Judge Newkirk Decides That Delos Cummings' Expenses Must Be Paid Out of His Estate.

In the case of F. Delos Cummings, insane, C. H. Kempf made application to the probate court Saturday to have him removed from St. Joseph's retreat at Dearborn, to the Pontiac insane asylum, and that the asylum expenses be paid by the county.

It was shown that in 1885 Cummings' who was then reported to be worth from $40,000 to $50,000, became reckless and extravagant, and realizing that he could not properly manage his property he, together with his wife, deeded his real estate, consisting of three fine farms in Sylvan and considerable other real estate, to C. H. Kempf, absolutely, but providing that Cummings and his wife should receive their support from the property as long as they lived, the estate then to go to their children, Kempf having the right to sell mortgage, etc., only being bound to pay Cummings' debts, his own expenses as trustee, and support Cummings and his wife. The property at the present time is claimed by Mr. Kempf to be worth about $15,000.

Mr. Kempf was under the impression that he could only use the income of this amount for the support of Cummings and his family, and that would be insufficient to pay his expenses at the asylum. Judge Newkirk promptly denied the petition and advised Mr. Kempf that he could judiciously use the principal, and must therefore pay for Cummings' maintenance at Pontiac, instead of the county doing so.

A new petition was then filed to commit Cummings to the asylum as a private patient. It then transpired that there were no medical certificates as to Cummings' insanity. On Tuesday Judge Newkirk was in Chelsea taking the testimony of Drs. G. W. Palmer and H. W. Schmidt which was to the effect that Cummings is a fit and proper subject for the insane asylum. An order of commitment will undoubtedly be issued by the court.

MARRIED AT GRAND RAPIDS.

Mr. Victor D. Hindelang, of Albion, Weds Miss Anna A. Harty, of Grand Rapids.

The following account of the marriage of Mr. Victor D. Hindelang, of Albion, son of Mr. Peter Hindelang, of Chelsea, to Miss Anna A. Harty, of Grand Rapids, which took place Thursday morning last, is taken from the columns of the Grand Rapids Evening Press:

"St. Andrew's cathedral was the scene of a notable wedding Thursday morning when the marriage of Miss Anna A. Harty to Victor D. Hindelang, of Albion, was solemnized. The usual music of the marriage service was rendered by the organist and choir of seven voices, and the ceremony was performed by Rt. Rev. Bishop Richter, assisted by Father Schmitt, Father Reid and Father Sullivan of Albion. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white brocaded satin, and carried a white prayer book, while her bridesmaid, Miss Agnes McKune, of Detroit, wore white organdie and carried bride roses. The groom was attended by the bride's brother, James Harty. Edward Mangold and Dr. Dennis Murray acted as ushers, and Kirk White of Albion, was master of ceremonies.

"After the marriage the bridal party and relatives assembled at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Harty, 313 South Ionia street, where a wedding breakfast was served. The bridal table was set in the second parlor and was beautifully decorated in red and green, American Beauty roses being used as the centerpiece. Another table in the dining room was trimmed artistically with carnations, smilax, and yellow ribbons. The music room was decorated with garden flowers, asters being used in profusion. Smilax was arranged tastefully in the hall and about the chandeliers in all the rooms. Those present at the breakfast were Mr. and Mrs. Hindelang, Mrs. John Harty, Fr. Sullivan of Albion, Miss Agnes McKune of Detroit, Misses Mary and Laura Harty, Miss Frances Hindelang of Chelsea, Kirk White of Albion, John J. Raftery and Peter Hindelang of Chelsea, Dennis Hayes of Detroit, and the bride's brothers, James and Charles Harty of this city, and Thomas Harty of Holland.

"Numerous telegrams of congratulation were received by Mr. and Mrs. Hindelang during the day, as well as many beautiful gifts. They left on an afternoon train for a bridal trip to include Detroit, Washington and New York. On their return they will settle in their newly furnished home in Albion."

COUNTY JAIL INSPECTION.

It Cost $2,800 to Care for 351 Drunks Out of a Total of 628 Prisoners.

Judge of Probate Newkirk, County Poor Commissioners E. P. Mason, James Taylor and Tracy L. Towner, and County Agent P. J. Lehman made an inspection of the county jail Thursday and found that during the past six months 278 prisoners had been confined within its walls.

This number included 163 drunks, four of whom were female; 23 for larceny, 3 of whom were female; 30 vagrants; 10 insane; 11 for boarding moving trains; 6 for assault and battery; 5 for disorderly; 4 for disturbing the peace. The rest were for other offenses.

During the six months preceding there were 320 prisoners confined in the jail, including 188 drunks, 5 vagrants and 31 disorderlies.

The cost to the county for these drunks is considerable of an item, and the sum total foots up to over $2,800. It is estimated that each one of the 351 drunks served an average sentence of seven days and cost the county as follows: Justice fees, $2.75; officers' fees, $1.55; turnkey's fees, 70 cents; sheriff's fees, 44 cents per day for 7 days, $3.08; total, $3.08. Cost of 351 drunks at this price, $2,833.08.

The report of the jail examiners was as follows: "Bedding, fair; cells, fair; halls, good; closets, poor; no distinction in treatment of prisoners; jail building is too small."

"I know what the state secretary of the board of corrections and charities will say when he reads that report," said P. J. Lehman: "He will send down a postal card which will read: 'Your favor of Sept. 21 received, for which please accept my thanks. I notice that you say the jail building is too small. If you did not have so many drunks, the building would probably be large enough.'"

AFTER TWO MONTHS' VACATION

The Western Washtenaw Farmers' Club Had a Very Profitable Meeting.

After a vacation during the two busy months, July and August, the Western Washtenaw Farmers' Club again commenced its regular meetings on Thursday last. The goodly attendance of members was cordially welcomed to the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Chase, in Sylvan, and a pleasant and profitable time resulted.

The ladies' question "Is the cultivation of flowers and a taste for music a benefit to a farmer's family morally and physically?" was very ably presented by Mrs. Boynton.

The gentlemen's discussion on "What is intensive farming?" was opened by E. Zincke and was very thoroughly discussed.

The next regular meeting of the club will be held with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Freer, in Lima, Thursday, Oct. 19.

