MEMORIAL DAY.

Appropriate Exercises and Sermon at the Congregational Church.

Memorial Day exercises. The members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. were seated on the east side of the church in a body.

The rostrum and choir loft were draped with National flags and red, white and blue bunting. Potted palms and flowers Chelsea, has been filed in the probate also graced the platform and a large picture of President Lincoln draped with the National colors occupied a prominent position in the foreground.

After singing a hymn, the scripture lesson, Psalm xxxiii, was read by Rev. F. A. Stiles. This was followed with an earnest prayer by Rev. E. E. Caster. "The Boys Who Wore the Blue" was tastefully rendered by the choir, after which Edward Gorman, the post adjutant, called the roll of honor which embraced 91 dead heroes. Another hymn was sung and the memorial address by Rev. C. S. Jones followed. He took for his subject 'The True Soldier," and delivered a fine address full of good thoughts and glowing with patriotism.

The Late Frank Forner.

Frank Forner, of Sylvan, who had for the past year been failing in health, died at his home Saturday afternoon, May 24 of cancer of the stomach, aged 55 years He is survived by his willow, three sens, Frank, Peter and John, three daughters, Mrs. Ida Mohrlock, Maggie and Lena Forner, and one grandson, Leon Mohrlock. BURNING HEAD.

Star City, Ark., May 26th .- A very emarkable case has just occurred

Mr. W. H. McFalls has been suffering severely for two years with an ailment that puzzled the doctors and everybody. The trouble seemed to be all in his head, which had a burning sensation all the time.

Sometimes this burning pain in the head would be worse than at other times, but it never left him.

At last he tried a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and was agreeably surprised to find that the burning gradually disappeared. An attack of La Grippe has laid him up for the last few weeks, but Dodd's Kidney Pills have banished his old trouble entirely. His son George used a few of the Pills which his father did not need and they have done so much good that he says he would not take ten centsa pill for the few he still has left.

THE GRAVES IN THE OLD BREASTWORKS

By Francis Lynde

H, TOM, I do hope father won't go to law with old Maj. Loudon! It's bad enough as it is, but I met Kate in the post office yesterday, and she pretended not to see me." Tom Hartwood rapped the iron from the plane he was using, and began to whet it on the oilstone. "I'm with you, Dorothy," he said, "but what are you going to do about it? Father has settled it in his mind thatthe major is wrong, and he's going to law about it down here in Alabama, just the same as he would back in New Hampshire. He isn't bitter about, it, and he can't see why the major should be."

The bright-haired young girl sitting on the end of the workbench nodded her head emphatically.

"I know," she said. "But the major is bitter; he'd be untrue to all his traditionsif he wasn't. Going to law with anybody down here is just like a declaration of war. The neighbors take it up on both sides, and there's no end of trouble. Just look at the Peterses and the Reeds! They're ready to fly at each other like cats and dogs all the time." Tom laughed.

"If it comes to that it will be pretty one-sided with us," he said. "The Loudens used to own the whole valley before the war, and they set the pace for nearly everybody in it now. And as between the blue-blooded old major and a despised Yankee farmer, who persists in plowing deeper than his neighbors, and making money when everybody else is losing it-"

"Now, Tom, you know that isn't fair. We couldn't have been treated better anywhere than we were two years ago, when we came here with mother sick, and father discouraged, and everything so dreadfully dreary and-and tacky. Everybody was just as kind and thoughtful as could be. They never asked where we came from, and they didn't seem to care."

Tom's plane was curling long shavings from the edge of the board, and he laughed again. He was a broadshouldered young fellow, with a resolute jaw and unafraid eyes, and laughing came easy to him.

"It costs a pet prejudice or two, but you're right, little sister. There is no north nor south any more. But that doesn't help us out of our tangle with "A foot and eight inches," Tom corrected. "But it's the principle of the thing with father. He believes he is right, and he is going to insist on that foot and eight inches, if it costs us every friend we have in the valley.

Dorothy's gaze went adrift out of the workshop window, wandering aimlessly until it alighted upon the bent figure of a man digging in a distant

"The dear old pater!" she said, softly. "He is so just and upright that he has quite forgotten now to be generous. If this dispute grows into a neighborhood quarrel, it will break mother's heart."

