Norway, on June 26 last, has sailed from Solomola, far from Franz Josef Land, after taking on board eighty-three Siberian dogs.

An incipient insurrection, in which many prominent islanders were concerned, was discovered by the Spanish authorities in Porto Rico. The headquarters of the rebels was destroyed and two of the ringleaders have been put to death.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Standard says: "There have been terrific thunder and hail storms with cloudbursts in Hungary, especially in the north and northwest districts. Property and crops to the value of 40,000,000 francs have been damaged or destroyed. Many persons and innumerable animals have been killed. There have been similar storms in Austria, where also there have been fatalities and the crop losses serious."

A revolution has broken out in Montevideo, Uruguay. The Fourth regiment of light artillery, headed by Gen. Esteve, has mutinied. Firing has been in progress close to the city. The Government has declared the city in a state of siege and has called out the national guard. A detachment of British bluejackets has been landed to defend the British consulate. The revolution is supposed to be the result of intrigues of the Herrera party, composed of the followers of Dr. Miguel Herrera y Obes, former president of the republic of Uruguay and minister of the interior and of justice in the Borda cabinet. The revolutionists capitulated after a demonstration against the government lasting only two days.

IN GENERAL.

Three young men—Charles Searley, Roy Sinnet and Charles Williams, were drowned in the bay at Hamilton, Ont., during a storm.

Ex-Secretary John Sherman has arrived at Seattle from Alaska, and says his trip "was the most delightful I have had the pleasure of taking."

The race at Vancouver, B. C., for the single sculling championship of the world between Jake Gaudaur and Bob Johnson was a fiasco owing to the fact that Johnson struck a snag.

Miners who arrived at Seattle from the Klondike report that scurvy has marked hundreds of men in the Klondike for its victims. Typhoid fever and pneumonia have already begun a harvest of death in the camp. The unhealthy season has begun and the one hospital in the camp was crowded with victims of the diseases peculiar to a new and thinly settled country. The deaths average about three per day. When R. A. Hall, who worked on the Berry Bros' claims, Eldorado Creek, left the diggings, the miners were in the midst of their annual spring clean-up. Gold dust was being brought into camp from the mines, but when Hall left Dawson not more than $200,000 of this season's clean-up had been carried to storeshouses at Dawson. Geo. M. Irwin said that of 1,500 claims that have been recorded in Dawson district, less than 200 have proved to be paying property.

SHIP SINKS AT SEA.

Awful Horror Caused by Collision in a Dense Fog.

OVER 600 DROWNED.

Disaster Occurred Off Sable Island on the Morning of July 4.

Steamship La Bourgogne of the French Transatlantic Line Goes to the Bottom of the Atlantic—Out of Over 800 Persons Aboard Only About 200 Were Saved, and but One Woman from the 300 on the ill-fated Vessel Was Rescued.

Six hundred persons lost their lives the morning of July 4 as the result of a collision between La Bourgogne, and the British ship Cromartyshire, and the French liner lies at the bottom of the sea, a great hole in her side. The ships met in a dense fog sixty miles south of Sable Island. It was 5 o'clock in the morning and the feeble rays of the newly risen sun were unable to even partially penetrate the thick white mist that covered the ocean like a garment. The Cromartyshire was towed into Halifax by the Allan line steamer Grecian. A ragged wound in her bow and the absence of two of her masts showed the violence of the impact with the sunken vessel.

There were on board La Bourgogne 191 first cabin passengers, 125 second cabin and 205 third class passengers (or steerage), making a total of 611 passengers, in addition to which there were 220 in the crew, making a grand total of 831 souls on board. The only woman saved out of 300 women on board was Mrs. La Casse, wife of a professor of languages of Plainfield, N. J. Among those saved were the purser, three engineers and thirty of the crew, which manned the luckless liner. All the other officers of the ship were drowned. The Cromartyshire's crew got a terrible fright, but none was lost. Great service was done by those aboard in saving the remnant of the passengers and crew of La Bourgogne.

La Bourgogne is one of the best known of all the French liners. She belonged to the Compagnie Generale Transatlantique and has carried thousands of persons to Europe and back without a serious mishap. She left New York Saturday, July 3, bound for Havre.

Shortly before the vessels came together Mrs. Henderson, wife of the Cromartyshire's captain, detected a steamer's whistle blowing on the port side. The Cromartyshire was sounding her foghorn at intervals of one minute. Mrs. Henderson called the attention of her husband to the sounding of the whistle and a minute later the mate, who was on watch, also detected the sound. It came nearer and nearer. Suddenly the huge hull of an ocean steamer loomed up in the mist, going about seventeen knots an hour, and almost immediately there was a fearful crash.

Capt. Henderson, as soon as the collision occurred, ordered the boats to be lowered and the damage to be ascertained. As it was found that the Cromartyshire was in no immediate danger the British ship put about. The vessel with which they had collided was at that time unknown. A few minutes later her whistle was heard and several rockets were sent up. Capt. Henderson replied in like manner, thinking the steamer was offering assistance, but in a few minutes all was quiet and those on board began to realize the awful results of the collision.

At 5:30 the fog lifted and two boats were seen approaching with only men on board. Later the weather cleared still more and men were to be seen in every direction clinging to wreckage and floating on life rafts. It was a terrible scene. No one can picture the appalling sight revealed to the onlookers when the curtain of mist arose. The work of rescue was commenced without a moment's delay and over 200 persons were picked up and taken aboard the ship.

When the ships struck they were off Cape Sable. The passengers, with the sole exception of Prof. La Casse, were below decks. Without warning came the terrible shock. The struggles, swishing water and terrible screams of the drowning made the situation an awe-inspiring one, never to be forgotten. One man on the La Bourgogne, when she sunk, went out of his mind and jumped to a watery grave. Capt. Nunan, in command of the Allan line steamer Grecian, to whose courage the Cromartyshire owed its conduct to a place of safety, declares that La Bourgogne was less than five minutes from the time of the collision in going to the bottom.

"It was the most appalling and most sudden catastrophe I was ever my misfortune to witness," said Capt. Henderson, of the Cromartyshire. "There was a crash, the sound of which was indescribable, composed as it was of the reading apart of the stout unken ribs of the French ship and the snapping sound of her iron bolts. Many leaped overboard immediately after the meeting of these vessels, but our men were not among the number of those who lost their heads. La Bourgogne turned slowly around two or three times, then seemed to go under with the rapidity of a stone dropping into a pool of water. We were in some danger from the whirlpool which followed the disappearance of the transatlantic steamer, but managed to get out of reach of the vortex in time. It, however, engulfed scores of shrieking human beings, whom we could hardly see for the density of the fog, but whose cries of terror we could plainly hear."

WHO PAYS THE WAR TAX?

Merchants' Association Proposes to Go to Law on the Subject.

The war tax law in its entirety is in force. The schedules relating to beer and tobacco became operative June 14; the other schedules took effect July 1. There is a great scarcity of stamps. The government, with all its equipment, was able to furnish only a fraction of the supply needed. There was a demand for over 40,000,000 stamps of all classes at the New York office at the outset, but applications were cut all along the line. The banks were most favored, because stamps will be sold at all banks, and the public will thus have easier access to them.

The telegraph and express companies will make customers pay the tax of 1 cent each on telegrams and bills of lading by compelling them to buy the stamp and cancel it. The Merchants' Association has decided to fight the express companies on this issue, and will probably appeal to the courts if common carriers refuse to give a receipt with the stamp tax duly paid when a package is offered for shipment. A committee of the association in each of the large cities visited each express company to announce that merchants would not pay the tax. The express companies replied that they had been advised by counsel that they were not obliged to pay it. The railroad companies have practically agreed to pay a part of this impost, and the Merchants' association proposes to bring the express companies in line.

Under their contracts with the railroad companies the express people are obliged to pay a certain percentage varying from 40 to 50 per cent. of their gross receipts as compensation for express facilities upon the various roads. The adoption of the first of these measures would therefore have necessitated an increase in the rates of the express companies to a sum nearly double the amount of the tax. It was therefore decided that the most feasible proposition was the adoption of the rule that only the exact amount of the tax shall be collected. The zipper would be required to pay this tax, plus the express companies' rates.

CAMP ALGER WATER.

Its Wholesomeness a Matter of Dispute Between Army Officers.

The fear of typhoid still prevails in Camp Alger, and Majors Parke and Devine, acting surgeons, have been investigating conditions tending to produce this malady. One of these surgeons said that "one patient could put the whole camp on its back." The water supply is looked upon as the principal source of danger. Some of the wells are sunk to a depth of sixty-five or seventy feet, but it is said to be possible for the germ of typhoid to reach that depth, owing to the sandy nature of the soil.

