CHRISTMAS CELEBRATIONS

At the Several Churches Were Enjoyable Features of the Holiday Season

The Christmas celebrations for the Sunday school children of the Congregational, Baptist and Lutheran churches passed off in a most happy manner Monday evening. Each of the entertainments was largely attended and the adults in the audiences enjoyed them almost as much as the children.

At the Congregational church the full program as published in the Herald last week was carried out even to the real, live Santa Claus who dispensed gifts to the youngsters and some of the older ones from the house which was erected in choir loft. The pastor, Rev. C. S. Jones, was well remembered by the congregation.

The exercises at the Baptist church celebration which took place in the Staffan store was entirely by the children and lasted about 30 minutes, after which the Christmas gifts were distributed. In the distribution Rev. F. A. Stiles was not forgotten.

Perhaps the prettiest sight of all was the handsome Christmas display at St. Paul's Lutheran church. An evergreen arch 12 feet high, surmounted by a small Christmas tree and having the figure of an angel on each column of the arch was erected on the rostrum. Flanking each side of the arch was a regular Christmas tree on which the gifts were placed. Back of the arch a large transparency showed the scene of the birth of Christ—the manger at the inn, the mother and child and the wise men of the east come to worship him. At the left side of the arch was a large chimney, each brick in which contained candies for the children. The full program was carried out. The church was well filled, many being present from Dexter. Rev. L. Koebing, the pastor, was remembered with a present of money. The Christmas decorations will stay in the church until after New Year.

The St. Mary's Catholic church entertainment and Christmas tree will take place at the opera house this evening.

CHELSEA FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

It Will Be a Two Days' Meeting and Will Be Held Jan. 30 and 31

At the meeting of the committee of the Chelsea Farmers' Institute held Saturday, the six vice presidents of the society, N. W. Laird, of Sylvan, Jay Easton, of Lima, Dick Clark, of Lyndon, Edward Daniels, of Dexter, M. L. Raymond, of Sharon, and Frank Dwell, of Grass Lake, together with the three delegates from the Western Washtenaw Farmers' Club, Howard Everett, Frank Baldwin and Charles Fish, were appointed to make arrangements for the literary part of the program for the farmers institute to be held in Chelsea Jan. 30 and 31. Each of the gentlemen named is to secure one person who will read a paper on the second day of the institute. The state furnishes the speakers for the first day. The committee will meet to make further arrangements in two weeks.

Elected Their Officers.

The following officers of Chelsea Tent, No. 281, K. O. T. M., were elected to serve for the ensuing year at the meeting held last Friday evening:

Past Commander—J. W. Speer.
Commander—H. Lighthall.
Lieut. Commander—Wm. Campbell.
R. K.—W. H. Heselschwerdt.
F. K.—D. H. Wurster.
Physician—S. G. Bush.
Chaplain—Morgan Emmett.

OLIVET COLLEGE.

Some Facts Regarding the Institution in Which Many Chelsea People Are Interested

The following article from the columns of the Olivet Optic will prove interesting to those of our readers who have the welfare of the college at heart. Two scholarships to this college, one worth $45 and the other $50, are controlled in Chelsea. The students from here in Olivet College at present are Miss Edith Bacon and Miss Fannie Wines:

"A splendid company of students gathered at Olivet College last September and the indications were that the term would be a good one. For once realization has equalized anticipation. Dec. 19 the college closed one of the most satisfactory terms in its history, and its students are now enjoying a well earned vacation.

"Evidences of progress are visible in many directions. The chapel, a fine specimen of colonial architecture, has been improved and beautified by the expenditure of $1,000. Partly by their own efforts, generously supplemented by a friend, the young women now have a gymnasium for their exclusive use. The work in physical culture, based on the Swedish, German and Delsarte systems, is in charge of a lady. Several improvements have been made in Shipherd Hall and others are under way. The endowment fund is to receive an increase of at least $8,000 from legacies, besides several permanent scholarships of $1,000 each. The library, which surpasses every other college library in Michigan both in size and quality and contains about 30,000 volumes, has purchased some 300 books this term. Among these late accessions is a set of 'The Jesuit Relations in North America' in 73 volumes, which are a storehouse of the early history of New York, Canada, Michigan, and Northwestern states. Rich in works on English literature, biography and history, par excellence a working library, the spacious building is daily thronged with a company of eager students.

"The enrollment for the term shows substantial advance. The increase in the college department is especially marked. Every class has accessions from other schools. The freshman class is the largest and best in the history of the institution. It contains some of the brainiest graduates of the strong high schools of the state. Nineteen of this class were perfect in their examination in mathematics. The various departments of the conservatory have been full to overflowing. Never have there been so many pupils in attendance. The quality of work done by them has been of the best. The chorus, numbering nearly 200 voices, has already begun work on the oratorio of 'St. Paul' for the commencement concert. The conservatory regularly provides music for the Sunday services and for the various literary societies. This plan affords the proficient pupil opportunity to secure ease and confidence in himself in the presence of an audience. Two musical events have been recitals by W. H. Sherwood, pianist, and by Myron E. Barnes, tenor.

"The conduct of the students has been most excellent. Not a single case of discipline has come before the college faculty. The enthusiasm of numbers has been felt and a genuine 'college spirit' has pervaded the entire community—students, professors and citizens alike. This spirit has shown itself in various non fatal class 'scrapes,' in athletics in which if the fellows have not always been victors neither have they always been vanquished, in the strenuous emulation to win the honor of representing their college at the coming state oratorical contest, in generous rivalry between the various literary organizations in presenting each week strong and varied programs in the religious life which, like a deep current has flowed pure and strengthening through the months, and in the earnest desire for thorough scholarship which has been a predominant characteristic of the term."

Fine Christmas Cheer.

Adam Eppler had as fine a display of Christmas meats at his market the past week as has ever been in Chelsea. It included four two years old cattle, five lambs and a mammoth hog. One of the cattle was fed by Peter Gorman, of Lyndon, one by Chris. Eisenman, of Lima, and two by George Wagner, of Lima. The hog, which weighed dressed 637 pounds, was also fed by George Wagner. The lambs were fed by Wm. Baumiller, of Sharon. As is his usual custom Mr. Eppler had his market very tastefully trimmed with ropes of evergreen.

and a Platform Is Proposed—Suggestion That a Lagoon Be Built to Aid Students—Bird Skins Classified—Other Notes.

