A NEW ELECTRIC ROAD.

Which Is to Be Completed by October 1, 1899,

AND GO THROUGH CHELSEA

CONNECTING US WITH ANN ARBOR AND JACKSON — THE FRANCHISES HAVE ALL BEEN SECURED.—FARMERS ARE STRONGLY IN FAVOR OF IT.

All the franchises necessary for the construction of an electric railway between Ann Arbor and Jackson have now been secured and the early completion of the road is practically assured. Attorneys Thomas D. Kearney and Arthur Brown, of Ann Arbor, acting for the projectors, among whom are certain stockholders of the Detroit, Ypsilanti & Ann Arbor electric railway, have quietly secured the right of way between the two cities and it is the intention to have the road ready for operation by Oct. 1. There is some doubt as to the exact route to be taken, whether by the territorial road out of Ann Arbor to this village, or by way of Dexter. From here to Jackson, to avoid the bad hills on the territorial road, it will run west on the highway, which runs parallel with the Michigan Central, as far as Cavanaugh Lake, thence north to strike the territorial road west of the hills, and from that point on through Grass Lake and Leoni to the eastern end of Main st., Jackson, where it will connect with the Jackson city electric lines. The people along the line are very enthusiastic over it and there has been no opposition from any point.

C. M. B. A. Branch for Chelsea.

A very enthusiastic meeting of men of St. Mary's church, who are interested in the C. M. B. A. was held in the G. A. R. hall last Tuesday evening, Feb. 28. The meeting was called to order by Ex-Congressman Gorman, who made some felicitous remarks and introduced Mr. John H. Breen, the grand secretary of the order, from Detroit, who spoke for more than an hour on the purposes and benefits of the organization. About 40 signed the application for a charter, and in a short time the local branch will be instituted. The meeting was a grand success considering the inclement night. The gentlemen desire to thank most heartily the local post of G. A. R. for giving them the use of their hall. Rev. W. Conditine, who was present, entertained Mr. Breen, who returned to Detroit Wednesday morning.

Pupils' Recital.

Miss Otis, of Ann Arbor, who has a class of vocal pupils in this village, gave a most pleasing vocal recital to the members of her class and a few of their friends at the home of Mrs. L. T. Freeman, on Friday evening. There were about 25 present and it was an enjoyable evening for all concerned. Those who took part in it were the Misses Fannie Warner, Luella Townsend, Lillie Ghard, Reilly, and Lettie Wackenhut, and Mrs. George H. Kempf. After the recital was concluded Miss Otis sang a selection. Another recital will be held in two weeks at Mrs. George H. Kempf's.

The people of St. Joseph's church, Dexter, will give a grand banquet on St. Patrick's eve, March 16.

COMFORTING WORDS TO WOMEN.

The Surgical Chair and its Tortures May be Avoided by Women Who Heed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice.

Woman's modesty is natural; it is charming. To many women a full statement of their troubles to a male physician is almost impossible. The whole truth may be told to Mrs. Pinkham because she is a woman, and her advice is freely offered to all women sufferers.

Mrs. O. E. LADD, of 19th and N Sts., Galveston, Texas, whose letter is printed below, was completely discouraged when she first wrote to Mrs. Pinkham. Here is what she says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wrote to you some time ago, telling you of my ills, but now I write to thank you for the good your remedies have done me. I have used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three packages of Sanative Wash, and one box of Liver Pills, and to-day I call myself a well woman. I suffered with backache, constant headache, whites, sick stomach, no appetite, could not sleep, and was very nervous. At time of menstruation was in terrible pain. Your medicine is worth its weight in gold. I never can say enough in praise of it. I have recommended it to many friends. If only all suffering women would try it, there would be more happy homes and healthy women. I thank you for the change your medicine has made in me.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Mrs. Pinkham's advice, have saved thousands of women from hospital operations.

The lives of women are hard; whether at home with a ceaseless round of domestic duties or working at some regular employment, their daily tasks make constant war on health. If all women understood themselves fully and knew how exactly and soothingly Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound acts on the female organs, there would be less suffering.

Society Women

and, in fact, nearly all women who undergo a nervous strain, are compelled to regretfully watch the growing pallor of their cheeks, the coming wrinkles and thinness that become more distressing every day. Every woman knows that ill-health is a fatal enemy to beauty and that good health gives to the plainest face an enduring attractiveness. Pure blood and strong nerves—these are the secret of health and beauty.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People build up and purify the blood, and strengthen the nerves. To the young girl they are invaluable, to the mother they are a necessity, to the woman approaching fifty they are the best remedy that science has devised for this crisis of her life.

Mrs. Jacob Weaver, of Bushnell, Ill., is fifty-six years old. She says: "I suffered for five or six years with the trouble that comes to women at this time of life. I was much weakened, was unable, much of the time, to do my own work, and suffered beyond my power to describe. I was downhearted and melancholy. Nothing seemed to do me any good. Then I made up my mind to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I bought the first box in March, 1897, and was benefited from the start. A box and a half cured me completely, and I am now rugged and strong."

The genuine package always bears the full name. As all druggists or sent postpaid on receipt of price 50¢ per box by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N.Y.

CHAPTER I.

