TOILERS ARE SLAIN.

Terrible Disaster on a Railway in New Jersey.

During a Dense Fog a Train Plunges Into a Gang of Track Laborers—Twelve Are Killed and Several Hurt.

New York, Nov. 19.—During a dense fog a Pennsylvania train ran upon a gang of workmen on the Hackensack Meadow.

It is now definitely known that twelve men were killed and five injured.

Thomas Dougherty was supposed to be on the lookout for approaching trains. He was a considerable distance up the track from the gang of laborers, and he evidently did not see the train, for he gave no warning. His body was hurled 90 feet through the air.

Was Making Up Lost Time.

The train which ran down the workmen was a local from Milltown to Jersey City, due in Jersey City at 8:20 a. m. The fog delayed the train and Engineer John Van Ostrand was endeavoring to make up time. His train was running at a high rate of speed, he believing there was nothing to obstruct a quick run to Jersey City. The first he knew that his train had run into the men was when the engine jarred. Then the cries of the men were heard and he as soon as possible brought his train to a stop.

A Horrible Sight.

Engineer Van Nostrand, speaking of the moment when his engine plowed into the mass of cowering men who stood huddled together on the track, said: "It was an awful sight. There was a mass of legs and arms and heads flying through the air. I was drenched with blood. I knew that something terrible had happened and put on the air brakes as hard as possible. The track was drenched in blood. The meadows and the track looked like a battlefield covered with bodies. The shrieks of the dying drowned the cries of the horrified passengers. Women fainted and men turned away in horror."

Not One Escaped.

There were 20 men in the gang, and it is reported that not one escaped injury. They were in charge of Foreman William Cork, of Jersey City.

As soon as the news of the accident reached Jersey City Pennsylvania railroad officials went to the Meadows and superintended the removal of the dead and injured.

When the engine which struck the laborers reached the Pennsylvania depot in Jersey City the cowcatcher was red with blood from the men killed. A boy, after the engine had stopped, picked up a hand from the cowcatcher.

Double Wreck on the Rock Island.

Wilton, Ia., Nov. 19.—Twenty-two men were more or less injured in two railway wrecks near here Friday during a heavy fog. In a head-end freight collision on the Rock Island at Moscow, Brakeman John Donahue was fatally hurt. Brakeman Marshall Miller, had a leg broken. Three other trainmen were seriously injured. Donahue did not long survive. His injured comrades are being cared for at the Hotel Ludlow here by the company's surgeons. Just after the Moscow accident, a construction train which left here to clear the wreck was struck by the fast mail train. The crew of the mail train failed to see the signal displayed at Wilton to stop. The construction train had on board about 20 men, including section men and citizens of Wilton, going to the scene of the Moscow wreck. Of this number 17 were more or less seriously injured, but none were killed. Conductor Roberts, of Rock Island, was badly crushed. The fireman of the fast mail, John Neiswanger, of Davenport, was badly injured by jumping from his engine. The others injured include William McIntyre, leg broken, and Frank Anken, leg and arm broken.

Ends Its Annual Session in Indianapolis—Outline of the Resolutions Adopted.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 19.—The American Republican College league closed its seventh annual session Friday afternoon. The next meeting will be held at Philadelphia just after the national election of 1900. A resolution was adopted upholding Secretary Alger, who is a strong friend of the league, and denouncing his villainous slanders; also praising President McKinley; indorsing "that gallant soldier, brilliant statesman and champion of clean and popular government, the type of American patriotism, Theodore Roosevelt," and demanding safe currency reform legislation and student suffrage.

CONSULTING A WOMAN.

Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Inspires Confidence and Hope.

Examination by a male physician is a hard trial to a delicately organized woman.

She puts it off as long as she dare, and is only driven to it by fear of cancer, polyusus, or some dreadful ill.

Most frequently such a woman leaves a physician's office where she has undergone a critical examination with an impression, more or less, of discouragement.

This condition of the mind destroys the effect of advice; and she grows worse rather than better. In consulting Mrs. Pinkham no hesitation need be felt, the story is told to a woman and is wholly confidential. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., she offers sick women her advice without charge.

Her intimate knowledge of women's troubles makes her letter of advice a wellspring of hope, and her wide experience and skill point the way to health.

"I suffered with ovarian trouble for seven years, and no doctor knew what was the matter with me. I had spells which would last for two days or more. I thought I would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken seven bottles of it, and am entirely cured."—MRS. JOHN FOREMAN, 29 N. Woodberry Ave., Baltimore, Md.

THEIR ONLY DAUGHTER

A Thanksgiving Story.

NOVEMBER had set in as usual, with dull gray skies and chilly, penetrating winds. Up the broad avenue that led to the Dillingham residence the dead leaves whirled and eddied and settled with many a melancholy flutter into their annual graves, while the tall trees tossed their bare arms about, as if lamenting the loss of these cheery little harbingers of spring and summer. In vain; winter stood rejoicing upon the threshold of autumn's decline, impatient to begin his reign.

In the house beyond, however, all was bright and charming with glowing fires and soft, mellow lights. Geoffrey Dillingham and his wife sat in the library, she with a beseeching look in her gentle eyes, he with a slight annoyance on his.

"So you wish me to invite your people here for Thanksgiving?" he queried, almost harshly. "I tell you, Elizabeth, it's impossible."

"But why, Geoffrey?" returned his wife, with a little catch in her soft voice, "only think, we've been married seven years, and you've never asked them here once!" a moment's silence. "And they feel it," she added, in a faltering tone, "and so do I. After all, they're my parents, dear."

Geoffrey Dillingham frowned and turned again to his desk. Scarcely he had stopped suddenly, and wheeling around abruptly, he faced his wife.

"And if they are," he began, "I feel that I have repaid them in a measure for the loss of you; from poverty I've placed them in comparative ease. What more do they want?" he demanded, irritably.

"But you forget, Geoffrey," returned his wife, gently. "They love me, too." Her husband pushed his papers aside impatiently.

"If you please, Elizabeth," he said, curtly, "we'll dismiss the subject. As to Thanksgiving day, I've already invited Wilson and his family to dinner." Wilson was his law partner. Elizabeth Dillingham smothered a heavy sigh and rose to leave the room; her hand was on the door when her husband called her.

"Come here, Elizabeth," he said, peremptorily, yet with a nameless tenderness. She came and stood near him, a slight, beautiful figure, in her clinging gown of black. He drew her down upon his knee and kissed her with sudden passion. "You know I love you, child," he said, pressing the fair head closely to his breast. "Am I not enough?"

"But I want them, too," cried his wife, with quivering lips.

The tenderness upon her husband's face died suddenly away. "I have told you, Elizabeth," he answered coldly, turning to his desk. Truly heredity isn't everything. That anything so beautiful as Elizabeth Dillingham should emanate from the Tracy family was little short of a miracle. When Geoffrey Dillingham, at 33, saw Elizabeth Tracy, at 18, he loved her. Yes, aristocrat, autocrat, courted and wealthy as he was, something about her touched a responsive chord in his heart of hearts, heretofore unreachd, and he resolved to win her. But her family! He groaned in spirit as he thought of allying the proud name of Dillingham with that of Tracy—but Elizabeth was so beautiful, and as pure as she was lovely.

The second time he ever saw his prospective father-in-law, the old man wore a battered straw hat and an old pair of jeans; he was on the street, retelling a story with great gusto to a crowd of loungers, punctuated by peals of laughter. Geoffrey Dillingham passed by, holding his head erect, and looking neither to the right nor left. His clothes were well-fitting, and in his immaculate shirt front a splendid diamond scintillated in the rays of the sun.

