Supervisor Lighthall, registered a big kick. He said the system was the biggest farce ever perpetrated on the people of this county. He then remarked that there is only one fair way, and that is to have a committee appointed outside of the supervisors to go around the county and investigate and make a report.

Suggestion for Other Parents.

A well known business man on Ann street has started his boy in business in a way so inexpensive and yet so practical that it might easily be adopted by many other fathers. He has set apart a case of candies for the boy's stock in trade and allows him to keep the accounts, order all the goods and have all the profits. This is one of the most commendable things that has ever come to the writer's notice. It teaches the boy book-keeping, rouses his ambition, keeps him off from the street and invests him with the independence of earning his own spending money. Added to all this it environs him with commercial activity and accords him the early training so essential to success in these days of strife and competition. Give the boy a chance when he is a boy and you will find him wax to receive and marble to retain.—Evening Times.

Good Advice.

Pittsburgers are eating peaches bought in Chicago, and upon inquiry we find that the fruit is probably grown in Michigan. We also learn that the people there think Kalamazoo the only place in which celery is grown. Dealers were greatly surprised to learn that thousands of acres of the finest quality of celery are grown in other sections of the state. They were also astonished to learn that Washtenaw county produces first-class peaches, pears, plums, apples and grapes. They supposed that all such fruit came from the shores of lake Michigan. Our shippers should carefully mark their boxes, crates and baskets in order that purchasers may know from whence the contents came. Let every man advertise this section of the state and create a demand for our products.—Manchester Enterprise.

This is Right.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Hammond expresses himself on an important topic as follows: "I believe in temperance, theory and practice. There are no users of tobacco nor strong drink among those employed in this office. I hate cuspidors and cigars stubs. Persons who use tobacco are not appointed by me to instruct in teachers' institutes, except on an urgent request from the commissioner of schools for stated reasons. I will not recommend for any educational position any person who, to my knowledge, gives his influence for cigarettes, tobacco or whiskey."

Dedicated Their Hall.

The Masons of this place dedicated their new hall Thursday evening. The dedicatory exercises were preceded by an excellent supper given by the wives of the Masons in the Staffan block, after which all returned to the new hall. L. E. Wood of Niles was the dedicating officer. After these exercises Hon. A. J. Sawyer delivered a very pleasing address. The members of the order are well pleased with their new acquisition, and they may well be so, as they have one of the finest lodge rooms in the county.

Washtenaw's Fair Made Money.

The treasurer's report of the Washtenaw County Fair Association presented Friday afternoon causes a great sigh of relief to go up from the merchants of Ann Arbor who have gone on the guarantee list. After all expenses have been paid there will be on hand over $200 as a nestegg for next year. The total receipts for admissions and membership tickets were $2,368.50, and the general total $3,368.50. The balance is an even $100 less than last year, but the improvements have been unusually extensive and expensive.

AT THE COUNTY HOUSE.

Interesting Statistics Concerning the Past Year.

Argus Democrat: The average number of inmates at the county house for the past year has been 41. The total number of different persons who have been cared for there in the past year has been 71, of whom 50 were males and 21 females. Their nationality was as follows: Americans 38, Germans 18, Irish 7, English 6, Italian 1, Colored Canadian 1. There are three two idiotic, two mute and two blind inmates. During the year 8 of the inmates have died. The average cost for maintenance of each inmate has been $1.34 per week.

The county farm produced this year 282 bushels of wheat, 377 bushels of oats, 900 bushels of corn and 400 bushels of potatoes. Eleven cows are kept.

The total cost for the past year has been $4,840.10 of which $1,384.27 was for temporary relief outside of the county house. The remainder, $3,455.83 was spent as follows: Salaries and help $1,080.00, blacksmithing $29.25, books and stationery $14.76, boots and shoes $44.10, repairs $544.30, dry goods and bedding $106.38, hardware $106.31, stock $262.50, hay, grain and feed $42.96, groceries and provisions $374.20, beef $395.83, clothing $53.59, drugs and medicines $28.76, flour $13.58, burial account $1.70, farm implements and seeds $73.50, wood and coal $433.76, improvement account $22.80, furniture $69.60, crockery and glassware $1.75, medical attendance $123.18, tobacco $88.38.

Slightly Mixed.

A little six-year-old girl in Sunday school was asked one morning recently what she remembered of the story about Samson and the Philistines, whereupon she promptly replied: "He sailed into the bay in the night and at daylight opened fire on them and sunk eleven of their warships with the jawbone of an ass. He then took some prisoners who had never seen a razor, bombarded the town, and took up five baskets of fragments. He then told them that he would set his bow on the bay so whenever they saw it they could remember the Maine."

A Little Mixed.

A certain German, whose name we will not mention, although it is Chris who had not paid much attention to learning English, had a horse stolen whereupon he advertised as follows. "Von nite the oder day, ven I was awake in mein schleep, I hear something vat I thinks vas not yust right by mein parn, und I shumps de ped und runs mit the parn out, und ven I vas dere coom I sees mein pig gray iron mare he vas been tied loose und run mit der staple off, und who vill efer him back prings, I pays him yust so much as vas peen kushionary."

The Companion for the Rest of 1898.

The principal attraction offered by The Youth's Companion for the remaining weeks of 1898 provide a foretaste of the good things to follow in the new volume for 1899. To the first issue in November Frank R. Stockton will contribute a humorous sketch, entitled "Some of My Dogs," and in the issue for the week of November 10th will appear Rudyard Kipling's thrilling story of the heroism of soldiers in the ranks, "The burning of the Sarah Sands." In the seven issues to follow there will be contributions by Lord Dufferin, William D. Howells, J. E. Chamberlin, the American war correspondent, Mary E. Wilkins, Hon. Thomas B. Reed, the Marquis of Lorne, Mme. Lillian Nordica and I. Zangwill. Those who subscribe now for the 1899 volume will receive every November and December issue of The Companion from the time of subscription to the end of the year free, the Companion Calendar for 1899 free, and then the entire 52 issues of The Companion to January 1, 1900. An illustrated announcement of the 1899 volume and sample copies will be sent free to any one addressing The Youth's Companion, 211 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass.

The Innocence of Childhood.

As the tour de force of an entertainment once given at an English country house it was arranged that the children should present an original play, to be entirely written and acted by themselves. The play turned out to be surprisingly well written and would have won much praise but for the ending. This was the story of the play:

A gallant knight joined the brave King Richard in one of his crusades in Palestine. Nothing having been heard from him for more than seven years, the conviction was forced on his faithful wife that he was dead. The villain came to her and wanted her to marry him, but at the critical moment the knight reappeared and clasped in his arms his lady, who had never ceased to love him. Then explanations came, and he told of his many noble achievements. "In short, dear wife," said he, "I have never been idle an instant."

"And I, too, my lord, have not been idle," she said with pride. "See!" And here she led out before the electrified audience four lovely children to be presented for the first time to their father. —San Francisco Argonaut.

Valuable Record.

When the furniture of Charles James Fox, the famous English orator and statesman, was sold by auction, there was among the books a copy of the first volume of Gibbon's Roman history.

It appeared by the title page that the book had been presented by the author to Fox, but no considerations of sentiment deterred the recipient from writing on the fly leaf this anecdote:

"The author at Brookes' said there was no salvation for this country until six heads of the principal persons in administration were laid on the table. Eleven days after this same gentleman accepted a place of lord of trade, under those very ministers, and has acted with them ever since."

Such was the avidity of bidders anxious to secure the least scrap of the writing and composition of the famous owner of the copy that owing to the addition of this little record the book sold for 3 guineas, a large sum for the times. —Youth's Companion

Occasion For Haste.

"I am the wrong man," protested the wretched creature they were getting ready to hang.
The chairman of the vigilantes was clearly assailed with misgivings.
"Hurry!" he exclaimed, addressing those who were coming with the rope.