[Special Correspondence.]
University of Michigan, Dec. 24.—Dr.
M. Mosher women's dean in the literary department, has formulated a plan for securing the old ladies' home for the people of Ann Arbor. She proposes that those interested in the movement and those working for the Young Women's Christian association combine forces and work for a single building which will accommodate both. Her plan is to locate somewhere between the university campus and the business portion of Ann Arbor, a building that will be large enough to accommodate 40 ladies and will at the same time
be a library for the young women.
Centrally located, it will be convenient to the churches and other public buildings, and will also be easily reached by the members of the Christian association.

Will Ask Women for Funds.
The institution will be known as the Michigan Women's Home. The funds for its erection are to be solicited from women of the cities and villages of the state. Shortly after the holidays plans for raising the necessary sum will be made known, and the work of collecting the money will begin.

The Classes.
An important feature of the Michigan association work, after the organization is in its new home, will be classes. The women who are enrolled in the university will give an hour or two each week to assisting sisters in the association.

Future of Football.
The question of football policy for the future has been receiving considerable attention of late. In consequence of a discussion that has been going on,
it is expected that there will be an important decision in next fall's session.
The university of Michigan Daily, the student publication, has come forward with a platform of five planks which it proposes for adoption. The planks are:

1. That the faculty support athletics; and if it cannot encourage athletics, it should not discourage them or prohibit from trying for our teams.
2. That the athletic board cease to promote athletic interests by carrying on a fraternal squabble, about which nobody cares nothing and wants less. This plank is a stab at the members of the athletic board who have quarreled over the offices.
3. That the captains of varsity teams be more powerful.
4. That class football games be abolished in the freshman year.
5. That the platform is adopted by those of the athletic interests in charge, probabilities are that next fall the Michigan football team will be able to show a better showing when it meets its rivals.

Football Captain.
White, a junior law student Lapeer, Mich., has been elected captain for next season. He received 15 of the 24 votes cast. His rival this year's captain, Neil Snow, of St. White has played left tackle the last two seasons, and has done able work.

Tank Will Be Needed.
As the course in marine engineering and naval architecture gets under way an experimental tank will be needed. A modest estimate of the cost of a tank that would be large enough to test the models made by students is, length, 400 feet; width, 10 feet; depth, 10 feet. It has been estimated that this tank be built as a long the east side of the campus pond would then be useful for experimenting, and at the same time would prove a pleasing bit of scenery for the campus. The probability is, however, that for the present the Huron river above the dam will be used in testing models and the experimental tank will be built after the new naval courses become more firmly established.

Bird Skins.
3,700 bird skins in the reserve collection of the university museum have been reclassified within the last few weeks and rearranged in trays in alphabetical order. This collection is principally for purposes of study. Not one out of every hundred skins who visit the museum know of its existence. It is stored away in the attic. Only the special use of the specimens it contains. In many cases a large number of skins of the same kind of bird are saved. In each case note is made of the locality where the bird was shot and the season of the year. These are important facts in studying the colorings of the wings and feathers.

Collection Classified.
The entire collection is classified and arranged in scientific order. It is possible by looking at the index to determine the exact place any particular bird will be found and to go directly to the tray. Protected as the skins are from moths and moisture they will last for years and be of service to many a naturalist. An effort is being made to secure a complete series of the birds that are native to Michigan.

Another feature of the museum that is receiving attention these days is the shell collection. This has been arranged in a room to be known as the shell room. This is the first time that the shells belonging to the university have been completely classified and arranged for exhibition.

Semifinal Debate.
A semifinal debate for the team to represent Michigan in the Pennsylvania contest was held between the Webster and Jeffersonian societies in the law departments and the result was as follows: First, A. B. Irving, Salt Lake City (Webster); second, G. A.
Ohlinger, Ann Arbor (Webster); third, Llewellyn Cole, Maniwa, Wis. (Jeffersonian). The final contest will take place after the holidays.

WANTS PAY FOR BOILS.
A Man in Colon Seeks Damages of the Town Board for Effects of Enforced Vaccination.

Samuel Hartman, of the little town of Colon, is after the township board with a sharp stick and a claim for damages. During the summer there was a smallpox scare at Colon, and the board spent much of the taxpayers' money vaccinating all the unvaccinated citizens they could catch. Hartman was one of these. It did not "take" the first time, and he was vaccinated a second and a third time before it became effective.

Then Hartman's troubles began. His body became, as he sets forth in the appeal for damages, "covered with boils, so that it looked like a horse radish grater." He suffered much mental torture as well from having to bear the sneers of his neighbors whose vaccination had "taken" less virulently.

Hartman wants enough money from the board to pay the expenses incurred by his illness and to reimburse him for his suffering.

SALT PRODUCTION.
Some Interesting Statistics Given by the Inspector Concerning This Michigan Industry.

State Salt Inspector J. B. Caswell has made his annual report for the year ended November 30, to Gov. Pingree.
The report says:

Fifty-six firms are engaged in the industry, operating 60 salt blocks and 1,000 solar salt covers. The production by districts is as follows: Saginaw, 418,638 barrels; Bay, 404,665; St. Clair, 609,776; Iosco, 34,921; Manistee, 2,233,789; Mason, 778,654; Wayne, 370, 912. Grand total, 4,738,065 barrels. The net gain for the year was 5,416 barrels.

The manufacture of salt in Michigan began in 1860, when 4,000 barrels were produced. From 1860 to 1869 there was no inspection law. Up to that time 3,282,681 barrels had been manufactured. In 1869, the first year of the inspection law, the amount manufactured was 561,288 barrels, and there has been a gradual increase each year until a total of 4,738,065 barrels was reached in 1900. The grand total of all salt manufactured in Michigan since 1860 is 91,413,433 barrels.

The report also shows that many new blocks are being erected and that old ones are being improved.

AN OLD CLAIM.

Action Began by an Indian Princess in Behalf of Three Thousand Chippewas and Ottawas.

Princess Tewekeyshik, otherwise
Mrs. Pratt, of Marquette, has filed three suits in the court of claims in behalf of 3,000 full-blooded Chippewas and Ottawas to recover $57,000 from the government. The money accumulated in the treasury at the rate of $1,000 a year for 17 years from 1836 under a treaty. But in 1855 this treaty was superseded by a new treaty, and the accumulated money and interest was subsequently covered back into the treasury.

The Indians claim that while the treaty of 1855 stopped further annual accretions to the fund, the amount already in hand should have been divided among the tribes.

New Village.

