A Correction and Apology.

Last week the Herald, on the information of certain persons, stated that the Sunday News-Tribune's story about a man named Henry B Cleveland being tried for the murder of John Depew, of Chelsea, in 1863 was a fake. We wish to acknowledge the wrongfulness of the statement thus made, as we have since been informed by G. W. Turnbull, who was at that time a justice of the peace for Sylvan and conducted the coroner's inquest in the case that the facts as related by the News-Tribune and copied in the Ann Arbor Argus and Washtenaw Times were correct. Entries in the court journal on file in the county clerk's office at Ann Arbor also corroborate the story. We apologise for the error we were led into.

DEATH OF FRED VOGEL.

A Former Resident of Chelsea and a Most Estimable Citizen.

Frederick Vogel, who was one of the best and most favorably known of Chelsea's citizens during his long residence here of 30 years, died in Pittsburg, Pa., Sunday morning, after an illness of only three days, although he had been indisposed for about six weeks. He went to his office Friday afternoon, and Saturday morning sat up in bed making out the pay roll. While doing so, however, he fell over three times completely exhausted. It was thought he would get better, but the nervous prostration that he suffered from took a more serious turn Saturday and about 10 o'clock that night his son Edward Vogel received a telegram to go to his father at once as he was worse. He took the train Sunday morning and half an hour after he left a telegram was received that Mr. Vogel was dead. The remains were brought to Chelsea Tuesday morning. The funeral services, conducted by Rev. C. S. Jones, were held at the residence of his son, Edward Vogel, in the afternoon. The interment was in Oak Grove cemetery. Funeral services were also held at Pittsburg Monday afternoon.

Frederick Vogel was born Sept. 27, 1838, at Bienenberg oberamt Stuttgart, Wuertemberg, and was 63 years, 9 months and 10 days old at the time of his death. He was the son of John George and Caroline (Dieterle) Vogel. His mother died when he was 17 years old and two years afterwards, in 1857, he came to America, settling in Ann Arbor. He worked in a store there for three years and then entered the carriage factory of Slawson & Wurster. Afterwards he worked in Lansing, but the energetic ambition that always characterized him did not allow him to remain long an employee and in 1865 he came to Chelsea and started a wagon and carriage making and repairing shop, in which he had a fine trade. During the years of his long residence in Chelsea he was a prominent man in many ways. At different times he was clerk, treasurer and trustee of the village, also clerk and treasurer of the township, and for about four years was deputy postmaster under William Judson. One of the organizers and charter members of the Chelsea Arbeiter Verein he had held many offices in that order. He was also an active member of St Paul's German Evangelical church and was one of its trustees for many years. After leaving that church he united with the Congregational church, of which he was a member at the time of his death. In the fall of 1894 the affairs of the City Mission Publishing Co. of Pittsburg, Pa., in which Reuben Kempf was largely interested, became heavily involved through mismanagement. Mr. Kempf, knowing Mr. Vogel's great business ability and integrity induced him to go and take charge of the business, which is now in a healthy and prosperous condition.

Mr. Vogel was married in 1865 to Miss Mary Kirn, of Ann Arbor. Three sons, Edward, Albert Frederick, and Herman Ernest, were born to them, who with their mother mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate husband and parent.

White Man Turned Yellow.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogarty, of Lexington, Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly. His malady was yellow jaundice. He was treated by the best doctors, but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful stomach and liver remedy, and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by Glazier & Stimson, druggists.

THE FARMING WORLD

WIDE-AWAKE FARM BOY.

Evidently This Youngster Is Determined to Make Agriculture a Profitable Occupation.

This article is for the boys; those live, up-to-date lads that like the farm and its stock. The boy that it is about lives in Portage county, and I know that you will be interested in hearing about him. Last fall the writer attended the Chagrin Falls fair, and on the road from that fair we passed a boy driving a pair of calves hitched to a wagon. He was sitting on the spring seat, whip in hand, as dignified as any grown man. The calves were well broken, and they responded perfectly to a word and a light tap of the whip which he carried in his hand. We noticed that he never beat them or yelled at them, as some grown persons do when they drive oxen.

We thought: "Now, here is a nice picture," so it was arranged that Harry Stebbins (for this is the boy's name) should bring his calves and wagon over to Mr. John Gould's the next day and have their photograph taken. The next forenoon Harry was on hand with his outfit, and Mr. Gould borrowed a neighbor's children to help fill the wagon, for that is the only way John has any children of his own. The sun was just right on the south side of the windmill, derrick and large maple in the yard. Sitting there in the morning sunlight, Harry looked as pleased as a "sure-enough" farmer. Snap went the camera, and the picture was taken as quick as a flash, and you can see all just as they looked.

You will think it must have taken Harry lots of time to break these calves. Yes, it did, but then boys have lots of odd hours, and Harry used his in training his calves, besides forming the habit of industry.

The managers of the fair invited Harry to bring his trained calves to the fair and go in the procession in the ring, and gave him a premium for doing so. That was why he was feeling so gay and proud coming home that evening from the county fair. His little yoke of steers, one year old, had won a prize all through his own efforts.

One day Harry's father wanted some bran from the feed store, two miles away, and Harry said he could go after it with his wagon and calves. There was a big hill to come up on the road home, and Harry's father thought that they could not haul more than 200 or 300 pounds, but Mr. Stebbins was surprised to see them bring home 700 pounds. Some time before Christmas Harry sold his calves for $45 to a man in the neighborhood who wanted a young yoke of oxen for his farm. He is breaking another pair, getting them ready for work on the farm. Apparently this boy is cultivating a love for farm industries that will make the right sort of a farmer.—George E. Scott, in Ohio Farmer.

The Old and the New.

We cannot help admiring the fine spirit of conservatism which leads many men to cling to the faith of their fathers in many good things. But there is such a thing as being too conservative. When conservatism means ignorance, awkward methods, unsatisfactory returns, it is not a subject of reverence, but a source of stagnation and poverty. The true spirit of improvement is not a wild desire for something new; but it is a willingness to recognize that which is best and to utilize it whether it conflicts or coincides with former ideas. Let us not revere the old things too much, nor exalt the new things merely because they are new.—American Cultivator.

Remedy for Duck Cholera.

Mix up a batch of Douglass mixture and use, according to following directions. It is one of the best poultry tonics: Dissolve one pound of copperas (sulphate of iron) in two gallons water, and add one ounce sulphuric acid. The latter must be carefully handled, as it is a dangerous poison. The dose of the mixture is one teaspoonful to each quart of drinking water. Do not use except in cases of disease, or when it is threatened. Good in cases of roup and cholera and as a disinfectant. Keep the ducks in a well sheltered place; don't allow them to get wet. Feed clean grain and plenty of green grass.—Ohio Farmer.

FLY BRUSH FOR CATTLE.

A Simple Arrangement Which Enables Stock to Wage War Against Insect Enemies.

In the summer it is just as necessary to provide cattle with a place in the pasture field where they may brush off the flies as it is to furnish shade, food or drink. The device in the illustration shows a good arrangement for this purpose. It consists first of four posts set in the form of a rectangle 12 feet long and eight feet wide. At one end the posts are about 5 1/2 feet high, at the other only three feet. Across each end of the rectangle an eight-inch board is nailed at the top of the posts. In the upper edge of these boards are cut notches about four inches deep and 2 1/2 inches wide. Beginning next to the posts these notches are cut at intervals of 18 or 20 inches.

