IMPORTANT MATTERS

Come Up for Consideration by the Washtenaw Supervisors.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE JAIL BUILDING

And the Care of the Mildly Insane Are Among Them.

Smoking Prohibited at the Sessions of the Board, so Bacon Will Not Get Twice Smoked.—The Board Visited the County House and Ate Dinner Today.

Washtenaw county's board of supervisors met in annual session at Ann Arbor, Monday. John L. Hunter (Republican), of Ypsilanti town, was elected permanent chairman by acclamation, and David E. Beach, of Lima, chairman pro tem.

At 2:15 p. m. the board went in a body to the county jail and under the direction of Dr Arthur Worden, of Detroit, member of the state board of corrections and charities, inspected it. They found the interior of the building greatly improved since the doctor's characterization of it as "the worst jail in Michigan," but still far from conforming to the requirements of the state law. Dr. Worden insisted that whatever else be done there must be additional quarters for the care of women, children and witnesses. The supervisors generally agreed that some changes are necessary.

At the morning session Tuesday Chairman Hunter announced the standing committees for the year as follows:

Equalization—Case, Whitaker, Allmendinger, McCullough, Collins.

Criminal Claims No. 1—Bibbins, Beach, Biggs.

Criminal Claims No 2—Damon, Braun, Shadford.

Civil Claims—Kenny, McIntyre, Kingsley.

To settle with County Officers—Fowler, Walters, Bacon.

On Apportionment of State and County Taxes—Bacon, Clark, Schneider.

On Public Buildings—Krapf, Whitaker, Case.

On Rejected Taxes—Biggs, Hall, Fischer.

To Examine Accounts of Superintendents of Poor—Childs, Hall, Burtless.

On Finance—Kingsley, Voorhies, Prochnow.

On Fractional School Districts—Shadford, Seyler, Voorhies.

On Drains—Allmendinger, Walters, Damon.

On Printing—Childs, Dresselhouse, Fowler.

On Contagious Diseases—Burtless, Clark, Dresselhouse.

On Per Diem—Collins, McIntyre, Krapf.

To Prepare Statements of County Expenses—Fischer, Beach, Bibbins.

In the afternoon Ira Savery, Republican, of Salem, was elected school examiner to succeed M. J. Cavanaugh.

A resolution to prohibit smoking during the session of the board was carried, and Supervisors Childs, Kingsley and Biggs were made a committee to enforce the rule.

Today the annual visit of the supervisors to the county house will take place. A hard fight was made Tuesday to knock out this time honored custom but it did not succeed.

Judge H. Wirt Newkirk appeared before the board yesterday and made a plea that the county should provide some place where the mildly insane could be cared for while awaiting admission to the state asylums, which are overcrowded.

An informal discussion ensued, indicating a leaning of the supervisors towards the idea that rooms could be fitted over at the county house. Finally, Chairman Hunter suggested the board was to visit the county house today, and if Judge Newkirk would go along he and the building committee could look over the county house and see what could be done.

J. F. Towler (Republican), for several years highway commissioner of Augusta, was elected county drain commissioner by a vote of 15 to 12, over Daniel Barry, the former incumbent.

TO THE DEAF.—A rich lady, cured of her Deafness and Noise in the Head by Dr. Nicholson's Artificial Ear Drums, gave $10,000 to his Institute, so that deaf people unable to procure the Ear Drums may have them free. Address No. 4941, The Nicholson Institute, 790 Eighth Avenue, New York.

Fire Loss Had to Be Arbitrated.

Robert Schwikerath's loss by the recent fire in his house has been adjusted at $248. He had $450 insurance in the Firemen's Fund Insurance Co. When the company's adjuster came here to adjust the matter he offered Mr. Schwikerath a ridiculously small sum in settlement of the loss, which was refused. The matter was finally left to arbitration. George W. Beckwith represented Mr. Schwikerath, Asa Smith, of Lansing, the insurance company, and John G. Hoover was the third arbitrator. Mr. Beckwith assessed the damage at $325. Mr. Smith's figures were considerably lower. The adjustment was finally made at $248, not nearly enough to cover the loss. Just how much gain in business the insurance company expects to make by such adjustments of losses by its agents is hard to imagine. The adjuster may make a "record" for himself with the company for the sharpness and closeness of his settlements of losses, but the company's record will not be quite so good.

Maiden Ladies' Convention.

The production of the Maiden Ladies' Convention under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church, on Friday evening, was a pronounced success. The different characters were very funny and created lots of amusement. There was a large audience present, which encouraged the ladies to repeat the convention Saturday evening. There was but a small attendance, however, at that time. The net receipts were about $75.

In Chicago on the 9th President McKinley officiated at the laying of the corner stone of the new federal building, among the other distinguished guests being Vice President Mariscal, of Mexico, and Premier Laurier, of Canada. In the afternoon the military and civic parade took place and in the evening there was a parade of all nations and a banquet at the Auditorium in honor of the noted visitors.

Honest Methods Win.

This is a fact that sometimes is overlooked in these days of hurray and scramble, but it is a fact none the less. The success of the John M. Smyth Co., Chicago, whose advertisements are appearing in this paper, is a marked illustration in point. A tremendous business has been built up by this firm strictly on its merits. Good goods properly described and offered at a very low price, the unlimited capital of the firm enabling it to buy on extremely advantageous terms. See the striking advertisement elsewhere in this issue and write the John M. Smyth Co., 150 to 166 West Madison St. Chicago, for its mammoth catalogue. Every family should have it.

A Weak Memory.

A local newspaper woman is a member of a colony of her sex in a downtown flat. It was her turn this week to do the buying of the light housekeeping supplies. Probably she relied a little too implicitly on her memory. Anyway, she was overheard at the 'phone calling up one of the big groceries: "I want a half dozen cakes of suppressed yeast!" she cried. And that was all of the order she could remember.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Nothing in a Pet Name.

When you see a man over six feet tall, who weighs about 220, and his shoes are so big he has to get them made, you can be pretty sure that some one calls him "Artie" or "Sweetums" or something.—N. Y. Press.

Lane's Family Medicine.

WARNED IN A DREAM.

Last night I dozed in my easy chair,
For my active brain was tired;
And she came and stood beside me there—
The girl I had long desired.

I knew that this was another life;
And it seemed more old than strange,
For she said, like a real and living wife:
"Say, Harry, I want some change."

She told me the baby had a rash,
And the cook was drunk all day;
She spoke of her usual need of cash,
And the bills she had to pay.

She said that Tommy had hurt his knee,
And Bessie had had a fall,
And I might stop to-morrow and see
If the doctor could not call.

She owned that Johnny had grown too
Large for her to correct any more;
And would I kindly take him in charge,
And investigate why he swore?

She said there were holes in the kitchen
Sink, and the skylight leaked again,
And Bowers, the plumber, didn't think
The boiler would stand much strain.

She asked me what was the price of wheat,
And hinted I should have known
Enough to keep away from the street,
And let "such things alone!"

In her calm, persistent way she spoke
Again of the butcher's bill;
And then, with a lucky start, I woke—
A "lonely bachelor" still!

CHAPTER XX.

"ABROWN PAUL—A LITTLE COPPER."