"That the chap that's payin' tention to your Lizzie?" asked old Elihu Stafford.

Ephraim's knife dropped noisily to the ground; he stooped to pick it up before he answered.

"That's the chap," he answered, somewhat mechanically.

Ephraim Tracy and his wife were decidedly common people; shiftless, the neighbors called him, for the old man had a predilection for telling stories, as I have said, and retelling them from a goods box in Hobb's grocery. He always had an audience, for he was as full of humor "as an egg is of meat," and he had a quaint way of expressing himself that was irresistibly funny. He was a little man, pretty well advanced in years, with a kindly, wrinkled face, a back somewhat bent, serene, benignant eyes. In a sort of desultory fashion he managed to keep soul and body together, and that was about all. He could turn his hand at almost anything, however.

When a good wife of the neighboring hood wanted a screen door made or a lock fixed, she always sent for Eph-raim. He was not lazy, and the word shiftlessness ought never to have been applied to him. Perhaps it was because he was always working on inventions that were sure to make him rich, but when it came to the test the models always refused to work. But so far as throwing him into the slough of despond, happily his failures had no such effect; with unabated sweetness of nature, he would fall to work on something else, and continue to retail his stories with as keen a relish as ever.

If he was lacking in pride for himself, he had an abundance for his daughter Elizabeth, or Lizzie, as he fondly called her, which affection Elizabeth fully reciprocated. In spite of the fact that he was not a success, he was a general favorite with everyone, and if he was not imbued with any great ambition, his family never blamed him, not even his wife, who accepted him as he was.

He had lived always in the same village, consequently his two sons, Jim and Andrew, grew up there, and Judson, too, whom nobody counted, because he wasn't bright, but old Ephraim Tracy never would acknowledge it himself. "Jud's got a heap more sense 'n people give him credit for," he always would say, and Jud would smile and nod his head well pleased. Poor Jud, whose blue eyes never lost their childish look.

In the little backyard, the children's playhouse stood yet, where Jud, with a man's body and a child's soul, played happily by the hour.

Elizabeth came next, the youngest of the family. Where she got her beauty, no one could understand. That she possessed it, everyone acknowledged. All the family pinched and saved to clothe and educate her

So in the Tracys' little home, made so desolate by Elizabeth's flitting, the invitation never came. Six months after Elizabeth's departure, old Ephraim Tracy came slowly home. It was evening, and already the first breath of spring could be detected in the soft air. He sat heavily down upon the little back porch looking more bowed than ever and his faded eyes were infinitely weary.

"Lizzie don't say nothin' about our visit, mother," he began.

Mrs. Tracy was busy getting supper, but she came out and sat down by him, taking his hand tenderly between her own.

"Don't you see through it, Ephraim?" said she, gently, avoiding the wistfulness of the troubled eyes. "We ain't Geoffrey Dillingham's kind of folks, and Elizabeth must do as he tells her, of course. I knew just how it would be; the child dassen't write, father."

A mist gathered in the old man's eyes, and he looked away to where the purple hills kissed the western sun. "The child dassen't write." And he was her father; yes, old, obscure, worthless as he was, she was his child, and Dillingham had taken her from him. He did not eat any supper that night, and after a time crept quietly off to bed.

Next to his father, poor Jud mourned after Elizabeth most, refusing to be comforted. Even the most dazzling bits of green and blue glass, brought to him by his affectionate little playmates, failed to please him, and for many weeks the play-house was deserted. The little fellow would rove in and out, a patient sorrow written in the childish eyes.

"Where's Lizzie, mother?" he would ask. "I believe she's dead."

"A DISPATCH HAS COME FROM DEXTER."

properly, and it was the proudest day of Jim's and Andrew's lives when they could contribute something toward Lizzie's schooling; and Elizabeth went to school and studied hard. She meant to be a teacher, she said. But, the summer she was 18, she met Geoffrey Dillingham, the leading lawyer in Dexter, a thriving manufacturing city a good hundred miles from Elizabeth's home. After a brief, impetuous wooing, they were married.

Geoffrey Dillingham, never, however, recalled his wedding day without a shudder. The plain little room with its cane-seated chairs, crocheted tidies, and cheap pictures, the tear-stained, homely faces, the two awkward young brothers, and loving Jud, whose gaudy necktie and ill-fitting best suit was to his untutored mind the very acme of elegance. It should be the last time he would be in their midst, he vowed. As to his future course, that was already marked out; Elizabeth would be ready to understand. He gave a great sigh of relief when the little cottage faded from his view and he was free to draw his lovely young wife to his side. Elizabeth threw her arms about her father's neck before the carriage started.

"Goody-by, father," she cried, pressing her fresh round cheek against his withered one. "You'll come and see me. I'll write, and—you know I love you, don't you?"

Her father loosened the clinging arms with a big sob in his throat. "Yes, yes, Lizzie, I know," he answered, tremulously. "There, there, be a good girl and go to your husband. God bless you both."

So when a few weeks afterward Elizabeth began to make happy plans for the promised visit, her husband, with cruel candor, told her:

"My guests must be of my choosing, Elizabeth," he said, "and I don't want to hurt you, but I can't have your parents here."

He never forgot the expression of the lovely eyes.

"Why, you're not ashamed of them, Geoffrey?" she cried, a hot flush staining the purity of her cheek, and he did not answer.

And his mother, hastily wiping her eye with a corner of her apron, would always answer:

"Dead—yes, she is to us, Juddie." And Jud would sigh, and the sun shining on the bits of broken glass failed to comfort him.

It had been seven years now since Elizabeth's wedding day. Only rarely did she visit home, and even then the visits were not satisfactory. Elizabeth knew, and they knew. Old Ephraim Tracy never went to the store when Lizzie came home; he would sit in his arm-chair and watch his beautiful daughter with adoring eyes. Once he came up and took the slender white hand, sparkling with rings, into his old knotted ones.

"Only to think of a Tracy having rings like that," he said, exultantly.

But Elizabeth suddenly burst into tears.

"I'd give them all, father, if only you and mother could be with me," she said.

The old man only pook-pooked at this, but it was noticed that he disappeared quickly, and some minutes afterwards they found him crying softly in the woodshed. Yet he never seemed to harbor any ill-will toward his son-in-law, but was proud of him in his quiet, unobtrusive way.

"I would like to see Lizzie's house," he said one day, looking across the same purple hills. "But mebbe it's all for the best; it's all for the best."

Geoffrey Dillingham, with all his faults, was not stingy, and the certain, generous checks that came from his hand to the Tracy family began to have their effect.

The term of shiftlessness that had been applied to Ephraim for so many years gradually lifted, and a certain air of prosperity began to pervade the hitherto bare little dwelling. But the cup had its bitter drop, you may be sure, for the Tracys never forgot that the giver of it all despised them in his heart, and they would gladly have returned to the pinch of poverty again, could they but have had their Lizzie back.

So the years rolled by, bending old Ephraim Tracy's back more and more, silvering the hair of Elizabeth's mother and deepening the childishness of Jud's wistful eyes.

"Seems like Ephraim's stories ain't nigh so funny as they used to be," said Elihu Stafford with a shake of his gray head. "Guess he mopes after that gal of his'n; never's seen the inside of her house yit. The whole family feel it pretty much, I guess."

"Where does Lizzie live, mother?" asked Judson one day. "Can't I go there? I want to see her."

But his mother had answered him so sharply, Jud had gone away to his little room and cried. No one ever spoke sharply to Judson.