Now take boards four inches wide, 12 feet long and not heavier than one inch thick. Arrange these in pairs, as many pairs as there are notches in each end board, and bore holes through them at intervals of one foot, preparatory to bolting them together. Brush which has been collected from the thicket is now placed between these boards and clamped fast. For the sake of clearness only one of these brush is shown in the illustration. The clamps thus formed are now placed in the notches prepared for them in the end boards, with the brush hanging down. They are held down by a narrow board nailed across the tops of the posts at each end.

The device is now complete. The difference in height at the two ends makes it suitable for cattle of all sizes. The brush will last for a long time, but should they become much worn, or old and brash, they may be easily replaced.—Orange Judd Farmer.

DRESSING SHEEPSKINS.

Not a very intricate operation if executed according to the directions given herewith.

To tan sheep hides with the wool on and to dye wool on the same, spread skin, flesh side up, when taken off. Sprinkle pulverized alum over it, followed by a little saltpeter and plenty of common salt. Roll up and put where it will not freeze. Two ounces each of alum and salt will tan a sheep or other similar sized skin. When the skin is tanned the flesh on it will rub off easily. Then nail the skin to boards in the sun, stretching it tight, and apply a little neatfoot oil, which should afterward be worked out with a wedge-shaped piece of wood. The skin is then wet until soft and then worked until dry. If it is not worked and rubbed it will dry harsh and stiff. For sheep and lamb skins a strong suds is usually first made with hot water, in which the skins are washed carefully, squeezing them between the hands to get the dirt out of the wool. The skin is then washed in clear water, and alum and salt, half a pound each are dissolved in a little hot water, which is put into enough cold water in a tub to cover two skins. Let soak over night and then hang on a pole to drain. When well drained, spread, stretch and tack them to a board, flesh side up. While yet a little damp put on the pulverized saltpeter and alum, rub it in well, then lay the flesh sides of two skins together and hang them in the shade two or three days, turning the under skin up-permost every day until perfectly dry. Then scrape the flesh side with a dull knife to remove the remaining scraps of flesh and rub the flesh side with pumice stone and afterward with the hands, until soft and pliable. For dyeing buy the aniline dyes, of the colors wanted, and get directions with them.—Home, Stock and Farm.

Our Sturdy Country Boys.

There is no question of the influence which the sturdy outdoor life has upon country boys; and the fact that the life is harnessed to regular, imperative duties is to the boy's advantage. He is developed gradually and healthily, his mind following his physical strength rather than the reverse. And around him, for his everyday observation and study, are the very best object lessons possible for a boy's developing life. He associates familiarly with nature during his work and recreation; and even during his sleep, the air which enters his open chamber windows is laden with the odors of apple blossoms, or the harvest season, or, perhaps, is the pure, stimulating atmosphere of the pure, undulating winter fields. But it is white, undulating making him stronger, sturdier, more self-reliant, more ambitious, more observing. He is healthy all through, physically, mentally, morally.—Farm Journal.

By all means use water fountains, or at least some form of water vessel that the flock cannot be foul with their feet or otherwise. Set in shady places and fill daily with fresh water.

THE PINGREE FUNERAL.

Beautiful and Touching Ceremony Marked Last Honors Shown to Michigan's Dead Governor.

Detroit, Mich., July 8.—When the beautiful strains of "Jesus, Lover of My Soul" swelled through the Pingree homestead Saturday afternoon, the beginning of the funeral services over Hazen S. Pingree, former governor of Michigan, the house was crowded to its utmost capacity with those who had known and loved the dead man. In life Mr. Pingree's house was never closed to the public, and it was so in death. All for whom room could be found were permitted entrance. The services were held in the east drawing-room. A Scriptural reading broke the hush which followed the hymn, and then Rev. Reed Stuart, a Unitarian minister, and Rev. Nehemiah Boynton, a Congregationalist, spoke on the life and works of the dead statesman. Slowly and reverently the casket was borne from the house to a flag-draped caisson drawn by four horses. Escorted by Gov. Bliss and staff, the First regiment Michigan national guard and the First battalion Michigan naval reserves, the cortege passed slowly down the broad avenue, past thousands of members of various civic organizations who were drawn up at a salute on one side of the avenue. As the caisson rolled by each organization fell in behind it, marching to the solemn tones of the dirge played by the bands. The interment was at Elmwood cemetery and the services there were in charge of the Scottish rite masons and the G. A. R.

The line of march from the Pingree home to the cemetery is 4 1/2 miles in length, and it was after six o'clock when the head of the slow-moving cortege entered the cemetery. The Pingree family has no burial lot and the ex-governor's body was placed in a little valley midway in the burying ground, beside a small stream. As the cortege wound its slow way down to the vault a hush fell over the thousands of people gathered on the hillocks around about and all heads were bared. Over 5,000 men, civic and military, had escorted the caisson bearing the casket up to the cemetery, but only the military bodies entered the grounds. The 1,200 soldiers and naval reserves, headed by Gov. Bliss and staff, Gen. H. M. Duffield, chief marshal, and staff, and Brig. Gen. M. G. Boynton, of the Michigan national guard, and staff, took up a position along the roadway traversed by the caisson with the casket. The command "Present arms!" rang out, and the Michigan national guard paid its last respects to the remains of its former commander in chief as the caisson was drawn past them by a squad of military. Gov. Pingree's favorite horse, saddled but riderless, with the ex-governor's riding boots reversed on the saddle, preceded the caisson. Over 500 men employed in Mr. Pingree's shoe factory marched mournfully behind the carriages containing the family and honorary pallbearers. When the casket arrived at the vault the beautiful burial service of the Scottish Rite Masons was read and the impressive ceremony of presenting Mr. Pingree's Scottish Rite ring to his eldest son performed. Rev. Nehemiah Boynton pronounced the benediction and three volleys rang out from a firing squad. When the echoes had died away "taps" was wailed out by a bugler and then the casket was borne into the vault to lie beside that of the dead man's favorite daughter.

THE BUFFALO SHOW.

Total Attendance at the Pan-American Exposition So Far Is Nearly 1,800,000.

Buffalo N. Y., July 8.—The total attendance to date at the Pan-American exposition is 1,779,868. The exposition attendance began on the 20th of May, but at that time many features were incomplete and the people remained away. The average daily attendance for June, including five Sundays, was over 31,000. The excessively hot weather during the last two weeks has had a deterrent influence on the attendance, notwithstanding Buffalo is rated as "the coolest city" by several degrees on account of the breezes from Lake Erie. It is believed that July and August will easily bring the total to above 5,000,000, and it will remain for September and October to bring the remainder of the 10,000,000, at which the status of guessers has been set. At the Chicago world's fair 58 per cent. of the attendance was during the last two months. Eight million paid admissions with the revenues from concessions, will repay the cost of the Pan-American exposition.

President McKinley will come to the exposition in September. There will be a president's day in honor of his presence. The exact date has not been settled, but correspondence on the subject has been exchanged, and it is certain that the president will be here some day during that month.

ODORS OF THE KITCHEN.

By the Exercise of Care and the Adoption of Ventilator the Housewife Can Control Them.