Ivan Kraus, an officer of the Russian army at Port Arthur, China, who arrived at Vancouver, B. C., on board of the Empress of Japan as a stowaway, has been arrested. Kraus was discovered making maps and plans of the fortifications at Port Arthur and fled.

Of an estimated yield of from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 bushels of wheat in Manitoba, it is now calculated that only about 8,000,000 will be thrashed, and the remainder, standing in stacks and stooks, is threatened with total destruction. The outlook is exceedingly gloomy.

At Lexington, Ky., private John Phelps of the First Missouri was dishonorably discharged from the volunteer army for a repetition of insubordination. He was placed in front of his company and his degradation took place before a crowd. He is a son of ex-Gov. J. S. Phelps of Springfield, Mo.

The coal mining town of Wellington, Vancouver Island, has been the scene of several subsidence and there is general alarm there now owing to indications that another is likely to take place. The whole town is undermined through the extensive operations of the coal mining company, and a few weeks ago a house slid down into an abyss.

At Urbana, Ohio, the Circuit Court has handed down a decision in the case of Ben Church against Champaign County for $5,000 damages. The suit grows out of the fencing of Chick Mitchell two years ago, and is brought under the law which gives the nearest of kin $5,000. The common pleas court held the law unconstitutional. The Circuit Court held it to be constitutional. The case will now go to the Supreme Court.

There were 113 fewer deaths in Chicago last week than during the corresponding period a year ago. Fifty-nine of those who died were children under 1 year of age. Compared with the week preceding there is a reduction of twenty-six deaths from all causes.

A charge of conspiracy to murder and murder has been brought against the officials of the Chicago-Virgin Coal Company and the guards employed by them. This is the first move on the part of the strikers to take the fight against the mine owners into the courts.

Mrs. James Dietrich, who sued Mrs. Anna Menzel, wife of a leading merchant of Milford, Ind., for $3,000 damages on the ground that the defendant circulated a story that Mrs. Dietrich, who is a leading society woman, padded her form, was granted $126 by the jury.

President McKinley and party reached St. Louis over the Burlington road shortly after 9 o'clock Friday morning, and met with a rousing reception, in which over 200,000 took part. From the railway station he was escorted to the Southern Hotel, and received the parade from the hotel balcony.

The schooner Churchill of Chicago, laden with iron ore from Lake Superior, foundered in the middle of Lake Michigan, off Waukegan, at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon, and the captain and one sailor were carried down with the sinking boat. The mate, three other seamen and the woman cook were rescued.

The Seattle Post Intelligencer says that one result of the survey at the mouth of the Yukon river by Capt. Pratt of the coast and geodetic survey is to add an area of 2,500 square miles to the United States domain. Capt. Pratt found that the south mouth of the Yukon empties into Bering sea twenty miles further west than has been supposed.

Fifty-seven negroes, intended for the mines at Virden, and who were aboard the train attacked by the miners, were set adrift in St. Louis to get back to Birmingham the best way they could. After the guards were unloaded at the Union station the train was pulled down into the yards, where the negroes were told to get out by the conductor. He marched them back up the tracks and into the general waiting rooms, where he left them. The negroes were perfectly helpless, having no friends and no money.

A genuine blizzard prevailed in the Southwest and West Monday. A heavy wet snow fell, and driven by a strong wind, prostrated wires in all directions and caused delay to railway traffic. The snow followed twenty-four hours of steady rain. The sidewalks were covered three inches deep with slush. There was a decided fall in the temperature, and the suddenness of the storm, coming upon the track of the Indian summer weather, will undoubtedly cause great suffering, especially on the ranges covered with cattle.

SOUTHERN.

The annual convention of the American Christian Missionary Society opened at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Orders were received at corps headquarters at Camp Hamilton, Ky., instructing that no regiment be sent south till the yellow fever is entirely eradicated.

Floods in Japan have done great damage to crops and many lives have been lost. Aichi prefecture, which seems to have suffered most, lost thirty-five houses washed away, 1,200 overthrown, 170 partly wrecked, 412 injured and 5,600 inundated. Seven lives were lost.

The police of Alexandria, Egypt, arrested nine Italian anarchists and thereby frustrated a plot against Emperor William on his way to the Holy Land. The first to be arrested is a cafe keeper, a well-known anarchist, in whose house the police discovered two wire-bound bombs of great strength, full of bullets.

A dispatch from Falmouth says that the bodies of the victims recovered from the wreck of the steamer Mohegan have been robbed by unknown people. An American, Dr. Fallows, according to the correspondent, tucked a bundle of 500 notes in his breast, when the Mohegan struck. His body was subsequently found, but the notes were missing. Several of them were put in circulation Sunday.

Col. Roosevelt avers that his regiment of rough riders contained no better soldiers than the score or more of Indians who enlisted in the Indian territory. Not one of these Indian soldiers succumbed to disease. They were obedient, willing, hardy and fearless in battle. The first shot at the battle of Las Guasimas was fired by an Indian soldier.

R. G. Dan & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "With actual payments through clearing houses 19.2 per cent larger than in the same week of 1892 it cannot be said that business is in any sense falling off, and yet many are complaining because the amount realized as profit is smaller than was formerly realized in good times. In almost every branch of business trade is now restricted on a narrow margin of profit than in any other time of fair prosperity. Failures for the week were 235 in the United States, against 223 last year, and 25 in Canada, against 36 last year."

Bradstreet says: "At most Western centers an improvement in the retail and jobbing trade is reasonably dry goods, clothing and shoes is reported. Wheat, including flour, shipments for the week aggregated 4,729,995 bushels, against 5,397,224 last week. Corn exports aggregated 2,706,292, against 3,394,710 last week."

BIG PEACE JUBILEE.

CLOSE OF THE WAR CELEBRATED BY CHICAGO.

President McKinley and the Nation's Dignitaries Participate in the Great Festival—City Is Filled with an Immense Throng of People.

Chicago special:

Not since the World's Fair has Chicago witnessed such stir and enthusiasm, such decorations and marchings and festivities, as such masses and cheering crowds as during the peace jubilee week. In some respects the peace jubilee has discounted any of the World's Fair festivities. The President and a large part of his cabinet took part in the exercises, with numerous Congressmen, statesmen and diplomats, and all the leading war heroes except those in the far-off Philippines. In its military features the jubilee has surpassed anything Chicagoans have seen since the days of the civil war. The city donned holiday attire such as it has never worn before, the display of electric lights alone breaking the world's record on that score.

President McKinley and most of the other high officials, soldiers and civilians who were to take a leading part in the week's exercises arrived in the city Saturday afternoon, coming direct from a tour of the middle West, which they found brimming over with patriotism. They found in Chicago the same sentiments which animated the people all the way from Washington to Omaha, but reflected on a larger scale. If the West taught the visitors that all other sentiments are merged in the one feeling of patriotic pride Chicago emphasized the lesson.

Streams of visitors from all over the country poured into Chicago. Hundreds of thousands of men and women all over the West turned their faces toward the great commercial capital, and everybody who came was happy. It was worth coming a long way merely to see the miles of bunting, the million flags, the decorated arches, and the myriad electric lights that spanned the line of march for the great civic and military parade. Perhaps never again will there be an equal opportunity to see so many high dignitaries of the nation at once, and so many of the generals and other officers whose names have become famous in battles on Cuban and Porto Rican soil. It is not likely that the present generation will see the celebration of the close of another foreign war or any other kind of war. Those who witnessed or participated in the Chicago jubilee took part in a unique historic function. Years afterward they can tell a younger generation of the dramatic scenes and events witnessed in Chicago at the great peace jubilee at the close of the Spanish war. Its memories will be worth cherishing for it has been an organic part of a great chapter in American history.