The surgeons making this investigation say that if when their report is made Chief Surgeon Girard persists in holding that the water is pure they will forward their report to the war department. General Gobin has promised to see that this is done in case Colonel Girard maintains his position. A special commission has been appointed to investigate conditions in the quarters of the New York cavalry, which now has five men at Fort Meyer suffering with typhoid. Complaint is made that the government has supplied no lime or other disinfectants.

In the Senate on Saturday bills were passed as follows: Amending to the law regarding fraudulent affidavits in pension and bounty land cases; to pay the owners of the ship Achilles for expenses incurred in rendering service to the wrecked American ship Arabia. Mr. Pettigrew (S. D.) then resumed his speech upon the Hawaiian annexation resolutions. The Senate passed with amendment the House bill to increase the force of the ordnance department. Mr. Cockrell (Mo.), from Committee on Military Affairs, reported and the Senate passed the House bill fixing pay of volunteer soldiers from the date of enrollment for service. The bill was amended so as to include all officers. The Senate passed the House bill directing the enlistment of cooks in the regular and volunteer armies. Also a bill to change the times for holding courts in the eastern district of North Carolina. Also the House bill to amend the statutes relating to the bonds of vice-consuls and the quarterly returns of business by consular officers and the Senate bill amending the laws relating to American seamen for their protection and to promote commerce. The chief features of the latter are the elimination of all imprisonment provisions in the coastwise trade, including Mexican and West Indian, the reduction of penalties in the foreign trade; the improvement of the provision scales, and the reduction of allotments to one month.

In the Senate on Monday Allen of Nebraska began his speech in opposition to Hawaiian annexation. At noon Turpie read the declaration of independence. During the session a large number of pension bills were passed.

The debate upon the Hawaiian resolutions continued in the Senate on Tuesday. Three speeches were made. Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts in advocating annexation made a notable appeal against any policy of general territorial expansion as a sequence to the war. Mr. Lindsay of Kentucky opposed the resolutions, directing his attack principally against their constitutionality. Mr. White of California resumed his speech in opposition.

The annexation of Hawaii is now accomplished so far as the legislative branch of the Government is concerned. Quite unexpectedly the resolutions providing for the annexation of the islands were brought to a vote in the Senate late Wednesday afternoon, and they were passed by the decisive vote of 42 to 21. Many amendments were offered by opponents of the resolutions, but all were defeated. The House, after a debate of four hours, concurred in the Senate amendment to the general deficiency bill, authorizing the Secretary of the Interior, the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury to settle, with the approval of the President, the indebtedness of the Central and Western Pacific roads to the Government. The amendment was concurred in by a vote of 96 to 86. An amendment was offered and adopted to the Pacific Railroad amendment providing that unless settlement was reached within one year the President should begin foreclosure proceedings to collect all money due the Government.

Both houses of Congress on Thursday passed a resolution fixing the time of the adjournment at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon. The routine proceedings in each branch follow: Senate—A bill conferring upon Adjutant General Corbin the rank, pay and allowance of a major general was passed. Mr. Pettus sharply criticized the measure and charged that Gen. Corbin had been rapidly promoted by reason of political favoritism. This charge brought several Senators to their feet, among whom were Messrs. Bate, Pasco and Bacon, all of whom testified to Gen. Corbin's distinguished ability and special fitness for the position he occupies. Mr. Sewall, Mr. Hale and Mr. Eyracker paid high tributes to Gen. Corbin, warmly endorsing him for the splendid record he has made both on the field of battle and in the position he now holds. There was no division on the vote by which the bill was passed. During the greater part of the session the Senate considered bills introduced to the general calendar, passing a large number of them. A bill to restore Major J. W. Wham, formerly full rank in the United States army, to his full rank and pay in the army was unanimously passed. House—The day was given to consideration of local measures by unanimous consent. Few of importance were passed. After the resolutions providing for final adjournment were agreed to, there was a clamor characteristic of the closing days of a session, members in large numbers being almost constantly upon their feet, appealing for recognition and consideration of their local measures.

When Mr. Kellogg was conducted to the cell in which Robert was confined, he found him pacing the floor in a young man could well be in, though he had not the remotest idea of why he was in confinement.

He realized that he had been drunk—very drunk; and that it must be for drunkenness that he had been arrested. Not the most remote recollection had he of the events of the night before, as the inspector had instructed his subordinates, in case he should inquire, to inform him that he must await the inspector's arrival.

When Robert heard the words, "O my son—my son!" and saw his father's sorrowful and excited face through the iron bars of his cell, the young man, with a moan of anguish, sank upon his cot.

The turnkey unlocked the cell door, and the arms of the father soon encircled the form of his oldest child.

"O father! father! I am not worthy to look you in the face!" sobbed the banker.

"My poor boy!" sobbed the banker. "How did all this happen?"

"Alas, father, I am unable to inform you. I only know that in rejoicing over Janet's escape from death, and in drinking to the health of Dr. Strong, I lost myself. Yes, now I remember closing a deal I had been carrying on the Board of Trade, in which, to my surprise, I had a profit of two thousand dollars. The money is to my credit with my brokers. I suppose the success of that deal impelled me along until I became completely inebriated. I must have fallen in the street. I have no recollection of being arrested."

"Father, I was never in this condition before, and, God helping me, I will not be again."

"God bless you, my boy; I know it! But have you no recollection of seeing Lawrence Terry last night, late—say at midnight?"

"Lawrence Terry? No, father, not the slightest. Surely he did not see me in my disgraced condition?"

"Where were you at midnight, Robert?"

"Alas, father, I am unable to tell you. You must try, Robert, and recall all you can of your movements last night. A grave situation confronts us. At near midnight the body of Lawrence Terry was found in the alley between Monroe and Madison streets, a dirk blade buried in his bosom."

"O father, father! How horrible! Poor Lawrence! Poor Laura! What a blow to her, and to the mother and sister of Lawrence. I feel my deep disgrace, but that this sorrow should come is terrible. Is—Lawrence dead, father?"

"No, my son," said the banker, wiping the tears from his eyes. "The inspector informs me that the physicians hope to save his life."

"God grant that they may be able to do so."

"When I leave you, it will be to visit his bedside, Lawrence was on his way home from a meeting of the bank directors. He who, seemingly to the police officials, had attempted to assassinate him, lay in the alley beside him, his hand yet clasping the bloody hilt of the weapon that was buried in his breast."

"How fortunate that the fiend was captured. But why did he wish to assassinate Lawrence? Oh, robbery alone could have been the motive."

"My poor, poor boy, be brave! and remember you have a father who believes in your integrity. You, Robert Kellogg, were the man found drunk and unconscious in the alley, clutching the dagger's hilt. You are held here to answer to the crime, perhaps of murder, at least for an assault with intent to kill."

"Mervful God!" cried the young man. "And of last night's transaction I know no more than the dead."

The inspector had been standing by, listening attentively, and watching the young man's features.

"You were totally oblivious to the world when it was discovered that a crime had been committed, Robert," he said. "Do you recognize this weapon?"

"If my initials are on the stock, the revolver is mine. For special reasons I have carried it for several days. I had noticed that the weapon was missing."

"The initials are here," said the official. "The revolver, then, is yours. This," holding up the dirk, "is the weapon around the fingers of your right hand were clasped when you were discovered in the alley. The blade was sheathed in the bosom of Terry."

"That weapon! I never beheld it until now."

"To your knowledge."

"Alas, yes, to my knowledge."

"Did you visit the gambling rooms the other side of the alley last night? Do you know the place?"

"I know the place. Was I—was I there? Everything yet seems indistinct. I remember going to the theater. I remember starting to go home. I remember—"

The young man sat gazing with a fixed stare at the iron bars of his cell.

"Well, what more do you remember?" asked the inspector.

CHAPTER XX.

A half-hour after leaving the station Mr. Kellogg entered the home of the cashier of his bank.

"A sad—a very sad affair, my dear madam," said the banker on meeting the sorrowing mother of Lawrence. "I sympathize with you deeply, but believe me, it was not Robert who attempted the life of your son."

"Robert!" exclaimed Mrs. Terry. "I do not understand!"

"Oh, then you have not been made aware of all of the particulars of this strange case. My son is a prisoner at the central station. He is charged with being the author of the crime."

"Impossible! It cannot be! I, at least, will not believe it. Robert Kellogg had no better friend than Lawrence. Oh, this is utter folly. The officials have surely made an unwarranted blunder."

"Hardly an unwarranted blunder, Mrs. Terry, since Robert was found in an inebriated condition, unconscious, lying partly on the body of your son, and with the hilt of the dirk with which he was assaulted clutched in his hand."

"Why, why, I knew nothing of all this, I cannot understand it."

"Let us trust that your son may be able to clear up the mystery. Has he spoken?"

"The physician and Grace are with him, Mr. Kellogg. But for your daughter's photograph he would have been slain. The doctor has not yet allowed him to speak, though his mind is evidently clear, and I can see that he desires to do so."