Itching Burning Scaly Blotchy Humors Instantly Relieved and Speedily Cured by

Cuticura

The itching and burning I suffered in my feet and limbs for three years were terrible. At night they were worse and would keep me awake a greater part of the night. I consulted doctor after doctor, as I was travelling on the road most of my time, also one of our city doctors. None of the doctors knew what the trouble was. I got a lot of the different samples of the medicines I had been using. I found them of so many different kinds that I concluded I would have to go to a Cincinnati hospital before I would get relief. I had frequently been urged to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, but I had no faith in them. My wife finally prevailed upon me to try them. Presto! What a change! I am now cured, and it is a permanent cure. I feel like kicking some doctor or myself for suffering three years when I could have used CUTICURA remedies.
H. JENKINS, Middleboro, Ky.

LOST PROMISES.

My heart grew away from the good,
When I left my ways
In the golden days
Where I strolled at eve in the wood;
Now I often stand
On the shell-strewn sand
And think of the seas between.

My heart passed away from the true
When my dreams were young,
And my harp was hung
On willows in the sunlit dew.
While I laughed at will
At the sleeping hill,
That wakened to answer me.

My heart grew away from the sky
That showered its joy
When I was a boy,
When tears never blinded my eye;
But with hope and care,
And an earnest prayer,
Will bring all that has gone away.

We now began to hurry a little, and found that Corte was right, for the soldiers who had lined the passage inside the Bronze gates had taken themselves off, and a considerable number of servants and followers were enjoying here the results of picaresque raids on the supper tables.

Outside, however, everything was in order, for De Leyva was a thorough soldier. I found both the Spaniard and De Briconnet cursing their luck at being on the guards, and attacking a capon which they were washing down with copious draughts of Falernian. Their duties kept them outside, and it was a poor supper they were making, by the light of torches, seated together on the steps of the vatican.

"What!—out already, cavaliers?" asked De Briconnet. "Is the cardinal going?" "No, but there is a little business," I answered, as I called Jacopo.

"Nom du diable! Can I not come?" "It would be a relaxation," said De Leyva. "I am afraid not, gentlemen, although we thank you. Here, Jacopo! Get three of our fellows and follow me. Tell the others to hold their horses."

It was done in a twinkling, and in a few steps, having harked back, we were in the Papal gardens. The casino or summer-house of the pope was in full light, and we directed our steps there without difficulty. I made two of our men walk in front, Jacopo and the third behind us, and we remained in the middle. Strict orders were given to have swords ready, and to use them at once.

Except for the moonlight, the gardens themselves were not illuminated, and as we tramped along the paths I thought to myself how easy it would have been for Michelotto to have got rid of both St. Armande and myself, if we had been fools enough to go without escort.

Nothing happened. We reached the casino and waited there a full hour; but there was no sign of Michelotto.

At last I lost patience. "He never meant to cross a sword with you, chevalier. I can bear witness you were here, and kept trust. We have escaped a felon's blow, together. Come back—it is getting late—even for his eminence." We turned, and made our way back, but it was a good two hours before D'Amboise retired. Bayard had gone on long before, declining all offers of escort. When we reached the palace we found he had arrived safely.

I wished St. Armande a good night, with more respect for him in my heart than I ever felt before, and turned to seek my apartments. Late as it was, however, there was to be no sleep for me, as De Briconnet, whose brain the Falernian had merely made more lively, insisted on accompanying me, and we split another flask, and talked of falconry till the verge of the morning.

CHAPTER XVIII.
THE OPAL RING.
"His eminence will await the Signor Donati at supper this evening."

Default delivered his message, received his answer, and tripped away, his little page's cap set jauntily on the side of his head, and the haft of his dagger clinking against the silver chain which held it to his belt. As for me, my heart leaped at the words, for I felt sure my business was come, and, summoning Jacopo, I gave him the necessary orders to have our men in readiness for an immediate start. I then sought St. Armande, and told him what I expected.

But I am honestly glad that fortune has given the wheel a right turn for you." "It is not fortune," he said, "it is something greater. It is fate. No chance turn of the wheel of a sleeping goddess. When I fled from you, signore, on that day," his voice choked a little, "I came to Rome. Never mind how. Here a great man found me. Great men pick up little things for their purposes sometimes. And Matthew Corte, who is but a little man, knows things the great man does not know. Ho! ho!" and he laughed mirthlessly.

"And that has put crowns in your purse?" "Yes, crowns in my purse, crowns in my purse," he repeated, and then the old madness came upon him, and he rose and paced the room. "I could have done it last night, made the hilt of my dagger ring against his heart—the devil—the devil. But he is not to die this way—not thus—not thus. He will die as no other man has died, and it will come soon, very soon—Mathew Corte swears this."

He stopped suddenly, and turned to me with the question: "Have you ever seen a mad dog die?" "No," I answered, wondering what would come next.

"Well, my dog is dead." "I am sorry," I began, but he interrupted. "Dead, I say. Life went from it in writhings and twistings, in screams of agony—the little beast, poor little beast! I would have ended it's misery, but I wanted to see. I wanted to find some death so horrible that it would pass the invention of man. And I have found it, signore. See this toy of a knife! This fairy's dagger!" and he held up a tiny lancet, "only a touch of it, and a man would die as that dog did, in writhings, in twistings, in screams—"

I rose and put my hand on his arm, keeping my eyes steadily on his face. "Corte," I said, "this is not like you. You are not well. Here is some wine," and I poured him out a goblet of Orvieto. He drained it at a gulp, and sat with his head buried in his hands.

As he sat there, the scene in the lonely hut, when I went forth an outcast from Arezzo, came back to me, and there rose before me the dim light of the torch, the mad figure of my host, and I could almost hear the pattering of the rain and the dying hisses of the log fire without. Then I saw other things as well, and a pity came on me for the man before me. A sudden thought struck me, and, acting on the impulse of the moment, I spoke:

"See here, Corte! You are ill, you want rest, quiet. Throw off these dark thoughts, and do what I say. Two miles from Colza, in the Bergamasque, lies a small farm. It is mine. Mine still, though mortgaged. Go there. Ask for the Casino Savelli, and say you have come from me—from Ugo di Savelli. You know my name now, and they will want nothing more from you. Live there until you are better, or as long as you like. The air is pure, in the hills there is the bouquet for you to hunt; the life is good. Will you do this?"

He lifted his head, and looked at me. Then, rising, he placed one hand on each of my shoulders, thin hands they were, with long bony fingers that held like claws.