"That's so," said Tom; but he had no helpful suggestion to offer. The young girl slipped down from her perch on the bench and went into the sweet May sunshine. She was a born peacemaker, and the threaten d trouble made her heart ache. There were two young people at the great house on the knoll—the major's grandchildren-and everything had been so pleasant and happy until the boundary dispute had halved the apple of discord between the two families.

Her gaze went afield again, and sought and found the stooping figure in the distance. She thought it was her father, and went around through the orchard and out into the lane, meaning to take him unawares, and to pines, and gave a little start of surprise when she discovered that the delver in her father's field was Maj.

Loudon's grizzled old house-servant. "Why, Uncle Pete!" she said; "what re you doing here?"

"I's a-doin' whut ol' Marse Loudon sent me ter do, Miss Dor'thy; and I's a-wishin' eve'y minute dat dishyer spade brek off short up to de han'le," said the old negro.

Then Dorothy looked over the fence and saw a row of freshly dug postholes. The major had evidently taken the law into his own hands and was going to make sure of the nine points of possession.

"Does my father know you are here?" she asked.

"No'm, I s'pect he don't. But reckon he gwine find out 'fore long. I des been watchin' for him ter come t'arin' out dishyer way wid his gun eve'y minute."

"You needn't be afraid. My father doesn't settle his difficulties with a gun. And, anyway, he wouldn't say anything to you."

The old negro leaned on his spade and glanced timorously over one shoulder toward the distant farmhouse, and over the other at the great house on the knoll.

"I's gwine tell you somepin, Miss Dor'thy, but you mus'n't never let on dat I tol'hit. Ol Marse Loudon he been hearin' dat your pa gwine do/dis an' dat Marse Percy like he gwine to run your get t'rough wid him."

"Why, uncle; how could he do that?" "Deed, I don' know dat, Miss Dor'thy. Pears like de white folks kin do mos' melted ever so little, but he went on harnessing the horse.

"No, I haven't forgotten; and I'd do try once more to dissuade him from I'm not angry, child, but it's a matter his purpose. She came out opposite of principle. In justice to you and the bent figure in a thicket of old-field Tom, and to your mother, I am bound to defend my legal rights."

"Please don't go to-day, father. Won't you wait just a little while? As it stands now the major is the aggressor, and I'm sure he'll be sorry if you'll only give him a little time to think about it."

For a moment she thought she had won. He paused with the bridle on his arm, grasping the horse's forelock. Then he shook his head and slipped the bridle into place.

"It's no use, Dorothy, girl. It's got to come, sooner or later, and I'd rather have it done and over with."

She let him go at that, but when he climbed to his seat in the sulky she gave him a parting word.

"Remember the day, father-we used to call it our 'forgiving day' at home. Think of the good things the major has done for us, and try to forgive him."

She went to the gate and watched her father driving down the winding road. He was letting the horse walk, and as long as she could see him she fancied that his determination was wavering. When the sulky disappeared over the final hill she opened the gate and walked aimlessly in the opposite di-

Dorothy turned away sick at heart. She remembered something about a flaw in the title; that there was an farm dating back to its purchase by It had been represented that the deed had been lost in the registrar's office, and her father had so far departed from his cautions custom as to accept the faulty title.

And now, out of this trivial contention over a bit of land barely wide enough to carry the boundary fence, was to grow a monstrous injustice which was to turn them out of house and home! Dorothy's breath came thick at the thought, but she was a brave girl, and she hastened home to do what she might before it should be

"To town, to swear out a warrant against Loudon for trespass," was the curt reply. "He has sent his man over to move that line fence."

"Oh, father, I wish you wouldn't! And on Memorial day, too! Surely we can afford to be generous on this day of all others."

"It isn't a question of generosity; I'd give him the land willingly if he needed it, but I won't let him take it when it doesn't belong to him."

In mid-passage she came upon a low, curving mound, grass-grown and half unrecorded gap in the transfers of the hidden in a thicket of old-field pines. It was the remains of an old breastsome former owner many years before. work, and between the horns of the curve were seven graves. Only one of them was marked, and she knelt to read the inscription on the plain white headstone:

Sacred to the memory of CAPTAIN ROBERT PERCY GORDON. who, with six members of his command, gave up his life on this spot, September 6, 1863, while resisting the advance of the Federal

Army of Invasion. Dorothy's eyes were swimming when she finished. She was altogether of the other side; two uncles and her grandfather were of this same "Federal Army of Invasion," and these three slept among the heroes in the national cemetery at Chattanooga; but true heroism knows no political creed, and the tears came quickly when she pictured this little band of seven men lying behind the rude breastwork and yielding up their lives freely in the cause which they believed to be right.