"Henry M. Stevens, Manila (via Hong-Kong):
"Business suspended. Cancel unshipped orders. Draw Larrinaga & Co. balance to date, $200. LANTINE & COMPANY."
I remember as if it happened but yesterday the queer feeling which came over me when I read the foregoing cable. It had been an unusually warm day for March, and I was trying to keep cool in the lounge-room of the European club, on the river bank, a short distance from the city. My business in Manila was practically finished, and I was anticipating a few days of recreation before the Hong-Kong steamer left, upon the following Tuesday, when the message was handed me by one of the native boys employed by the club.
It was such a thorough surprise that for several moments I did not realize the position in which it placed me. I had been the eastern representative of Lantine & Company for over two years, and, although my savings had disappeared through a series of ill-advised investments, my position seemed such a secure one that money matters seldom troubled me. Now, however, after drawing from the Manila banking and shipping house the amount mentioned in the dispatch, my entire capital consisted of something less than three hundred dollars, and I had no idea which way to look for employment.
Two of the leading Manila merchants happened to be in the club at the time, and, after canceling the purchases I had made from them on behalf of my house, I cabled to Hong-Kong and Shanghai in the hope of heading off shipments ordered there during the previous month. Then, driving to my hotel in Binondo—the Oriente—I settled matters as far as lay in my power, and was ready for dinner before eight o'clock.
The Oriente, being new and progressive, sets one of the best tables in the east, and, as experience with oriental life brings the conviction that neither hurry nor worry is conducive to good health, I took my time over the meal. Then, lighting a cheroot, I walked down the Escolta as far as the Puente d'Espana, which connects Binondo with the old walled citadel of Manila, and, leaning against the hand-rail under a solitary electric light, watched the canoes and bancos on the Pasig while I tried to do a little figuring as to my immediate prospects. Three hundred dollars would land me in New York by careful management, but there was no certainty of employment when I reached there; and the other foreign houses were so well represented between Yokohama and Singapore that an immediate opening in the east seemed unlikely.
At first I could think of nothing but my uncomfortable predicament. But after awhile the influence of a good dinner and the soothing qualities of the climate began to make themselves felt. I found myself watching the motley crowd of all nationalities which passed and repassed across the bridge, the crowds of laughing Mestiza and Visaya girls strolling along through the Paseo to hear the military band at Luneta, groups of Chinamen sauntering about after the day's business, and Spanish officers driving in carromatas with the ladies of their families. Down the river were rows of small coasting steamers and brigs, each spar and funnel outlined distinctly by electric lights on the quays; beyond them, a red spark from the light-house upon the northern mole, and scattered lights from larger vessels which lay at anchor two or three miles out in the bay.
While watching these, I noticed a government launch coming up the river. The landing steps of the quay were but a few paces below the bridge, and I could easily see the faces of two men as they stepped ashore from her. They were both strange to me, but there was something about the walk of one which seemed familiar. I presume my own face must have been distinct, as I leaned over the rail, for the man glanced searchingly at me as he climbed to the street level. At first he turned and walked away several steps, evidently under the impression that he had made a mistake, then came back, as if to cross the bridge in front of me. We looked each other in the eye for a second; then he stopped, and said:
"If you're not Harry Stevens, of New York, I've made the biggest mistake of my life."
I grasped the outstretched hand and began to see something familiar behind the brown beard.
"Yes, I'm Harry Stevens, but—hold on a minute. Weren't you with the Oceanic Steamship company, several years ago? By Jove! It can't be Dick Halstead? What? Well, I'm blessed! Where on earth did you drop from? You have changed, and no mistake."

"Possibly. But you haven't, old chap; I'd know you anywhere. Say, look here, we've got a heap to talk about; come up to the club. No, never mind the carromata; it's cooler on the river. We'll go up in the launch."
"But—how the deuce? I thought she belonged to the government?"
"That's right. So do I, for the present." We had taken our seats in the stern, and were gliding up the motionless stream. "I've been in command of that tramp, the Countess of Devon, for over a year—you see her lights out there, two miles from the mole—and the biggest stockholder in the company that owns her is old Leon Ramirez, of Liverpool and this place. So when the Isla de Ponape, that used to carry mail to the Carolines and Ladrones, ran ashore on Espiritu Santo, Ramirez chartered the Countess to the government here until the company could spare another of their own boats with big enough coal capacity to make the trip. That was last September, and they manage things so slowly that I'm still running supplies out to those islands, once in three months, with a Scotch engineer and a Spanish crew, connecting with the Messageries boats at Saigon the rest of the time. Now tell me under what the canopy brings you out here."
"Business, of course; you didn't think I was traveling on my money, did you? I've been buying China goods, assorted devils, and Manila matting for Lantine & Co. about two years.

"SI, SENOR!"

Up to three o'clock this afternoon I expected to keep on buying them until my liver refused to stand the climate, but about that time this cable changed my plans for me." Halstead looked thoughtful as he read the message which I handed him. We had reached the club quay, and were climbing to the balcony, where the boy presently brought us cigars and coffee.
"M-m-m—how long will it take you to close matters up for the company?"
"They're settled now, as far as anything I can do. It will be a month before they can get letters out here, but the orders already shipped will have to be paid for. Larrinaga's people told me this evening that they knew old man Lantine to be individually good for all the house bought. This cable, however, winds up my connection with them for the present."
"And you haven't decided what you're going to do next?"
"Not yet. I'll probably go to Hong-Kong on Tuesday and see how things look there."
"Why not take a little vacation? You've been working hard, and a rest would do you good. Run out to the Ladrones with me. It's a fine voyage at this time of year, and I'm so sick of talking mixed languages that it'll be a perfect godsend to have an old friend along. Come now, what do you say?"
"Why, I don't know. I'd like nothing better, if m-m-m—there's really no reason why I shouldn't. When do you sail?"
"About midnight."
"What, to-night?"
"Sure. I only came ashore to get my papers from the custom house, and should be getting down there as soon as I finish this cigar. The mail's on board now, I guess. You're stopping at the Oriente, of course; how long will it take to get your duds together?"
"Fifteen minutes. But how about a passport? The commandante's office closed at noon."
"That's all right. No one'll stop you on a government launch, and I'll take care of the rest. Come along."