Chicago's peace jubilee, which began with the thanksgiving services at the Auditorium Sunday night, was a fitting commemoration of the deeds of valor that swept the Spanish flag from the western hemisphere. Amid the cheers of six thousand people President McKinley entered the Auditorium and quietly took a seat in a box. The peace jubilee was formally begun. The enthusiasm and interest displayed at the thanksgiving services which constituted the first event of the great celebration of the return of peace were auspicious auguries of a memorable week. The atmosphere was electric with responsive enthusiasm, and notwithstanding the religious nature of the gathering at the Auditorium, every speaker was roundly cheered whenever the results of the war or any of its heroes were mentioned. But this enthusiasm, which seemed warm enough at all times, grew to a white heat whenever the President was referred to.

Several times the President was moved by the spontaneity and warmth of the greetings to rise and bow. Then the delight of the crowd burst all bounds, and the cheers would last for five minutes at a time.

Jews and gentiles, Catholics and Protestants, united their voices in a mighty Te Deum in gratitude for peace. The praises of the Lord were sung that the sword was sheathed. Glory to God in the highest was sounded that the red stream of strife was stopped in its flow and war was at an end. All the churches of Chicago were represented in the assemblage that filled the vast auditorium from the recesses of the great stage to the highest perched seat in the topmost gallery, and they were represented, too, in the speakers and the singers who gave voice to the services in honor of peace between the United States and Spain.

The President of the United States was there listening to Jewish rabbi, Catholic priest and Protestant minister, standing when others stood and singing when others sang. The Chinese penitentiary occupied another box and rose and sat as others did, making himself one of the celebrants of peace. In another place was the representative of the distant and isolated king of Corea, looking with amazement at a gigantic and brilliant gathering that rose upward from the proscenium line like sweeping hillside that are rich with the crimson and gold of autumn. And above these were the galleries rising higher and higher and painted with the fluttering of ribbons and feathers and flowers like the harvest colors on the hillsides. All the scene was as if it had been arranged to its very details by some great artist who would fix for the eye a living picture that brought to mind the time of gathering the fruit and grain, for that is a time of peace.

How many other thousands would have lent their ribbons and feathers and flowers and the lights of their faces to make the picture greater, can only be vaguely estimated. The streets all about the Auditorium were jammed so that even in the cool, clear and bracing October air women were suffocated and crushed and were carried away fainting from the surging crowd struggling in vain to get admission to the building.

This jubilee, which was projected as if by a spontaneous impulse and developed unexpected proportions as the plans neared completion, surprised even its projectors. The President upon his public appearances was greeted by crowds which were counted not by thousands, but by weeks of festival uproar—a week of immense parades, great mass meetings and glittering illuminations, the streets sounding with the tread of soldiery and the blare of bands, naval and military officers in the places of honor, the nation's dignitaries at the head

ALMOST A BLIZZARD.

Nebraska, Iowa and Other States Report a Severe Storm.

One of the most extraordinary storms that ever disturbed the Western country prevailed Monday night. Though the mercury never passed the freezing limit the storm was accompanied by such a hurricane that in many respects it resembled a midwinter blizzard. Not in the memory of the oldest inhabitant of Nebraska has such a storm occurred so early in the season. This snow was nearly sixty days ahead of the usual time, and in intensity it could be compared with nothing but a January blizzard. In the country districts there is considerable uneasiness with reference to the numerous bands of sheep in the interior. Some apprehension is also felt with reference to cattle on the range, but the greatest damage will be to sheep. The snow was so heavy as to cut off all telegraphic communication with Chicago. North Platte showed a temperature of 34, with no precipitation. Dodge City, Kan., had 32 degrees, with a killing frost. Santa Fe had 34 degrees, a killing frost, and clear; Cheyenne, Denver and Pueblo each had 26 degrees, with clear weather, and Sioux City reported a clear, mild and cloudy weather. The snow melted about as soon as it struck the ground.

The unexpected snowstorm hit the army posts in the Department of the Missouri very hard. With the volunteer soldiers equipped only with summer clothing, they were in no condition to meet the cold weather.

The coldest October shown in the record of twenty-eight years in the Omaha weather office was in 1873, when the mean temperature was 48. The lowest temperature recorded in the month during that period was 16 degrees on Oct. 25, 1887, and the heaviest snow for the month was four and one-half inches on Oct. 29, 1894.

PORTO RICO IS ADOPTED.

Formal Surrender Makes the Island Part of the United States.

At noon Tuesday the United States flag was raised upon the captain general's palace at El Morro, San Juan, Porto Rico, and the final ceremony of the delivery of the island to the United States Government was performed. National salutes were fired by the American artillery, and there was a special musical celebration which was attended by all the insular officials and the foreign consuls. Gen. Brooke has plenary powers and will remain in sole charge of the government of the island until such time as a military governor is designated by the President.

It was originally intended to have the ceremonies in connection with the formal taking possession of an elaborate nature, but this plan was abandoned. Considering the enfeebled condition of the troops and the intense heat, it was decided to have

SOLDIERS AT HOME.

THEY TELL SOME INTERESTING ANECDOTES OF THE WAR.

How the Boys of Both Armies Whittled Away Life in Camp—Foraging Experiences, Tireless Marches—Thrilling Scenes on the Battlefield.

"THESE new volunteers," said an old army forager of the thirty-third degree, "could never have had as much fun as we old fellows had in the '60s. We had fence rails to burn by the million, and these new fellows haven't a blamed rail, and in this era of barbed-wire fences they never could have. War without fence rails to burn is a hollow mockery. It makes me sick to ride over the country and note the disappearance of the jolly old-fashioned rail fence."

"A barbed-wire fence gives a soldier neither shelter nor fuel. A rail fence in the South was the soldier's best friend. A cedar rail was the best pot boiler in the world. Any fellow who was half a man could take a dry cedar rail in his hands and make kindling wood of it in two minutes, and use neither hatchet nor ax. All he had to do was to strike the rail on the ground in the right way and it would split up the middle, and with other blows into splinters. Start a fire with these splinters, and yum-yum, how your coffee would boil! Or if you came into camp after marching all day in the rain a big fire of rails was a heart warmer, I tell you."

"I understand there are no fence rails in Cuba, and mighty few chickens and pigs. If it wasn't for the sweet potatoes and bananas and coconuts I don't see how a respectable war can be conducted there at all. Every man with military instincts will miss the fence rails. When we got down to real business in the old war and had no tents, and half the time no connection with the cracker line, fence rails were our best friends. We could build breast-works of them, could make shelters and beds of them, and could build fires of them that would make even an ague patient feel cheerful. It was against traditions and regulations to steal rails, so we always confiscated them boldly. This was a comforted to the modern volunteer. I don't suppose the boys down in Cuba or at Tampa needed much fire, but the absence of fence rails would naturally make them discontented."

"Seriously," said the Major, "the volunteers of this war have been put to a pretty severe test. In fact, the severest trials to volunteers in all wars come in the first three or four months of service. This was the case in 1861, and we had the same flurry of hysterics and complaints and the same dismal talk about starvation and bad treatment. Just at the time when the three-month troops were asked to re-enlist a wave of exaggerated and extravagant complaint swept over the country."

"There were accusations against officers, charges against the government, wild stories of persecution in camp, all circulated with intent to discourage re-enlistment. People of this day can scarcely imagine the terrific onslaught that was made on the government and on the army in the first three months of the war. Cool-headed people saw the purpose, but many of the volunteers came really to believe that they had suffered such torments as were never visited on soldiers before. Stories were told at home of the cruelties of officers and the volunteers were urged by their parents and friends not to re-enlist."

"The sorely perplexed men who had enlisted to fight, and who had no experience in war, had one advantage over the discontented volunteers now. There was fighting ahead of them. They knew that the war had only begun. The war spirit, the American spirit, the certainty that there was hard fighting to be done by Americans, held them together. In spite of all that could be said by the copperheads, and the peace-at-any-price men, in spite of all the pleas of panic-stricken friends, the great majority of the three-month men re-enlisted. They soon learned that the trials of their first three months were harder to bear than any that came after. The hardships of real campaigning were as nothing compared with the hardships born of inexperience and discontent."