"Poor fellows," she said, softly. "All these years you've been lying here forgotten in this lonely spot, and it is left for the daughter of those who fought against you to do you honor!"

Swiftly and with deft fingers she twined the starry azaleas into seven wreaths and laid them reverently upon the sunken mounds, leaving the "But, father, just think how kind last for the grave of the capthey've all been to us since we came tain. And how the major used to come of his huge white mustache twitching twice a day to ask if there wasn't curiously, and he seemed to be struggling for speech, and without know-

"My dear young lady," he began, but something choked him and he had to try again. "Do you know who these men were? They were rebels; they died fighting for the 'Lost Cause.' "

"I know" she said, simply; "but they thought it was right; and they were brave men. And-and to-day Memorial day."

The tips of the flerce white mustache twitched again, and the major took off his broad-brimmed hat with the most stately courtesy.

"Tell me, Miss Dorothy; did you come here to-" he could not finish, and she answered the unspoken ques-

"Not purposely," she said. "I had been gathering wild flowers, and I came here quite by accident. I didn't know there was any one buried here."

The major cleared his throat and came around to stand beside her. "We buried them just where they fell; it seemed most proper and fitting. They were on the picket line, and the order to fall back never reached

"Did you-did you know any of them?" she faltered.

choked again. "They were all old neighbors of mine," he repoined; "and this boy-this Capt. Robert Percy Gordon-was my sister's son and my name-child."

She started back at the word, and the miserable boundary wrangle came to its own again.

"Then this is your land! these are your-please forgive me, Maj. Loudon; I didn't know!"

The stately old man put on his hat with a bow that Lord Chesterfield might have envied. "It's getting right late, Miss Dorothy. Will you permit me to see you safe to your father's house?"

He tucked her arm under his own, and they went, not by the road, but up through the orchard and past the great house. At the side door which opened out of the library the major excused himself; and when he came out a moment afterward he was buttoning

Five minutes later they were crossing the road in front of the farmhouse, and the major's hand was on the gate latch when Dorothy's father drove up in the sulky. Nothwithstanding all that had befallen she expected an outburst of bitter words on one side or both, and caught her breath nervously. But there was no need.

"Good evening, Neighbor Hartwood," said the major, genially. "I just found your little gyerl here, projecting around in my old field, and I took the liberty, sah, of seeing her safe at home."

John Hartwood was a man of few words, but he climbed down from the sulky and made the proper acknowledgment of thanks.

"And while I'm here," the major went on, "there's a little matter of justice that I'd like to set right. A good many years ago, when I sold off this place to old Jeff Anderson, there was a deferred payment which was never made. Instead of taking a mortgage I merely withheld the deed; and when old Jeff died the matter was lost sight of-lost sight of completely, sah, till the other day when I happened to run across the deed among some old papers. It has just occurred to me, sah, that you need this deed to make your title good, and here it is."

John Hartwood took the deed, and while he was trying to find words in which to clothe a tumult of self-reproachful thoughts the major began

"And about that contemptible little boundary matter, two or three feet, more or less, shouldn't be allowed to come betwixt good neighbors. Let your fence stand right where it is, sah."

Whereat John Hartwood found speech at last. "No," he said, firmly. "I was all wrong in that, major-all wrong from the beginning, and I hope you will find it in your heart to forgive me. I examined the survey again today, and it's just the other way around; I'm on your land a foot and eight inches and-"

The interruption was the upcoming of old Uncle Peter, spade on shoulder. "Evenin', Miss Dor'thy; evenin', Marse Ha'twood; evenin', Marse Robbut. I done dig all dem postes-holes-" The major broke in with an explo-

"Why, you white-headed old scoundrel! go back thah and fill up those holes before I skin you alive, sah! Appears to me you're getting mighty childish in your old age-it does, for a fact!"

Dorothy slipped away in the midst of the explosion, and a few minutes 'La Neige" of its wealth of snow-white blooms, and was flitting through the old orchard with her arms laden with the fragrant burden. Black, navy, brown, or prune cottons for matrons have the most original designs, such as showers of irregular spots with rising suns or crescent moons; stars, zig-zag flashes of lightning, Empire designs, and the Greek key pattern are all in favor, and if ever it were possible to resist the dire temptation of purchasing a cotton frock, I feel sure one must succumb to it this season.