"He may soon be able to dispel the cloud that hangs over my boy."

"I doubt if he dreams that Robert was even suspected of having committed the crime. Oh, nothing could keep his lips sealed did he know of the charges against him. Let us visit my son. Poor Robert, he is the last one who would have injured my boy."

"God bless you, madam," exclaimed the banker; "but we must be very cautious. If prohibited by his physician, Lawrence must not speak."

"Mr. Kellogg greeted Miss Grace and the doctor as he entered the young man's room."

Lawrence glanced up and tried to smile as the party approached his bedside, and then gazed anxiously at the banker.

"Of his speedy recovery from that nearly fatal stroke," said the physician, "I entertain no doubt. He is very weak from the loss of blood, and we must use great caution; yet in view of the unfortunate position of your son, I think he might venture a word or two."

"My dear boy," exclaimed his employer, "if I never could see the advantage of having a sweetheart before, I can now, since the photograph of your fair charmer saved your life."

Another smile wreathed the lips of the cashier.

"Now, do not speak, Lawrence, and do not become the least excited, for all will terminate well. On your way home from the directors' meeting, you encountered Robert?"

"The cashier's eyes said 'Yes,' and a responsive movement of his head said the same."

"The information that we received yesterday morning, stating that Janet was on the way to a speedy recovery, caused my boy to rejoice to that extent that when you encountered him he was in a very inebriated condition. In fact, he was drunk."

Again the responsive movement of the head.

"When you were found in the alley between Monroe and Madison streets with the dirk blade sheathed in your bosom, Robert was found lying beside you, his right hand encircling the hilt that buried the blade in your breast."

A look of pain and a negative movement of the head of the young man followed the banker's assertion.

"My son is confined at the central station charged with having attempted your assassination."

"He—he should not be," said Lawrence faintly. "It was not he who attempted my life."

"I was fully satisfied of that," said the banker, "and as neither of you had been rifled of your possessions, robbery was not the motive that impelled the crime. Do you know who your assailant was?"

"I do not," was the answer. "He stated that he had assisted Robert to descend the stairs from a—"

"Understand," said the banker; "from the rooms of a gambling house. Was this the man who assaulted you?"

"It—it was very dark," said Lawrence faintly; "but I believe it to have been that man. He was assisting me to carry Robert to the hotel. I think we stumbled into the alley—I was stricken and know no more."

"That will do now," said the doctor. "Your son is clearly exonerated. I can allow Lawrence to talk no more. One moment and I will accompany you to the station."

"I had a partial view of the man's face before we reached the alley," said Lawrence. "Somewhere I have seen it before. Cannot Robert recall?"

"Nothing," said the banker. "Nothing. And not another word. You have spoken those words that will release my son. Spare neither time nor money on this case, doctor. I am anxious that my future son-in-law shall soon be himself again."

"I trust his confinement will not be for long," said the doctor.

"Should I, I fear I shall have to call on Miss Grace to perform the duties of cashier of the bank."

Terry, and that accomplished to divert suspicion from the author of the crime. I tremble to think of the position my boy would have been in had the blow proved fatal."

The two men now entered the office of Inspector Hunt.

"How did you leave Terry?" was the question from the officer's lips.

"Oh, he will pull through," said the doctor. "He will be back at his desk in thirty days at most. But you have the wrong man in confinement."

"How is that?"

"I allowed Terry to speak. He states that it was not Robert Kellogg who attempted the assassination."

"Not Robert Kellogg?" exclaimed the inspector. "Not the man found with his hand yet clutching the hilt of the weapon? Why, it could be no other. I have said, and I will say again, that the young man did not know what he was doing. But he must be guilty."

"Have you seen the dealer at the gambling room?" asked the banker.

"Yes, and am more than ever satisfied of Robert's guilt. He was there playing faro. The dealer states that another gentleman was seated at the table beside him, and that he noticed they very frequently called for the sideboard decanter. He states that soon, seeing that Robert was too drunk to play the game with intelligence, he suggested that the young man go home. The gentleman seated at the table beside him also ceased playing and assisted Robert down to the street, remarking that he was liable to break his neck. He states further that not five minutes had elapsed before this man returned and inquired for a silk handkerchief that he had dropped on the floor. He asked him what he had done with Robert. He replied that he had left him quarreling on the street with a man who said his name was Terry and who stated that he would carry him home. Robert, he said, did not wish to accompany him and they were quarreling as Terry dragged him off."

"What became of this man?" asked the banker.

"Why, noticing about this time, just after the patrol wagon passed, the dealer says, that it was twelve o'clock, he closed the games, and all parties passed down the back stairs. That is all he knows about the matter, and it leaves no doubt in my mind as to how the affair occurred."

"Does the dealer know who this man was?"

"Why, he states, Mr. Kellogg, that he has visited the place before, but that he is not acquainted with his name. Oh, the man is all right, he would not have returned had he not been. There was no evidence of excitement on his part."

"Then you still persist in thinking that my son was the author of the crime, inspector?"

"Certainly I do. Though the author, I can easily see that for certain reasons Terry has no wish to prosecute the case. I will go over and see him. If he states to me positively that Robert was his assailant, I will release the young man from custody. It would be impossible for the State to convict, even though he was caught almost in the act."

"Do you doubt our statements?" asked the banker indignantly.

"Not at all, not at all, my dear sir; but if Terry should die and I was questioned, either at the coroner's inquest or by the district attorney, I would not desire to state that a suspect's father and the physician attending a murdered man told me thus and so. Oh, no; I would prefer to be able to say, 'Terry asserted in my presence that Robert Kellogg was not his assailant.'"

"You are right," said the banker. "Pray excuse me; but let us visit Robert before you go and ascertain if he recollects anything of moment."

"Very good, Lieutenant, if any one calls for me, inform them that I am below."

"I have patients that need my attention," said the doctor, "and if I can be of no further service—"

"Oh, I am under many obligations to you, doctor," said the banker. "We need detain you no longer."

Mr. Kellogg and the inspector were soon again in Robert's cell.

Sensible Arrangement.

What Sir Daniel Lyons believes to have been the first case of a settlement of an "affair of honor" on the Duke of Wellington's plan is described by him in his "Early Reminiscences." It occurred in Halifax about the middle of the present century.

One day Captain Evans came to me boiling over with wrath and indignation. He said he had been grossly insulted by Captain Harvey, the governor's son, and begged me to act as his friend. I agreed, provided he promised to do exactly as I told him. He consented.

I called on Captain Harvey's friend, Captain Bourke, and we agreed to abide by the Duke of Wellington's order about duelling, which had just then been promulgated at Halifax.

We carried out our intention as follows: We made each of our principals write out his own version of what had occurred. We then chose an umpire. We selected Colonel Horn of the Twentieth Regiment, a clear-headed and much-respected officer. With his approval we sent him the two statements, and he directed us to come to his house the following morning with our principals.

At the appointed time we arrived, and were shown into the dining room. We bowed formally to each other across the table, and awaited the appearance of our referee. Colonel Horn soon entered, and addressing our principals said:

"Gentlemen, in the first place, I must thank you for having made my duty so light. Nothing could be more open, generous or gentlemanlike than your statements. The best advice I can give you is that you shake hands and forget that the occurrence has ever happened."

They at once walked up to each other and shook hands cordially. They were the best of friends ever after.—Youth's Companion.

In ancient times and among inland peoples the possession of a salt spring was regarded as a special gift of the gods. The Chamonians in Epirus had one which flowed into a stream where there were no fish, and the legend was that Heracles had allowed their forefathers to have salt instead of fish.

FAITHFUL RECOUNTING OF HER LATEST NEWS.

Echo of the Battle Creek Wreck—Mancelona Bank Failure—Bail Jumper Gets Five Years—Double Drowning in Grand River at Ada.

New Trial Granted.

Mrs. Emeline Aldrich was killed in the terrible collision on the Grand Trunk Railroad at Battle Creek in 1893. Her brother, John B. Sweetland, recovered a verdict of $4,100 against the company, $1,000 of the amount being for pain and suffering endured by Mrs. Aldrich. The Supreme Court has granted the company a new trial, holding that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover for the pain and suffering endured by the deceased, the rule being that the plaintiff must show that there was conscious suffering. It is not sufficient to show that the deceased might have lived a few moments after the accident.

Mancelona Bank Closes Its Doors.

A. Young & Son, proprietors of the Bank of Mancelona and the Novelty dry goods store, made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors, and the bank and store are now in possession of N. C. Weber, the assignee. A. Young, the senior partner, was in charge of the store, while A. B. Young was cashier of the bank. The direct cause of the suspension was the failure to receive remittances to meet the demands of depositors. The Youngs place the liabilities at $30,000 and say that they have assets that will yield $45,000, and that every creditor will receive 100 cents on the dollar.