And Elizabeth mourned, too. Affectionate, dutiful and loving as she was, the sundering of old ties was deeply painful. She wanted her mother; her dear old, patient father; simple Jud with his pure, child's soul; she wanted them all, even Jim and Andrew. Geoffrey Dillingham read his wife's heart well, marked the sadness of the sweet face, but he kept silent. November with its short days passed rapidly away, until it lacked but two weeks till Thanksgiving.

Ephraim Tracy came home one night bearing a live turkey.

"For the land's sake, father," cried his wife, as she came out to investigate the muffled gobble, "what did you get a live one for?"

"This is for Lizzie, mother," replied the old man. "I got it early so's to fatten it myself for Thanksgiving. She can luv plenty of 'em, but she'll relish the one father sends her most."

Mrs. Tracy brushed away a sudden tear.

"So she would, father," she answered, softly.

So the turkey was penned securely in the yard and fed so much by watchful Jud that it threatened to burst before the eventful day arrived.

Elizabeth, in her home, seemed to grow paler and slier these short November days. Her husband, coming home one night, found her shivering over the library fire.

"What is it, Elizabeth?" he asked, anxiously.

"I don't know," answered his wife, her teeth chattering, "only I'm so cold, Geoffrey."

So cold. He went up to her and pushed back the lovely hair from the white forehead.

"You'd better go upstairs, Lizzie," he said, tenderly.

They put her to bed shortly after that, but before morning sharp pains set in and a doctor was hurriedly sent for.

As the fever rose she grew light-headed and babbled on about father, Jud, and Andy, too. She thought she was at home again, living again her simple, humble life.

"What is it, doctor?" her husband whispered, a great fear tugging at his heart.

"Inflammation of the lungs," the doctor had answered briefly.

So, in that luxurious room, the struggle began, the life and death angel closing in combat. Geoffrey Dillingham, in the terribly trying days that followed, bending over that slight, beloved form, realized for the first time what his sin had been; the misery he must have caused his wife, the pride that had blinded him to all parental claims. With old Martin Chuzzlewit, he could but exclaim: "Self—self—self." And now she would die and leave him.

He walked to the window and looked across the bare and frozen fields.

"And they have loved her, too," he murmured. "Oh, Elizabeth, my wife, only live, and I will make it up a thousand times."

He would send for them now, he whispered. As if in answer to his thought, the kindly physician raised his eyes.

"Better telegraph for her parents," he said. "She will reach the crisis before twenty-four hours, and she may not pass it."

Ephraim Tracy was in the backyard divesting his plump turkey of feathers when the telegram came. Jud stood gathering up the feathers for a duster.

"Ain't it fat, Juddie?" said the old man gleefully, "and won't our Lizzie like it?"

Before Jud could frame an answer, Mrs. Tracy came out and held up the yellow sheet.

"Father, father," she cried, tremblingly, "a dispatch has come from Dexter, and Elizabeth is dangerously sick."

Jim and Andrew went too.

"If Geoffrey Dillingham thinks I'm going to stay away, he's mistaken," said Jim, with a big lump in his throat. "She's my sister and I've a right to see her."

"And so have I," cried Andrew, brushing his shirt sleeve across his tear-filled eyes.

They reached Dexter that night, but she did not know them. Jud alone was shut out, and wandered at his own sweet will up and down the beautiful rooms that seemed like fairy-land to him. All that night Jim and Andrew walked restlessly about, but Ephraim Tracy sat, a pathetic, bowed figure, by his daughter's bed. His son-in-law had asked him to his house at last, but alas—for this. But it was the father's hand that administered the needed nourishment, the father's hand that smoothed the damp and curling hair, the father's hand that held the pale and wasted one, and Geoffrey Dillingham, as he watched too, for the first time in his life saw, in the despised old man something to revere.

Night passed, and it was the day before Thanksgiving. The doctor came, and with his practiced eye detected a change. He looked across to where Elizabeth's husband stood, gray and haggard, awaiting his verdict.

"Dillingham," said he, gently, "tomorrow will be Thanksgiving day. Thank God for your mercies, for your wife will live."

A low sobbing broke in upon them. It was old Ephraim Tracy, down upon his knees, his face hidden in the coverlet. Though the tears were raining down his own face, Geoffrey Dillingham went over to the old man and lifted him as he would a child.

"Come, father," he whispered, brokenly, "come."

The afternoon of Thanksgiving day Elizabeth lay on her pillows exhausted, worn, but at peace with all the world.

"And you're all here," she whispered happily. "Father, mother, Andrew, Jim and dear old Jud. Oh, I've been so sick, but this repays me for it all." She smiled at them, her old, sweet smile, and then she murmured: "Kiss me, all of you, for I am so happy."

They kissed her, as she asked, with full and thankful hearts, and quietly went away. Jud's turn came last. The great, honest fellow stood over her, his childish face alight with a wonderful joy.

"You are to get well, Lizzie," he whispered, rapturously; "and oh, I say, Liz, ain't it all grand?"

His sister raised her feeble hand and laid it against the loyal cheek.

"Grand—aye, that it is, Juddie," she echoed, dreamily.

The room was quiet now, with only her husband beside her. Elizabeth turned her eloquent eyes to his. Those eyes, that he had feared might never know him more this side of the gates of pearl.

"You've been good to me in everything but one, Geoffrey; you won't refuse me now?" she said.

He understood, for he bent over her suddenly, and for an instant his cheek lay against her own.

"My wife, my wife," he cried, with solemn emphasis, "your life shall be a different one, please God, from this day forward—and theirs, too," he added, reverently.

They hunted the place over for old Ephraim Tracy a few minutes afterwards, but it was his wife who found him, back of the big barn, sitting on a bench. The gray head was bowed between the wrinkled hands, and he was weeping unrestrainedly.

She went up to him and touched his arm.

"Come, father," she said, gently. The old man lifted his head, striving in vain to still the trembling of his quivering lips.

"I'm cryin', Mandy," he answered, brokenly, "and I can't help it. Only to think; it's Thanksgiving day, Lizzie's gettin' well, and—called me—father—Mandy."

His wife nodded with tear-wet, smiling eyes, and hand in hand they turned and went into Elizabeth's house.—Susan Hubbard Martin, in Ladies' World, New York.

Dexter Leader: "Weather prophets in various parts of the State say that all indications upon which great reliance is always placed point to a long and severe winter. In the first place, there is the goose bone; for the first time in eight years it is very wide and nearly all white, which is a sure sign of early snow, deep snow and snow of long duration. Then there is the rag-weed; it is unusually tall. Thus does nature provide for the feeding of the non-migratory birds when there is to be deep snow. Moreover, examination of corn husks has disclosed that they are unusually heavy. There is another sign of extreme cold. The woodchuck, furthermore, corroborates the other evidence with fur of unusual thickness. That is a sign that never fails, even when others do." Yes, the way the weather looks now it is just as liable to be an open winter. Old sayings don't amount too much now-a-days.

I have a large and magnificent stock of robes and blankets that I have bought direct from the factory, therefore saving the jobbers profit, and enabling me to sell you cheaper than ever before. Come and look them over. My stock of harness is complete, all my own make and of the best pure oak leather. I keep a large assortment of trunks, valises, telescopes, hand-bags, whips, curry-combs, brushes and horse furnishing goods.

I have also a fine stock of Musical Instruments—pianos, organs, violins, mandolins, guitars, etc., etc. Strings for all leading instruments. Books, folios, and ten cent sheet music.

I have taken the agency for the Standard Sewing Machines—the world's pride. Come and inspect them and get prices. I will sell them cheaper out of my store than an agent possibly can, for my expenses are much less.

Yours, respectfully,

C. STEINBACH.

The only way to give credit to a clipping from a newspaper is to say "Ex." and then you won't give an editor of a newspaper credit to an article he never wrote.

