MADE A GOOD SHOWING.

Congregational Society Held its Annual Meeting and Elected Trustees.

The annual business meeting of the Congregational Society held at the church Monday evening was well attended, and the showing made in the treasurer's report was one that made everyone feel satisfied at the good condition of the finances. The report showed that $2,046.65 had been received, and $2,048.10 expended, leaving a cash balance of $2.55. Besides this there is over $100.00 on pledges which is yet to be received. Among the items of expense were $306.58 of old indebtedness paid up and $390.55 spent in repairs and improvements.

H. S. Holmes and Thos. S. Sears were re-elected trustees for three years; Geo. J. Crowell was re-elected clerk, and Chauncey Freeman, Howard Holmes, Herbert Schenk, Wirt McLaren, John Reilly and Howard Brooks were appointed ushers.

Sudden Death of B. F. Tuttle.

B. Frank Tuttle, who was one of the pioneer residents of Sylvan and Chelsea, died very suddenly of apoplexy shortly after noon Tuesday. He was in his usual state of health and had gone out to the barn at his home on West Middle street to see about putting away a load of hay that had been brought in. He was in the hay loft with the boy who came with the load and had just made some remark to the boy, when without any warning he fell over backwards and was dead.

Mr. Tuttle was a Democrat in politics but was no politician. He had been just one of the peace in the township, and as such was a member of the town board. He was a quiet, peaceable man, and was much respected by those who knew him best. His wife, three daughters and one son survive him. He was 72 years of age.

Foster-Robison.

At St. Mary's rectory at 6 o'clock last evening Mr. Germaine Foster and Miss Elizabeth Robison, of Grass Lake, were united in marriage by the Rev. William P. Conditine. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Watson. Those present at the ceremony were Mrs. Robison, of Grass Lake, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Michael Foster and Mrs. Chauncey Hummel, mother and sister of the groom. Mr. and Mrs. Foster left on the 6:40 motor for Ann Arbor and Detroit for a brief wedding trip. Mr. Foster has many old friends in Chelsea who will extend their heartiest congratulations and best wishes to him and his bride.

They'll All Be There.

The Lincoln club of Jackson is arranging for a big gathering on the evening of Feb. 12, and all the candidates for the republican nomination for congress in the second district have been invited to be present. Two of these, Hon. Henry C. Smith and W. W. Wedemeyer, have already signified their acceptance of the invitation, and Charles E. Townsend, Jackson's candidate, who is a member of the club, will surely be present. Mr. Smith has selected as his subject, "Our President," and Mr. Wedemeyer will speak on "Our Martyred President."

Installation and Supper.

The newly-elected officers of Branch No. 410, L. C. B. A., were duly installed Thursday evening, Jan. 2. The past president, Mrs. Mary E. Clark, acted as installing officer. After the regular business of the branch and the installation of the officers was over an elegant lunch was served in the hall to all the members present and their invited friends.

During the winter the branch will hold its first meeting of each month in the afternoon at 2 o'clock instead of in the evening.

Got $100 Damages.

The slander suit brought by Mrs. Kate Heselochwerdt, of Sylvan Center, against Russell J. West, of the same place, was on trial in the circuit court last week. The suit was for defamation of character and the testimony in it was so decidedly nasty that the Ann Arbor papers say the janitor had to air out the court room after it was concluded. The jury gave Mrs. Heselochwerdt $100 damages.

Mrs. L. A. STEPHENS, Teacher.

You Should Trade at Home.

An exchange gives the following as some of the reasons why you should patronize your home merchants in preference to those of other places:

"Who sympathized with you when your little girl was sick? Was it your home merchant or was it Sears & Roebuck? Who carried you last winter when you were out of a job and had no money? Was it Montgomery Ward & Co. or was it your home merchant? When you want to raise money for the churches or for some needy person in town, do you write to the Fair store in Chicago or do you go to your merchants? How much does Siegel, Cooper & Co. give toward keeping up the sidewalks of the town, or paying the ministers' salary? When you were sick how many nights did Spencer, Bartlett & Co. sit up with you? When your loved one was buried was it your home merchant who dropped the tear of sympathy and uttered the cheering word or was it Marshall Field & Co?"