Bail Jumper Given Five Years.

Four years ago Arthur B. Kinney appeared in Grand Rapids and did a big business as agent for an alleged Indiana medical institution. Several farmers were swindled with his cure-all professions, and he was arrested and convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses. He jumped his bail and was never heard of until a few days ago, when he was discovered in an Illinois town. He was brought back and sentenced immediately by Judge Adair to five years at Jackson.

Couldn't Stand a "Roasting."

Privates Northrup and Dykema, who left Grand Rapids with a batch of recruits, deserted at Richmond, Ind. The men were arrested and sent on to Tampa, where they will probably be tried by court martial. Northrup was married at Grand Rapids the day before he started South. It is believed his comrades roasted him so unmercifully that he dropped off the train to escape their gibes, and that Dykema, his chum, also resented the roasting and got off with him.

INTERESTING AND INSTRUCTIVE LESSON.

Reflections of an Elevating Character—Wholesome Food for Thought—Studying the Scriptural Lesson Intelligently and Profitably.

Lesson for July 17.

Golden Text.—"And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces; and they said, The Lord, he is the God; the Lord, he is the God."—1 Kings 18: 39.

This week's lesson is found in 1 Kings 18: 39-40. Its subject is "Elijah on Carmel." After the long drought, for which Ahab blamed Elijah, the command of the Lord came to the prophet that he should show himself to the king. By this time all the small streams and many of the larger ones were dried up, and Ahab, assisted by his steward Obadiah (do not let any pupil confuse this Obadiah with the author of the book by that name, who lived three centuries later), started out to find pasture for the horses and mules—a queer task for a king, according to our ideas; but these early kings of Israel, in spite of their power and comparative wealth, were really more like rich chiefs or sheikhs than what we understand by kings. Obadiah met Elijah, and was charged to inform Ahab that the hated prophet was in the vicinity. When the two met, Elijah's fearless retort to the king's reproaches fairly staggered that haughty monarch. It was a challenge to a trial of power between the prophet, or Jehovah, and the prophets of Baal and the Asherah.

The great assembly, including not only the 550 prophets, but a multitude of the people, met on Mount Carmel. Look at the map of Palestine; on the coast, just west of the Sea of Galilee, there is a deep notch in the coast line; this is the Bay of Acre; and below it is a knob jutting out into the Mediterranean; this headland or promontory is the northern end of Mount Carmel; for Carmel is not a mere peak, but a ridge thirteen miles long extending towards the southeast, and dividing the plain of Esdraelon from the Plain of Sharon. At the sea, rising abruptly from the narrow beach, it is 500 feet high. Right on the summit, looking out to sea, is at present the famous monastery of the Carmelite Friars, well known to all who have read the history of the Crusades. The ridge rises gradually toward the south, however, to its maximum height of 1,742 feet some nine miles inland.

Elijah used no very gentle words to the people when they were assembled on this forest-covered ridge. They could look to the one side down a steep slope towards Esdraelon; on the other down the gradual hillside groves that descended towards Sharon. Off to the west they could perhaps catch a glimpse of the sea sparkling in the glaring sunlight. Which will you choose? said the prophet. You must decide now: "If the Lord be God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him." Then, in the silence that followed, Elijah made his daring proposition, to bring the two bullocks and prepare them for sacrifice, depending on supernatural assistance for the fire. The closing words pleased the people: "The God that answereth by fire, let him be God." The vain attempt of the prophets of Baal, as described in verses 25-29, is capable of vivid description, and should of course be included in the teaching of the lesson. Such a lesson as this should never SAMPSON is now quarreling with Schley over the honors in the recent naval battle off Santiago. Sampson seems to think Schley should have signaled him before firing, and get orders as to what was best to do. It would strike a person at this distance from the seat of operations that Schley did what was perfectly right and proper, wiped out the fleet first and then signaled. Any person who would contend with him over the honors in this case must be mighty small potatoes, and should be reduced in rank.

The political articles in the Evening News, relating to the part that Chelsea will play in the coming republican congressional convention, make very good space fillers, but if the News is no more reliable on other matters than it is in some of its references to things that have occurred here it is utterly unreliable.

CAMARA is sneaking back home with his fleet, and hopes to get securely bottled up in some Spanish port before Commodore Watson reaches him. If he gets bottled up he has promised himself that he will not try to force the cork out, as did Cervara.

SPAIN's honor seems to demand considerable satisfaction—and up to date it has been of a very poor quality.

Haussler, near Silver Lake, in Freedom, and was on top of it when it fell, and was carried down with it, breaking his hip and crushing the thigh and one foot and bruising him badly. It is a wonder that he was not killed outright. The men who assisted in raising the derrick did not hold it as he told them to, and we understand no guys were used in raising it. ### Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c per bot. at Glazier & Stinson's drug store.

A book on Stomach and Nerve troubles, their symptoms and cure, will be given free for the asking at above mentioned drug stores. Read following statement: "To those suffering from stomach and nerve trouble I wish to recommend Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer. About 20 years ago I began to be troubled with my stomach. It gradually grew worse, even up to the point where I became almost unable to eat any kind of food with comfort. For the past five years I have been able to retain very little food of the simplest nature long enough to digest it. Scarcely during this time have I enjoyed sleep throughout the entire night, and usually have been obliged to leave my bed in consequence of my stomach and nerve troubles. My bowels were very much relaxed, and to be due to inflammation of the membrane of the intestines. I was treated by physicians, and tried nearly every known remedy recommended for my troubles with no lasting benefit, and usually not even temporary relief. On the 5th day of January, '98, I purchased a package of Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer and Nerve Restorer and I wish every dyspeptic knew how much I have improved from its use. My food does not distress me as it did and I have no trouble in retaining it, I sleep well and feel refreshed thereon, and although I have used only one package of the medicine, I can safely say that I am 75 percent better than I have been during the past 20 years. Yours respectfully, MRS. GIBBON STODDARD, Ithaca, Mich., January 24, 1898.

Hurricane of Shot and Shell Too Much for the Flower of the Spanish Navy—Armada Meets Its Doom Within Sight of Morro Castle—Enemy's Flagship Undergoes a Fearful Fire, and Finally Gives Up—Dramatic Details of a Most Dramatic Battle—Other War News.

Washington special: The complete annihilation of the Spanish squadron at Santiago and the capture of the Spanish admiral Cervera, with 1,600 prisoners; the demand by Gen. Shafter for the surrender of Santiago within twenty-four hours on pain of bombardment; word from Admiral Dewey that the Ladrone Islands have been captured, that a Spanish gunboat had surrendered, that 100 or more Spanish officers and men were taken and that our first Philippine expedition had landed—this is in part the thrilling record of such an independence day as has not been known since the bells of Independence

REAR ADMIRAL W. T. SAMPSON.

Hall rang out the tidings of American freedom. It was a day when one momentous event followed another in constant and rapid succession, each hour bringing forth some new feature more startling than anything that had gone before.

Three of the Spanish cruisers that were bottled up in Santiago harbor and two torpedo boat destroyers were pounded into helpless hulks by the guns of Admiral Sampson's fleet in a vain attempt to escape from the harbor. The vessels were beached in a last effort to save as many of the lives of the crews as possible. Admiral Cervera, on board the Cristobal Colon, headed his fleet in the attempt to get away at about half past 9 o'clock. So little were the Americans expecting the dash that the flagship New York was cruising up the coast to the east, and returned only in time to see the flash of the light and to fire a shot or two at the torpedo boat destroyers.

The Iowa, Indiana, Oregon, Massachusetts, Texas, Brooklyn and the converted yacht Gloucester formed in position to give battle as soon as the Colon was sighted rounding the wreck of the Merrimac. Cervera headed to the west, the Colon in the lead, followed by the Vizcaya and Oquendo and the destroyers, all firing rapidly. All of the American battleships opened fire at once and the Spanish were soon in a hurricane of shot and shell, but the Colon kept on bravely till when about ten miles to the westward of Morro Castle Admiral Cervera turned his vessel to the shore and beached her. She was blazing in a score of places, but her guns kept at work and the white flag never showed until she was completely disabled.

The Oquendo and Vizcaya were opposed to the Iowa, Texas and Indiana, and went down to defeat with fearful swiftness, covering only about half the distance made by the Colon before their captains ran them ashore. Their crews fought with desperate bravery, but their courage was no match for the courage of our men, added to their superb gunnery. The Spanish shells went wild for the most part, but the American gun fire was marked by merciless precision. The two cruisers, both on fire, were beached not more than one-quarter of a mile apart.

