Overdose Caused Death.

The following dispatch from Grand Chelsea: Warren J. Colgrove, formerly the outside of the package with the name a railway mail clerk, died to-day at his of the consignor and consignee, the inihome of laudanum poisoning. He was tial point of billing and the destination, walking down Monroe street last night logether with an itemized statement of Coffee! when he suddenly fell to the sidewalk of the contents of such package. and was taken home in the ambulance. Protected Game and Fish-Must not be It was found that he was poisoned, and he grew gradually worse until he died this afternoon. A few months ago Colgrove was dismissed from the service because it was discovered that he attempted to sell a railroad pass given him by one of the companies. The matter was reported to the company and then to the department, resulting in his discharge. Since then he has been in hard luck and with a family on his hands. His widow, however, insists that his death was not a suicide, but that he was in the habit of taking laudanum to relieve pain and that he must have taken an overdose.

ELECTRIC ROAD NOTES.

A number of well known business men went to Ann Arbor yesterday and interviewed Hawks & Angus with the view of inducing them to bring their rallway line to the city via Saline and Manchester, thus furnishing an outlet to the south. But their mission was bootless, since they were informed by them that they could not do so for the reason that they had already built too near the city on the east. Possibly the true reason is that they could not parallel the Jackson Traction Company's line on that route. - Jackson

J. D. Hawks of the Hawks-Angus combination is credited with saying that his company will surely build a line from their territorial line, through Dexter, to Lansing, and that plans having that end in view are now being arranged. If they should do so, they would have one of the most valuable lines in the country. It would also be of great benefit to Dexter.-Dexter Leader.

Making Records at Home.

The peculiar interest that attaches to photographs that have been taken by yourself, as compared with purchased pictures, attaches, also, to the grapho phone records made in your own home, as compared with those that are made by professionals. It is easy to achieve good results from the start and your records will improve with practice-the same as in learning to make photographs, or to do anything else in which pratice leads to skill. To possess photographs, books, and all the long list of happy days and tender associations is delightful, but no souvenirs can compare with a cabinet filled with graphophone records from which you can reproduce the voices of your family and companions, the songs of your musical friends and, above all, the records on which are imprisoned, for reproduction at any mo-ment, the vocal achievements of the hold is like a ray of sunshine on a darkbe killed from March 2 to April 10 in each year. South Haven is Preparing to Compete With St. Joseph

IN MATRIMONIAL BUSINESS.

Will Have the Proper Authority Open Up an Office at the Dock Where Marriage Licenses can be Procured Upon Arrival of Excursionists From Chicago.

Goes St. Joseph One Better. In order to compete with St. Joseph as a Gretna Green for Chicago couples, South Haven has seenred the appointment of R. J. Madill, a deputy county clerk, with his headquarters on the steamboat dock at South Haven. This innovation was due to the fact that Paw Paw, the county seat of Van Buren county, is located 25 miles inland and couples who wanted to get married had to go to Paw Paw for licenses. Under the state system licenses can be obtained within a few minutes after leaving the boat. In that respect. South Haven now boasts of an advantage over St. Joseph, as a trip of a half mile to the court house for a license is required at the latter place before the coremony can be per-

Rep. Doyle's Death Accidental.

The investigation of the coroner's jury into the death of Rep. Doyle, who died of carbolic acid poisoning at Lansing recently, developed an interesting bit of testimony which has not heretofore been recorded. The verdict of the jury was that death was due to accidental poisoning by carbolic acid with no criminal intent on the part of anyone. It was brought out at the inquest that the whisky Doyle partook while at Miss Manders' room, was furnished by the latter's landlady, Mrs. F. H. Piper, who swore that she let Miss Manders have the whisky at a time when the latter was ailing. During the investigation it was learned that Miss Manders had won the affections of at least three members of the legislature, which would indicate that statesmen had been her long suit. She was released from custody.

Phone War at Horton and Hanover. The villages of Hanover and Horton, three miles apart, are enjoying a telephone war, which is growing desperate in its intensity. Each village is endeavoring to establish rural telephone lines, at the expense of the farmers, of course, who derive their benefit from the line by being able to get market reports every morning without going to town, and by getting the news of their small world as soon as the village people do.

Jackson County Farmers in Hard Luck.