Such as they were, the troubles of the ancient and his crony Luigi could not have ended soon, for, although at first they were surrounded by a jeering crowd, fresh things caught the minds of the people after a little time, and they were left to themselves. As the following day was a holiday in Todi, the innkeeper probably let them lie bound until he had more leisure on his hands, which were in truth full enough, as the albergo hummed with custom. I never heard or saw anything more of either of the villains again. We had time yet at our disposal; but, after an early supper, the horses being rested, we started, and, going slowly, with a halt on the right bank of the Paglia, we crossed the Tiber near San Fortunato, and Perugia lay before us, bright in the sunshine. In order to throw any pursuit off the scent, for if by chance inquiries were made about us, they would be at the southern gates, we made a turn east, then struck north, and, getting over the numberless trenches lying between us and our point, eventually entered the city by the Porta del Carmine. Here Jacopo, under my secret instructions, let the guard handle his wine-skin, buzzing out as if in the confidence of the cup that we had come from Fabriano in the Marches and then gave them the day. We rode on, leaving the ward at the gate to finish the skin, and found very comfortable house-room in the Rubicon, an hotel kept by Messer Passaro, which lay behind the house of the Piccinino family, "close to the Duomo, the citadel, and the gallows," as the landlord, who thought himself a merry wag, informed me whilst he received us at his door. I took the best room available for myself, and saw to the wants of my followers and the horses, who were as well as when they started. I left them in comfort, bidding Bande Nere make ready to accompany me out at noon. Dinner I ordered at 12, inviting the landlord to crack a flask of his best thereafter with me. He accepted with effusion; my object in doing this being to try and get as much information out of him as possible, as I saw he had a loose tongue and a gossiping heart, and I was resolved to leave no stone unturned in my search for Angiola. It wanted two hours or more for dinner, and, having bathed and changed my attire, I sank me down in an armchair to enjoy an hour or so of repose.

After dinner mine host appeared, bearing with him a cobwebbed flask.
"It is a wine of France, excellency—Burgundy—and all my customers do not taste this, I can tell you."
"I am favored, indeed, Messer Passaro; take a seat, and help yourself."
"The condescension of your excellency!" and with a bow he settled himself comfortably on the extreme edge of a chair.
We poured out our measures, and, on testing the wine, I found it most excellent; as for Passaro, he pushed himself back into his seat and let the liquid down his throat in drops, his eyes closed in an ecstasy. When he opened them, which he did after a time, he gasped out:
"Is not that glorious, signore? Have you ever lipped the brand?"
"I confess it is wine for the gods," I said. "Is there much in your cellar?"
"Store of it, excellency; I was not butler to his eminence of Strigonia for ten years for nothing."
"His eminence is a fine judge of wines," "Cospitto! And your excellency's forgiveness for swearing. He is the finest judge in the world. There is no brand he could not name, nay, tell you the year of vintage, were he blindfold and a drop but touched his palate. Corpo di Bacco! But he is a true prince of the church."
"Ah! you are a sly dog, Messer Passaro," and I filled him his glass; "I warrant me you can tell many a tale of the cardinal. But come, now, has not the Baglioni as fine a taste in wines, and a better one for a neat ankle?"
"Hush!" he said, looking around him as he put down his empty glass, "in your ear, excellency—the Count Carlo has big teeth and bites hard. Let your tongue be still when his name comes up in Perugia."

"Thanks, friend, but Count Carlo owes me no grudge, or else I should not be here."

"Your worship has come to join him then?"
"As you see, Messer Passaro," and I filled his glass again, "I am a soldier and love to serve a soldier. Besides things will be on foot soon, for what with the French long."

"True, and a light has been put to the torch, too."
"Hurrah! Another glass, man; we soldiers are sick of this truce. Our purses run dry in peace. But tell me."

"You must know, signore, that all the country east of Castiglione to the Tiber, and lying between the Nestore and Casale, is a fief of the Castellani, and the count—ha! ha! It was glorious!" and he slapped his thigh—"ha! ha!"

Nothing irritates me so much as to hear a man laughing aimlessly, and it was in a sharp tone that I said: "Go on!"

"A moment, excellency," and he held up a fat hand, "ha! ha! I heard it all from Messer Lambro, my cousin, and groom of the chambers to Count Carlo. Well, all the fief I spoke of is inherited by the Lady Angiola, the daughter of old Count Adriano. The family is Ghibelline, and have taken the French side, and, seeing that Tremouille was between us and Casale, my lady must needs go down to visit her estates. The count, who is looking for a wife, buckles on his armor, mounts his mare, and with 200 lances at his back, gallops up the left bank of the Tiber, fords the stream, swoops down on the dove-cote at Rossino, and brings back a bride to Perugia; ha! ha! It is superb."

"Ha! ha! Messer Passaro—diavolo! Are they married yet?"

"Not yet—ah! The wine is wine for the gods, as your worship says—not married yet, for my lady is half beside herself, they say, and the count, receiving a sudden message from Cesare, has had to leave Perugia for a few days."

"Cospitto! How he must curse the Borgia for putting off his happiness! And she is handsome, eh?"

"For the matter of that, excellency, one does not squint at a sour face set in a golden coil. But they do say the lady is very beautiful."

"You have not seen her then?"

"Corpo di Bacco! She is under lock and key, and not for the likes of me to look upon."

"In the citadel, I suppose—a gloomy cage for a fair bird."

"Maybe, but I have let my tongue wag too freely, signore, and must be going."

"Safe enough with me, Messer Passaro, for I am on the right side—adieu!"

I made no further attempt to detain him, and he waddled off with the best part of the now empty flask under his belt. I was sure he knew but little more, and what I had got out of him did not amount to much. At any rate I had discovered that Baglioni was out of Perugia, and that she was still here. This was better than nothing; but worse than nothing if I could not discover the place of her imprisonment. I threw myself back in my chair, and racked my brains to no purpose. There was nothing definite for me to hold of, no clew of any kind. I thought of getting the landlord to invite the count's valet to drink a bottle or so of his Burgundy with me, but the mere whisper of such a thing would excite suspicion of a further object, and the slightest suspicion would ruin the business. Bande Nere appearing at this time, in accordance with my orders. I resolved to hang about the Palazzo Pubblico, and see if I could pick up any information there. On second thoughts I resolved to go alone, and, dismissing Bande Nere, sallied forth by myself. I went by way of the Piazza del Duomo, and here I stopped in an idle manner, and was for a moment struck by the entrance to the palace, which lies here. Over the gate was a splendid bronze of a lion and a griffin, set above a series of chains and bars of gates, trophies of an old victory gained over the Sieneze. A crowd of beggars surrounded me, but I was in no mood for charity, and drove them off with a rough oath. One of the number, however, remained. He was lame in both feet, supported himself on crutches, and wore a huge patch over one of his eyes.

"That is right, excellency—drive them off—the scum, the goats—pestering every noble gentleman. It is only to the deserving your excellency will give—a paul, excellency—a brown copper for the poor cripple—a million thanks, excellency—may this copper be increased to you a thousandfold in gold."

"Begone, fool!" I said, and walked on; but he hobbled along at a great rate beside me.

"But a favor, excellency. If your worship would but come with me, I would show you a wonderful sight. A bird-cage, excellency; would your lordship be pleased to buy a bird?"

I turned round in my anger, and raised my hand to cuff the rascal's ears, cripple though he was, when he suddenly added: "Or free a bird, excellency—there is some one coming—a paul, quick—thanks, excellency—may your lordship die a prince."

As he spoke a couple of gentlemen and their servants pushed by us, and I gave them the road, the beggar hopping nimbly to my side. My heart was beating rapidly, and all my blood tingling. Was I on the edge of a discovery?

"No more riddles," I said; "who are you?"

"It is not safe to talk here, signore," he answered. "Follow me." He started off across the square, hobbling along on his crutches and wailing out: "A copper for the poor cripple—a brown paul—a little copper?"

"By God!" I exclaimed to myself as I followed behind, "what does this mean? I had to find out for myself, however, and I followed the man, who stumped along at a great pace, notwithstanding the ups and downs of the side streets by which we went. He never once looked behind him, but kept his cry of 'a copper for the poor cripple—a brown paul—a little copper,' and once or twice, when I lost him in the crowd, the cry served as a signal to me, telling me where he went. Finally he turned to the left, and on reaching the Via della Conca, made straight for the gate. Here a toll was collected, and, paying his paul, he went straight out of the town. I kept him in view now easily, and could have caught him up as I liked, for the speed at which he had hobbled along had no doubt breathed him. At last he left the road, and, toiling somewhat painfully over the very uneven ground, vanished behind a spur of the hills on which Perugia is situated. I now put on my best walking pace, and in a minute or two turned the elbow of the spur myself, and found the mendicant seated on a stone mopping his brow, his crutches lying beside him. He stood up with the greatest ease as I approached.