A new suburban village is being platted surrounding the plant of the Port Huron Salt company on the old Bunce farm, one mile south of the city limits of Port Huron. Besides the salt works now about completed, other enterprises, it is said, are contemplating locating in that vicinity.

Announces Fair Dates.

One of the first fair associations in the state to announce its dates for next year is the Union Agricultural association of Muskegon, Oceana, Ottawa and Newaygo counties and the townships of Tyrone and Sparta, in Kent county.
The dates determined upon are September 10 to 13, inclusive.

ELECTION FIGURES.

Official Vote Given to Michigan Congressional Nominees at the Contest November 6.

The official canvass of the election returns has been completed, and shows that President McKinley received 104,- 548 plurality in the state. The populist candidate for president received 833 votes, the prohibition candidate 11,859, the social democratic candidate 2,826, and the socialist labor 903. The plurality of Gov.-elect Bliss is 79,384. Fol-

IT WON'T WORK.

Money-Making Scheme of Chicago Organization Cannot Do Business in Michigan.

The attorney general's office has received from Joseph Horner, of Grand Rapids, a letter and advertising matter of the "Eligibles," an association for the promotion of marriages which has grown out of the rushing business in weddings at St. Joseph. The attorney general was asked to become the league's agent and solicitor. The league's headquarters are in Chicago, and Elmer M. Barnes, of St. Joseph, is district agent.

The league proposes to admit only single persons, eligible to marry, to issue a $500 endowment certificate to each member, the certificate to become due in two years if the member marries before that time or in five years whether the member marries or not.
The management retains five per cent.
of the amount realized on each call, the balance going to the beneficiary. The certificates and payments are forfeited for failure to pay calls within 30 days.

The attorney general's office has notified Horner and Barnes that the league could not do business in Michigan.

WAS A FAILURE.

Effort to Interest the Interior Department in Cheboygan Indians
Not a Success.

Gov. Pingree's effort to interest the interior department in the affairs of the Cheboygan Indians has met with failure. The governor went to Washington and announced that the Cheboygan Indians had been deprived of their lands by tax title sharps, and he proposed to see that justice was done the Indians. He wanted the government to take the land away from the tax title men and return it to the homeless Cheboygans. Secretary Hitchcock told him that the interior department had no authority over the Che-boygans, as they were an independent tribe, and nothing could be done. Gov.
Pingree, however, insisted that official action should be taken. The case was referred to the attorney general of the department, who has declared the matter out of the jurisdiction of the interior department, and this decision was forwarded to the governor.

THE TAX COMMISSION.
Some Interesting Figures Concerning
the Work Done in the Past Two Years.

The work of the state tax commission shows some interesting data relative to the taxes of 1899 and 1900. In 1899 the average rate was $21.16, and the amount of personal taxes collected was $3,004,956.58. For the present year the rate is $15.47, and the amount of personal taxes levied is $5,000,758.95, a difference of $1,996,802.37.

The increase in the assessed valuation of the real and personal property in the state for 1900 over that of 1899, is $349,260,941. For 1900, the assessed valuation of real and personal property amounts to $1,317,450,028, while the valuation as equalized by the boards of superintendents is $1,249,884,629.

Libbie Hill, who married Harry La-fance in the dome of the Auditorium in Chicago on February 19, 1898, was granted a divorce in Hart for non-support.

SCORES THE COURTS.

In the Pardoning of Prisoners Gov.
Pingree Severely Arraigns
Michigan Judges.

In pardoning William E. Dennis, who was sentenced at Jackson last month to state's prison for four years, Gov.
Pingree makes a most serious charge against Circuit Judge Peck and Prosecuting Attorney Smith, of Jackson county. He alleges in the pardon that Dennis was the victim of a conspiracy to deprive him of his land and that the persons who conceived the conspiracy
"were aided by the circuit judge, Erastus Peck, who sentenced Dennis, and Charles H. Smith, who prosecuted the case." He further says that the "trial was a travesty upon justice, and the facts reveal a condition of affairs that would forever disgrace the criminal practice of Jackson county."

Johannes Salmonson, who was sent from Manistee in 1891 to Jackson prison for life for the murder of Richard Carlson, was also pardoned, the governor saying that there is a fair presumption that Carlson committed suicide, and that "there are too many ambitious young prosecuting attorneys and unscrupulous sheriffs anxious to make a record by securing the conviction of every man arrested upon suspicion of having committed a crime."

Other pardons have been granted as follows: Fred Cotie, sent from Calhoun county in July, 1898, to Ionia prison for highway robbery, and Fred Ziegel, sent from Genesee county April 28, 1897, for ten years for criminal assault.

The following convicts have been pardoned:

Joseph Gebhard, sent from Wayne county in 1889 for three years for larceny.
James McGinn, sent from Clinton county in 1897 for six years for assault.

William Butler, sent from Benzie county in 1897 for seven years for forgery.
Henry Horton, sent from Calhoun county in 1897 for seven years for assault with intent to kill.

Fred Boucha, sent from Muskegon county in 1898 for four years for burglary.
James Williams, sent from Ionia county in 1898 for 20 years for assault with intent to murder.

Edward McCusker, sent from Presque
Isle county in 1894 for 12 years for assault.

PIONEER STAGE DRIVER.

Jacob Lemon, Who Drove a Coach
from Detroit to Chicago, Dies in Kalamazoo.

Jacob Lemon, who died at Indian Lake, in Kalamazoo county, at the age of 85 years, was the first man to drive a stage through from Detroit into the then village of Chicago in December, 1835. He had obtained employment with Platt, Hughes & Gillas, of Detroit, who had established a stage line to carry mail and passengers. With a coach and four he drove over the frontier roads from Detroit, and when he entered Chicago was put on the Chicago and Little Calumet route, and soon afterward on the Chicago and Michigan City route, where he continued for a long time.

In 1838 Mr. Lemon drove a stage from Chicago to Springfield and central Illinois. In Springfield he made the personal acquaintance of Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglass. Mr. Lemon had lived in Kalamazoo county since 1840, and at the time of his death was one of the oldest pioneers in this section. He was a republican in politics, and took a lively interest in public affairs up to the time of his death.

Two Discharged.

After a series of conferences among the students of the Michigan military academy at Orchard Lake, of which Col. J. Sumner Rogers is principal owner and commandant, and the faculty sided with the students against Col.
Rogers, concerning the management of the institution, Col. Rogers issued an order closing the school for the holiday vacation, and relieving W. F. Edwards, principal, and Maj. Lowe, members of the faculty, from duty.

