DEATH OF CALVIN S. BRICE.

The Ex-United States Senator from Ohio and Noted Financier Expires in New York.

New York, Dec. 16 .- Former United States Senator Calvin S. Brice died at 3:15 o'clock Thursday at his residence in this city of pneumonia. He contracted a severe cold one week ago. On Friday last he took to his bed, and on Monday morning his physician said that pneumonia had developed. Everything known to medical science was done to save him, but he grew steadily worse.

[Calvin S. Brice was a native of Ohio and was born in 1845. He was the son of a Presbyterian minister. Three years before the civil war he entered Miami university, but in 18c1 he enlisted in a university company, for the war. He served in West Virginia in the Ninety-sixth Ohio infantry. In 1863 he graduated from the university, and after teaching school a few months he became captain of a company in the One Hundred and Eighth Ohio and served to the end of the war. He then went to Ann Arbor (Mich.) law school and afterwards was admitted to the bar in Cincinnati. He took an active interest in politics, and in the campaign of 1876 he was an electoral candidate on the Tilden ticket and again on the Cleveland ticket in 1884. In 1888 he was a delegate at large to the democratic national convention at St. Louis, where the Ohio delegation chose him as a member of the national committee. He was chairman of the executive committee during the 1888 campaign and, on the death of William H. Barnum, was elected chairman of the democratic national, committee. In the winter of 1890 Mr. Brice was elected United States senator to succeed Henry B. Payne, and took his seat March 4, 1891. In the senate Mr. Brice became a prominent figure. He was soon made a member of the democratic steering committee and became also a member of the committee on appropriations. Mr. Brice seldom spoke in the senate, but was a close observer of everything

COMBINATION OF HEALTH AND WEALTH.

New Districts in Western Canada Adapted to Ranching and Mixed Farming.

Calgary, Alberta, Nov. 4, 1898. To the Editor of the Duluth "Evening Her-ald," Duluth, Minn.

ald," Duluth, Minn. Dear Sir—As to many replies to the home-seeker of Minnesota, I can cheerfully say that this country is better for a poor man than Minnesota, if he wants to farm and raise stock. I have spent one winter and two summers which I find more pleas-ant than any winter I have seen in Minneso-ta for eight years. The seasons are short, but the effect of long days of bright sun-shine produces a very rapid growth of ves-etation. There is good money in raising coarse grains and feeding to hogs and catle, for pork and beef always bring a good price here. Hogs are worth from $4.00 to $4.50 live weight per cwt., and beef about the same. There is plent of railroad land to be had very cheap and on long-time pay-ments. A man does not won be about the payments. A man doe not want to think he can pick up money on the ground here, but there is lots of it in the ground and labor will take it out.

There is a vast scope of country north of Edmonton, Alberta, which can be settled, and a large scope of country west of Edmon-ton adapted to ranching and mixed farming. This country is the best place I have ever seen for the cure of consumption. I could refer you to different people here who were in the last stages of consumption, who are now in perfect health and able to do any kind of hard work and are very prosperous. Hoping this may benefit home-seekers who are willing to work for an honest living, I remain, yours very truly, (Signed) CHARLES M. SCOTT. Any agent of the Canadian Government will gladly give information as to settlement terms and rates.

and the bill for the relief of sailors in the merchant manne were passed and the bill to create the ank of admiral and vice admiral in the n vy was favorably reported. A bill was introduced extending the public land laws to the island of Hawaii, subject to such regulations as may be made by the secretary of the interior.

In the senate on the 14th the Nicaraguan canal bill held its place as the principal subject. Senator Hale reported the army deficiency bill. In executive session many appointments and promotions in the army and navy were confirmed In the house the pension appropriation bill ($145,233,830) was reported. An attempt to secure consideration of the Lodge immigration bill was defeated. Mr. De Armond (Mo.) made a speech on the decadence of the privilege of debate in the house, and held Speaker Reed responsible. The speaker replied with a sarcastic speech.

The senate passed the urgent deficiency bill on the 15th and a joint resolution was introduced to present the thanks of congress to Clara Barton, of Massachusetts, founder of the Red Cross society, for their services in the late war. Adjourned to the 19th In the house the pension appropriation bill was passed and a bill to incorporate the International American bank was discussed.

Fifty years ago a young curate in 3,726 1,023 Brittany had an idea. He himself had no money to further it, for his salary was only $80 a year, and his only friends were the wretched. His idea was so simple as to be almost ridiculous; it was that the poor should help the poor. The enthusiastic curate appealed 4,138 to three women to help him. Two of these were seamstresses and the other worked out as a servant. These four people agreed to pool their wages and begin the new enterprise.

