SAVED HER CALICO.

An Instance of Joe Wheeler's Kind-Heartedness During the Civil War.

During the civil war there was a town in Tennessee that became very familiar with both the union and the confederate armies. Sometimes the town was under control of one and sometimes of the other, says Outlook. The town had an equal number of union and confederate sympathizers, who named the principal streets Jeff Davis and Lincoln streets, the people living on these streets taking this way of expressing their attachments. Each army, as it passed through the town, took from its enemies all it could get. Sometimes the soldiers made mistakes, and took from their friends. One day a detachment of confederate cavalry followed a detachment of union soldiers through proprietor of which was a southerner, who had hidden from the union

This was quite an expensive dress, then, for calico was sold at one dollar a yard, and was not easy to get even at that price. When the soldier took this calico and threw it across his horse and rode away, the little them fight. girl cried so hard that a young offi-ow an Army Changed Its Base Under Cover During the Civil War.

"Some of the boys," said the ser-geant, in the Chicago Inter Ocean, "wonder how it is possible for the Boers in the Orange Free State to conceal their movements from the British. This skillful covering of an army's movements from the enemy seems to be regarded by the rising generation as something new in military warfare, but it isn't. We had several striking examples of this maneuver in our civil war, notably in 1862. After Buell's army had marched from Louisville across Kentucky and Tennessee, had fought in the battle at Shiloh and at Corinth, it drifted eastward in June and July through Mississippi and Alabama toward Chattanooga. "About the middle of August our division settled down into a camp at Mc-Minnville, as quiet as an ordinary country village. The boys believed that Bragg was between them and Chattanooga, but they were not excited about it. On the evening of the 23d of August orders were issued to strike tents, pack all the baggage in wagons and burn all surplus stores. We moved on the morning of the 24th south 25 miles to Altamont, where we met other the town. They entered a store the divisions and were kept in line of battle for two days. On the 26th we returned to McMinnville and went into our old camp. On the 29th it was reported. that McMinnville would be fortified and that our division would remain there permanently. That night we were hurried into line and marched rapidly toward Murfreesboro, and it leaked out that Gen. Bragg had crossed the mountains to our left and had put his whole army in motion toward Nashville or toward Kentucky. "The enemy's movements had been so completely covered that up to the last minute Gens. Buell and Thomas had been in doubt as to Bragg's objective point. They both believed that miles toward the same city, Louisville. a little girl of 12, who had frequently The men in the ranks were not in- treme outer ledge, and a fragrant cigar played southern airs when southern formed as to the object of the forced perfuming the surrounding atmoswere several yards of calico, which the splendid army that had swept the hills of the old New Hampshire

TRUTH.

Not in my way nor in your way Does the cause of Truth march on; Yet each age has more of progress Than the ages that have gone; And from its inverted shadow Wheels the earth into the dawn.

Often by the storms of passion We are torn and temptest-tossed; Often do our plans miscarry, Oft our purposes are crossed; Oft we bow our heads in anguish, Crying out that all is lost.

But the morrow breaks in glory And the morning sunshine smiles, Gleaming off into the distance Unto golden afterwhiles, Where the Future glints and glistens

Over Fortune's happy isles.

Back of our short-sighted wisdom Stands the thought Omnipotent; Back of all our puny scheming Waits the foreordained event; Oft what seems to us an evil Is a blessing heaven-sent.

God is reigning, and His justice Will prevail, whate'er betide; There are silent, unseen forces Unto Truth that are allied; And the legions of the angels Aid us from the other side.

Not in my way nor in your way Comes the triumph of the right, But resistlessly as morning. Steals on the reluctant night, Till the air is filled with music And the world is filled with light.

Not in my way nor in your way

Comes the triumph of the right, But resistlessly as morning Steals on the reluctant night, Till the air is filled with music

And the world is filled with light. There are voices from the Silence, Soft as sweep of seraph's wings; From the secret soul of being God's eternal mandate springs; And the world moves on forever To the goal of better things. -Denver News.

"My dearf" checked Mrs. Cope, gently.

"My dear madam!" erled Mr. Peterson, still with his eyes fixed on Jeannie's lovely face, "I assure you I think it is an excellent ideal"

And all through their journey from cellar to French roof, while Mrs. Cope considered the relative advantages of this room and that, Mr. Peterson kept revolving this same "excellent idea" in Grass Lake, "Miss Jeannie," he said, somewhat awkwardly, as they turned downstairs, "supposing I should — ahem — adopt your suggestion, what would be your

"You like blue?"

why she cried. A neighbor, a young girl of 20, hurried across the street, and told the officer that a soldier had taken the calico intended for the little girl's dress. The officer called the men to "Halt!" He demanded that the man who had taken the calico should immediately bring it to him.

A burly soldier got off his horse and, looking ashamed, handed the booty to his officer, who, with a bow, gave it to the little girl. She could hardly believe her good fortune when she held the calico in her arms. This young officer became the celebrated Gen. "Joe" Wheeler.

VENERABLE WAR NURSE.

"Mother Stewart," of Ohio, Celebrates Her Eighty-Fourth Birthday.

Probably no woman in Ohio is octter known than "Mother Stewart," as Mrs. Eliza D. Stewart, of Springfield, is affectionately called, who celebrated her eighty-fourth birthday anniversary a few days ago.

"As a speaker on temperance subjects," said a Woman's Christian Temperance union officer the other day, "her influence upon her audience is so powerful that she has been called a 'Wendell Phillips in petticoats,' and even now, from her invalid's couch, her letters give inspiration to those who are working in her beloved cause."