Odors are subtle, withal searching. In dealing with those in the kitchen an ounce of prevention is worth at least a ton of cure. The heavy smell of stale grease, most clinging and most offensive of all, comes more than anything else from slopping or spluttering over, which a very little care in range management prevents. The acrid smell of burnt or scorched things is positively painful—so much so that a cook's first lesson ought to be that fire was given for cooking, not burning. Leaving unwashed pots and stewpans to dry and simmer on the range is a fruitful source of ill odors easily remedied. Dissolve two pounds of washing soda in a gallon of boiling water and keep a bottle of it handy. As you empty cooking vessels pour in soda water an inch deep, shake it well all around the sides and leave until washing time. If the pots and pans keep warm, so much the better—the soda will do its work more perfectly.

Onions, turnips and all the cabbage tribe, which smell to heaven, may have their scent somewhat abated by a little care in the boiling. The odor comes from their essential oils, which volatilize. If the vegetables are prepared some hours before they are wanted and left to soak in weak, cold water, rinsed and put over the fire in fresh, cold water, they throw up this essential oil largely in the form of a scum. Let them come to a boil before putting in the salt, and skim very clean. After the salt is in add a dash of cold water—it will throw up a second scum, which must be removed at once. Cook all such vegetables uncovered. A lid strengthens the odor tenfold and makes it more offensive.

Another preventive is a bread crust, very hard and very stale. Drop it into the water just as it strikes a boil and let it stay ten minutes, then skim it out. Most of the oil will come with it; further, the spongy crust will have kept it from vaporizing. Cauliflower not quite fresh always smells tremendously. The best thing for it is a scald in weak salt water, boiling hot, before the cold soaking. If the heads are big cut them into pieces so as to make sure of removing every bit of discolored curd.

Even when summer heat puts an open fireplace out of commission, a quick fire, as of straw, excelsior, light shavings, even newspapers, will set up a purifying draught and help to free the kitchen of unpleasant odors. Failing an open fireplace the kitchen ought to have a range hood. There are hoods and hoods—at almost any price you choose, from the big burnished copper affairs, in the great hotels, to the modest sheet iron contrivance, which is an integral part of so many among the newest stoves. There is a movable hood, working up and down like the shutter of rolltop desk, that is in theory all a hood ought to be—with something to spare—but in practice has proved much less satisfactory than the stationary ones.

No mechanical contrivance can wholly make up for the lack of care and intelligence in the cook—notwithstanding it is a fact that a hood, well set, in a large measure carries away the fumes of food. The manner of setting will depend on the size and location of the flue. The lower edge ought to be high enough to be quite out of the way, yet not so high as to either miss or defeat the ascending hot air column. It may seem at first a costly betterment, for no direct material benefit, but a year's use will show the money to have been well spent.

Not to name present and everyday comfort, all things keep much better in a well-aired house. Smells are ner of setting will depend on the size but the cognizable signs of air conditions that breed mold, rust and must. Metal tarnishes and fabrics decay twice as quickly in heavy and musty air as in that which is clean and bracing.

A kitchen with neither hood nor fireplace should at least have a trumpet ventilator. This is only a tin tube with a widely flaring mouth, crooked body and narrow upper end. It should be set in the wall above the range, with the flaring mouth, which curves over and downward, against the ceiling. The narrow end goes inside the flue, projecting just enough to secure a good draught. The efficacy of this device, a makeshift at best, depends mainly upon the size and smoothness of the flaring mouth and the tightness of the setting in the flue.—Chicago Record-Herald.

HANGING WORK BAG.

A Great Convenience for a Small Sitting Room When Every Inch of Space Counts.

This work bag was devised for use in a small sitting-room, where space was precious. Hung low enough to be within easy reach of the seamstress' chair, it can be swung wide open for use, or the cord drawn up and slipped over the nail, instantly closing it.

For the foundation cut a piece of dress canvas 16 1/2 inches long by 10 inches wide. Cover with silk and paint or embroider a spray of flowers on the front. Cover inside with silesia of a contrasting shade, and run a featherbone across each end.

HANGING WORK BAG.

For sides, cut two wedge-shaped pieces of silk nine inches wide across top and seven inches deep after rounding off point by a circle two inches in diameter. Line with silesia, but omit stiff interlining. Join to straight portion, having seams outside. Bind seams and all round top with narrow ribbon, stitching on the machine.

Set four pockets across back, slightly full, the top drawn with an elastic cord; below them stitch three pinked flannel leaves for needles. Fasten two cloak hooks close together at top, on which to hang scissors. With colored tidy cotton crochet a strip in open chain stitch two inches wide by ten inches long; sew this along its longer edge across front side of bag, half-way up, and run several divisions. Each division forms a pocket for a spool of thread; put end of thread through meshes and a length can be taken off without removing the spool. Make a long, narrow pin cushion and stuff thinly with curled hair; fasten just above spool pockets.

Leave upper part of front plain, so it will close flat. Sew small brass rings along upper edge of sides and at each upper corner. Run one and one-half yards of picture cord through all the rings, slipping on an extra ring at back and front and join. Stretch bag open its full width and tack cord securely to rings at two back corners. Hang up and try if front and back cords are of equal length when bag is closed; if not, lengthen or shorten back cord.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Burmese Weddings Are Simple.

The wedding ceremony in Burma is extremely simple, consisting merely of the man and woman sitting and eating rice from one dish in the presence of their assembled friends. Many people who dislike the idea of fuss, which seems part and parcel of an accidental wedding, consider the Burmese simplicity quite delightful. In Burma, however, young couples seem to find that it lacks romance, for it is common for elopements to take place.

Fashion Dominated by Lace.

There never was a time in all the history of fashion when lace was so universally worn. Evening gowns are wholly made of it. Silken gowns revel in it for decoration. Wash dresses are lavishly adorned with it, and even cloth costumes are decorated modestly but definitely with it.

Italian Wedding Customs.

In Italy Sundays are usually preferred for marriages when the principals have never been married before. Widows, however, respect an old custom of marrying on Saturdays.

Indignant.

BASE BALL ITEMS.

The Umpire from Manchester Was Bound His Team Should Win.

A well played game of base ball took place on the afternoon of the Fourth between the Junior Stars and a nine of the St. Luke's choir boys of Ypsilanti. Edgar Steinbach distinguished himself by making two home runs. The final score stood 17 to 12 in favor of the Junior Stars. A good sized crowd witnessed the game.

The game of base ball played Friday afternoon between the Junior Stars and the Manchester team was a warmly contested one, the teams being quite evenly matched, but the umpire who was a Manchester young man, was a whole host in himself for his home players. Not only did he render wrong decisions adverse to the Chelsea boys, but he even took it upon himself to coach the Manchester boys; on one occasion going so far as to say to one of them, "Run in. Didn't I tell you to run in once before." One of his wrong decisions was in calling a ball on the Chelsea pitcher when even the batter acknowledged that he had struck at the ball. Another was in declaring Edgar Steinbach out at third when the baseman stated that he did not touch him. And there were other decisions equally wrong. At the end of the game he was hooted at and pelted with potatoes as a reward for his fidelity (?) to his home team. It is but fair to the Manchester boys to state that they were almost as much incensed at his manifest unfairness as were the Chelsea boys. Outside of the umpiring the game was a good one, and it took ten innings to decide it, the final score being 18 to 15 in favor of Manchester. In the fifth innings the game stood 12 to 12. Each team made three runs in the sixth, and then followed three beautiful goose eggs for each in the seventh, eighth and ninth. In the tenth innings Manchester made three runs and the Chelsea boys one.

THE ANN ARBOR RAILROAD'S PROJECT

Vast Improvements to Be Made at Frankfort on the Lake.