In three-quarters of an hour Halstead and I reached the quay with my luggage, and 20 minutes later we were climbing the Countess of Devon's accommodation ladder, out in the bay. The Spanish mate stood at the top and touched his cap. Halstead looked along the gangway and said:
"All the passengers aboard, Mr. Diaz?"
"Si, senior."
"Pilot come off with Mr. McPherson?"
"Si, senior."
"All right. Set your anchor up and find how much she's drawing. Tell Mr. Moreno to be careful that iron buoy doesn't foul the screw this time, and have the quartermaster bring Mr. Stevens' luggage up to my room. The steward can give the passengers biscuits and coffee if they want it before turning in—there are only a dozen, I think—and seat the ladies' party at my table in the morning. Now, old chap" (turning to me), "I'm going to give you the extra berth in my cabin, and you can do as you please on board. Go to sleep now, if you like, or bring a stool up on the bridge and smoke. I shan't turn in until after breakfast."
"If that's the case, I'll stay with you. Just to humor my fool curiosity, I wish you'd explain why you start at such an ungodly hour. There's no bar to cross, so the tides can't make any difference."
"No; there's plenty of water, but after passing Cape Santiago there isn't another light in the strait. There are two dim ones on the no'theas' corner of Burias island, but they're not visible to west'ard, and I want to see where I'm navigating between Burias and Ticao. We'll get there about five o'clock to-morrow morning,—ought to pass Santiago at breakfast time to-day,—so that during the night we'll have plenty of elbow room."
"Suppose you strike rain or fog?"
"We won't. This is the morning of March 29, isn't it? Well, two weeks from to-morrow it'll be sultry, and still, and hot as Tophet. After that the air'll smell like a furnace until April 24. Then there'll be a hurricane in this bay that will send a pile of ships ashore and spread corrugated iron roofs all over the landscape, and from that time to about the first of October the weather'll be simply hellish—rain, hurricanes, fever and mud. In other words, the southwest monsoon will have set in for six months. You ought to know when the monsoon changes, if you've been out here two years."
"Well, I suppose I should, but I've spent the summers in Yokohama and Shanghai, and they don't make so much difference up there."
It was a perfect night. The wind had died down until there was scarcely a ripple on the water and each particular star was reflected in it. The lights of Cavite, on our left, were fast dropping astern; and, approaching Corregidor island at the entrance of the bay, about three o'clock, the mountains of the Piquito on the south head with the Sierra de Mariveles on the north rose like dark blue ghosts 4,000 feet in the air. Corregidor itself stood over 600 feet above high water, the light on its summit filling the rocks with grotesque shadows as we passed close under it.
Halstead occasionally called my attention to some prominent point, but he was too closely occupied in watching the different bearings to talk very much; and, although we didn't drop the pilot until well past Cape Santiago, I could see that my friend preferred to know himself just how his ship was being navigated. After a six-o'clock breakfast we turned in and slept until noon. Then we went below and sat down at our first meal with the passengers, only four of whom spoke our language, so that the conversation was mostly carried on in rudimentary Spanish.

CHAPTER II.

The captain's cabin was an exceedingly comfortable one, with a large chart table in the middle, cushioned transoms around the sides, and several luxurious rattan chairs. It was situated upon the hurricane deck directly under the wheel-house, and had large windows instead of the usual ports, so that we had an uninterrupted view of everything that was going on. While I smoked an after-dinner cigar and enjoyed the breeze which blew through our quarters, the strange and rapid succession of events that had resulted in my being bound for the most forgotten corner of the earth's surface struck me very forcibly. Every few moments some reminiscence of old times would occur to one or the other of us, and I finally asked Halstead if he were married.
"No," he said; "I'm not. I was just going to ask the same question. It seems rather odd that we two should have reached the age of—let's see; I'm 35, and you can't be far from it—without settling down. Do you know, old chap, I'm beginning to think I haven't made much of a success in life."
"Oh, I don't know. You're likely to have a ship as long as you want to go to sea, aren't you? And the house would probably offer a fairly good berth ashore, if you felt like taking it."
"I suppose so, as long as the present management remains unchanged. But, even so, there's no chance of making a fortune at it. Here we are, you and I, two men in the prime of life, and able thoroughly to enjoy all the good things in it, yet I suppose we are likely to keep on drudging for some one else as long as we live. In the long run the fellow who persistently drudges comes out ahead, and then he's too old to enjoy his good fortune. It takes a young man to appreciate the things that money will buy. Now why can't we strike a bit of luck somewhere, find a buried treasure or something of the sort, and then live like princes in London or New York, instead of frying our gizzards out in the East Indies? Isn't there a fairy godmother that we might propitiate?"

"M-m-m, I don't seem to remember any in my family. But, speaking of treasure, aren't we sailing over pretty much the same track as that followed by the old galleons?"
"That's right; same track, to a mile. To-morrow morning I'll show you Port San Jacinto, on the island of Ticao, where they used to wait for a favorable wind in beating through the San Bernardino passage. Anson's ships watched for them just outside the 'Emboacadero,' as it is called in Spanish, and they all stopped at the Ladrones for pigs and water on the voyage across."
"Well, weren't they usually loaded with a pretty rich cargo?"
"Rich! Why, man, the Acapulco galleon brought between two and three millions—in silver dollars, gold doubloons, and indigo—to Manila, once or twice every year. You see, the junks used to come down from Hong-Kong in March or April, loaded with silk brocades, fine linen, gold ornaments and jewels, which the Manila Spaniards bought and, after keeping what they wanted for personal use, shipped to Acapulco on speculation. Mexico was a viceregal province then, and the Philippines was a subdependency. The return galleon brought the proceeds of these speculations; though, as the boats, or shipping permits for transportation space, were issued by the governors for revenue, they practically amounted to a Philippine subsidy."
"That's about as I remember it. There were a good many galleons wrecked on the coral islands, weren't there?"
"Lots of them; they were great unwieldy tubs, always loaded beyond their carrying capacity. And, by the way, that reminds me of an instance which I happen to know about, more or less directly. Last voyage, Padre Julian, who has been in charge of the mission on Saipan for 30 or 40 years, came home with me. The old chap is a good deal of a student, and has the history of these islands at his finger-ends—best judge of rum and sherry I ever saw. I used to fill him up with good liquor, just to see him enjoy it and hear the stories he told when the stuff got into his blood."

THE GUARD'S LITTLE STORY.
A Passenger Who Wasn't Going to Forget Him Remembers Him After Two Years.
"Just as I'd shut the gates one day," said a guard on the elevated, according to the New York Sun, "a man came running down the aisle of one of the cars wanting to get off."
"Let me off," he said, "two minutes is important to me."
"The train had only just started, the man looked as though he meant what he said, and I swung the gate back and let him off. As he stepped on the platform he turned and looked at the number on my cap. I could see that he'd got it, and he said to me:
"I won't forget you."
"Well, I never saw or heard anything more of him for two years, and then one day he walked into the car. I knew him as soon as I saw him, and it seems that he remembered me. When he came along to the door at the station where he was going to get off, he said to me:
"Aren't you the man that let me off a train once about two years ago?"
"And I said yes, I was, and with that he handed me over a cigar."
"I lighted it up that night after I'd got home, but it was so bad I couldn't smoke it, and I had to throw it away."