The Ann Arbor Argus says: "A blind organ-grinder, in this city, last Saturday, took off his glasses and peeping into the organ fixed the machinery which had got out of order." There are many imposters just like him traveling around.

Somebody ought to wage a campaign against the bad wells on milk farms and elsewhere. Too many wells and cisterns seem to have been located under the impression that the nearer they could be brought to the barn and pigpen the better. On such farms malaria and bowel diseases are likely to be very common. The owner thinks the country is sickly, but the doctor winks at the well curb and says nothing.

The cost of weeds to the farmers in a community is enormous compared with certain other expenses. Weeds rob the soil and entail labor from spring until fall. If the farmers in each community would unite and determinedly fight weeds for three years, not allowing a single one to grow if possible, they would then find their expenses greatly reduced owing to the cost of production of weeds and their destruction being removed.

Bride (after the return from the bridal tour)—"I see by this medical work that a man requires eight hours sleep and a woman ten." Bridegroom—"Yes, I've read that somewhere myself." Bride—"How nice! You can get up every morning and have the fire made, and the breakfast made, before it is time for me to get up; and when we have children you can dress them too before I get up. Oh! how nice that will be." The couple live near Chelsea.

A German living near Manchester, who couldn't read or write English, had a horse stolen, and he advertised it as follows:—"Von nite the oder day, ven I vas awake in mein schleep, I hear somdngs vat I tlnks vas not yust rite py mein barn, und I shumps de pep oud und runs mit the parn oud; und ven I vas dere coom I sees mein pig cray iron mare he vas been tied loose, und run mit der staple off; und who will efer him back prings, I bays him yust so mooch as vas been kushumary."

A prominent citizen of a neighboring town answered a green goods man's circular by letter instead of by wire, and a reply came with a crisp $1 bill, as evidence of good faith. He wrote back that he was not so sure of the $2 and $5 bills and received an answer with genuine samples of these. He kept the $8 and never said a word. This is probably the first time that a green goods sharper was beaten at his own game.—Ex. We would advise people not to have anything to do with sharpeners, even if they could get the best of them.

An editor's path is usually well filled—sometimes with flowers, sometimes with thorns, and occasionally with brickbats and overripe hen fruit. Some find fault with his paper if they do not find themselves and their doings mentioned, others do some things who would vigorously kick should we mention their character, while some think we ought to "roast" our public officials harder for their illegal acts, and a few think we are downright mean for noticing them, "but it's just so everywhere." We find our position much like the old couple who, ignorant of city life, stopped at a hotel in Detroit to spend the night, and, as they were about to retire, observed a card on the gas jet which read, "Don't blow out the gas," and just below it the words, "Two dollars extra will be charged if the gas is allowed to burn all night." Upon seeing the two the old man exclaimed, "Mother, what shall we do?" "Let us get out of here by the fire-escape," said John, "and make tracks for our dear old home near Manchester, where we can sleep with the candle burning all night, as in days of old."

EMPEROR WILLIAM uses the largest visiting cards of any member of Europe's royal families. They are of heavy card, six inches long and four inches wide. On the upper line is the single word "Wilhelm," and on the second line are the words "Deutscher Kaiser und Koenig von Prussien."

SOME years ago Boone, Ia., was suffering from an epidemic of typhoid fever. Col. George Waring, who died of yellow fever in New York recently, came west and projected a sanitary system for that town, which is regarded as equal to that of any city of the same size in America. Just when he was commissioned to go to Havana he had about completed arrangements to practically duplicate the Boone system in several other Iowa cities.

A GERMAN dentist, Dr. Herz, proposes to put microbes in our mouths to steal away our pains. His discovery consists in an inoculant prepared from microbes he cultivates for the purpose. When applied in the case of a decayed tooth it stops the pain, but does not destroy the nerve; further, it again fixes the tooth and makes it possible to put in a lasting stopping. He has already treated a number of cases with it, and they have proved most successful.

If a child in Switzerland does not attend school on a particular day the parents get a notice from the public authority that he is fined so many francs; the second day the fine is increased and by the third day the amount has become a serious one. In case of sickness the pupil is excused, but if there is any suspicion of shaming a doctor is sent. If the suspicion proves to be well founded the parent is required to pay the cost of the doctor's visit.

A SUBSTITUTE for tobacco has been discovered by an eastern chemist. The appearance, odor, taste and effect on the system are all reproduced, it is claimed, and the sham can only be told by a microscopical examination. The one essential difference between the leaf tobacco and the substitute is the absence of nicotine in the latter. The cost of producing the substitute is said to be small, and a promise of the best perfect of to-day at a price within the reach of all is made.

A COMPANY has been incorporated in Pittsburgh to abolish the razor. Instead of shaving a man, the barber will daub over his face a lather that will remove the bristles. The company has a capital of $200,000, with which to start business. As soon as it gets its charter it will open a "parlor" where practical demonstrations will be given. Specimen men will sit in a show window on a crowded street and have their beards publicly and painlessly removed by a gentlemanly lecturer.

THE French so ready to use electricity in automobile locomotion, now propose to use the automobile wagons for exploration purposes. M. Felix Du-boise, the explorer, intends to use them in his expedition to the Niger river. A number of his wagons were recently inspected and gave satisfaction. He can transport his automobile wagons to within 250 miles of his objective point on the Niger, and he believes he can cover this distance in a week. The bicycle may also be used in exploration.

MEDICAL men of Plainfield, N. J., are deeply interested in the discovery of a man with two distinct and separate hearts and two breast bones, all of which he can move about at will. The man who is thus generously endowed by nature is William King, colored, who claims to be 100 years old. His home is in New Bedford, Mass., and he has been visiting his cousin, Thomas Martin, the jail warden in that city, for several days. That he has two hearts Dr. M. B. Long, chief of the Muhlenburg hospital staff, says is undeniable.

CURIOUS creeds can be found among the upper classes. Lord Pollington, eldest son of Lord Mexborough, is a self-empowered Buddhist. The duke of Northumberland and his family, including Lord and Lady Percy, are Irvingites, as are Sir Herbert Maxwell and Lady Frances Balfour, a daughter of the duke of Argyll. Lord and Lady Radnor are credited with being ardent spiritualists. The late Lady Charlemont was a Jewess, not by birth, but by conviction, and Lord Stanley, of Alderly, is said to favor the principles of Mohammed.

EXPERIMENTS with aluminum as a substitute for paper are now under way in France. It is well known that the paper used to-day in the manufacture of books is not durable. It is now possible to roll aluminum into sheets four-thousandths of an inch in thickness, in which form it weighs less than paper. By the adoption of suitable machinery these sheets can be made even thinner still, and can be used for book and writing paper. The metal will not oxidize, is practically fire and water proof and is indestructible by the jaws of worms.

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN.

The Three Thousand Students in Attendance Form a Community by Themselves.

MANY SOCIETIES AND ASSOCIATIONS.

Few Things Are More Characteristic of This Miniature World Than the College Publications—A Brief Description of These Journals May Be Interesting.

[Special Correspondence.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 16.—The 3,000 students at the University of Michigan form a community by themselves. They have their own religious life, social world, clubs, amusements and political associations, but few things are more characteristic of this miniature world than the student newspapers and magazines.

Student Publications.

The college publications are six in number. They are a daily, weekly, semi-monthly, two monthlies and a quarterly. All but one, the Michigan Alumnus, are purely student publications. On them the students are the editors, business managers, advertising solicitors, reporters, bookkeepers and collectors. They write the copy, make the contracts and pay the bills.

The U. of M. Daily.