UNITED STATES SENATOR THURSTON, The Brilliant Statesman from Nebraska, Makes an Important Public Utterance.

INTERIOR OF UNITED STATES SENATE CHAMBER.

Ex-Senator John M. Thurston, of Omaha, Nebraska, is one of the most prominent and influential men in the country. He made the speech nominating President McKinley at the St. Louis convention, and was made permanent Chairman of this convention. He was also made Chairman of the convention that re-nominated President McKinley at Philadelphia. He was recently appointed by President McKinley Chairman of the St. Louis Exposition Commission.

This prominent gentleman recently wrote the following letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio:

Washington, D. C., April 6, 1901.

"I have used Peruna at various times during the past year or two with most satisfactory results.

"It entirely relieved me from an irritating cough—the result of excessive effort in the presidential campaign, and I am a firm believer in its efficacy for any such trouble."—Jno. M. Thurston.

Catarrh has already become a national curse. Its ravages extend from ocean to ocean.

More than one-half of the people are affected by it. It has become such a serious matter that it has passed the boundaries of the medical profession and become a national question. Senators are talking about it; Congressmen are discussing it.

They are not only considering the extent and chronic nature of the disease, but the possibility of finding a national remedy to meet this national calamity.

The catarrh remedy, Peruna, seems to be the main expectation in this direction.

Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, devised the remedy, Peruna, over forty years ago, and the remedy as a catarrh cure has been growing in favor steadily all these years.

It stands to-day before the nation as a thoroughly tested, accurately scientific internal remedy for catarrh. There are practically no medicinal rivals in the field.

Peruna is not a local application or temporary relief; it is a permanent cure. Peruna is a systemic remedy. It eradicates catarrh from the system. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures are radical and lasting.

Therefore, Peruna is receiving the indorsement of the leading statesmen and history-makers of the day.

Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for a book of testimonials, containing letters from prominent men and women concerning Peruna.

The Commerce of the Philippine Islands

Some Figures That Tell of Our Growing Interest in the Trade of the Archipelago.

ONE of the important bills before the congress of the United States is the Philippine tariff bill, which was passed by the house just before the holiday adjournment and which will receive the early attention of the senate. The bill is another step in the adjustment of the trade relations which exist between the United States and her new island possessions. The recent decision of the supreme court in the Pepke case established the fact that the islands were not foreign territory and that, single item of manila hemp reaches a total of $2,045,771, leaving a value of only $18,385 to all the other free articles. But the importation of hemp from the Philippines in 1901 shows a large reduction, compared with the corresponding months of 1900, due in part to the small production of hemp in the islands during the crop year of 1900, and in part to a great reduction in price. In the ten months of 1900 ended with October, 27,000 tons of manila hemp imported was valued at $5,225,261, and in the same months of 1901, 20,579 tons of hemp imported

A very considerable article of commerce consists of cigars and tobacco leaf, shipments of which amount to nearly 200,000 tons annually. Of this quantity, manufactured cigars comprise the largest part of the total, or about 90 per cent. The quality of the Philippine cigars, however, is inferior to those from Cuba, and in the European markets they have very justly failed to meet with the same favorable reception as the Cuban cigars, although old Philippine residents become so accustomed to their favorite Manila brands as to consider them incomparable. Of the exports from the islands, cigars constitute the chief manufactured article, sugar and hemp and other products being principally shipped as raw material.

Sapan wood forms another article of export from the islands. It is found in most of the large islands of the group. It is a short, unattractive tree, with epigynous branches spreading out in a straggling manner. The leaves are small and sparse. The wood is hard, heavy, crooked and full of knots. It sinks in water and is susceptible of a fine polish. It is whitish when first cut, but assumes a deep red color on exposure to the air. The only valuable portion is the heart of the branch, from which is taken a dye known in the trade as false crimson, to distinguish it from the more permanent cochineal dye. About 5,000 tons of this wood is shipped from Manila, Iloilo and Cebu annually. Other articles of export are coffee, buffalo hides, indigo, gum mastic and cordage.