Chilled Rice.
Dishes of food and of chilled rice are common enough in French cookery, but are seldom seen on American tables, though cold rice puddings are a common dessert, and every child has learned to eat cold rice and milk for a summer supper. The difference between chilled and iced or a merely cold dish is plain. A chilled dish must be packed in ice until it is ice cold, but not partially frozen, as an iced dish should be. A cold dish means one that has merely lost its heat. Most dishes that are served cold are better for being chilled, though, of course, there are many things, like bread and pastries, that are better cold, and which it would be absurd to chill. Coarse boiled grains, like oatmeal or crushed wheat, are not properly served chilled, although they are often recommended to be served in this way.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

"Durability is Better Than Show."
The wealth of the multi-millionaires is not equal to good health. Riches without health are a curse, and yet the rich, the middle classes and the poor alike have, in Hood's Sarsaparilla, a valuable assistant in getting and maintaining perfect health. It never disappoints.

Scrofula.—Three years ago our son, now eleven, had a serious case of scrofula and erysipelas with dreadful sores, discharging and itching constantly. He could not walk. Several physicians did not help for sixteen months. Three months' treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla made him perfectly well. We are glad to tell others of it. Mrs. DAVID LAIRD, Ottawa, Kansas.

Nausea.—Vomiting spells, dizziness and prostration troubled me for years. Had neuralgia, grew weak and could not sleep. My age was against me, but Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me thoroughly. My weight increased from 125 to 143 pounds. I am the mother of nine children. Never felt so well and strong since I was married as I do now. Mrs. M. A. WATERS, 1529 33d St., Washington, D. C.

Eczema.—We had to tie the hands of our two year old son on account of eczema on face and limbs. No medicine even helped until we used Hood's Sarsaparilla, which soon cured it. Mrs. A. VAN WYCK, 123 Montgomery Street, Paterson, N. J.

CONSTIPATION
"I have gone 14 days at a time without a movement of the bowels, not being able to move them except by using hot water injections. Chronic constipation for seven years placed me in this terrible condition; during that time I did everything I heard of but never found any relief; such was my case until I began using CASCARETS. I now have from one to three passages a day, and if I was rich I would give $100.00 for each movement; it is such a relief."

With a variety enough to suit almost any kind of a settler. The farmer will find lands suited to any branch of agriculture. THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1899

There are 42 employees in the Michigan senate chamber and only 83 senators.
The solons should be well waited on.

The Pingreeites won a notable victory in the house of representatives Tuesday morning when the celebrated Atkinson bill was passed by a vote of 73 to 23, being more than a two-thirds vote of the 95 members present and voting.

It will be a relief to all readers of our daily newspapers when the army beef question has been probed to the bottom and the subject buried so deep that you could not find it with an X-ray, a microscope or a search light.

Governor Pingree's nomination of A. F.
Freeman, of Manchester, as a member of the state board of prison control is meeting with a determined opposition in its confirmation by the senate. But Mr Freeman will be a member of that board "allice samee."

The naval committee of the house of representatives at Washington has directed a favorable report on the senate bill creating the grade of admiral, which is intended as a reward to Rear Admiral Dewey for his great services in the war with Spain.

E. J. Helber, editor of the Neue Washtenaw Post, comes out in an editorial in the last week's issue of that paper, advocating Martin J. Cavanaugh, of Ann Arbor, formerly of Chelsea, as a candidate before the democratic county convention for the office of circuit judge.

Among the many ridiculous bills before the legislature is one requiring a license fee of $5 from every person in the state who uses intoxicating liquors as a beverage. The motive of the father of bill is doubtless good and pure enough, but such a law could never be successfully operated.

The Grand Rapids Herald says: "Colonel Bryan thinks the Chicago platform will be accepted as the standard of faith by the next democratic national convention. It may be accepted by the next 'new' democratic convention, but the 'old' democrats won't touch it with a 10-foot pole."

Major-General Joseph M. Wheeler has been invited to attend the annual encampment of the Michigan department G. A.
R., in Petoskey, June 21-22, and be the guest of the city. The general has accepted the invitation provided he is in this country at that time. This invitation and acceptance should only serve as another bond to draw the now undivided
North and South still closer together.

The beet sugar lobbyists worked a bold game in the senate Friday morning when by means of a resolution declaring it to be "the sense of the legislature that no change be made in the existing bounty upon beet sugar manufactured within this state during the present session of the legislature," they attempted to forestall all legislation on the subject. Such presumptuous action is unparalleled and is not in the interest of good government. If a beet sugar bounty is really needed, legislation in its favor can surely be carried through without a resort to such tricky work as this.

If a bounty must be paid in order to make the raising of the sugar beet in Michigan a success, why not repeal the present law giving the bounty to the manufacturer and do as the state of Oregon does, pay a bounty of $1 a ton to the farmer who raises the beets? He has to run the most risk in raising the crop. The manufacturers' risk consists of raking in a good profit from the manufacture of the raw material. If there was not a good profit in it, men would not be tumbling over each other in their endeavor to secure stock in a factory as is the case in Bay City and other places.

ment postal system extravagant?" leader, day morning aged 60 years. He leaves a widow and had a large circle of relatives in this county.

Mrs. Ida Vickery, of Munith, died Saturday afternoon of consumption, aged 22 years. Her sister died Monday of last only children of Mr. and Mrs. Riethmiller

"Interest in the Norvell Farmers' Club seems to be lagging," says the Manchester Enterprise, "as some of the members find it inconvenient to entertain the club." This is not the case with the clubs in this neighborhood which are both good lively institutions.

The Lansing, Dexter & Ann Arbor Railway Co. has been reorganized under the

Mrs. M. Eisenbeiser, of Waterloo, died Sunday, after a few days' illness, of pneu-the house yesterday. Rev. Horace G. Palmer officiating. The remains were interred in Mt. Hope cemetery, Waterloo. The deceased lady was about 35 years old and leaves a husband and four young children.

Remarkable Reascue.

Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this great discovery at Glazier & Stimson's Bank Drug Store. Only 50 cents and $1, every bottle guaranteed.

Republican State Ticket.