Among her most highly prized possessions is a framed certificate bearing official signatures and testifying to the valuable services she rendered in the field hospitals of the civil war. She has also a pass, signed by Gen. Thomas and given to her in those days, admitting her through the lines at any time. In her room is a framed copy of the song: "Sherman's March to the Sea," written and signed by the author. Her war reminiscences would fill a large volume. She well recalls standing on a picket guard in Athens, O., all night, while the men were employed in felling trees and building fortifications.

The British Woman's Temperance association owes its origin to "Mother Stewart," who also introduced the blue ribbon pledge work among the colored people of Virginia in 1878. Her active work for temperance began in 1858 and continued until 1895, when she went as a delegate to the world's Woman's Christian Temperance union convention in London, her expenses being paid by Lady Aberdeen.

The Hypocrite,

An officer lost his leg in battle. After he had suffered amputation with the greatest courage he saw his servant crying, or pretending to cry, in one corner of the room.

"None of your hypocritical tears, you idle dog!" said the master. "You know you are very glad, for now you will have only one boot to clean, instead of two." -London Tit-Bits.

neither guard nor officer, the thirstymen ran to and into the fountain. As the foot of one man touched the water and he stooped to fill his canteen, the officer on horseback said, quietly but peremptorily: 'Take your foot out.' The indignant soldier, looking up, said wrathfully: 'Shut up; no blanked quartermaster's elerk can give orders to me.

"The officer put spurs to his horse, and in an instant horse and rider rose in the air and came down almost on the stooping soldier and the words were repeated: 'Take your foot outnow.' Looking up, the man saw that the order came from Gen. Buell himself. For hours the general commanding the army of the Ohio sit there on his horse guarding the precious water. saying occasionally: 'Thirty thousand men must drink here to-day, boys, and the spring must not be fouled.' The men accepted this as a sign that a bat tle was imminent.

"There was artillery firing all the afternoon, but no battle, and again we went hurrying forward. The next day we marched 35 miles and went into camp at midnight, to have half rations of flour issued, with orders to cook before daylight. Many men threw the flour away in disgust. Others gathered up clapboards and flat stones and tried to bake in that way. Our captain, who had been used to roughing it, wrapped a great mass of dough in oak leaves and buried it in the ashes of our rail fire. He produced a large cake, rather dirty, but well baked, and everybody tried the scheme."

He had just tossed his cigar out of the window, with the intention of himself hastening to the rescue when a servant girl came up to his apartment, breathless and eager.

"What is it, Hannah?" he cried, iraseibly.

"If ye please, sir, the mistress is gone to market, and there's no one to show the house. I told 'em would they call again, but they said perhaps Mr. Peterson would oblige 'em!

"Very cool of 'em, upon my word! cried Mr. Peterson, mentally execrating the whole race of house hunters. "I beg your pardon, Mr. Peterson," cried a voice as soft and sprightly as the notes of the bluebird, "but mamma and I have so many places to go to, and we thought you wouldn't mind our seeing the house!"

And Mr. Peterson's wrath melted away like a morning vapor before her pretty insolence of demeanor, as she stood in the doorway, balancing a fairy parasol on her finger, and looking with saucy artlessness round his bachelor sanctum, while Mrs. Cope's matronly countenance appeared in the back-

"You can allow us the privilege of looking at your house," said Jeannie, coaxingly. "I-that is, mamma has got to move, and although the rent of this house must, of course, be very high, she thought, by taking a few boarders she might contrive to meet expenses!"

"Exactly so," said mild Mrs. Cope. "Are you going to move elsewhere?" asked Jeannie of our hero, as she glanced at the half-packed trunks. "My landlady is," groaned Mr. Petro Peterson. "It's awful to be at the mercy of a landlady, Miss Cope!"

"But it's all your fault!" "All my fault?"

"To be sure-why didn't you get married?"

"Because I was a fool!" "And why don't you get married now?" pursued the relentless little sprite. "Would you," questioned Mr. Peter-, gravely, "if you were 1?"

"Of course I would. Get married and board with us. Mamma will give you this room, and-"

"You, uncle?" exclaimed Franklin, in amazement.

"And why not?" testily demanded Mr. Petro Peterson, his bald head turning pink with excitement. "I'm not Methuselah. Why shouldn't I get married?"

"There's no reason on earth why you shouldn't, uncle," responded Joe, smothering a laugh; "only, you see, you took me rather by surprise. In that case why shouldn't we have the pleasure of accommodating both Mrs. Peterson and yourself?"

"Because, sir," said Mr. Peterson, sententiously, "because my mother-in-law that is to be takes boarders, sir, a few boarders in a genteel sort of way, and I've all but promised myself to her." "'All but.' There is a chance, then, of-"

"A very slender one," unwillingly admitted Mr. Peterson.

"And if you should make no other ar-house?"

"Y-yes, I suppose so." "There can be no harm in my bringing her to look at the house this afternoon after office hours?" "No, I suppose not."

He was making a little pencil estimate about the probable cost of refurnishing the apartments he occupied with velvet and satin, according to Jeannie's not particularly economical ideas, that entered, flushed and proud.

"She's down in the parlor, uncle." "In a minute. Twelve and sixteen, and-there, then, Joe, how can a man add up his accounts with you stamping round the room like a wild buffalo? Yes, yes, I'll go down and see her, and then perhaps I shall have a little peace of my life."

He followed his nephew resignedly down to the parlor, thinking the while of far other things, and suffered himself to be led to a little sofa in the bay window, where a slender young lady was sitting, toying rather nervously with a pink parasol

"Uncle," said Joe, proudly, "this is my promised wife, Jeannie, this Uncle Petro Peterson."

"Jeannie Cope!" gasped the aston ished bachelor.

"You'll give me a kiss, uncle, won't you?" said Jeannie, putting up her coral lips in the most bewitching way in the world. "I said it was mamma this morning; but it was really Joe and I that wanted the house."

