GLAZIER & STIMSON.

Hill in Alaska Last Winter.

He Was Imprisoned for Months With the Corpse of His Father.

The following story of suffering and death is taken from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of September 24th. E. K. Hill the father of the young man who tells the story was a brother-in-law of Mrs. M. J. Hill of this place, and was known by a number of our residents as he has been a Chelsea visitor a number

"The life of a man, who can tell where it lies?" was the thought that came to the listeners as Climie Hill told them in simlife in Alaska.

To those who had known him as an earnest student, an athlete who feared no foe on the gridiron or the cinder path, 1898. the story was a revelation. For, in words of uavarnished truth, it was a record of heroic endurance, indomitable will, never failing courage in one they had classed as among themselves. No boasting, vaunting tale, but a mere recital of the facts and, God knows, they were enough.

It was a plain, tale told in a plain, straightforward way, without thought of self, and as horror piled on horror, the listeners shuddered, while he who had lived it all, who had endured it all, remained unmoved.

He had drained his cup of bitterness to the utmost dregs in the darkness, the cold and, above all, the loneliness of that Alaskan cabin, buried in the snow with he body of his father.

Alone with himself and his God, he had fought the battle, single-handed, against sorrow as great as he will ever know; against suffering as acute as is given to man to endure, and beside his oved dead, in that buried cabin, he learned the lesson of how to suffer and et be silent.

At is beyond the hope of comprehension hat the ordinary reader should be able o realize, even in part, the horrors of Climie Hill's life in Paradise valley. There are some things one must endure for themselves before they can know and sympathize with the sufferings of others and his life in Alaska is one of them. It s with reluctance he speaks of it, with bitter sorrow he remembers it in all its awful details and what he has described is but the shadow dimly cast upon our lives of the awful things he met, fought and conquered.

"The frozen body of my father lay over there in the corner hid from my gaze by the inky darkness; I had no fire, no light and nothing to make either with except a few matches. What provisions I had cooked were frozen solid and could not be eaten until thawed out.

"I was buried alive in twelve feet of snow and at the earliest could not hope for help to arrive for months. I could not walk and when I crawled around in the darkness I was in constant pain.

"Can you imagine a more terrible sit-

"Oh, the loneliness of it, the loneliness of it. And in that way I had hved for days and weeks with but one thing to cheer me-the little gleam of light each day when I cooked my frugal meal, and now, that my last comfort was gone, can you wonder that then I felt like giving up, if not to disease, to the horrors of loneliness and starvation, the terrors of cold and darkness? It was awful, how awful no words of mine can tell you, and the speaker shuddered at the recol

When Climie E. Hill left Seattle for Alaska some two years ago, he left his place in the senior class at the university, left a comfortable home and started out in the world with no more experience of the real hardships and suffering of life than any other young man raised as he had been. He returned a day or two ago and the narrative of his sufferings and privations in Alaska makes a story as terrible as it is sad and interesting. The school boy has lived through more hardships in two years than falls to the lot of most men, even in Alaska, in a

Mr. Hill tells the story simply and with that modesty characteristic of brave men. It is a story that needs no embellishment. The plain facts that follow

We made our winter camp where we were and cached all our supplies and then took turns The State Convention Will be Held at hunting a road across the glacier. Dick Layhe and I found a way that led down into a valley. We named it Paradise valley. It seemed a paradise when we me before I left it.

"It was now agreed that two men with provisions for the winter should stay in Paradise valley, so as to be there early in the spring, and get down timber with which to build a boat. The rest of the party was to remain at the original camp, and in the spring bring the entire outfit over the glacier to Paradise valley, Father and I agreed to stay in the val-

"Winter was nearing us so fast that the first thing we did was to build us a light log cabin, with two windows and a foor. - There was no floor to the cabin, but as we made the roof out of sawed lumber, we saved the sawdust, and there was plenty of it to cover the floor to a depth of four or five inches. We also built a stone fireplace in the cabin and connected it with the roof. We had a stove with the pipe running out the top of the roof. Knowing that the snow fell to a great depth in that part of Alaska, it was our plan to allow the cabin to be snowed in except for a tunnel at the door which we could easily keep clear. This would allow us to get out on our snow shoes for wood or to hunt game or lean the snow away from the stovepipe.