"Signore," he said, with emotion, "Donati or Savelli—whoever you are—you are a good man. I thank you, but it cannot be. Good-by!" And, lifting up his book, he turned and strode out of the room, leaving me a little chilled.

After that I waited for my meeting with D'Amboise. I saw to the packing of a valise, went down and looked at the horses, closely inspected the arms and mounts of my men, who looked capable of anything, and, in one way and another, managed to get through the time, until about the sixth hour, when his eminence supped. I presented myself punctually, and was ushered into an inner apartment which I had not hitherto seen, and where the supper was evidently to be held, for the table was set out there. I was alone at first, and, seating myself on a lounge, looked about me. The room was small, but beautifully fitted up, and had all the appearance of being the cardinal's private study. By my side was a table on which was spread a map, with various crosses marked on it in red chalk, the chalk itself lying on the map, where it had been carelessly flung. In front of me was an altar, surmounted by a silver crucifix, bearing an exquisitely-carved Christ. Near it, in a corner, leaned a long straight sword, from whose cross handle hung a pair of fine steel gauntlets. Resting on a cushion, placed on a stand, was the cardinal's hat, and behind the stand I could see the brown outline of a pair of riding boots and the glitter of burnished spurs. In a corner of the room was a large table, set out with writing materials and covered with papers. Running my eyes over these idly, I finally let them rest on the supper table, which was arranged with lavish profusion. The curtains of the windows were drawn, and the light from eight tall candles, in jeweled holders, fell on the rose and amber of the wine in the quaint flasks, on the cheerful brown crusts of the pasties, on the gay enameling of the comfitures, and on the red gold of the plate. I noticed, too, that the table was set for three only. It was evidently a private supper, where things were to be discussed, and I became glad, for I felt already a step onwards towards winning back my name, and—I seemed to see in the mirror on the wall to my left, a vision of a woman with dark hair, and dark eyes—

"Your eminence!" I fairly started up. I had not observed the entrance of D'Amboise until he stood beside me and touched me lightly on the shoulder.

"Dreaming, cavalier! I did not think you were so given. I am afraid that, late as I am, I must still keep you from your supper, for I expect another guest. Ha! there he is!"

Indeed, as he spoke, the door swung open noiselessly, and Machiavelli entered. He was plainly and simply dressed, and wore no sword, merely a dagger at his side. I thought, however, I caught the gleam of a steel corselet under his vest, as he greeted the cardinal, and D'Amboise's own sap-phire was not more brilliant than the single opal which blazed in the secretary's hand.

"This is the Cavaliere Donati, your excellency," said the cardinal, "but I think you know each other."

Machiavelli extended his hand to me with his inscrutable smile; but as I met his eyes I saw that they were troubled and anxious. He, however, spoke with easy unconcern.

"Well met, Messer Donati. I can only say I am sorry we parted so soon. I would have given much to have had you in Florence for a few days more."

"Your excellency is most kind." "St. Dennis!" said the cardinal, "but are you gentlemen going to exchange compliments, and starve instead of sitting down to supper. Burin, are we not ready?" and he turned to his gray-haired major-domo, who had entered the room.

"Your eminence is served," replied the man, and we took our seats on each side of the table, D'Amboise between us.

"You need not wait, Burin, but remain in the passage," Burin stepped out silently, and the cardinal said, with an air of apology: "You must not mind so informal a request, gentlemen; but we have much to discuss—pleasure first, however—my maitre d'hotel has an artist's soul, and he will have a fit if we do not touch this pastry."

The cardinal ate and talked. I now and then put in a word, but the secretary was very silent, and hardly touched anything.

"St. Dennis!" said D'Amboise, "but your excellency is a poor trencherman. And I heard so much of you!" "Your eminence will excuse me, when I say I have had news."

D'Amboise became grave at once. "Let me say how sorry I am. It is not a matter of state?" and he glanced meaningly at the secretary.

"Not in the least; but much worse—a domestic matter. I do not see why I should not tell you. That cursed brigand Baglioni has seized on my ward Angiola Castellani, and holds her a fast prisoner in Perugia."

I felt cold all over to my feet. "The Lady Angiola?" I exclaimed. "Precisely," said Machiavelli, dryly; "I think you have met."

"But this can be easily remedied," burst in D'Amboise; "a demand from the Signory, a word from France."

"Will not bring the dead to life again," put in the secretary.

"My God!" I burst out, "she is not dead?" "Worse than that," he said; "it was done by Cesare's orders."

"Then Cesare Borgia will pay with his life for this," I exclaimed.

At this moment there was a knock at the door, and Burin entered, bearing a silver flagon, the stopper of which was made of a quaintly-carved dragon.

"Your eminence ordered this with the second service," he said, placing it before D'Amboise and retiring.

"I pledge you my word, your excellency, that I will not rest until full reparation has been made for this outrage on an ally of France," said D'Amboise. "I could almost find it in my heart to let loose open war for this."

"We are not ready, your eminence. Rest assured of my thanks, and I will gladly accept your aid; but at present we can do nothing. This, however, has not decreased my zeal for the measures we are planning, and with your permission we will now discuss these, and put aside my private trouble."

For me, I could hardly breathe. A hundred feelings were tossing together within me; all that I could think of was to throw aside everything, to gallop to Perugia, to save her at any cost. The cardinal's voice came to me as from a distance.

"I agree—one glass each of this all round, and then—cavaliers, would you mind handing me those glasses?"

D'Amboise sprang to his feet. "By G—!" he said, bringing his clenched fist into the palm of his hand, "the Borgia will rue this day; here, give me those glasses." He seized them, and, drawing back the curtain, flung them out of the window, where they fell into the court outside, breaking to splinters with a little tinkling crash. Then he emptied out the contents of the flagon, and hurled it into the grate, where it lay, its fine work crushed and dented, the two emerald eyes of the dragon on the stopper blinking at us wickedly. This outburst made D'Amboise calmer, and it was with more composure that he struck a small gong, and reseated himself at the table. As he did so Burin entered the room.

"We want a clear table," said the cardinal; "remove these things and hand me that map."

By the time Burin had done this, his eminence showed no further trace of excitement, except that his lips were very firmly set, and there was a slight frown on his forehead as he smoothed out the roll of the map. One corner kept obstinately turning up, and as Machiavelli quietly put his hand on it to keep it in position, he said: "See! The ring is as it was before."