"It was, ch?" said Mr. Peterson, with a curious commingling of sensations.

"Yes, and you know you promised to get married and board with us. He did, Indeed, Joe."

"I was only joking. Married, indeed! I'm not such a fool yet. I'll stay here, but I'll not refurnish the rooms this year."

So the bill was taken off the front door; and Mrs. Joseph Franklin has earned to make an omelet that suits the fastidious taste of her uncle-inaw.

"And it's just as well that fate saved me from making a fool of myself," says Mr. Peterson, exultantly.-N. Y. News.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN.

The young women of Flushing, N. Y., have formed what is known as a board of strategy to assist members to secure the young men of their choice as husbands.

Mrs. Ruth Schaffner-Etnier has been appointed by Dr. G. G. Groff, the educational commissioner for Porto Rico, inspector of education for the district of Ponce, including over 40 schools. Mrs. Schaffner-Etnier is the first woman selected for such a position in the island.

About ten years ago the alumnae of Vassar college organized the "Vassar Students' Aid society." The object was to give girls who could not afford it a college education, and equip them rangement you will let us have the for teachers. It is said by the faculty that the "aid students" have been among the very best, and the accomplishments of these girls, in the way of returning the loans, and helping younger members of their family through college, are wonderful.

Hair ornaments are being worn more than ever and numerous are the pretty and ingenious devices to hold short hair in place and to aid in the arrangesame afternoon, when Joseph Franklin ment of the coiffure. Empire combs are still popular, and pompadour combs have not disappeared, but the "hair binder." as the clasp for the short hairs is called, is worn universally. Imitation or real shell horseshoes, with rhinestone decoration, are a favorite design, and snakes abound in metal and shell.

Eight young Mexican women, lately graduated from the normal class of a school at Xcalpa, Mex., are making a tour of the United States to investigate the school systems of the principal cities. Their chaperon is an American woman, Miss Harriet C. Fay. The party includes two sons of Gov. de h' Esa, of the state of Vera Cruz, and two other gentlemen. The state of Vera Cruz, through its governor, is paying all the expenses of the tour, believing that in the end it will be richly repaid for its investment.

urvival of the Fittest in House Furnishing Follows Experience in Unpleasant Features.

To one unaccustomed to tropical conditions, the furnishing of the Porto Rican home would at first sight seem meager, but it is quite ample, says Harper's Bazar. A short residence will demonstrate that nearly 500 years of experience with the unpleasant features of life in the West Indies have been crowned by a survival of the fittest in furnishing as in other matters. Austrian bent-wood furniture and willow ware constitute the main equipment of the parlors and living rooms. Upholstered furniture is unknown and undesired, little or no attempt being made at decoration, except in the matter of embroidery and fine hand-made lace work. Hundreds of yards of crochet work are used in the embellish-

An amusing incident, which shows that animals are subject to feelings very like those which occasionally rufthe constantly recurring mounds of fie the bosoms of men, occurred some yellow sand which everywhere dot, little time ago at the Jardin des Plantes and, it must be confessed, disfigure in Paris, says Youth's Companion.

A large elephant, formerly the center of attraction, found himself supplanted in public favor by a new arrival -a young camel. The camel was the latest acquisition, and very naturally engaged the attention of visitors.

The elephant for a long time showed signs of dissatisfaction, and at last its jealousy reached a point where it must find expression. When the usual crowd gathered about the camel, the elephant prepared for action. It filled its trunk with water, and with deliberate aim discharged the water all over the people who stood looking at the baby camel.

This method of throwing cold water upon the admirers of a rival brought a laugh even from its victims.

Equally wise in making its calculations was a cat that chose a peculiar spot for a bed. Comfort was the cat's object, and the chosen spot did not seem to be calculated to afford it. The cat was found fast asleep in a large shipbuilding yard, lying on what seemed to be a very muddy path.

It was found, however, that the spot chosen by the cat for its couch was the point at which a lot of steam pipe passed under the road, so that the mud was baked into a warm, dry clay, which made not only a clean but an artificially heated sleeping place.

With all the juggler growths and magical buddings and burgeonings in this latest forcing house of fortune, one looks confidently for some typical effect in humanity. It is inevitable, says Scribner's, that an environment so strikingly original should stamp if impress upon the indweller, and the result is a type peculiar to the gold field: a type in which the brain courage of the schools and of the battle ground of the market place is fairly crossed with the body fitness of the pioneer. In the gnome-masters, and in their masters, the men of affairs, the type is well defined. You recognize it in passing and instinctively lift your hat. For it is the apotheosis of all that is strongest and most undaunted, and perhaps all that is least malleable and most selfassertive, in our composite nationality. At a dinner given by the alumna of one of the older universities a short time since, there were 60 covers laid, and no empty chairs. If the alumna of all the colleges represented in the sixmile by ten district could have been guests at this dinner, it is conceivable that not all the inn-tables of the town could have seated them.

An English Baronet's Son Was Bitten and Died of Blood Poisoning.

Blood poisoning frequently occurs in cases of wounds from the teeth or claws of animals, especially those that feed wholly or in part on putrid flesh, and it is easy to understand that, in the cases of such species as eat only game of their own killing, there must be traces of their feasts, in the shape of shreds of animal matter, left adhering to their claws and teeth to decay and become poisonous in time It is for this reason that few men have fell out a bought the sum of $25. who have been "mauled"-as the English express it-by lions or tigers ever recover from their injuries. Arguing along the same lines, it is possible that the number of deaths on record from the bite of the western skunk, or "hydrophobia cat," may be traceable to blood poisoning rather than the rabies. The skunk seems to have a mania for biting people, but in this respect he is not unique. The common house rat where allowed to become overbold from their numbers, frequently nibbles at the fingers, ears or toes of sleepers in dark rooms. Astor Chanler's Commendable Method of Protecting a Girl from Insolent Conduct.