At the Republican state convention held in Jackson yesterday Justice C. B. Grant was renominated on the fourth ballot. Regent Henry S. Dean, of Ann Arbor, and Col. Eli R. Sutton, of Detroit, were unanimously nominated for regents of the university. The committee on resolutions was divided on the endorsement of the Atkinson bill, and the report of the majority of the committee, which did not include its endorsement, was adopted in convention by a vote of 439 to 250. It was 7 o'clock in the evening when the work of the convention was finished. John J.
Carton, of Flint, was chairman of the convention.

Drunks are Expensive to the County.

The county board of prison examiners, consisting of Probate Judge Newkirk, County Juvenile Agent, P. J. Lehman and Superintendents of the Poor, E. P. Mason, of Ann Arbor, James Taylor, of Chelsea, and Tracy L. Towner, of Ypsilanti, inspected the county jail on Friday morning last. During the past six months 320 prisoners have been incarcerated in the county jail. Out of this number 188 were drunks. These drunks cost the county $1,436.32, or an average of about $8 each. The board of supervisors objects to this great expense for prosecuting a lot of worthless fellows, most of whose offenses are committed in the city of Ann Arbor, and should rightfully be taken care of by that city and thinks that it is

Killed by the Cars.

Another of those fatalities on the railroad which have at different times shocked the residents of Chelsea, occurred on the Michigan Central, near the fair grounds, at 3:10 o'clock Saturday morning, when John Corey, who with two companions, John Lowe and John Strieter, was stealing a ride from Jackson on the freight train which passed through here at that time, fell while getting off the car of lumber on which they were riding and was ground to death under the wheels of the 20 cars which subsequently passed over him. His head was terribly crushed and cut, both his hands were cut off, his right leg was cut off midway of the thigh, his left leg was crushed above the knee, also the foot, and his face and back were badly scratched. The body was brought to the depot by the trainmen and laid in the baggage room where it was viewed by the jury and afterwards taken to Staffan's undertaking rooms and prepared for burial. The unfortunate young man was between 21 and 22 years of age.

From the testimony given at the inquest held in Armory hall Monday morning before Justice Bernard Parker and a jury composed of D. B. Taylor, William G. Lewick, J. A. Bachman, Israel Vogel, C. W. Maroney and C. D. Allyn, it appears that the three young men had been together all Friday afternoon and evening. At a little after 10 o'clock they got on a freight train and went to Jackson where they remained until 2 a.m., when they got on the train by which Corey came to his death an hour and ten minutes later and came home. The train had slowed up when Corey left his companion without a word and walked back along the car to get off the train which was then nearly opposite his home. No one saw him fall under the cars, and his friend, John Strieter, who lives at Lima Center, did not know Corey was dead until Saturday evening. Conductor Whalen and brakeman Dappich felt the jar to the way car as it passed over the body and Whalen remarked that they had run over something. On looking back they saw the body lying doubled up between the rails. It was afterwards identified as that of John Corey.

The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts of the testimony. Attorney George L. Nadolleck, of the M. C. R. R., Detroit, was present at the inquest looking after the interests of the road.

The funeral services were held at St. Mary's church Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock and were conducted by Rev. Wm. P. Considine. The remains were interred in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by Glazier & Stimson, Bank Drug Store.

St. Mary's Church Mission.

The coming of the two Redemptorist Missionaries, who are fine pulpit orators, to give a mission in St. Mary's church on Sunday, March 19, is arousing much interest. The Rev. Frs. Klauer and Hogan who will preach the sermons and conduct the exercises, are eloquent and impressive speakers. All our citizens will be cordially welcomed to all their services. The order of exercises will be as follows:

Sunday, March 19—10:30 a.m., high mass, opening sermon; 3:00 p.m., opening of children's mission; 7:30 p.m., beads, sermon, benediction of the blessed sacrament.

On week days—5:00 a.m., mass, short instruction; 8:30 a.m., mass, sermon; 7:30 p.m., beads, sermon, benediction of the blessed sacrament.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

Anniversary Has Been Observed at the University of Michigan for Many Years.

HISTORY OF THE ORIGIN OF THE CUSTOM

Ex-President Tappan Made the Address at the First Celebration—Brief Review of How the Day Has Been Remembered for Over a Third of a Century.

[Special Correspondence.] Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 22.—For over a third of a century it has been the custom at the University of Michigan to observe the anniversary of Washington's birthday in a suitable manner.

"Back in '59 or '60," said Assistant Librarian Joseph H. Vance, the other day, when asked about the origin of the custom, "Robert E. Frayer, now one of the circuit judges at Detroit, agitated the matter of observing the 22d of February. As a result of his efforts a celebration was had. The students formed in line and marched to what is now the Unity tenement building, but was then the Methodist church. Dr. Tappan, who was at that time president of the university, gave an address on Washington. His father had served under the general in the revolutionary war and through him President Tappan had learned much of the Father of his Country, and had become a strong admirer of him. His address was very eulogistic."

A Monster Demonstration. In 1870 the students of the whole university, which at that time consisted of literary, medical and law departments, arranged a monstrous demonstration.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The Fourth infantry band, of Detroit, was engaged to lead the procession, which formed on the campus and marched to the Methodist church, where the addresses were delivered, but through some accident did not arrive until after the procession had marched and the exercises were well begun. The programme consisted of music and three orations. The first address was by J. S. Maltman, a literary student. The college paper in referring to it in the account of the day's exercises said it was "too partisan in character to receive universal approbation." Following the address the Glee club sang "Ninety Years Ago." T. J. Mather represented the medical department "in a manner not calculated to arouse much enthusiasm." The Glee club sang "The Song of a Thousand Years." A. D. Gilmore, the law representative "came nearer one's idea of Fourth of July eloquence."

Prophecy Came True.

The anniversary was observed in 1872 by an address to the law department by Prof. Thomas M. Cooley, who spoke on the "Great Men of Our Country." In a five line item the college paper disposes of the day's exercises, and prophesies that Cooley some day will belong to the category of great men. The same issue contained a two-column editorial complaining of a dearth of suitable reading matter for its columns.

"Washington's birthday," says the Chronicle of March 2, 1878, "was kept in the legal way—patriotic meditation—save by the laws, who invited Prof. Wells to address them. The exuberant demonstrations and whoops of welcome were especially vigorous when ladies entered the hall."