We looked at the opal, and, sure enough, the poison-tint was gone, and under the pale, semiopaque blue of its surface lights of red, of green, and of orange, flitted to and fro.

"It is wonderful," I said, and D'Amboise smiled grimly to himself. The cardinal placed his finger on the map, where the port of Sinigaglia was marked.

"Is it here he lands?" "Yes," replied Machiavelli, "and then straight to Rome."

"You have sure information?" "Yes."

"Then will your excellency instruct M. Donati? As arranged, I pledge an immediate movement on the part of Tremouille, at the first sign of success."

"You have agreed, cavaliers, to undertake the task?" and the secretary turned to me.

"I have, your excellency."

Machiavelli then went on, speaking incisively, wasting no words. "In ten days or thereabouts from now Monsignore Bozardo, the Papal envoy to the Grand Turk, will land at Sinigaglia and start for Rome. He brings with him a letter and a sum of money, 40,000 ducats. These are for his holiness. Bozardo and the letter may reach, if you like; the ducats must not."

"Where are they to go?" "To the Duke de la Tremouille."

"I follow."

"Understand that you take this venture at your own risk."

I saw what he meant; if I failed I was to be sacrificed, and my mind was made up. I would accept, with a condition.

"I quite understand—there is one thing."

"What?"

"Ten days is a wide margin. I will stop Bozardo or die; but I propose effecting the release of the Lady Angiola as well."

Miss Proctor's Youthful Critics.
Miss Mary Proctor, the astronomer and lecturer, takes a deep interest in social settlement work in the big cities, and frequently gives her personal services toward entertaining poor children and adults. Generally her lectures are very well received. Many of her audiences often manifest better attention than those drawn from higher circles. Now and then there are exceptions. On one occasion a bright-eyed little boy who sat in the front row with his eyes fixed upon the speaker was asked how he liked it. "I guess," he said, "it was pretty good, but she ought to talk about lions and tigers. That's better for everybody." At another lecture a youngster criticised her as follows: "It's all very well to talk of weighing and measuring stars. There are some people, of course, who believe that sort of thing, but if she thinks she can fool us boys with such fairy tales she's very much mistaken."—Philadelphia Post.

THE CHELSEA HERALD

T. W. HINGAY, Editor and Proprietor.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY for $1.00 per year strictly in advance.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1899.

Ypsilanti Sentinel: The retirement of Hon. "Billy" Judson from politics is officially announced without reference to the celebrated wink. If it is a fact, the party has lost one of its most energetic workers. With all the faults he has been charged with, it was to Judson the Republican party owed much of its recent success in this county.

Admiral Dewey arrived in New York harbor with his flag ship Olympia at 5:55 Tuesday morning, two days ahead of the time he was expected. The New Yorkers were almost as much disconcerted at his arrival as the Spaniards were when he arrived in Manila bay May 1, 1898. The demonstration in his honor will be carried out tomorrow and Saturday as projected.

Out of a total of 628 prisoners confined in the county jail this year 351, or more than half were common drunks. For this misdemeanor the offender is very seldom sent anywhere else than to the county jail, where all he does is to pass his days in idleness until the term of his sentence has expired. If a man is sent to the house of correction he is at once put to work and is made to earn enough to keep him from being any serious expense. Now, there is no good reason why drunks and tramps should be kept in jail in idleness and be fed and housed entirely at the expense of the taxpayers. If a man is a drunk or a vagrant and is a nuisance as such he should certainly be taken care of, but he should be made to work out the greater part of the expense he is to the community. Why not make these fellows useful by putting them at work on the roads throughout the county, which are at all times greatly in need of attention, and on which the taxpayers do not seem inclined to put much money for improvement? Let them be sent out in gangs in charge of keepers, with ball and chain attached to their legs if necessary to hold them under restraint, and be made to earn their bread by the sweat of their brows, as the people who now support them in idleness have to do. It would not be long before our roads would be in better condition and the number of drunks and vags would be greatly less.

Remarkable Recovery.

Mrs. Michael Curtin, Plainfield, Ill., makes the statement, that she caught cold which settled on her lungs; she was treated for a month by her family physician, but grew worse. He told her she was a hopeless victim of consumption and that no medicine could cure her. Her druggist suggested Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption; she bought a bottle and to her delight found herself benefited from first dose. She continued its use and after taking six bottles, found herself sound and well; now does her own housework, and is as well as she ever was. Free trial bottles of this great discovery at Glazier & Stimson's Bank Drug Store. Only 50 cents and $1, every bottle guaranteed.

Mary St. Clair, of Sylvan, has filed a bill in the circuit court asking for a divorce from her husband Percy St. Clair, after three years of married life. She asks for the divorce, on the grounds of cruelty, desertion, drunkenness and non-support. Among other things set up is that when they started to housekeeping they purchased the necessary outfit from a Detroit firm on the installment plan amounting to $224, upon which had been paid $120, and shortly after the husband had left her, the Detroit firm came on and stripped the house of everything.

The Grass Lake News says that the pieces of mail matter handled by the employees in the Grass Lake post office were counted the same week those in the Chelsea office were, and that they numbered 1,950 pieces more than were handled here. It is a rather strange coincidence that this act, the idea of which emanated with one of the clerks in the Chelsea office, should also have been carried on at Grass Lake the same week. Or, is the editor of the News indulging in another of his bluffs at belittling Chelsea and its business interests. Somehow it looks as if there was a nigger around the woodpile.

Mr. Schwikerath was doing some work for Mrs. R. B. Gates and did not know anything of the fire. The house and furniture are insured with G. J. Crowell for $600.

THE HERO OF MANILA

By This Name Admiral Dewey Will Ever Live in History.

Brief Account of the Battle of May 1, 1898—How the Olympia, the Admiral and the Men Who Fought with Him Will Be Received Upon Their Return Sept. 28.

ADMIRAL GEORGE DEWEY, the hero par excellence of the Spanish-American war, is expected to arrive at New York Thursday, September 28. He will be accorded a reception surpassing in spontaneity and grandeur anything recorded in American history. He will be received, officially, by the government of the United States, by the state of New York and the city of Greater New York, and by representatives from every state in the union; and millions of his fellow-citizens will be present to express by voice and action the esteem in which the victor of Manila is held by the common people of America. After the New York reception is over, the admiral will visit Washington, where the president and his cabinet will tender him a reception and present him with a sword of honor, voted by the congress.