It would be out of the question to describe the immense variety of muslins, "a jour," or open-worked fabrics. Swiss embroidered robes are in white, cream or beige; the white muslins with ecru embroidery, or the ecru with white embroidery.

Sleeves are a problem which every sensible woman must be left to solve for herself. Excepting elbow sleeves, the two most popular are the bellshaped sleeve and the Czarina, which widens in a big puff from elbow to wrist. If these are in the least exaggerated, they make a small or stout woman appear ridiculous. Of the two, the bell-shape is the most practical—it can be worn with or without any undersleeve. A very pretty sleeve, mostly seen on the three-quarter coats, is a modification of the bell sleeve, reaching a little below the elbow. It is slit up at the back, and filled in with full flounces of cream lace. Macaroons on either side serve to fasten strings of beads with festoon across the lace.

Yet another sleeve is one we wore a few years ago. Gauged at the top, it flows out fully to beneath the elbow, where it is met by a long gauntlet cuff pointed on the hand.

Very deep cape collars alternate with fichus to form the bodice decoration. Boleros are worn, but they have undergone a change; the bolero proper is rounded and trimmed with tassels or tabs. They are either sleeveless or have an epaulette; others have a pouched front and a short riding basque at the back, with the sleeves that are generally bellshaped, long, or three-quarter length. Detachable basques are made to the Russian blouses, and to bodices generally. Sacque boleros are quite a feature just now; they are slashed or cut into square or round tabs. Lace spencers, or coatlets of guipure, old lace, Chantilly and Luxeuil lace, are the last cri of fashion. Sacque spencers or boleros are made as smart as can be, and worn over lace or silk blouses.

Cloth of gold serves as a foundation for some of these boleros; it is also used for the new belts. These are much the same as the corselet belt, only the downward point is deeper, the shape more curved, and the lines more graceful than of yore.

Capes and mantlets are not deemed smart, but they are often indispensable. They are then a modification of the boa, extending over the shoulders in a mass of plisse, point d'esprit net, or tulle, chenille and ribbon bows. The boa itself has become wide and flat, and worn, not as a protection for the throat, but just as an outdoor finish to a dress. Fell Sixty Feet. To fall 60 feet and yet live was the thrilling experience of William Hughes, a painter employed on the new masonic block in Hancock. In adjusting the scaffold Hughes started to slide down the rope in order' to raise the platform, but as he slipped over the roof the hook supporting the rope gave way and the painter dropped to the ground. In his flight Hughes turned half way around, struck on a shed, bounded five feet into the air and then landed on the ground, in almost a standing position, only sustaining a fracture of the leg below the knee.

Killed Deer.

Two Wisconsin deputy game wardens went to Hurley and arrested five Swedes who had in their possession as many sacks of venison. They were residents of Ironwood, on the Michigan side, and were assessed $55.25 each for their folly. Local sportsmen are much pleased at the result, as it will tend to discourage the common practice of many who kill deer at this season of the year. The woods are full of hunters every Sunday, chiefly foreigners, who kill many of the animals at this time of the year, when it is easy

A Long Sentence.

William Leet, convicted in the superior court in Grand Rapids of murder in the second degree, has been sentenced to Jackson for 30 years. Leet received the sentence with a smile, said he was innocent, and hoped to be able to prove it. The convicted man is an old soldier, draws a pension of $12 per month, and on the death of his mother, who is now 80 years old, will inherit $20,000. This money will be used in his interests.

Health in Michigan.

Reports of the state board of health from 87 observers in various portions of the state indicate that during the past week whooping cough, consumption, scarlet fever and diphtheria increased and erysipelas decreased in area of prevalence. Consumption was reported at 227 places, measles at 76, typhoid fever at 35, whooping cough at 17, scarlet fever at 83 and smallpox at 93 places.

Reward for Missing Farmer.

The relatives of Albert Keller, the prominent Bertrand township farmer who strangely disappeared over a week ago, have heard no word from him, and his whereabouts remains a mystery. The family are sending out cards bearing a picture and description of Keller, offering a reward of $500 for information concerning him.

Held for Trial.

Frank C. Andrews and H. R. Andrews, vice president and cashier, respectively, of the wrecked City savings bank in Detroit, and who are charged with the collapse of that institution, have been held for trial on July 2 in the recorder's court by Judge Whelan. They were admitted to bail in the sum of $30,000 each.

