Funeral of Mrs. Lighthall.

The funeral services of Mrs. Hiram Lighthall held at the Congregational church Saturday morning were largely attended. Six ladies, Mesdames George Turnbull, Fred Wedemeyer, W. H. Heschelwerdt, E. H. Chandler, W. B. Sumner and Sarah Cole acted as the honorary pall bearers and carried some of the many beautiful flowers. The active pall bearers were William Bacon, J. B. Cole, Fred Roedel, C. M. Stephens, Geo. A. BeGole and C. W. Maroney. The floral offerings were very beautiful and numerous, one of the handsomest pieces being that sent by Ann Arbor Lodge, No. 325, B. P. O. Elks, of which Mr. Lighthall is an honored member. The L. O. T. M. were present in a body and thus testified to the esteem in which their deceased sister was held by them.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. S. Jones and were very impressive and solemn. The remains were laid to rest in Oak Grove cemetery.

A Close Shave.

Ed. Williams and Wirt McLaren had what came near being a bad accident Saturday. Mr. Williams was driving Mr. J. Howe's dray down to D. C. McLaren's hay house to get some hay, when in front of the laundry the dray in some manner got cantled up on one side. Mr. Williams and the lad were sitting on the high seat of the dray and were thrown from it on the pole. The horses started to run and there the two hung for dear life until in front of the power house Williams managed to get back on the dray and pull the horses up. Wirt McLaren then fell off the dray on the road pretty well exhausted. It was a very narrow escape. Mr. Howe had had the same trouble with the dray in the morning when it cantled over and dumped a load of freight on the ground.

Tomorrow Night's Concert.

The concert to be given in the M. E. church tomorrow evening for the benefit of the music fund will be a good one. Not only will there be solos and duets by Prof. E. N. Bilbie and Miss Minnie Davis, but there will be vocal solos, trios and quartets. Below is given the program:

Congregational Church Membership

At the session of the Michigan Congregational Association held in Ypsilanti last week, Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, of Detroit, read a paper "On Condition of the Churches," which showed the following significant figures regarding membership:

"There had been no increase in the number of churches he said, but there had been no less. Six churches had been dropped and six new ones added—keeping the number good. There had been three additional churches organized but they had not yet become connected with the association—so the number remains as reported last year, 341. The membership of the six dropped did not aggregate more than 100. The denominational strength, 32,188, was not materially diminished by their loss.

"The net gain in membership during the year had been 161 against a considerable loss—$55 last year. The Methodist and Baptist churches of the state he said had experienced considerable losses during the year, the former a few hundreds and the latter 1,200. The death rate among the membership had been higher than usual; losses by letter a little larger; but the losses by erasure smaller than last year. The fact was a disturbing one, however, that 817 members were lost during the year by erasure."

Was Completely Surprised.

Mrs. J. D. Watson was the happy victim of a well planned surprise on Tuesday evening. The members of the Ladies' Research Club of which she has been president for the past two years, met at the residence of Mrs. C. E. Whitaker and from there went to Mrs. Watson's home, completely taking her off her feet, as it were, with surprise. There were about 25 ladies present and the evening was most pleasantly spent. Mrs. L. T. Freeman sang and Mrs. George P. Staffan played the piano, general conversation filling in between. During the evening ice cream and cake were served. As a memento of their visit the ladies left a handsome medallion in a choice hand carved frame, which will help to adorn Mrs. Watson's elegant new home. Mrs. Jabez Bacon made the presentation with well chosen words and in a pleasing manner.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

In view of the loss, we, as members of Columbian Hive, No. 284, have sustained by the death of our dear sister, Hannah Lighthall, and of the still heavier loss sustained by those who were nearest and dearest to her, be it

Resolved, that it is but a just tribute to the memory of the departed, that we bow in submission to Him who doeth all things well, for He hath said, "Well done, good and faithful servant; come to the place your divine Lord hath prepared for you."

Resolved, that we tender our sympathies to her bereaved family and relatives; that as a mark of respect for her memory, our charter be draped for 90 days, and these resolutions be published in the papers, and also a copy sent to the family.

CARTER MEDICINE CO. WINS.

Obtains Injunction in Case Involving Simulation of Labels.

Brent Good, president of the Carter Medicine Company, yesterday received a telegram from his lawyers in Chicago, informing him that a final injunction, with costs, had been granted against the Chicago Label and Box Company. This company makes a specialty of manufacturing labels, boxes, etc., for druggists. The Carter Company has been following them through the courts for two years on the complaint that the label company was making simulations of the labels of Carter's Little Liver Pills. They have now obtained a final injunction, with costs, and the costs are very large, as the case has been submitted to a Master in Chancery for a final accounting. The Carter Medicine Company has been the first and only one to prosecute printers or engravers who have prepared such labels and wrappers. It marks a new departure in infringement cases, and their victory is one of great importance to the whole "proprietary trade," and also of interest to retail druggists.—N. Y. Press, May 2, 1900.

FOR WOMEN

The debilitating drains and discharges which weaken so many women are caused by Catarrh of the distinctly feminine organs. The sufferer may call her trouble Leucorrhoea, or Weakness, or Female Disease or some other name, but the real trouble is catarrh of the female organs and nothing else.

Pe-ru-na radically and permanently cures this and all other forms of Catarrh. It is a positive specific for female troubles caused by catarrh of the delicate lining of the organs peculiar to women. It always cures if used persistently. It is prompt and certain.

THREE NOTABLE MEETINGS

Gatherings of State Wide Importance Held in the Shadow of Michigan University.

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR FIRST ON THE LIST.

Grand Commandery Holds Forty-Fourth Annual Conclave—Next Comes the Homeopathic Medical Society—Third and Last Is the May Musical Festival.

(Special Correspondence.)

University of Michigan, May 21.—Last week was a busy one in the University city. The number of persons from different parts of the state who saw the university campus and buildings for the first time was large. During the week three gatherings of state-wide importance were held in the shadow of the university buildings.

The Knights Templar.