Plead Guilty.

Richard Moross, of Detroit, has pleaded guilty to the charge of robbing the office of the Rapid railway in Mount Clemens on the morning of November 5 last. He was once before convicted of a similar offense in this county and sentenced to ten years in prison, but was pardoned by Gov. Pingree a year ago last July, after serving five years.

College of Mines.

The board of control of the Michigan college of mines, in Houghton, will ask the next legislature for appropriations aggregating nearly $200,000 for the next two years. Of this amount $86,650 will be for running expenses, $42,500 for new engineering building, $35,000 for chemical laboratory, $20,000 for stamp mill and equipment, and $5,000 for blacksmith shop and tools.

Struck It Rich.

N. H. Burger, a mining promoter of Wyoming, was in Benton Harbor enroute to his former home in Benzonia county seat of Benzie county. Five years ago he left Benzonia with a railroad ticket to a small village in Colorado and 28 cents in money. He returns with a bundle of mine bonds valued at $100,000.

Leads in Bean Growing.

Michigan leads the world in the production of beans. New York for a long time held that honor, but for the past five years Michigan has increased rapidly in this line of agriculture.

SPECIAL SESSION MEETS.

Michigan Legislature Convened by Governor Pingree to Enact a Taxation Law.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 19.—The senate yesterday, with but two dissenting votes, refused to accept Gov. Pingree's invitation to a banquet. The house, by a vote of 29 to 27, granted Gov. Pingree the use of its chamber for his banquet. The house refused to concur in the resolution adopted by the senate providing for final adjournment of the legislature Thursday. A special committee was appointed to confer with a similar committee that the senate will be asked to appoint, for the purpose of framing, if possible, a tax bill that will be agreeable to both houses.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 20.—The two houses of the legislature appear to be near together on the question of final adjournment, and the prospects are that an agreement will be reached to-day. Both houses see that there is no hope of enacting any legislation. If the legislature adjourns without passing the tax bill Gov. Pingree threatens to call the members back at once.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 21.—By a vote of 45 to 29 the house yesterday concurred in the resolution adopted by the senate Wednesday providing that all business should cease after Thursday, and that final adjournment of the special session should be taken Saturday noon. The house then adjourned. This ends the special session, without any result in the way of taxation legislation having been attained.

ABOLISHES COMMISSION.

Important Change Made by the River and Harbor Bill in Regard to Missouri River.

Washington, Dec. 24.—The river and harbor bill as it will be reported from the house committee soon after the re-convening of congress on the 3d of January will carry a provision abolishing the Missouri river commission.
The provision already has been agreed upon and only waits the formulation of the bill to find a place in it. The decision to discontinue the commission is said to have been unanimous on the part of the committee and it is the result of statements made to the committee by members of the house whose districts touch the Missouri on either side. They generally expressed the opinion that the navigation of the stream is so limited as to render the commission useless. The general opinion was that as the improvements of the river consist almost entirely of the protection of the banks, this work could be done as well if left directly to the secretary of war as if again placed in the hands of the commission and the commission accepted this view. The commission was created in 1884 and at present consists of Lieut. Col. Amos Stickney, of the engineer corps, president; Maj. Thomas H. Handbury, of the engineer corps; Maj. W. L. Marshall, of the engineer corps; Charles C. Broad-head, and C. L. Chaffee.

APPEALS FOR ITALIANS.

Consul at Denver Trying to Secure Protection for Men Threatened at Florence.

Denver, Col., Dec. 24.—Dr. Joseph Cuneo, Italian consul, made an appeal to Gov. Thomas for protection of his countrymen involved in a threatened race war at Florence. His request was that pressure be brought on the Fremont county authorities to exercise all precautions at their command to prevent an outbreak, and, if necessary, to call out the militia. The consul also wired the Italian ambassador at Washington to appeal to President McKinley for federal aid should the state authorities be unable to cope with the situation.

The threatened trouble is the result of the importation of a number of Italians to work in a smelter for the treatment of gold ore. The Mill and Smel-termen's union has objected, but no serious action has been taken, though threats are said to have been made.
Edward Seed, an employee of the smelter, was killed Friday apparently by accident by one of the Italians. This incident increased the bitter feeling and a race war has been predicted.

PLACE FOR INAUGURAL BALL.

Secretary Hitchcock Grants Permission to Use the Hall of Pensions Building.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Secretary Hitchcock Friday granted the inaugural committee permission to hold a ball and entertainment incident to the coming inauguration of President McKinley in the pension building.
The spacious court of the pension office with its architectural beauty and enormous proportions is well fitted for the inaugural ball. It has been used on former occasions.

Capture Thief and Money.

Tullahoma, Tenn., Dec. 24.—The Coffee county bank at Manchester was broken into by five men Saturday morning, the safe blown open, and all the currency in the bank, amounting to $50,000, stolen. The robbery was discovered shortly after its commission by the town watchman, who notified the authorities at Tullahoma.
Towards which place the robbers fled on a hand car. A deputy sheriff and policeman from Tullahoma met the robbers a mile from town, and after a short fight captured the thief with the money. His four companions escaped.

Resolutions.

Whereas, in the death of Bro. H. Baldwin we recognize the call of the great Master to come up higher, and we fully realize the loss to our order of one who was an earnest, zealous member, exemplifying in his life the cardinal principles of faith in God, and noted for his fidelity in all things, pertaining to the work of the grange, having filled the master's chair with credit and ability for several years, therefore, be it

Resolved, that we the members of Lafayette grange appreciate and keep in our hearts the memory of the social, genial, cordial hand clasp, and kindly words of our brother who has gone from among us, and while we as a grange feel our loss deeply, we cannot help but realize that God knows best and that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, that these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of our grange and also sent to the Chelsea Herald and Chelsea Standard for publication.

Committee.

Dec 18, 1900.

In view of the fact, we, as members of the Western Washtenaw Farmers' Club, sadly regret the loss of one of our members, Mr. Horace Baldwin. He was one who was always zealous of the welfare and interests of our order, and always stood ready to lend a helping hand to forward its interests, and would put life and animation in the club by his apt and ready wit when work got dull and prosy; therefore be it Resolved, while we feel his loss most keenly, we know that God doeth all things well, and we must submit to his will, and that our heartfelt sympathy goes out to his entire family in their bereavement, and that a copy of these resolutions be put on record and also published in both of the papers printed in Chelsea.