Wheat throughout Jackson county is greatly affected with insects and some of the farmers are plowing up part of their crop and planting spring crops. Wheat's Fullure

The monthly crop report issued by Secretary of State Warner on the 10th states that fruit and garden truck suffered somewhat from frost during May, the damage usually occurring where crops were on low ground. The cool, wet weather was not favorable for the setting of fruit, but was favorable for curl leaf in peaches. The weather was very favorable for wheat and had a tendency to check the work of the Hessian fly. The weather in April was favorable to the fly, and the opinion of many farmers that great damage was then done and would be noticeable as soon as we had a few days of dry, warm weather was demonstrated to be correct during the first few days of June. Nearly every correspondent in the southern counties reports damage by the fly. In some places wheat is beginning to fall to the ground. The indications now are that the crop will be no better than last year. Fields that escaped the ravages of the pest last fall are reported to have been infested this spring, so that failure of the crop will probably be universal. The average condition of wheat in the state is 72. This estimate was made June 1, before the damage had become so noticeable. Had the estimate been made a week later it would have been lower. On June 1 last year the condition was estimated at 49 The per cent of wheat that will be plowed up because winter killed or otherwise destroyed is 14, and it would be much greater were it not for the fact that many fields are seeded to timothy or clover. The damage by Hessian fly is 31 for the state. May weather was unfavorable to corn. May

Lord Kitchener has cabled from Pre toria, under date of June 16. as follows: Near Welmansrust. 20 miles south of Middleburg, 250 Victorian mounted rifles from Geo. Heaston's column were surprised in camp at Steenkoolspruit by a superior force of Boers on the 12th. The enemy crept up to within short range and poured a deadly fire into the camp, killing 2 officers and 16 men and wounding 4 officers and 38 men, of whom 28 were slightly wounded. Only 2 officers and 50 men escaped to Gen. Beaston's camp. The remainder were taken prisoners and released. Two pompoms were captured by the enemy."

Gen. Shafter and Col. Maus, inspector-general of the department of California, and the federal grand jury are investigating the many reports of fraud committed in the commissary branch of the army service in San Francisco. That the reports seem to be based on something more substantial than idle rumors is evidenced by the disclosures following the arrest of Lewis Abraham & Sons, dealers in second-hand clothing. For months past various stores about the city have Postoffice address, Chelsea, Michigan been exhibiting signs "government goods for sale here," and advertisements have even growded into the daily newspapers. NEW FANGLED FISH STORY.

First Under Water Operation Known to Science Performed in Home Aquarium.

of the Academy of Natural Sciences, fish which he keeps in a big aquarium in his office. Some months ago one of the most amiable of these fish developed a kind of fungus growth on its tail. The growth became huge and the fish lost appetite, grew thin and seemed to be pining away, says the Philadelphia Record. It turned 50c. at last on its side-a sign that it was half dead, as all keepers of aquaria

Dr. Dixon then decided to operate on the goldfish and with great care he performed the first under-water operation known to science, amputating entire the tail, which had been rendered useless by the fungi overrunning it. The goldfish bore the shock well and began forthwith to improve in health. Strangest of all is the fact that a fine new tail has already grown out from the stump of the diseased one.

Nearly the whole of this increase is in metallic money and much the larger portion is in gold. The total stock reported in 1873 was about $4,600,000,000. More than half of this was in paper money, not fully covered by the metalning of 1900 showed a total monetary stock of about $11,600,000,000, of which only a little more than one-fourth was in uncovered paper money, says the Director Roberts finds that, while the money supply of the world has increased about $7,000,000,000, the increase in gold money since 1873 has been about $3,600,000,000; in silver, about $2,700,000,000, and in uncovered paper money only about $650,000,000.

A large proportion of the increase in gold has taken place within the short space of seven years, while the quantity of silver money, which was at its maximum of about $4,250,000,000 at the beginning of 1896, has since been somewhat reduced by the retirement of silver by Germany and its retirement in other countries. The conditions of 1893 showed a total monetary supply of about $10,300,000,000, which has since been increased by about $1,100,000,000. About $940,000,000 of this increase has

"Thank you, Billy," called the other; "much obliged."

He finished a bone, gave his fingers a wipe on the ragged trousers and slit off the wrapper of the "down-east"

Sitting in the door, he read the news of the far-away home eagerly absorbing every line. Of a sudden he paused; a gleam of something wild came flashing in his eyes and the muscles of his hands and arms abruptly stiffened.

"Married, by the Rev. Richard Watson, Feb. 20, Miss Agnes Coles to Frederick Law," was all that he read.

The type swung a dizzy waltz, with the notice for their center-a thousand animated demon spots they were, dancing at his anguish.