Fifty years ago the Philippine islands were but little known in the foreign markets and commercial centers of Europe. Notwithstanding the special trading concessions granted to one foreigner and another from the beginning of the last century, it was not until the port of Manila was unrestrictedly opened to resident foreign merchants in 1834 that a regular export trade with the whole mercantile world gradually came into existence.

In the early history of the archipelago after annexation to Spain as a colony the only trade of the islands consisted of yearly shipments in a state galleon to Mexico and a return shipment of the royal subsidy for the maintenance of the island government. For a century and a half this galleon trade existed, the last state galleon leaving Manila for Mexico in 1811, and the last sailing from Acapulco for Manila in 1815. A fixed profit of 100 per cent. was figured by the Spanish traders in their shipments of these cargoes but towards the middle of the eighteenth century English, Dutch, French and Danish traders entered into competition against them by establishing their own factories and collecting stores at Canton, and this immense profit was no longer possible.

The declaration of the independence of Mexico in 1820 forced Spain to secure direct trade with the Philippines. No restrictions were placed on the export to Spain of colonial produce, but the exports to Acapulco, Callao and other South American ports were limited to $750,000 at that date, and, 22 years afterward, one-third of all the Manila trade was done with China. It is a little singular that the earliest trade of the islands was with American ports, and that now, after Spain had for years monopolized the commerce of the archipelago, the trade is again to be turned to the American continent through the United States' occupancy of the islands.

With the development of the commerce of the Philippines improvements in the principal harbors are to be made, dockage facilities are to be increased and the present primitive and insufficient casco, which is used in loading and unloading ships, is to give place to modern steam lighters. An American company is just sending over to Manila a first class steamer, the Albatross, and a line of steamships is to make monthly trips between Manila and New York. Thus, with a varied and checkered history behind it, the commerce of the islands is entering upon a new, expansive career under the western push of the American tradesman. WILLIS S. EDSON.

MEXICANS ON THE RANCH.

They Are Great Eaters But Are None Too Sorry When It Comes to Work.

Very many Mexicans will only go to work when absolutely driven to it by sheer gnawing hunger. Anyone who has been round sheep camps in the west knows what an inconceivable amount of "grub" a Mexican herder will put away in the first few days of his hiring out. He is probably making up for the months of semi-starvation. If, as I say, some one of them takes a job herding and is off in a camp by himself, he sends a letter to the mail by the foreman or camp mover. They cannot in charity or reason prevent a man from writing to his wife or anyone else he chooses, but before long the chances are that some friend of his will be "filling up" on the boss' grub, and doing nothing for it but keeping the herder from his work. Two Mexicans together are like two boys—only half a single one, says Longman's Magazine.

self-possession are most carefully considered, and examination in these requisites is of necessity conducted viva voce.

There is a test in the very manner in which the applicant goes through the examination. Any indication of nervousness, hysteria or want of self-possession will cause rejection of the candidate.

The greatest stumbling block is the voice, for the majority of girls are not clear in their enunciation, and very many have a strongly marked twang that is certain to cause their rejection.

"An Egotist Described." "What kind of a man is Willington?" "Well," answered the mutual friend, "he is one of those people who thinks he is spitting the word because he won't write a book and tell all he knows."—Washington Star.

FIRST AMERICAN COMMERCIAL HOUSE ESTABLISHED IN THE PHILIPPINES.

therefore, practically free trade existed between the islands and the ports of the United States. But the decision further established the fact that congress had the right to provide a tariff law levying import and export duties on goods to and from the islands, the revenues thus raised going into the Philippine treasury for the benefit of the islands. And so as soon as the status of the islands was established and the right of congress to legislate declared, the present bill before congress was quickly drafted and passed through the house. The measure provides that the duties upon goods imported from the islands shall be the same as those provided in the Dingley act, and ratifies the Philippine commission's special tariff upon imports into the archipelago.

from the islands was valued at but $2,045,771, the decrease in price thus being from $187 in 1900 to $143 per ton in 1901 for the period under consideration.