THE BATTLE OF MANILA.

It Was Won Without the Loss of a Single American Life.

The story of the battle of Manila reads almost like a piece of fiction. On the morning of May 1, 1898, Commodore Dewey steamed into the harbor. His squadron consisted of the cruiser Olympia (flagship), Raleigh, Baltimore and Boston, and gunboats Concord and Petrel, and the revenue cutter McCulloch, with two transports. Here he met the Spanish fleet, consisting of the Reina Cristina, Castilla, Don Antonio de Ulloa, Isla de Luzon, Isla de Cuba, Gen. Lezo, Marquis de Duero, Cano, Velasco, Isla de Mindanao, some small gunboats and a transport. The total tonnage of the American fleet was 19,098 tons and that of the Spanish real fighting ships was 8,722 tons, but the latter had the support of heavy and well-mounted shore batteries. The result of the battle was the entire destruction of all the Spanish vessels and the silencing of the land batteries. Commodore Dewey did not lose a ship nor a man, while the Spanish lost their entire fleet, commanded by Admiral Montojo y Trillo, and from 600 to 700 men.

STORY OF THE BATTLE.

Told in a Few Words by Capt. Coghlan, of the Raleigh.

Capt. Joseph B. Coghlan, who commanded the cruiser Raleigh during the battle, has furnished what is perhaps the best short account of the famous engagement. He says:

"The Olympia, at about 11:50 of April 30, passed El Fraile rock, a small islet near the southern side of the entrance, upon which a three-gun battery of 4.7-inch Honoria guns had been erected. Next passed the Baltimore in its line.

"The Raleigh came next and was abreast of the rock at 12:10 a. m. of May 1. As it swung into the wake of the Olympia at 12:13 a. m. the first gun of the operations in the east was fired by the Spaniards from El Fraile rock, the projectile passing over and between the Raleigh and Petrel. About a minute after a second shot was fired from El Fraile in about the same direction.

"The Raleigh then, at 12:15 a. m., at a distance of about 800 yards, fired the first shot on the American side in the Philippine campaign. El Fraile battery continued firing as the squadron passed, the Concord and Boston firing as they came by.

"In all about six shots were fired at the main body of the fleet, and answered by about the same number. As the McCulloch came into line it also fired several shots from its three-inch field guns, with which it had been supplied by the Raleigh and the Baltimore. Signal was then made for the reserve squadron to come up on the port side of the main squadron, also asking if everything was all right. The McCulloch answered 'O. K.' The fleet being by the batteries and over the mines a speed of four knots was signaled.

"The whole squadron passed up the bay at this speed, steering to avoid the shoals on the southern side of the bay and expecting to be about eight miles from Manila at daylight. It was a night of the most strained suspense. Signal lights were being shown from all along the southern side of the bay, showing that the squadron's movements were being observed and reported.

"The crews of the various vessels were ordered to lie down alongside the guns and get what rest was possible. Moving slowly up the bay the squadron was in front of Manila at 6 a. m. 4.7 a. m. It was immediately seen that none of the Spanish fleet was in that vicinity.

"A signal gun far off to the right disclosed the Spanish vessels moored in Canocoa bay, close to Cavite, the naval arsenal.

"It was immediately noted by the firing of the vessels and the movements of the boats among them that they were taken by surprise. The Olympia signaled: 'Prepare to engage the enemy,' and turned toward Cavite. As the Baltimore, following the Olympia, made its turn the battery of 9.2-inch Krupp guns on the lunette of Manila opened fire.

"The first shot passed over and beyond the flagship Olympia. This fire was kept up during the whole of the battle. As the Concord swung past Manila it fired two shells at the lunette battery. These were the only shots fired toward the city. Our squadron kept moving, the speed increased to eight knots, to the Spanish fleet at Cavite, six miles distant. When the Olympia reached a point about 5,600 yards from the Spanish position it opened with its forward turret guns, the only guns which could be brought to bear.

"The Olympia kept up this fire until a point was reached where our squadron could observed issuing from its main escape pipes, showing that it was badly injured.

"Soon after it apparently lost control of itself, and one of the gunboats was seen to shove its bow around and point it to the westward, showing that its steering gear must have been injured also.

"It continued to maneuver, being turned by a gunboat for about half an hour, when it became stationary, and it was afterward found it had touched bottom and stuck. It and the various gunboats being under way and maneuvering without any order often bunched themselves in a way most satisfactory to the Americans, as with the proper distance all our guns could fairly hail projectiles aboard them without missing a shot. Several of the Spanish gunboats had lighters heaped with stone lashed on one side, with the idea of protecting the sides of the vessels from our projectiles.

turn and pass parallel to the Spaniards, at a distance of about 3,000 yards. The Olympia was some 20 minutes under fire from the lunette battery, the fleet at Cavite, and the batteries on Sangley Point before it reached a position from which its fire could certainly be effective.

"As the Olympia turned to run parallel to the Spaniards at a distance of about 3,000 yards (nearly two miles from the enemy) the Baltimore, following in its wake, opened with its forward eight-inch guns, and the ships following opened as they reached the same point and could bring their guns to bear.

"The Raleigh was about 30 minutes under fire before it could fire in return. Each of the vessels of our squadron opened with all guns, following the example of the Olympia, as they came into position to do so.

"We swept by the Spanish fleet, heading to the westward, until we passed them and exchanged fire with the batteries on Sangley Point, turning in succession, with our heads to the northward, to avoid running on the shoal in front of the latter batteries.

"We then steamed across the front of the Spanish fleet, heading eastward, turned with our heads to the southward, and repeated the first maneuver of going to the westward, passing five times in front of the Spaniards, three times heading to the west and twice to "Keeping up a terrible and well-directed fire our squadron swept five times in front of the Spaniards, and then, under signal from the flagship, withdrew from action, going to breakfast as we got out from under fire of the fleet and the batteries of Sangley Point and Manila city. A conference was immediately held on board the flagship, where reports of expenditures of ammunition and casualties were verbally made to Admiral Dewey.

"It was with a feeling of the greatest astonishment, as well as of intense gratification, that we learned the squadron had expended only about one-third of its ammunition and had not lost a single man or received injuries worth speaking of. It was so incredible that the commanding officers stared at each other in astonishment.