1,924 So, in a poverty-stricken street in St. Servan, the order of the Little Sisters 1,91 of the Poor was organized, and in a wretched attic the first pensioners, two old women, were tenderly cared for. Jeanne Jugan, the servant girl, was the $1.972 \\ 1,298$ first alms gatherer of the society.

Inspired by a poor curate, undertaken by the lowliest of people, beginning in a single attic room in a rude 1.000 tenement, one of the most remarkable of the religious and philanthropic movements of modern times was born. Christ Himself had no humbler origin. To-day the order has 250 houses on the continent of Europe, and it gives food 478 and shelter to more than 33,000 aged 617 62 and poor people daily.

[Special Correspondence.]

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 14.-The Uni versity of Michigan played no small. part in the late war with Spain. From data gathered by the Michigan Alumnus it is known that 259 of its men served in one capacity or another. Five of the 259 were members of the university faculty, 113 were undergraduates and the rest were either graduates or had been students at the university for a longer or shorter period.

From the Medical Department.

Early in the summer Victor C. Vaughan, dean of the department of medicine and surgery, was appointed division surgeon, with the rank of major. He served on the fighting line in the engagement of Aquadores Bridge and at the general hospital at Siboney, where the wounded from Santiago were cared for. On July 12 he was stricken with yellow fever, but survived and is now making an investigation for the government into the causes of yellow fever in military camps. Another member of the medical faculty to serve in the field was Charles B. Nancrede, professor of surgery. He also held the position of surgeon of a division, with the rank of major, and was at the base hospital at Siboney. There he rendered valuable service in the operating-room. A third university doctor in the service was Oscar Le Seure. professor of surgery in the Homeopathic medical college. President Mc-Kinley commissioned him brigade surgeon of volunteers, with the rank of major. He was assigned to the Sternberg hospital at Chickamauga, where 856 typhoid fever patients were treated. While there Dr. Le Seure invented an improved device for giving ice packs in field hospitals. Dr. Orrin H. Freeland, an assistant in the department of medicine and surgery, fought the Spaniard as hospital steward in the Thirty-first regiment of Michigan volunteers.

m., and, drawing in near the shore half an hour later, without slowing down shelled a blockhouse on the heights above Attares. soon after noon we were at anchor in the outer harbor at Guantanamo, and in an hour the work of landing the marines began. So speedily was the work done that before nightfall they were encamped on the hill overlooking the bay. The first boat-load was landed by the Yosemite, and the first American flag was planted in Cuban soil by a University of Michigan man.

"The next day we sailed with the Yankee, a sister ship of the Yosemite, to the westward. Our captain said he did not wish to strain the engines, but hoped the Yankee would not pass us. Welt she didn't, and in about an hour we got a signal to wait for her."

Later in the summer the Yosemite and crew visited Kingston, San Juan de Porto Rico, St, Thomas, Mole St. Nicholas and other important points. While off San Juan de Porto Rico the Spanish steamer Antonio Lopez, flagship of the Lopez line, was discovered trying to get supplies to San Juan. She was attacked by the Yosemite and driven onto the rocks. In this engage. ment, which lasted over four hours, the Spanish gunboats in San Juan harbor took an active part, as did also the forts along the shore.

On the Oregon.

Cecil Page, at one time a member of the class of '98, was a member of the crew of the forward right 13-inch gun of the Oregon during the running down of the Cristobal Colon. He has described that event in the following words: 子子的问题真正

"The Brooklyn and ourselves were the only vessels anywhere near the Spaniards and we were about six miles away. We stopped firing and proceeded to run her down. In an hour we had reduced the intervening distance to five miles and Capt. Clark ordered Lieut. Eberly, who was in charge of the forward 12-inch turret, to try a few shots at her. The whole turret's crew had been seated on top of the turret watching the chase and getting a breath of fresh air, but we gladly went to work again, feeling confident of our ability to bring the Colon to.

"At five miles, the Colon did not look very large and when the fact of the seas and the terrific speed of her engines are taken into consideration, it will be readily seen that the Colon presented a very difficult mark to shoot at. Our first shot fell short; the second fell just astern and the third struck so close as to splash upon the forecastle. Evidently thinking that the next shot would sink his ship, the Spanish commander struck his colors and headed for the beach, thus ending the final decisive battle of the Spanish-American war.'