The next largest single item of importation from the Philippine islands is that of sugar, which, as before stated, amounted in value to $188,159 for the ten months of 1901 ended in October. But the very small proportion of our sugar consumption which the Philippines are supplying is shown by a comparison of these figures with those of our total sugar importations during the year. The total importation of sugar into the United States in the ten months ended with October amounted to about 4,000,000,000 pounds, valued at about $100,000,000. In other words, they have supplied during the ENTRANCE TO THE RIVER PASIG AT MANILA.

In connection with this tariff provision it is interesting to note that of the goods brought to this country from the Philippines, only a small percentage of them are subject to tax. Taking the latest treasury department statistics available we find that in the ten months ended October, 1901, the imports from the islands amounted to $3,180,953, but of that total sum only $222,797 was dutiable and $2,064,156 was free of duty. Of the dutiable imports $188,159 represented the value of sugar, the value of all other dutiable articles being $34,638.

While figures are generally considered rather dry and uninteresting, let us analyze these statistics a little further. Of the free importations amounting in value to $2,064,156, the present year about one-fifth of one percent. of the total value of our importations of sugar.

But it must not be inferred from the fact that so small a part of the United States' supply of sugar is drawn from the Philippines that that commodity forms an insignificant part of the commerce of the islands. The fact of the matter is the United States takes but a small part of the sugar production of the archipelago, the three ports of Manila, Cebu and Iloilo exporting considerably over 200,000 tons yearly.

From Iloilo the sugar is chiefly exported to the United States in the shape of raw material, while from Manila a certain quantity of crystal grain sugar is sent, ready for consumption, to Spain.

A GOOD TELEPHONE GIRL.

One Who Is Possessed of Acute Auditory Nerves and Correct Articulation.

Every girl cannot be a telephone girl, as many applicants learn, to their disappointment. Girls who can hear and girls able to maintain the reputation of the sex for talking often fail in what is required by the telephone companies. The trouble is not in the educational, but in the physical tests, says the New York Herald.

Some education is required, as a matter of course, but the greater attention is paid to hearing and speaking. The applicant must possess auditory nerves able clearly to distinguish words in all sorts of conversation, regardless of surrounding noises and the frequent interfering sounds on the telephone line.

Then, above all, she must not only be able to talk, but know how to talk. Defect of speech is fatal. Articulation, pitch of voice and general

TO SUE FOR MILLIONS.

Michigan Central Railroad Claims Big Damages from the State for Repeal of Charter.

Attorney General Oren has been notified that the Michigan Central Railroad company has filed its articles of corporation under the general law of this state with the secretary of state, and become amenable to the general railroad laws. This will not be the end of the action of the legislature in repealing the special charter of the Michigan Central company in Michigan, as the measure of damages which the company has sustained by the repeal of its charter is yet to be determined. The company will soon commence an action for damages against the state, which must be tried either in Wayne, Kent or Ingham counties before a court of competent jurisdiction, and it is probable that a jury will be demanded to determine the damages. Probably no more important proceeding at law has ever been tried before a jury in this state so far as the amount which may be involved is concerned, as the railroad company claims that its damages will be several million dollars.

HEIRESS TO FORTUNE

Woman in Jail in Port Huron Gets News That She Has Money in Prospect in England.

Maggie Madgewick, in jail in Port Huron on a charge of disturbing the peace as a result of a quarrel with William Turner, with whom she had been living, has received a letter from her aged husband, Elias Madgewick, of Watford, Ont., imparting the news that the couple have fallen heir to $50,000, and are required to proceed to England as soon as possible to get possession of the fortune. Some months ago Madgewick, who had followed his wife to this city, caused the arrest of her and the man Turner on a charge of adultery, but after the woman's incarceration Madgewick's heart softened and he withdrew the charge. Later, the woman was again found in Turner's company, and both were arrested for creating a disturbance, and Turner is now serving a term in the Detroit house of correction as a result. The letter from Madgewick to his wife is couched in the most affectionate terms, and begs her to come to him that they may possess the fortune.