"After they had been one year or two years in the service they took hardship and exposure as a matter of course, and made provisions to care for themselves. At first, to be left one night without their tents was a sore grievance, but in the second and third years of the war they did not care whether they had tents or not. They had become self-reliant. They knew what to do in an emergency, and they knew how to get out of a scrape. They believed that the government was doing the best it could, and it was their business to do the rest. They accepted defeat in battle, sickness in hospital, hardship on the march, exposure and privation, all in a soldierly spirit, and it made the greatest difference in the bearing of the troops."

"The Army of the Cumberland moved forward from its camps at Nashville on the 26th of December, 1862. There was fighting from the first, and for nine days that army was without tents, without even shelter tents, and for the greater part of the time was fighting against a well-posted and well-disciplined army. This was in midwinter. It must be remembered, and I do not suppose that one soldier among the 50,000 under the command of Rosecrans thought of complaining about the hardships or exposure, or of blaming any one because things did not come out as expected."

"The wounded were, from the necessity of the case, left on the field. They were cared for as soon as possible. In making the rounds of the hospitals the week after the battle I found not a single man of our regiment with a complaint on his lips. Every one was glad that he had been in the battle, glad he had done his duty, and glad that the enemy had been whipped. There was some sickness as the result of this exposure in winter, but not one-tenth as much as there would have been as the result of such exposure in the first six months of the war. In some cases men were taken sick on the battlefield and had to be removed by force."

"We had one sergeant in our company who had severe chills on the night of December 20. These were followed by high fever, and when the morning of December 30 came he was a very sick man. Fortunately on that day our division was not called upon to change its position in line, and the sergeant was cared for by the boys, who piled their own blankets over him, regardless of the character of the disease. The surgeon came and prescribed for him and advised his removal to the rear. He declined to be removed, and on the morning of December 31, when the order of battle was read, he took his place in line, with two heavy blankets draped about him."

"Again the surgeon came and ordered him to the rear. Two of the boys got him by the arms, walked him off briskly toward the rear, made a little detour in the woods, and came back with him. When the attack came the sergeant, sick with the fever, fired as many shots as any other man in the ranks. The last sight the boys caught of him was as he was going forward, with the two big blankets fluttering in the wind, wild with the excitement of battle. Six days after that we found him in the hospital, the two blankets literally riddled with bullets. The man in his delirium raved because he had only two or three little flesh wounds to show he had been in the fight."—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Mail in War Times.

"Let this go." A. LINCOLN.

When the army was encamped in Virginia, near Washington, in 1861-62, President Lincoln franked a letter in the above manner for a youthful soldier named Frank King, of Fond du Lac County, Wis., and the envelope is still held as a sacred treasure by the family of the soldier lad, who lost his life at Gettysburg.

Captain Thomas Jones of the pension office related the story in this way to a representative of the Washington Star:

"The boys who went to the front to fight Spain imagined they had a difficult time getting their letters to home folks and loved ones, but they had things dead easy compared to what we had in the war of the rebellion. Paper and envelopes were hard to get, and stamps were almost as scarce as diamonds. Soldiers who were fortunate enough to be near Washington had their letters franked by Senators and Representatives, and you may imagine that our national lawmakers were kept busy with their pens. President Lincoln was even known to help the boys out occasionally. On one occasion Frank King, a private in a Wisconsin regiment, encamped near Arlington Heights, got a package of envelopes, and, with a friend, Harry Dunn, went to the White House and asked Mr. Lincoln to frank the envelopes. It was easier to see the President than than it is now, and at certain hours of the day a soldier could reach him as easily as could any of the high officials. When the President knew what was desired of him he asked: 'Why don't you get your Congressman to frank these envelopes? I am very busy.' 'The folks at home would like to see your name on the envelopes,' replied young King. Mr. Lincoln smiled, then, taking a pen, he wrote on one of the envelopes: 'Let this go.' A. Lincoln. He carefully blotted it, and, handing it to King, with the reminder of the package, said: 'Now, my boy, take the rest of these to your Congressman, Scott Sloan, and tell him I said fix them for you. I want you both to be brave soldiers, and, shaking the hands of King and Dunn, he bade them good-bye. King wrote to his parents that night and enclosed the letter in the envelope franked by Mr. Lincoln. The young fellow was killed at Gettysburg, but that envelope is religiously and lovingly prized by the surviving members of his family. Dunn, who was with King when Mr. Lincoln franked the envelope, called at the White House two years later and asked to have some envelopes franked. Mr. Lincoln remembered him, and when told that King had been killed his face wore a look of sorrow."

To Exact.

The Boston Herald says that while General Butler was in front of Petersburg, he received the news that his favorite horse, "Almond Eye," had been accidentally killed by falling into a ravine. Thereupon he ordered an Irish servant to go and skin the animal.

"What! Is Almond Eye dead?" asked Pat.

"What's that to you? Do as I bid you and ask no questions."

Pat went about his business, and in an hour or two returned.

"Well, Pat, where have you been all this time?" sternly demanded the general.

"Skinning the horse, your honor."

"Does it take nearly two hours to perform such an operation?"

"No, your honor; but, then, you see, it took 'bout half an hour to catch him," innocently replied Pat.

General Butler cast upon his servant such a ferocious look that Pat thought he meditated skinning an Irishman in revenge for the death of his horse.

To be always thinking about your manners is not the way to make them good; the very perfection of manners is not to think about yourself. What?

Pat went about his business, and in an hour or two returned.

"Well, Pat, where have you been all this time?" sternly demanded the general.

TOPICS FOR FARMERS

A DEPARTMENT PREPARED FOR OUR RURAL FRIENDS.

Essential Prerequisites to Success in Subsoiling—How to Handle Bees—Intelligence of the Horse—New Use for Tomatoes—Farm Notes.

Plowing of any kind, including subsoiling, should be gradual, and not a sudden deepening over the former cultivation of the land, writes W. F. Massey in Home and Farm. Thorough drainage and aeration is one of the essential prerequisites to success in subsoiling. If the subsoil needs drainage there is little benefit to be derived from subsoiling, as it will run back together as soon as the subsoiling has been done. Then, too, where the immediate subsoil is a mellow, yellow clay, there is less evidence of benefit from subsoiling than where it is a hard, red clay, such as we have here, and such as is common in the uplands of Georgia. One of the greatest benefits to be expected from a good subsoiling of a hard clay soil is in its allowing the roots of the peas and other legumes to penetrate deeper, and hence to draw more mineral matters from the subsoil for the benefit of the upper layer. There are few tracts of the worn uplands in the South which can, with safety, be turned to the depth proposed at once, and before we can turn such soils safely to the depth of ten inches, or even less, the aeration of the subsoil must be done, and in no way that I know of can it be done except by the subsoiling of the hard pan just below the former run of the plow. I feel perfectly certain that little benefit will be noticed in the first crop from subsoiling where the land can safely be comminuted to the depth of eight or ten inches, and I would not care to subsoil any of our lands deeper than twelve inches, for this is as deep as it ever need be. Land that can be plowed to the depth of eight or ten inches without turning any of the "cold, clammy subsoil," needs very little subsoiling.

Handling Bees.

A good many people do not keep bees because they have a notion that bees do not like them. It has been pretty well established that in the matter of likes and dislikes everybody is alike to bees. The most successful bee-keeper is the one who wears a veil all the time, and goes among the bees with a calm determination not to strike wildly at the air if one of the colony begins to buzz about his ears.

Bees are not at all averse to a hostile declaration, and are ready at all times to sacrifice themselves in a fight with any animate being. The best way to handle bees is to take advantage of their weak spots, and bees are in the best condition to manipulate when they are approached through their stomachs. Smoke is the most convenient thing to use in raising an alarm in a colony of bees. As soon as smoke begins to enter the hive every bee attacks the stores of the colony and eats all the honey it can hold. If the colony is gently smoked, and left to itself for a few minutes, it can be handled by any one. This is equally applicable to all bees when handling them, but some breeds of bees are more aggressive than others. The native black bees are liable to go out of their way to sting a man, but Italians rarely make the first move toward battle. For this reason Italians should be chosen in selecting a breed. Another good reason for choosing them is that they are the best breed.