402 2,456 328 The liftle sister with her basket or her cart is a familiar sight in large cities across the water, and the Abbe 5.306Le Pailleur has lived to see his noble dream extended beyond his prophetic 412 3.035 8,750 vision.

About two years ago a dressmakerwhy forget her name ?- Annie McDon-2,928 ald-died in New York, and left her whole property, amounting to $200, as a legacy to start a home for crippled 168,142 children. Almost every other variety Noah W. Cheever (pro.) received 7.006 of charity had been attended to, but votes; Sullivan Cook (pop.), 1,656, and the crippled child, of whom there are so many in the rushing city, had been overlooked. Lieutenant-Governor-Orin W. Robinson

To the dressmaker came the thought of this new charity for this old form of helplessness, and she left her fortune of $200 for this purpose with the trustfulness of one who was bequeathing $20,-000. Thus the Daisy Fields home came into existence.

Back of the famous Palisades, not far from the Hudson river, in the middle of a broad field which is as white in summer with daisies as it is in winter with snow, stands the little hospital which fills a place that no other hospital has made any attempt to fill. Here crippled children are taken, and from here they are not sent away. They are permanently sheltered until they are either cured or amply able to support themselves without pain.

The conception and small beginnings of noble ideas are as interesting and stimulating as is the knowledge of their ultimate success. Nothing is more inspiring than a beautiful mercy started upon a beautiful faith .--Youth's Companion.

Tired of Life.

When Frank Brooks went to his home in Detroit from work he found in one bedroom his wife shot dead, and in another his nine-year-old daughter also dead. In a note that he found from his wife she stated that she was tired of life, and was going to Heaven and take her little daughter with her, from which it is supposed she committed the murder and then killed herself. The woman had been in poor health for some time. Killed at a Crossing.

An engine struck a sleigh containing five people at a crossing near Imlay City, throwing them out, seriously injuring two and killing three outright. The dead are: Mrs. Thomas Robb, of Lum; Walter Robb, her son, aged four; Mrs. John Yerkes' son, aged 12 months. The wounded are: Mrs. John Yerkes, of Port Huron; Mr. Dawson, the driver. The party in the sleigh had been visiting and were returning home.

Chief Engineer Cooley.

Mortimer E. Cooley, professor of mechanical engineering, had more than one thrilling experience during the months of June and July. As a member of the Michigan naval reserves he was called into service at the outbreak of the war and assigned to the position of chief engineer on the United States steamer Yosemite, which place he is still holding. With him in the reserves and on the Yosemite while it was in active service were 46 University of Michigan men. They boarded the ship in a dismal rainstorm Saturday evening, May 7, and were sailors until August 20, when they were ordered home to be mustered out. Early in June the Yosemite was in West Indian waters, acting as escort, helping with the blockade and searching for Spanish prizes. In relating their experiences off Cuba, Prof. Cooley has said:

First on Cuban Soil.

"Scarcely had we made ourselves familiar with the prominent landmarks when we were called within hail of the flagship and ordered to go with the Panther to Guantanamo and there assist in landing the marines. We were under way at ten meat.

MAJ. C. B. NANCREDE.

third and Thirty-fourth Michigan and Ninety-fourth Massachusetts regiments in the battle of Santiago, was at one time a student at the universitv.

There were university men in both Roosevelt's and Torrey's regiments of rough riders, in all the Michigan regiments and in the volunteer regiments of 15 other states.

The Men Who Fell.

Eight university men lost their lives in the war. They were: Oliver B. Norton, who was killed by a shell while charging up the hill at San Juan with Roosevelt's rough riders; John Oliver, a member of the law class of '99 from Iron Mountain, Mich.; Charles A. Von Walthausen, a student in the department of pharmacy; John A. Bobb, assistant surgeon for the Thirty-fourth Michigan; William J. O'Brien, sergeant in Torrey's rough riders; Henry C. Gowan, of Sault Ste. Marie, who died on the way home from the front; Platt R. Bush, a graduate of the engineering class of '95, and Elihu H. Boynton. of St. Clair, Mich.

Graduates Prominent.

Other University of Michigan men who held important positions during the war are William Rufus Day, President McKinley's secretary of state; Cushman K. Davis, of Minnesota, chairman of the senate committee on foreign affairs, and George De Rue Meikeljohn, assistant secretary of war. Judge Day graduated with the class of '70, Senator Davis with the class of '57 and Mr. Meikeljohn with the law class of 1880.