SOUNDS A WARNING.

Gov. Bliss Says Cane Manufacturers Are After the Beet Sugar Farmers and Factories.

Gov. Bliss, who recently attended a meeting of the beet sugar men in New York, has sounded a warning note to the farmers of the state and those of other states who are interested in the development of the beet sugar industry. He says:

"The cane sugar manufacturers, or men operating in their interests, are after the beet sugar farmers and factories, and are apparently leaving no stone unturned in order to win. They are resorting to all sorts of tactics, and if they pursue the same sort of a campaign at Washington, it seems to me there will be lively doings. It behooves the beet sugar interests to appeal to the people and let them know all about the industry which is having a life and death fight on its hands. I am sure that the farmers of the nation will never consent that the rapidly growing beet sugar industry shall be killed, for there is nothing of more promising benefit to them—not only to them, but to all the people."

Nearly Starving.

Capt. Coy, of the Salvation Army, who has been doing considerable work among Pontiac poor people within the past two weeks, makes the statement that there are a number of families who, if not actually starving, are suffering for the necessities of life. The captain states that this suffering is principally among the class of people who have been in better circumstances, and through misfortune have been reduced and are still too proud to make their wants known.

Library for Grand Rapids.

Plans and specifications have been received by local contractors for the $200,000 public library which Martin A. Ryerson, of Chicago, will give to Grand Rapids. The building is to be of limestone, fire proof throughout, and with a capacity for 150,000 volumes. It is expected work will be begun as early in the season as possible and that the building will be ready for delivery to the city next fall.

Rural Free Delivery.

Additional rural free delivery service has been established at Greenville, Montcalm county, to take effect on February 1, with Miles I. Fuller as carrier. The route will be 24 1/2 miles long, cover an area of 31 square miles and serve a population of 760. The star route will be discontinued and the post office at Longstone supplied by the carrier of route No. 3. Mail will go to Greenville.

A PUBLIC SPANKING.

THE UNRULY YOUNGSTER GOT ONLY WHAT HE DESERVED.

Why the Passengers in the Car Didn't See, as They Expected They Would, a Second Act in the Interesting Little Drama.

In one of the upper corners of the down town Ninth street car the lively little 4-year-old boy was giving his weary looking mother about all she could attend to. First he would want to stand on the seat and hammer on the window until it seemed as if the glass would just have to smash.

Then he would stand on his mother's lap with his muddy little shoes and twist her veil up into knots and push her nose the wrong way and make a fork of his fore and middle fingers and jab them into her eyes and pull down her back hair and tug at her collar and loosen her breastpin and pull down her lower lip to make it "snap" and yank at her ears and divert himself in other little comfortable ways of the sort.

Then he would demand to be set down on the floor, in the aisle, where he would pound with all his might on his mother's knees and sing at the top of his lungs until she would stop him with a warning, "Sh-sh, Willie!" Whereupon he would seize his mother's umbrella and attempt to open it in her face and bawl lustily when she attempted to take it away from him. When she endeavored to effect a cessation of his bawling, he would kick her on the shins.

The other passengers glared at the angel child and secretly hankered to own him for about 42 seconds in order to "put him next" to a few little things which he seemed not to understand. The pale, tall man, however, who was sitting right alongside the angel child's seat, seemed to be paying no attention whatever to the young one's malicious pranks. He looked straight ahead of him out of the window, nor did all of the wriggings or noise of the youngster cause him to remove his gaze from a point straight ahead. It might have been thought to look at him that he was suffering from a stiff neck and that it was therefore impossible for him to turn his head either one way or the other.