Horse Intelligence.

While the army mule is almost invariably more intelligent than he is suspected of being, the horse occasionally exhibits unexpected aptitudes, as Col. Roosevelt found out. The Colonel, with a number of the rough riders, had been training the horses to lie down at a signal given by a certain pressure and a certain twist to the reins. At first Col. Roosevelt's horse didn't quite catch the idea, but it soon learned and it didn't forget. Shortly after the lesson, the Colonel rode back to his tent, where he found a number of friends waiting for him. Before he had time to dismount they came up and began talking to him on some subject in which he was much interested. Now, it is characteristic of the famous soldier that when he becomes interested in a subject, it engrosses his entire attention. As he talked he began to make gestures and to move in his saddle. Presently he chanced upon a combination of movement and gesture that meant more to his horse than to his hearers. That intelligent animal began to give way under him, sank slowly down and left the animated speaker stranded in the midst of a sentence, with both feet on the ground, straddled well apart, and a prostrate horse between them. In a moment his was the picture of amazement. Then he remembered, spoke to the horse, which got up, and resumed the conversation, remarking that the animal didn't seem to be feeling well.—New York Sun.

New Use for the Tomato.

Cosmos, a French scientific review, says that a South American farmer has recently made an accidental discovery of great value to gardeners and florists. It was to the effect that leaves of the tomato plant will drive insects away from other plants. He covered the tomato leaves over some young shrubs he wished to protect from the sun and from small insects, and was delighted to find that the latter cleared out as soon as they got the odor of the tomato leaves. He then extended the same treatment to an entire row of young peach trees, and his success was complete. To render the process more simple he tried a decoction of the fresh tomato leaves as a spray on other trees and shrubs, and found that he had a perfectly effective weapon. He also found that a spray of the same kind would keep flies off his horses.

Care of Heifers.

The development of a heifer depends very much on the intelligence of the owner. Some owners indulge in a fattening, others in a starvation policy. By the latter the animal is stunted and its digestion impaired, so that it is little good for any particular purpose; by the former she is fit only for the butcher. If you feed on grass, which is a flesh and fat producing food, she may be expected to yield little else than tallow. Abundance of succulent, nutritious food will stimulate the glands that carry the milk. Ensilage is good feed for heifers, mixed with a dry clover hay, or wheat bran mixed with corn ensilage is better.

And then a heifer should be bred early, and if she drops her first calf at a year and a half old she will be all the better milker. She should be fed liberally with food that will make growth rather than fatten. Do not feed with corn, but some oats may be given, if the milk production is large enough to keep the heifer thin in flesh. As already stated, intelligence is needed in the development of a heifer to a profitable dairy cow. Every farmer should give the matter more thought than has heretofore been the case, bearing in mind that fall calves thrive better and make better cows than those dropped in the spring.

The Soil Over Underdrains.

Always in digging an underdrain the lowest subsoil, often cold, hard and without vegetable mould, is more or less mixed with that dug near the surface, and which is usually richer. In filling the ditch this mixture continues, so that the soil that was dug from the bottom of the ditch may often be in the last spadeful thrown in. Yet we never knew this to make any difference. Always crops of any kind show a better growth directly over the drain than they do on either side, even during the first season's growth. After a year or two the good effect of the drain extends to land on either side, as the soil freezes deeper when surplus water is removed from it, and the roots of plants can go deeper for moisture or plant food.

Apples for Cooking.

There are many sour apples that contain more saccharine matter than those that are called "sweet" only because they lack acidity. And there is some malic acid in the varieties that are called sweet. It is the combination of sweet with acidity that makes the richest and best flavored apples either for eating raw or for cooking. Commonly, only those that are very distinctly acid have a good flavor when cooked, and they should be acid enough to require considerable sugar in cooking.

To Make Farming Pay.

While farmers with large areas sometimes claim that "farming don't pay," other farmers manage to live and save something on ten acres. One of the successful farmers on a small farm made it a rule when he went to market to bring home more money than he carried. His rule was to endeavor to sell, in value, more than he purchased, and to grow everything on the farm for his own use that the land would produce.

Farm Notes.

Fire is the best agent to use in getting rid of insects and their eggs. Every limb removed and all leaves and refuse under the trees should be burned, and lime scattered on the surface of the ground.

Some growers burn the strawberry beds as soon as the ground is frozen, and then mulch the rows with clean straw or salt hay. By so doing weeds that have died down are cleared away and many seeds on the surface of the ground are destroyed.

It does not always pay to hold potatoes over, as hauling, shrinkage and decay during the time they are held will more than offset the extra price unless prices are very high. Then there is storage room to provide and labor incurred to caring for the tubers during the winter.

Ornamental trees serve to beautify a homestead and perform the part of windbreaks, but they pay because they add to the value of the farm. Paint is also a valuable adjunct in farming, as it gives the buildings an attractive appearance and assists in preserving them.

The importance of using plenty of seed may be mentioned from the fact that only 30 per cent. germinates on the average. The conditions of the soil, kind of seed, its age, and depth of planting must be considered, but the rule to be observed is to use rather more seed than too little.

An excellent time to select seed corn is when it is being husked. All seed corn should be kept in a dry place, and if hung up where the air can circulate through it, so much the better. In some sections seed corn is injured in winter by severe cold, but this danger is not so great if the seed is kept dry.

A special crop for the use of poultry is millet seed. The use of such seed for that purpose increases the number of eggs and enables the farmer to get a good price for his seed by keeping large numbers of hens. The yield is about twenty bushels per acre, and it can be grown on nearly all kinds of soils.

The amount of green food that can be grown on one acre is enormous. Experiments have shown that on an acre there may be grown 14 tons of peas, 24 tons of peas and oats (grown together), 37 tons of green corn, and 3 tons of second-growth clover. An acre of green food will provide more than will 5 acres of ordinary pasture.

STATE OF MICHIGAN.

OCCURRENCES DURING THE PAST WEEK.

October Report Places Michigan's Wheat Yield at 33,083,216 Bushels—Lumber Business Shows Good Prospects—Machine Agent Robbed.

The Michigan crop report for October says that the number of acres of growing wheat in the State last spring, as returned by supervisors of the farm statistics, was 1,730,224; the average yield per acre as found by threshing is 19.12 bushels, and the total yield in the State 33,083,216 bushels. The average per acre in the southern counties is 19.36 bushels; in the central, 19.00, and in the northern, 15.02 bushels. The average per acre in the State is .52 bushels, and in the southern counties .55 bushels, less than the September estimates. The total number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers since the September report was published is 2,154,884, and in the two months, August and September, 3,807,281. This is 232,240 bushels more than reported marketed in the same months last year. Oats are estimated to yield 31.75 bushels, and corn 58 bushels of ears. Potatoes are estimated to yield 68 per cent. The percentages for winter apples are: Southern counties 47, central 77, northern 72, and State 56. The percentages for late peaches are: Southern counties 82, central 73, northern 92, and State 81. One year ago the figures for the southern counties were 8, and State 12.

Lumber Prospects Good.

The lumbering season is opening unusually early throughout the Lake Superior district, a number of camps having been established. The lumber business has picked up wonderfully this year and with demand brisk and stocks smaller than for five years everyone engaged in the lumber trade feels encouraged over the prospects. There is a scarcity of men and experienced hands will get higher wages than usual.

Hog Cholera Prevalent.

Hog cholera is prevalent around Rockwood and seems to be more destructive than ever before in that part of the State. John Wells, a prominent farmer, has lost over $200 worth of hogs from this dreaded disease, while ex-Lieut. Gov. John Strong has lost between one and two hundred from his large stock farm.