"Well, fellow," I said, "what does all this mean? Beware if you have attempted to trick me."

"Does not your excellency know me?"

"Never saw you before."

"I am Gian, excellency."

"Gian! Gian! That throws no light on the subject."

"The cavaliere remembers the garden of St. Michael in Florence?"

I was not likely to forget the place where I had received Angiola from Luigi, but I could not connect the man before me with the circumstance. "I remember perfectly, but I do not know you. Drop this foolery and speak plainly."

"I am speaking plainly, signore. I was not sure it was you myself until now. I am Gian, the Lady Angiola's servant, and his excellency the secretary has sent me to you."

"But how did you hear I was in Perugia? His excellency did not himself know I was coming here until a half-hour before I started, and I have ridden hard?"

"The pigeon, your worship; it flew to Florence with a letter to the Lady Marietta. She sent another one on to the convent of St. Jerome, and the result is I am here. I was to seek out your worship, and inform you where my lady is confined."

"Basta! It was well conceived by his excellency. But where is she—in the citadel?"

"No, excellency; but in the Casino Baglioni, behind Santa Agnese."

"How did you find out?"

"I was brought here prisoner, excellency, and was allowed to be in attendance on her ladyship, together with Madonna Laura, her maid. I escaped back to Florence with a letter from the Lady Angiola a day or so after. It was by her orders I went."

"Then she may not be there now?"

"I have made sure of that, excellency—but Madonna Laura—" he stopped.

"The maid—what of her—no doubt with her mistress?"

"Alas, no, excellency! She was killed by Pluto."

"Pluto!"

"Yes, your worship. A black bear that the Cavaliere Paolo, who holds the house, has as a pet." And he commenced to weep. I felt for the faithful fellow's grief, but said nothing, and after a little he composed himself.

"Come, Gian," I said, laying my hand on his shoulder, "be a man, and we will have an eye for an eye."

He ground his teeth but made no reply, and I went on:

"How far is the house from here?"

"Close," he said. "We can reach it by the Porto San Angelo."

"Come, then."

"There is no need for the crutches now," he remarked, as he tucked them under his

"Would your lordship be pleased to buy a bird?"

arm. "I will use them when we come to the gate. Will your excellency follow?"

As he walked northward over the hills, I continued my questions:

"Who is the Cavaliere Paolo?"

"A cousin of Count Carlo Baglioni, your worship. A man in middle life—my age—and a perfect devil."

"I doubt not, the breed is a bad one. Has he many men with him?"

"About six, excellency, and then, of course, there is the guard at the Porta San Angelo always at hand."

"Now listen to me, for we may not have time to talk further of this. When you have shown me the house we must separate. Go to the Albergo of the Rubicon—you know it?"

"Alas! no, excellency."

"It is behind the Palazzo Piccinino; you cannot miss it. Go there, and await me a few steps from the doors—you follow?"

"Yes, your worship."

We had now crossed the Vici dell' Elce, but passing the gate of that name, went onwards, and after a stiff climb reached the Porta San Angelo. Here my companion, bethinking himself once more to his crutches and keeping ahead of me, turned southwards along the road which lined the walls towards Santa Agnese. Shortly before reaching the church, we came to a small but solid-looking building, half fortress, half dwelling-house, and Gian, stopping dead in front of it, turned round and began to whine:

"A copper for the poor cripple—a brown copper. The house, signore," speaking the last words under his breath as I came up.

"Do you know the room?" I asked, pretending to fumble for a coin.

"In the tower behind," he answered rapidly, "may the saints bless your lordship," and he limped away.

In order to gain time to look about, I put back my purse leisurely, and then, with the same object, proceeded to rearrange and retie the bows on my doublet. The face of the house was a little way back from the wall, which it overlooked. The massive doorway was shut, and the windows on each side of it, as well as those set above, heavily grated. I was too near the house to see the tower behind, and it looked so deserted that it was hardly possible for six men to be on guard there.

"An odd sort of a bower to place one's lady in," I said, half aloud, to myself; but then Baglioni's wooing was a rough one. There was obviously nothing to be got by staring at the front of the house, and I turned to my left, pausing between two dead walls, until I obtained a view of the tower behind. The windows of the topmost room were all closed and strongly barred, and it seemed deserted. I glanced lower down, and to my joy saw that the room below was evidently occupied, and once I caught a glimpse of a figure moving within. It was a brief glimpse; but the eyes of love are sharp, and I knew it was Angiola. I made up my mind at once, and, stepping back quickly to the front of the house, hammered loudly at the door with the knocker. After a moment's silence I heard the firm tread of a soldier. A small harrier was let down, a bearded face looked up, and a rough voice asked:

"Who knocks?"

"Diavolo!" I exclaimed. "You are polite. Is the Cavaliere Paolo within?"

"He is not," replied the man, shortly.

"Expected soon?"

"Cannot say."

"If you do not answer more civilly it will be bad for you. Tell him when he comes that the Cavaliere di Savelli—I gave my proper name—has arrived from Rome on an urgent affair, and will call on him to-morrow; forget, and it will be worse for you."

The man seemed a little surprised, and entered his tone at once.

"I will give your message, signore."

"Beware how you fail—harkee—is there a road to the Via Appia behind this house?"

"Yes, signore; straight on, after taking the passage."

I did not even thank him, but turned on my heel and walked off whistling a catch. I went down the passage between the two walls, and after some considerable stumblings up and down the vile roads reached the Via Appia and turned southwards to my hostel. I had formed the somewhat daring plan of trying to force the house in broad daylight, choosing my time an hour or so after dinner, and if done boldly this would probably be successful, as my own force was nearly equal to that of the garrison, including Pluto.

As I was approaching the Rubicon I heard a voice at my side.

"A copper, signore—a brown paul."

"Gian."

"Excellency."

"Drop the beggar and attend—can you ride?"

"Yes, excellency."

"Very well!"

I said no more and went on in silence, but a little distance from the hostel I bade Gian stop, and, entering the yard, sought out Jacopo.

"Has the landlord any horses for sale?"

"Two, your excellency."

"Good ones?"

"Fairly so, excellency—about 20 crowns apiece, with saddle included."

"Then buy one—and here—a few steps to the right of the entrance you will find a cripple; he is one of my men; do not speak, but attend—go out quietly—get him decently clothed, and bring him back here; the horse will be for him. You can get clothes to fit anywhere, for the shops do not shut until late; get him a sword, too; there are some good and cheap weapons in Perugia."

"It shall be done, excellency."

"Then be off at once."

I went on, and had a look at the horses. Bande Nere was with them, seated on a rough wooden bench cleaning his corselet, which already shone like silver. He rose to the salute as I came up.

"How are the horses, Bande Nere?"

"As well as possible, signore; they are all in high mettles."

With a parting pat to Castor I sought my chamber, reaching it a little after the supper hour. I kept up an outward composure, but my mind within me was aflame with excitement. I ordered another flask of the Burgundy and forced myself to eat and drink a little. Then I betook myself to the armchair, and my thoughts. So impatient was I that the idea came on me to make the attempt there and then, and it was with difficulty I persuaded myself to abandon such a plan, which could have only ended in disaster. Finally, I was about to retire for want of something better to do, when Jacopo came in, followed by Gian.

The latter was entirely transformed, except for the patch which he still wore over his eye, and I was able to recall him now as the old servant who had come somewhat fiercely up to me in the garden of St. Michael. He had the art which I found so difficult of completely disguising himself when he chose. Jacopo had performed his task well, and, bidding them keep their tongues closed, I dismissed them with a good night.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Coppee's Unplayed Play.