The angel 4-year-old continued to enjoy himself as the car reached the down town section. He began to make comments upon the personal appearance of entering passengers, loudly calling attention to the "big nose" of this one, to the "big mouth" of that one and the "funny looking face" of the other one. His mother said "Sh-sh!" a great many times, but the kid apparently didn't hear her or didn't want to hear her. The passengers went right on longing to have the celestial infant in a woodshed for varying periods of time, but the pale, tall man right alongside the young one kept right on looking straight ahead.

The personal characteristics of the passengers palled upon the youngster after a time, and he looked around for other ways of amusing himself. Finally he climbed up on the seat again, and stily reaching around back of the pale, tall man's head he clutched one end of the latter's mustache and gave it a good, hard tug.

The pale, tall man didn't even wince. He didn't remove his gaze from the point directly ahead of him, but he carefully and deliberately gathered the young one in his arms, placed the young one across his knee, and, still looking out of the window and apparently totally uninterested in what he was doing, he let the young one have a round dozen on the spot where they would do the most good with an amount of resounding force that caused the young one to howl like fun.

"That's just what the kid needed in his business," thought all of the other passengers, "and I'd like to have been the one to hand him what was coming to him. But, cracky, won't his mother more than lay that fellow out, though!"

They looked at the mother, waiting for the explosion. However, she seemed to take it all as a matter of course. She didn't utter a word of objection. When the pale, tall man was through spanking the young one and had deposited him in his mother's lap, the other passengers couldn't understand why she didn't open up on the spanker and tell him many things after the fashion of mothers in such cases made and provided. The kid was howling.

"You got just what you deserved from papa," was the way the mother comforted the yelling one, and then, at L street, the pale, tall man signaled the conductor and, stepping off, assisted his wife and recalcitrant son and heir to alight, while the other passengers looked sheepishly at each other after the manner of folks who feel that somehow or another they haven't got their money's worth.—Washington Star.

With so much contagious disease about, great care should be taken in the disposal of slop water and other refuse matter. It should not be thrown out near the well from which the family supply of drinking water is obtained, nor should it be thrown in any place where it can possibly drain back towards the well. This is a small matter to look after, but care exercised in this particular may be the saving of many lives.

The Paris Stage as a School for Fashion

Many Charming Costumes Are Displayed for the Benefit of Critical Audiences.

PARISIAN stage favorites have long been accepted as fashion models for the world. The designing of and wearing of attractive gowns is now quite as much a part of the labor of an actress as the committing and reciting of her lines. During the present season the play houses have furnished an unusual abundance of hints on dress to the cosmopolitan audiences, and many of the stage gowns have been reproduced by designers and sent to all the countries for which Paris is the fashion center.

In the second act of the play now on at the Vaudeville there is an especially gorgeous display of gowns that is proving a greater attraction than the play itself, which is not to be greatly commended. But the gowns cannot all be said to be in good taste, there being some that I should criticize, as, for instance, a cerise mousseline de sole trimmed with white lace and motifs of black passementerie was a shock, and when the brilliantly-robed creature moved off the stage there was quite a sigh of relief from the audience. I recall, however, the sleeve in this dress, that would have been pretty in any other color. It was plaited very fully into the armhole, and tied upon the arm a little way below the shoulder with a wide band and a choux of cerise satin ribbon, then falling with all its fullness into a wristband of lace.

And now to the sensational toilette of the beautiful marquise impersonated by Rosa Bruck. Picture a white gauze robe glittering with gold terial, reaching a couple of inches above the elbow, and finished with a twist of pink and another of white tulle tied into two voluminous bows standing well out beyond the arm. With excellent judgment Mme. Rosa Bruck wore no jewels or ornament in her black hair, nor even a row of pearls around her throat, and the effect in the distance was perfect.