The most dramatic feature of the battle was the contest between the torpedo boat destroyers and the Gloucester. The latter was struck several times, and is the only American vessel reported damaged. At first the Gloucester fired upon them with her six-pounders, but they ran past her and engaged the battleships. Finding the fire too hot they turned and attacked the Gloucester again until both destroyers were afire and had to be beached. Their crews threw themselves into the surf to save their lives. Just before this the New York came up and assisted in giving the finishing blow to the destroyers. There was explosion after explosion from the beached vessels. It was at first reported that Admiral Cervera was dead, but this was afterward denied.

The story of the day is well told in the official dispatches from Sampson, from Shafter and from Dewey. Stirring as they all are that of Sampson was accorded the honor of chief importance. It is as follows, dated Playa del Este:

escape at 9:30 a. m., and at 2 p. m. the last, the Cristobal Colon, had run ashore six miles west of Santiago and had let down her colors. The Infanta Maria Teresa, Oquendo and Vizcaya were forced ashore, burned and blown up within twenty miles of Santiago; the Furor and Pluton were destroyed within four miles of the port. Loss, one killed and two wounded. Enemy's loss probably several hundred from gun-fire, explosions and drowned. About 1,300 prisoners, including Admiral Cervera. The man killed was George H. Ellis, chief yeoman of the Brooklyn.

DECLINED TO SURRENDER.

Tornal's Reply to General Shafter's Demand for Capitulation. Gen. Shafter's strong position was shown in a series of dispatches. The one that gave the situation most concisely was to the effect that Shafter had demanded the surrender of Santiago on pain of bombardment. Thereupon the foreign consuls at Santiago made a joint representation, requesting that women and children in the city have twenty-four hours to withdraw before the bombardment should begin. The Spanish general declined to surrender at the time first set by Shafter. The following is the reply of Gen. Tornal, commanding Fourth Spanish corps at Santiago, to Gen. Shafter's demand to surrender:

"Sir—I have the honor to reply to your communication of to-day, written at 8:30 a. m. and received at 1 p. m., demanding the surrender of this city; on the contrary case announcing to me that you will bombard this city, and that I advise the foreign women and children that they must leave the city before 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. It is my duty to say to you that this city will not surrender, and that I will inform the foreign consuls and inhabitants of the contents of your message."

FOOD FOR VULTURES.

Gruesome Scenes on the Battlefield After Saturday's Fight.

Among the Spanish dead and wounded after Saturday's fight were found the bodies of Gen. Vara De Rey and his brother, and close by were lying three of the general's aids, desperately wounded. Beside the wounded aids were the bodies of two other Spanish officers who had been killed in the same storm of American bullets. As a press correspondent approached the body of Gen. Vara De Rey, a pair of vultures arose from it and leisurely sailed away to finish their meal by devouring the remains of some unfortunate of less exalted rank than the Spanish commander. Upon the body of the general were found papers describing the fortifications and plans of defense, copies of which were turned over to Gen. Garcia.

DEWEY'S ASSISTANCE ARRIVES.

Charleston Captures the Ladrone Island Town En Route.

Admiral Dewey's telegram to the Navy Department is given out. It is dated at Hong Kong and Cavite, and says: "Three transports and the Charleston arrived yesterday. The Charleston captured Guam, Ladrone Islands, on June 21. No resistance. Brought Spanish officers from the garrison—six officers and fifty-four men—to Manila. On June 20 the Spanish gun vessel Leyte came out of a river and surrendered to me, having exhausted her ammunition and food in repelling attacks by the insurgents. She had on board thirty-two officers and ninety-four men, naval and military."

BETTER THAN GLORY.

Sampson's Men Will Get a Substantial Amount of Hard Cash.

The men of Admiral Sampson's fleet will get something else besides glory as payment for their work of destroying the Spanish fleet. A considerable amount of hard cash will be theirs. For every man on the Spanish warships at the time of attack our sailors will receive $100 bonus. There were about 1,700 men on Cervera's ships when the battle began. The officers and men of our navy will consequently divide up over $170,000.

SPAIN'S POWER NO MORE.

The Paris "Temps" Says Her Naval Power Is Gone Forever.

The Paris Temps, commenting upon the destruction of Admiral Cervera's squadron, says that Spain's naval power is no more. It adds: "We are bound to draw from the event the lessons it contains. Everybody sees them. Nobody is unaware of the cruel, imperious obligations imposed by the great disaster. Spain must not lose a moment in negotiating for peace."

THEY WANT PEACE.

Barcelona Paper Says that Spain's "Honor" Has Been Satisfied.

The Barcelona Diario publishes a strong article in favor of peace, in the course of which it says: "National honor being satisfied, nothing compels us to continue the unequal struggle. Those who direct the combat ought to put an end to the duel when it becomes naturally impossible for one of the combatants to continue."

Protects a Spanish Captain.

Admiral Dewey has taken under his protection the captain of the Spanish revenue cutter Callao, who was sentenced to be shot because he did not fight the entire American fleet with his full vessel.

Gen. Vara De Rey Killed.

Dispatches from Santiago say Gen. Vara De Rey was killed in an attack on Caney, and that two of Linera's aids were also killed.

CERVERA'S SHIPS.

They Carried a Total of 2,087 Men, and Were Valued at $12,700,000.

An official statement gives the following interesting information:

The crews of the ships forming the Spanish squadron under command of Cervera were as follows: Vizcaya, 500; Oquendo, 500; Infanta Maria Teresa, 500; Cristobal Colon, 450; Pluton, about 70; Furor, about 67; total, 2,087. Sampson captured 1,300. The killed and missing Spanish number 787.

The total cost of the Spanish fleet destroyed at Santiago was about $12,700,000. It was composed of the flower of the Spanish navy. Four of the ships, the Infanta Maria Teresa, the Almirante Oquendo, the Vizcaya and the Cristobal Colon, were armored cruisers, and among the finest ships of that class in the world. The remaining two, the Pluton and the Furor, were splendid Clydebank torpedo boat destroyers, very fast and of the most modern kind.

HONOR FOR SAMPSON.

President McKinley and Secretary Long Express a Nation's Gratitude.

Following are copies of messages sent to Admiral Sampson upon receipt of his official report:

You have the gratitude and congratulations of the whole American people. Convey to your noble officers and crews, through whose valor new honors have been added to the American navy, the grateful thanks and appreciation of the nation." (Signed) Wm. McKinley.

The following was also sent: The Secretary of the Navy sends you and every officer and man of your fleet, remembering equally your dead comrades, grateful acknowledgment of your heroism and skill. All honor to the brave men. You have maintained the glory of the American navy. (Signed) John D. Long.

SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

The Spanish General Linares Badly Hurt in the Santiago Battle.

Gen. Linares, commander of the Spanish forces about Santiago, was so seriously wounded during the fighting that he had to retire. Gen. Linares was inspiring his men to bravery by his own actions, when he was struck by a bullet and fell from his horse to the ground. He was surrounded immediately, and while the Spaniards were fighting fiercely to keep the Americans back, he was carried to a point of temporary safety in the city by members of his staff. Gen. Vara De Rey at once assumed command of the Spanish soldiers.

INTENSE HEAT AT CAMP ALGER.

Number of Men Succumb During Muster and Inspection.

The regular monthly inspection and muster of the troops at Camp Alger was held Thursday morning. The men were in heavy marching order, and a great number succumbed to the terrific heat. Drill was suspended in the afternoon, the men being given an opportunity to get a much-needed rest. As soon as proper transportation has been arranged a wholesale movement of troops south is expected.

Played Lively Airs.

When the news of the disaster of the Spanish fleet reached the troops in front of Santiago, which was during a period of truce, the regimental band that had managed to keep its instruments on the line, played "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town To-Night."

Miles' Plans Unchanged.

The news of the victory at Santiago does not affect the plans of Maj. Gen. Miles for going to southern Cuba. He telegraphed to Gen. Shafter that he expected to be with him within one week, with strong re-enforcements.

The American Losses. The Spanish ministry makes the statement that the aggregate American losses in the fighting around Santiago Friday and Saturday were 2,000 killed and wounded.

The Spanish Losses. A dispatch from Halifax says a cablegram from the British consul places the Spanish losses, killed and wounded, in the Santiago fight of Friday and Saturday, at 2,500 men.

Will Ask for Negro Forces.

Secretary Alger will send to Congress an application for authority to enlist 25,000 negro soldiers, in case he deems it necessary to increase the present force.

Shafter'suffers from Heat. Gen. Shafter suffered greatly from heat prostration, and did not taste food for four days.

Peace or war is the all-absorbing topic at Madrid, and the desire for peace on any terms seems to be unanimous among the masses of the people, as continuation of the war will practically result in national destruction.

It is reported from Madrid that Premier Sagasta is planning to provoke a crisis, form a military ministry, proclaim the whole of Spain in a state of siege and appeal to a friendly nation, probably France or Russia, to secure terms of peace.

BIG BATTLE FRIDAY

Combined Attack by Our Army and Navy on Santiago.