It was some 25 years after the Commune had reigned in France that Francois Coppee suffered the greatest disappointment of his life. His play, called "The Pater," was submitted to the readers for the Comedie Francaise, and accepted; it had successfully passed through the various ordeals through which a play must go before it finally appears at the famous theater, and the preparation for its production had been completed, even to the final rehearsals of the artists, when the government interfered and interdicted it. The French were still so sensitive on the subject of the Commune that the authorities refused to allow the production of a play dealing with an incident of that time. The managers of the theater were enraged, the artists in despair, and everyone was in a panic over the affair except Coppee, who admitted that he was thunderstruck, and that the failure to have his play produced at the Comedie Francaise dashed one of the ambitions of his life. He assumed a disdainful air, however, was sarcastic at the expense of a government that was afraid of a one-act drama, and announced that if the minister, by whose order the play was forbidden, expected that the author would plead for a revision of the verdict, he had made the greatest mistake of his life.—Detroit Free Press.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

License for Barbers.

Among the new laws which have gone into effect is one providing for the examination and licensing of all barbers. Under this law a board has been appointed by Gov. Pingree, the same being required to meet at least four times a year for the purpose of holding examinations of applicants relative to their ability to prepare for use the ordinary tools and utensils used by barbers, including the proper antiseptic treatment of such tools. They must understand the nature and effect of diseases of the skin and scalp and whether these are infectious.

Paroles Granted.

Gov. Pingree has paroled the following convicts upon the recommendation of the advisory board of pardons: Edwin Schulte, sent from Wayne county, January, 1897, to five years at Ionia for larceny; Fred Berlin, sent from Branch county, March, 1898, to Jackson for three years for larceny; Wallace Lobdell, sent from Kent county, November, 1897, to Ionia for three years for burglary; Charles Palmer, sent from Wayne county, March, 1899, for 20 years for criminal assault; Melvin Howard, sent from Van Buren county, September, 1886, for 25 years for assault with intent to kill; George Cleveland, sent from Hindsdale, June, 1895, for eight years for assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health from 65 observers in various portions of the state for the week ended September 30 indicate that scarlet fever, intermittent fever, influenza and pneumonia increased and cholera morbus decreased in area of prevalence. Consumption was reported at 205 places, measles at 9, typhoid fever at 106, scarlet fever at 57, diphtheria at 19, whooping cough at 18, cerebro-spinal meningitis at 3 places, and smallpox at Maple Grove.

Favor City Ownership.

At the annual convention in Grand Rapids of the Michigan Municipal league, with about 30 towns represented, the chief topic of discussion was municipal ownership of public utilities. The sentiment was all one way and the discussion ended with the adoption of resolutions favoring public ownership of all utilities, including street railroads, and asking for an amendment to the state constitution permitting it.

Deposits Increased.

Banking Commissioner Maltz has issued a statement showing the condition of the 187 state banks and three trust companies at the close of business September 7. It makes a good showing, compared with the September report for 1898. The increase in loans, discounts, stocks, bonds and mortgages is $11,046,351.48, or about 15 per cent. The deposits have increased $14,742,858.67, or about 17 per cent.

Will Give Information.

At the meeting in Lansing of the registers of deeds and county treasurers to object to furnishing information to the state tax commissioners without compensation it was decided to furnish the information, the opinion being that in all probability the boards of supervisors would do the square thing in the way of paying the registers and treasurers for their labor.

News Items Briefly Told.

County Treasurer Roscoe L. Hulbert, of Cheboygan, died in a Detroit hospital, where he had been for treatment.

The farmers around Plainwell who experimented with sugar beet raising this year are well satisfied, and a large acreage will be devoted to beets next year.

Ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer has presented to Detroit another piece of land for park purposes. The new tract is about ten acres in extent, adjoins Palmer park and is worth $20,000.

The banks in the Saginaw valley have on deposit $13,138,025, a gain of over $3,500,000 in the past three months. There are 14 banks in the Saginaws and the two Bay Cities.

The state fair at Grand Rapids was a gratifying success, the receipts being over $16,000.

Secretary Wade, of the University of Michigan, gives out the official enrollment of students at 2,937.

Postmaster Holt, of Bellevue, is in receipt of official information from Washington that advances the Bellevue post office to the presidential class.

An infant daughter of George Stanley, living on the Reynolds farm in Franklin, fell into a cistern, and Mrs. Stanley jumped in and attempted to save the child, but both were drowned.

Lizzie Smith, of Jackson, 13 years old, has been pronounced insane and has been sent to an asylum. It is not often that so young a person is adjudged insane.

President McKinley has telegraphed Senator Burrows that he would be at Kalamazoo October 17, the first day of the street fair.

Charles Simmons, who died in East Tawas, was the engineer on the first train which ever ran over the Detroit & Mackinac railroad, and held that position continuously up to the time of his death.

The Hub clothing store of Timothy Duquette was closed in Marquette on the petition of his creditors to have him declared an involuntary bankrupt. The claims amount to nearly $5,000.

TOWNSHIP CONVENTION

Of Sunday Schools to Be Held in Chelsea
Next Sunday.

A township Sunday school convention, which will embrace delegations from the Sunday schools of Lyndon, Sylvan, Lima, Sharon and Chelsea, will be held in the Congregational church next Sunday afternoon and evening.

The afternoon session will begin at 2 o'clock, when papers will be read by Nathaniel Laird, on "Youth is the best time to study the Bible," Mrs. M. J. Hill on "Compensations of Sunday school work." The papers will be followed by discussions.

The evening session at 7 o'clock will be taken up by Prof. E. C. Goddard, of Ann Arbor, who will deliver an address appropriate to the occasion.

The convention is inter-denominational, and everybody is cordially invited to attend it.

Cost of Keeping the County's Poor

The annual report of the county superintendents of the poor, which is to be presented to the board of supervisors, shows the following statistics:

During the year the tramps and other outsiders who have been cared for by the county have cost the taxpayers $1,020.17; the county house, exclusive of the farm products, labor, etc., has cost $3,376.22. For the year the total number of inmates of the county house has reached 76, and there has been an average of 42 all the time. There have been five deaths among the inmates during the year. The average cost of maintaining the inmates, exclusive of the farm and the labor of inmates, has been $1.35 a week.

EDITOR HERALD:

As your readers are no doubt aware the increasing practice of the British Medical Institute has been so great that I have, on numerous occasions recently, been obliged to refuse to accept additional patients under my care. I am now pleased to inform you and your readers that I have taken into equal partnership the celebrated and popular Dr. E. L. WILKINSON, of Van Wert, Ohio, who will devote his entire attention to the work of the Institute, and will be in personal consultation with me in the treatment of all cases from this date.

A little later I shall make your readers better acquainted with Dr. Wilkinson by giving you for publication a few of his numerous endorsements and recommendations.

Yours respectfully,

LOCAL ITEMS.

A new furnace has been put into the Congregational parsonage. W. J. Knapp had the contract for the job.

Bert B. Turnbull was elected vice-president of the class of '01 Detroit Law School at the election held yesterday.

Ann Arbor is to have a new factory. Detroit and local capitalists will erect three brick buildings on a tract of land in the south part of the city with 200 feet frontage on the Ann Arbor Railroad, before Jan. 1, next.

The Ann Arbor school board has unanimously decided to discontinue the practice of charging tuition in the ward schools up to the ninth grade. Heretofore parents had to pay tuition fees for their children the first year of their residence in Ann Arbor. This is a just and righteous move.

The October crop report, issued by the secretary of state Monday, makes about the same showing as the September report. The average yield of wheat in the state is eight bushels per acre, and the total yield is estimated at 12,000,000. Oats 31 bushels per acre; corn 81 bushels; potatoes 68 bushels; beans 12 bushels; buckwheat 11 bushels.