"Alas, for all our plans. They were well laid, but they availed us nothing We had been living in our tent all this time, but the thermometer dropping to 26 degrees below zero, we moved into the cabin. Just the day before we moved father began to get lame, and I also He grew worse and soon could not be got out of bed. We had no wood in the cabin, and I at once started to lay in a supply. I kept getting lamer and lamer, until when I had less than a half cord of wood inside the house my legs gave way and I found I could not walk. This was on January 5, 1899. The snow was fall ing heavily, there being over eight feet on the level, but up to this date I had been able to keep the coorway clear.

"Now there was nothing to do but close and bar the door and fight tout as best we could. Father was un ble to move. but I managed to crawl around the house and cook something to est once a day, melting snow to make coffee.

"The first thing I did was to count the number of sticks of wood I had and then allow just so much for use sach day. Even then I knew I did not have near enough wood to last us through the winter, but I hoped i would soon be able to walk, and then I could easily get out for Neither of us get any better nor any worse apparently, only I found it harder to crawl around some days than others.

"About the middle of January It grew bitter cold, being below zero in the cabin. We were almost buried in snow, just

CHARACTERS FORMED

Surgical Operations May Fet Include Changing of Mental Traits. "A quarter of a century or so ago the brain of a living man was virgin soil to the surgeon's knife," said a leading surgeon. "Then came the wonderful advancement in our knowledge of antiseptics, and in a few years' time abscesses had been opened in it, and pieces of its tissue, bruised and lacerated by injury, had been cut away with confidence and complete success. Already such operations have borne some fruit. Children, once little higher than the lower animals in intelligence, have, after operation, been taught to read and write, the dumb to speak, the paralyzed to walk. And as our great physiologists and pathologists are now acquainted with the duties performed by almost every square quarter of an inch of the whole brain, and can now examine, cut, or free it from pressure at a not very great risk, it is almost certain that the twentieth century will yet be young when the surgeon, under certain conditions, will form or mold the character, cause habitual drunkards and criminals to become saints and cure bad temper after a few weeks' residence in a hospital. If no unforeseen barrier stands in our way we good. Father was cheerful and kept shall, before the present generation is saying we would come out all right, dead, have swept the police courts and prisons from the land as no longer needed. 'Characters formed while you wait' may never be a familiar legend upon surgeons' brass plates during the next hundred years, but the twentyfirst century may witness even that triumph of science and skill."

Athens is now coming into line for a company factory, a company having been organized with $120,000 capital. which amount will shortly, it is asserted, be increased to $1,000,000, for the purpose of putting in an up-to-date cement plant in the village. Should this be done, it would be a big thing for Athens, as 100 to 200 men would be given steady employment.

MONEY FOR FRANCE.

Great Sums Spent in That Country For Women's Clothes.

Probably it is the good taste, color and form sense of the French which accounts for the fact that English and American women annually spend so much money on French dress goods and accessories. A Journey of 350 Years.

A well known astronomer calculates that if an express train running sixty miles an hour day and night, without stopping, kept it up for 350 years, it would just about complete the diameter of the circle made by the earth in its yearly journey around the sun. Now let this immense circle be represented by the lady's finger ring, and taking that as the standard of measurement, the nearest fixed star would be a mile distant, and the farthest visible through the telescope at least twenty

CIVIL WAR

WAR DEPARTMENT WILL CO-OPERATE IN THE COMPILATION.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 1.—The secretary of war has signed an order directing Gen. Ainsworth to proceed to Michigan for a conference with the officials of the adjutant-general's department of the records of the Michigan troops during the war of the rebellion. This is one of the most important undertakings of an historical character which the State has ever attempted, and it is a significant fact that Michigan is in the front rank of the commonwealths of the Union in thus perpetuating the records of the brave men who responded so promptly to their country's call in the early sixties. The purpose is to publish a complete roster, including the name and record of every man who enlisted in the war of the rebellion from the State of Michigan, and the herculean character of the task may be gathered from the fact that the lowest estimate that ence of a number of the parents and has been made is that it will make at least thirty large octavo volumes.