Tuesday and Wednesday the Michigan Knights Templar arrived in the city of Ann Arbor. The occasion was the forty-fourth annual conclave of the Michigan grand commandery. There were present to do honor to the grand commandery two Detroit commanderies, the Kalamazoo, Jackson, Marshall and Adrian commanderies and the Windsor (Ontario) preceptory. Tuesday was given over to parades, several being held during the day. In the early part of the afternoon occurred the big procession. In this seven commanderies, the Windsor preceptory and six bands acted as an escort for the grand commandery. There were about 600 swordsmen in line. During the latter part of the afternoon an exhibition drill was given by Detroit commandery No. 1 at the athletic field. For an hour the 57 knights and officers marched and counter-marched across the field, in single file, three abreast, six abreast, 48 abreast, wheeled, formed open squares, solid squares, triangles, single and double crosses, a revolving wheel and performed many other wonderful feats. The drill was conceded the most elaborate and perfect ever given in the University city.

Tuesday evening the sir knights and their ladies were tendered a complimentary concert in University hall by the faculty of the school of music.

Wednesday they devoted themselves to business. They elected as right eminent grand commander for the ensuing year Judge Philip Van Zile, of Detroit. Fred Bonine, of Niles, was elected eminent grand warden. The number of deaths during the year in the ranks of the order were 94; however, a net gain of 24 had been made in membership. The constitution and by-laws were revised. The conclave for next year will be at Detroit.

The Homeopaths.

The second state gathering was the annual meeting of the Homeopathic Medical association of the state of Michigan. This organization held sessions Wednesday and Thursday. Dr. G. A. Robertson, of Battle Creek, in his address as president spoke of the methods of preventing the spread of tuberculosis. The sessions were nearly all taken up with papers on technical subjects. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, professor in the university; first vice president, Dr. W. E. Clark, Three Rivers; second vice president, Dr. Sarah J. Allen, Charlotte; general secretary, Dr. W. M. Bailey, Detroit; corresponding secretary, Dr. Lizzie A. Hendershot, Irving; treasurer, Dr. R. Milton Richards, Detroit; necrologist, Dr. Dean T. Smith, Jackson; member of the board of control, Dr. R. C. Olin, Detroit. A new constitution and by-laws were adopted. The meeting next year will be held at Port Huron.

The May Festival.

The third of the big gatherings was the seventh annual May festival. This consisted of five concerts in University hall. The first of these was Thursday evening, the second and third Friday afternoon and evening and the fourth and fifth Saturday afternoon and evening. On each occasion University hall, which has a capacity of 3,000, was crowded to overflowing. The programmes were by the Boston Festival orchestra, the Choral Union of Ann Arbor and a dozen special soloists, including Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Mrs. Emma Juch-Wellman and Miss Sara Anderson. There were a large number of people from outside of the city at the concerts. The festival has become an annual event of state importance.

The Regents Meet.

During the week the board of regents of the university met. Among other things they adopted more liberal entrance requirements for the literary department, stiffened up the requirements for the dental department and voted to change the course from a three to four-year course with the beginning of 1901-1902 college year. Instructors and lecturers were appointed for the new courses to be given in higher commercial education. It was decided to begin work in the spring on the $250,000 science building which is to be the next material addition to the university outfit.

Win Fellowships.

The American School of Classical Studies in Rome offered for the year 1900-1901 three fellowships, two in Roman archaeology and one in Christian archaeology, competition being open to graduates of all American colleges. Two of the fellowships have just been awarded to members of the graduate school in the university, the fellowships in Christian archaeology to Charles R. Morey, of Charlotte, A. B., 1899, and one of the others to George H. Allen, of Grand Rapids, A. M., 1899.

Marine Engineering School.

Arrangements have been perfected for the establishment of a school of marine engineering at the university next year under the supervision of Prof. M. E. Cooley, engineer on the cruiser Yosemite during the late war. The choice for professor of marine architecture lies between a prominent naval architect on the eastern seaboard and a gentleman who is now an assistant professor of naval architecture at the University of Glasgow, Scotland. At present there are only three colleges giving such a course—Cornell, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Naval academy. The course here will comprise a year and a half's work.

MUST PAY MORE TAXES.

Commissioner Chase S. Osborn Has Just Completed His Computation of Railroad Dues.

Railroad Commissioner Chase S. Osborn has filed with the auditor general the annual computation of railroad taxes which must be paid by the railroad companies on or before July 1. The list shows a big increase over the taxes of 1899, when the total taxes were $1,087,616.89, the amount of taxes levied for the year being $1,240,845.27. The per cent. of increase is 16.69.

The most notable increase of taxation is in the case of the Chicago & West Michigan. Last year the tax assessed was $32,329.27, while the increase over this amount for the year is $29,034.40, the tax being nearly doubled. Other increases in taxation are as follows: Grand Trunk, $8,171.63; Lake Shore, $6,142.35; Michigan Central, $23,906.05; Wabash, $9,029.27; Chicago & Northwestern, $22,761.04.

TO TEST THE LAW.

Proceedings Begun Before the Supreme Court to Restrain Collection of Inheritance Tax.

Attorneys Moore and Goff, of Detroit, have filed an application in the supreme court for a writ of prohibition on behalf of the executors of the estate of M. S. Smith, the purpose of the proceedings being to restrain Probate Judge Durfee from proceeding to collect the tax on inheritance of the deceased. The proceeding will test the constitutionality of the inheritance tax law passed at the last session of the legislature. The act is assailed on the ground that the tax provided is not a specific tax upon property, that it is not the annual tax provided for in section 1 of article 14 of the constitution; that it violates the rule of uniformity, and is therefore unconstitutional.

RAPID-FIRE GUN.

A Michigan Man Claims to Have Invented One That Can Shoot 400 Times a Minute.

Capt. Jack O'Connell, whose home is at Rapid River, Delta county, has invented what he claims is the greatest rapid-firing rifle of the age. The gun is about the size of the ordinary hunting rifle, yet O'Connell has fired 120 shots in 21 seconds and 400 shots in a minute. Twenty cartridges held by their bases in clips slide through the breach of the gun, and these may be fired in one continuous stream. Twenty consecutive shots can be fired by ten pulls of the trigger, or all 20 may be fired with lightning rapidity by simply pulling the trigger once and holding it back.

Married Again.