One day not long ago Représentative William Aston Chanler was riding in an open car on Broadway in New York, says an exchange of that city. In front of him sat a young and pretty girl. Into the seat with her stepped a burly negro, who soon began to annoy her with his rude stares. Chanler carried a light cane. With the cane he touched the negro on the shoulder.

"Don't do that," he remarked, in a quiet but firm tone, and the negro glared angrily at him. A moment later the annoying attentions were resumed. Once again Chanler touched the negro with his cane.

"Don't do that," he remarked. "I really do not like it."

"And who the devil are you?" said the colored man, angrily.

Chanler laid his cane on the chair. Then he arose, seized the negro by the shoulder, threw him bodily into the street while the car was running at high speed, settled back again in his teat, lighted a cigarette and smiled.

Law Case.

One of the most remarkable documents that have ever been under our observation, says Law Notes, is to be found in the case of ex-parte Scoggin, 6 Tex. App. 546. Mr. Scoggin was under indictment for the murder of one William Gerrard, and an extract from a memorandum book in defendant's handwriting and found near the body ran as follows: "Johnson Co., Tx., Jan. the 24, 1875. "As this may be the last penciling that I may ever do on earth, May heaven Bless me, and the man that I am going to fite, for we have been traveling togeather some time and and have agreed to fight a dewel this Butiful night of our lord, and as one sides, it always remains transparent of us has to die May heaven bless us as this is the last half hour on earth with one of us, heven Preserve me now and forever-written by Jesse Scog-, Bornd and rased in Tx. In the suburb of Giencoe stands the largest and probably the oldest oak tree in Cook county. It towers many feet above the other trees of the north shore and can be seen from a distance of miles in any direction. The tree is on property owned by George F. Orde, the cashier of the Northern Trust Company bank. It stands only a few feet back of the Instead of the wildcat the trap caught street, a block and a half east of the Northwestern railway on Central avenue, the first street running toward the lake north of Glencoe station. The "monarch," as it is called by old residents of the sub b, measures 17 feet in circumference, over five feet in diameter and is estimated to be about 75 feet tall.

"I can notice but little difference in the size of that tree from the time when I first saw it," said Frank Newhall, the patriarch of Glencoe, who first settled in the suburb a generation ago and who still owns 100 acres in the town. "Oak trees grow slowly. When I saw this tree, which is a low. QUARTZ BETTER THAN GLASS. Its Use May Become Extensive When High Refractory Power Is Needed.

It is well known that quartz becomes pasty before it melts, and M. A. Dufour has therefore tried to work it like or dinary glass, says the New York Press. The point at which it begins to soften is between 1,000 degrees and 1,200 degrees, the temperature of the interior of the oxyhydrogen blowpipe flame. The working of quartz has shown itself to be perfectly feasible, and it may become an important substance where a highly refractory body is required which has a definite chemical constitution, is not hygrometric, cannot be oxidized and cannot easily be reduced. Be-and does not, like glass, evolve gases on melting. A thermometer tube of quartz was constructed and filled with tin. It worked well between 240 degrees and 580 degrees. The walls of the bulb had to be thick, as the solidifying tin otherwise pulled them together. Quartz vacuum tubes which may possibly not occlude gases in their walls are now being made. It would then be possible to test the question as to what is the actual vehicle of vacuum discharges. Perhaps there is also an opening for incandescent lamps made of quartz.

Mr. Nye, of Hopbottom, Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, has a domestithat something was carrying off his poultry. He suspected a wildcat, and he set a trap to catch the marauder. a fox, and the farmer promptly dispatched it, says the New York Press. Hardly had he done so when a little baby fox came out from the brush and moaned piteously around its dead mother. The farmer took it home. Refusing the food offered it the little fox was in a fair way to starve to death when Mrs. Nye had a bright idea. One of the ewes had been robbed of her young by the wildcats, and the little fox was carried to the bereaved ewe to receive nourishment. The fox throve amazingly on sheep's milk, and the strange foster mother formed a strong attachment for the little fel-

Hetty Green was recently induced to talk to a writer for Ladies' Home Journal of her business methods that have won her $60,000,000 or more. The secret of her success is worth knowing: "I don't believe in speculation as a rule," she says, "and I don't speculate as much as people think. Chinese Dressmakers.

The sewing, as well as dressmaking, is all done by men tailors in China. There are many amusing stories told of them as copyists of the American's way of making up garments. A friend has need of a dozen undergarments. As she came over on shipboard a button was lost, and an exceedingly clumsy and ugly one replaced the lost one, which was of pearl. On reaching Shanghai she desired a tailor to copy from this garment, which was placed in his hands as a model. He brought back the garments, exquisite creations in lace and tucked muslin, and each of the dozen adorned with a button exactly like the one on the sample garment. Upon having his attention called to the ugly button, his reply wes: "Likee missy," and he was great-ly disappointed that his efforts to please were not appreciated. He had spent many hours in search for "likee" buttons, and no doubt was greatly disgusted with the unreasonableness of the foreign lady .- Alice Hamilton Rich, in Woman's Home Companion.

At a meeting of the Scottish Border Counties' association, held at the Free Masons' tavern, Sir James Crichton Brown, the chairman, said that Gen. Cronje was of Scottish descent, and had relatives now living in a border county. Cronje was the Dutch rendering of the name McCrone. Gen. Cronje's father was born at Ebuchencairn, and his mother came from the Haugh-of-Urr, so that he was really a Galloway man, and it was curious to note that the system of warfare which he practiced in South Africa, by foray, ambush, surprise and retreat, was actually that of the raiders. The Galloway men had al-ways been distinguished by their mo-bility when "lifting" cattle, and this was favored by the exceptional length of their legs, and by the possession of Galloway nags-mentioned by Shake-speare—the prototypes of the Basuto ponies.—London Standard.