He hurled the sheet, in a crunchedup ball, along in the brush; he grasped a pick and went where the paper lay -all crisply swelling to open againand dug and gashed it to dirt-printed

"So that's the reason she hasn't been writing!" he fiercely hissed. "That's the game he's worked on the quiet shift! Undermined me!-tapped the cowardly heart!-damn the mine!- ly. damn everything!" His voice was choked; he reeled to the shed, he sank-half flung-to the earthen floor, to lie where the door, like a flabby his body.

His fingers gouged in the sand like ard!" hooks; his face was pressed to the chill, hard cheek of the soil. The wind swept through, the hole of a window its vent, beating the door, in weak, squeaking blows against his back.

The day grew old; a drizzling rain descended. darkness obscured him as he lay, half within, half without. The the distant howling of a lone coyote.

There on the boards she fashioned the couch whereon he tossed and rolled, fought and mined for fourteen nights and days.

Feebly he opened his eyes at length It was Susie above him, laving his forehead; Susie preparing the food at the stove; Susie who sang him the lullaby of rest in Washoe music, soft and persuasive.

Wistfully his eyes remained on her round young face. He lay there helpless, feeling like a man of thewless cotton. Day by day she coaxed his pulse to its strong, quick thump of action. Night by night his energy crept in through his system again. Yet what was the use.

There came an hour when he tottered to his feet, got the gush of spring from the visiting breeze, and at length returned to the mine-to dig in the adamant, to work off the shadows of hatred and vengeance.

Susie remained-his shy little doeadoring the air that haloed him about, thrilling unceasingly to hear aim speak-lived in her womanly scheme of an earthly heaven.

The blossoms now presented their cheeks and lips in manifold petals for the sun's caress; the birds, widethroated by gushing melodies, expressed throughout the day the joys of twining a nest in the branches. The a laugh they have had on me, and on Indian girl outspread her very fingers, to feel the current of love and life that sweetened the air.

At times, as the spring bud bourgeoned into summer, the girl and Henley roamed on the hills hand-in-hand. seeking the grass blades that a noothed the roots of the sage brush, hunting out the flowers, mocking the mellow lark—who sang of endless summer.

Now and again the man was fired by hot desire to honeycomb the mighty hills with drifts and shafts and tunnels. Yet, how sweet to wander "home" in the cool of the evening, stepping to the cheerful notes of crickets by the trail, to meet the day newborn again in the beaming face of

"But I can't go to your wigwam. I don't love you-don't you sabbee? 1 don't love you."

"Mingo, he loves you. That is plenty. I tell you come."

"Oh, you sneaking coyote! If my husband were here you would run tike the coward. You would never come to the white man's wikiup."

"He is not your husband, mahala. Do you say to Mingo, the white chief here is your husband?"

She faltered, staggered and groped a little backward.

"You say it not," he quickly continued. "It is lying. No. the mahala is not the wife at his side. She has broken the Indians' law; she has broken the law of the white man. Mahala, you belong to Mingo. I tell you come."

He moved toward her; she recoiled in dread. Her searching hand came down on the table, fell on the handle vein!-robbed the pocket! Damn his of a knife, and she grasped it sudden-

The savage blood of her nature was aflame. The Washoe flinched not at all, neither did he come. He was cunning, more than brave. The dull, banked fires were aglow in his eyes. his body was bent in a menacing attitude, his head thrown malignantly forward. Muttering threats of vengeance night came down and found him mo- he glided backward, and she slammed tionless. The creak, creak of and bolted the door. On the hill, in the sunshine, Henley was gazing at the deep blue sky, that showed in a patch through a window the path, down below, at his back, the squat, little barrel-shaped miner labored wheezingly upward.

"Letter for Henley," he called at the door, and threw in the missive and trudged along the hill.

Not an answering sound did Henley make. "A letter," he mused, not starting at all from his resting position. "Comes a trifle late, I reckon. Lifepreserver to a corpse so far as the world beyond is at all concerned." He gazed another hour at the sky, while the light moved slowly athwart the earthen floor and lay at length, a brilliant finger, across the face of the upturned envelope.

Turning, he saw the white and placid invitation. His eyes began dissecting its features. Presently the writing. round and straight, made him move by stages involuntarily toward the light. "Hers," he whispered.

His jaw grew square and firmly set; his eyes grew hard and glinted like He dug out a pocket of gold, nearly flint. Yet he took up the letter and

In the morning he bolted to the hill again; and she, like a doe to not anything but one who is master. followed him timidly far behind-followed till he threw himself down in the sage brush. She sank where she was, to wait there in patience.