The address in 1879 was by Henry M. Cheever, of Detroit, now a member of the Michigan legislature. It was delivered before the law class and was highly eulogistic of Washington.

Eulogized Garfield.

As the 22d of February came on Saturday in 1880, the usual exercises were held on Saturday. Prof. Ridpath, of Greencastle, Ind., delivered an address in the law lecture-room. The following year Judge Cooley was again the orator. He was introduced by ex-Gov. Felch. In 1882 the speaker was Stewart L. Woodford, who did not eulogize Washington, but James A. Garfield.

A Southern Speaker.

In 1886 the exercises were held in University hall. The speaker was Senator Z. B. Vance, of North Carolina. He was introduced by Judge Cooley. The subject of his address was "Lawyers and Their Profession." The meeting was under the auspices of the law department. The speakers for 1887 and 1888 were Hon. Charles A. Kent and Prof. Wells, respectively. The first spoke of "Political Leadership," and the second on the "Personal Influence of Washington."

As February 22 came on Sunday in 1891 the university exercises were held the Friday evening preceding. The Webster and Jeffersonian societies gave a joint programme. Prof. Bradley M. Thompson presided at this meeting. The programme consisted of orations and a debate.

Cleveland the Orator.

The celebration of 1892 was a memorable one. The orator was ex-President Grover Cleveland. He was met at Detroit and brought to Ann Arbor on a special train. At the depot the mayor presented him with a basket containing the resolutions passed by the council giving him the freedom of the city and conferring honorary citizenship upon him. A long procession of students escorted him through the streets of the city. He was introduced to the audience, which crowded University hall, by President Angell, of the university.

Other Speakers.

The speakers since 1882 have been: 1893, Stephen A. Douglas; 1894, Hon. J. P. Dolliver; 1895, Hon. John J. Lentz; 1896, Hon. Benjamin Butterworth; 1897, Henry Wade Rogers; 1898, E. Benjamin Andrews.

The speaker for this year was Hon. Charles A. Towne, of Duluth, Minn., who has represented his district in congress and who is now a prominent silver republican leader, having been national chairman of that party.

Mr. Towne attended the high school at Owosso, Mich., when Prof. H. B. Hutchins, now dean of the law department of the University of Michigan, was principal there. He entered the literary department of the University of Michigan in 1877, and was graduated with the degree of Ph. B., in 1881. In his freshman year he joined the Adelphi literary society, of which he remained a member during his entire college career. In his sophomore year he was class orator and an editor on the Oracle. As a junior he represented his class on the Lecture Association board, was secretary of the Adelphi society, and during the second semester an editor on the Chronicle. In the latter capacity he wrote an editorial on "Our Political Duties," in which he said:

"Every college man should prepare himself to be, whatever his vocation, a political counselor to his fellow citizen. Let us qualify ourselves to entertain reasonable and just opinions and then use the dearest exercise of our influence to enforce them, in banishing the evils of practical politics and in forming a true system of political judgment."

He also wrote several poems and had charge of the department of correspondence and the general literary matter. In his last year he had the honor of being selected class orator.

In Charge of Students.

Of late years the Washington's birthday exercises have been in charge of the students of the law department. University hall is decorated with the college colors—yellow and blue. The programme consists of the address and several numbers by the University Glee or Banjo clubs, or by both. The students, who occupy the auditorium and gallery, preface the programme by a yelling match. Each class keeps together as much as possible and under the generalship of a yellmaster, who has been previously selected, tries to make more noise than all the other classes put together. The laws occupy the center of the floor, the lights, engineers, dents, medics, homeopaths and pharmlcs, are at the sides, and in the gallery. As a result of the efforts of the students of all the departments the sum total of noise is considerable, and is perfectly audible for many blocks in every direction. But as Washington's birthday is the only occasion in the college year that the 3,000 students are brought together, it is not strange that they should give vent to their feelings of joy.

Judge Caldwell read the findings of the court.

Judge Caldwell said that the evidence showed that Mrs. Manning should not have been given a divorce. "There was a conspiracy between Judge Dillenbaugh and Burke to get that decree upon the journal, and we feel warranted in placing the guilt equally upon Burke."

Wild Rush of Diamond Miners.

A wild rush of excited miners is reported Nullagine, Western Australia, where diamonds have been discovered in large quantities, and it is feared that many will lose their lives in the mad struggle for riches. This country the rush for gain is causing many other men to break down in health and strength. Nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of flesh and appetite, general debility are the common symptoms. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure them all.

"Beloved," he cried, throwing himself on his wife's feet, "we have lost all save honor!" The woman pressed her hand to her streaming eyes and wept as if her heart were breaking. "How awkward!" he sobbed. "Just the thing we don't need, we've got to dead-beat!" Verily, it seems that a relentless fate pursued them.—Detroit Journal.

SIGHT RESTORED.

Wonderful Story of Divine Healing
Comes from the City of Benton Harbor.

A remarkable case of Divine healing reported at Benton Harbor. When a boy of about 14 years of age, G. Harmon, that city, was kicked in the head by a horse. Two years later, as a result of the injuries received, the boy lost the sight of his left eye. For 56 years Mr. Harmon had no use of his left eye. A few days ago Mr. Harmon, who is now 70 years old, and who was suffering from a complication of heart trouble, rheumatism and deafness, was asked if he did not resort to Divine healing, as material remedies had failed. He replied that he had, but the promises held out by a follower of that faith, and prayer was offered for him three times. After the first prayer and laying on of hands Mr. Harmon was able to distinguish objects with his left eye. His sight was much improved after the second prayer, and with the third prayer, and with the third laying on of hands came the restoration of sight to the optic that had so long been useless. Mr. Harmon was healed of the other complications. Mr. Harmon freely gives his testimony of the wonderful healing at every opportunity.

DID NOT CARRY.

Attorney General Oren Says Revision
Did Not Receive a Majority Vote
at the Last Election.