FORTUNE FOR LOVE.

Michigan Woman Secures Profitable Business Until Postal Authorities Stop It.

The postmaster at Barnips Corners, a hamlet in Alegan county, has received notice from the postal authorities at Washington to bar the mails to Lizzie Coffee, who has been advertising herself as a candidate for matrimony, stating that she had $60,000 in cash and wanted a congenial companion to help her spend

According to letters received at the village postoffice 200 people a day discovered they loved Miss Coffee and could be as congenial as desired under the conditions named.

It was found by the postoffice inspector who investigated the case that Miss Coffee had one husband and no money except that received from her daily visitors. Her operation along commercial and matrimonial lines through mails commenced two years ago. The postmaster is authority for the statement that she received mails from all parts of the country and later from Germany, England, Canada and the Philippines.

Following the investigation by postal authorities Miss Coffee left Michigan, but she was found at Fairmount, Minn., together with Frank Kiper, an accomplice, and taken back to St. Joseph.

Moose in Upper Peninsula. The fact that moose are roaming the woods of Alger county has been developed through the experience of a homesteader residing near Wetmore. A cow belonging to the farmer strayed away, and he followed her track, as he supposed, for several miles, when he was startled to find himself gazing at a moose. Inquiry since then has brought to light that other homesteaders have seen moose in that vicinity. As far as known these moose are the first which have ever taken up quarters in the upper peninsula.

Will Come to Michigan.

Capitalists who are interested in the development of Munising have been advised that a colony of Kentucky republicans will locate on lands near that town. The Kentuckians are said to be men who figured in politics in that state at the time of the Goebel assassination. It is understood that the colony from Kentucky will number several hundred people.

A DIPLOMAT IS DEAD.

Lord Pauncefote, British Ambassa dor, Dies in Washington.

While He Had Been Ill for Some Time, His Death Was Unlooked For - Sketch of His Busy Career.

Washington, May 26.-Lord Pauncefote, British ambassador to the United States, died at the embassy Saturday morning at 5:35 o'clock.

The improvement which had been noted in his condition during the past week received a sudden check about six o'clock Friday evening, when it was noticed that he was experience ing difficulty in breathing.

Dr. Jung, his physician, was immediately sent for, and he decided upon a consultation with a local physician in the meantime telegraphing for Dr. Osler, of Baltimore. In his stead came Dr. Thayer, of Johns Hopkins university, arriving about two o'clock in the morning. The patient's pulse was still good, and when Dr. Thayer left the embassy at three o'clock for Baltimore the ambassador was resting so comfortably that a cablegram was sent to his son-in-law, Mr. Bromley, in London, that there was no immediate danger.

Soon after three o'clock a distinct weakness of the heart developed and his pulse began to collapse. He died so peacefully that it surprised even his physicians, who feared that the sthmatic affection would prove troublesome when the end came.

At the bedside when the distinguished diplomat passed away were Mrs. Pauncefote, Hon. Maude Pauncefote, Miss Sibyl and Miss Audrey, Dr. Jung and Mr. Radford, one of the clerks attached to the embassy.

President Expresses Grief.

The news of Lord Pauncefote's death brought Secretary of State Hay to the white house shortly after nine o'clock, and he spent some time with the president considering what action should be taken by this government. After the conference it was announced that the president would call at the British embassy immediately after the unveiling ceremonies to offer his personal condolences and ascertain the wishes of Lord Pauncefote's family in regard to further plans.

The president also sent a letter of condolence to Lady Pauncefote. Immediately after the unveiling cere monies the flag on the white house was placed at half-mast.

Funeral Arrangements.

Washington, May 26 .- With the exception of a few details, the arrangements for the funeral services over the remains of Lord Pauncefote, the British ambassador, are now com-

Lady Pauncefote has signified her approval of the arrangements tentatively made by which services are to be held Wednesday at noon in St. John's Episcopal church, after which the body is to be temporarily deposited in a receiving vault at Rock Creek cemetery. A military escort will be provided by the war department to attend the funeral, which will be of a state character. A large number of messages of condolence from all over the world were received at the embassy but they were not made public.

Summary of His Career.