Paid Dear For His Leg.

B. D. Blanton, of Thackerville, Tex., in two years paid over $300.00 to doctors to cure a running sore on his leg. Then they wanted to cut it off, but he cured it with one box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. Guaranteed cure for piles. 25 cents a box. Sold by Stimson, the druggist.

Electric Railway Notes.

Thos. D. Kearney, of Ann Arbor, who is a legal adviser of Hawkes & Angus and has been instrumental in getting several franchises for them in this county, talking with a reporter of the Ann Arbor Argus the other day, said: "You can state in your paper that Hawkes & Angus will build a line to Lansing to meet their Jackson road in Seio township, and Dexter will have a spur that means something. It will be on the main line of the Lansing road and will be in the closest connection with Ann Arbor."

After all the monkey and parrot time indulged in by the Ann Arbor common council at the meeting held a couple of weeks ago, when the further consideration of granting franchises to Wm. A. Boland and Hawkes & Angus was postponed until next month, that august body got together Friday night at a special meeting and passed both franchises. Mr. Boland gets a franchise to enter the city by Miller avenue and Hawkes & Angus by way of West Huron street. Mayor Luick approved of the Hawkes & Angus franchise Saturday afternoon and Saturday evening Hawkes & Angus made a legal acceptance of the same.

The entertainment given by Spillman Riggs at the opera house Saturday night was unique in its character. His lecture on "Musical Fits and Misfits" contained many opportune hits and was serious and humorous by turns. His whistling solos were well executed and his vocal abilities are good and pleasing. He proved himself a rare entertainer.

Washtenaw Times: Judge Kinne has done a good thing this week in showing the people that he does not propose to let anyone who ever gets hurt out of doors get big verdicts against the city. It has become too frequent a custom for lawyers to urge people into such suits, in the expectation of getting big judgments and then dividing the proceeds. . . . If other judges would take such a stand as Judge Kinne it would greatly discourage this kind of effort to get pay for accidents.

The next entertainment in the People's Popular Course will be given Wednesday evening next, Jan. 2, by the Stephenson string quartette, assisted by Wallace Bruce Amsbury, reader. The personnel of the quartette is Miss Lalla Stephenson, violin; Miss Elsie Stephenson, viola; Miss Clara Stephenson, 'cello, and Mrs. Etta Hunter Stephenson, piano. They are spoken of as being highly gifted musicians who give a program of much excellence. Mr. Amsbury has traveled with such talented actors as Nat C. Goodwin, and his endorsements are practically unlimited.

TOMMY'S RESOLUTIONS

But his eyes fell to twinkling, and lest he should lose a moment to gain that repose of mind and of body, important to keep at midnight, when watching while other boys sleep.

Now Tommy was not a courageous young chap, and his hair stood on end as he heard a loud rap on a picture, and saw coming right through the frame a fantastic procession of blind folk and lame.

They limped to his side, and poor Tom stood aghast. As he heard them exclaim: "We have found you at last! We're the year's resolutions—you thought we were good. When you made us and left us to grow as we could, and 'tis right you should know 'tis entirely your fault. That we stoop, are one-sided, and withered and halt."

"Yes," said one who was cross-eyed, "I'm fast growing blind because you've off failed to be pleasant and kind."

"And I," said another, "must lean on a crutch because your quick temper goes off at a touch."

"And I am ill-shaped and deformed," cried a third, "because you've not always been true to your word."

So each one accused him of being to blame, and Tom, blushing and frightened, was covered with shame.

Then one little man, who was bent almost double, and who looked disappointed and worn out with trouble.

"Twas a good resolution which Tommy had made. That never for him should a meal be delayed."

With a voice that was cracked and a manner precise, said kindly: "My friend, here's a bit of advice: What's worth doing at all should be always well done; Resolutions, if kept, are habits begun, And if you again and again persevere To put us in practice each day of the year, You'll find that in time we'll grow shapely and strong— That we'll help you to honor and hold you from wrong."

Here the clock pealed out twelve, but before the last stroke, The dream folk had vanished, and Tommy awoke; He rubbed his eyes smartly, and vowed he'd remember His good resolutions until next December. If he does, with the practice that every day gives, He'll form habits to bless him as long as he lives.

—Anna M. Pratt, in Golden Days.

THE PROFESSOR'S PRESENTS.

"Come out and see how 'the other half' spends Christmas eve," said Tom.

"Come out and inhale the spirit of Christmas in the keen frosty air!" said Aimee. And so they sallied forth.

They were soon on that side of the town where the poorer classes dwell, and where to-night the curbs were lined with booths lit up by flaring torches, and the vendors were selling cheap toys, fruits, candies, evergreens and all sorts of articles, in opposition to the long rows of attractively lighted and decorated shops.

The brother and sister mingled with the crowd, who all seemed imbued with more or less of the holiday humor. Even the blind beggars begged cheerfully and called down genial blessings on the equally cheerful givers.

The sight was not new to them, for the year before Aimee and Tom had spent Christmas eve in this same quarter.

For some weeks Aimee had been hoarding her small coins to "invest" to-night, and these she had dropped loose in her jacket pocket before sallying forth. And Tom, who had discovered Aimee's "trick" on the previous Christmas eve, had quietly followed her example. So many a "Merry Christmas and God bless you," from the halt and blind, fell to their share as they gayly passed, borne onward by the hurrying throng.

Their largesse—or "little largeness," as Tom dubbed it—was not alone for those who begged. An old, withered woman, basket on arm, paused doubtfully before a stall of fruit, and Aimee dropped her largest silver piece in the old crone's basket. Tom swiftly following suit. Two tattered children were eying wistfully a stand of cheap toys, when suddenly from some unknown source a nickel dropped into the grimy hand of each, and made possible the delight which seemed so far away to them the moment before.

"It's wonderful," said Tom, "how much happiness a little—a very little money will buy on Christmas eve!" "It blesses him who gives and him who takes!" said Aimee.

Suddenly Tom gave her a nudge. "Hello, look—just ahead of us," he said.

And Aimee saw a tall, spare man, with head bent slightly forward and hands linked loosely together behind his back.

With an impulse of merry mischief she reached forward and dropped a dime in the half-open palm.

The tall man swiftly turned, gave an exclamation of surprise, and was greeted by a hearty laugh from Tom. "Prof. Vaughn!"