At the head of the college publications is the U. of M. Daily. This is a four-column, four-page paper, which appears each morning of the week save Sunday during the collegiate year. Its space is given about half and half to advertisements and reading matter.

The Daily is now in its ninth year. Its first appearance was on the morning of September 29, 1890. Although at first not a financial success, the paper now easily pays its way. The Daily was put into the field to give expression to the independent spirit, as opposed to the fraternity, existing in the student body. Now it is representative of all classes. The aim of its editors is to print the daily news of the whole university and to give true expression to college spirit. The paper also serves to keep the instructors and students of each department in touch with those of the other departments. It is one of the strongest of the forces making for the unity of the university world.

The Editorial Staff.

The editors of the Daily are elected annually by the subscribers. Vacancies occurring between annual meetings are filled by competition. The editors at the annual meeting choose their managing editors, business manager and other officers. The managing editor has supervision over the news side of the paper. He makes the assignments and determines the general policy. Each evening in the week is assigned to an assistant editor, who is responsible for the paper of the following morning. The athletic editor is chosen because of his special fitness for the place. He has rather more freedom than the assistant editors.

The managing editor for the present college year is Frederick Engelhard, of Ann Arbor, who is in the law department, having received the degree of A. B. last June; the business manager is O. H. Hais, of South Bend, Ind., a junior law student, and the athletic editor is T. R. Woodrow, of Ann Arbor, a senior literary student. Mr. Engelhard besides his experience on college publications has been in the service of the Detroit Free Press and Detroit Journal as correspondent at Petoskey, Mich., during the resort season.

A Position of Honor.

To be a daily editor is considered an honor well worth striving for; and to be managing editor a still greater honor. Of the 8,000 persons who have been students at the university since the Daily was founded less than a dozen have been managing editors. Of the 120 persons who have served on the editorial board of this publication not a few have accepted lucrative positions on city and country publications.

The S. C. A. Bulletin.

The weekly publication of the University World is the S. C. A. Bulletin. This is a three-column six-page paper, published each Thursday afternoon. It is the official organ of the Students' Christian Association, and its mission is to give expression to the religious life of the student body. The paper's editors are taken from among the members of the Christian association, the officers being elected and the assistants appointed. The managing editor for the present year is Herbert M. Rich, Middleville, Mich., a graduate of the literary department and a freshman in the medical. Mr. Rich is an experienced man in college journalism, he having been on several of the publications.

A Comic Weekly.

The Wrinkle is the students' funny paper. It has just started on its sixth year. It is a 12-page publication, with colored cover and numerous illustrations. What it aims to do is to enliven college life by presenting by caricatures, verse, dialogues and editorials the humorous features. The president of the Wrinkle's board of editors is Harold M. Bowman, a senior law student. Mr. Bowman is an experienced newspaper man. Besides having filled important positions on several of the college publications, he has been a reporter and editorial writer on a Des Moines (Ia.) paper.

A Literary Magazine.

The literary publication of the university is the Inlander. This was founded by the class of '91. It is now an illustrated magazine of forty-odd pages. Between its covers are found stories, poems and other literary matter contributed by instructors and students. Its managing editor is C. Fred Gauss, of Ann Arbor, who graduated from the classical course last June, and is now pursuing graduate work. It is over two years since Mr. Gauss began contributing verse to the Boston Transcript. Now he is a regular contributor to the Detroit Free Press. During the last two years his poems have won the prizes given by the University annuals.

Organ of Alumni Association.

The Michigan Alumnus, the other monthly issued during the college year, has a wider field than any of the other publications. It aims not only to circulate among the 3,000 students, but to reach the 15,000 alumni of the university as well. It is a more pretentious periodical than any of the others. Each number is generously illustrated, and the articles contained on its pages are well written. The publication further serves as a tie to bind alumni to their alma mater, and as a prominent record of occurrences at the university. The Alumnus has begun its fifth year. Its editor in chief is James H. Prentiss and its managing editor Shirley W. Smith, of Hastings, Mich., an instructor in the English department who has had considerable experience on college publications.

Department Journals.

The only department publications are the Dental Journal and the Technic. The former appears during the months of January, March, May and July, of each year. It is the organ of the dental society of the College of Dental Surgery. Its purpose is to foster the interests of the dental students. Its editors, with the exception of the freshman, who is subject to competition, are elected by the dental society. The editor in chief for the collegiate year is P. F. Hines, a senior. The first number of the eighth volume will appear in January. In form the publication is similar to a magazine, each issue containing from 40 to 100 pages.

The Technic is the organ of the engineering department. It frequently contains articles of permanent value.

The student publications, however, do not absorb all the journalistic talent in the university. The correspondents for the city papers are fully as important personages as the editors of the college papers. The more important of the Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and Toledo papers have student correspondents who keep them in touch with the college world. These students are all live newspaper men who know a good "story" when they see it, and understand getting it on the wire while it is hot.

R. H. ELSWORTH.

Care of the Insane.

An opinion of much importance to every county in Michigan has been handed down in the supreme court. The question was: Is an indigent patient, who has been confined in the asylum for the insane, who has been removed therefrom as an unrecovered patient and remained away from the asylum more than a year entitled to be returned to the asylum as a state charge? The court says the clear implication is that a return within one year is necessary to entitle the patient to be received at the expense of the state. If returned after the expiration of a year, the insane person becomes a charge upon the county.

Deaths in One Year.

The first years under the new death registration law in Michigan was completed with the month of September. It showed the total number of deaths to have been 27,915. This is greater by over 5,000 deaths than the returns for any year of registration under the old law. Out of the 27,915 deaths reported for the year 5,081 were of persons under one year old, and 2,035 from one to four years. Consumption caused 2,456 deaths, or nearly one-tenth of the entire number.

The Cement Product.

In 1896 the production of cement in Michigan aggregated 4,000 barrels, having a value of $7,000. In 1897 the product rose to 15,000 barrels, with a value of $26,250, an increase of nearly 300 per cent. The significance of this increase will be seen from the fact that while the industry showed a remarkable growth during 1897, the average increase throughout the country was only 74 per cent., or about one-fourth the increase noted in Michigan.

Freaks of Lightning.

Lightning has been playing some curious freaks in Comstock township, Kalamazoo county. A flash almost blinded the family of Tobias Snord while the members were seated around the family hearth. George Snord, one of the younger boys, wore a percale shirt. After the flash had died away it was discovered that the shirt had been completely burned and that the boy escaped without knowing that anything had ever struck him.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Breaks the Record.

Mrs. Merrie L. Abbott, of West Branch, is the only woman in the world ever elected to the office of prosecuting attorney. The campaign she made was unique, and at every meeting immense crowds were present to listen to her bright and witty speeches. She ran on the democratic ticket. The supreme court will be asked to pass on her eligibility. Attorney-General Maynard refused to do this previous to election, saying it was a case for the courts.

Crop Statistics.

The official crop report says the area in growing wheat in Michigan is three per cent. larger than that sowed last year. The average condition is 103 per cent., which is higher than on this date in any year since 1890. The average yield of corn per acre for the state is 57 bushels of ears, or four bushels greater than the average yield for the last 20 years. Potatoes are estimated to yield three-fourths of an average crop.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health from 66 observers in various portions of the state for the week ended on November 12 indicate that typhoid fever, influenza and remittent fever increased and intermittent fever decreased in area of prevalence. Consumption was reported at 146 places, measles at 3, typhoid fever at 72, scarlet fever at 36, diphtheria at 36, whooping cough at 15 places, and smallpox at Ecorse.

Jumped from a Train.