Among the university men in actual service were one brigadier general, 13 majors, six assistant surgeons, 11 captains, 13 first lieutenants, five second lieutenants, 22 sergeants, 18 corporals, eight hospital stewards and 80 privates, besides a number whose rank is unknown.

shot from the scoop of the scales into one of the conical packages that our shot used to be done up in by storekeepers before the era of paper bags.

"Well, no, not exactly hunting," I answered with the view to the possible need of excuses for an empty bag. "I'm going over to Bradley's to spend Christmas, and didn't know but I might see a pa'tridge." It would have been "stuck up" to call our best game bird "partridge," and no one would have recognized it under the name of "ruffed grouse."

"You hain't goin' to hoof it over the maountain?" he asked, with the end of the string between his teeth as he wound the package with a frugal allowance of packthread. I nodded an affirmation while I silently admired his thrifty habit of putting the few spilled pellets into the box of unsold shot.

"Wal, then, ye'd better let me put ye up a paound or two o' buckshot."

"No, sir," I said, in a tone expressive of reproof for the suggestion. "I've no use for buckshot this time of year," for the close time for deer began with the month.

"Of course not, but you'd want some thing bigger'n number sixes if the wolves got after ye," said Hiram, making a persuasive dip into the box of buckshot.

"Wolves," said I, contemptuously; "why, there hain't been a wolf around here for 20 years."

"Wal, there is, naow, a pack o' seven, anyway, an' mebby more. Why, hain't you heard? Amos Barker seen 'em full tilt after a deer an' counted 'em, seven of 'em. His man at was helpin' of him on his coalin' job said there was 13, but Amos reckoned he see double or caounted some of 'em twice, an' there's lots o' folks 'at 's heard 'em. There's wolves ha'ntin' the maountain, you may depend. Better le' me weigh you about a couple o' paound."

"No, I guess it won't pay to carry any extra weight on that chance," I said, admiring the storekeeper's cunning attempt to sell me something I did not want. "But you may put up that small doll and that Jack-in-the-box for me. They're light and they'll tickle Billy's two little shavers. Then put up a half dozen crackers and a bit of cheese for lunch, fill my tobacco box, and let me have an extra pipe, and I'll be off. I want to make the trip by daylight." "I hope ye will. I ra'ly do. I wouldn't want to have you get ketched in the dark on the maountain. So you're goin' right over to Bradley's, be ye?" he continued, as he shuffled about behind the counter to put up the articles for me, and then began rummaging in a drawer of odds and ends. "Now, I wonder if you wouldn't jest as lives take him a pair o' bullet molds 'at Aaron Clark left here for him, last spring, I guess it was. Hiram found the molds after a short search, and, slipping them into my pocket with the other articles, I retired to my bachelor quarters over Miss Diantha Gridley's tailor shop, where, after transferring the shot to a springtop pouch, and filling my flask with better powder than Hiram sold, and exchanging my leather boots for a pair of sheepskin boots tanned with the wool on, which were then the most approved winter footgear, with my double gun on my shoulder to lighten my steps, I set forth on the ten-mile tramp. Crossing the little river that turned the mills and forge of our village, and following the road as far as it ran in my direction, I held across the fields to the woods, before entering which I set my compass for my intended course. When the backbone of the mountain was reached and my journey half accomplished, I had but one partridge, but there was a chance of more in the stretch of forest that lay before me, partial glimpses of which I now had through the stunted oaks, and pines that scantily clad the rocky ridge. The weather was exceedingly mild for the season, a circumstance which proved very fortunate for me, and as I was quite comfortable in the warmth of the low midday sun, I gave my legs a good rest while I ate my lunch and lazily smoked and dreamed in the midst of the quietude. There was not a sound to be heard above the constant murmur of the pines and the occasional rustle of an unfallen leaf withered, nor was a living thing to be seen but a mite of a winter wren exploring the intricacies of a fallen treetop, and a few flies that were buzzing about the sunny side of a tree trunk. As I began my way down the mountain a glance at the sun showed me we were Kkely to part company before my journey was ended. Half a mile further on, in an old charcoal clearing, I flushed a partridge, at which I took a snapshot that knocked a cloud of feath- ing. There was a yelp of surprise and ers out of the bird without retarding its flight; but I was sure it was hard hit, tion among the crew, and when the and began a diligent search where it smoke had lifted above me I caught had disappeared at the edge of the clearing.

Looking the ground over carefully. step by step, I had gone much further offered, but desisted when it became heard, far behind me, what I took to b: The piteous howl of a lost hound.