TOBACCO SMOKE AND HAIR.

Women Should Avoid the Fumes of the Nasty Weed to Save

Their Tresses.

Women who desire to prevent their hair from falling out are advised by a medical journal to keep away from tobacco smoke. The pretty young wife -perhaps she is mythical, howeverwho sits by her husband's side when he smokes and holds the matches or his cigars and pipes and tells him how she loves the smell of smoke in her parlor curtains and that the odor is much more attractive than that of violets when it lingers in her hair, as it is sure to do if she stays long in the room in the smoke, has got to give up this amiable habit of hers if she wishes to keep her hair and not become entirely bald, says an exchange.

There was one young woman, a mode el of wifely devotion and with all the good traits a nice, comfortable wife should have, who was obliged to go to the hairdresser's the other day to consult an expert upon what could be the matter with her beautiful tresses. She had an unusually beautiful head of hair, long and thick and curly, and beside which the hair of the seven sisters who use a certain hair restorer or preserver and adorn windows to show its results was as a candle to an electric light. All this beautiful hair was coming out and no one could tell what was the trouble. But the hair expert could. It was all tobacco smoke. He said that it was very bad for the hair and that if the young wife persisted in assisting her husband in his daily smokes she would be very likely to lose it all.

Woman's Status in France. The cause of woman has received a severe blow in Paris, the center of politeness! At a recent election of a committee in the Societe des Gens de Lettres there were four women candidates, all of whom were defeated. It is not easy to induce the French mind to accord recognition to feminine talent. It was a Frenchman who said: "Women go into literature as a cat plays with a mouse-glancing around to see if any-

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I-Scene of story is in New Tork city. Time, early evening, last day of year. Cable train collides with cab, throwing to ground cabman and passen-ger also seated outside. Latter disappears; then, inside the cab, body of man shot dead is discovered. Sturgis, reporter, ex-amines cab and surroundings.

CHAPTER II-Later that evening, at stag dinner party, Sturgis, in impromptu discussion, maintains reliability of cir-cumstantial evidence. Dr. Murdock, fa-mous chemist, wagers in reply $5,000 to $100 that from any daily paper he can select an unsolvable riddle. Sturgis takes bet.

unsolvable riddle. Sturgis takes bet. CHAPTER III-Case selected is of two mysterious shots fired that afternoon in or near Knickerbocker bank. Man had been seen running from bank with vallse, and arrested. Man said he stole vallse from bank steps and was shot at. Vallse contained nothing of interest. CHAPTER IV-Sturgis secures appoint-ment with Dunlap; president of bank, to visit scene of shooting early next morning, then induces his friend Dr. Thurston to come to his rooms while he arranges data of the two strange cases. CHAPTER V-Erom observations made CHAPTER V-From observations made thus far and inductive reasoning thereon reporter has concluded: (1) dead man in reporter has concluded: (1) dead man in cab was bookkeeper about 50 years old re-ceiving good salary; (2) wound caused uy builet fired at close quarters; (3) might have shot himself; (4) shooting had not occurred in cab; (5) right arm broken by heavy instrument; and (6) cabman was drugged, and young man who escaped in-volved in some way in crime. Cab mys-tery also noted as possible sequel to bank mystery. mystery.

CHAPTER VIII-Miss Murdock's final charling for portrait induces artist to ask privilege of calling at her home, which she readly grants. Bellboy brings note for Agnes. This is read with evident annoy-ance, and she drops it. It remains forgot-ten when she leaves studio.

PIECING THE EVIDENCE.

Sturgis was still busy with his diagram. He spoke without looking up from his work.

"What, Thatham his ' accomplice ?" xclaimed Dunlap, faintly.

"Chatham was in the plot beyond a doubt," answered Sturgis. "So long as no one had access to the books except his accomplice Chatham, of course Arbogast felt secure. But when, yesterday, the announcement was made that after the beginning of the new year his books would pass to the custedy of another man, he saw that the game was up."

The men had returned to the prestident's office.

"Those are his very words," continued the reporter; "those he telegraphed to Chatham yesterday, as you will see if you hold before that mirror this the vestibule and leaving the outer sheet of blotting paper which I found door ajar, as Quinlan found it a few on Arbogast's desk." door ajar, when he stole the satch-

"I mean to say that I do not see anything to which I can attach any semblance of a meaning. The blotting paper has been used, and, of course, there are ink marks upon it; but, as far as I can see, these are wholly disconnected. They are entirely void of sense to my eyes, at any rate."

"Very well," agreed Dunlap, who then proceeded to read off the letters that Chatham would have waited for he saw in the reflection of the blotter in the mirror.

When he had finished, Sturgis handed him the paper, upon which were transcribed the letters he had dictated? They presented the appearance shown

"I am quite willing to concede so much; for no business man would be likely to write a telegram differently." "Very well. Now, then, let me hold this blank so that the reflection of its vertical rulings may appear just above the image of the message. These lines, remember, separate the words of the message. Extend them mentally, and note how they divide the letters of the blotter. Will you hold these sheets while I transcribe the result?" In a few minutes more the reporter had drawn several lines on his copy of the reflection in the mirror. "I don't see that you are any better off now than you were before," remarked Dunlap, examining the result. "Wait a minute. These vertical lines, we say, divide the words of the message. There are five words to the line; only two on the last line before the signature; that is to say, 12 words in the message. Now, consider the first word. Evidently the 'G' begins this Arbogast was delayed in leaving the bank. Perhaps the necessary prepara-tions for his flight took longer than he expected."