"About ten o'clock it was seen that all the Spanish gunboats had run behind the arsenal of Cavite for protection; that the Reina Cristina was aground and in flames; that the Don Antonio Ulloa's and the Castilla's stern moorings had been cut; that they were swinging to the wind, and that the Castilla was on fire beyond control.

"A little after 11 o'clock a strange sail was seen coming up the bay, the Baltimore being sent to communicate with it. It proved to be an English vessel.

"Signal was made to go in and destroy the batteries. The Baltimore, from its position being nearest in, was ordered to lead. The Concord was directed to go in and burn the transport steamer Isla de Mindanao. The Baltimore, being some distance from the main squadron, was able to get into action some time before the other vessels of the squadron could get up. It attacked in the most gallant manner, stopping at one time directly under the battery at Sangley Point and pouring in a terrific fire.

"The Olympia, Raleigh and Boston followed in as fast as they possibly could, opening on the batteries as their guns could be brought to bear, driving the Spanish troops out of the fortifications and silencing everything in that vicinity. During the second part of the engagement the batteries at Manila remained quiet. As soon as the batteries on Sangley Point were silenced signal was made for the vessels to go in as close as possible and destroy all the Spanish men-of-war that could be found.

"The Petrel, by its light draft, was enabled to get a mile or so closer in than any of the other vessels. The Raleigh, having a clear field, fired a dozen six-inch shells into the Ulloa, sinking it at its moorings, and then firing into the arsenal and the town of Cavite wherever a Spanish flag could be seen. Shortly after one p. m. the Petrel signaled: 'The enemy surrenders.'

"At this time troops from the batteries on Sangley Point could be seen getting out of the batteries and running up the beach as fast as possible. While our squadron was sweeping down to the westward the first or second time a small steam vessel was seen to come out from behind Sangley Point and attempt to pass at full speed ahead of the squadron, apparently heading for our reserves.

"The Olympia immediately opened on it with its secondary battery and the Raleigh, which had been ordered to leave the main line of battle and attack anything which might attempt the destruction of the reserve squadron, sheered out of line and opened with its secondary battery. In a few minutes the small vessel turned toward the land, ran on the beach, and was deserted by its crew, sinking just as it struck the shoal water.

"While the destruction of the smaller vessels was going on by a boat's crew sent in from the Petrel, the Olympia got under way and steamed over for Manila, starting with no vessels to aid it. The Raleigh, Boston and Baltimore followed as soon as they could get their engines going, leaving the Concord, which had just joined the fleet after the destruction of the Isla de Mindanao and the Petrel to carry out the destruction of the remaining vessels.

"The Olympia succeeded in reaching Manila and anchoring in front of the city before any of the other vessels of the squadron could catch up to it.

"One of the bravest things and prettiest sights that one could well imagine was the reserve squadron, by order of the admiral, running in and anchoring inshore of the Olympia. Communication was established with the shore by landing some of our people on board a neutral vessel, where our acting consul, Mr. Walker, the British consul, conferred with them and carried into Manila the admiral's ultimatum.

On May 2 Commodore Dewey cut the cable communication between Manila and Hong-Kong, destroyed the fortifications at the entrance of Manila bay and took possession of the naval station at Cavite. He demanded the surrender of the city of Manila, which was refused, but granted later on.

THE ADMIRAL'S CAREER.

He Gave Promise Early in Life of Becoming a Hero.

George Dewey is a veteran among the naval officers of the United States. He received his first experience under Admiral

TABLET FOR THE OLYMPIA. (To Be Presented by the People of the State of Washington.)

Farragut, and aboard the old steam sloop Mississippi, to which he was assigned for duty April 19, 1861, eight days before Fort Sumter was fired upon.

He is now 62 years old and a native of Vermont. He was appointed to the naval academy from that state in September, 1857. When he was graduated four years later he was sent aboard the steam frigate Wabash, and went on a cruise in the Mediterranean. He received his commission as a lieutenant when he was assigned to duty on the Mississippi, which joined the West Gulf squadron. When Farragut's fleet forced an entrance to the Mississippi Lieut. Dewey was in the thickest of the fray upon the old steam sloop.

The most spirited fight in which the Mississippi ever took part occurred in March, 1863, when the fleet tried to pass by the confederate batteries at Port Hudson. Some of the ships managed to pass up to the narrow part of the channel, where they were fired upon by the shore batteries, being forced to retreat. But the Mississippi did not attempt to get up into the channel. It was a foggy day, made more obscure by the smoke of battle. The sloop lost its bearings and ran ashore. Before its officers were aware of it had struck directly under the guns of a battery which was one of the strongest of the fortifications. It was only a brief breathing spell before 250 shots struck the Mississippi and riddled it from end to end. The obscurity made it possible for its crew to take to their boats after setting it on fire.

Dewey got his first command in 1870, when he performed special service with the Narragansett. He made surveys of the Pacific coast until 1876, when he became a lighthouse inspector, afterwards being the secretary of the lighthouse board. During 1882-'83 he commanded the Juniata on the Atlantic station.

In September, 1884, Lieut. Dewey was made a captain, and placed in charge of the Dolphin, one of the four vessels which formed the original "White Squadron." He was placed in command of the Pensacola, of the European squadron, in the following year, remaining as its commander until 1888, when he became the chief of the bureau of equipment and recruiting, with the rank of commodore.

The duties and rank of Capt. Dewey remained unchanged then until 1893, when he became a member of the lighthouse board. He received his commission as commodore February 23, 1896, being about the same time made president of the board of inspection and survey, which position he occupied until January, 1898, when he was placed in command of the Asiatic squadron.

On May 7, 1898, Commander Dewey was promoted to be rear admiral and given the thanks of congress. Still later he was made full admiral by act of congress.

PRESENTS FOR THE HERO.

Some of the Treasures to Be Given to Dewey by the People.

Beside the sword that is to be presented to him by the nation, Admiral Dewey will on his return be made the recipient of many costly presents, among them a handsome piece of work for his flagship, to be presented by the citizens of Olympia and the state of Washington. It is a bronze panel, which will be placed on the forward turret of the ship, between the two big guns. It weighs 300 pounds, is four feet high, while its greatest breadth is 4½ feet. Paul W. Morris designed the panel, under the direction of D. C. French. The panel will contain the historic legend: "Gridley, you may fire when ready," the words with which the battle of Manila was opened. Another is a decorative tablet, designed by Raphael A. Weed. The tablet, which measures about three by four feet in size, is something unique, the design being burned into prepared and polished white basswood by the application of heated iron, producing an effect of rich brown tones combined with a slightly modeled surface that suggests wood carving.