"My young friend, Tom—and Miss Aimee, also! Well, well—who would have thought of meeting you two in this part of the town to-night! May I ask what brought you here?" "Just what brought you, professor, apparently!" laughed Tom. "And then this sister of mine has a fondness for seeking 'the spirit of Merry Christmas,' as she calls it!"

"And apparently she has found it," said the professor, smiling, while Aimee's eyes twinkled and her lips twitched with merriment at the way in which the professor's hand remained closed, as if it contained some treasure.

They walked along together. The professor evidently knew this part of the city well. He had many stories, droll and pathetic, to tell of customs of which they knew nothing, and of stranger customs still, which were practiced in the poorer parts of certain cities abroad.

HE HELD OUT THE LITTLE PICTURE OF HERSELF.

Aimee listened with delight, while her bright eyes lost nothing of what was going on about her. She emptied her jacket pocket, too, to its last small coin, and so dexterously that the professor never once saw what she was doing, or, at least, that was what Aimee thought.

He accompanied them to their own door, but would not go in. "No, no—Christmas eve is no time for an outsider to call. Thank you, no—I'm going home—to bed."

"But, professor," said Aimee, "I want to hear the end of your exciting experience in Bulgaria; if you will not come in and finish the story to-night, you must come and dine with us tomorrow. Oh, you just said you had no engagement—and fancy taking Christmas dinner in a boarding house! Please say 'yes,' professor. We shall count on you—at seven. There will be two other such 'homeless waifs,' as you call yourself—friends of Tom's—besides ourselves. Tom, escort the professor home, and don't leave him until he has said 'yes!' A merry Christmas, professor, and au revoir—to-morrow!"

The professor yielded, and, after a Christmas day spent rather dimly alone in his rooms, at seven in the evening he found himself one of a party of 12 at the Desmonds' hospitable table.

He had known the family well ever since Tom's first year in college, when a warm friendship had sprung up between the older and the younger man.

That he was older than Tom—and Aimee—had been a source of regret to him—since last night! In actual point of years he was not old at all, and yet from these young people's standpoint he knew he already belonged to the rank of "grave and reverend seniors."

And when he found himself at the dinner table beside Aimee—who looked a radiant "spirit of Christmas," with a sprig of holly in her nut-brown hair—he thought her more lovely and merry and girlish-looking than ever, and he felt himself unusually old and dull.

But he did not dream that her bright eyes had detected the shade of unreasonable sadness which suddenly came over her guest, or that she had set herself the task of dispelling it.

It was a genial Christmas party, composed of Mr. and Mrs. Desmond, their married daughter, her husband and their three half-grown children, Tom and two of his "homeless" young bachelor friends, Aimee and Prof. Vaughn. And it proved a delightful dinner, where everyone had some good-natured joke or story to tell at his neighbor's expense. And when, during its course, Aimee's eyes caught sight of a dime dangling from a split ring on the professor's watch chain, she was decidedly amused. And at the same time she wondered why, though his lips were laughing, his eyes seemed sad.

After dinner they all adjourned to the library, where coffee was served, and was followed by Aimee's little "surprise."

She had disappeared for a moment, and returned to the room bearing a miniature Christmas tree on a silver salver. It seemed ablaze with tiny candles, and little parchment scrolls were tied to the branches with bright ribbons of every hue.

There was a scroll for each of the party, containing a bright bit of nonsense in rhyme, to describe or suggest the contents of the accompanying package. And these were each read aloud, and the packages opened amid the laughter and merry comments of the entire party.

And so at last it came the professor's turn.

"O learned man, though you are wise, You oft need help—as one sans eyes—" he read.

"Professor, you need mine, I know—Take me, I'm yours—with you I'd go! But should you leave me now, too late You'll feel regret—as sure as fate! My riddle you can't read? Then look—You'll find the answer in this book!"

A ripple of laughter sounded through the room.

"What can it be? It suggests a better half!" said one.

"A wife!"

"A housewife, truly!" exclaimed Mrs. Desmond, as the professor awkwardly opened his little package. "Well thought of, Aimee! A useful little article for any bachelor!"

So the evening passed merrily, and the last thing the professor's eyes rested upon, as he bade the family good night, was Aimee's lovely, laughing face.

And the last thing the professor's bewildered eyes rested upon, in his own room long after midnight, was a little photograph which he had found in a pocket of the housewife—a picture of Aimee's lovely face!

The professor was sorely puzzled. Had Aimee given him her likeness—unasked—or had the photograph slipped in by accident? What did the doggerel say?

"O learned man, though you are wise, You oft need help—as one sans eyes—" "I do need help!" he said, "and truly, I have been blind—till now!"

"Professor, you need mine, I know—Take me, I'm yours—with you I'd go!" "Aimee, do you mean it—you, yourself? No, no, or you never would have said it thus; of that I'm sure!"

"But should you leave me now, too late You'll feel regret—as sure as fate!" "Regret—Aimee, if I can't win you I shall feel despair!"

"My riddle you can't read? Then look—You'll find the answer in this book!" "And the answer is—your likeness—hidden—for none but my eyes to see!"

He needed her. Ah, yes, he knew it now. But could she have guessed his secret, even before it had been fully revealed to himself, and could she have taken this artful way—to give him courage? No, a thousand times no! That could never be Aimee's way. And yet—

He looked at her picture again and he read the doggerel again. Finally he went to bed, but he could not sleep. He was haunted by Aimee's lovely face.

Early the next afternoon the professor went to the Desmonds' and asked to see Miss Aimee.

He noted that she seemed surprised to see him.

"I came to return something," he said, watching her anxiously.

She seemed puzzled. Then she laughed gayly and extended her hand. "My poor little ten-cent piece! I hope you didn't really think I mistook you for a blind beggar!"

"Indeed, Miss Aimee, you will find that I am a beggar, and I am sure that I have been quite blind! But it is not the dime; you really gave me that, and I have a right to keep it—for luck!"

"But—I really don't understand," said Aimee. "It's not the poor little housewife, I hope?"

"No! but this—which I found hidden within it," and he held out the little picture of herself.

An expression of surprise, followed by a wave of color, overspread her face. "Oh—I'm very glad you didn't think—" "No," he said, seriously. "I tried at first to think so, but I simply couldn't, and so—"

"I will tell you how it came to be there," said Aimee, quickly. "I had completely forgotten it, but I remember now. I made the little housewife for Tom when we thought he was going to the war. And I slipped that picture in, because he always had liked it, and I thought he might come across it some time and be glad to see it. Then he didn't go, after all, so I just put it one side. And when I wanted something for you in a hurry for my 'nonsense tree,' I thought of that, though I'd forgotten all about the picture. I thank you for not misunderstanding—and for bringing it back to me."