The state tax commission has devised a plan to assess mortgages. The registers of each county are paid to report the important data regarding each mortgage recorded to the tax commission. The tax commissioners then send the information to the supervisors who are asked to report to the tax commission whether they have assessed the mortgages and if they have at what amount; if not, to state the reason why, etc.

A meeting of the town board was held Tuesday evening at which it was voted to raise by tax $1,000 for the ordinary expenses of the township, $150 for the support of the poor, $424 to pay money borrowed from the Kempf Commercial and Savings Bank, April 6, 1898, $448 due the same bank for money borrowed April 11, 1898, to make payments on road scrapers. None of these amounts were voted on at the annual meeting. The total amount to be raised for school and township taxes this year is $8,813.05, of which $5,140 is for school purposes.

Council Proceedings.

[OFFICIAL]

Chelsea, Mich., Sept. 29, 1899.

Pursuant to the call of the president of board met in special session. Meeting called to order by the president.

Roll called by the clerk. Present, J. Schenk, I. Vogel, H. Avery, J. Bachman. Absent, J. E. McKune, H. Twamley.

State of Michigan, County of Washtenaw, Village of Chelsea s. s. To Israel Vogel, John Schenk, J. Edward McKune, James Bachman, Harry H. Avery, and Henry Twamley, trustees of the Village of Chelsea. Please take notice, that I hereby appoint a special meeting of the common council of said village, to be held in the council rooms this day at the hour of eight (8) o'clock p. m. for the purpose of authorizing the president and clerk to borrow money, and to issue the bonds of the village for the same, payable in one year, with interest at 5 per cent, wherewith to pay off the obligations of said village issued under direction of the council at its meetings on March 29th and April 1st 1899, and for such other legal business as may come before the council.

Dated, Chelsea, Mich., Sept. 29, 1899.

GEORGE P. STAFFAN,

President.

State of Michigan, County of Washtenaw, Village of Chelsea, s. s.

Edward Moore, Marshal of said village, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that on the 29th day of September, A. D., 1899, before the hour of eight o'clock p. m. of said day he served a true copy of the within appointment of a special meeting of the council of said village upon all the persons therein named, by delivering personally a true copy of the same to the following named persons, viz: Israel Vogel, John Schenk, J. Edward McKune, James Bachman, Harry H. Avery, and by leaving at the dwelling house of the following named persons, Henry Twamley, a true copy of the same, there being no one whom I could leave said copy with at home of said Twamley. I put same under the south front door of his said dwelling house. The said notices were all served at least six hours prior to said hour of eight o'clock p. m. of said day, to-wit, eight hours prior to said eight o'clock p. m.

EDWARD MOORE,

Marshal of the Village of Chelsea.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 29th, day of September, A. D. 1899.

BERT B. TURNBULL,

Notary Public.

Moved by Schenk seconded by Bachman and resolved that the following preamble and resolution be adopted, viz:

Whereas this council at its session held in the council rooms on March 29 and April 1 1899, authorized the borrowing of fifteen hundred dollars for which the obligations of the village were issued and said sum of money duly borrowed and placed in the village treasury and whereas there is now due and owing upon said obligations so issued the sum of thirteen hundred dollars.

Resolved that the president and clerk are hereby authorized and directed to issue the bonds of this village for the said sum of thirteen hundred dollars payable one year from date with interest at five per cent and thereby borrow money and pay off said obligations so issued under said previous resolution of this council.

We will send the Chelsea Herald to new subscribers from now to Jan. 1, 1901, for $1.00. If you want a good local paper call and see us.

Lafayette grange is in session at O. C. Burkhardt's today. The questions for discussion are "What are Trusts?" and "Success and Failure in Poultry Raising."

The parochial school in connection with St. Paul's Lutheran church will open Monday, Oct. 28. It will be under the tutelage of Rev. L. Koelbing, pastor of the church.

The contract for building the new homeopathic hospital at Ann Arbor has been awarded to John Koch, of that city, at $48,670, which price does not include the heating plant.

Christian Webber, of Sylvan, is one of the panel of 15 extra jurors drawn Tuesday with orders to report yesterday to be on hand when the Judson-Moran libel suit was called.

The total gate receipts at the Washtenaw fair were $2,845.50, just $28 less than they were last year and the premiums are somewhat higher. In all 10,255 people paid to enter the fair grounds.

Among those who went to Ann Arbor yesterday morning to attend the Judson-Moran trial were James S. Gorman, Martin Wackenhut, James Geddes, jr., and H. Barrus, who are subpoenaed as witnesses.

The schools were shut down yesterday to allow several of the teachers to go visiting schools, as is usual one day in each year. Some of the teachers went one place and some to another, Ypsilanti, Jackson and Detroit being the most favored.

The foundations are being laid for a new cement walk to be put down on the south side of the bank drug store. It will be a great and much needed improvement. The Herald would like to see many others follow in Mr. Glazier's footsteps in this matter.

A big auction sale of cattle and sheep is to take place on George C. Reade's farm, in Dexter township, seven miles north of Chelsea, next Tuesday at 1 o'clock p. m. There are 29 head of cattle and 80 sheep, everyone of which is clean, choice stock. George E. Davis is the auctioneer.

In accordance with instructions from the U. S. post office department all the outgoing mail at the Chelsea post office is being weighed up these days. The weighing commenced Oct. 3, and will continue for 35 days. On the averaged sum total of these weighings in all the post offices are based the remuneration for the mail carrying service.

Mrs. Nancy R. Fish, widow of the late E. C. Fish, died very suddenly Thursday night at the home of her son Charles Fish, in Sharon, aged 84 years. The funeral services were held at the house Sunday afternoon, and the remains were buried beside those of her husband in Oak Grove cemetery. Rev. C. S. Jones conducted the services at the grave.

Mr. Bert J. Howlett, of Chelsea, and Miss Carrie McClaskie, formerly preceptress in the high school, were married last evening at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride in Lapeer. Rev. C. S. Jones, pastor of the Chelsea Congregational church, performed the ceremony. Many of the Chelsea friends of the young people were present and remembered them with handsome wedding gifts. The senior class of the high school also sent them a pretty wedding gift.

School Commissioner Lister reports that the officers of Washtenaw county are progressive. The circular letter of the committee on uniform text books was sent out less than two weeks ago, and replies have been received from over half of the officers accepting the recommendation of the committee. Mr. Lister has the welfare of the Washtenaw schools at heart and proposes not to leave a stone unturned to raise them up to the highest grade possible.—Ann Arbor Argus. The big majority rolled up for Mr. Lister at his reelection to the office last fall was good enough proof for even a blind man that he was onto his job and that the people of Washtenaw were satisfied with his administration of the business of the school commission.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM

Booker T. Washington Thinks It Is Settling Itself.

How He Would Have the Colored Race Act Toward the Whites.—Work Accomplished at Tuskegee Institute.

[Special Tuskegee (Ala.) Letter.]

The race question, in America, in spite of occasional outrages on both sides, is gradually settling itself, and a larger part of the work of solving the problem is being accomplished by that portion of the population whose skin contains the greater amount of coloring pigment. Booker T. Washington, who may, at the present time, be regarded as their representative man, although there are many others as able but not so well known, believes that while holding firmly and securely to everything guaranteed by the constitution of the United States, or that is fundamental to citizenship, "the colored people should make every effort possible to secure the friendship, confidence and cooperation of their white neighbors in the south." They should not be "trucklers," but act firmly from principle, and gain and retain respect. They should endeavor to obtain the friendly interest of the southern white man, thus inducing him to help make laws that will, in the true sense, elevate the negro. He advises the latter to do more and more of his own thinking and in a modest, temperate manner exercise his political rights instead of being led by political bosses or demagogues. Mr. Washington further believes that a permanent cure for many of our present evils will come through a property and educational test for voting applied honestly and fairly to both races. This will cut off a large number of ignorant voters now proving such a demoralizing factor in politics. But through the industrial development of the negro the greatest results will come.