The assignment of Gen. Ainsworth to confer with the State officials regarding this matter has been made at the request of Gov. Pingree and because of Gen. Ainsworth's remarkable record and achievements in the war

Gen. Ainsworth recently had a conference with the assistant adjutantgeneral of Michigan as to the condition of the Michigan records, at which it was developed that in somep articulars Standing of pupils of Waterloo village. they were only fragmentary, but it is Whole number enrolled 25. CHAPTER XX. THE SCHOONER'S HOLD.

Her steersman shot the whaleboat cleverly up alongside the schooner, which was moored fore and aft to trees on the shore. The lug sail was run down and the painter caught by a couple of men who appeared on the deck, negroes, too, like the others. The gangway was unshipped and passed out, and the people from the green cave boarded from the gunwale of their boat.

"Who've you got there, cap'n?" asked one of the men on the schooner, as the Eurekas stepped up on to the deck.

"Oh, some blundering fools," replied the lean captain, "who must needs shove themselves in our way when they scrawled up in pencil on the side of the weren't wanted! Now, you three," he continued, addressing his prisoners, "I haven't staterooms to give you and the the chart, George! There, that's the fo'c'stle's full, so just turn down into the hold for the present. No, young place where she put in the time. See? man, you needn't bother to argue the It's plain white paper: no land within question. Just shut your head and go quietly. You'll only get your skulls cracked if you make fools of yourselves over it.'

A couple of sheath knives were out on the instant, gleaming brightly in the moonlight. The negroes were six-all big men and armed-and how many more there might be below there was no means of guessing. The undergradu: ate saw that resistance was hopeless and did as he was told.

There was a fixed iron ladder at the after combing of the main hatch, runfor silence. ning straight up and down from the deck to the hold beneath. By this he descended and the other two after him. The schooner's people slid on a heavy have this haul slipping through our fingrating and fixed it in its place with wedges. Then four pairs of shod feet and two shuffling pairs of bare ones could be heard making their way aft sentence by a movement of his pipe over the deck to the companion, and stem across his throat. presently the murmur of voices in the cabin came to the prisoners in a dull drone through the quietness of the to the table with a bang.

"There be zomething live in this yer box," announced Cain, as a faint, rustling noise made itself heard in the hold. "Why, un's tortoises," he exclaimed schooner's books, and whatever else I after a brief, stertorous inspection, may give in to I'll hold out against zame as Zusan Pierce, her father get that. I've told you before that I'm not fur black beetles in the kitchen, only bigger."

"They're turtles, you oaf!" corrected Mrs. Jelly contemptuously.

The whole hold was paved with them, lying helplessly, belly uppermost. Some of them were quite still, but others, feebly waving their flappers in the air, were giving rise to the faint whispering sound which had attracted the farmer's attention. "So that's what the schooner is doing here!" exclaimed Guthrie. "That explains it; she's turtle catching. Well, that's a harmless enough trade surely.

"If they sticks to it," added Henrietta significantly. "But this kidnap ing of us three ha'n't nothing to d with turtles that I can see."

The steady drone of the conversation in the cabin was making itself heard through the after bulkhead, and at this moment it swelled out to a londer volume. There was some sort of dispute going on among the turtle catchers. Cinthrie skirmished along the floor of the hold among its impotent occupants till he came to the bulkhead. He found a lashed cask amidships and scrambled on to the head of it. Immediately in front of his nose was a faint glow of light. It came from a seam in the boarding from which the oakum had been started. Gently manipulating But scuttle their craft and maroon the calking with his fingers, he enlarged the slit to a hole two inches long by three-sixteenths wide and found that he could not only hear plainly, but see to a certain extent as well, although, as the bulkhead planking was thick, his view was necessarily a restricted one.

A white headed mulatto was reading from a scrap of paper. To the listener's amazement it was an accurate account of the foundered galleon enterprise, or, rather, all of it that could be known at the time when the Eureka left Bristol -the promoters' aims, the supposed

"If we don't," cried the young man, "I don't see what's to stop them from working their will on the Eureka! They know we don't set an anchor watch."