SUPERB HOTEL TO COST OVER $100,000

All the Available Forest Lands along the Lake Acquired for Summer Cottages.—Big Improvements at Crystal Lake.

The Ann Arbor Railroad recently made public the details of a gigantic project, which will make Toledo the gathering ground of thousands of tourists, from all parts of America, and advance the city of Frankfort, Michigan, to a position of national prominence as a health and pleasure resort.

Mention has been made in the press, from time to time, of some of the features of the enterprise, but its magnitude and importance have never been appreciated for the very good reason that the railroad company has not, up to this time, been in a position to divulge all of its plans.

Summarized, the undertaking includes the erection of a superb hotel representing an investment of over $100,000; the establishment of immense baths, and the exploitation of the wonderful waters at Frankfort, on a scale that will rival Mt. Clemens; a colony of summer cottages for which the company has purchased all the desirable forest lands running east from Frankfort along the shores of the lake for several miles; a second colony of cottages at Crystal Lake, where the com-perfect sanitary provisions made for the health, convenience, and comfort of the cottagers. It will be an ideal community, modeled somewhat after the plan of Middle Bass. No land will be sold, but every member will have a common interest and a voice in the conduct of community affairs. It is not sought to attract wealth or large expenditure, but to provide for home people, a summer's rest and recreation at a modest and reasonable outlay.

A pleasant feature connected with this little summer city on the cliffs, will be a beautiful Lyceum building or auditorium to be erected among the trees on the side of a beautiful hill, close to the first community street.

Solely on the strength of personal testimony offered by people who have taken the waters, Frankfort has enjoyed a limited fame for years through the efficacy of its mineral springs, and the Ann Arbor Co. proposes to take full advantage of their opportunity. There is no doubt whatever that the springs possess powers equally as potent as those at Mt. Clemens, and that fact will be heralded to all corners of the country. On this one propopany has likewise acquired all the most desirable property; perfect bathing equipment at Crystal Lake, with fine bath houses and all the modern addenda; splendid golf links at Frankfort, which experts say will surpass any in America; and a host of minor improvements which will constitute in the total, an expenditure of nearly half a million dollars.

The hotel, so far as the outward construction is concerned, is practically complete, and when it is opened next year, will unquestionably be the handsomest structure of the sort in Northern Michigan. Those who have visited Frankfort, and have seen the plans, are all making comparisons with the finest hotels in the state, greatly to the disadvantage of the latter. The building occupies an ideal location. It is situated on what has long been known as the "Island," only a few hundred feet away from the sandy shores of old Lake Michigan, commanding a superb view, and swept by cooling breezes on every side.

The hotel will contain 225 guest rooms, and the architect has done his work so well that it is no exaggeration to say that there will not be a poor room in the building. The interior furnishings will be of a most generous and elaborate character, and no improvement or comfort that could possibly be suggested, will be omitted. Broad verandas and balconies will practically circle the house, and fine billiard rooms and bowling alleys will be provided for the amusement of the guests.

The property acquired by the railroad company, for the erection of summer cottages, consists of a magnificent stretch of rugged cliffs mounting straight up from the sandy shores of the lake to a height that varies from 150 to 300 feet. The summit of these cliffs is a forest of primeval wildness and beauty; and the view, looking over the lake, a spectacle that strikes the beholder into silence and awesome admiration.

Nature's handiwork will be left undisturbed as far as possible, but to the exquisite beauty of the place, will be added all the substantial accommodations which are absolutely essential to the complete enjoyment of a summer outing. The property will be intersected at certain intervals by community streets, and sition alone—publicity—the Ann Arbor Co. will spend thousands of dollars in the next three years. The big baths will be erected and in operation by the time of the opening next year.

With its wonderful natural advantages and all the added attractions it is only a question of a short time before Frankfort will become an important stopping point in the itinerary of the lake passenger lines. The hotel occupies such a bold and prominent position that it will practically advertise the place to every boat that passes.

It is hoped and expected that the cottages along Lake Michigan and Crystal Lake will be monopolized by Toledo, Northwestern Ohio and Michigan people. Both places have long been favorite outing grounds for local tourists who will be loth to see their cherished haunts turned over to travelers from other states.

At Crystal Lake the bathing equipment will be arranged with special provision for the comfort and safety of the children. Those who wish to take a dip in Lake Michigan will have every opportunity to do so, but as the water is generally a trifle too cold for comfort the majority will unquestionably prefer to go to Crystal Lake.

State Teachers' Institute

To the Teachers of Washtenaw County:
The State Teachers' Institute will be held in Ann Arbor at the high school building during the five days beginning July 29, 1901. At this time I desire to meet and get acquainted with every teacher in the county.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction has appointed Prof. F. J. Tooze, of Saline, conductor, and Prof. M. W. Wimer, of Coldwater, assistant.

Under the management of these worthy gentlemen I believe we can have one of the best short term institutes in the state.

Hoping every teacher of the county will attend and take an active part, I remain,
Respectfully yours,

INDIAN MOUNDS OPENED.

Three Discovered in the Past Four Years in the Vicinity of Ann Arbor, Michigan.

PROF. HINSDALE CONDUCTS EXAMINATION

It is Done in a Scientific Manner and a Complete Record Kept of the Findings - Ornaments of Various Kinds Brought to Light - Interesting Relics Preserved.

[Special Correspondence.]

University of Michigan, July 8.—Within the last two years Dr. Wilbert B. Hinsdale, dean of the homeopathic department of the University of Michigan, has opened three Indian mounds in the vicinity of Ann Arbor. In each case the examination was conducted in a scientific manner and a record was kept of the findings.

Mound No. 1 was opened in the fall of 1899. It contained the skeleton of a large man with protruding eye teeth. These teeth were well worn down, indicating that they belonged to a person somewhat advanced in years, but not exceedingly old, as no teeth were wanting from either jaw and all were sound. With the skeleton were two large pieces of earthen ware so fragile that they crumbled in taking them out. There were besides ornaments of copper, slate, bone and flint arrow points, the skeleton of a beaver. The mound, 20 feet in diameter and about five feet high, although it had been plowed for 50 years, was near the Huron river upon a high bluff above the water.

The skeleton was on the level of the surrounding ground and it rested upon a hard bed of compact clay. Over it was a layer of fine dusty sand; over this a dome about a foot thick of hard unyielding compact, concrete-like material that could be loosened only by hard blows from a pick-axe, and upon this were traces of fire. The hard material evidently had been packed with clay and gravel and burned so that it was of brick color in places. Over the dome was a layer of earth that probably had been gathered from the surrounding ground. The dusty material that was in immediate contact with the bones, which may have been sand-wash from the stream, was about 18 inches in thickness. The hard dome of clay mixture must have been made material carried from some distance as no clay earth is to be found anywhere in the vicinity.

One type of implement found in this mound and also in the east mound opened was made of a piece of antler, perhaps of moose, barbed upon one side only, like the spears used by the Eskimo in sealing and fish spearing. The whole specimen is about ten inches long, an inch and a half wide and less than a half inch thick. No such implement is described as coming from other mound localities although they may have been found. They certainly identify the users as fishermen as they would be well adapted to fish spearing and to no other purpose.

Mound No. 2.