Attorney-General Oren has decided that the proposition for a general revision of the state constitution, voted on November last, did not carry. The opinion is a long one, and goes to the root of the question. It is stated that at the November election 164 votes were cast for the office of governor, and this number is taken as the maximum number of votes. On the question of the constitutional revision only 289,270 votes were cast, 162,123 being cast in the affirmative and 127,147 in the negative. The constitution provides that "the general revision proposition must receive the votes of a majority of the electors qualified and voting" at the election, and the attorney-general holds that this provision is to be strictly construed.

HOMES FOR ADVENTISTS.

Owosso Man Purchases a Farm for That Purpose and Also Will Establish Schools.

John Sheldon, an ardent Seventh Day Adventist, purchased the well-known farm of 43 acres, located two miles west of Owosso. The land lies between the Corunna road and the Shiawassee river. The land is to be given over to homes for Adventists of Shiawassee county. In the midst of the community will be erected what Mr. Sheldon terms "industrial" school. After the present school year it is the Adventists' plan to take their children from the public schools and place them in this school, which is to be based on the Battle Creek college plan. The school will be the text book. All other books will be but helps. Work will begin on the building up an Adventists' community at once, and the school will be opened September 1, 1899.

AN OLD DOCUMENT.

Discovery of a Patent Will Clear Up a Long-Disputed Question of Land Ownership.

O. I. Miller, of Augusta, filed in the office of the register of deeds in Kalamazoo a curiosity in the form of a patent for 40 acres of government land in Charleston township made out in 1830 in favor of his father, Orlando Miller. The musty looking document has the signature of President Van Buren attached to it, and was made out by the officials of that day. The patent has been missing for some time, and it was discovered that it had lain in the basement at Washington for 35 years. The question as to the ownership of the land was in litigation for seven years.

Looking for Coal.

City prospectors have closed the lease of several leases on 2,000 acres of land at West Haven, near Owosso, are testing for coal will soon be in operation. The land lies between the Shiawassee river and the Michigan Central railroad. Coal is believed to underlie these farms in large quantities. If a paying amount is found shafts will be sunk next month.

Abounds in Wells.

The country in the neighborhood of Chesaning abounds in wells. One at Chesaning recently deepened to 300 feet threw a stream of water 100 feet in diameter 24 feet high; another on the farm of E. C. Waldron threw 36 barrels of water an hour, and other in Chesaning village nearly all the latter.

Valuable Trees.

Fifty walnut trees in Cass county have recently sold for $10,000. These have now been felled and will be shipped to English buyers. The largest was seven feet in diameter at its base, and will yield lumber worth from $1,000.

AN EXCELLENT COMBINATION.

Successful Enterprise Based on Merit
—The Importance of Informing the Public of the Value of an Article
Through the Leading Newspapers.

The few remedies which have attained to world-wide fame, as truly beneficial in effect and giving satisfaction to millions of people everywhere, are the products of the knowledge of the most eminent physicians, and presented in the form most acceptable to the human system by the skill of the world's great chemists; and one of the most successful examples is the Syrup of Figs manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Unlike a host of imitations and cheap substitutes, Syrup of Figs is permanently beneficial in its effects, and therefore lives and promotes good health, while inferior preparations are being cast aside and forgotten. In olden times if a remedy gave temporary relief to individuals here and there, it was thought good; but now-a-days a laxative remedy must give satisfaction to all. If you have never used Syrup of Figs, give it a trial, and you will be pleased with it, and will recommend it to your friends or to anyone suffering from constipation, or from overfeeding, or from colds, headaches, biliousness, or other ills resulting from an inactive condition of the kidney, liver and bowels.

In the process of manufacturing the pleasant family laxative made by the California Fig Syrup Co., and named Syrup of Figs, are used, as they are pleasant to the taste; but the medicinal properties of the remedy are obtained from an excellent combination of plants known to be medicinal laxative and to act most beneficially. As the true and original remedy, named Syrup of Figs, is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The Company has selected for years past the leading publications of the United States through which to inform the public of the merits of its remedy, and among them this paper is included, as will be seen by reference to its advertising columns.

His Peculiar View.

"Doesn't it sometimes make you gloomy to hear the wind howling about on a wild night?"
"No," answered the man with a careworn look. "I rather like to hear it. The wind doesn't come up and ring your doorbell and ask how about that bill, or tell you you'll get arrested if you don't tag your dog. It doesn't sing 'I won't go home till morning' away off the key and disgrace the neighborhood. It howls because it enjoys it. But it never says anything to hurt anybody's feelings. I sometimes honestly wish that there was more wind in this life and less people."—Washington Star.

GOVERNOR OF OREGON

Uses Pe-ru-na For Colds in His Family and Grip.

CAPITOL BUILDING, SALEM, OREGON.

A Letter From the Executive Office of Oregon.

Pe-ru-na is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Letters of congratulation and commendation testifying to the merits of Pe-ru-na as a catarrh remedy are pouring in from every state in the Union. Dr. Hartman is receiving hundreds of such letters daily. All classes write these letters, from the highest to the lowest.

The outdoor laborer, the indoor artisan, the clerk, the editor, the statesman, the preacher—all agree that Pe-ru-na is the catarrh remedy of the age. The stage and rostrum, recognizing catarrh as their greatest enemy, are especially enthusiastic in their praise and testimony.

Any man who wishes perfect health must be entirely free from catarrh. Catarrh is well-nigh universal; almost omnipresent. Pe-ru-na is the only absolute safeguard known. A cold is the beginning of catarrh. To prevent colds, to cure colds, is to cheat catarrh out of its victims. Pe-ru-na not only cures catarrh, but prevents. Every household should be supplied with this great remedy for coughs, colds and so forth.

The Governor of Oregon is an ardent admirer of Pe-ru-na. He keeps it continually in the house. In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman he says:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
SALEM, May 9, 1898.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Dear Sirs—I have had occasion to use your Pe-ru-na medicine in my family for colds, and it proved to be an excellent remedy. I have not had occasion to use it for other ailments.

Yours very truly,

W. M. Lord.

It will be noticed that the Governor says he has not had occasion to use Pe-ru-na for other ailments. The reason for this is, most other ailments begin with a cold. Using Pe-ru-na to promptly cure colds, he protects his family against other ailments. This is exactly what every other family in the United States should do. Keep Pe-ru-na in the house. Use it for coughs, colds, la grippe, and other climatic affections of winter, and there will be no other ailments in the house. Such families should provide themselves with a copy of Dr. Hartman's free book, entitled "Winter Catarrh." Address Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

ALABASTINE

WHAT ALABASTINE IS.