In the grass-broken sand he lay and sat and lay again, thinking rapidly, incoherently the same things over and over. Under it all ran a current of (Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.) echoes: "Saved my life-she saved my life-she saved my life."

At length his wandering attention was caught by a motley procession moving slowly along in the dustwreathed road below. There were half a dozen Washoe Indians, more perhaps, approaching the town-men and women. They had two horses-jaded, hopeless creatures—that three old men stand?" were riding. Near them, walking barefooted, heavily laden, were three visages. The loads were contained in sacks and in conical baskets, heaped heavy bands, which went across the foreheads of these camel-females. Forward the burdened ones bent, looking, as if in submission and patience, on the ground, leaning on sticks which they used with either hand. It was only a party returning from the mountains with the gathered supply of bitter acorns and berries from the red manzanita. For fifty miles they had traveled thus. Painfully the wretched caravan crawled around the hill and disappeared.

Henley watched them, strangely intent. "Saved my life," he muttered aloud. "Indian-same as those, Saved me. Yes, she'll wrink'e-be old. Why did I have to have the fever! Saved my life. Wrinkled, fearful old squaws." Susie saw the squalid show. "Oh," she cried in anguish to herself. "Oh, the women-oh, the Washoe women! part of the summer? Did they hear nal and unchangeable in thy being, the larks and crickets? Did they wisdom, power, holiness, justice, goodlove?" She threw herself forward where she sat till her face was buried in her curving arm. "Oh, love!" she cried: "there is nothing in the world for me but love!"

The thoughts of Henley finally crystalized in form and sequence. He knew he would leave her, knew he would can see of God in the natural world certainly desert all things Western and go to the far-away East. How to do it gently, what to provide for her comfort, what he should say, how apply a balm with the caustic-these were matters to be planned and Built against one of the perpendicular walls was a wooden ladder, for ingress to and egress from the lower levels.

> In the afternoon, from the rocks on the hill, a crouching form came stealthily down through the scrubby brush. It was Mingo, the Washoe Indian. Noiselessly he crept to the shed -after scanning the prospect far and near for any living thing-there to lie full length on a plank at the edge of the shaft. His practiced ear was quick to catch the dull sound of blows that issued from the mine. Long he lay without moving a muscle. He could wait an hour; he cou'd wait a day.

The location of the well on the farm is one of the greatest importance. In many instances the farmer starts his well near the buildings and yards, an selects the lowest point as a location, with the idea that he will not have to dig as deep as he would upon higher land. This is often a mistake, as we know of several places in a village where the wells near the top of the hill are not as deep and are not as much affected by a drouth as those on the lower land at the foot of the hill, though there may be fifty or a hunired feet difference in this elevation But the chief objection to the well on the low ground is that it receives the surface drainage from the higher land and thus the water soon becomes so contaminated as to be unfit for use. either by the family or the animals. for to be healthy they must have pure water. In these days of driven wells a pipe can often be sunk on the highest gravel knoll or sand hill on the farm more cheaply that in the low land, and when water is reached it is pure and will continue so, because the surface water runs away from it and not toward it. If a windmill is erected the wind power is better, and by tank and pipes water can be brought to house, barn and yards, or carried to irrigate the garden and strawberry bed in a way to make it doubly pay for itself, first in savings of daily hard labor at the pump and next in increased crops by having a water supply when needed. We heard a market gardener near Boston say, a few years ago, that he put down driven wells, bought a steam engine and pump, built a tank and laid pipes. and the increased value of his crops paid the whole expense the first year, including cost of running the engine. Many a man who thought he could not afford to put in a new well has paid out more cash for doctor's and undertaker's bills than the well would have cost.—American Cultivator.

THE SEEN AND THE UNSEEN

THE SUBJECT, "Lo, These Are Parts of the Ways" But How Little a Portion Is Beard of Him"-Job xxvi, 14-Workings of Divine Power.