FIGHTING IS FURIOUS

Sampson Hammers Forts While Shafter Advances Upon the City.

Gen. Shafter's Dispatch Announcing the Assault Set All Washington Athrill with Excitement—Cubans Do Splendid Fighting and Spaniards Resist Desperately—Lawton Makes First Advance and Takes Cabana—Cervera Fires Upon the Advancing Troops.

Washington special: "The battle has begun." This was the startling news conveyed in a dispatch received from Gen. Shafter at 10 o'clock Friday morning.

Secretary of War, Washington: Camp, near Sevilla, Cuba—Action now going on. The firing only light and desultory. Begun on the right near Caney, Lawton's division. He will move on the north part of the town of Santiago. SHAFER, Major General.

Brief as it was, it told the whole story that the first shots of the long-expected crash of arms, probably the first great engagement of the war, was under way. It sent a thrill through official circles, from the highest to the lowest. Secretary Alger was the first to read it. He passed it to Gen. Corbin, adjutant general of the army, and directed him to take it at once to the White House. Gen. Corbin went to the President, carrying the original dispatch.

The President eagerly took the message from Gen. Corbin's hand, while at the same moment the latter, almost out of breath, gasped:

"The battle's on and the enemy is retreating."

"That's good!" ejaculated the President, joyfully, and the anxious look on his face faded away as he read the brief but pointed dispatch from Shafter.

The news spread through the corridor, and a wave of awed agitation and expectancy took hold of every one. A great crowd of correspondents struggled along the bulletin board, messenger boys dashed off with dispatches, the clerks, men and women, turned from their desks and gathered at the doorways.

Up to noon Friday hard fighting all along the American lines was reported. Gen. Lawton advanced and took possession of Cabana, a suburb of Santiago. The Spaniards made a desperate, though ineffectual, resistance. The Spanish fleet in the harbor fired on the American troops, who were very close to the city. Gen. Garcia's Cuban patriots fought in the front ranks and did splendid work at the entrance of the harbor were bombarded by our fleet. The Vesuvius used her dynamite guns with good effect. Gen. Shafter cabled Gen. Miles that he was leading the United States troops before Santiago in person.

The American army after a furious fight lasting all day, drove the Spaniards into the city of Santiago, and at night the American troops encamped near the trenches and on the outpost, held in the morning by Spaniards. The victory was most complete. The Americans drove the enemy from Caney, destroyed the Spanish fort at that place and occupied the village. Another division captured the heights of San Juan.

The losses of Americans were heavy, numbering about 1,000 killed and wounded. Comparatively few were killed outright, a majority of American losses consisting of wounded. The Spanish loss was heavy. The Americans attacked the Spanish from three directions. Lawton and Wheeler's forces assailed Caney. Northeast of Santiago Kent's men advanced on Agnadorez, Garcia and the Cubans attacked Caney from the southeast and divisions of the army advanced upon Santiago from the east. The Americans presented a solid front from the coast to Santiago, the northern defense and the line never wavered. The men were filled with eager enthusiasm and their officers had a hard time restraining them.

The Spaniards fought desperately to hold Caney, but in vain. Foot by foot our troops drove them back. The fighting of infantry here was superb. Men of the line were ably assisted by the rough riders and other dismounted cavalry. Troops, late in the afternoon successfully drove the Spaniards out of Caney and occupied the place, but only after desperate fighting.

The land fighting was desperate all along the line, the Spaniards stoutly resisting the advance of Americans at San Juan and Agnadorez. Slowly but surely the Spanish had to give ground and the darkness found the American lines pressing a solid front from the coast to El Caney, thus hemming the Spaniards in the city and cutting off all means of retreat to the interior.

The fierce struggle to drive the Spaniards out of the last line of intrenchments around Santiago continued all day Saturday, but with much less fury, and a good deal smaller loss of life than on Friday.

Surrounded by Rebels. Advice from Manila to Madrid dated June 23 declared the city surrounded by 25,000 rebels. The insurgent leader, Aguinaldo, has called on Captain General August to surrender, but he announced his determination to maintain the sovereignty of Spain to the last extremity.

Will Not Ask Blanco. Washington officials wonder if Blanco will consider Admiral Don Pasqual de Cervera y Topete, Count of Jerez and Marquis of Santa Ana, a fair exchange for Hobson. However, they will have Hobson without Gen. Blanco's permission.

Re-enforcements Leave Tampa. Upwards of 4,000 men are now on their way to re-enforce Gen. Shafter in his operations in Santiago province. A most important contingent is six batteries of light artillery, consisting of twenty-four officers and 623 men, which has left Tampa.

WAR HISTORY OF A WEEK

Friday. Gen. Shafter assaulted the Spanish posts at Santiago. The battle raged fiercely all day. The Spaniards were driven into the city. At dark American troops occupied the Spanish intrenchments outside the city, within half a mile of the city walls. The American casualties in killed and wounded were reported by Gen. Shafter as over 500. The Spanish loss was much greater.

Saturday. Fighting resumed at Santiago, but only in a desultory manner. The American troops held the ground occupied the day before.

Sunday. Gen. Shafter demanded a surrender of the city under penalty of bombardment. The demand was refused.

Admiral Cervera's squadron made an effort to escape from Santiago harbor. Choosing a moment when the American squadron was lying ten miles off shore, the Spanish ships left the harbor, four cruisers sailing west and two torpedo destroyers east. The Oregon, Indiana, Iowa and Brooklyn, under Commander Schley, pursued and destroyed the Vizcaya, Almirante Oquendo, Maria Teresa and Cristobal Colon, taking Admiral Cervera and 1,500 of his men prisoners. The converted cruiser Gloucester sank the torpedo boat destroyers Furor and Pluton. The Spanish loss in killed was 300. The American ships were uninjured in the battle and but one man was killed.

Monday. At the urgent request of the foreign consuls, Gen. Shafter agreed to a truce until Tuesday noon, in order to give time for the removal of women and children from Santiago.

Wednesday. Lieut. Hobson believed to now be free. Resolutions annexing Hawaiian Islands to the United States adopted by the Senate.

Spanish warship Alfonso XII. is reported to have been destroyed while trying to run the blockade out of Havana.

Conference of Shafter and Sampson results in a decision to await army reinforcements before bombarding Santiago.

Wisconsin and Massachusetts volunteers are en route to re-enforce Gen. Shafter and Illinois men are ready for the order to move.

Leaders in Spain think the time is ripe to sue for peace, but the Government decides to continue war. The Pope is said to have been asked to seek peace.

Thursday. At El Caney 15,000 destitute persons have assembled, being refugees from Santiago.

Gen. Miles left Washington for Santiago to assume active command of military operations in Cuba.

United States naval attaché in London informs President McKinley that Spain will sue for peace next week.

Clara Barton succors the starving refugees from Santiago and pays a high tribute to the American soldiers.

Lieut. Hobson and his companions are exchanged and received with great demonstrations of joy by the troops.

American troops under Gen. Anderson are comfortably quartered at Cayte and awaiting re-enforcements before attacking Manila.

Cruiser Philadelphia ordered to sail from Mare Island to raise the United States flag over Hawaii and receive the islands into the Union.

Commodore Watson's squadron ordered detached from Admiral Sampson's fleet and to start without delay for the Spanish coast. Probable that a chase will be made for Canara's fleet.

BOMB IN THE PALACE.

Attempt to Kill Queen Regent and King of Spain Failed.

Information has been received in Washington to the effect that an attempt was recently made to blow up the apartments of the Queen Regent of Spain at Madrid with dynamite. Several men were arrested for alleged complicity in the plot, and one of them, Algodoro Arzozano, at Barcelona, and afterward executed. Absolutely no official information has been given out concerning the attempted crime, and the press of the Spanish capital was kept in ignorance of it. It is believed, however, that the bomb was placed by adherents of Don Carlos, who wished to expedite his accession to the throne by the destruction either of the boy king, Alfonso, or his mother, the Queen Regent.

Long Span of a Few Lives.

Lord Brougham used to tell how he had conversed with an eyewitness of the execution of Charles I., and, as Brougham did not die until 1863, this represented a space of 210 years, within only one life between. Within the last few years there was to be met in London a gentleman whose grandfather had told him of a talk he once had with an old Devonshire laborer who had seen, when a child, the landing of William of Orange in Torbay. The writer of these lines has met at dinner one who had talked with a hostess of Dr. Johnson, in the person of Mrs. David Garrick; while Mr. Gladstone's earlier memories include an interview with Hannah More, who was the great lexicographer's flatterer and friend, and an acquaintanceship with Thomas Grenville, who, not far from 120 years ago, arranged the terms of separation between this country and the United States.—Birmingham (England) Post.

OPEN LETTERS FROM

Jennie E. Green and Mrs. Harry Hardy.