Education along this line will make him an intelligent producer, of immediate value to the community. He may then become a property holder and as such a thoughtful and conservative voter. With the increase of his property interests he gains in importance as a tax payer and necessary consultations with his white neighbor about voting measures will follow. The black man has implicit confidence in the white man's advice in business, legal day she and I might be free." After the close of the war, Booker Washington went with his brothers to West Virginia, where they worked in the coal mines for pay in money. One day, on seeing a negro laboriously spelling out a newspaper paragraph to a group of colored people, who gazed at him with open-mouthed wonder and veneration, a desire for study was awakened in the boy. He obtained a situation to do chores for a lady who taught him to read.

Soon after, on hearing that at Hampton was a school where black boys could learn and work their own way, he walked and worked his passage to that point, where he found himself surrounded by an atmosphere of business, Christian influences and a spirit of self-help that awakened every latent faculty and brought a realization of what it meant to be a man instead of a piece of transferable property. On finishing his school course, in 1881, he began, at Tuskegee, Ala., what he intends to be his life work. Without a dollar, in a church and small shanty, with one teacher and 30 pupils, he established a school, which, with its spirit of work and industrial thrift, aided by the state and by some people of the north, has developed into an institution of 1,000 students, 81 teachers and 38 buildings. From the ranks of these students are to be sent out well-educated, self-reliant young men and women to live among the ten millions of colored peoand religious matters, and when he shall with equal freedom be able to consult him regarding politics the situation will at once change for the better. A large number of colored people in every county, owning their own neat and comfortable homes and a bank account, and cooperating with their white neighbors in every manly way for the development of their own communities, will aid greatly in changing the present status of the negro as a citizen. In Mr. Washington's opinion, when both races shall cooperate in politics, business matters, religion and education, the problem will in a great measure be solved and political outrages cease.

Although so well known and widely respected, Booker T. Washington is ignorant of the date of his own birth. His life began as a slave on a plantation in Virginia. He must have been a very small boy when the war broke out, for he once said: "Night after night, before the dawn of day, on an old plantation in Virginia, I recall the form of my sainted mother bending over the bundle of rags that enveloped my body, on a dirt floor, breathing a fervent prayer to heaven that 'Massa Lincoln' might succeed and that some ple of the south, and help to elevate them to their own condition.

At Tuskegee institute, industrial training goes hand in hand with mental and moral teaching. Mr. Washington so earnestly desires that the colored people should be expert workmen at all the trades that students without funds are enabled to work out all their expenses at the school. This, at the same time, has greatly aided in the development of the institution itself. All but three of the 38 buildings have been erected by the students. Many of the largest are brick, which certain of the pupils here learning the trades they are to follow in after life have manufactured in the brickyard of the school. This yard produces not only all the bricks they require, but many thousands more which are sold in the surrounding country each year. At first Mr. Washington, having no money, was unable to impart such practical knowledge as he desired, and had to teach from books alone. But he was fortunate in the possession of a friend who was willing to loan $500 to pay towards the purchase of a farm near Tuskegee.

The school was soon moved to this land. The boys were taught indoors during a part of the day, and passed the remainder of the time in putting the land in order and making bricks. A skilled man was hired to instruct in regard to burning them the first year, and after that the students did all the work themselves. Other young men learn bricklaying, and others still to be carpenters. A large tract of valuable timber land is now owned by the institute upon which a good sawmill has been erected, all lumber needed being cut here. Joiner work and carriage making are taught. All the carts, wagons and carriages used on the place are made on the premises, and the hickory lumber wagons are in such demand that all not needed are readily sold to surrounding farmers. It is always intended to have a building in process of construction, for the benefit of the building classes. This year it is a trades school building. Last year it was a handsome brick church, with a seating capacity of 2,000. The plans were made by the instructor in mechanical and architectural drawing, a colored man named Taylor. The pews and cornices were designed by students. Men learning tin-smithing, slating and putting in of electrical and steam-heating apparatus, finished the work. Each year men and women expert in different trades are graduated and largely sought as teachers in other institutions.

A large part of the furniture used at the school is built here. Harness-making, saddlery, printing, tailoring, blacksmithing, painting, plain and fancy cooking, candy making, millinery, dressmaking, laundry work and even nursing, under a capable trained nurse, are taught.

And thus is the race problem working itself out in the heart of the section where those deeds are sometimes committed that cause so much discussion and can be by those at a distance who are ignorant of the real condition of affairs in the black belt of the south.

CAPT. MOLLIE'S WELL.

Memento of the Brave Irish Heroine of the Battle of Monmouth Is Still in Use.

Few Philadelphians, perhaps, have noticed as they were whirled across the battlefield of Monmouth in an express train bound for their summer homes at Asbury Park and Long Branch the two upright posts along the tracks near Freehold marking the well of Capt. Mollie Pitcher, the heroine of the battle of Monmouth, who long since was buried in the old cemetery at Carlisle, Pa.

The well is situated very close to the tracks and can be seen from the rear of the train. It is one of the points of interest on this historic battlefield and is in sight of the old Tennyson church, which was used as a hospital during the fight and in which the blood-stained seats, where the wounded British soldiers were carried from the conflict to die, can still be seen.

It may be surprising, but it is nevertheless true, that this famous old well is still in use. The farm of William Augustus Thompson, which is near by, gets its entire supply of water from this well, water pipes being laid from the farm to the well. The water is said to be as clear and sparkling as spring water and very cool.

Capt. Mollie Pitcher was the heroine of the battle of Monmouth, which was fought on the morning of Sunday, June 29, 1778. Tradition says it was in this conquest that Gen. Lee's action in making a retreat caused Washington to utter the only profanity he ever spoke during his life. During the fierce fight Mollie Pitcher, an Irish woman, and the wife of a member of one of the New Jersey artillery companies, with her bucket of cool water drawn from this well, quenched the thirst of the heated Yankee soldiers.

Capt. Mollie was of masculine build and dressed in a mongrel suit with the petticoats of her own sex and an ar-tilleryman's coat, cocked hat and feathers. She was a sturdy camp-follower, only 22 years of age, and in devotion to her husband, who was a cannonier, she illustrated the character of her countrywomen in the Emerald Isle. In the action, while her husband was managing a field piece, she constantly brought him water from a spring near by. A shot from the enemy killed him as his post, and the officer of the day, having no one competent to fill his place, ordered the piece removed from the field.

Mollie saw her husband fall as she came from the well with her bucket of fresh water, and also heard the order of the officer of the day for the removal of the piece. She dropped the bucket, seized the rammer and vowed that she would fill the place of her dead husband at the gun and avenge his death.

She performed the duty with a skill and courage which attracted the attention of all who saw her. On the following morning, while she was still covered with dirt and blood, Gen. Greene presented her to Gen. Washington, who, admiring her bravery, conferred upon her the commission of sergeant. By his recommendation her name was placed upon the list of half pay officer for life.

She left the army soon after the battle of Monmouth and died near Fort Montgomery, among the Hudson Highlands, soon after the close of the war. She was buried at Carlisle, Pa., where a handsome monument has been erected over her grave by the patriotic citizens in the town.

The widow of Gen. Hamilton, who died in 1854, stated she had often seen Capt. Mollie and described her as a stout, red-haired, freckle-faced young Irish woman, with a handsome pair of piercing eyes. Old residents of Fort Montgomery say she generally dressed in the petticoats of her sex with an artilleryman's coat over. She was in Fort Clinton with her husband when it was attacked in 1777. When the Americans fled from the fort as the enemy scaled the ramparts, her husband, who served the cannon, dropped his match as he was about to touch off the gun and fled. Mollie caught it up, touched off the piece and then scampered off. It was the last gun fired from the fort.—Philadelphia Press.

A COWBOY'S ADVICE.

Rough Rider Encounters a Love-Sick Girl and Gives Her a Fatherly Lecture.