Justice Hicks performed a very peculiar marriage in Allegan. The contracting parties were W. H. S. Banks, of Lee township, a veteran of the war of the rebellion, and an officer, aged 82 years, while the bride is but 18. They were married about a year ago in Wisconsin, but as her parents had not given their consent an attorney advised that they be remarried. Mr. Banks had been married twice before, but says he likes his young wife the best and wants her to have all his property, which consists of a neat bank account and three large farms. He also receives $50 per month pension.

Franchise Granted.

David Cornwell and Milton D. Owen, of Allegan, have been granted a franchise for an electric street railway to be constructed northward from Allegan along the Monterey road and in Monterey and Salem to a point of junction with an electric road which will be built from Grand Rapids to Holland this summer.

HE STAMMERED.

Phonograph Plays an Important Part in Bringing Together Brothers After Long Separation.

On the 13th day of May, 1881, George Hemington, a brother of Peter Hemington, of Galesburg, enlisted in the regular army and disappeared. Persistent inquiry failed to discover his whereabouts, the only fact to be ascertained being that of his discharge for disability soon after his enlistment. Three months since Peter was in Kalamazoo, where by chance he "took in" an exhibition, of which a phonograph formed a component part. Among other features was a fragment from the play, "The Three Guardsmen," during the rendering of which one of the characters developed a peculiar and scarcely audible stammer.

Upon the request of Mr. Hemington, this part was repeated, and that gentleman became convinced that it was either a very remarkable coincidence or else the original of the voice was his long-absent brother, who had a precisely similar impediment in his speech.

Since the above occurrence the clew has been persistently followed, and various dramatic companies have been searched, and at last the two brothers have been reunited, after 19 years' separation. George gave no particular reason for his prolonged silence, save that he has been doing well, and time passed rapidly.

PICK FRUIT FARMS.

More Than Fifteen Thousand Dunkards Are Expected to Colonize in Vicinity of St. Joseph.

The arrival in St. Joseph of a large delegation of Dunkards, representatives of thousands of the sect in Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, with the purpose of purchasing fruit land in this section, has created a stir among peach growers. The visit was decided upon after months of correspondence and investigations of other peach-growing districts, and they practically have closed deals for hundreds of acres of the best fruit farms tributary to St. Joseph.

One of the party, who claims to represent a colony of 4,500 Dunkards in north central Indiana, said the party was relieved to find homes and peach lands for the prospective immigrants.

As the Dunkards are known to number not less than 30,000, more than half of whom are represented as being ready to colonize around St. Joseph, the fruit-growing industry will receive a great impetus.

GREAT DAMAGE DONE.

Forest Fires Along a Railway in Presque Isle County Leave Destruction in Their Path.

Forest fires along the line of the A. & N. road have done a great amount of damage. The railroad bridge on the Ocqueoc river was burned at Millersburg and trains cannot run to Onaway. Several farmers near Hawks are burned out and in the village a mill and boarding house and two dwellings were burned, all belonging to J. C. Wilson. The loss is $10,000. A bridge was burned on the Valentine branch, and in some way the coaches were left on one side, while the engine was left on the other. About 40,000,000 feet of logs were a total loss along the line. In the town of Millersburg the fire was controlled by the aid of a fire engine sent from Alpena.

Skinned Lambs Alive.

William Brown, the county commissioner of corrections, brought to jail in Sanilac Center a 14-year-old boy by the name of Marion from Flynn township, and he was taken to the reform school at Lansing until he is 17 years of age. His depredations are unequalled in the history of Sanilac county for a boy of his age. One of his tricks was to take his mother's pet lambs and skin them alive and leave them in the fields to suffer. His parents had no control of him whatever.

Will Be Dry.

The village council of Ovid some time ago rejected the liquor bonds of one McCarty, who wished to engage in the business at that place. The bond that was required was to be for $6,000, and at the time the council gave no reasons for its rejection. McCarty then brought mandamus proceedings to compel the acceptance of the bond. Judge Stone held against McCarty, and Ovid will be a dry town this year. Since rejecting the bond the village has decided not to have any saloons there.

County Must Pay.

A writ of mandamus has been granted by the supreme court to compel the county treasurer of Muskegon county to pay over to the state $3,312.82, of which $2,095.27 was for expenses incurred in connection with advertising delinquent state taxes. The county attempted to escape payment for these expenses, but the supreme court decides that as they are due to the mistakes of the county and township officers as a rule the state cannot be required to pay them.

PRETTY BACK YARDS.

Dwellers in Cities Need Not Be Without an Attractive Spot Resembling a Real Garden.

Even if a country garden is denied us, it is possible to obtain much pleasure with what we possess, and it is surprising that the back yards of city houses are the forlorn, neglected places that they generally are, at best being only a square grass plot utilized for drying clothes, and a narrow border planted with a few straggling perennials. If there are children in the family sometimes abortive attempts are made at a flower bed. As the majority of people who own town houses seldom leave the city before the middle of June, returning by the middle of September, and as the head and breadwinner of the family practically stays all summer in town, it is a wonder that these back yards are not generally made beautiful by a little care and attention, especially as the dining-room windows are apt to overlook the inclosure. Not infrequently there is either a small porch or balcony, where it would be pleasant to sit if the outlook were attractive.

Where two houses of the same caliber back up against each other in adjacent streets, the space left open is an elongated square 25 feet wide. This might, if properly utilized, contain much beauty and sweetness. If the clothes posts are a necessity they could (despite the laundress' probable objection) be arranged so as to leave the center space free. If there is an even brick wall the task of rendering it beautiful is an easy one. Generally, however, ugly board walls form the boundaries, but it is possible to get over this difficulty with the aid of the wire netting which is used for chicken yards and which could be quickly covered with vines—annuals, and what is more—satisfactory, perennials, which are of slower growth, but which could be planted at the same time.

AN ATTRACTIVE BACK YARD.

If there are children in the family an arbor is a source of great pleasure as a playhouse, and might form the center of the wall. This also could be constructed of the wire netting, if supported by a wooden frame, and should have a small table in the center, surrounded by a wooden bench. A pretty and effective grouping for either side of the summer house would be sunflowers, hollyhocks, lilacs and, as the autumn and spring should chiefly be considered, chrysanthemums and the brilliantly flowering shrubs that bloom in the early spring. It is possible to enjoy the lovely procession of bulbs in a town-yard garden. The crocuses, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips all come to maturity before the exodus to the country begins, while in the autumn the garden will be gay in geraniums and later summer flowers until frost.