Struck Down by a Robber.

Amos Conn, agent for the Osborne Machine Company, who lives near Taylor Center, was struck down by a robber in his barn and robbed of about $200. As he stepped out of the stable door he was struck on the top of the head and knocked senseless.

Thefts at Lee.

Burglars broke into the postoffice and the ticket office of the Chicago and West Michigan Railroad at Lee and stole about $20 of the postal money, and all the postage stamps and $10 of the railroad company's money.

She Loves Birds.

The dowager, empress of China is devoted to birds of all kinds, and innumerable bird pets are kept about the palace. She is reported to have wept copiously about the death of a favorite nightingale not long ago. Upon being told of a Chinese girl who had complained bitterly of the dreariness of life this exalted lady remarked sagely that a woman ought to take so much pride in her home that it could be a heaven to her, adding, "There are always birds and flowers." She is a clever artist and delights in painting from nature.

CHAPTER XXVII.

As Delia reaches the second window she tells Jane to re-enter the house and watch the sleeping man for her. As soon as ever the girl disappeared, she is on the sill and through the open casement.

Yes, here is the same room in which her last interview was held with the old clerk of Chilton; and there stands his bed, with the immortal package on the top of it. She sits down, and, taking out a pair of scissors provided for the purpose, commences to unroll the stitching of the wrappers. She has never calculated on the difficulty of her task. The box, or boxes, or whatever the contents may be, have been stitched and re-stitched with thick twine, so that the old man appears to have spent days over his task. At last, by dint of blunted implements and bruised fingers, Delia has succeeded in removing the outer wrapper of American cloth, when she finds herself confronted by a second one of druggist or haize, as hard to work through as the first.

She tries to cut right through the center of the package, but some hard substance resists the scissors; she must have patience and proceed by degrees.

As she has half-unrolled the second covering, however, she is startled by a noise upon the uncarpeted stairs—the sound of approaching footsteps stumbling up the narrow gangway. What can it be? Is it possible that Strother can have awakened from his slumber and had his suspicions aroused by her absence? She flies to the casement which looks out upon the front. It is true! He has left his chair, and a key is already grating and twisting about in the keyhole of the door.

Delia has no time for consideration—no time to do anything but to escape by the way she came, so leaving the "package" in the state to which she had reduced it, and not waiting even to recover her fallen scissors, she leaps to the window sill, and is down the steps and standing on the gravel path before an eye had seen her proceedings.

Her next effort is to place the steps where she found them, and thence to proceed, flushed and panting, into the front kitchen, where Jane is quietly seated, shelling broad-beans, with her half-sovereign laid on the table beside her.

"The old gentleman's gone through up to his room," are the first words with which she placidly greets Delia. "My goodness! what's that?"

She alludes to a loud scream, like the note of an angry ape in pain, which proceeds from Strother's chamber. Delia knows full well what it is, and prepares to fly from further questioning. But the old man's ravings reach them but too distinctly.

"What's been in my room?" he cries. "What's daunted to touch my package? Let me find the carle and I'll wring his neck for him. I'll ken what's daunted to fash me. I was awley if the garden takin' a wee drap o' whusky, and nabeody has been if the house but Jean. It main be that huzzy Jean. Here, Jean, Jean!"

"You had better go to the old man and quiet him, Jane," says Delia. "Tell him no one has been in his room. How could they, with the door locked?—Em afraid I may have given him a little too much whisky. Do what you can with him, and I'll go and tell Miss Patsy, whom I see coming up the garden, all about it."

Miss Patsy does not think anything of the affair. Mrs. Manners is "main" good, she says, to trouble about "the old hunk," but one never dreams of attending to anything he says or does. He's as "daff" as any lunatic in the county asylum.

"And where have you been, Patsy?" "I've been to meet my young man, ma'am," says Patsy, with a blush and a smile. "For, you see, it is our harvest-home supper to-night, and if he was to miss it all the fun of the evening would be gone for me."

"Naturally. Where is your supper to be held?" "Up at the big barn in the poplar field. I suppose it would be no use asking ye to join us, ma'am. Likely parson will be there. He mostly looks in at the harvest-ing suppers."

"No, Patsy, thank you; I am too tired to-day. Besides, Mr. and Mrs. Bond are in London and I have the cottage to look after. But I hope you will have a very pleasant evening and that your young man will be sure to be there."

She gets away as soon as she can after that, for she is disappointed at the failure of her afternoon experiment and fears lest she may have marred her chances of success by her precipitancy. But as she sits alone in the evening thinking over these things it suddenly occurs to her that in all probability old Strother will have gone up to the harvesting supper with his friends and the coast be once more clear.

She never thought of asking Patsy Kennett whether her grandfather would be included among the guests, but it is worth going up to the farm to see if it is the case or no. As soon as this idea strikes Delia she puts it into execution. It is ten o'clock; but what is ten o'clock for a walk along a country lane, with the harvest moon lighting up each object as bright as day?

When she has traversed half its distance her eye is attracted by something that glitters in the hedgerow. Delia stoops to pick it up and finds, to her astonishment, that it is the same glass flask she presented to the old Scotchman that afternoon.

It is like the old man's surly ingratitude to throw it away, she thinks; but how on earth did it come here? She holds it in her hand as she walks on wondering, but can come to no better conclusion than that Strother may have commissioned some child to fetch him whisky in it with the money she gave him, and the messenger, cognizant of the old man's weakness of intellect, has been unfaithful to his trust.

But as she reaches the farmhouse another light is thrown upon the circumstance. She is met by the servant Jane, howling loudly, after the fashion of the lower orders when in distress, and wringing her hands.

"Gracious heavens!" exclaims Delia, "what is the matter?"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The matter was that old Strother had taken his bundle and gone off with it. As soon as Delia hears the news she says rapidly to the servant:

"You must stay here and I will go in search of him and bring him back with me if I can."

As Delia hurries along, her thoughts are all in confusion, and she is only sure of one thing—that she must follow after that parcel, if the quest takes her to the other side of the world. One precaution only will she observe, to scribble a few lines in pencil on the back of a card, and give it to the purblind housekeeper at the rectory, who she knows cannot read, to deliver to Mr. Le Mesurier as soon as he returns.

She walks so quickly that she has arrived at the little town of St. Alders before she thinks she is half way there. The railway station is on the outskirts of the town, and the state of activity it appears to be in emboldens Delia to go straight there and make inquiries for the object of her search. She finds the narrow platform quite crowded with passengers, and a truck full of luggage bars her entrance for the space of half a second. It is evident a train is momentarily expected. As she enters the booking office, a clerk thrusts his face out at the ticket office.

"Now, then, miss—where for? Winchester, Basingstoke, Waterloo?"

"No, thank you! I only came to ask if an old man, very bent and decrepit, and shabbily dressed, with a large parcel, has been seen here this evening? He has left his home, and his friends are very much distressed about him."

"Don't know nothink about it, miss; better ask the station master," says the ticket clerk, abruptly, as he bangs down the window.

"Oh! where is the station master?" exclaims Delia to every one within hearing.

"Do you think the lady can mean the little peddler looking fellow who carried a box, or summat, on his back, and spoke such broad Scotch, Bill?" demands an official, who has overheard her conversation, of another.

"Yes, yes! that is he!" replied Delia, eagerly. "An old man, with his hair half red and half white, and with a freckled skin, and velvet suit. He is mad. I must find out where he's gone to!"

"Well, if so be this was the old gentleman you're in search of, miss, he booked himself by the 8.10 for Winchester, where he must have been landed full an hour ago."

"When does the next train leave for Winchester, then?"

"Why, this here's the Winchester train as is alongside now! Last one to-night, too—the eleven express to London. She won't stop again now, except at Winchester and Basingstoke, till she's run through to Waterloo."

"Put me in a carriage! I must follow that man at all risks!"