Mrs. Jelly chuckled. "They know that, do they?" said she. "Well, it strikes me that that may turn out a fortunate bit of knowledge for them as is aboard the ketch just now. You don't see how? They were aggressive, insistent. He could fix his mind on nothing else but them.

"Give that clod a kick and wake him!" he cried irritably.

The farmer was roused and stretched himself noisily. "Perhaps Cain might give us an idea," suggested Mrs. Jelly, though without much hope in her tone. "Try him," said Guthrie.

Henrietta began in a low voice to give the farmer an account of the situation, but his ears seemed at the moment to be preternaturally dull and he constantly interrupted her with a hoarse, whispered "What?" that boomed through the hold like a rain squall. The woman cut her tale as short as she could.

WANTED THE LOAN OF HER GRAY MULE.

She Didn't Know Whether or Not to Accept Him if He Proposed Later, So She Sought Advice.

"Miss Lizy," as she was known in the mountain region of the upper Cumberland, was a spruce spinster of 40 or thereabouts and it was generally understood that she would be willing to wed if sufficiently urged, says the Washington Star. She owned a good little creek farm, was thrifty, and for some cause unknown she had acquired the title of "miss," that affix of the Christian name of women not being usual among the mountaineers. Her neighbor was one James Hogue, a widower, who owned a farm adjoining Miss Lizy's. One day she came into the company's commissary, and calling me off to a remote corner, she fairly blazed with wrath as she made me her confidant.

"I s'pose you know, colonel," she exclaimed, in a hoarse whisper, "that fool Jim Hogue that lives adj'inin' to my place?"

She knew I knew Mr. Hogue, but she seemed to want my spoken testimony on the point, and I told her I knew him. "Well, I want to tell you about him,"

It is to be about seven miles long, and have some twelve stations on the most picturesque parts of the route for travelers to obtain the views. An Interesting Discovery. An interesting discovery has just been made at Penn, in Buckinghamshire. A faculty applied for by the vicar and church-wardens of the parish for the removal of a dilapidated, high-backed pew in the historic church has been granted, and the pew has just been taken down. The floor upon which it stood was found to be a false one, resting on the original floor, which had perished to such an extent as to be a source of danger. The decayed material having been cleared away, the coffin of William Penn, who was buried here in 1638, was discovered lying within four inches of the surface. It was of oak, black with age and perfectly sound. The coffin was carefully covered and sealed, and the floor was relaid and cemented round.

The scraper is a spoonshaped contrivance used for cleaning out drill holes. It is made of iron and ly attached by local creditors, and it is contrary to the rules of all mines to use it for tamping purposes, a round stick being furnished. By using it, however, several moments are gained ness, having had no food for two days in driving a cartridge in place.

It is thought that a piece of granite became dislodged and fell into the hole, and when the iron was driven down on the powder a spark was struck, causing the explosion.

BRITISH DISASTER

WAS A STAGGERER.

LOSS IN EFFECTIVE MEN IS QUITE APPALLING.

THE GENERAL TAKES RESPONSI-BILITY FOR THE DEFEAT.

London, Nov. 1 .- While minor reverses were not wholly unexpected, nothing like the staggering blow Gen. Joubert delivered to Gen. White's forces near Ladysmith was anticipated. The full extent of the disaster is not yet acknowledged, if it is known at the war office. The loss in effective men must be appalling to a general who is practically surrounded. Two of the finest British regiments and a mule battery deducted from the Ladysmith garrison weakens it about a fifth of its total strength, and alters the whole situation very materially in favor of the Boers, who have again shown themselves stern fighters and military strategists of no mean order. The disaster cost the British from 1,500 to 2,000 men, and six seven-pound guns, and, as the Boer artillery is already stronger than imagined, the capture of these guns will be a great help to the Boers. Forty-two officers were made prisoners, The following is the text of Gen. White's dispatch to the war office:

"Ladysmith, Nov. 30-10:30 p. m.-I have to report a disaster to the column sent by me to take a position on a hill to guard the left flank of the troops. In these operations to-day the Royal Irish Fusiliers, No. 10, mounted battery and the Gloucestershire regiment were surrounded in the hills and after losing heavily nad to capitulate. The casualties have not yet been ascertained. A man of the Fusiliers, employed as a hospital orderly, came in under a flag of truce with a letter from the survivors of the column, who asked for assistance to bury the dead. I fear there is no doubt of the truth of the report.