I was wishing the poor fellow might find my track and come up to me, when the long-drawn, plaintive wail was repeated at a point so distant from the first that it was evident it could not have been uttered by the same animal, and presently it was taken up at another distant point.

Still groping over the ground in search of the dead bird, I wondered at so many hounds having gone astray that day, when, just as I found my bird the top and see if there was any chance lying belly up, stone dead, I also came of making alarm shots heard down in upon something that gave me a startling enlightenment.

The fallen leaves and the soil were torn and furrowed and stones and patches of moss were overturned, in evidence of a desperate struggle, the result of which was plainly shown by the antiered skull and scattered boncs of a deer and a mat of coarse gray hair trodden into the mold.

Hiram's wolves were no harmless creatures of the imagination, but savage realities, and a chill ran down my of dry pine needles that alighted there. back as I realized the probability that the pack was now rallying on my trail. long enough to suggest the idea that I did not doubt that I had heard their fire enough might be built here to roast voices.

I took my bearings and went forward at my best pace with far less thought of hunting than the fear of being hunted. Thus I went on for half an hour. twigs and swish of branches made by my own rapid progress, till a clamor of jays broke out 40 rods in my rear. As it drew near it was mingled with feet. I was near the crest of one of the fashioned steel box with a hinged cover than one who does not know how far a evident that instead of driving off my mortally wounded grouse can fly would assailants the sting of the small shot think it of any use to search, when I made them the more savagely persistent. I tried slugging the shot in a cartridge made of a bit of the lining of my coat, but it amounted to nothing. Bewailing the incredulity which had made me refuse the buckshot, I was at my wit's end how to raise the siege. Perhaps my supply of provisions would last till the enemy was starved out, if the weather did not turn cold and freeze me on my roost, which was a prospect less agreeable than that of subsisting on raw partridge flesh. Then it occurred to me to climb to the settlements. Slinging my gun, I up the pine came to an end, for there the whole top was broken off just above a whorl of stout branches onto which I climbed, but could get no outlook through the tree tops.

I filled and lighted my pipe, and, chancing to throw the unextinguished match onto the stub, which was broken about square across, and was at least a foot in diameter, it ignited a handful The flame lasted but a moment, yet small bits of the partridge, and close upon this followed another, which gave me hope of deliverance.

There was the bullet mold in my pocket, and if I could but manage to hearing nothing but the snapping of turn my paltry shot into a dozen good solid balls I would soon rid myself of the wolves. As I was refilling my pipe with a view of stimulating invention my tobacco box gave me a clew to a the rustle and patter of many swift solution of the problem. It was an old-

I fired several times as opportunity pack kept the position directly under me, now springing upward more than his length, then tumbling back upon his mates that crowded beneath him now standing upright on his hinder feet and pawing the air and snapping his fanged jaws viciously. While he was in this posture I fired one barrel straight into his mouth.

The recoil almost unseated me, but I recovered myself with no greater mishap than losing the toys out of my pocket. The big wolf made no motion but to sink in a lifeless heap with the back of his head blown out. The others scattered a little, but presently returned, sniffing at their dead comrade and lapping his blood. Poor Dolly got a cruel bite from one that spoiled her beauty forever. Another nosing jackin-the-box unhooked the lid, whereupbegan the ascent. But ten feet further on the little imp filliped his snout, and I could not help laughing at the fright it gave the great cowardly brute.

I fired the second barrel at the old grandfather as he warily skulked past, beyond the others, and the charge broke his back. He writhed about, biting the wound a moment, and then, dragging his paralyzed hinder parts, crawled out of sight. The others were getting somewhat shy, but plucked up courage during the cessation of hostilities, while I reloaded, and then came close under me again.

A third shot killed one nearly outright, and the fourth broke the shoulder of another as he ran. He retreated to a safe distance and amused himself with his wound, while the unhurt survivors stood off, now regarding curiously their dead and wounded companions, now me, with growing respect, and evidently doubting whether it was worth their while to continue any longer in my neighborhood.

When my gun was reloaded I settled the question for them with two shots. The first one bore such a hole in the belly of one that his entrails dragged upon the ground, and the second stung another so sharply that he stood not on the order of his going, but made off in all speed in company with his unscathed comrade, while the fellow with the broken shoulder hobbled after them, and the other poor wretch tried to follow them, turning now and again to bite his own entrails, entangling his feet and catching on stubs and stones. Evening was already deepening the forest shadows, and I had little time to spare in mercy to the merciless brute, but when I got to the ground I hastily loaded my gun and finished him with a shot in the head.