Still another is the largest loving cup ever produced by the silversmith's art. It will be of solid silver, six feet high, or 4½ inches taller than the admiral. Fifty thousand dimes, raised by popular subscription, have been used in its construction.

THE NEW YORK RECEPTION.

Three Million People Are Expected to Participate in It.

The Olympia, her admiral, captain and crew will be received September 28 by Rear Admiral Sampson, on behalf of the government, by the governor of New York, the mayor of the city, and other dignitaries. There will be a great naval parade up the Hudson river, banquets and receptions, and on September 29 there will be a great land parade, and governors by the score, from the east and the west, and the north and the south, surrounded by gaudily-dressed staffs, will vie with each other to tell Dewey what the people of the land think of him.

And they will tell him pleasant things. They will tell him that he is the central figure of the Spanish-American war; that his was the only victory not tainted by character-destroying jealousy; that his diplomacy was as triumphant as his fighting. They will tell him that in spite of sensational newspaper correspondents, who would make a monkey of the lion, the people have an abiding faith in his common sense and his judgment of men and affairs. And all this homage will not turn his head, for Dewey is a true American who believes in the people and who knows that charlatanism and offensive jingoism are not American and that yellow journalism does not represent anything that is ennobling or commendable in our national life.

Preparations have been made for the entertainment of 3,000,000 visitors during the Dewey festival.

DEWEY TRIUMPHAL ARCH.

The Grandest Piece of Art Work Ever Conceived in America.

The contribution of the National Sculpture society to the Dewey celebration is the most notable of all. It will consist of an arch and colonnade to be erected at Madison square, free of cost, although the professional services of the artists engaged in the work represent an equivalent of from $150,000 to $200,000.

The arch is to be supplemented by a line of columns, enriched with sculptures. The arch itself is similar in general design to the great Roman memorial arches, particularly the arch of Titus. Its four great piers will have bas-relief decorations, and at their bases are to be large allegorical groups, personifying Patriotism, War, The Return and Peace. The finials of the columns, on either side of the allegorical groups mentioned, are to be portrait figures, from eight to twelve feet high, of famous American admirals and naval officers. The committee of the Sculpture society wrote to Secretary of Navy Long to suggest the names of eight heroes who he thought would most fittingly represent the navy. In reply he suggested John Paul Jones, representing the war of the revolution; Decatur, Hull, Perry and Mac-Donough, representing the war of 1812; and Farragut, Porter and Cushing, representing the civil war.

The spandrels above the main entrance, on the north and south sides, are to have bas-reliefs symbolizing the Atlantic and Pacific oceans on one side and the North and East rivers on the other, "thus," to quote from the committee's report, "to emphasize New York's position as the most important commercial city of the country." The two key stones of the arch are to be surmounted by great American eagles, which will probably be gilded.

Above the wings of the eagles shall, it is suggested, be placed inscriptions, to be chosen by the celebration committee, in recognition of the services of Admiral Dewey. A novel feature of the design is a quadriga of sea horses, drawing a ship, surmounting the apex of the arch. At the prow of this ship stands a figure, symbolizing Triumphant Victory, with outstretched wings. This is one of the most striking portions of the entire structure.

The large surfaces above the minor arches on the west and east sides of the edifice are to be covered with designs in high relief, the subjects of which have not yet been definitely chosen, but for which allegories of "The Protection of Our Country" and "The Advancement of Civilization" are suggested. As for the large sculptured groups to be placed at either end of the colonnade, four in all, the committee suggests some such subjects as "The Army" and "The Navy" for one end and "The West Indies" and "The East Indies" for the other.

A suggestion has been made that arrangements should be perfected with one of the gas companies to have the columns of the colonnade topped with flambou lights, and similar lights affixed to the corners of the cornice of the arch, while the arch itself should be illuminated with electric lights.

The arch is to be built of the same material as that used in the gorgeous decoration of the Chicago exposition, which, as experience has proved, is capable of withstanding the elements for at least a year.

A SECOND WEDDING.

Prince Cantacuzene and His Bride Married Again.

With Bishop Potter officiating the beautiful Russian ceremony is supplemented by that of the Episcopal Church.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 26.—The Episcopal marriage service, supplementing that of the Russian orthodox church that was observed Sunday, which made Prince Cantacuzene, Count Speransky, of Russia, and Julia Dent Grant, daughter of Brig. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, and granddaughter of Gen. U. S. Grant, and husband and wife, was celebrated at All Saints' chapel here at noon Monday. The assembly of invited guests, notable for social and military distinction, made the ceremony one of the most brilliant ever witnessed at Newport.

The family and social connections of the bride gave to the wedding a military as well as diplomatic character and the little church in which it took place was bright with blue and gold, the bridegroom's uniform easily outshining those of the home guard.

A large number of the Newport summer colony had delayed their departure to attend the wedding, which came as a climax to one of the gayest seasons ever known at this popular resort.

Rev. H. C. Potter, Protestant Episcopal bishop of New York, officiated, assisted by Rev. Dr. Nevins, of the American church of Rome, but, in accordance with the laws of the state of Rhode Island, Rev. Dr. Porter, of the Emanuel church of this city, read that portion of the service which legally united the distinguished pair.

A reception followed the wedding ceremony at the Palmer residence, and late in the afternoon the prince and princess left for New York and St. Petersburg.

Distinguished Guests Present.
Among the congregation, besides the immediate family, were Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, the grandmother of the bride; H. H. Honore, Edwin C. Honore, Mr. and

PRINCE CANTACUZENE.

Mrs. Harry Honore, Jr., Mrs. Sartoris, wife of Capt. Sartoris; Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, Mrs. Miles and Miss Miles, and Lieut. Col. Michner, of Gen. Miles' staff; Gen. Merritt and Maj. Mott, of his staff; Adj. Gen. Corbin, Col. and Mrs. Hein, of West Point; former United States Minister Samuel Thayer, of Wisconsin; Assistant Secretary of War Meiklejohn, Chaney M. Depew and many others.

The reception at the Potter Palmer residence was one of the largest ever held in Newport. The bridal couple received under an immense floral arch, with Mrs. Grant and Mr. and Mrs. Palmer standing on the right, while seated near by was Mrs. U. S. Grant. The prince and princess started for New York on board the steam yacht Narada.