The second mound opened was of quite a different character, and contained rather more gruesome specimens. The mound was a round heap of earth piled over a circle of large boulders. The circle of boulders was about ten feet and the individual boulders nearly two feet through. Inside this circle of large stones were found a number of human bones that seemed to have been piled in without order or special preparation. There were no layers of different material in the structure. It was a uniform mass of earth gathered close by. This may be called an ossuary, possibly a burial after a battle or a dump of the remains of the common herd, a "potter's field" for those who could afford no ornaments or funeral decoration. This mound is three miles west of Ann Arbor and about two miles south of the Huron river. There may have been six or eight skeletons if the parts could have been sorted out. The mound and burial had likely been made in a hurry while the other two mounds here described had been gradually piled up and arranged. The one was a mound of the trail, the others of the village or camping site.

Mound No. 3.

The last mound opened, mound No. 3, proved fully as fruitful as either of the others. The examination of this was but recently completed. It was situated four miles east of Ann Arbor and about three-quarters of a mile north from the Huron river. It was upon the extreme limit of a wide plain that extends back from the river bank. Beyond it a hill of considerable size rises, and back of this the country is rolling and broken.

At the time of opening the mound was 50 feet in diameter at the base, and at the center was from eight to ten feet high. Evidently it was much higher and wider at one time, as the field in which it stood has been under the plow for 60 years. Originally it must have been at least 60 feet in diameter and 12 feet high. Some time since, curiosity seekers had dug a hole into its center, but they had only slightly disturbed its structure, which was the same as that of mound No. 1.

When the interior had been reached, there were found, eight feet from the top, the remains of two skeletons, evidently buried after the flesh had been removed from them, as was the custom of many of the Ohio "mound builders." One skull, probably that of a young woman, had been painted with thick reddish pigment. The teeth indicate that this skull belonged to a young person. The bony formations identify it as that of a woman. The other skeleton was that of a child. Near it was a whistle made from a hollow bone, with square "blow holes" cut in one side. About 60 peculiar beads were also found. They are of some kind of shell, rubbed down flat upon one side so that they resemble in size and shape split peas. They may have been upon a string at the time of burial. There were several lumps of red ochre near the skeletons, also a number of large fragments of pottery, and one pot nearly whole. The fragments were of a dark color, and had not been colored artificially. The entire pot was of red color, and held about a pint. Some bone implements of the primitive fisherman and hunter, some common flint arrow heads, scrapers, two polished and perforated slate ornaments, a few animal bones, and some pieces of deer antlers make up the rest of the "find." The bones crumbled when exposed to the air, and cannot be put together so as to form anything like complete skeletons.

In regard to the lumps of red ochre found with the skeletons, it may be said that such paints were quite precious to the owners, and as they are not abundant in this locality, must have been transported from some other place. Paint was a desirable material to the Indian, he using it to decorate his person, his dead friends, his utensils and his clothing.

Conclusions Reached.

Dr. Hinsdale, in speaking of the conclusions reached as a result of his explorations, said:

"It is easy to see the importance of the Huron river to the aborigine. It was a part of the waterway that made the transit of the base of the lower peninsula of Michigan comparatively easy. The Huron and Kalamazoo make almost a complete water connection between the heads of Lakes Michigan and Erie. The Kalamazoo rises in the eastern part of Jackson county. The Huron makes its sweep from the lakes of northern Washtenaw and southern Livingston counties to the west not far from the eastern line of Jackson county and then down to Lake Erie. The portage from one of these rivers to the other could not have been more than ten or twenty miles, and, in high Chelsea, an almost continuous water passage must have existed. The Huron was an important link in the thoroughfare from both sides of Lake Erie to western Michigan and the Illinois country.

"At least two classes of people frequented this valley. There were the regular denizens of the land, so far as they could be considered so, and the travelers who were passing back and forth from east and west. It is reasonable to presume that hostile bands were brought together occasionally; in fact, a three-cornered situation could easily have arisen when parties going east, parties going west and the claimants of the meeting grounds were at enmity one with the others.

"As might be expected occasional evidences of Indian occupancy and travel along the banks of the Huron can still be found. These are the middens around old camping grounds, lost implements, potsherds, work 'shops' where flint and other stone implements were chipped or quarried, fireplaces, remnants of inclosures or fortifications, burial places, excavations and mounds. Wherever traces of iron or other signs of contact with the whites appear but little importance can be attached to the situation. But where no such conditions are found to exist something can be inferred relative to primitive people.

"The plow, railroad construction and other improvements of the white man have destroyed many monuments the natives may have left. Occasionally an old village-site and rendezvous can be located and the outlines of the flattened remains of a mound made out. A good many interesting relics have been picked up from the surface. These are of two general classes. First, there are the ordinary tools of flint, granite, quartzite, slate, soapstone and shale, such as arrows, spears, knives, 'skinners,' 'fish scalers,' scrapers, axes, pounders, grinders, ornaments, children's playthings, gaming stones, etc., the like of which are scattered all over the continent. Secondly, there are the implements manufactured from native copper. These copper implements are somewhat common in the vicinity of the great lakes. When found elsewhere they indicate that commercial relations existed between the occupants of the copper region and regions more or less remote. It cannot be said that the Indians whose remains we find had arrived at the stage of progress called the metal stage, but they made a great many good and useful tools from the natural copper. By means of stone hammers and mauls, knives, spears, ornaments and other articles were worked out of the thin sheets of copper ore which was mined from among the rocks of Lake Superior.

"Some of these 'coppers' show much skill in design and workmanship and were effective implements in the hands of their possessors. These copper articles are of considerable scientific value, both on account of their scarcity and their being specimens of primitive workmanship in metals. A good many such specimens are in the hands of farmers, who have picked them up along the river and adjoining fields. A few have been found some miles from the river, but they were much more common in the vicinity of old river camps and villages. All such specimens are of scientific interest and should be in the university museum or some other place of permanent deposit. However, it seems that they are destined to be lost to science, as their owners are not disposed to give them up, and they must, sooner or later, be spoiled and lost."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Made Him Wash.

Rev. William S. Brandon, of the Second Baptist church in Detroit, commenced proceedings for divorce against his wife, Ora Brandon, whom he married September 10, 1891, at Colorado Springs. He alleges cruelty; says she frequently locked him out of the house and threw a shoe at him when he tried to climb in the window, and alleges that after Sunday morning sermon he was frequently compelled to wash the clothes and get dinner.

Cannon Injures Boys.

By the explosion of a toy cannon six boys were injured in Muskegon. They are: Rolla Buck, cut about the head; Walter Kibbe, cut by missile and badly burned by powder; Moses Miller, leg badly cut; Joseph Kieft, left leg burned by powder; James Naegle, slightly burned about the face; Edward Naegle, slightly cut about the body. The boys made the cannon out of a piece of gas pipe and plugged the ends after loading with powder.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health from 70 observers in various portions of the state for the week ended June 29 indicate that cholera morbus, typhoid fever and consumption increased and whooping cough decreased in area of prevalence. Consumption was reported at 186 places, measles at 35, typhoid fever at 27, scarlet fever at 51, diphtheria at 16, whooping cough at 16, cerebro-spinal meningitis at 3 and smallpox at 75 places.

Explosion and Fire.

The hydraulic works at Quinnesee Falls were destroyed by an explosion, followed by fire. The cause of the explosion is a mystery. The loss in damaged machinery will exceed $200,000. The power for operating the Chapin, Ludington and Hamilton mines was furnished almost entirely by the works, and their destruction will necessitate the closing of the mines for some time, throwing 1,000 men out of employment.

Sought Revenge.