JENNIE E. GREEN, Denmark, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I had been sick at my monthly periods for seven years, and tried almost everything I ever heard of, but without any benefit. Was troubled with backache, headache, pains in the shoulders and dizziness. Through my mother I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has done me so much good. I am now sound and well."

Mrs. HARRY HARDY, Riverside, Iowa, writes to Mrs. Pinkham the story of her struggle with serious ovarian trouble, and the benefit she received from the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This is her letter:

"How thankful I am that I took your medicine. I was troubled for two years with inflammation of the womb and ovaries, womb was also very low. I was in constant misery. I had heart trouble, was short of breath and could not walk five blocks to save my life. Suffered very much with my back, had headache all the time, was nervous, menstruations were irregular and painful, had a bad discharge and was troubled with bloating. I was a perfect wreck. Had doctored and taken local treatments, but still was no better. I was advised by one of my neighbors to write to you. I have now finished the second bottle of Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and am better in every way. I am able to do all my own work and can walk nearly a mile without fatigue; something I had not been able to do for over two years. Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctors."

HAWAII IS VOTED IN.

SENATE ADOPTS HOUSE RESOLUTIONS FOR ANNEXATION.

Vote Is Reached Sooner Than Expected—Galleries Greet Result with Applause—Amendments Defeated by the Annexationists—Six Democrats Aid the Republicans.

Final Vote Stands 42 to 21.

The annexation of Hawaii was accomplished Wednesday so far as the legislative branch of the Government was concerned. Quite unexpectedly the resolutions providing for the annexation of the islands were brought to a vote in the Senate late in the afternoon, and they were passed by the decisive vote of 42 to 21.

Early in Wednesday's session of the Senate conferences of the leaders on both sides of the chamber were held and a tacit agreement was reached that a vote should be taken Thursday. The opponents of annexation had concluded their arguments, and as they had no desire to keep the Senate in session by purely dilatory tactics, they announced their willingness that a vote should be taken as soon as Mr. White, Mr. Pettigrew and Mr. Allen had finished their speeches. Neither Mr. White nor Mr. Pettigrew spoke at great length, but Mr. Allen did not conclude until 4:15.

It was evident instantly that a vote was at hand. The word was passed swiftly through the corridors and committee rooms and in a few minutes every Senator at the capitol was in his seat. The galleries filled rapidly and members of the House of Representatives, learning that a vote was to be taken, came hurriedly to the Senate side of the great marble pile to witness proceedings that will be historic.

The test vote came on an amendment offered by Mr. White of California. It was offered with no expectation that it would be adopted, but merely to place the ideas and opinions of the opponents of annexation on record. It was rejected by a vote of 40 to 20, indicating that the annexationists were strongly in the majority. Amendment after amendment was offered, but the advocates of the resolutions stood solidly together, gaining rather than losing strength on the successive votes.

Finally, at 5:30 p. m., the resolutions themselves, in precisely the form in which they were received from the House of Representatives, were reported to the Senate and the roll-call began. Intense interest was manifested by every spectator. Not a sound was to be heard in the chamber except the call of the clerk and the responses of Senators. When the Vice-President announced the vote by which the resolutions were passed a tremendous wave of applause swept through the galleries, which the Vice-President made no effort to check. Those who had advocated the resolutions expressed their pleasure by shaking hands with one another, and on all sides evident relief was shown that the end had come. For a few minutes so much good-natured confusion existed that the dignity of the Senate was threatened, but Vice-President Hobart quietly reminded Senators that the session was not yet at an end.

Mr. Morrill of Vermont was the only Republican who voted against the resolutions, although Mr. Thurston of Nebraska and Mr. Spooner of Wisconsin were paired against them. Six Democrats—Mr. Gorman of Maryland, McLaurin of South Carolina, Money of Mississippi, Morgan of Alabama, Pettus of Alabama and Sullivan of Mississippi—voted in favor of annexation.

Beautiful Structure of Eggshells.

An eggshell consists of concretions of carbonate of lime (chalk), deposited in and upon the fibrous surface of the egg-pod, and smoothed and soldered together into polygonal plates of greater or less thickness, so that under the microscope the surface looks like a tessellated pavement. The microscope further discloses the interesting information that eggs of the different group of birds possess recognizable characteristics, so that a trained eye can tell, by examining a fragment of shell, the general character of the bird that laid it, if not its specific identity; and this ability has done service in enlarging our knowledge of fossil birds, some of whose eggs have been recovered unbroken. The shell is always permeated by minute canals that admit air to the growing embryo, for without the presence and aid of oxygen the processes of organic development could not go on. Close these pores by varnishing, and the embryo would quickly die; on the other hand, such an exclusion of the air is one of the methods in use for prolonging the edibility of fresh eggs by excluding air and microbes. As the embryo grows, the air pores enlarge, the shell becomes brittle, and its lining membrane splits at the large end, forming there a considerable cavity filled with air. When the chick has approached nearly to the time of bursting the shell, it ruptures the membrane—perhaps accidentally—and begins to breathe this air, and thus to get its lungs into working order. The beauty of this arrangement is that the tender youngling is thus provided with air warmed to the temperature of its blood, avoiding the chill of the outside atmosphere before its respiratory organs have grown strong enough to bear the shock. In order to enable it to break its way out of the shell when its time comes, the tip of its soft little beak is armed with a temporary hard knob or excrescence, called an "egg-tooth," which falls off soon after the chick's emergence.—Harper's Magazine.

A STARTLED MOTHER.

From the Freeport (Ill.) Bulletin.

While busy at work in her home, Mrs. William Shay, corner of Taylor and Hancock avenues, Freeport, Ill., was startled by hearing a noise just behind her.

Mrs. Shay Was Startled.

joy at finding her mother. The rest of the happening is best told in the mother's own words. She said:

"On the 28th of Sept., 1896, while in the room of health, Beatrice was suddenly and severely afflicted with spinal meningitis. Strong and vigorous before, in five weeks she became feeble and suffered from a paralytic stroke which twisted her head back to the side and made it impossible for her to move a limb. Her speech, however, was not affected. We called in our family doctor, one of the most experienced and successful practitioners in the city. He considered the case a very grave one. Before long little Beatrice was compelled to wear a plaster Paris jacket. Prominent physicians were consulted, electricities were applied, but no benefit was noticed until we tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"Busy in my kitchen one afternoon I was startled by the cry of 'Mamma' from little Beatrice, who was creeping toward me. I had placed her on an improvised bed in the parlor, comfortably close to the fire and given her some books and playthings. She became tired of waiting for me to come back and made up her mind to go to me, so her story 'My Pink Pills made me walk,' which she tells everyone who comes to our house, was then for the first time verified. She has walked ever since. She has now taken about nine boxes of the pills and her pale and pinched face has been growing rosy, and her limbs gained strength each day."

Egypt's Growing Population.

The foreign residents are 112,000; of these 38,000 are Greeks, 24,500 Italians, 19,500 Britishers, including the army of occupation, and 14,000 French subjects, including Algerians and Tunisians.

Life and the Liver.

"Success in life depends upon the liver" is the way Chas. Lamb, the poet and punster, put it. Modern science points out Cascarets as the only perfect, gentle, positive liver regulator fit to be used in the delicate human organism. All druggists sell Cascarets 10c, 25c, 50c, and we recommend them most heartily.

Thicker for Pillows.

That history repeats itself has just received another proof. Some years ago the men of a Bavarian regiment, of which Prince Maximilian was chief, in order that they might show their devotion to him, cut off their mustaches and sent them to the Princess, who had just become a mother, that she might use them as a pillow. Something very like a repetition of this has just taken place at Rappoltsweiler, in Alsatia. The chief of the fire brigade was a few days ago presented with his first child, a boy. The firemen thereupon called a meeting at which it was decided to make the baby boy an honorary member of the corps, and the men subsequently cut off their mustaches and beards to form the stuffing of a red velvet pillow for the baby's use.—Chicago Chronicle.

A Thoughtful Rector.

"Cornhill" tells of the rector of a small country parish in the Midlands who had lived among his people a simple, unobtrusive life, which had endeared him to the hearts of those who knew him. In very cold weather he would invite the congregation to come and warm themselves before leaving the church. Under other conditions of weather this thoughtfulness for the comfort of his flock took a somewhat different form, and at the end of a half-hour's sermon he would sometimes say: "As the weather is still so inclement, I will, my dear friends, lengthen my discourse somewhat, in the hope that it may clear later."

A BITTER LESSON.

BY EMMA PLATT GUYTON.