Ida Arola, 23 years of age, threw herself through the window of the Houghton express on the Michigan Central railroad when the train was a short distance from Columbiaville and was instantly killed. She was an insane woman who was being deported to Finland in accordance with the immigration law, she having resided in Michigan less than a year.

Appropriations Asked For.

The several state institutions have presented to the board of corrections their estimates of expenses for the biennial period. The total appropriations asked for were $602,494 for current expenses and $672,807.71 for special improvements. The first item is favored as estimated by the institution managers, but the latter is reduced to $455,634.35.

Death of Judge Montgomery.

Judge Martin Van Buren Montgomery, who was appointed commissioner of patents in March, 1885, by President Cleveland, subsequently resigning to accept a seat on the supreme bench of the District of Columbia, died at his home in Lansing. He resigned from the bench in October, 1892, and has since practiced law. He was 58 years old.

Burned to Death.

The village of Perry, south of Owosso, was visited by a terrible fire. Rowe & Co.'s large livery barn, with its contents, was burned to the ground. Charles Taylor, one of the proprietors, and family lived over the barn and Mrs. Taylor, her daughter and an old man named Clark were buried beneath the fallen roof and burned to death.

News Items Briefly Told.

Albon Pickett, a pioneer of Gratiot county, died in Alma of heart disease very suddenly. He had been a resident there 44 years, and was well-known throughout the county.

The headless body of an infant was found in the river at Saginaw by a lad. Nothing could be ascertained relative to the age of the child or a clew as to its parentage.

The Chicago & West Michigan depot and mammoth grain elevator, containing 4,000 bushels of wheat, were burned at Watervliet, the loss being $10,000.

By an accident in a mill in Manistee township George Backing had a piece of wood driven entirely through his body and he died in a short time.

Charles Belote, a volunteer fireman at Centreville, has been roused out of a trance which lasted 60 hours.

The marriage licenses issued at the Oakland county clerk's office in one week were all for girls between the ages of 16 and 21 years. The oldest was 21 and the youngest 16, the rest being all the way between.

The next legislature will stand 119 republican and 13 democratic on joint ballot.

Land Commissioner French offered 2,500 acres of state lands for sale at public auction, but only 200 acres were sold at prices ranging from $1.25 to eight dollars per acre. The remainder of the lands will be disposed of at private sale.

The citizens of Escanaba celebrated the successful installing of the United States Wooden Ware company by raising the stars and stripes over the new buildings.

Hon. Abraham R. Blakely, one of Alpena's oldest and most respected citizens, was accidentally shot and instantly killed while cleaning his rifle for a hunting trip.

A memorial adopted by the State Bar association on the death of Judge Cooley was read and spread upon the records in the state supreme court at Lansing.

SHOWS IMPROVEMENT.

All Lines of Trade Are Reported to Be Enjoying a Very Fair-sized Boom.

New York, Nov. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: "The situation is clearer and the improvement in business which was expected after the election has begun. Payments through clearing houses are far the largest ever known, for the week 37.3 per cent. larger than last year, and 33.0 per cent. larger than in 1892. The glass workers have resumed, the anthracite coal output is heavy and much beyond the present capacity of markets, the troubles in Illinois coal mines have been settled and the new strike of shoe workers in Marlboro, Mass., is now the only labor hindrance of consequence. It is noteworthy that in spite of all changes the price of spot wheat has but slightly changed.

"Iron is in bigger demand all the time and yet production steadily increases and at Pittsburgh bessemer pig is slightly lower, at $10.10, the new association being understood. Orders for plates are beyond all precedent, including material for cars, bridges, vessels and work of all sorts, and structural work is seasonably quiet, though the mills have much ahead, while in bars the demand is considerably better at Pittsburgh, with orders for material of 6,000 cars at Chicago. Some works at the east are short of orders and prices are held back. The expectation is that the proposed rail association will meet an extremely heavy demand for the next year, especially for trolley lines, but it is stated that prices will not be advanced above $39 at the east and $21 at Chicago. In iron products the next will probably be a record breaking year.

"Failures for the week have been 23 in the United States, against 27 last year and 26 in Canada, against 32 last year.

Bradstreet's says: "Evidence accumulates that the good results flowing from the recent elections are no longer confined entirely to improvement in tone and confidence, though the active feeling influences dealings in both financial and mercantile lines. Several substantial developments present themselves this week, notable among which are a number of advances in prices, exceptionally few declines thereof, growing strength in the pig iron situation, unprecedentedly large work bank clearings, and remarkably good reports as to export trade, not only in the lines of foreign products, but in enlarged trade in manufactured products. Distribution of merchandise shows but little change from recently preceding weeks, but the growth in confidence is reflected in very general reports of improved collections on past business.

"First and foremost in the line of foreign trade extension are the returns recently made for October, pointing to exports for that month larger than in the corresponding month of any preceding year, second only to those of December last year, and chargeable not so much as formerly to enlarged exports of farm products, but to heavily increased exports of finished products of American industry. In this connection specially good reports come from the iron and steel industry, which has thereby been rendered more nearly independent than ever before of fluctuations in domestic demand. The strength in values of all cereals (all the leading breadstuffs are higher this week) is of course due to the constant foreign demand more than effecting very large gains in domestic supplies, which, however, are below any corresponding period for years past. Comparisons of four months' exports, July to October inclusive, point to wheat and flour shipments little below those of last year, and only ten per cent. below those of 1891, the heaviest ever known."

MORE TROUBLE AT PANAMA.

Whites and Negroes Engage in Several Battles—Deputy Watts Loses an Arm.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 19.—Several battles between union miners and negroes, in which special deputy sheriffs had a hand, occurred Friday evening, in which it is known several parties were wounded, and it is thought some mortally. Sheriff Coburn's chief deputy, Sid Watts, of Taylorsville, had his right arm shot off. The encounter in which Watts lost his arm occurred near McCarthy's grocery, on Cedar street, adjoining the Springside addition. Watts was the only witness to the shooting from whom anything could be learned.

As the result of two encounters between whites and blacks Thursday at Springside Deputy Watts, with assistants, were busily engaged swearing in and placing a large force of deputy sheriffs at the Springside mine, and was in a buggy en route to the mine. When passing McCarthy's, Watts says a fire-sillade was fired at him, fully 25 shots being discharged before he returned the fire. After being wounded Watts drove to Springside mine and was immediately brought to the city. Upon arriving at the Hotel De Pana Watts drew a gun, and, seeing Officer Ben Smith, Jake Velling and Frank Williams, business men, on the other side of the street, exclaimed: "Let me shoot them!" Corwin Overholt, nephew of Operator D. J. Overholt, of the Springside Coal company, took the gun from Watts, thus preventing him from accomplishing his purpose. Watts was later removed to Dr. J. H. Miller's office and his arm was dismembered.

Effort to Have States of Original Louisiana Purchase Observe December 20 as Flag Day.

Denver, Col., Nov. 19.—Will C. Ferris, curator of the State Historical and Natural History Society of Colorado, has sent a letter to the board of directors of the Louisiana Purchase Centennial, St. Louis, Mo., suggesting that the board request the governors of those states that, as a whole or in considerable part, were established from the Louisiana purchase, to issue proclamations that December 20 next be observed as Louisiana purchase flag day, in honor of the raising of the flag at New Orleans on that day, 1803, when the transfer of title was officially made to the United States.

DESPERATE CONVICTS.

Two Men Try to Escape from Ohio Penitentiary—They Kill a Guard, and Are Both Wounded.

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—There was a desperate attempt made by two convicts to escape from the penitentiary about eight o'clock in the morning, as a result of which Guard Charles D. Lauterbach, of Mount Vernon, was shot and killed, while Convicts O'Neil and Atkinson received injuries of a serious nature, and both are now in the prison hospital.