Because he jilted her and married another girl, Miss Jessie Jones shot at and wounded George Brooks in Lapeer. She says she is sorry she didn't do greater damage. Miss Jones and Brooks had been engaged for some time and the wedding day had been set, when Brooks secured a license to marry Miss Lillie Slater and the marriage was performed shortly afterward.

Crop Outlook.

The weekly crop report of the Washington weather bureau says for Michigan:

First half of week too dry for oats, meadows and pastures in northern and central counties, but otherwise favorable for crop growth and haying; corn and oats improved; potatoes in fine condition; beans, sugar beets, barley and rye doing well; hay well advanced, that cut secured in good condition; wheat harvest begun in extreme southern counties.

Entire Town Sold.

Manize Perron has sold the town of Perronville, in Delta county, to Le Branche Bros. for $40,000. The property transferred includes a sawmill, shingle mill, general store, boarding house and 20 cottages, together with some timber land.

News Briefly Stated.

Gov. Bliss has appointed William Judson, of Washtenaw, county state oil inspector for two years from July 1.

The assessed valuation of Washtenaw county this year is placed at $33,939,760, a decrease of $361,977 as compared with last year.

The state survey of St. Clair flats has cost $27,000, and the state will realize at least $200,000 from the sale of lots.

Mrs. Maria Hixon, of Clinton, was 101 years old and the event was appropriately observed by a large company of friends. She is a pensioner of the war of 1812 since a year ago.

Andrew Carnegie will contribute $750,000 toward the erection of a new public library building in Detroit.

The post office at Ingersoll has been discontinued. Mail goes to Delta.

It is said that the Michigan Central will double track its line between Kalamazoo and Niles.

A. F. Howard, of Munising, has been appointed deputy oil inspector for the Nineteenth district.

The question of moving the county seat of Emmet county to Petoskey will be voted on next election.

A local census shows the population of Charlotte to be 4,500. The government census places the population of 4,092.

At a special election Battle Creek voted bonds for $10,000 for new bridges and $15,000 for new paving.

George W. Partridge, aged 70 years, for eight years private secretary to Zack Chandler, former United States senator from Michigan and ex-secretary of the interior, was found dead in bed at his home in Detroit.

KILLED HIMSELF.

Andrew Wilber Takes His Own Life to Hide an Awful Crime He Had Committed.

The bloated and partially decomposed body of Andrew Wilber was found floating in Saginaw river, it being the result of suicide on the part of the man to hide a crime committed under unnatural circumstances. Wilber resided with his wife and four children in Saginaw, two of the latter being daughters, aged 14 and 11 years. Some time ago Mrs. Wilber was taken ill and sent to a hospital for treatment, the father remaining at home with the children nights, he being employed daytimes at a stove mill.

Shortly after the mother went to the hospital, Wilber criminally assaulted Maud, the oldest girl, using force and threats to accomplish his purpose. He also attempted an assault upon Edith, the younger daughter, but did not accomplish his purpose. He threatened both of the girls with death in case they revealed the circumstances. The mother returned home recently and overheard the father threatening the older girl in the event of her disclosing the secret. She questioned the child and the latter revealed the whole story. A quarrel resulted between the husband and wife, when he left home, and securing a bottle of laudanum went to the Pere Marquette belt line bridge crossing the Saginaw river, where it is supposed that he swallowed the contents of the bottle and subsequently dropped into the river. Wilber was a man about 45 years old and had hitherto borne a good reputation.

DISASTROUS CLOUDBURST.

Deluge of Rain Causes Numerous Washouts and Paralyzes Railroad Traffic.

Western Michigan was visited by a disastrous cloudburst and the damage will amount to thousands of dollars. Both the Pere Marquette and Grand Rapids & Indiana railroads were crippled north of Grand Rapids, and all north-bound passenger trains were obliged to make long detours, while freight traffic was paralyzed. Between Grand Rapids and Howard City, on the G. R. & I., the roadbed was washed out in a dozen places and the Pere Marquette was in the same condition. The Grand Trunk could get no trains east on account of the washing out of a bridge at Saranac. Dams in the Flat and Rouge rivers were washed out and many mills along these streams will be idle for days. The Grand river rose three feet and six inches in four hours. Great damage was done to fruit trees and growing crops in the western Michigan peach belt.

The Smallpox Epidemic.

Since the 1st of January outbreaks of smallpox in 234 localities in Michigan have been caused to cease—and in 149, or 64 per cent. of those outbreaks, the disease was restricted to the one household where the first case occurred. Notwithstanding this record of effective work by the health services, state and local, the disease continued to spread, because in the other outbreaks where the disease was not restricted to the first household, it was first called "Cuban itch," "cedar itch," chickenpox, or aene, and not reported to the health officer, so that restrictive measures could be taken.

The State Treasury.

The fiscal year under the state government has commenced, and all the appropriations for the current expenses of state institutions are available. The cash balance at the beginning of the fiscal year was $2,627,523.84, as against $2,501,557.53 one year ago. The disbursements for the year from all funds were $5,700,007.05, and the receipts $5,825,973.36. The balance in the general fund of the state is $2,097,704.90.

To Have a Brewery.

Edward Arnold, a well-known and wealthy resident of Escanaba, will establish a brewery plant in Sault Ste. Marie this summer that will cost $100,000. The site which has been purchased is in the eastern section of the city, and will have a fine water frontage. Mr. Arnold is able to finance the project alone, but in all probability will organize a corporation. It will be the only brewery there.

Charlotte's Census.

The recent census gave Charlotte a population of 4,092. The figures are not satisfactory, and Postmaster Beekman, assisted by the mail carriers, have been at work the past two months making a new count. The work has been completed and 423 additional names were found that were not included in the census, making a population of over 4,500.

Will Use the Camera.

The state forestry commission has put in an order for a large amount of camera supplies, and when it takes the field to examine the forest reserve a large number of photographs will be taken.

DIED FROM FRIGHT.

Pursued by an Angry Husband, Jesse Sergeant Runs Until He is Completely Exhausted.

Henry Brobst, one of the most prominent boiler manufacturers in Grand Rapids, went to the home of Jesse Sergeant, traveling representative of a Chicago varnish house, armed with a heavy club, and as he approached Sergeant, who was reclining in a hammock, he said he was tempted to kill him. Sergeant jumped up and fled, with Brobst in hot pursuit. Brobst could not overtake the fugitive, and threw stones at him without effect and then gave up the chase. Sergeant continued running, and finally, two miles from home, fell exhausted and before assistance could reach him was dead.

Brobst and Sergeant had long been on friendly terms and were frequent hunting and fishing companions, and both belonged to the same lodge of Elks. Sergeant leaves a widow and two children and Brobst has a wife and one young daughter.

Brobst's wife is young and handsome. When informed of Sergeant's death at the Elks' lodgeroom Brobst denied that he killed him although he said it was no fault of his that he did not. He said Sergeant had broken up his home.

BELIEVES IN THE BOERS.

Harry O. Chapman, of Detroit, Says That the British Can Never Conquer in South Africa.

Harry O. Chapman, a nephew of Attorney A. J. Chapman, is home in Detroit from the war in South Africa. He says that Great Britain will never be able to whip the Boers, but must make terms with them, and adds:

"I was in New Orleans, and went out with a steamer load of horses for the British army. I wanted to see the country after we got to Natal, so I enlisted in a local company, and was Tommy Atkins for eight months.