"You think he intended to abscond?" "Why should he have changed the combination of his safe, as he did, if not to give himself as much time as possible to reach a place of comparative safety before the books could be examined?" asked Sturgis. "Chatham, becoming impatient, forgot the dictates of prudence and started for the bank to 4scertain the cause of his accomplice's delay. He met Arbogast at the Wall street door. The two men reentered, Arbogast setting down his satchel in el. I have every reason to believe that telephone, and he did so."

"Your story is connected, and it is certainly not lacking in details," said Dunlap, incredulously; "in fact, the details are far too abundant for the evidence thus far advanced." "Every one of the details is based upon facts," replied Sturgis. "What I have accomplished thus far has been simple enough, because luck has favored us. Yesterday being cleaning day at the bank, the floors were scrubbed some time during the afternoon, before Arbogast was ready to leave and before Chatham had arrived. It thus happens that almost every footstep of the two men has remained wet floors, which have since dried, preserving the record. The detectives last night obliterated a portion of this record, but they have left traces enough for our purpose. If you care to crawl around on all fours as I did you can readily distinguish these traces for vourself."

"No, thank you," answered the banker. "I prefer to take your word for this part of the evidence."

"Then I shall resume my story," said Sturgis. "The footprints show that scrubbing was going on. We may safely say it was after half-past four o'clock when he started to leave the bank; for otherwise it is presumable him at the corner of South and Wall streets, as he was asked to do in the bookkeeper's telegram. He first walked over to the safe and closed it, changing the combination, so that the lock could not be opened until he had had a fair start. Next he went to the clerks' room for his hat and coat and for the satchel in which he had packed just the few recessities for immediate use in his flight. He started to leave the building through the Exchange place door; but probably remembered that the Wall street door was not locked, and went back to lock it. As he was about to close the outer door, "It is not a question of imagination," Chatham arrived on the scene, and the His Part In the Quarrel.

bookkeeper has another."

"You mean the bookkeeper who sits at the desk at the extreme right in the bookkeepers' department?"

"Yes," replied Dunlap, "that is Mr. Arbogast's desk. Do you know him?" "No. What did you say the gentleman's name is?" The reporter looked up and prepared to make a note of it. "John W. Arbogast."

"A man something over 50 years of age, quite bald, with a fringe of gray hair; wears a heavy mustache and side whiskers; and had on yesterday afternoon, when you last saw him, a pepperand-salt business suit," said Sturgis, writing down the name in his notebook.

Dunlap stared at the reporter in amazement. Sturg's smiled slightly. "I met the gentleman yesterday afternoon," he explained.

"Oh, that accounts for it!" exclaimed the banker. "I see-but-but, then, how comes it that you did not know his name?"

"He did not tell me his name," said Sturgis, gravely, "and I did not know until just now that he was employed in the Knickerbocker bank. How long has he been with you?"

"Nearly 20 years; but only for the last five years as head bookkeeper."

"I suppose you have every confidence in his honesty?" asked the reporter, looking critically at the diagram before him.

"Of course. Such a position is not given to a man unless his record is excellent."

"And yet," observed the reporter, reflectively, "opportunity sometimes makes the thief."

"True; but the duty of a bank president is to reduce such opportunities to a minimum," said Dunlap, somewhat pompously.

"Quite so," assented Sturgis, "and this you accomplish by-"

"By having the books examined periodically," answered the banker, rubbing his hands together with calm satisfaction.

"I see," said the reporter, who had now finished his sketch. "Do the employes of the bank know when an examination of this kind is to be made?"

"They do not even know that such examinations are made. No one but the accountant and myself are in the secret; for the overhauling of the books is done entirely at night, after the bank is closed."

"Have the books been recently ex-amined?" asked Sturgis, carelessly. "Yes; only last week."

"Well?"

"They were found to be all right, as

"May I ask by whom?"

"By Murray & Scott, the expert accountants."

"Was the examination conducted by Mr. Murray or by Mr. Scott?" "By neither. For many years the work was done by one or the other of the members of the firm; but since their business has grown to its present proportions Messra Murray and Scott reno longer able togive personal attento anyone but ourselves." "You have not examined this safe?"

"Why, no; 1--" "If you have no objection, I should like to see the interior of that safe. I suppose, of course, you know the com-cash safe?" "Oh, yes; the combinations are changed every Saturday, and of course I am always informed of the new combination." "Then may I examine the bookkeepers' safe?"

"I see no objection to your doing so, if vou like.'

Dunlap seemed surprised at the reporter's request; but he rose and proceeded to the bookkeepers' department.

Sturgis followed an instant later. When the reporter came within sight of the safe, Dunlap was closely inspecting the lock. Presently he uttered an exclamation of surprise.

"What is it?" asked Sturgis.

"I don't understand it," said Dunlap. 'I cannot open the safe. The lock seems all right; but-"

"Perhaps the combination has been changed.

"Apparently it has," admitted the banker; "but how came it to be changed on a week day, and without my knowledge?"

"That is rather significant, isn't it?" suggested the reporter.

Presented - National Convention Completes Its Work and Adjourns Sine Die-Senator Jones Reelected Chairman of National Committee.

Kansas City, Mo., July 5 .- Amid scenes of tumultuous enthusiasm befitting such an event and such a day, the democratio ational convention began its sessions yesterday. Chairman Jones called the dele-ates to order and Rev. S. W. Neel offered address of welcome by Mayor Reed, of ddress of welcome by Mayor Reed, of Kasas City. The chain then introduced Gov. Thomas of Colorado as temporary chairman. A round of applause greeted Gov. Thomas as he ascended the platform. His severe arraignment of the "entrenched enemy" drew a ripple of applause, and as he proceeded his well-rounded sentences manifestations of approval. The declaration of independence was then read.