"But—I want to keep it," said the professor, earnestly. "unless—unless you will give me the original. Aimee, am I asking the impossible? I love you; I cannot live—happily—without you. Aimee—"

But her face, her gesture answered him.

"I am a fool to have told you this so soon," he ended, abruptly.

"Oh, professor!" said Aimee, very sorrowfully.

"Forget that I am a professor, and think of me for once as Robert Vaughn! Think of me as a man—and not such an old man, either, in spite of a few gray hairs—"

"But a very unreasonable and foolish man!" thought Aimee, though wisely she did not put her thought in words.

The interview ended as such interviews usually end. And the professor, when he went away, carried with him a heavy heart—and the little photograph of Aimee's lovely face.

It was a strange thing, but Aimee could not for one moment forget the professor's words: "I love you. I cannot live—happily—without you!"

They rang in her ears, and his face—as it had been when he said those words—haunted her day and night through all the round of holiday gayeties which followed, though during those days she saw him no more.

She did not desire to see him, yet—unconsciously at first—she came to contrast him, his manner, his mode of speech, with every man she met. And each of these she ranked in proportion as they approached or fell below the professor's level.

So New Year's eve came, and midnight found Aimee and Tom with a party of their friends, watching the old year depart.

Some one had been reciting Tennyson's "Death of the Old Year." And the words, "He gave me a friend and a true, true-love, And the New Year will take 'em away," struck Aimee as ominous. They echoed through her dreams all night, and they came back to her next morning when she took up the paper and read of an accident which had occurred on a trolley the night before, in which Prof. Robert Vaughn had been injured so seriously that his death was momentarily expected.

Then it was that the truth was revealed to her, and her heart echoed the professor's own words: "I love you. I cannot live—happily—without you!"

The family were so concerned over the bad news of their friend that Aimee's face was not noticed.

Nor did it seem strange or unusual to them when she went out alone to the early service at the church.

Aimee wanted to be alone with her secret and her sorrow. The holy words to which she listened made her more calm. And when the service was ended she walked on to the street where she knew the professor lived. She would pass the door, and if he were already—gone—there would surely be some sign by which she would know—the worst.

But she saw no sign, and, though she dared not hope, she paused and breathed a little inarticulate prayer.

The door above suddenly opened and shut again, and the tall figure of a man came swiftly down the steps.

"Aimee—Miss Aimee—you!"

"Oh, professor! Then—you are not—dead!"

He looked searchingly into her pitiful, white, lovely face.

"Professor?" he queried.

"Robert!" she breathed, with a little sob.

"Thank Heaven! No, I am not dead!" he said, cheerily, tucking her unresisting hand within his arm with a confident air of possession.

"That part of the account was all a mistake—but a blessed mistake, my Aimee—for I believe I have that to thank for giving you to me—and making this the happiest New Year of my life!"—Judith Spencer, in Ladies' World, New York.

Why He Liked It.

"It's too bad," said Willie Washington, "that the good old custom of making calls New Year's day is slowly but surely dying out."

"Do you like the practice?"

"Verily much. When you can't think of anything else you can say: 'Happy New Year,' and it's the only time when I ever feel really at home as a conversationalist."—Washington Star.

VIEWS OF MR. GRIGGS.

Attorney General Presents Argument to Supreme Court.

He Defends the Government's Position in Important Cases Involving Status of Porto Rico and the Philippines.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Arguments in the Porto Rico-Philippines cases, involving the status of those countries to the United States, were resumed in the United States supreme court Tuesday. The widespread interest in the cases was shown by a large attendance of prominent members of the bar and by a crowd of spectators which filled the public area and overflowed into the corridor.

Argument by Mr. Griggs.

Mr. Griggs' plea was based upon a brief of 200 pages, the greater part of which he devoted to presenting the argument of the United States, while the remaining portion is in the shape of an appendix giving the text of the peace treaty between the United States and Spain, and also the text of other treaties supposed to bear upon the question.

In presenting the government's side of the controversy the attorney general first stated the two cases upon which the proceeding is based. This was followed by a general explanation and summing up of the government's position, after which came the citation of innumerable authorities, under appropriate headings, with pertinent running comment upon them. The attorney general contended that the United States has the power to acquire territory; that, having acquired it, it has the right to govern it; that administrative construction, congressional action and judicial precedent affirm that every part in a ceded country is properly regarded as foreign until laws are extended by congress to the new possessions; that the clause of the constitution of the United States declaring duties uniform throughout the United States is not applicable to new possessions, and that the constitution does not extend of its own force over acquired territory.

Wrong from Two Points of View.

In his general contention on behalf of the United States, Mr. Griggs argued that his opponents were wrong from both a legal and a constitutional point of view. Referring to the legal aspect of the case, he asserted that the Dingley act applied to merchandise imported from Porto Rico and the Philippines after their cession to the United States the same as it did before, and that in view of the fact that tariff laws are in rem there is no principle of justice, much less of constitutional restriction, which forbids congress from taxing in this way the merchandise of outlying possessions of the United States when brought into the ports of the union.

Two Established Propositions.

He laid down as established the two following propositions:

1. That the tariff act of 1897 was intended by congress to classify as foreign all countries not a part of or belonging to the United States at the time of its passage, and the subsequent cession of the Spanish islands to the United States did not operate to admit imports from those islands free of duty, under that law. 2. That the tariff act so construed and enforced violates no constitutional rule of uniformity.

Right to Acquire and Govern.

Mr. Griggs then entered upon the presentation of his subject in detail. He contended that the right of the United States to acquire territory had been asserted in the declaration of independence, and said that such acquisition could be made either by conquest, by treaty, by annexation or by discovery. He quoted a number of supreme court decisions in support of this contention. A great deal of attention was given to the right to govern territory when once acquired, and innumerable authorities were adduced in support of this position, among others the decision of the supreme court in the Mormon church case, in which the court said that "it would be absurd to hold that the United States has power to acquire territory and no power to govern it when acquired."