"You'll have to look sharp if you want to leave by this train. Have you got your ticket?"

"I'll pay at the other end!" cries Delia, as she leaps into the carriage, the door of which is just about to be closed with a bang, and finds the train at the moment moving off in the direction of Winchester.

In three-quarters of an hour she finds herself at her destination. As she pays her railway fare, she tries to extract some information from the ticket collector. Her best plan, he says, guessing her station in life, will be to put up at the George Inn, in High street, and place her inquiries in the hands of the parish authorities in the morning.

The night porter receives her in the hall of the George Inn, although the house is not yet shut up. She sleeps well and peacefully. She is up with the morning's light.

As she sits at breakfast a card is put into her hand, which is inscribed to her surprise, with the name of "Le Mesurier."

In another moment the friends are together.

"Is it really my business that has brought you over here?" cries Delia. "How good and kind of you! I never thought my message would have such an effect."

"What other effect did you anticipate, Mrs. Manners? When I returned home last night and received your card I considered it my duty to follow and offer you my protection. What can you mean by running about the country at dead of night, in this harum-scarum way? What good did you expect to do by it?"

"I don't know; but I traced Strother to Winchester, and I felt that I must follow him. How did you ascertain that I was here?"

"As soon as I got your message I walked after you to St. Alders; but the station was closed. So I sat there till the morning, and came on by the first train. The porters told me all about you and the 'Scotch peddler' you were inquiring after; so I knew I was on the right track. And once at Winchester it was easy to guess I should find you at the George Inn. Everybody who comes to Winchester goes to the George."

"Oh! Mr. Le Mesurier, do you think we shall find him?"

"Sooner or later, there is no doubt we shall; but I question whether we can do much in a day. What are your plans?"

She tells him of her desire to consult a magistrate, and he considers it the best thing she can do.

"But be advised by me. Let me save you the trouble of walking all over the town for nothing. Rest quietly here, and I will go out and make the necessary inquiries. Then if your presence is required I will return and fetch you."

STATE STREET IN CHICAGO DURING THE JUBILEE ILLUMINATION.

CHICAGO'S PEACE PARADE.

Great Military and Civ'c Display a Climax to the Jubilee Festivities.

The crowning spectacular feature of the week's peace jubilee celebration in Chicago occurred Wednesday, when the great military and civil parade passed through the streets of the business section, and was reviewed from a stand in front of the Union League Club by the President, Gen. Miles, Shafter and Chaffee, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, the Chinese and Korean ministers and other dignitaries.

The weather was very disagreeable, threatening rain at any moment, with a cutting wind from the lake, which chilled the sightseers not extra warmly clothed. But these things seemed to have no effect on the numbers and enthusiasm of the throngs which packed the sidewalks throughout the entire line of march, filled the numerous stands and every available point of view from the windows and roofs of tall buildings on either side. A wave of cheers greeted the marchers in line, particularly the military part of it, and more peculiarly the soldiers and sailors returned from Cuba.

At 9 o'clock in the morning the police hustled every vehicle off the streets, including the street cars, in the entire district between Van Buren street on the south and the river on the north, the lake on the east and the river on the west, and they were kept off till the parade was over.

The storm of the previous three days had marred the decorations, but they were mostly restored and the entire district was ablaze with bunting. It is estimated that thirty thousand men were in line.

BALL NETS A LARGE SUM.

Needy Soldiers Will Benefit from Chicago's Society Function.

Twenty-two thousand dollars was raised for the families of the soldiers and sailors who are in straitened circumstances as a result of the late war by the Chicago jubilee ball at the Auditorium. It was a brilliant and enthusiastic society function, graced by the presence of the President of the United States, army and navy heroes, and many other notables. The gowns of the women were of the richest, and the uniforms and peculiar, highly colored costumes added attractiveness to the scene. The welcome accorded President McKinley was hearty and prolonged. The President's boxes and those occupied by the diplomatic corps were draped with flags.

SKINNING HUMAN BODIES.

Excitement at San Francisco Over Doings of Medical Students.

San Francisco is somewhat excited over the revelations concerning the skinning of bodies at the Cooper Medical Institute, the medical department of the State University, and the dissecting room of the city and county hospital. According to indisputable evidence young physicians in the employ of the health department of the city and students at the medical schools mentioned have been engaged in the ghastly practice of skinning cadavers for months past, and regular stations have been located where the skins are taken to be tanned and manufactured into leopards.

MIXED FLOUR AGAIN DEFINED.

Revenue Bureau Modifies Regulations of Manufacture.

The internal revenue bureau has issued a circular modifying the regulations governing the manufacture and sale of mixed flour. Under the new ruling wheat flour must be the principal constituent in the mixture. The circular also provides that any card or advertising matter for insertion in a package of mixed flour must first be approved by the commissioner of internal revenue, and must not be of such character as to deceive the consumer as to the contents of the package.

DEWEY REMAINS ON GUARD.

Was Asked to Go to Paris, but Will Stay at Manila.

Secretary Long said that the reports that Admiral Dewey would return to the United States were erroneous, as the Navy Department had no such information. It has been suggested to Admiral Dewey several times that he go to Paris to advise the American peace commission on the situation in the Philippines, but he has adhered to his purpose to remain at Manila until the Philippine question has been settled or all danger of trouble there has passed.

Novel Court Decision.

A novel decision has been given by a New York jury in the Supreme Court in the suit of Mrs. Grace Frezevant against Mrs. Mary L. Prozevant, claiming $30,000 for alienating her husband's affections. The verdict was as follows: "A rich woman cannot alienate the affections of another woman's husband if he is poor. For, being poor, he will try to win the affections of the rich woman, and she should not further suffer, pecuniarily, if she reciprocates the poor man's love, real or pretended."

NABS A BAD GANG.

Sheriff After a Desperate Battle, Captures Kansas Robbers.

After a desperate fight, lasting nearly three hours, Sheriff Mackey of Salina County, Kansas, and his posse of five deputies made the most important capture of bank robbers that has been made in years. The officers believe they have the gang that has been causing so much trouble all over the State, especially the western part, within the past two months. "Blackey Clark," one of the robbers, and who is thought to be the most noted crook, was fatally shot in the back, and others of the gang were wounded. Deputy Sheriff Lykens was hit in the arm by a bullet.

Each party was partially sheltered by trees, and over 300 rounds of ammunition were used. The battle took place in the edge of the timber just out of Salina, where the robbers, who were mounted, had been to purchase feed and ammunition. Sheriff Mackey called to the robbers to halt, but they returned his request with a volley which felled the sheriff's horse. He got behind the dead animal and the officers opened fire. "Blackey Clark" was the first one hit, and with a shriek he fell. His comrades, under a hot fire, rushed out and brought him to a place of safety, where he lay until the robbers finally surrendered.

NAVY IN NEED OF MORE MEN.

Department Wants to Re-Establish the Foreign Stations.

The Navy Department is hampered in its desire to re-establish the foreign naval stations by the limited number of full-time men in the service. The enlisted force now includes about 8,000 men, who enlisted for the war only, and it is necessary to keep them on the North Atlantic or home station on account of the probability that peace will soon be officially declared, and they will be entitled to their discharge papers. Nearly all of the 12,500 long-term men of the regular navy are with Dewey's fleet or on battleships of the North Atlantic station. It will be necessary to place some of the armored vessels out of commission if the ships are sent to foreign stations, and the department wants to keep all battleships and armored cruisers in active service.

BANK DOORS CLOSED.

German National of Pittsburgh Goes Into Liquidation.

The German National Bank of Pittsburgh has closed its doors. The directors, in a public statement, announce that the bank is solvent and that all depositors will be paid in full. The suspension of the bank can be traced directly to two causes—the carrying of too many securities of the Natalie Coal and Coke Company and heavy loans to Charles Burkholder, until recently cashier, and Adolphus Grotzinger, the present president, on insufficient collateral. The suspension of the bank was precipitated by the confession on Monday last of Adolphus William C. and O. H. Grotzinger and A. Grotzinger & Sons to Edward Grotzinger of judgments aggregating $490,725.42.