"How can you tolerate it, Lu?" exclaimed Mrs. Gorman. "If he is my brother, I say it is a shame!" Then, allowing her listener no time to reply, the energetic little lady rattled on: "I suppose you and Clarence must have an understanding, or you would have discharged him long ago. Here has Sidney Lawrence been waiting and serving for you no less patiently than Jacob for Rachel, these seven years and more, and yet my recreant brother is the favored one. Unless you take him in hand soon your lilies and roses will wither, and even faithful Sidney will come to worship at a younger, fairer shrine. Every one supposes that you and Clarence are engaged, and yet he has never in so many words made you an offer of marriage. Now, while we know that he considers you his betrothed, he does not seem to realize the embarrassing position in which this tedious courtship places you, and should therefore be brought to a knowledge of it or punished for his delinquency."

During the earlier portion of her friend's remarks a smile hovered around Lulu Brandon's lips, and she continued her task of cutting the leaves of the last new magazine; but as the final sentence was pronounced her face flushed deeply.

"My private affairs need not concern the public, Belle," she replied with dignity. "But I agree with you that I have been too patient, I acknowledge myself to be considerably at fault, for I proved an easy conquest and Clarence may have grown lukewarm in his affection, feeling so secure of mine. Of course a word or two from me and I might become a wife within the next twenty-four hours; but all such words must come from my lord himself."

Her brief displeasure gone, with a merry laugh she arose and linked her arm in that of her friend, and drawing her to a cosy sofa in one corner of the room, proceeded to formulate plans by which she should bring her lover to terms without his knowledge of her conspiracy.

That evening, at tea, Mr. Clarence Curtis suddenly inquired,—

"Been over to the Brandons' to-day, Belle?"

"Yes, and by the way, Clarence, Lu requested me to tell you not to call this evening as she will be engaged."

"All right, sis; I'll go around to the theatre with Roberts."

There was a significant twinkle in her eyes as Mrs. Gorman rejoined,—

"I hope you'll enjoy the play. The Kendals are drawing large houses."

Two hours later Mr. Clarence Curtis was leisurely scanning the crowded theatre, bowing to those he recognized, just previous to the rising of the curtain, his friend Roberts exclaimed,—

"Why, as I live, there's Sid Lawrence! Who knew he had returned? I interest in the play than in the couple who occupied one of the boxes nearly opposite from where they were seated."

Lu had surely never looked so exquisitely dainty and beautiful as to-night. She seemed the embodiment of health, all aglow with happiness. Yet the lovely face and graceful figure irritated him by the very beauty of which he had always been proud. This radiant piece of flesh and blood did not seem so exactly his property as formerly. Was it because Sidney Lawrence was so attentive? They had been children together, Sid and Lu, and he knew she had always regarded the studious, dignified boy and man as an elder brother, while she gave the love of her young heart to his comrade and chum. How well he recalled the days, years ago, when Sid had told him with sad eyes and tremulous voice that Lulu had rejected him! He comforted him as best he could, selfishly exulting in the thought that he possessed her love unasked, unsought. Strange that his possession never seemed quite so valuable as to-night! He wondered what Sidney was saying to make her smile and blush so deeply. Well, the act would soon be over, and then he and Roberts would go and see them and so give the public to understand that matters were as usual between him and Miss Brandon.

With this thought he resolutely turned his attention to the stage, and perseveringly held it there until the curtain fell. Then, turning to Roberts, he proposed that they should go over to the opposite box, wonder who the lady is! Can it be possible? It's Miss Brandon! I never supposed she would accept any other escort save yourself. What is it, Curtis, a lover's quarrel?"

Veiling his surprise with a forced smile, Curtis nonchalantly replied,—
"Not to my knowledge." Then he added somewhat impatiently, "I am not sure. Lu has a right to go where and with whom she pleases."

In spite of the indifferent manner and careless tone, Roberts noted that his theatre loving friend took far less

As they entered it Sidney greeted them in his usual sincere and hearty manner, while Lulu, with a smile, gave her hand first to Clarence and then to Roberts, at the same time motioning her lover to a seat by her side. As Roberts for a few minutes engaged Sidney in conversation, Curtis managed to ask Miss Brandon why she had not informed him of her desire to come to the theatre. She frankly replied that she had felt no special wish to do so until Sidney unexpectedly called and asked her to accompany him. This she told him with a manner so devoid of coquetry that he felt reassured, and left her with a complacent feeling that he was quite sure of her affection.

He called to see her the next evening as usual, and nothing was said of the recent incident. Clarence's brief jealousy was forgotten, and he calmly accepted the old condition of things. Why should he be in haste to marry even the most charming girl in the world?

He hesitated to give up the freedom and luxury of bachelorhood for the restraints which marriage must inevitably bring. Lulu was such a delightful companion and sweetheart! Would she be equally charming as a wife? Whether or not she wished to marry he never conjectured. He had always lived for his own comfort, and self was his first consideration. So when he left her that evening the words were still unspoken which would bind her to him, and he was yet a free man.

A fortnight passed as usual, with no change in the relations of the two. Lulu was a proud girl, and Mrs. Gorman's look of inquiry every time they now met was hard to bear. Matters reached a climax on the day when Belle incautiously said,—

"I have been scolding Clarence about you, Lulu. I tell him he will rue his indifference when it is too late."

"Indeed!" Lulu's laugh was rather forced. "And what did my lord say?"

"Oh, that he was sure of you, or something of the sort. He is abominably conceited though he is my brother."

"Are not all men so?" asked Lulu, lightly; but her eyes were like sparks.

When, at eight o'clock next evening Clarence called to see Miss Brandon, the maid informed him that she had just "went out with Mr. Lawrence." Again the green-eyed demon seized the tardy wooer, and this time it wonderfully quickened his latent love. He resolved to ask the important question at once. Early the next morning he went to the home of his sweetheart, only to find that she had gone out for the day. Clarence was seriously disturbed. He felt that something was wrong! If he could only see Lulu for a few minutes, matters would be settled to his satisfaction, he assured himself. But, alas! that little word, "if," has often proved a barrier stronger than prison walls or iron bands.

For weeks he was baffled in every attempt to see Miss Brandon alone, until he was forced to admit that she purposely sought to evade a meeting with him. This only made him more eager and determined to bring one about, but more than two months elapsed before he succeeded in securing the long and much desired interview. At last he wrote her a note, requesting somewhat imperatively to be allowed to see her privately. The reply was brief, simply stating that she would receive him that evening at eight o'clock.

Promptly at the time designated Clarence entered the familiar parlor and was greeted cordially by Lu, who yet evaded the accustomed lover-like address.

"Great minds run in the same channel," Clarence. At the moment I received your note, I was writing you an invitation to call."

This little speech quickly dissipated the suspicion which had arisen in his mind at his reception, and he resolved to state the object of his call without delay.

"Dear Lulu," he said, taking her hand in his, "I have come this evening to ask you to name an early date for our marriage. I want my wife as soon as possible."

She allowed him to retain her hand, but the crimson deepened upon her cheeks as she replied,—

"Clarence, I have something to say which may give you pain. During the last few years I have been dimly conscious that we are not exactly suited to each other, although a month ago I should have indignantly refuted such an implication from any one else. I am now fully convinced that if united we should not be happy. More than this, here she spoke very softly and tenderly, "I have been mistaken in the subject of my affection, and I now know that I have never truly loved any one but Sidney Lawrence."

Speechless and pale Clarence's eyes sought hers beseechingly. At last he realized the magnitude of his love for the woman his selfishness had put forever from his life. But he read no hope in her face, and in silence he rose and left her.

Years have passed since then. Clarence Curtis has never married, and the gossip says that the handsome bachelor silently worships the wife of Sidney Lawrence.

"Wildly, you're getting a very bad reputation. You'll lose it entirely if you keep on."
"I wish I could."—Detroit Free Press.

BENEFACTORS OF THE RACE.

Office of "KINGFISHER TIMES," Kingfisher, Okla., Dec. 12, '93.

GENTLEMEN:—I believe it my duty to write you a line in regard to the beneficial effect of Phelps' "Four C Remedy," so far as I am personally concerned. A week ago last Thursday, I was taken with a severe attack of la grippe and in a short time became so hoarse I could not speak above a whisper. The night previous I had coughed nearly the entire night; just before retiring I took a teaspoonful, and slept the entire night as sweetly as ever I did in my life, not coughing once. I was entirely relieved before taking one bottle. Phelps' Cough, Cold and Croup Cure should be in every household in the land. I send you this wholly untroubled by anyone, for you are benefactors of the race in giving it the antidote for some of the worst afflictions to which it is heir.

Very Truly Yours,

C. J. NESBITT, Editor.

A MIRACLE.

Kansas City, Kansas, Dec. 24, '91
Last Friday, Dec. 19, my attending physician stated unless I was better by morning he could do nothing for my relief. That night I commenced taking Phelps' "Four C" remedy, stopped all other remedies. The first dose stopped my cough; slept and rested well; a few more doses removed all soreness from my lungs; the second day I was up; the third day I was out on the porch and to-day was up town purchasing holiday goods.