Then, picking up the toys and taking my course by the compass and the even-

THE SOUTHERN TOUR

President's Trip Has Strengthened the Tie Between the North and South.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 19 .- The original object of President McKinley's visit to the south has been entirely lost sight of. The unprecedented outbursts of loyalty to the union have completely overshadowed the rejoicing over the peace with Spain, though the participation in the latter was the avowed object of the president's southern trip. To thoroughly explain what is going on in the south to-day it is necessary to not only record the continuous enthusiasm and hospitable receptions, but also to recount the causes that have made the trip so remarkable. In all the speeches and in all the demonstrations which have marked the president's visit to Atlanta, Tuskegee, Montgomery and Savannah there has been the tacit admission that the war with Spain was the great factor in achieving the result, but it is to the result and not to the factor that the chief trend of speechmaking and of enthusiasm has lent itself. Political influences seem to play no part in the reception of President McKinley. On all sides there is an eagerness to publicly express the loyalty of the southern states and to admit that the war with Spain not only helped to weld the compact of the seetions, but gave to the south the opportunity to express sentiments of loyalty that have long lived but which have lacked opportunity of expression, and this has been done chiefly by democrats, many of whom fought for the stars and bars, and to all of whom the name of Davis is a sacred memory.

The frank references to and the discussion of the civil war have led to many delicate situations that were only saved from becoming irritating dilemmas by the tact of a president who fought against the southern troops or by the graceful utterances of the confederates who years ago opposed him on the battlefield. The marvelous scenes of an audience in the old confederate capital cheering the stars and stripes until they grew hoarse, of confederate veterans struggling to grasp the hand of a northern republican president, of Gen. Wheeler leading the people of his state in cheers for William McKinley in the place where Jefferson Davis once urged the south to fight for separation, are all redeemed from the suspicion of fulsomeness or the faint praise of politicians by the blunt truthfulness of the men who led in these new and tremendously fervent declarations of lo alty. Gov. Johnston, of Alabama, said a Montgomery: "We of the south have nothing to regret except our dead," but he at once went on to say that he rejoiced in the United States, with a strong accent on "United," and that it any man now said: "Is Alabama loyal to the union ?" he asked an absurd ques tion, because Alabama's loyalty ha been proven by Wheeler and Hobson and that there were hundreds of oth er Wheelers and Hobsons in Alabam ready to give equal proof of Alabama's glad fealty to the union. Such utterances as these have marked the trip with more frequency than i has been possible to report. On th part of the former confederates wh have made addresses of welcome President McKinley there has been no eleventh hour of confession of sin. In substance they have all said that the fought for what they then thought wa right; that they neither blame them selves nor their dead fathers or som for enlisting in the cause of the confed eracy, but that they accept to-day the changed conditions with a gladness and sincerity they never felt until the wa with Spain knit the nation into a con mon cause, and until a republicat president urged the people of the nort and south to honor the confederat dead. In the latter reason lies the main in centive to the intense and almost u expected enthusiasm with which th presidential party has been greet since Mr. McKinley's first speech in A lanta. Scarcely a speaker or a pap in Alabama or Georgia has made re erence to the president without me tioning on every occasion his tribu to the confederate dead. This utte ance represents a host of public at private speeches that have been ma since the arrival of the presidenti party in the south. It is the consense of various opinions expressed by stat officers and citizens of Georgia a Alabama, nearly all of whom are of posed to the president in politics, b who have welcomed him right glad in his capacity of chief executive, a who have given vent to wild enth siasm over his utterances regarding t confederate dead. In this way was planned to be a celebration of t peace with Spain has become almost tirely a genuine practical ratification of the peace between north and sou epoch-making in its significance, thr ing in its details and pathetic in t countless memories that it awakens. Indian Appropriation Bill Passe Washington, Dec. 19 .- In the ho Saturday the day was devoted to Indian appropriation bill, which i passed substantially as reported. This the third of the appropriation bills pass, and it clears the calendar of big supply bills, although another, egricultural, will be ready for a tion by to-day.

westerly incline of the mountainside, and, looking backward down the slope, I saw two wolves break through the undergrowth of whortleberry bushes, and had glimpses of others behind them

My next look was for a tree that could be climbed, and I was fortunate in discovering one close at hand, a lowbranching one of more than two feet in diameter at the base of the trunk, which for ten feet up to the whorls of sturdy green boughs bristled with stubs of dead limbs that made convenient steps.