Washington, June 16.-In this discourse Dr. Talmage raises high expectations of the day when that which is now only dimly seen will be fully revealed; text, Job xxvl, 14: "Lo, these are parts of his ways. But how little a portion is heard of him? But the thunder of his power who can under-

The least understood being in the iniverse is God. Blasphemous would be or four squaws, with time-furrowed any attempt by painting or scu:pture to represent him. Egyptian hieroglyphs tried to suggest him by putting on the shoulders and supported by the figure of an eye upon a sword, implying that God sees and rules, but how imperfect the suggestion! When we speak of him, it is almost always in language figurative. He is "Light" or "Dayspring From on High," or he is a "High Tower" or the "Fountain of Living Waters." His splendor is so great that no man can see him and live. When the group of great theologians assembled in Westminster abbey for the purpose of making a system of religious belief, they first of all wanted an answer to the question, 'Who 's God?" No one desired to undertake the answering of that overmastering question. They finally concluded to give the task to the youngest man in the assembly, who happened to be Rev. George Gillespie. He consented to undertake it on the condition that they would first unite with him in prayer for divine direction. He began his prayer by saying, "O God, Were they young long ago? Were they thou art a spirit infinite, infinite, eterness and truth." That first sentence of Gillespie's prayer was unanimously adopted by the assembly as the best definition of God. But, after all, it was only a partial success, and after everything that language can do when put to the utmost strain and all we and realize of God in the providential world we are forced to cry out with Job in my text: "Lo, these are parts of the ways. But how little a portion is heard of him? But the thunder of his power who can understand?"

The mine petal and centrifugal forces respond to was simply a hole in the ground, 50 each other." But what is natural law? feet in depth, with branching tunnels It is only God's way of doing things. God's direct and continuous power that controls and harmonizes and sustains. That power withdrawn one instant would make the planetary system and all the worlds which astronomy reveals one universal wreck, bereft hemispheres, dismantled sunsets, dead constellations, debris of worlds. What power it must be that keeps the internal fires of our world imprisonedonly here and there spurting from a Cotopaxi, or a Stromboli, or from a Vesuvius, putting Pompeli and Herculaneum into sepulcher, but for the most part the internal fires chained in their cages of rock, and century after century unable to break the chain or burst open the door! What power to keep the component parts of the air in right proportion, so that all around the world the nations may breathe in health, the frosts and the heats hindered from working universal demolition! Power, as Isaiah says, "to take up the isles as a very little thing." Ceylon and Borneo and Hawaii as though they were pebbles; power to weigh the "mountains in scales" and the "hills in balances"-Tenerife and the Cordilleras. To move a rock we must have lever and screw and great machinery, but God moves the world with nothing but a word; power to create worlds and power to destroy them, as from observation again and again they have been seen red with flame, then pale "ith ashes and then scattered.

> Workings of the Divine Power. We get some little idea of the divine power when we see how it buries the proudest cities and antions. Ancient Memphis it has ground up totil many of its ruins are no larger than your thumb nail and you can hardly find a souvenir large enough to remind you of your visit. The city of Tyre is under the sea which washes the shore. on which are only a few crumbing villars left. Sodom and Gormorrab are covered by waters so deathful that not a fish can live in them. Babylon and Ninevah are so blotted out of existence that not one uninjured shaft of their ancient splendor remains. Mothing but omnipotence could have put them down and put them under. The antediluvian world was able to send to the postdiluvian world only one ship with a very small passenger list. "Omnipotence first rolled the seas over the land, and then told them to go back to their usual channels as rivers and lakes and oceans. At omnipotent command the waters pounding upon their prey, and at confincient command slinking back into their appropriate places. By such rehears I we try to arouse our appreciation of what omnipotence is, and our reverence is excited, and our adoration is intensified, but after all we find ourselves at the thom, at the rim of a circumference we cannot compass, and we feel like harbor; the hard battle of life is ended could never attend a prayer meeting first going down on our kneed and then like falling flat upon our faces as we the moment heaven began, and the

the Old Testament was when an infant hidden in a cave because of the persecutions of Nimrod. The first time the child came out of the cavern it was night, and he looked up at the star and cried, "This is my God," but the star disappeared, and Abraham said, "No, that cannot be my God." After awhile the moon rose, and Abraham said, "That is my God," but it set, and Abraham was again disappointed. After awhile the sun rose, and he said, "Why, truly, here is my God," but the sun went down, and Abraham was saddened. Not until the God of the Bible appeared to Abraham was he satisfied, and his faith was so great that he was called "the Father of the Faithful." All that the theologians know of God's wisdom is insignificant compared with the wisdom beyond human comprehension. The human race never has had and never will have enough brain or heart to measure the wisdom of God. I can think of only two authors who have expressed the exact facts. The one was Paul, who says, "Oh, the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out." The other author was the scientist who composed my text. I think he wrote it during a thunderstorm, for the chapter says much about the clouds and describes the tremor of the earth under the reverberations. Witty writers sometimes depreciate the thunder and say it is the lightning that strikes, but I am sure God thinks well of the thunder, or he would not make so much of it, and all up and down the Bib'e he uses the thunder to give emphasis. It was the thunder that shook Sinai when the law was given. It was with thunder that the but moderately watered, washed, w Lord discomfited the Philistines at outside daily for a bath of air and su-Eben-ezer. Job pictures the warhorse shine and must not be stood as having a neck clothed with thunder. | draughty places. St. John, in an apocalyptic vision, again and again heard the thunder. The thunder, which is now quite well explained by the electricians, was the overpowering mystery of the ancients, and standing among those mysteries Job exclaimed: "Lo, these are parts of his ways. But how little a portion is heard of him? But the thunder of his power who can understand?