"The reason why the British cannot conquer the Boers is because the country is too large and broken. The Boers are here to-day, somewhere else to-morrow, and all the time harassing the enemy. They strike a blow, and are gone before a blow can be struck back. They can go two miles from the British, and you can no more put your thumb upon them than you can a flea. It might be possible for Great Britain to mass enough troops there to crush out the lives of the women and children, and ultimately the men, but I don't think 100,000 soldiers would be enough."

LOST HIS LIFE.

A Grand Rapids Aeronaut is Killed While Making an Ascent at Muskegon.

Frank Tazelow, an aeronaut from Grand Rapids, was killed while making a cannon parachute drop at Muskegon. When the balloon had reached 1,000 feet in height the ropes holding the cannon burst and the big gun containing Tazelow dropped into Muskegon lake. When it could be removed Tazelow's body was found to be in a terribly mangled condition. Tazelow was an assistant of Prof. Meisell and this was his second ascension. The accident was witnessed by thousands of people.

Had the Old License.

Bertholo Vecellia, of Iron Mountain, took out a license August 4, 1893, to wed Carmela de Forian de Andrea. Just before the service was to be performed the lovers quarreled and Bertholo left for Italy. Two weeks ago he returned and almost the first person he met was his old sweetheart. The old love returned and they decided to marry at once. The bridegroom pulled out the old license, which he had carried next to his heart for eight years, and hurried off to find a priest.

Will Get Only $17,000.

It has developed that the widow of the late Samuel J. Carson, of Galesburg, will not get $100,000 from the dead man's estate. It appears that Carson conveyed to his children $250,000 in real estate and mortgages. At the time of his death the remainder of his estate was worth about $30,000. As Carson did not leave a will, his widow will get only one-third of this amount, or a little less than $17,000.

Oldest Man in the Thumb.

Sanilac county boasts the oldest man in the thumb of Michigan, James Raysin, who lives in Carsonville. He was 100 years old May 18, 1901. When 21 years of age he married Sarah Henoley, and ten children blessed their union, of which James Raysin, Jr., is the only one now living. The old gentleman is hale and hearty, though growing less active. He possesses a good memory, excellent eyesight and a frank disposition.

Normal's Summer School.

Classification of students for the summer term of the normal has been concluded at Ypsilanti and work in all classes has begun. The summer school consists of two distinct terms, one of which lasts but eight weeks and the other which continues for 12, it being possible to give exactly the same credit for both, as the shorter term offers five recitations per week while the 12 weeks' studies have only four recitations weekly.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE at the PAN-AMERICAN

The Exhibit Made Is of Unusual Interest to the Lawyer Visitors

THE exhibit of the department of justice is of especial interest to the lawyers who visit the exposition. The exhibit includes the portraits of all the chief justices of the United States, from John Jay to Melville W. Fuller, forming a group of highly intellectual men. In the collection at the exposition there is a series of portraits of the great John Marshall taken at different periods in his illustrious career. The portrait of Roger B. Taney also is especially interesting on account of his famous Dred Scott decision. The strong face of Salmon P. Chase, chief justice of the supreme court of the United States, by the lamented Lincoln, also excites a great deal of interest. The picture of the supreme court room of the United States, now occupying one of the wings of the United States capital, but soon to occupy a position in the magnificent temple of justice on Capitol hill, is also shown in this exhibit together with the artist's plans for the temple of justice. Portraits of the attorneys general of the United States, painted in oil, form one of the most attractive features of this exhibit.

One great attraction of this exhibit is the collection of law books. These include the opinions of the attorney general, the statutes at large of the United States, many volumes of colonial laws and some rare old law books which will be examined with special interest and pleasure not only by scholarly lawyers, but by everyone who has read history. For example, there are 11 volumes of "State Trials for Heresy and High Treason," by Francis Hargrave, Esq., published in London in 1776. These volumes contain a verbatim report of all the great trials of Great Britain from the reign of Richard II. to that of George III. It is like turning over the pages of romance to read, as the visitors to the exposition will be able to do, the trial of Mary, queen of Scots; of Sir Walter Raleigh, of King Charles I., of Archbishop Cranmer, of Titus Oates, the learned Jesuit priest who plead his own cause before Lord Chief Justice Jeffries; of Capt. William Kidd, the noted pirate, who roamed up and down the Atlantic seaboard and infested the West Indies before the great American republic existed! These are a few that are included in the volumes brought to the exposition. In the same volume are noted the rulings of Lord Chief Justice Coke and of the notorious Lord Chief Justice Jeffries. There are other old legal authorities that cannot fail to delight the antiquarian, the scholar and the student. Among these is the first edition of Blackstone's Commentaries printed on the North American continent in 1771.

The seals of the United States and of the different departments of the government are shown in this exhibit. The seal of the department of justice is very handsomely painted, and the origin of the motto has puzzled many good Latinists of the present day. Perhaps the most striking object in this exhibit is a beautiful female figure representing justice, which was designed from suggestions made by Maj. Frank Strong. She holds the traditional scales in one hand and an unsheathed sword in the other. Maj. Strong, in spite of the sterner duties of his profession, is a fine artist, and has with his own brush painted a number of beautiful pictures.

There is a collection of autograph letters in the exhibit from former presidents of the United States, including some from President McKinley, showing evidence of their clemency towards convicted persons. Fine photographs of the prisons of the United States are exhibited. The scope of the exhibit is necessarily small, but it is one of absorbing interest, especially to the more cultured classes. This exhibit has been collected by Maj. Frank Strong, the general agent for the department of justice and the representative on the government board for the Pan-American exposition.

CHARLES EDWARD LLOYD.

PORTO RICANS AS SERVANTS IN HAWAII

They Are Replacing the Chinese in Honolulu Households

YOU may think neither servant question nor servant girl need trouble in that dolci fa niente land. With an outdoor life possible the year round, waters abounding in fish that one may eat raw just as well as not, with the bread fruit tree, 20 different kinds of bananas, mangoes, custard apples, pomegranates, berries, grape fruit, oranges, limes, papayas, guavas, all sorts of delicious fruit, might not one get along without cook or chambermaid? No, not in the twentieth century, even in Hawaii.

Some establishments, and those not pretentious ones, either, find at least four house servants necessary. On the plantation where I lived there was Johnny, the cook, a clean, unctuous, stout Jap, who ruled over the cookhouse with undisputed sway (Johnny of blessed memory, he that concocted superexcellent banana fritters and unsurpassable taro cakes). Then there was Tatsu, a wrinkled, old, old, Jap, who swept and polished and repaired; filled the vases with fresh flowers, amused the children, fed the chickens, made the butter, attended to all the left-overs. Little Sahto, too doll-like for her hard work, washed two days in the week and ironed three. Last, the elegant "student," Ben Nakadjo, who stooped to the position of steward (sort of second girl) only for the time being; served for no pay and for the furtherance of his study of English, without which he could not hope for success when later he should enter commercial life. But Ben's gentility did not hinder him from doing his work properly.

Which makes the better servant, Jap or Chinaman, I am at a loss to say. The Jap is intelligent, the Chinaman a wonderfully apt imitator; the Jap has a great deal of manner, the Chinaman is quiet and unobtrusive; the Jap is fickle, changes places often; the Chinaman is faithful, likes to stay with a good mistress. On the whole, I prefer John.