One of the principal riders of the wild west show, whose dashing and dangerous feats in the ring win the plaudits of thousands of people daily, is a great favorite with the matinee girls. This young man recently figured in a little scene that was not down on the bills.

It was after the regular afternoon performance and this modern cavalier was preparing to make some change in his costume that he might appear in the street, when the flap of his tent was drawn timidly back and a young girl, pretty and not more than 18 years old, stood inside gazing with admiration on this handsome cowboy.

"Well! little girl, is there anything I can do for you?" he asked as he unbuckled the revolver belt from his waist. The girl stood for a moment too frightened to speak, but at last she burst into tears and confessed her admiration for the rough rider. She further said she had attended the show every afternoon and several evenings since it had been here, that she wanted to run away from home and go along with the show.

During the recital the crack rider of the wild west show sat on the end of a box quietly smoking a cigarette. "See, here! You need some good advice," said he, when she had finished. "You are at just that age when some one ought to give you a lecture. You seem to have fallen in love with a man you know nothing about. So just fall out again and remember you've been a little fool. Why, I've a daughter of my own just about your age."—Chicago Daily News.

FANCY OF A CHILD.

A Reasonable Explanation of What Seems Precociousness in Imaginative Children.

"An active, healthy imagination is one of the happiest gifts a child can possess," is the theory, advanced by Florence Hull Winterburn, the well-known pathologist, when writing of "The Imagination Plays of Children," in the Woman's Home Companion. "If we watch an intelligent child, four or five years old, who believes himself unnoticed we will probably be astonished at the richness and fertility of the fancy which can give life and color to dull, commonplace things, and weave whole stories and dramas around the simple toy that means nothing more to us than what it plainly stands for. But we will perceive that even his wildest romances found themselves upon many facts, for, free and frolicsome as imagination may appear, it is subject to its laws. It deals with real things in a playful way; it embroiders, paints, molds; but it must have its material, its basis, in actual life. What we call creative ability is nothing but the power to reconstruct, perhaps to connect several separate plans or patterns into a whole which seems different from the original. The child is an artist who dabbles on his colors boldly, without any sense of the absurdities he may commit, and so he often produces effects that surprise others as well as himself. Many of the acts that seem so precocious because we suppose them to be the outcome of a well-considered plan are really happy accidents; not devoid of the merit of originality, but neither to be overpraised as the work of genius. Childhood is one unbroken succession of experiments."

A Fact Worth Remembering.

To protect the parlor on sweeping day, when only portieres hang at the door openings, careful housekeepers have wide shades of unobtrusive color fitted in the space on the hall side. These are drawn to the floor when the hall and stairs are cleaned, affording perfect protection from the dust. At other times the shade is rolled snug at the top, where its position behind the curtain pole effectually conceals it from any but the most searching eye.

Epaulettes of Lace.

Lace epaulettes will be greatly worn upon elegant waists this season; handkerchief-shaped lace sleeves also, always so soft and pretty, and puffs of diaphanous gauze falling from the crown of the shoulders. Ball skirts, to be quite a la mode, are gored in princess in fabrics sturdy enough to bear the ordeal.

CHICAGO CELEBRATES

Corner Stone of New Federal Building Is Laid.

President McKinley Officially—Great Pageants March Through the Streets—Patriotic Sentiments Uttered at a Banquet.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—In sight of thousands, on stands, in the street, in windows and on the dizzy heights of the towering buildings, the president of the United States on Monday threw the first trowel of mortar under the corner stone of Chicago's new federal building. The ceremonies were simple, but impressive, and were conducted without an incident to mar their solemn character.

Before the eyes of the president of the United States, his cabinet and a host of guests of honor, including the premier of Canada and the vice president of Mexico; before a cheering multitude that packed the streets of the line of march, peopled roofs and filled windows with faces, the pageant climax of the fall festival, the Chicago day parade, took place Monday afternoon. Led by President McKinley, who received an ovation all along the route, the imposing procession wound through the streets, resembling lanes, between the gorgeously decorated sky-scrapers, rising like great, flaming towers, and through the splendid court of honor. Both war and peace contributed to the long, brilliant column that moved in martial fashion.

Grand Spectacle at Night.

While the pageant of the afternoon was most brilliant and memorable, it lessened in no degree popular curiosity and interest in the grand spectacular show of the festival, the parade of all nations, which started at eight o'clock at night. The Chinese dragon was the most popular feature. It was 300 feet long, carried by 200 men and emitted fire, and this section showed a lavish use of money as well as a great deal of thought and time. Led by a platoon of 50 police officers, the United States section came first. Its float was Columbia, representing the original 13 states, brilliantly illuminated. The sections following presented floats typical of life in the various countries: Germany, Venezuela, Switzerland, Brazil, The Netherlands, Austro-Hungary, Scotland, Armenia, Assyria, Belgium and China.

AT THE BANQUET.

President McKinley and Others Deliver Short Addresses.

Chicago's great Auditorium, which has been the scene of so many notable events, never held a greater gathering than Monday night, when the Chicago day banquet was held within its walls, under the auspices of the fall festival committee. The great stage, upon which 1,000 people can easily find standing room, had been enlarged, and the hall was lavishly decorated with flags and draperies. Back of the raised table at the west end of the hall, at which President McKinley and the guests of honor were seated, was an elaborate peace arch 20 feet in height, constructed of pastry. It was decorated with flags, tastefully draped, from the folds of which twinkled hundreds of little electric lights. The president, who was the guest of honor, sat at the raised table on the right of Melville E. Stone, toastmaster. Other distinguished guests were at the same table, among them being Vice President Don Ignacio Mariscal, of Mexico, and Premier Wilfrid Laurier, of Canada.

Speeches of Welcome.

The material part of the banquet occupied nearly two hours, and it was almost ten o'clock before Toastmaster Stone rapped for order, and brought the intellectual part of the programme to the front in a brief address, at the conclusion of which he introduced Gov. Tanner, who, in a short address, welcomed the visitors on behalf of the state of Illinois. After he had concluded, Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, and Senator Shelby M. Cullom, of Illinois, were introduced in succession by Mr. Stone, the former extending to the visitors the welcome of the people of the city of Chicago, and the latter greeting them on behalf of the federal officials of Illinois.

When the toastmaster introduced the president, who responded to the sentiment, "The Nation," he was greeted with cheers that for a time prevented his voice from being heard.

Following the address of the president, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, of Canada, was announced to speak on "The Dominion." The greeting which was accorded the premier of Canada as he rose to his feet was hearty in the extreme. Cheer after cheer rang through the hall, men rose to their feet and waved their napkins frantically.

Secretary Long responded to the toast "The Navy." "The Glories of the Grand Army of the Republic" were dwelt upon by Col. D. B. Henderson, of Dubuque, the next speaker of the national house of representatives. The last address on the regular programme was by Gen. Thomas M. Anderson, U. S. A., commander of the department of the lakes. After the conclusion of Gen. Anderson's speech short addresses were made by Gen. Wesley Merritt and others.

The Philippine War

This contest is proving much more stubborn than we had anticipated. It needs a vigorous contest to straighten matters out. We should tackle the Philippines and overcome them as Hostetter's Stomach Bitters does dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, fever and ague, and liver and kidney diseases. The battle is short and decisive, and for fifty years the Bitters have always won. If you are ill, and don't know what's wrong, try it.

The Three Tellers.

"Can you tell me," asked the summer mad, "What are the three quickest modes of communication?"
"Well, no," replied the summer girl.
"Ha! Ha! Telephone, telegraph and tell-a-woman," and now he wonders why she returned his ring in the middle of the season.—Philadelphia Call.

Motto of the Siamese Nation.

Have you heard the motto of the government of Siam? And having heard it, have you repeated it? And having repeated it, have you caught its purely personal application? And having caught it, have you tried it on your friends? This is the motto: "Ah Wa Ta Nas Siam." It sounds unintelligible nonsense, but keep saying it over as long as you can and as fast as you can and you will discover at last that the eastern patois has a western sense that aptly classifies many a remorseful subject of Uncle Sam. For "Ah Wa Ta Nas Siam" is easily evolved into "Ah, what an ass I am."—Chicago Chronicle.