Afternoon Session.

The convention, at 4:50 o'clock, having no business to transact, because of the failure of the committees to report, took a recess until 8:30 p. m

The Philippines.

There Were Six Other Candidates We condemn and denounce the Philip-pine policy of the present administration. It has involved the republic in unnecessary war, sacrificed the republic in unnecessary noblest sons and placed the United States, previously known and applauded through-out the world as the champion of freedom, in the false and un-American position of crushing with military force the efforts of our former allies to achieve liberty and self-government.

Not Opposed to Expansion.

We are not opposed to territorial expan-sion when in takes in desirable territory which can be erected into states in the union and whose people are willing and fit to become American citizens. We favor trade expansion by every peaceful and legitimate means. But we are unalterably opposed to the seizing or purchasing of dis-tant islands to be governed outside the con-stitution and whose people can never become citizens.

The Paramount Issue.

The importance of other questions now pending before the American people is in no wise diminished, and the democratic party takes no backward step from its position on them, but the burning issue of im-perialism growing out of the Spanish war involves the very existence of the republic and the destruction of our free institutions. We regard it as the paramount issue of the campaign.

The Financial Plank.

We reaffirm and indorse the principles of the national democratic platform adopted at Chicago in 1896, and we reiterate the demand of that platform for an American financial system made by the American people for themselves, which shall restore and maintain a bimetallic price-level, and as part of such system the immediate restoration of the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the present legal ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the aid or consent of any other nation

Sympathy for Boers.

Believing in the principles of self-govern-ment and rejecting, as did our forefathers, the chain of monarchy, we view with in-dignation the purpose of England to overwhelm with force the South African republics. Speaking as we do for the entire American nation, except its republican of-fice holders, and for all free men everywhere, we extend our sympathy to the herole burghers in their unequal struggle to maintain their liberty and independence.

Eleven schooners took part in the race and the Idler ran away from the fleet and won easily. After that the Idler rested on its laurels and for a few seasons was used mainly for cruising purposes on the coast. 1876 Colgate again raced the yacht in several regattas, the most famous of which was the races for the Brenton reef cup, which the yacht won, and the following year in September the Idler won the Cape May race cup, defeating a large number of yachts. In 1882 A. J. Fisher, of the Chicago Yacht club, purchased the schooner and brought it to Chicago, where it became the best known of all yachts on the lake, and for a time was the only large private yacht in use.

Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois, Is Nominated for Vice President.

Kansas City, Mo., July 8.-The demo-cratic national ticket was completed Friday by the nomination of Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, for vice president. The nomination was made on the first balot. The other candidates presented were: David B. Hill, of New York; Charles A. Towne, of Minnesota; James Hamilton Lewis, of Washington state; Gov. John Walter Smith, of Maryland; Julian S. Carr, of North Carolina; Abraham W. Patrick, of Ohio.

Resolutions.

After the ticket had been completed there were resolutions passed. Two com-plimented the people of Kansas City for the way they had entertained the delegates and the convention. One empowered the national committee to fix the time and place for ordering the next national convention, on the same basis of representation as was had at this convention. Still another thanked the temporary and permanent chairman of the committee and the officers of the old national committee about to retire. Another one authorized the national committee to fill any vacancies that might occur in the ticket and fill any vacancies that might occur in the committees.

JESTER'S TRIAL BEGINS.

Hearing on the Charge of Murdering Young Gates 29 Years Ago Commences at New London, Mo.

NewLondon, Mo., July 10 .- The trial of Alexander Jester, charged with the murder of Gilbert W. Gates 29 years ago, began here Monday. A jury had not been secured when court adjourned in the evening. John W. Gates, the millionaire steel magnate, whose brother the dead man was, is not attending the trial, though he has been active in hunting evidence against the aged prisoner.

[Young Gates mysteriously disappeared while traveling from southern Kansas to his home in Illinois. A few weeks afterward Jester was arrested for his murder, the young man's wagon and other effects being found in Jester's possession. Jester broke jail, however, and nothing more was heard of him until about a year ago, when a sister, with whom he had quarreled, gave him up to the authorities. He was then living in Oklahoma City, O. T., under the name of W. A. Hill.]

IS DEDICATED.

The Northern Michigan Normal School at Marquette Formally Opened-Address by Dr. Small.

Marquette, July 4. - The new northern normal school at Marquette was dedicated Tuesday. The principal speaker of the day was Dr. Albion W. Small, head of the department of sociology in the University of Chicago. The title of his address was "A Message to Twentieth Century Democrats," which was a recital of educational, so-. cial and industrial problems uppermost in the public mind and a consideration of the manner in which he thought they could best be worked out. Dr. Albert Leonard, who had just assumed the joint presidency of three Michigan normal schools, was present and spoke briefly, outlining his plans for the institutions under his charge, particularly this school. President Perry F. Powers, of the state board of education, accepted the building from the contractors and architects and delivered the dedicatory address.

that I tried last year, Mrs. Jobsonthis is another year," said Mr. Jobson, severely. "It would be a mighty good scheme all around if you could eliminate that little habit you've got of casting up things that happened in the icthyosaurian period. When I say that there are going to be no more dinners served in this household after to-day until the 1st day of October I do not mean that we're not going to have any dinners. I suppose you'll at least do me the justice to admit that you've got enough to eat all these years, won't you?"