The accompanying sketch shows a simple plan for beautifying the regulation inclosure, in which it will be seen the clothes poles are not forgotten. It is to be hoped, however, that Biddy will be limited as to their use, and that the lines will not remain stretched for more than two days of the week.—Chicago Daily News.

Children and Their Teeth.

An experienced dentist says that the carelessness of parents frequently sacrifices the personal charm of their children to an extent wholly unnecessary. The first teeth should be preserved until actually pushed out by the second, as the jaw contracts when they are removed any considerable length of time before the second. The first set should be brushed with the softest possible brush and a good paste, and when signs of decay appear the child should be taken to a competent dentist for advice and treatment. In this way the child is almost assured of sound, evenly growing teeth when womanhood or manhood is reached.

MRS. PALMER PLEASED.

America's Honorary Commissioner to the Paris Exposition Received with Distinction.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, of the American general commission to the exposition at Paris, is the only woman among the commissioners whom the different countries of the world have sent to France.

Her position, therefore, is one of exceptional interest and attracts much attention. She was one of the centers of attraction in the opening ceremonies at the Salles des Fetes. After the ceremonies she repaired to the American pavilion in time to see President Loubet pass on the river.

To the press representative who asked her for her impressions Mrs. Palmer said: "Of course this is charming. We all knew it would be so in

MRS. POTTER PALMER.

Paris. The way the different sections of the exhibition thread their way through bits of real Paris on both sides of the Seine is one of the most charming features, but what appeals to me and gratifies me most is the undoubted fact that Chicago has set the pace for Paris, the mother of exhibitions. The whole system has been revolutionized by our world's fair, and France has realized that she must plan hers in the future on similar lines to attract the world's interest. This she has done.

"The old Palais d'Industrie, which hitherto was considered adequate, has been torn down and splendid buildings have been erected similar in effect to ours. Paris has utilized the water effect as we did, and has expended money on space in a manner hitherto undreamed of.

"But beautiful as it all is, I do not consider that they equal us. There is certainly no view comparing with our Court of Honor.

"In another way France has imitated us, namely, the way in which women are now recognized. For the first time in France a woman is on the commission. And women will be placed on every jury which will have to decide on all industries in which women are directly or indirectly interested. This is a great step in advance. Numerous women's congresses will be held beginning in June.

"The chairman on the women's congress here has just appointed Mrs. Charles Henrotin, of Chicago, the delegate-at-large for America, to secure the participation of the American women."

Some Good Things to Learn.

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn how to tell a story. A well-told story is as welcome as a sunbeam in a sick room.

Learn to keep your own troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows.

Learn to stop croaking. If you cannot see any good in this world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to attend strictly to your own business. Very important point.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares whether you have the earache, headache or rheumatism.

Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered with any of yours.—Rural World.

He Was Truly Thankful.

The death of a beloved wife in Venango county, Va., was touchingly referred to by the bereaved widower, who, in his local paper, inserted the following "card of thanks" to his friendly neighbors: "I wish to express my most heartfelt thanks to the minister, choir, neighbors, sisters and brothers of the various orders, and all those who so kindly assisted in the sickness and loss of my first wife."

Children Held Sacred in Japan.

From one end of Japan to the other a child is treated as a sacred thing, be it one's own or a stranger's. Each one carries its name and address on a ticket strung from its neck, but should it indeed stray from home food and shelter and kindness would meet it anywhere.

There is lots of good sound sense in Senator Lodge's declaration that the Monroe Doctrine without force back of it and willingness to use it, is nothing more than sound and fury.

Admiral Dewey prefers to withhold his opinions until he sees which party is going to nominate him. If he waits until that time arrives he will keep them bottled up for at least four years to come.

Unless present plans fail, Congress will adjourn on June 11, just long enough before the Philadelphia convention to permit the Republican members to close up their business and attend. They will undoubtedly add to the life and go of the occasion.

Postmaster Thompson has confessed to having plundered the Cuban mail service. What is the country to do when men of his standing turn rogues? He was chosen without politics, entirely for his reputation for efficiency and honesty. And he turns rogue and teaches his subordinates how the inspectors can be hoodwinked.

Ann Arbor business men are indignant that the board of supervisors refuses to pay the county's just share of the tax for paving the streets adjacent to the court-house square. The Washtenaw board has the unpleasant distinction of being the only board in Michigan that refuses to pay its debts of this nature. A minority of the members of the board are against this "sharp" way of doing business.

Manchester Enterprise, Gen. J. E. Tyrrell, in command of the M. N. G., says the talk of abandoning the state encampment is having a demoralizing effect on the national guard, and it will prove disastrous to the military department if the camp is not held this year. We had always supposed that the encampments had a demoralizing effect upon the soldiers.

Which goes to show that there are two kinds of demoralization—the kind Gen. Tyrrell talks about and the kind Editor Blosser thinks about.

The President has sent positive orders to Cuba to show no favor or mercy to the guilty. But at the same time he has insisted that men be not arrested and their characters blighted, probably for life, by unwarranted arrests on mere suspicion. This is eminently proper. It is scarcely possible that anyone now in Cuba can escape from the island and nothing will be gained by placing them under arrest until something definite is known.

The hearing in the proceedings against Warden Chamberlain commenced at Jackson Monday. Objections were made by Mr. Chamberlain's attorneys to Gov. Pingree and M. J. Lehman sitting in trial on the warden's acts, and to other matters in connection with the hearing. The hearing was therefore adjourned until next Monday. In the meantime President Holmes was authorized to issue subpoenas for witnesses both on behalf of the board and Warden Chamberlain.

By a vote of 233 to 238 the Methodist general conference in session at Chicago yesterday abolished the time limit of pastorates. Hereafter, pastors will be appointed annually by the bishops, with no limit on the number of years they may serve their congregations except the limit imposed by their own ability and popularity. This action finally disposes of one of the most important questions before the great Methodist body and does away with one of the fundamental principles of the itinerant system of the denomination.

LOCAL AND COUNTY ITEMS.

The liquor bond of Jacob Zaag with James Gorman and Martin Howe as sureties was accepted by the common council at its meeting last night.

Olive Chapter, O. E. S., will visit the Eastern Star Chapter at Grass Lake, Tuesday, June 5, by invitation, and will confer the degree of the order.