My gun was of German make, rigged with a sling, which till now I had always thought a useless appurtenance, but in this emergency it proved quite otherwise, when by slinging the gun over my back I got up, easily and quickly. None too quickly, for in two minutes the leaders of the pack were beneath me, and glaring up at me with cruel, hungry eyes, having evidently seen my ascent, for they were not at fault a moment.

Others came till there were seven in all, some circling about the tree, some sitting on their haunches and treading impatiently with their forefeet, like a dog waiting for a choice morsel, and licking their slavering chops; some gnawed at the trunk or made prodigious leaps at the lower branches.

I climbed to a secure and comfortable seat on a limb 20 feet from the ground, and, after getting my breath, and my nerves were a little settled, I tried the effect of a charge of No. 6 on one of the besiegers, as I got a tolerable fair aim at his uplifted muzzle through an openpain, followed by a general commoglimpses of the stung brute clawing is head with alternate forepaws.

ledges that ridge crosswise the long | and square corners that would serve as a spout to pour melted lead from.

I transferred the tobacco to a pocket, made a cut of a small green limb firmly on to the open cover for a handle, and had what promised to be a serviceable smelting ladle. Then, reaching out, I gathered some dry twigs and bits of branches, and I soon had a small fire burning in the center of the stub. When it was well going I held the improvised ladle, with a couple ounces of shot in it, over the hottest place, and, after some patient waiting, had the satisfaction of seeing the separate pellets become a little puddle of molten lead. I managed to pour most of it into the mold and got three good bullets at the first smelting, but lost one, which fell to the ground. Better luck attended three more successive trials, which gave me 13 bullets, making 15 in all, which I thought might answer my purpose, and I whipped out the fire with a green branch.

It was now near sundown, so there was no time to be lost if I was to get away by daylight.

The bullets were much too small for the bore of my gun, therefore I put two in each barrel, with a light charge of shot, and descended to the lower branch, where I seated myself upon the one where I could get the clearest view of the ground.

The wolves greeted my reappearance with a chorus of savage yelps as they gathered eagerly beneath me, snapping and snarling, each struggling for the nearest place that he might be first at the expected feast. One grizzled old fellow, the patriarch of the tribe, who had curled himself up in the fallen treetop, to bide my downfall, now had his philosophical patience overcome and limped forth from his lair, sneaking around the outskirts of the crowd with his hungry eyes constantly upon me. The largest and strongest of the | think I could do it .- Judge.

ing star, I held forward at such speed as the rough and darkening way would permit. Fortunately, the almost full moon was well up in the clear sky, and I had little difficulty in finding my way down the mountain and reached Bradley's before their early bedtime.

Little Molly Bradley prized the doll all the more for the scars which proved her hairbreadth escape, and her brother looked upon the jack-in-the-box that had scared a wolf as a hero as doughty as Jack the Giant Killer.

Their father seemed to doubt my story till I led him to the scene of my adventure the next morning, and showed him the four wolves, for we found the broken-backed patriarch after a short search.

When we returned with the pelts the Christmas dinner was ready for us, no mean part of it being the partridges, much more nicely cooked by Mrs. Bradley than I could have done it on the tree stump had I been obliged to.

When I went home the next day there was a full pouch of buckshot in my pocket, but I found no use for it .-- Rowland Robinson, in Chicago Inter Ocean.

President McKinley's Address at a Banquet in Savannah, Ga. - He Spends a Busy Sunday in That City.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 19 .- President McKinley, on his entry into Savannah at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning, was welcomed with a salute of 21 guns, fired from brass cannon presented by Gen. Washington to the Chatham guards, of Savannah, 108 years ago. Ten thousand people were massed at the front of the De Soto hotel to greet flict. Her trials, he said, deserved the him, and against their determination to get close to the carriages of the presidential party the Georgia hussars, acting as escort, and the provost guard, were as toy soldiers.

After a brief halt at the hotel, the presidential party proceeded to the reviewing stand, erected at Forsythe park.

Fourteen thousand soldiers of the Seventh army corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. J. Warren Kiefer, passed in review before the commander in chief, and the impressive military ceremonial was witnessed by 30,000 civilian spectators.

Three hundred persons were present at the banquet table at night, and when President McKinley arose to respond to the toast, "The United States," the cheering was as enthusiastic as any that has characterized his week of triumphs.

President on Nation's Duty.

When the applause had subsided the president said:

There is cause for congratulation that with the grave problems before us growing any divisions at home.