"But if there are to be no dinners here, how in the world-"

"This," said Mr. Jobson, with the air of a man who has got everything all arranged after long consideration, "is a matter that I've had in mind for a good many years, and now I'm going to put it into practice. Mrs. Jobson, it is barbarous and unnecessary for people living in these latitudes to cook and eat their dinners in their own houses during the torrid season. There's no sense in it. It is a wholly uncalled-for infliction upon the mistress of the establishment to demand of her that she stand over a cook and watch her when the mercury is hissing in the bulb, and it's not going to happen around here any more. We're going to take ber.' "Out?" inquired Mrs. Jobson. "Where?"

our dinners out until the 1st of Octo-

"At the restaurants," said Mr. Jobson. "You can meet me downtown every afternoon after office hours, and we can go to some restaurant of our mutual selection and get our dinner. Then we'll return to our cool house. and there'll be no dish washing and fooling around a stuffy kitchen or any other bother like that for you. It'll be a good thing in lots of ways, one of them being that we'll have a change of No.8-Detroit Night Express 5:20 a.m. diet, which everybody needs once in No. 36-Atlantic Express 7:15 a. m. awhile. We won't have to stick to any No. 12-Grand Rapids 10:40 a. m. one restaurant, but we'll give 'em all a No, 6-Express and Mail 8:15 p. m. try, and it'll be sort o' piquant to have dinner around at different places and amid different scenes every day. . It'll relieve the monotony tremendously, degree" is no better than anybody and the only thing I'm afraid of is that when we've been doing it until the 1st of October you'll be so enamored of view, altogether."

"But," said Mrs. Jobson, "don't you know how you have always disliked eating in restaurants, and how it annoys you to have to wait a little while for the waiter to serve you, and how-"

"No, Mrs. Jobson, I don't know anything of the sort," said Mr. Jobson, decisively. "You've got me mixed with ship, refusing the pennies. "I never somebody else. You just meet me at the office to-morrow at a little after nior, was looking on, and asked him four, and we'll go and have our first why he refused the change. "Coppers at the other tables to look around at are willing to pay well for anything him-and once more the waiter approached the Jobsons' table.

"Look-a-here," said Mr. Jobson to the waiter, "do we get anything to eat here, or don't we?"

"Yessuh. Ah'se uh-waitin' fo' yo'all's ohduh, suh," said the waiter. "Two regular dinners," said Mr. Job-

"Madam," said Mr. Jobson to Mrs. Jobson, rising sternly and taking his hat, "we shall take our immediate departure from this place," and then he clomped out, Mrs. Jobson following him

"Where are we going now?" said Mrs. Jobson, when they got outside.

"Where are we going, madam?" said Mr. Jobson, in a tone of suppressed fury. "Where else are we going but home? We are going home to get something to eat, that's where we are going, Mrs. Jobson. And the next time you wheedle me into giving my consent to any such idiotic scheme as this-the next time you succeed in bamboozling me into abandoning the comforts of a home that I have slaved and toiled for years to get together-the next time you put up a job like this on me, for the sake of getting out of the necessity of seeing that your husband's dinner is cooked and served for him under his own vine and fig tree-there's going to be a schism and a split in the Jobson family, Mrs. Jobson, and when it's all over I won't be the one wearing the sackcloth and ashes!"

Then the Jobsons went home ' and dined on canned salmon, sardines, Neufchatelcheese, crackers and tea. Washington Star.

Wholesome Discipline.

Perhaps fagging in English schools is the one medicine for snobbishness in a land where classes are rigidly defined. For at least a short period in his early life, the "noble lord of high else. An old Harrow boy says that he can never forget a certain clergyman's look of blank astonishment the scheme that you feel like break- when he was told that the magnate of ing up housekeeping and living the his neighborhood had been a break-Bedouin life, from the eating point of fast fag at school, and had been "whopped" by his fag master for dropping sardine oil into the teapot. When Lord M---, who became a duke, was at Westminster school, he bought something from an apple. woman, and gave her sixpence, out of which she handed back the change. "You may keep them," said his lordcarry coppers." An older boy, a se-that appeals to their liking and that, in their judgment, would sell well. Besides the money that this transaction puts into the pocket and hope that it inspires in the student it often leads to more numerous orders and establishes a connection which is highly profitable, if making immediate money is a necessity at the end of the course.

DOG MAIL CARRIER.

The Sagacious Animal Waits for the Train and Takes Charge of Mailbag.

Out in Kansas, where so many things are different, there is a big St. Bernard mail carrier. He lives in one of the little "cross roads" towns, where the only store, which is also the post office, is 30 rods from the railroad track. The train, says the Detroit Free Press, always goes whizzing by at a good rate of speed, whistling as it approaches. Nep hears the whistle and hurries to the crossing and waits for the coming of the mail. The mail clerk kicks the leather bag out of the door and it falls somewhere in the vicinity of the road. Nep at once goes to the sack, and carefully taking it by the middle, so that neither end will drag on the ground, walks sedately to the store, where he deposits his burden in a safe place. He does this every day, in spite of the weather, and the whole country knows and is proud of the dog mail carrier

.Nep is four years old, is two feet seven inches in height, and weighs 250 pounds. He has no difficulty in carrying the sack, though the mail is often very heavy with the weekly papers from the county seat, for his teeth are strong and he has carried over 100 pounds as a test of his strength.

Tommy Atkins Unhorsed.

In one of the scrimmages before Ladysmith, various sections of infantry had been slapping away for some time at the Boer trenches, when it was decided to send forward a detachment of Dundonald's cavalry to try to head off a band of moving Boers. As the horsemen galloped past the infantrymen, one lost his seat. The fallen rider an Irishman-pulled himself together and chased his mount. As he ran past the infantry lines, the "Tommies" jeered at his undignified position. Paddy halted for a second. "Yes, ye may laugh, bhoys," he said, "for sure Oi'm nothin' but a common foot soldier now!"

Been Have Keen Eyes.

Bees are said to see an enormous distance. When absent from their hive they go up in the air till they see their home, and then fly toward it in a straight line.