The Towar creamery started up Tuesday morning and took in 1,258 pounds of milk that day. It is expected that by next Monday 7,000 pounds per day will be taken in.

The Grass Lake News man says: "La grippe loves a shining mark. We are threatened with it." The fishing season is here, but we never knew Carlton was such a "shiner" before.

Mrs. Horace Baldwin died at her home in Sylvan Sunday morning at 2 o'clock from the effects of an attack of the grip. The funeral services were held at the Congregational church Tuesday afternoon, and were conducted by Rev. C. S. Jones. Interment was in Oak Grove cemetery.

There were 52 deaths in this county during April. Ann Arbor city had 18, Ypsilanti city 14, Chelsea village 2, Manchester village 1, Dexter village 1, Bridgewater, Sylvan and Ypsilanti town had 2 each, Augusta, Bridgewater, Dexter, Freedom, Lima, Lodi, Manchester, Northfield, Pittsfield, Sharon and Webster 1 each.

A young people's union service will be held at the M. E. church Sunday evening, in which the Epworth League, Christian Endeavor Society, and Baptist Young People's Union will unite. Short addresses will be made by the pastors of the several churches. All are invited. There will be no service in the Congregational and Baptist churches.

The case of Carl Wuerthner vs. the German Workmen's Society of Manchester was decided in favor of the plaintiff by a jury in the circuit court on Friday afternoon after a three days' trial. His full claim of $78 was allowed. The case is a celebrated one in this county and has already been to the supreme court which ordered this new trial.

A movement is on foot in the Grand Commandery Knights Templar to purchase a tract of land at some inland resort, erect a large assembly hall, and hold annual special state conclaves there, except on the years when the national triennial conclave is held. Zukey lake at Hamburg junction is being boomed for the location of the headquarters.

George E. Davis will sell by public auction on the premises a mile north and half a mile east of Lima Center, 3½ miles east of Chelsea, and 4 miles west of Dexter, the whole of the personal property of Mrs. Eva Fiske, comprising among other things 2 horses, 3 cows, 8 thoroughbred Shropshire ewes and 9 lambs, Champion binder, McCormick mower and other farm tools. From State Banking Commissioner Maltz's abstract showing the condition of the 191 state banks and three trust companies of the state at the close of business April 26, the following figures are gleaned: The total commercial deposits were $36,670,902.55; total savings deposits, $63,566,144.27; increase in commercial deposits over last annual report Feb. 4, 1899, $4,216,017.46; increase in savings deposits, $7,111,114.62. These are good, healthy business figures.

The interior of the Kempf Commercial and Savings Bank has been in the hands of the carpenters this week. The office at the north end of the building has been removed, the partition taken down and extended in a line to the door, thus giving more light and room to the cashier and assistant to do their work. This change brings the savings department window on a line with the commercial department window and makes everything more convenient.

World's Greatest Shows in Ann Arbor, Thursday, June 7, can secure special excursion rates on all lines of travel. This will be the only point in this vicinity where the great show will exhibit during the present season, and those who fail to see it will miss the grandest amusement event of the year. Since last season Ringling Bros.' famous exhibition has been doubled in size and is now beyond all question or doubt the largest and best combined circus, menagerie and hippodrome in the United States. The performance is given by over 300 high-salaried specialists, in three rings, on two stages, in mid-air, and on a huge quarter-mile hippodrome track. The trained animal features, which are alone worth many times the price of admission to see, include three troupes of wonderful educated elephants, Lockhart's play acting elephants, Marchand's pugilistic pachyderms and Souder's elephant brass band, and O'Brien's sixty-one horse act, in which three score handsome equines perform in one ring, at one time, under the direction of one man. The grand free street parade which takes place at 10 o'clock on the morning of the exhibition is the most magnificent display ever seen. Don't miss it.

At a recent social in the Baptist church, Ann Arbor, some students "swiped" the collection boxes. The Sunday following the deacons had to pass the hat in good old fashioned style while taking up the collection.

The U. of M. calendars have been admitted to the post office as second class matter and are now sent out by the university authorities at the rate of one cent

Orrin Frisbie was married to Miss Edith Earl, of Marshall, at Windsor on Friday of last week. Miss Edith Boyd was present at the wedding, which was a very quiet one. Mr. and Mrs. Frisbie are visiting relatives in and around Chelsea.

New cement walks are being laid in front of the stores of Merritt Boyd and C.
Spirnagle on South Main street. It was a much needed improvement. It will be a fine thing for our business street when the walks on both sides are all cement walks.

Louis J. Liscmer has returned to his first love as the editor of a German paper.
He has leased the Hausfreund und Post, of Ann Arbor, for a term of years from wielding the pen, scissors and paste pot.

Success to you, Louis.

Today is the Feast of the Ascension.

in St. Mary's church this morning at 6 and 10:30 o'clock, which were largely attended. There will be Vespers and Benediction this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

A young man fantastically dressed as a herald, riding a safety bicycle with a seat elevated about five feet from the frame and sounding a trumpet from time to time, created quite a little interest on the streets Friday. Subsequently he appeared at the intersection of Main and Middle streets dressed as a tramp and did some very credible trick bicycle riding. He was advertising a brand of rye whiskey.

Editor Beakes, of the Ann Arbor Argus, has lost his dearly beloved pipe and this is the way he advertises for it:

PFEIF VERLOREN!

"Wo ist mein Pfeif?"

It is a briar with an amber mouth-piece.

Finder please return to Argus office.

Well, now, we said it was Beakes who has lost his "dudeen," but it is just as liable to be Frueauff. No, Frueauff always smokes a corncob or a clay pipe, or else a stogie; after all we guess it's Beakes' pipe that has gone astray.

morning on Main street. The boy who wagon, and the vehicle was badly broken and the crosswalk opposite the Chelsea House.

Dr. H. H. Avery has recently become interested in a new enterprise, a plantation at Chiapas, Mexico. It is primarily a rubber and coffee plantation, and the land is particularly productive. Dr. Avery is the local representative and a director of the company.

Dr. Roy S. Copeland, of the U. of M., was elected president of the State Homeopathic Society at the meeting held in Ann Arbor last week. His election to the position is looked upon as an added proof of the growing popularity of the school with the homeopathic physicians of the state.