IN ILLINOIS TOWNS.

Progress of the Western Tour of the President.

He Visits Quincy, Peoria and Several Other Points—His Addresses Are Filled with Patriotic Sentiments.

Quincy, Ill., Oct. 7.—Cannons boomed and bands played "Dixie" as President McKinley alighted from the Campanian, his private car, at the grounds of the Illinois soldiers' home Friday morning. The sun shone brightly, making almost a perfect day. Fifteen hundred old veterans, inmates of the home, cheered enthusiastically as the president and the members of the cabinet took carriages to be driven between long platoons of soldiers around the beautiful grounds of the home. The president was first escorted to an improvised platform, from which he bowed and smiled in acknowledgment of the veterans' greetings, shaking hands with as many as possible.

Enthusiasm Runs High.
Then, in company with members of the local committee, the president made a short visit to the soldiers' hospital. The presidential party was next driven from the soldiers' home to the city proper, a distance of two miles. Company F Fifth infantry, the naval reserves and company F, Eighth infantry, escorted the party through the business district. The sailors were supplied with hotchkiss guns, and as soon as the president arrived in sight of the public square a president's salute of 21 guns was fired. Six thousand school children from all the schools of the city, public and parochial, were massed on the east side of the courthouse, waving flags and singing national airs as the president appeared.

The president and several members of the cabinet delivered brief addresses from the reviewing stand at Quincy. Between Quincy and Peoria three brief stops were made, at Macomb, Canton and Bushnell. At each of these stations the president was escorted from the train to platforms erected for the occasion. The entire population of these towns appeared to have turned out to greet the chief magistrate, and he was invariably welcomed with boundless enthusiasm and applauded.

Short addresses were also made at Macomb and Bushnell.

In Peoria.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 7.—A good part of the population of Peoria, the second city of Illinois, took part in an elaborate demonstration to welcome to their city the president of the United States. The great event of the day was the unveiling of a beautiful monument erected by Peoria's citizens as a memorial to the soldiers of the rebellion, living and dead. The monument is a tall shaft of marble, ornamented at the base with bronze groups commemorating scenes of the civil war. It is erected on an elevation in front of the courthouse. After his review of the parade, the president took his seat facing the veiled monument. After some selections of music and an invocation by Rev. Dr. John Weston, the monument was unveiled by Mrs. S. A. Kinsey, who has been chairman of the monument committee since its inception in 1893. A great cheer burst from the multitude as the folds of canvas fell away from the shaft. The monument was presented to the city and county of Peoria by Mrs. Lucie B. Tyng, and accepted on behalf of the county by John C. Kingsbury, chairman of the board of supervisors, and on behalf of the city by Henry W. Lunch, mayor of Peoria. An address was given by Mr. Kingman, followed by the president, who dedicated the monument in a formal address.

"Fellow Citizens: I am glad with fellow citizens of Peoria county and members of the G. A. R. and Ladies' Memorial Day association to stand about the monument dedicated to patriotic service and heroic devotion in the holiest cause for which mankind ever engaged. This monument awakens sacred memories, fellow citizens, and that is its purpose. It was erected by these patriotic women, that it might for all time perpetuate a glorious page of American history. It tells the whole story of the war, the siege, the march, bivouac, battle line, the suffering, sacrifices of the brave men who from '61 to '65 upheld the flag. It tells of every page of history of that civil struggle, and tells of its triumph, consummation at Appomattox Court-house when Grant accepted the surrender of Lee and we were kept a nation."

"I like this monument. I like this symbol I face to-day—the defense of the flag. That is what we do wherever and whenever that flag is assailed, and with us war always stops when the assaults of our flag face Grant's terms: 'Unconditional surrender.' I do not intend to make a speech here to-day. I could add nothing of patriotic sentiment to that already uttered. I desire to express in this presence my appreciation not of the tribute paid to the president of the United States, but of the tribute the people of Peoria and Peoria county have paid to the great defenders of the American flag in time of our great peril. 'You are proud of the monument. You should be proud of the demonstration which led to its unveiling. Six thousand school children of the city with flags in their hands and love of country in their hearts, and I could not but think as I looked at that glorious proof that my country is safe. God bless the school children of America. God bless the patriotic women of the United States and the patriotic band that carried this monument to a successful consummation.'"

An informal reception and dinner at the residence of J. B. Greenhut was the closing event of the president's visit to Peoria. The party boarded the train at 8:45, and was rapidly carried to Galesburg to spend the night.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS FREE.

One of the Grandest Offers Ever Made.
The first five persons procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book from their grocer will each obtain one large 10c package of "Red Cross" starch, one large 10c package of "HUBINGER'S BEST" starch, two Shakespeare pictures, printed in twelve beautiful colors, as natural as life, or one Twentieth Century Girl Calendar, the finest of its kind ever printed, all absolutely free. All others procuring the Endless Chain Starch Book will obtain from their grocer two large 10c packages of starch for 5c, and the beautiful premiums, which are being given away. This offer is only made for a short time to further introduce the famous "RED CROSS" starch, and the celebrated "HUBINGER'S BEST" cold-water starch. "RED CROSS" laundry starch is something entirely new, and is without doubt the greatest invention of the Twentieth Century. It has no equal, and surpasses all others. It has won for itself praise from all parts of the United States. It has superseded everything heretofore used, or known to science in the laundry art. It is made from wheat, rice and corn, and is chemically prepared upon scientific principles, by J. C. Hubinger, an expert in the laundry profession, who has had 25 years of practical experience in fancy laundering, and who is the first successful and original inventor of all fine grades of starch in the United States. If you would have the best, ask for "RED CROSS" and "HUBINGER'S BEST," which are the finest starches on the market to-day. The jobbing houses all handle it, the retail grocer has it on his shelves, you find it in all the homes, while the careful housewife has adorned the walls of the home with the beautiful Shakespeare pictures, which are being given away in introducing "RED CROSS" and "HUBINGER'S BEST" starch.

The Place for It.
"Well, gentlemen," remarked the president of the club, "motions are in order. It has been suggested that we have a banquet. What shall be done?"
"Mr. President," spoke up the man who was seldom heard from, "I move we dispose of it by laying it on the table."
The motion was carried.—Philadelphia North American.

EVERY woman suffering from any female trouble can be helped by Mrs. Pinkham. This statement is based on sound reasoning and an unrivalled record. Multitudes of America's women to-day bless Mrs. Pinkham for competent and common-sense advice. Write to her if you are ill. Her address is Lynn, Mass. Absolutely no charge is made for advice. "I suffered seven years and would surely have died but for your help," writes Mrs. GEO. BAINBRIDGE, Morea, Pa., to Mrs. Pinkham.

SAFE COUNSEL FOR SICK WOMEN

"It is with pleasure I now write to inform you that I am now a healthy woman, thanks to your kind advice and wonderful medicine. I can never praise it enough. I was a constant sufferer from womb trouble, and leucorrhoea, had a continual pain in abdomen. Sometimes I could not walk across the floor for three or four weeks at a time. Since using your medicine, I now have no more bearing-down pains, or tired feelings, and am well and hearty. I shall recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all my suffering friends as the greatest remedy for all female weakness."

MRS. SUSIE J. WEAVER, 1821 Callowhill St., Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I had inflammation of the womb and painful menstruation, and by your advice I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Have taken four bottles and used one package of Sanative Wash and feel like a new woman. I thank you so much for what your medicine has done for me."

MRS. M. BAUMANN, 771 W. 21st St., Chicago, Ill., writes: "After two months' trial of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I can not say enough in praise for it. I was a very sick woman with womb trouble when I began its use, but now I am well."