The Omn'presence of God. We have all been painfully reminded in our own experien es that we cannot be in two places at the same time. Madler, the astronomer, went on with his explorations until he concluded that the star Alcyone, one of the Pleiades, was the center of the universe, and it was a fixed world, and like six years ago," says the Railwis all the other worlds revolved around | Engineering Review, "a test of electhat world, and some think that that tric transmission over a line between world is heaven and God's throne is there, and there reside the nations of a distance of 110 miles, was made to the blest. But he is no more there than he is here. Indeed, Alcyone has been found to be in motion, and it also is revolving around some great center. But no place has yet been found where God is not present by sustaining power. Omnipresence! Who fully appreciates it? Not I. Not you. Sometimes we hear him in a whisper. Sometimes we hear him in the voice of the storm that jars the Adriondacks. But we cannot swim across this ocean. The finite cannot measure the infinite. We feel as Job did after finding God in the gold mines and the silver mines of Asia, saying, "There is a vein for the silver and a place for the gold where they fine it." And after exploring the heavens as an astromoner and finding God in distant worlds and becoming acquainted with Orion and Mazzaroth and Arcturus and noticing the tides of the sea the inspired poet expresses his incapacity to understand such evidences of wisdom and power and says: "Lo, these are parts of his ways. But how little a portion is heard of him? But the thunder of his power who can understand?"

So every system of theology has attempted to describe and define the divine attribute of love. Easy enough is it to define fatherly love, motherly love, conjugal love, fraternal love, sisterly love and love of country, but the love of God defles all vocabulary. For many hundreds of years poets have tried to sing it and painters have tried to sketch it and ministers of the gospel to preach it and martyrs in the fire and Christians on their deathbeds have extolled it, and we can tell what it is like, but no one has yet fully told what it is. Men speak of the love of God as though it were first felt between the pointing of Bethlehem star and the pounding of the crucifixion hammer. But no! Long before that existed the Seeing God Face to Face. Only glimpses of God have we in this wor'd, but what an hour it will be when we first see him, and we will have no more fright than I feel when I now see you. It will not be with mortal eye that we will behold him, but with the vision of a cleansed, forgiven and perfected spirit. Of all the quintillion ages of eternity to us the most thrilling hour will be the first hour when we meet him as he is. This may account for something you have all seen and may not have understood. Have you not noticed how that after death of the old Christian looks young again or the features resume the look of 20 or 30 years before? The weariness is gone out of the face; there is something strikingly restful and placid; there is a pleased look where before there was a disturbed look. What has wrought the change? I think the dying Christian saw Gc. At the moment the soul left the body what the soul saw left its impression on the countenance. Resping Flowers Fresh Cut flowers, though universally ployed, are seldom treated as it ought to be, so here are & few his for those who like to keep their he soms fresh as long as possible.

First of all, they should be put in some large receptacle and spring freely with water all over. Only at this preliminary operation it is wise transfer them to the several pots the are to occupy. They ought to be tak out every morning, sprinkled as the first day, the tip of the stem the being cut off, and fresh water, for ing from a tap, should be allowed run over the stalks, holding the flow ers head downward, says the Philadel phia Press.

Finally, and herein lies the principal secret of success, the water in the vases may be "doctored" in this man ner. Mix thoroughly together a table spoonful of finely shredded yello soap, enough chloride of sodium cover a florin, and half a pint of wat Put in a portion of this mixture in every receptacle and fill in the usu

A pinch of borax in each one will preserve all the coloring of the mon brilliant flowers, and by renewing the supply of the above solution every two or three days the flowers will last for a couple of weeks or more. Palms and all foliage plants must be carefully

SAVES TWO FROM DEATH.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland of Armonk, N. Y., "but when all other remedies falled, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece, who had consumption in an advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and today she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung diseases yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for coughs and colds. 50c and $1 00 bottle guaranteed by Glazier & Stimson.