The street committee of the Manchester common council at the last meeting of that august body demanded pay for work they had performed in viewing streets and laying out the work to be done on them.
There was considerable kicking on the part of the other members but the bill was allowed.

Prof. G. N. Ellis' talk to the Business
Men's Class of the Congregational church Sunday noon and his address in the church in the evening were both earnest arguments in favor of the benefits of higher education, carried along on Christian lines, to the everyday affairs of a business life.

mer was one of the old residents of Bridgewater having lived there for 55 years.
Besides her son Louis Emmer, she leaves

FOR LITTLE BENJIE Decoration Day Story.

HE counted the buds and blossoms over again, with slow care. There were so many! "Thirty-seven—eight—thirty-nine!" Diantha Berry cried, delightedly. The level rays of the late afternoon sunshine sifted through the close branches of the great tree geranium and made an eccentric tracery in lines of light on her plain face. The splendid plant stood head and shoulders above her, and its topmost leaves swept the whitewashed ceiling. Its clusters of rosy pink petals peeped out blushingly, all over it.

Across a narrow space of yard little Leah Swallow put on her glasses and tried to count the blossoms, too. Her pale, lean face was wistful with longing. On her own window-sill a pot of stunted cactus grew.

It was late May, and the tiny village "band" down the street a little way was practicing the "Star Spangled Banner" ambitiously. It was hired to go to a little distant town to play on Memorial day. There was only one soldier's grave at home, and the people had never made any observance of the day there. It was of that one soldier's grave that little Leah Swallow was thinking—and Diantha Berry, across the yard. But it was Leah who was crying.

By and by the great tree geranium's petting ended; Diantha went back to her sewing at the other window.

"I declare, I believe I can smell liniment," she said, aloud. "Leah's got another of her spells of rheumatism, I guess. She uses dreadful smelly liniment, and the wind's this way. I can smell it as sure as I live."

A sudden memory made her grim features relax into a smile. She was thinking how Leah used to say—when they were bits, knee-high—that she could smell Mis' Job Daggett's boiled dinner round two corners. Her talent for smelling had developed early.

The band struck up the "Red, White and Blue," and the faint rhythm of the music set Diantha Berry's feet tapping. Across the strip of brown grass, it sent Leah Swallow's head down into her open hands.

"Not that—I can't let 'em play that!" she sobbed, desolately. "That was Benjie's tune. It don't seem as if anybody else had any right to it but Benjie. He used to sing it when he wasn't but a speck of a knee-high boy and 'played soldier.' Then, afterward, when—when it wasn't play, he marched to that tune away from me. Why do they keep on playin' it? Don't they know it makes me see Benjie right before me now, with his soldier things on—the handsome boy that marched away? And, then—O, why don't they remember? Why don't they remember that Benjie never marched back to me again?"

The tree geranium was well along in years, as geraniums grow old, and its history was minutely told in Diantha's diary. Just the number of blossoms it had had last year—and the year before—was set down there with auxiliary remarks.

"Twenty-three's the most it's ever had to one time—or, let me see, was it 25 it had last spring? I declare, I'm losin' my memory, and that'll be some-thing new for a Berry!"

The diaries were piled in a neat row on a shelf over the table. The year of each was printed in careful figures on a bit of white paper on the back. It was easy to find the right one at once. She opened it and read aloud, monotonously:

"April 7—m-m-m—, that ain't it. It was higher the last of April it bloomed last year. 'April 12—13—17,'—here 'tis! 'April 20. The tree geranium's all bloomed out splendidly. It looks handsome. I turned the best side out so the soldiers could see it, goin' past. I saw Little Benjie looking—he's dreadful fond o' flowers. His mother'd got a cactus blossom pinned onto his coat, among the brass buttons. I can't bear a cactus blossom. If things hadn't been just so, I'd have sent Little Benjie off to war with plenty o' my pink geraniums on his soldier coat."

Diantha Berry's voice came to a stop with a jolt. She had forgotten to see how many blossoms the tree geranium had last spring—when Little Benjie went to war. Little Benjie! she had a clear vision of him before her eyes; Little Benjie in his brand-new soldier suit, with his brown, curly head up in the air, tramping away like a veteran. How plainly she saw him! The way the morning sunshine had played with his brass buttons—how plainly she saw that! Was it the daze of it in her eyes that made them water? Diantha Berry was old—if 60 years is old—and lonely and grim. There had been few shadows—or sun-flashes—in her life. Little Benjie had been more to her than, in her heart, she would confess. He had been to her almost what her own son might have been.

She sat back in her chair now, rocking fiercely, and remembered many things. Little Benjie was in them all. They fled before her mind in steady, relentless succession—the time when Little Benjie put on his first bits of trousers and stomped across the yard to show her the pockets in them—the time when he first went to school and she tucked a pair of his beloved strawberry tarts, unnoticed, into his lunch basket, for a surprise—and the time—Diantha Berry drew in her breath sharply, with the pain of remembering—the time when, in his brave soldier clothes, he marched away to war, to the tune of the "Red, White and Blue." That memory hurt her. She wondered, in dull misery, if mothers could feel worse than that. If Little Benjie's mother—but she would not finish that thought out. Her thin lips clenched. What had she to do with Little Benjie's mother? It was only Little Benjie that mattered to her.

"But I'd pity her—I'd do that, if 'twarn't for the way she treated me when they brought home Benjie's body. I'd have forgot all the rest then—wasn't I ready to? Wasn't I the first one to give in? Do you suppose I'd have let a miserable little quarrel stan' between us then, when Little Benjie lay dead in the house? But Leah felt different. She wouldn't make up even then—then! If 'twarn't for that, I'd pity her, settin' across there, all alone. I'd be sorry for the mother o' Little Benjie. I'd go across and see how her rheumatism was, and I'd run down the street where the band's practicin' and make 'em stop goin' over that tune of Little Benjie's. I'll tell 'em to have

It was like a cry of pain, in little neat set letters, there on the page. It seemed to echo through the room. The diary slipped to the floor with a gentle thud. It lay there, unnoticed, a long while. The twilight dimmed to-night while Diantha Berry sat musing. The darkness crept about her like a soft mantle and wrapped her in. The low creak of her chair, as she rocked monotonously, was the only sound in the room. After awhile she began to talk again—aloud, as lonely women do.