A SCENE OF HORROR.

SLAUGHTERING A CRIMINAL BY THE GUILLOTINE IN PARIS.

A Woman's Description of the Shocking Spectacle That Always Attracts the Outcasts of the French Capital.
After the Fatal Knife Has Fallen.

In these rushing times we might take for our motto "Something New." Consequently, I imagine that the impressions of a woman at the foot of the guillotine would not be commonplace. I was present at one performance in the Place de la Roquette, where M. de Paris and his assistants officiated in the name of so-called justice. The horrible spectacle haunts and racks the mind and tends rather to re-enforce the partisans of the abolition of capital punishment. The horror of the punishment imposed renders a guilty man almost worthy of pity. The sight of a human being, dragged like a beast to the slaughter house, up even to the sinister seasaw, is terrible.

I know many people may be astonished that anybody could be moved to pity for the ferocious brute, Carrara, who transformed his mushroom establishment into a crematory and had no mercy for the unfortunate young man, Lammarra, whom he threw into the fire after having murdered him for the purpose of robbery. I know all that, and I do not dispute the fact that the Italian was a monster, but that is no reason why we should not be disgusted at the spectacle which was presented to our eyes and which I will now endeavor to describe with the impartiality of a simple spectator, without resentment or prejudice, but with a heart that revolts against a scene that has neither the grandeur nor the majesty of a punishment inflicted, but rather exhibits the cowardice and baseness of a vengeance which hides itself from the light of day.

The execution was fixed for 4 o'clock in the morning, but from the hour of midnight the neighborhood of the Grande Roquette was swarming with an undulating and mocking crowd. Jailbirds, murderers, footpads and women of the streets assembled there to see, as they said, "the Italian animal short-ened."

Journalists were admitted into the narrow space so often described, with its five sinister stones and its legendary gas jet which is never lighted except on the evening before an execution.

There in the rain we watched the setting up of that horrible machine which, according to the legend, Cagliostro showed in a glass of clear water to the terrified Marie Antoinette. In the yellow and spectral light of the gas jet that flickered in the wind these preparations were hideous to witness. Almost on a level with the ground stands the scaffold with its two arms in the air brandishing the sparkling knife.

And I, a woman, in the presence of these preparations, could not help thinking of the family of the wretch whose head was soon to fall into the basket. I thought of his little children, who were at that moment sleeping soundly somewhere, and of his wife, equally guilty with him, and who, as it were, pushed her husband into the arms of the executioner as a last resort to save herself. What remorse will be hers when they tell her abruptly: "Carrara has suffered his punishment. You are a widow!"

But the day was dawning, and the lamps were going out. At the windows and even on the roofs numbers of spectators were gathered as if to witness some carnival. The sight was heart-rending. Mounted gendarmes and soldiers gradually came out of the darkness, and one might be inclined to rail at such a display of force at the execution of a wretch paralyzed by fear, who in a few moments would appear upon the scene tied hand and foot.

There was some little commotion among the crowd when people began to point at a thin, old man who hobbled about with the gestures of a dancing jack to see if the knife in the brass runners was in good working order. This was Deibler, the executioner, a ghost with a white beard, who adjusted the instrument with the indifference of a grocer weighing his goods. Suddenly there was profound silence; the rain was over, heads were uncovered and motionless. Breathless and almost in agony the crowd followed with staring eyes the movement of the doors of the prison, which at last opened wide.

A suppressed "Ah!" came from many contracted chests, while with pale faces all gazed upon the assassin, whose crime the mountebanks of the fairs popularized. He was simply frightful to look at, bowed down as he was with terror. He did not look like a human being. He looked like a beast. His intelligence was already dead and his heart had lost all feeling. The instinct of the animal still remained. The sight was dreadfully sad.

What followed beggars description. The executioner and his aids seemed no longer to be men employed to carry out the ends of justice; they looked like butchers. They seized the condemned man, some by the ears, some by the legs, while others held down the center of the body and kept holding him up to the very moment when, with a sudden rumble, the knife fell, the head rebounded into the basket and the abomination was at an end.

But one should be present and see the pavements covered with blood, the gory knife, the blood spurting from the decapitated trunk, the ignominious washing at the nearby fountain and the gutters rolling to the sewer a purple colored mud, in order to be able to comprehend all the horrors of an execution in Paris.—Exchange.

A CLEVER TRICK.
It certainly looks like it, but there is really no trick about it. Anybody can try it who has a lame back and weak kidneys, malaria or nervous troubles. We mean he can cure himself right away by taking Electric Bitters. This medicine tones up the whole system, acts as a stimulant to liver and kidneys, is a blood purifier and nerve tonic. It cures constipation, headache, fainting spells, sleeplessness and melancholy. It is purely vegetable, a mild laxative, and restores the system to its natural vigor. Try Electric Bitters and be convinced that they are a miracle worker. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50c a bottle at Glazier and Stimson's drug store.

How Do You Feed Your Stove?
—by the shovelful or the bucketful? The old idea that it was necessary to fill a stove with fuel to keep it hot has been made obsolete by JEWEL Stoves and Ranges. They produce a greater volume of heat with a smaller amount of fuel because they are constructed on strictly scientific principles. They are most durable, and give the best service because they are made of the best material to be procured. They are most satisfactory in every way, because they embody the latest and best ideas requisite to stove efficiency. There is no fault to be found with JEWEL Stoves and Ranges. Famous for over thirty years. Over 3,000,000 now in use. Ask your dealer for them and look for the trade mark.

THE GREAT

FOUR-C REMEDY

FOR

LA GRIPPE.

For Sale by R. S. Armstrong & Co.

What if Not Miracles?

The great Four-C Remedy is doing work wherever introduced as nearly miraculously as it ever falls to the lot of any human agency to do (I will esteem it a favor for any one interested to write the persons whose names appear below or anyone whose name may appear among these testimonials.)

My aim is to convince the public of my sincerity and of the true merits of this remedy.

BENEFACTORS OF THE RACE.

Office of "KINGFISHER TIMES,"
Kingfisher, Okla., Dec. 12, '98.

GENTLEMEN:—I believe it my duty to write you in regard to the beneficial effect of Phelps' Four-C Remedy, so far as I am personally concerned. A week ago last Thursday, I was taken with a severe attack of la grippe and in a short time became so hoarse I could not speak above a whisper. The night previous I had coughed nearly the entire night; just before retiring I took a teaspoonful, and slept the entire night as sweetly as ever I did in my life, not coughing once. I was utterly relieved before taking one bottle. Phelps' Cough, Cold and Croup Cure should be in every household in the land. I send you this wholly unsolicited by anyone, for you are benefactors of the race in giving it the antidote for some of the worst afflictions to which it is heir.

Very Truly Yours,
C. J. NABBITT, Editor.

A MIRACLE.

Kansas City, Kansas, Dec. 24, '91
Last Friday, Dec. 19, my attending physician stated unless I was better by morning he could do nothing for my relief. That night I commenced taking Phelps' "Four-C" remedy, stopped all other medicines. The first dose stopped my cough; slept and rested well; a few more doses removed all soreness from my lungs; the second day I was up; the third day I was out on the porch and to-day was up town purchasing holiday goods.

NOTICE TO DRUGGISTS AND THE PUBLIC.

CONTRACT.—Druggists are authorized in ALL CASES TO REFUND THE PURCHASE PRICE, if the Four-C Remedy (Phelps' Cough, Cold and Croup Cure) fails to give satisfaction in Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, La Grippe, Coughs and Colds, matter how long standing, or deep seated, in fact I guarantee in all manner Bronchial or Lung trouble, not as a Cure-All, but to give unbounded satisfaction. Give it a trial on the above conditions. I take all chances.