"I formed a plan in the carrying out beating off the attacks, but only with in Saginaw. great difficulty, and during the turning movement his troops suffered from a flanking fire. About 6,000 fresh troops will arrive at Cape Town on Sunday next from England and will be available to reinforce Sir George White. Transports will arrive there daily after Sunday, until by the end of next week 28,500 most or quite in sane from worry and troops will have been landed in South Gen. Sir Redevers Bullers' army, but they will undoubtedly be detached to Natal. The British army will ventually reach the huge total of 89,634, of which 69,634 will be regulars and the other 20,000 miscellaneous but excellent colonial troops.

Advices from Cape Town show that the Boers are gathering in considerable force at Dewdrop, southwest of Ladysmith, while large forces of Boers are advancing over the Helpmakaar road. A big camp of Boers is to be formed between Harrismith bridge and Potgletere farm camp, at Dewdrop, which, it is said, will extend four miles.

Adives from Kimberley, under date rider at Orange river, Oct. 30, report that all the wounded are progressing they are unable to blow up the piers of the Modder river bridge, the Boers are demolishing them, stone by stone. They have blown up practically every culvert from the Modder river to the Orange river. An armored train, strongly supported, made a reconnaissance Oct. 27 and found the Boers still at Spyfontein.

It is reported from Barkly-West that the Boers are constructing forts around Kimberley for the purpose of shelling the town.

The South Africa News publishes the following dispatch from Ladysmith: "A fight is proceeding at the foot of Umbanbane, a few inles from Ladysmith. Several shells have dropped into the town." Reports are current that Gen. White may retire to Pietermaritzburg while the railroad is intact.

The war office has sent the following dispatch to Gen. Buller: "Three extra battalions of foot and one mounted battery, with reserves, will leave England during the course of ten days to make good the casualties."

MUST FIX THE BRIDGE.

The C. & W. M. R. R. Co. Disregarded Instructions.

Washington, Nov. 1 .- A formal notification will be sent to the officials of the Chicago & West Michigan railroad peremptorily directing them to proceed at once to carry out the instructions of the war department concerning the railroad bridge across the Kalamazoo river, which was recently made the subject of an extended investigation by Maj. George H. Hopkins, and the local engineer-in-charge. Maj. Hopkins reported that there was an excellent prospect of the development of a considerable commerce on the Kalamazoo river above the bridge, and that in order to accommodate vessels which now desired to ply on the river it would be necessary either to put a draw in the bridge or remove a certain part of the structure, which experts conceded could be done without weakening the bridge. It is not the purpose of the department to demand that the railroad company shall complete the work of the proposed change within less than a reasonable time, but insists that a beginning shall be made without any further delay.

The department is in receipt of additional advices concerning the possible development of the commerce of the Kalamazoo river above the railroad bridge referred to, from which it appears that certain vessel owners are investigating the question with a view to placing on the river larger steamers than are now employed.

TO BETTER THE SERVICE

BRIG.-GEN. CORBIN MAKES NUMER-OUS RECOMMENDATIONS.

MILITARY FORCES OF THE UNITED STATES NUMBER 99,160 MEN.

ALL TROOPS AVAILABLE TO GO TO THE PHILIPPINES.

Washington, Nov. 2.-The annual report of the adjutant-general of the army, Brig.-Gen. Corbin, to the secretary of war, was made public Wednesday. Aside from the strictly technical recital of all the details of a busy year in military life, the report submits numerous recommendations for the betterment of the service. Gen. Corbin sums up the military forces now in the service of the United States as: Regular army, $4,586; volunteers, 34,574; total, 99,160. The regular establishment consists of ten regiments of cavalry, seven of artillery, and twentyfive of infantry. The volunteer establishment consists of one regiment of cavalry, twenty-four of infantry and a Porto Rico batallion. The distribution of these troops up to Oct. 1 last, was as follows: In the United States, 34,-229; Porto Rico, 3,363; Cuba, 11,187; Philippines, 32,315; en route to the Philippines, 17,099; Alaska, 499; Hawaiian islands, 466.