By some means Convicts O'Neil and Atkinson, who are serving 15 years for robbery, obtained possession of a revolver and proceeded to carry out a bold plan to escape. One covered his face with a handkerchief and went into the broom shop where he held up Guard Lime and took his revolver. He then returned to the hoe shop, where the other man joined him, and they opened fire upon Guard Lauterbach, who was in charge of that department.

The guard was shot three times and almost instantly killed. The sound of the shooting reached the other officials in the prison, and they came on the run to investigate. Guard Gump was the first on the scene, and, taking in the situation at a glance, opened fire on the two prisoners. This was returned, and a regular battle was in progress until the revolvers of all the participants were emptied.

In the fray Convict Atkinson was shot down and seriously injured and, as soon as the guns were emptied, Guard Gump rushed in with his cane and almost beat O'Neil to death before the prisoner would surrender. The men were taken to the hospital, where their injuries were attended to. Atkinson was shot in the body, but is not thought to be seriously hurt, but O'Neil was so beaten about the head that his injuries may result fatally.

The other prisoners in the shop where the shooting occurred took no part in the affair, but it is understood that they stood ready to follow if the efforts of the two leaders proved successful. Previous to making the outbreak one of the two prisoners forced a third man to place a ladder against the outside of the penitentiary wall, so that when they had fought their way out of the shops they could shoot down the wall guard and make their escape by that route.

Frank O'Neil and John Atkinson are serving their third terms. Atkinson says that O'Neil received two guns on the 4th of July, when visitors were allowed in the prison. They were hidden by Atkinson, the two men deciding to wait for fall before trying to escape.

They had been waiting for three weeks for an opportunity. Atkinson was shot twice in the right arm and O'Neil has two severe scalp wounds. Neither is fatally hurt.

KEELEY IS DEAD.

The Inventor of the Famous Motor Passes Away in Philadelphia—His Career.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—John W. Keeley, the inventor of the Keeley motor, died Friday at his home in this city from pneumonia. He was taken ill on Saturday last and continued to grow steadily worse until his death. Mr. Keeley was 61 years of age and leaves a widow.

[Mr. Keeley was a native of Philadelphia. His education was meager and at an early age he became a carpenter, following that trade until 1872. It was in that year that he announced his discovery of a new force by which motive power would be revolutionized. Following this he constructed what has become known as the Keeley motor. On November 10, 1874, he gave its first public exhibition before a number of capitalists and scientists who advanced $100,000 to enable him to perfect his discovery and apply the principle. Since then large sums of money have been expended on experiments without any practical public results. Between 1874 and 1891, Keeley constructed and discarded 129 different models. In his first model he employed water as a generator but later the experiments were made with what he called a "liberator," a machine equipped with a large number of tuning forks, which, he claimed, disintegrated the air, and released a powerful etheric force. In 1888 he was for a time confined in jail for contempt of court for refusing to disclose the secret by which he produced many remarkable effects in the presence of persons, but until his death the secret was known only to himself. Among those interested in his scientific efforts was Mrs. Bloomfield Moore, the well-known society woman, who advanced sums of money to Keeley for the purpose of his invention.]

WORD FROM DEWEY.

Hero of Manila Cables the Situation Regarding Action of Philippine Insurgents.

Washington, Nov. 19.—News of a mixed character came to the navy department Friday from Admiral Dewey touching the situation in the Philippines. The admiral sent two of his warships, the Charleston and the Concord, some time ago to the southward from Manila to ascertain whether there was truth in the reports that the insurgents had extended their activities in that direction. Friday he cabled as follows: "Manila, Nov. 18, 1898.—Secretary Navy, Washington: Charleston and Concord arrived from Iloilo. Glass reports that the entire island of Panay is in possession of insurgents except Iloilo, which is defended by 800 Spanish troops. All foreign citizens there beg for American protection. The island of Negros has declared independence and desires American protectorate. (Signed) 'DEWEY.'"

Glass is the commander of the Charleston. So far nothing has been done by the administration towards curbing the insurgents in their operations save verbal representations from the American commanders to Aguinaldo, in which it has been pointed out to him that it would be good policy, in view of the probability of the annexation of the islands by the United States, to pursue a course that would not be obnoxious to the United States. But, the situation is now realized to be critical. So far as the Spaniards are concerned, perhaps they can be left to take care of themselves, but the foreign residents at Iloilo are differently regarded. The difficulty in the situation is that with the best intentions to intervene to protect the Europeans and other foreigners and to save the city of Iloilo, the second in importance in the Philippine group, from looting, the United States forces appear to be stopped under the rules of war from moving from their positions. Such is the construction placed upon the clause in the protocol relating to a suspension of hostilities.

The immediate effect of this state of affairs may be to hasten action in the Paris conference, for it is only by the termination of that tribunal that the United States can come to the relief of the beleaguered Spaniards in Iloilo and at other points. It is said to be a fact, however, that a total disagreement at Paris may result in speedier action than if the commissioners agreed upon the main principles of the Philippine cession, for, in such case, several additional sessions probably would be required in order to arrange the details of the treaty.

It is now thought to be certain that the commission at a meeting next Monday or Tuesday will do one of two things, i. e., either agree to the cession of the Philippines or note a disagreement and dissolve the meeting, for the administration is not disposed to tolerate further delay and has so instructed the United States commissioners. The latter sent a long cablegram Friday in cipher. The deciphering occupied the entire official day and meantime there were wild rumors touching the nature of its contents. As a matter of fact, it was nothing more than an extremely verbose statement of the Spanish side of the case relating to the Philippines. There was a renewal of the attempts to take issue with the American contention as to the meaning of the protocol clause relative to the disposition of the Philippines, and much quibbling, accompanied by quotations from French, Spanish and other European languages, in the effort to demonstrate to Americans just what an English word might mean. The latter will take no notice of this kind of a hair-splitting plea, but at to-day's meeting will call on the Spanish commissioners to make answer to the American proposition to cede the Philippines, probably allowing until Monday or Tuesday only for a final and responsive answer on that point.

PASSED AWAY.

Death of Col. Thomas C. Donaldson, Author of "Public Domain" and Other Books.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—Col. Thomas C. Donaldson died at his home in this city Friday from a complication of diseases, aged 55 years. He had been ill for a long time. Col. Donaldson was famous as a collector of antiquities. His catalogue of works of art, books, relics, historical documents and rarities is not excelled in any private collection in this country, or in very few museums. He did valuable work in historical fields. His "Public Domain," a volume of 2,000 pages, was completed for the United States government in eight years and still stands as the only complete reference history of public lands, their acquisitions, distribution, grants, surveys, colonization and allotment. He was also the author of "George Catlin's Indian Gallery," "Walt Whitman, the Man," and other equally interesting books.

Will Meet Next in Chicago.
Baltimore, Md., Nov. 19.—The national fraternal congress, which has been in session here since Tuesday, adjourned Friday afternoon to meet next year in Chicago. The time of meeting was changed from the third Tuesday of November to the fourth Tuesday of August. Dr. J. H. Christian, of this city, who is supreme medical director of the Order of Heptasophs, was elected chairman of the medical section of the congress.

The "American Boy" Battleship.

Every patriotic American hopes the school boys of the United States will succeed in their efforts to raise $3,000,000, which will be used in building a battleship to be called the "American Boy." It is for stomach, liver and bowel disorders.

No Chance for a Conflict.