He asserted that "the treaty-making power of the government has exercised the right to deal with the status of the inhabitants of ceded territory in every treaty of cession from 1803 to 1898." The status fixed, he said, has not been uniform, but exceedingly varying. He then proceeded to argue that this practice is entirely at variance with the doctrine that "the constitution follows the flag" and that when territory is ceded to the United States the inhabitants become immediately proprio vigore citizens of the United States. "If that doctrine be true," he said, "every treaty that has brought us new lands and new inhabitants has violated in this respect the principles of the constitution. It convicts of error and usurpation Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, James Monroe, James K. Polk, Franklin Pierce, Andrew Johnson, their cabinets and the senates that ratified their treaties."

As to "Uniform Duties" Clause.

Mr. Griggs went at length into the claim that the constitutional clause which provides that "duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States" prohibits imposition of duties in the cases before the court.

"That clause," he said, "does not apply to nor govern these cases, because the term 'United States,' as there used, means only the territory comprised within the several states of the union, and was intended only for their benefit and protection, and not for the benefit or protection of outside territory belonging to the nation; in the latter sense duties on imports from these islands were uniform throughout the United States, because they are uniformly imposed at every port in the United States, so that there is no preference given to the ports of one state over those of another, nor is any inequality between the several states created."

Constitution Not Elastic.

The last feature of the argument was a contention that the constitution does not extend of its own force over acquired territory, and in the connection the attorney general sought to refute the doctrine, as laid down by Chief Justice Taney in the Dred Scott case, that the United States could not acquire territory for any other purpose than to convert it into states of the union. "The doctrine of the ex-proprio vigore extension of the constitution was never heard of," he said, "until it was invented and advocated by Calhoun as a means of fastening slavery upon California and New Mexico beyond the power of congress to disturb or abolish it. It was in conflict with all previous views of statesmen of all parties, and opposed to the compact in the ordinance of 1787, as well as to the act of congress known as the Missouri compromise."

Diseases of the Kidneys

U. S. SENATOR DAVIS DIES FROM KIDNEY DISEASE.

Senator Davis made a prolonged and gallant fight with disease.

The trouble, of which the kidney affection was the fatal outcome, first appeared about Sept. 20.

Trouble Stealthily Encroached.

The trouble had, however, stealthily encroached upon a vital organ, and on Nov. 11 examination of the urine proved the presence of inflammation of the kidneys.

Both acute nephritis and diabetes made their appearance, and Dr. Murphy, of Chicago, was summoned. He agreed with Doctors Stone and Lancaster as to the presence of these serious ailments in acute form, and, while not making any public statement, he made known privately to some of Senator Davis' business associates his opinion that the case was hopeless.

To those, however, who were familiar with the symptoms of acute kidney troubles the bulletins held ominous information, the rapid respiration, fluctuating pulse, delirium and approaching coma telling the story of death's nearness. —St. Paul Dispatch.

will stand no trifling because no disease is so deceptive and none more fatal. Statistics show that more people die from Kidney Diseases than any other disease.

Is This What Ails You?

Does your back ache?
Do you have scanty flow of urine?
Do you have frequent severe headaches?
Do you urinate too frequently either day or night?
Have you sand, gravel, brick dust or white mucous in your urine?
Have you dark or bloody looking urine which scalds when voiding?
Have you dark circles around the eyes, puffiness under the eyes, or bloated appearance of the face in the morning?

Your Kidneys are Sick AND HERE IS WHERE YOUR DANGER LIES:

Kidney Disease does not make itself felt until it has secured a firm hold on your system.

Morrow's Kid-ne-oids

are made for Kidney Diseases and that they cure Kidney Diseases can be attested by a "cloud of living witnesses," three of which give voluntary testimony below:

Bright's Disease.

Bright's Disease is the final stage of kidney disease. It is due to a weak, impure condition of the blood caused by failure of the kidneys to thoroughly filter it. Poisons accumulate in the kidneys, and soon their interiors become a festering, rotten mass, giving off the virulent and most poisonous matter. This poison gets into the blood and makes it still more virulent. Bright's Disease is insidious because it exists a long time without the knowledge of its victim. It is deceptive for it deludes even on the death bed with hopes of sure recovery. It is relentless for it devastates the world, causing more death and misery than war, famine and drink combined. But Bright's Disease is no longer incurable. There is one remedy that can overcome it wherever they meet. Morrow's Kid-ne-oids cure Bright's Disease by acting on the kidneys, toning them up and strengthening them and making them do their duty promptly and thoroughly.

Heart Failure

Almost daily you read of prominent men and women, (to say nothing of the thousands of people in the every-day walk of life, of which no mention is made in print,) dying from Heart failure. The cause back of it all is—sick kidneys. When the kidneys are sick, all the other organs are affected. Dizzy spells, fainting spells, pain in the back, frequent severe headaches, falling or indistinct vision with flashes of light or floating specks are all ominous warnings of impending "heart failure." Reader, your only safety is to get your kidneys right so that they can perform their duties promptly and properly. The only remedy in which you can place implicit confidence is Morrow's Kid-ne-oids. They strengthen and tone up the kidneys, enabling them to purify the blood, clear out the obstructed passages and make heart failure impossible. Morrow's Kid-ne-oids prevent heart failure by removing the cause.

Bladder Troubles.

The urinary organs are probably the most important part of the sewage system in the human body. It is their duty to carry off the poisonous matter that the kidneys separate from the blood. It is an absolute necessity that the urinary organs be kept in good condition if they are to carry off all the poisons passed them by the kidneys. Generally speaking, the kidneys cause all troubles in the urinary organs. When the kidneys get weak or diseased they cannot properly do the work assigned them, and as a consequence they allow poisonous matter to flow back into the system and cause disease and death. By strengthening the kidneys and making them do their work promptly and thoroughly all these ills are avoided. All people who have ills of the urinary organs are unanimous in stating that they can find no other remedy equal to them.

Rheumatism

Results from a poison in the blood known as Uric Acid. Uric Acid is simply the worn-out matter in the human body that is carried by the blood into the kidneys. It is the duty of the kidneys to filter this poison from the blood. The only way to cure the kidneys to stay cured is with Morrow's Kid-ne-oids.

DROPSY

Is becoming a very common disease in these latter days, and is one of the most fearful ailments to which human flesh is heir. Dropsy is simply an accumulation of water in the system. PUT IT IN PLACE. The water drawn from the limbs and bodies of dropsical persons only shows that the water which should have been accumulated by the kidneys and sent to the bladder was on account of disease in the kidneys permitted to flow back with the blood into the arteries. The only way to cure the kidneys to stay cured is with Morrow's Kid-ne-oids.