Wages to Be Raised.
Cleveland, O., Sept. 26.—As a result of a meeting of the executive committee of the Lake Carriers' association held Monday afternoon the wages of nearly 16,000 men employed on the vessels of the great lakes will be raised from ten to twenty per cent., beginning October 1. This includes 2,000 engineers, who demanded an advance of 12 1/2 per cent. and threatened to strike should it not be conceded. Instead of the 12 1/2 per cent. asked for by the engineers they will receive an advance of 20 per cent.

Capt. Sigbee Bereaved.
New York, Sept. 26.—Capt. Charles D. Sigbee hurriedly left his vessel, the battleship Texas, which is at anchor with the rest of the fleet in the bay, and started for Rehoboth Beach, Delaware, having received a telegram from that place announcing that his daughter Ethel had died there suddenly of heart disease.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

The Public Schools.

Interesting statistical information is contained in the forthcoming report of the superintendent of public instruction relative to the schools of Michigan. The information given is for the school year ended September 5, 1898. The report says:

The number of graded school districts in the state was 672 and the number of pupils 703,730. The number of teachers employed was 12,740 and the aggregate of wages paid was $4,146,499; number of schoolhouses, 738; value of school property, $18,138,589; net receipts of all school districts, $5,644,472.33; net expenditures, $6,281,022.70; bonded indebtedness of school districts, $1,829,955.55; floating indebtedness, $180,918.55; number of libraries, 3,382; volumes in libraries, $2,410; paid for libraries, $99,179.80; amount of primary school interest money apportioned, $1,048,384.50.

The Coal Industry.

Labor Commissioner Cox has been making a special canvass of the soft coal industry in Michigan, which has been growing rapidly during the past few years. He says:

There are 17 soft coal shafts in operation in the state, and with the exception of the shafts at Jackson and Corunna they are all in the Saginaw valley. During the month of August 1,086 men were at work in the mines of the state, and if skilled miners could be employed 5,000 men could easily be kept at work in the industry and produce 15,000 tons of coal per day. As it is over 1,000,000 tons will be produced in 1899. The coal is as good as that mined in Ohio, and it exists in veins from three to five feet in thickness, invariably at a depth of from 100 to 200 feet.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health from 75 observers in various portions of the state for the week ended September 16 indicate that pleuritis and tonsillitis increased and influenza decreased in area of prevalence. Consumption was reported at 203 places, measles at 9, typhoid fever at 94, scarlet fever at 36, diphtheria at 21, whooping cough at 14, cerebro-spinal meningitis at 2 places, and smallpox at Battle Creek and Maple Grove.

Bank Figures.

A statement made by Bank Commissioner Maltz shows that the state banks of Detroit have aggregated loans and discounts, stocks, bonds and mortgages of $43,083,761, the total resources and liabilities being $52,966,655. The commercial deposits are $11,903,567 and the savings deposits $33,686,245. The increase in these items over June 30 are, respectively, $1,916,716, $1,918,750, $1,117,145 and $715,572.

Conference of Health Officers.

The important meeting of health officials in Michigan will be held at Grand Rapids October 20 and 27, and the conference will probably be one of the most instructive and useful ones ever held in Michigan. Other prominent sanitarians of national reputation will be present. The state board hopes that every local board of health will send at least one delegate.

The School Laws.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Jason E. Hammond has prepared a new compilation of the school laws of the state with an entirely new set of references, having referred to the new compiled laws of the state instead of Howell's statutes. The book will be ready for distribution in a few weeks.

Victory for Oleo Makers.

The supreme court has practically nullified the Michigan anti-oleomargarine law in an opinion that holds unconstitutional that portion which makes it a criminal offense to color any butter substitute so as to resemble genuine butter.

FIFTY CENTS FOR NOTHING.

What will the inventive brain of man do next? This is a question some one asks almost daily. There is one, though, who leads all others, who for a quarter of a century has been making fine laundry starch, and to-day is offering the public the finest starch ever placed on the market.

Ask your grocer for a coupon book which will enable you to get the first two packages of this new starch, "RED CROSS" (trade mark brand) also two children's Shakespeare pictures, painted in twelve beautiful colors, natural as life, or the Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, all absolutely free. All grocers are authorized to give ten large packages of "RED CROSS STARCH" with twenty of the Shakespeare pictures or ten of the Twentieth Century Girl Calendars to the first five purchasers of the ENDLESS CHAIN STARCH BOOK. This is one of the greatest offers ever made to introduce "RED CROSS" laundry starch, J. C. Hubinger's latest invention.

Looks All Right.

"Doesn't the bicycle make you feel younger?" asked the expert.

"Well, I won't exactly say that," replied the elderly novice, "but it certainly makes me look younger."

"How is that?"

THE ills of women overshadow their whole lives.

Some women are constantly getting medical treatment and are never well. "A woman best understands women's ills," and the women who consult Mrs. Pinkham find in her counsel practical assistance. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. MABEL GOOD, Correctionville, Ia., tells how Mrs. Pinkham saved her life. She says:

"I cannot thank you enough for what your medicine has done for me. I can recommend it as one of the best medicines on earth for all women's ills. I suffered for two years with female weakness and at last became bedfast. Three of our best doctors did me no good so I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking a few bottles of your medicine, I was

Mrs. DOLE STANLEY, Campbellburg, Ind., writes: "DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I was troubled with sick headache and was so weak and nervous, I could hardly go. A friend called upon me one evening and recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, saying that she knew that it would cure me. I then sent for your medicine and after taking five bottles of it, I was entirely cured. I cannot praise it enough."

Had a Guardian Appointed.
Herbert J. Rushton, of Manchester, whose wife left him on account of so-called religious scruples, an account of which appeared in last week's Herald, has petitioned Judge Robbins of the Lenawee probate court for the appointment of a special and general guardian for his father-in-law Thomas Curtis and family. The petition claimed that Curtis was mentally incompetent to manage his affairs. The appointment was granted and Dr. Gary W. Ross, of Onstead, was appointed guardian.
Mr. Rushton has also sued his brother-in-law, Rev. William Curtis, in the Lenawee circuit court for $5,000 damages, for enticing his wife Maueila Rushton to leave him. Curtis has deserted his own wife for the same reason that he induced his sister to separate from Mr. Rushton, that the marriage was "of the flesh and the devil."