Sir Julian Pauncefote has long been highly regarded in this country as British ambassador, which position he took in 1882. He has been the recipient of unusual honors

Lord Pauncefote, as the head of the British delegation to the peace conference at The Hauge, was one of the most attractive and interesting figures. A firm believer in peace himself, he has done much to averta resort to arms and to bring about universal

He was born at Munich in 1828, and was educated in Paris and Geneva. He received a legal training and had judicial experience. He became a lawyer at Hong-Kong, and was made attorney general of that colony

From 1874 to 1882 he acted as legal assistant to the under secretary of state, first in the colonial office and then in the foreign office. He became virtually permanent foreign minister of England in 1882

In 1885 he was appointed delegate to draw up an act for the navigation of the Suez canal, and in 1889 he was sent to America potentiary at the time of the Lord Sackville trouble. Five years later he was raised to the status of ambassagor.

Lord Pauncefote was at Washington during two very critical periods, when the Venezuelan question came up, and at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war.

OUTH MOUNTAIN lay to the right - gray and gloomy, save for the summit, pierced by a few bayonets of light - advance guard of the sun which had already scaled the rampart of ines on the eastern horizon.

Along the narrow path that skirtof the base of the mountain rode a man. As he emerged from the thicket the early sunlight dazzled his eyes, and he tipped the brim of his soft, felt hat and gazed eagerly about. Before him was a little farm-scarcely more than a clearing in the woods. The partly burnt fence, the outbuildings leveled to the ground, told the story as plainly as the smoke of camp fires curling over the hill, or the sounds of drum and trumpet that mingled occasionally with the mutterings of cannon.

By a gap in the fence, her feet half girl who, as the rider came in sight, waved a sunbonnet in response to his lifted hat. Her hair was a reddish brown, her skirt of purple delaine, and she wore a scarlet waist; but the tones of all were dulled by fading here, or brightened by sunlight there, to a harmony of color.

weapon and the newcomer. With a few swift strides, the latter came toward them. He lowered his rifle and saluted. Looking from one to the other: "Do I intrude, Miss Price?"

She stepped aside, still keeping her hand on the scout's gun. This the soldier resented. "Don't be afraid, Mattie," and his voice was unconsciously tender; "that pale cheek of yours is as good as a flag of truce any day." Then to the union officer: "I have but a few moments with this young lady; can you not see that your presence is an intrusion?"

The other flashed a look at the girl-a look of love militant, triumphant. In response, her cheeks flaunted now, a crimson banner signal; bashful consciousness of a new love she was powerless to resist-of an old love set aside, overwhelmed her. A mocking-bird swung from the bow of a pawpaw bush near, and a tiny spray of dew filliped in her face. She hidden in the charred rails, stood a watched the bird soar away until its gray crest was lost in the mountain's gloom, then she gathered courage to say: "No, Jack; Maj. Strong does not intrude."

The scout stared from one to the other, then mastering himself, he spoke: "You must decide between us now, Mattie," he said. "I will not "Good-morning, sweetheart," was be rivals with the same man in love

Could Hardly Believe It. Prominent Woman Saved From Death by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suppose a large number of people who read of my remarkable cure will hardly believe it; had I not experienced it myself, I know that I should not.

MRS. SADIE E. KOCH.

"I suffered for months with troubles peculiar to women which gradually broke down my health and my very life. I was nearly insane with pain at times, and no human skill I consulted in Milwaukee could bring me relief.

"My attention was called to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; the first bottle brought relief, and the second bottle an absolute cure. I could not believe it myself, and felt sure it was only temporary, but blessed fact, I have now been well for a year, enjoy the best of health, and cannot in words express my gratitude. Sincerely yours, SADIE E. KOCH, 124 10th St., Milwaukee, Wis."-$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women.

Women should remember that they are privileged to consult Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., about their illness, entirely free.

SUFFERED 25 YEARS

With Catarrh of the Stomach-Pe-ru-na Cured.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman Congressman Botkin says:

"My Dear Doctor-It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peruna and Manalin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure."-J. D. Botkin.

Mr. L. F. Verdery, a prominent real estate agent, of Augusta, Ga., writes: "I have been a great sufferer from catarrhal dyspepsia. I tried many physicians, visited a good many springs, but I believe Peruna has done more for me than all of the above put together. I feel like a new person." L. F. Verdery.

The most common form of summer catarrh is catarrh of the stomach. This is generally known as dyspepsia.

Peruna cures these cases like magic. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable ad-

MEALTHAMPALLITS BLESSINGS

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system. the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is-Syrup of Figs-manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and share alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.-California Fig Syrup Co.-is printed on the front of every