"Tuesday's Decoration day—28, 29, 30, yes, Tuesday. To-day's the 27th o' May. Well, I'm goin' to cut off some o' my geranium tree blooms and carry 'em down to Little Benjie Tuesday. They'll look so beautiful—and Benjie was dreadful fond o' pink flowers. There'll be enough to make a great wreath at his head. I guess I can spare a lot of them to Little Benjie! I shall have him all to myself—Leah's got a spell of rheumatism. If 'twarn't for that, I couldn't go at all."

She experienced a fierce joy, and the sound of it was in her voice. She was glad that Little Benjie's mother was sick. Across the yard there was no glimmer of light. Little Benjie's mother sat in the dark, too, and mused. A faint remnant of daylight kissed her wan face gently as it vanished.

"He was such a little mite of a boy, Benjie was, when I put him into pants," her thoughts kept on, with relentless cruelty, "and I sent him over to Diantha's to show 'em to her. When he came back, all his little pockets were full o' goodies. I can see just how he looked, struttin' across the yard, takin' long steps like had put on long pants when he was 15—oddy enough, that got into her thoughts when she cut the fifteenth flower off. Then she cut another, smiling whimsically—Little Benjie had gone away to the high school when he was 16. She could see him now—the tall fellow!—swinging down the road in the morning, and back again at night. She could see him stop at the crooked elm to swing his hat twice—once for Leah and once for her. She could hear his voice coming in at her window—"You make splendid spice cakes, Miss Diantha. I ate one once."

The big, hungry, flattering boy! Seventeen, 18 blossoms dropped into the basket Little Benjie had liked. Miss Diantha had a new idea.

"I'll cut off 22 for Little Benjie—one for every year that the Lord let him stay. I'm glad I thought of it. Yes, I'll cut off 22."

The great tree geranium, shorn of most of its glory, stood in the window, alone. Diantha had taken her little basket of flowers and had gone away down the road. It was at the crooked elm she stopped. Little Benjie had always stopped there, years ago. With sudden distress Diantha thought of the poor little mother he would never wave his cap to again.

"Poor Leah!" she cried, aloud. The fountain of her pity was unsealed at last. The bitterness and anger were swept away—she forgot, for the moment, everything but Little Benjie's mother, alone in her pain. She remembered how it had always been her part to comfort Leah, when they were little girls together. She would go back now and comfort her.

"Leah," she called at the door, a minute later. "Leah, I've come. You didn't answer my letter, and mebbe you don't want me, but I've come. I couldn't help it."

The suffering woman's face was a study of joy and wonder. The wonder prevailed.

"I never got any letter, Diantha," she said, slowly. Diantha sprang toward her eagerly.

"Not my letter askin' if I could come over to see little dead Benjie? Didn't you get that, Leah Swallow? I sent it across by Mis' Daggett's little boy—and the Lord knows how eager I waited for the answer! I couldn't seem to give it up."

"I never got it, Diantha. Do you think I wouldn't have answered? You don't know how I waited, too!"

"Leah, Leah—dear child, what a dreadful mistake it all was, and how we've been sufferin' for it! I might have comforted you a little mite—and I needed comfortin', too, Leah. Is it too late now? See, dear, I was goin' down to decorate Little Benjie's grave with my geraniums. There's 22—one for every year he lived. Put your face in 'em, Leah; see how sweet they are! I'll carry them down for you, dear—they're yours, now. You can send me, because you can't go, and Little Benjie will understand."

She had drawn the slight figure into her arms, and was rocking it back and forth as mothers rock babies. The long misery was over. After all, it had only been the forgetfulness of a little child.

After awhile she took up the basket of flowers and started again for the cemetery; but at the door Leah called her back, half timidly.

"There's something I'd like, Diantha," she said. "If—if you wouldn't mind arrangin' the flowers kind of in the shape of a flag. I wanted to. Benjie was so fond of his flag."—Annie Hamilton Donnell, in Country Gentleman.

DIANTHA BERRY SAT MUSING.

pity—it hurts his mother so to hear it. But now—"

She turned the pages of the diary in her hand, searching for something. It was not there—of course not! It was in the next little book further along in the room. She took it down and found the page she wanted.

"They brought little Benjie home, dead, to-day. Little Benjie dead! I saw 'em take the box out of the hearse and carry it in to Leah—poor Leah! My heart is achin' for her. She's feelin' the way I would have if they'd brought my boy home to me dead, wearin' his worn-out soldier clothes. I know how Leah feels—poor Leah! I'm goin' across to comfort her—I've got to, I can't help it. You wouldn't expect a quarrel to hold good when Little Benjie was layin' dead?"

The next day's entry was short enough. Hurt pride and sensitiveness lurked between the lines of it.

"I couldn't make up my mind to go, uninvited, and so I kep' waitin' for Leah to send across for me. I made certain she would, but when she didn't, even then I couldn't give it up. I was so sorry for Leah, and my heart was so sore to look at Little Benjie's face again. I couldn't stan' it, so I wrote a note to Leah, askin' if I could come—if she'd forget the quarrel as I would, and let us begin again beside Little Benjie. Oh, the Lord in Heaven knows I tried to say it right! He knows I wasn't uppish a mite, nor anything but humble and sorrowin'. I said: 'Forgive me, Leah, and not a word about my forgivin' her—not a word, though 'twasn't me began the quarrel. Well, I sent the note across by Mis' Daggett's little boy. I've been waitin' all day for an answer. It hasn't come yet, but I haven't give up."

The little room was quiet save for the soft rustle when Diantha Berry turned a leaf. At the top of the new page she began again:

"I've give up. Leah ain't goin' to answer my letter. It's most night now, and I sent it across yesterday mornin' when Mis' Daggett's little boy went past to school. She don't want me to come over—and to-morrow mornin' they'll bury Little Benjie! I shan't ever see his face again!"

a man. And I can hear how Diantha laughed. She couldn't have been much fonder of Little Benjie—she always called him Little Benjie—if he'd have been her own boy. But afterward—afterward, when he laid still and cold, in his blue clothes, she forgot she'd ever loved him. She forgot then. If he'd been her own boy, would she have forgot? Would she have kept away from him then because of a little foolish quarrel?"