Gen. Corbin adds the following to this summary:

"It is expected that by Dec. 1 next all the infantry regiments, United States volunteers, shown above as in the United States, will have sailed for the Philippine islands. These, with the troops now there, will give a total strength of 2,117 officers and 63,608 enlisted men (an aggregate of 65,725.)" During the year there have been 62,-175 enlistments and re-enlistments, of which 53,024 were native born and 9.151 foreign born. In point of color, 56,154 were white, 6,000 colored and 20 Indians.

The report also calls attention to the fact that not a single life has been lost by accident incident to travel in the course of all the transportation to the Philippines.

SMALLPOX

SAGINAW INFESTED WITH THE DREADED DISEASE.

CASE ACCIDENTALLY DISCOVERED SATURDAY EVENING.

PRECAUTIONS TAKEN TO GUARD AGAINST ITS SPREAD.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 30.—Smallpox made its appearance in Saginaw Saturday evening, but fortunately, although discovered by accident, it was promptly taken in hand by the authorities.

The victims are Albert and Edward Hellus, aged respectively 23 and 16 years. They reside in Buena Vista just over the corporation limits and there is a large family, all of whom have in consequence been exposed. The young men came to the office of Dr. Pease on a private business matter, and while there one of the victims showed the doctor his hands, which were covered with blotches and asked what they were. The physician at once pronounced it smallpox and summoned the health officer who coincided with the diagnosis. The patients were immediately isolated, pest houses being improvised on the river, and every precaution taken to guard against these two spreading the plague.

It is supposed they contracted the disease from some one of the Maple Grove victims, it having developed that the quarantine in that township has been ineffective.

SMALLPOX QUARANTINE.

Lansing Health Officers Having & Hard Time Enforcing It.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 30.-The fart that the cases of smallpox prevailing at several places in Michigan are of a mild form has given the local health officers a vast amount of trouble enforcing the quarantine regulations. In some cases patients sick with the disease have been hidden from the health officers until a large number of persons had been exposed, while in other cases persons have escaped from the quaranantine and spread the disease. It is feared that when the cold weather comes, and the disease becomes more malignant, it will give the health officers serious trouble. The Maple Grove health officer, in whose jurisdiction there has been about 30 cases, has applied to the state board of health for assistance in enforcing quarantine reg ulations.

St. Joseph people are also excited They have asked the state board of health to officially determine if the disease existing there is smallpox and will maintain a strict quarantine if their fears are realized.

A reply was sent at once to the effect that Davis and his check are both frauds. Sheriff Gillen also telegrapher instructions to arrest the man but seems to have been too late. Davis struck Ann Arbor Tuesday and in eight hours is alleged to have cleaned up $70 or more by the use of bogus checks on the bank at Darby, Pa. He seems to have made his next stop at Oshkosh, Wis., and the telegram from that city indicates that he is operating under the plan which proved so successful here.

BABETTE.

Having secured a clerkship in Paris factory at the enormous salary of $250 a year, Pierre Fontaine furnished two or three little rooms in a "dwelling" of the gay city and returned to his native home to marry the girl he loved.

For a time they were as happy as the day was long. Babette was the gentlemen, and take him where he will idol of the maison; all the inmates loved her. Fat, chubby little Paul, who arrived about a year after the marriage, did nothing but bubble and crow with delight all his waking hours.

"Really, I don't know what we should do without her now!" the conclerge would exclaim to the other lodgers. "She is the sunshine of the whole house."

But after a while clouds loomed on the horizon of Babette's happy life. Pierre frequently left her alone for many hours in the evenings, pleading that he had to attend meetings of the money right enough, and was a fool factory workmen. And occasionally not to have taken more. I must wait notes and pleces of paper, with strange a few moments and see that my work looking marks and words on them, were left for him, when he would leave his wife immediately the evening meal was finished.