Alabastine is the original and only durable wall coating on the market. It is entirely different from all kalsomine preparations. Alabastine is made ready for use in white or twelve beautiful tints by the addition of cold water. It is put up in dry powdered form, in five-pound packages, with full directions on every package. It takes the place of scaling kalsomines, wall paper and paint for walls. Alabastine can be used on plaster, brick, wood or canvas, and a child can brush it on.

WHAT "KALSOMINES" ARE.

Kalsomines are cheap and temporary preparations, manufactured from whitening, chalks, clays, etc. They are stuck on the walls with decaying animal glue. Alabastine is not a kalsomine. It is a rock-base cement, which sets, and it hardens with age. It can be re-coated and redecorated without having to wash and scrape off its old coats. Beware of a large four-pound package of light kalsomine, sold to dealers for four pounds and offered to customers as a five-pound package.

CHURCHES AND SCHOOLHOUSES.

The interior walls of churches, schoolhouses and all public halls should never be coated with anything but the durable and pure Alabastine. So evident has this fact become, that hundreds of tons are used annually for this work. The genuine Alabastine does not rub or scale off. It is cleanly during the long period of its usefulness. Every owner of a building should use it. Ask your paint dealer or druggist for card of tints, and write for free copy of our paper, Alabastine Era, to Alabastine Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

REJECT THE "JUST AS GOOD."

The dealer who tells you that he can sell you the "same thing" as Alabastine or "something just as good," either is not posted or is trying to deceive you. In offering something he has bought cheap and is trying to sell on Alabastine's demands, he may not realize the danger to himself as well as to you. Beware of all new substitutes. Dealers risk suit for damages by selling and consuming by using an infringement. Alabastine Co. own the right to make and sell wall coatings adapted to mix with cold water.

COUNTY NEWS.

Bridgewater fruit growers say they will have a good crop of peaches after all.

Spencer Gordon died in Manchester Feb. 19, of cancer of the stomach, aged 63 years.

There have been more burials in Dexter since Jan. 1, 1899, than ever before during a corresponding length of time.

George M. Sutton, of Iron Creek, recently sold 80 lambs which averaged 110 pounds each. That was a good lot of mutton.

Michael Kennedy, treasurer of Northfield, has collected all the taxes due the township for this year and there are no delinquents.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hughes, of Scio, have removed to Dexter village to reside. Another family added to the population of "The Farmers' Retreat."

Mr. and Mrs. James Hutchinson, of Ypsilanti, celebrated their 50th anniversary Wednesday of last week. Their descendants unto the third generation were present on the occasion.

Kate B. Hall, of Dexter, has been appointed administratrix of the estate of her husband, John E. Hall. It is estimated to be worth $5,000. Mr. Hall died while in California in search of health.

Ypsilanti is already taking the initiatory steps looking towards a big celebration of the Fourth of July in that city this year. It will be the 75th anniversary of the first celebration of the day in that place.

The stoops on some of the Grass Lake business houses which abut on Lake street, stand on land owned by the Michigan Central. The company has heretofore charged $1 a year rent, but has now raised it to $5 a year, and thereat the merchants kick.

Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia, lectured in the S. L. A. course at Ann Arbor, Friday night, and when he received his fee of $300 for his lecture "Acres of Diamonds," turned it over to the university. The money is to be used to help needy students.

Frank Kellam, of Ann Arbor, was robbed in Bay City Thursday evening last, of $95, by a woman and two men. He had been working in the woods near West Branch all winter. One of the men engaged him to run a farm of 178 acres and the woman was to manage the house. While he had his pocketbook in his hand, one of the men snatched it and ran away.

A Pinckney hen has been getting down to business early this year. Feb. 16 she came off a nest of eggs, which she had stolen, with 13 fine little chickens.

A memorial monument is to be erected in Forest Hill cemetery, Ann Arbor, over the grave of the late Prof. Henry S. Frieze. It will have inscribed on it "A Whiter Soul the Earth Hath Never Born," and will be a reproduction in Milford marble of the noted Scipio monument. It will be unveiled on alumni day June 21.

The answer to the suit brought by L. L. James, Edward Croarkin and Patrick Sloan against city marshal Sweet and four merchants of Ann Arbor has been filed in the circuit court. It claims that the plaintiffs agreed to drop all proceedings for damages provided the city did not prosecute the suit against them in the supreme court. The defendants have also entered a motion requiring the plaintiffs to file a security for costs on the grounds that they are financially irresponsible and that the cause is without merit and is brought for mere vexation, annoyance and blackmail.

The Ypsilanti Business Men's Association are defendants in a suit in chancery brought by George W. Hayes, who wants a former settlement set aside so that he can commence a suit for damages. The Hayes boy died in 1896 from injuries received by being run over by a team of horses attached to a sprinkling wagon which was operated for the association. At the time the association paid $60 for damages, $20 for burial casket, $2 for digging of grave, $8.50 for back and $7 for doctor's bill. Now Hayes says he was misled and did not get a subscription and wants the settlement set aside and the papers he then signed declared null and void.

Frank Hill, otherwise known as "Humpy" Hill, of Ann Arbor, married Anna Bagley, of Jackson, at the former place on Feb. 16. It now turns out that the woman was already married, her husband's name being Wm. H. Cudney. She became infatuated with Hill, who was in Jackson. Feb. 14 he went to Ann Arbor and she left her husband and little four years old daughter and followed him there the next day. Mr. Cudney was dumbfounded at the turn matters had taken, but when a telephone message from Ann Arbor informed him that his wife was "perfectly happy" and would not return to him, he filed a bill for divorce against her on the ground of adultery.

Resolutions

Passed by the Chelsea Rifles and Fire Department on the untimely death of their comrade, John Corey, Feb. 25, 1899.

Whereas, God in his divine wisdom has called to eternal rest our friend and comrade John Corey, therefore be it resolved by the officers and comrades of both companies:

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved mother and relatives in the loss that they and we have sustained in the death of one so dear to them and us.

That we gladly bear witness to his faith and loyalty to the church of his choice.