Lucky indeed is the mistress that has a good Chinese servant, for there is no better in the world—and no worse is there than a bad one, says a coolie fresh from the fields. But take a boy just come over, put him into the hands of a good housekeeper; lo! in a few weeks you will have help, in a year a paragon. Several I have known pass in review before me—Joe, Ah Lee, Ding Kit, Wing Fat, Ah Oi. Alas! that they are soon to be numbered with the things that have been and are no more.

Uncle Sam does not look kindly on the Hawaiian orientals. They are not allowed to send back to the Flowery Kingdom for their sisters, cousins, aunts, wives and sweethearts, and are beginning to desire to return to the girls they left behind them. And lo! there is trouble in Hawaii, because for many years, in field and in cookhouse, John Chinaman has been the stay of the country. Erstwhile care-free mistresses wring their hands and grieve that at last the vexed servant question has reached their happy land, and what to do is the problem of the hour. Some think it may be answered by the girls that make up part of the body of Porto Rican immigrants lately come to the Hawaiian islands.

While the Chinaman and Jap have for many years successfully filled the places in households for which men servants are fitted, there has always been a dearth of nursemaids, a scarcity of female help of any kind. Now it is thought the Porto Rican girl will fill this long-felt want, and also gradually take the place of the pajama and kimono folk. The girls get better wages in the house than they would in the field, and the work is lighter, more agreeable. At Waialua, 30-odd miles from Honolulu, a considerable number of Porto Ricans have settled, and it is in this particular corner of Hawaii the "new help" are being experimented with.

The immigrants are wretchedly poor, and when the young girls first present themselves at the doors of their new mistresses their rags and uncleanness, as well as their ignorance of English, are discouraging. But soap and water and a little kindness work wonders with them, and they have shown themselves quick in picking up English words and ways. Already many of the younger women of the Porto Rican colony have positions as housemaids, nursemaids and cooks.

As a Business Proposition.
"Purely as a business proposition," said the English nobleman who was visiting in America, "would you mind publishing an announcement of my engagement to Miss Croesus?"
"And when did you become engaged?" asked the society editor.
"Oh, we're not really engaged," answered the visitor, calmly, "but such an announcement will give me a line of credit that I sadly need."—Chicago Post.

SETTLEMENT IS IN SIGHT.

The Great Steel Strike May Be Avoided as Direct Result of J. P. Morgan's Efforts.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 9.—The following statement was made by President Shaffer, of the Amalgamated association, late Monday evening as he emerged from the Carnegie building with a party of Amalgamated association officers of the American Sheet Steel company. It was at the end of one of the most eventful days in the history of organized labor and was made so by the decided stand taken by President Shaffer in the Wellsville case:

"That which I believe will prove the most important conference in the history of capital and labor will open in Hotel Lincoln, Pittsburgh, next Thursday morning at ten o'clock, when the highest officials of the Amalgamated association, gathered from all parts of the country, will meet with high officers in the iron and steel industries to settle grave questions.

"Every vice president of the Amalgamated association from Alabama north is hurrying towards Pittsburgh on my telegraphic order. I have considered it best that they be called to confer at this time instead of the regular conferees who have usually met with us to adjust differences. As yet I am in ignorance as to who will constitute the committee representing the steel people, the employers. I have been informed that President Charles M. Schwab, of the United States Steel corporation, will be present in person, but do not know this to be a fact. The laboring man is at present confronted with some peculiar conditions, which I hope will be adjusted at the coming conference.

"I believe the strike will be speedily settled.

"THEODORE J. SHAFER."
The conference lasted for almost two hours, but what was said or done was not given out save through the above statement, made by President Shaffer. It was evidently decided that the best interests of both sides demanded that the wage conference be held at as early a date as possible, in spite of the trouble at Wellsville. It is understood that on hearing the statement of Vice President Chappell regarding the Ohio association, assurance was given that it could be easily adjusted and would be. This being the case, the conference was quickly arranged. President Shaffer desired to be set right before his people regarding his action in passing over the usual wage conferees and placed the matter higher. That the matter might be understood he dictated the following statement:

"The committee selected by the advisory board is composed of all national officers, trustees and vice presidents, because this the general executive board, has greatest power in the A. A. and, as the matter at issue is a general one, not affecting wages or mill conditions, and the last convention having abolished the general conference, this board can best take up a question affecting the general interests."

Mr. Shaffer said further: "I did announce that I would not treat with the employers until matters were adjusted at Wellsville, and that I would declare a general strike on Thursday if matters were not fixed, but I later changed my mind. I am not at liberty to state what brought this about, but it will come out in good time."

New York, July 9.—The World says: A plan has been agreed upon which will settle the great steel strike within the next five days. As matters stand all that remains to be done is to hold a final meeting to formally ratify the plan and announce its terms. The programme now is to hold that meeting and make that announcement on Wednesday or Thursday of this week in New York or Pittsburgh.

The main points at issue have been settled and there will be no great steel strike, such as was contemplated a week ago. It may be stated that this early settlement is the direct result of J. P. Morgan's efforts. If the conference which is to formally end the strike is held here, it will be at the office of Mr. Morgan; if in Pittsburgh at the office of the American Tin Plate company. Representatives of the general board of the United States Steel company, all the subsidiary companies whose interests are affected, as well as the leaders of the various labor bodies in the Amalgamated association, were notified on Saturday night of the coming conference, and were invited to send representatives.

PAY TOO SMALL.

Consul General to Capetown Resigns Because of the Inadequacy of His Salary.
London, July 9.—A dispatch received here Monday from Cape Town announces that United States Consul General James G. Stowe has resigned and that he will sail from Cape Town on his return to the United States July 25.
Washington, July 9.—The resignation of James G. Stowe, United States consul general to Capetown, has been received at the state department. The resignation was based on the utter inadequacy of the salary of the post. The cost of living in South Africa, under normal conditions, is exceedingly high, and in time of war, such as prevailed for the past two years, the $3,000 salary allowed by congress for the United States consul general would not defray the cost of maintaining a family in modest conditions at Cape Town. The United States consul general is the worst salaried consular officer at the Cape. Mr. Stowe was appointed from Kansas City, Mo. The vacancy has not yet been filled.

MORE BURGLARS AROUND.
 Several Houses Were Visited, but Very Little booty Was Secured.
 Burglars were again busy in Chelsea
 Tuesday night, visiting several residences.
 At W. P. Schenk's they secured his watch, chain, trousers, and between 75 cents and $1.00 in money. They also took a dark lantern. At H. Lighthall's house matches by the dozen were lighted to see around the rooms. One of these lighted matches was dropped on the corner of a rug and burned a large patch, luckily it went out or a "mysterious" fire might have been the result. They took Cone Lighthall's best coat and vest and a souvenir coin.
 The burglars also visited Rollo Beckwith's house, Theodore Wedemeyer's house twice and Dr. S. G. Bush's house.
 Both Mr. Wedemeyer and Dr. Bush saw one of the men, a tall slim chap, the latter seeing him run out of the back door.
 William Bacon's house was also visited and Mrs. Bacon saw the man, but did not waken her husband. In each instance entrance was gained through the screens of windows.
 Two negroes are under arrest in Jackson on suspicion of being the parties who did the stealing. One of them has on a coat, vest and pants that are thought to be those stolen from Mr. Lighthall and Mr. Schenk.
 Deputy Sheriff W. R. Lehman and Marshall Jay M. Woods will go to Jackson this evening to see if they can identify the clothing.
 She Didn't Wear a Mask.

 its use. Infallible for cuts, corns, burns, scalds and piles. Cure guaranteed. 25c