Our financial and revenue policies cannot be changed for at least four years, and whatever legislation may be had affecting them during that period will be to improve and strengthen, not destroy them.

"The public mind can, therefore, repose in reasonable security, while business will proceed without apprehension of serious and sudden changes so distracting to the commercial world and so distracting to the business man. All of which is fortunate 'Even those who desire other and different policies prefer permanence to con-stant change, or, what is almost as hurtful, the fear of change. There are happily now no domestic differences to check the progress and prosperity of the country which our peaceful relations with the whole

Gage, of Chicago, was heard earlier in the evening in an address dealing with the growing commerce of the nation.

Secretary Alger responded to "The Army," and Secretary Wilson spoke upon "Agriculture." Gen. Wheeler, amid intense enthusiasm, replied to the toast, "Woman," with a glowing, chivalrous tribute, which, though brief, touched the hearts of his southern audience.

Long Praises Spain's Queen.

Speaking to the toast "The Navy," Secretary Long grew pathetic, and made an almost impassioned appeal in behalf of the queen of Spain. He referred tenderly to her mother love for her son, her heart-burnings and anzieties during the war, and the blighting. of her hopes by the outcome of the contenderest sympathy of every mother, every woman, in America. After an expression of sympathy for the queen of Spain, Secretary Long took up the matter of territorial expansion, and in the strongest terms indorsed the position of the administration. He expressed the firm conviction that American dominition of the Philippines would result in moral and material advantage to the natives.

How Sunday Was Spent.

Savannah, Ga., Dec. 19 .- Notwith standing Sunday was supposed to be a day of rest with the presidential party. it was, as a matter of fact, filled with interest and activity. The day was an ideal one. Though they had sat late at the banquet Saturday night-it was near two o'clock when Gen. Wheeler delivered his delightful peroration to "Woman"-the president and accompanying members of his cabinet arose to breakfast at about the usual hour, and later they separated to attend Divine services.

President McKinley attended church at the Wesley Monumental Methodist out of the war with Spain, we are free from church. Mrs. McKinley did not accompany him. She is suffering from a slight cold, and remained at the hotel. Her indisposition, however, does not amount to real illness, and in the afternoon she was able to take a carriage ride about the city. The president was met at the door of the church by leading members of the congregation, who escorted him to the pew reserved for for the country, for every interest and him. As he entered the congregation every section of the country. arose and remained standing until be arose and remained standing until he had taken his seat. The sermon was by Rev. John A. Thomson, D. D. There was no reference to the distinguished presence during the service, beyond an invocation by the preacher for Divine uidance for the president during the "This is fortunate, too, in another sense. crisis which now confronted the country.

An Unexplored Field.

"Neither prejudice nor passion, nor previous condition can embarrass the free action and calm judgment of the citizen. We have entered upon new paths. We are treading in an unexplored field which will test our wisdom and statesmanship.

"The chief consideration is one of duty: our actions must be controlled by it. No settlement is admissable which will not preserve our honor and promote the best interests of all concerned.

With a united country and the gathered wisdom of all the people, seeking only the right, inspired only by high purposes, moved only by duty and humanity, we cannot err. We may be baffled or deterred and often discouraged, but final success in a cause which is altogether unselfish and humanitarian can only be deferred, not prevented.

"If, following the clear precepts of duty, territory falls to us, and the welfare of an alien people require our guidance and protection, who will shrink from the responsibility, grave though it may be?

"Can we leave those people who, by the fortunes of war and our own acts, are helpless and without government to chaos and anarchy, after we have destroyed the only government they have had?

Duty Is Apparent.

"After destroying their government it is the duty of the American government to provide for them a better one. Shall we distrust ourselves, shall we proclaim to the world our inability to give kindly government to oppressed peoples, whose future, by the victories of war, is confided to us? We may wish it were otherwise, but who will question our duty now? is tribut

Secretary Alger and Gen. Shafter also visited the camps. Secretary Alger paid more attention to the camp than any other member of the party. He went through several of the regimental villages, from headquarters to kitchens, and made a critical examination. He also visited the hospital of the First division, where he spoke kindly to the sick men and made inquiries into their wants and how they were supplied. After his trip he expressed himself as very much gratified with the camp and the work of the hospital corps.

The members of the visiting party pent the evening in the parlors of the hotel until the time came for them to depart for Macon, for which place they left at midnight. On the way to the depot the president was greeted with hearty cheers, as indeed he has been every time he has come within sight