"A conflict of arms," he said, "is a terrible thing."
"Of course," she replied, blushing prettily; "and so inexcusable, too. I hold that the disposition a man makes of his arms is none of a girl's business."
After that, of course, there was no chance for a conflict.—Chicago Post.

How to Get Strong

A system which has become run down by the trying weather of the past summer is not in a condition to meet the severe winter of this climate and will easily fall a prey to disease unless a proper tonic is used.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are the best medicine in the world for building up and strengthening an enervated system.

Do not confuse these pills with ordinary purgative pills. They do NOT act on the bowels, thereby further weakening the body. They build up the blood and strengthen the nerves.

Major A. C. Bishop, of 715 Third Ave., Detroit, Mich., is a well-known civil engineer. He says: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a sorry sight. I could not regain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks. I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and I bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better, and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic or to build up a shattered constitution."—Detroit Free Press.

CONSUMPTION

Washington News.

Washington, D. C., November 18, 1898. —If the subject were not entirely too serious for jesting, the suggestion of the Spanish Peace Commissioners, in their second answer to our demand for the Philippines, which, by the way, did not differ materially from their first answer, that we submit to arbitration our right under the protocol to demand possession of the Philippines, might have been thought a joke. It is absolutely certain that the Spanish Commissioners know before they made it that such a suggestion would not for a moment be even considered by our commissioners. In persisting, after having been told that our commissioners would not consider the question of our right to demand the Philippines, in making their second answer, like their first, an argument against our right to make that demand, the Spanish have convinced the President and his Cabinet that they are only working for delay, doubtless with hope that some European power can be induced in some way to help Spain. Some very peremptory instructions have been sent to our Commissioners, and the activity that is being displayed in the War and Navy Departments indicates that this government is preparing to resort to force to get what it demands, if the Spanish Commissioners decline to complete the treaty of peace. Any action taken by this government to put an end to the exasperating delay will be generally approved of. Everybody is heartily tired of it.

At a meeting in connection with the inauguration of the School of Jurisprudence and Diplomacy, of Columbian University, which was attended by the President and many prominent officials, Right Hon Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Prime Minister of Canada, who is in Washington in connection with the High Joint Commission, used the following language at the close of a speech: "While the Union that was severed in 1776 can never be restored to the fullest extent, it can be restored to the extent of external friendship and confidence, and it is my wish that from henceforth the Stars and Stripes and the Union Jack shall float together, and that they shall go forth for no cause but for the freedom of the oppressed, for the defense of freedom, and for the advancement of civilization."

Senator Caffrey, of Louisiana, is one of the Senator's who doesn't believe that the necessary two-thirds can be secured in the Senate to ratify a treaty annexing the Philippines. He said: "I have carefully checked the entire membership of the present Senate, and I am convinced that the entire Philippine group cannot receive the necessary two-thirds vote." Senator Martin, of Virginia, although personally opposed to annexing the Philippines, takes a very different view of the matter. He said: "I can readily see how conditions may arise where every one will have to stand by the position taken by the representatives of the United States, even against our own convictions. We cannot afford, in the first place, to show to the world a spectacle of a divided people, and we must, in addition, carefully consider what would happen if we fail to take this whole group. We must hold our own against England, Germany, Russia, and all the other powers, and then, again, we would be in a very embarrassing position if the treaty should not be ratified. My belief is that the treaty, no matter what it contains, will be ratified by the Senate, even if it is brought before us at this session, when the Republicans will not have a majority."

Senator Faulkner, of West Virginia, stands against Philippine annexation, and predicts lively times when the Senate discusses the treaty. He doesn't go so far as to predict the defeat of the treaty, but says the Senate will not be in a hurry to ratify it. Senator Daniel, of Virginia, intimates that circumstances may cause him to change his mind, but says that according to his present information he doesn't see what advantage it would be to us to own the Philippines.

The Industrial Commission met again this week, and will not buckle down to its big job. In order to facilitate the work, the commission will be divided into four sub-commissions, one on agriculture and agricultural labor, one on the conditions of labor and capital employed in manufacturing and general business, one on the conditions of labor and capital employed in mining, and one on transportation. One member from each of these sub-commissions are to form a fifth sub-commission, which shall collaborate all of the statistical material now available, for use of the commissioners, and such original statistical material as may be needed from time to time. This sub-commission will also have charge of the preparation and publication of such results as shall be arrived at.

True Love.

If ye will but be mine, sweetheart, As well I wot ye may. It's I will ever do my part To keep you trig and gay; And I will serve ye foot and hand, No finger ye'll need file, And what ye will of all the laud, Yer leisure shall beguile. Na, na! I lo'e but Johnnie, Frae him I'll never pair; Tho' I'm sae wondrous bonnie I hae got a hairt.

But Johnnie's gone a-roying— Roying none knows where, And Johnnie may be loving Another, tho' less fair; And here while ye have waitet— For such things come to pass— Your lover may be mated There with another lass. Na, na! I'll trust to Johnnie, I will wait him yet; Could she be twice as bonnie, Johnnie'll no forget.

I would not lightly grieve ye, Yet, lassie, tell me true, If Johnnie die and leave you, Then what will ye do? And time is swiftly flying, Youth flies with him away; Not when the days are dying Can any make their hay. Na, na! I'll lo'e but Johnnie, Years after years may flee, Yet I'll to him be bonnie, As he'll be true to me! —Glasgow Herald.

How She Chose Him.

"Lady," said a Scotch maid to her mistress, "I maun tell ye I am to leave your service and be marrit." "Is not this very sudden, Mary?" inquired the lady; "who is the person you expect to marry?" "It is John Scott, mistress." "But you have known him for a short time; how can you trust a stranger?" persisted the woman, reluctant to part with a good maid. "Yes, 'tis true; but he's ken himself many years, and he says he's all right, and I believe he is, for I asked him, 'Did he ken the ten commandments?' and he gae them iverly one. I asked him did he say the shorter catechism, and he had it iverly word; then I told him to grip his hands quick and hard, and then, lady, I saw he was a strong man, and I'm goin' to gie him my hand."—Ex. Letter List.

Following are the letters remaining unclaimed in the post-office at Chelsea, Nov. 21, 1898:

A. L. Nickerson, H. K. Wenzel. Persons calling for any of the above please say "advertised." W. F. RIEMENSCHNEIDER, P. M.

An Eastern editor says that a man in New York got himself into trouble by marrying two wives. A Western editor replied that a good many had done the same thing by marrying one. A Northern editor says that quite a lot of his acquaintances found trouble in barely promising to marry, and not go any farther. A Southern editor says a friend of his was bothered bad enough when he was found in company with another man's wife; but an editor south of Chelsea is continually making love to other men's wives as well as their daughters.

The Coming Woman.

Who goes to the club while her husband attends the baby, as well as the good old-fashioned woman who looks after her home, will both at times get run down in health. They will be troubled with loss of appetite, headaches, sleeplessness, fainting or dizzy spells. The most wonderful remedy for these women is Electric Bitters. Thousands of sufferers from Lame Back and Weak Kidneys rise up and call it blessed. It is the medicine for women. Female complaints and Nervous troubles of all kinds are soon relieved by the use of Electric Bitters. Delicate women should keep this remedy on hand to build up the system. Only 50c. per bottle. For sale by Glazier and Stimson.

Wood ashes are valuable for fertilizer. But this value is due to the material from which the ashes come. Thus ashes made from hard wood are more valuable than ashes made from soft wood. In fact, some ashes from soft wood have not enough virtue to make it worth while to bother with them. It has also been found that the value is largely governed by the part of the tree from which the ashes is made. It is declared by chemists that the ash of young twigs is of more value than the ash of the trunk of the tree, and the ash of leaves still more valuable.