In the bitterness of her soul, Leah Swallow flung out her arms and cried out sharply. The rough motion tortured her pain-racked body, but she scarcely felt it.

"Benjie! Benjie!" she moaned. "Benjie—mother's boy, why didn't I hold you back? I need you so. Why did I let you go? Weren't there other boys enough? Weren't there boys whose mothers had other boys at home? And you were all I had, Benjie! We thought it was so fine, dear—the soldier clothes and the sound o' the band playin' the 'Red, White and Blue,' and the glory of settin' Cuba free. I thought it was fine, too, but now—oh, Benjie, my little brave soldier Benjie!"

The kind mantle of the dark shut in the poor little mother, with her grief.

The 29th of May was raw and wet, but the morning of the 30th dawned clear. The world, washed clean of its stains, shook off its raindrops, like jewels, in the sun. A choir of little birds sang a high, sweet song—the "Star Spangled Banner," was it—in the apple orchard, and the little boys, trudging by, whistled war tunes. The Day of Remembrance found no one forgetting. The old, old graves, and the new ones—so terribly new!—awaited their flags and flowers, side by side.

Diantha Berry cut off her pink blossoms early before the sun touched them and laid them, one by one, in the little basket Benjie had liked. She cut with unstinted hand, choosing the fullest ones and the most perfect. One—two—three—she counted them aloud, as the scissors snipped through their slender stems. She had made up her mind to give Little Benjie 15 of the beautiful clusters. Benjie

STARVING TO DEATH.

Direful Results of the Famine Now Prevailing in India.

Millions of Men, Women and Children Are Dying by Inches in City and Country—Disaster Caused by Drought.

[Special Correspondence.]

ABOVE the noise of everyday events, the clamor of political intriguers, the din of more or less reputable warfare, the cry of starving India, increasing in volume from day to day, so demands for itself a hearing that it can no longer be disregarded. How much longer the lives of white men in the outlying districts will be safe, while the natives are experiencing death in its most ghastly forms, is a question which is beginning to agitate that portion of the public mind which is personally interested in the fate of that unhappy country. White men are already regarded by the ignorant classes as responsible for a great amount of the suffering; but, while there may be grounds for complaint, it is certain that no nation would have accomplished more than has England while laboring at such a disadvantage. Of course, mistakes have been made. In the distant past, conditions, to a certain extent, righted themselves. During years of drought, followed by famine, the population was so decimated that in the succeeding years of plenty there was an their inhumanity by the sense of rectitude bestowed by an approving conscience. Probably the inclination to aid never suggests itself, they are so hedged in by religious regulations which, viewed in a certain light, are certainly monstrous. There are some among us who prefer the teachings of Buddha to those of Christ, but if they would for a time leave the contemplation of some of the finer points of the Hindoo religion and study the details as they affect the people more, there would certainly be a diminished number of followers in the wake of some not overly clean looking East Indians who have secured for themselves notoriety in our large cities during the last few years. While wealthy Hindoos are comfortably following the dictates of their morally famine-stricken consciences and refusing the help they could so easily render to the poor of their own land, Christian missionaries are doing all within their power to alleviate the suffering. By the aid of native preachers they gather in all the famishing children possible and care for them. The English government is doing its utmost, but the people often refuse to be placed on the relief list until too weak to recover. The viceroy recently declared that conditions are steadily growing worse. The plague is spreading alarmingly and another drought is threatened. He announces his intention to spend all the money in the treasury for the relief of the sufferers. Outside contributions have been made, but available funds are inadequate to meet demands.

A full-grown man at the relief works may only receive four cents per day.

abundance for all. But, as it was noted that the drought usually affected but one or two provinces at a time, the government caused the poorer people to be moved around from place to place, thus preserving life, until, at present, in a territory but little over half as large as the United States, there is a population of 300,000,000 of people. During the last two years the drought has become general and now 130,000,000 are suffering from the famine which, with slow insistence, seems likely to desolate the entire country. In its wake follow bubonic plague, cholera and smallpox. The germs of all these diseases find the best of soil for development in the feverish, impoverished bodies of the starving people. And now the water supply has become so short that, with the limited means of transportation, it is difficult to send a sufficient supply into the localities where it is entirely exhausted However, five cents daily will keep a Hindoo alive indefinitely, for, in his land, the supporting of life on a minimum of cheapest food has been reduced to an art. A few grains of rice, supplemented with roots and grass seed, will furnish him a fair meal. When the garrison of the British fort at the siege of Lucknow were reduced to daily rations of four ounces of corn made into gruel, some of the Hindoo auxiliaries offered to live for a week on the water in which the corn was boiled. If the whole civilized world would unite in the work of assisting people who are satisfied with so little the worst features of this famine, the details of which are too horrible to describe or read, would be alleviated.

To their abstemiousness, the English are largely indebted for the loyalty of the native soldiers. Each man knows that when his time of usefulness has expired the government guarantee of a pension sufficient to purchase a yearly suit of white cotton, and rice for his daily meals; is assurance of a sufficient provision for his old age. The religion of the country prohibits the use of animal food. As available funds of the relief committee are only sufficient to reach about 15 per cent. of the sufferers it is feared that wandering groups may resolve themselves into armies of bandits who, having disposed of their homes through want, will for years constitute a menace to the safety of the more fortunate inhabitants of India.

The suffering seems to be largely among the agricultural classes, of which 80 per cent. of the population of India is composed. Large sections of the arable lands depend entirely for their productiveness upon irrigation, the source of which is in rivers and streams which are supplied by rains. Every recorded Indian famine may be traced to failure of rainfall. A number of years ago the Indian forester announced his theory that the responsibility for droughts might be placed upon the great herds of goats (sometimes 15,000 or 20,000), always apparently starving, which attack the shoots of every young tree in the course of their depredations. Thus when old trees die off there are no young ones to take their places. Rains, which depend so largely upon the existence of forests, fall short, then famine and plague follow. The early rains come in June, are known as the southwest monsoons and originate in vapors drawn from the Indian ocean and the Arabian sea. Breaking on the Malabar coast for three months, they may be expected to flood India, the average fall of water being about 100 inches. At such times crops are abundant. But when these rains fail, as was the case last year, famine is the result.