"Why should all these secret messages be left for Pierre? It is mysterious, isn't it, my treasure?" she said one day, speaking to her baby boy, as she always did whenever anything per plexed her.

It was late-past midnight-when Pierre returned, shamefaced as he crept softly into the room.

"Pierre, my love," Babette began. "Pierre, how late you are! How long the evening has been without you! You used to be happy and contented in staying with me before you had those horrid meetings to attend. O, tell me why you leave me so much and what the many mysterious notes you get are about." And, weeping, she threw her arms around his neck and laid her head on his breast.

"Babette! you foolish little girl!" he cried, fondly stroking her glossy, gol-Will put to tight all terror extracting den hair. "How can you doubt my leve? Sit down with me and listen. do you do at the meetings?"

"The league is established for every one to have their rights-the poor as well as the rich. To level class distinctions and make all men equal. ### HORSE MEAT PATTIES.

Parisians Have Been Eating and Liking Them For Years.

Perdon, a provision merchant of Paris, has been justly sent to prison for eight months on a charge of selling horse patties, says a Paris correspondwas no doubt in the least about his guilt, and he can never be held up to or pot which was produced in court. words pate de fole gras which generally appeal to epicure. This alleged pot of goose liver was simply horseflesh, and, as an official analyist remarked in court, it was bad at that. Perdon also sold pots or jars of alleged patties of duck, pheasant, quail, hare and lark, but they were all of the same foundation. He bought old horses in the knackers' yards, boiled their flesh, mixed it with a little pork fat, spiced it with nutmeg, ginger and cayenne pepper, poured some rum kirsch or eau de vie over it, and then put it into the duly labeled pots. The letters "M. H." were originally intended to mean honorable mention, but being brought to bay in court Perdon tried to defend himself by asserting that they signified "melange hippohagique" and that surely the customers knew what they were buying. It was no wonder that the learned magistrate presiding in the Correctional court remarked with more emphasis than elegance, "Vous avez un rude toupet"-"You have a hard cheek."

Perdon had been befooling his customers with horse pattles for the last eight years. He has now gone to rejoin in jail the man who sold skinned cats for rabbits and dead dogs for Strangely Mixed Marriages.

The two following cases would be difficult to surpass. One was in England, the other in Australia. Some time going on. I have put a dynamite bomb ham which brought about a very complicated state of family relations. The woman had been married minute or two it will explode and blow three times before, and each time had taken for her husband widower with children. Her fourth husband was a widower, and as he had children by his first wife, who was herself a widow with children when he married her, the newly-married couple started their matrimonial companionship with a family composed of the progeny of eight previous marriages.

Another curious case was that of Dr. King of Adelaide, a widower, who married a Miss Norris. Shortly after In a few moments she was outside. the doctor's honeymoon the doctor's wife. Then a brother of the doctor's wife married the doctor's daughter. In other words, the doctor's son beame his step-mother's brother-in-law, and the doctor's daughter became her stepmother's sister-in-law. The doctor, by the marriage of his son to the sister of the doctor's wife, became And now in an asylum near Paris father-in-law to his sister-in-law, and the doctor's wife, by the marriage of her sister to her step-son, became stepmother-in-law to her own sister. By the marriage of the brother of the doctor's wife to the doctor's daughter the brother-in-law, and the doctor's wife became step-mother-in-law to her own brother. It is an unsolved problem as to what relationship the children of the contracting parties are to each Daffodils.

It was said that Prosperpine was gathering daffodils when she was carried off by Pluto, and for that reason this gay flower became the symbol of death. Homer spoke ill of it and declared stupor, madness and death were its attributes.

Daffodil is a corruption of affodilly, which is derived from Asphodelus. Its other name is narcissus and the legend of the latter name is well known-how Narcissus, for whom a nymph died, was punished by seeing his own face when we were both boys that the in a pool of water and becoming so infatuated with it that he was spellfound to the spot till he pined away and died and was changed into the flower that bears his name to-day.

The old poets were fond of the daffodil. Wordsworth's verses are fimillar to most people and Herrick's songs testify to the attention that has been paid to this pretty blossom.