Another dress in the same scene was also a mass of spangles upon a white ground, with a train of pompadour silk starting from the center of the back. The leading part, Yvette, played by Mlle. Toutain, was also exquisitely dressed, a young girl's toilette such as spangles over pale pink, the spangles thickening as they neared the ground in front, with no embroidery or flouncing to mar the line from neck to feet. On the low bodice was a bolero-shaped band of roses, embroidered in floss silks of many delicate shades of pink and yellow, which continued upon the back of the bodice and down each side of the center seam of the long skirt, prettily arranged with a small Watteau plait in spangled gauze between the shoulders. The sleeves were a tight-fitting band of the spangled ma-any debutante would like to wear. It was in white mousseline de sole with a soiled-plaited skirt that widened toward the knees, disclosing a flounced underskirt headed with a narrow ruching of tulle. At the end of the skirt proper was a wide embroidery that looked like silk Madeira work. The bodice had a shaped piece of the same embroidery covering the neck and the top of the arm, from which fell a plaited bertha of muslin edged with embroidery and a narrow ruching. The waist was encircled with a draped band of white satin tied in a Japanese bow at the back.

A HARMONY IN RED.

A SMART TEA GOWN IN "LA BASCULE."

The dresses in the remaining acts were in spotted muslins trimmed with flouncings, and sleeves of embroidered lawn and lace in the shade known as bis. Some were wonderfully tucked and inserted with medallions of Cluny and baby ribbon; some very prettily combined with spots of larger dimensions, and it was not difficult to see that they came from a big house. To go from the Vaudeville to the Gymnase we find in Mr. Maurice Donnay's new play, "La Bascule," other gowns that are gems of the dress designer's art. There is one, a Louis XV. robe, that would serve well as a dinner gown. It is in pale gray brocade interwoven with silver, the bodice sewn with rows of pearls, and the skirt with its becoming fullness at the hips and back cleverly arranged with pink tulle and spangles after the fashion of the time.

Another is a low décolleté tea gown of unusual elegance in blue crepe de chine covered with a design in silver flowers, opening over mousseline de sole in the same pale shade, attached across the bust and a little below the waist with knots of pale blue velvet and paste buckles. Here the sleeve is a feature. It is in mousseline de sole, covered with Venetian point, and rather full to the elbow, tied with pale blue velvet ribbon in long ends and loops.

A LOUIS XV. ROBE.

The remainder of the arm is encased in tight-fitting Venetian point falling partly over the hand. The same lace is draped around the shoulders, and borders the crepe de chine to the feet.

At the Français may be seen another example of stage costume of which everybody is talking, and which is deserving of notice. It is a blouse in scarlet brocade satin, with bands of plain satin in a lighter shade stitched at intervals all over the material, and worn with a fancy belt. It will be seen that there is nothing complicated about it, but its very simplicity is its charm. The hat is a mass of scarlet autumn leaves with a cluster of bluish roses on one side, and nothing prettier and more uncommon than this harmony in red can be conceived.

A peculiar mania is just now the latest vogue among the most select circles of Parisian families. It was inspired by the now famous autograph tablecloth—that curious piece of colored embroidery that represents the signature of the leaders of the nationalist party, headed by M. Jules Lemaitre. At a recent dinner party M. Jules Lemaitre was the principal guest, and during a heated political discussion he mechanically pulled out a pencil and signed his name upon the cloth. This autograph was not to be lost in the wash, so he quizzed the hostess, so, in order to avoid such a catastrophe, she marked it, that is, she had it embroidered in colors, and invited at her weekly dinners signatures that could lie beside it. Each in its turn was embroidered; and to-day the cloth is, to say the least, of it, parti-colored and a curiosity. But to start from the beginning again, the ladies of the select Faubourg are organizing art dinners, where the celebrated painters are requested to sign their names upon the space surrounding their glasses, and it is quite exciting to hear on the following days of the little jealousies arising from the acceptance or refusal of the invitations. Just imagine where this craze may lead. Picture the number of "specialists" in a city like this, and the variety of dinners to be organized by the autograph collector. It is, however, a harmless pleasure, and if a trifle crazy, what matter!

CURES OF MELANCHOLIA.

Plenty of Exercise, Plenty of Work and a Lively Interest in the Affairs of the World.

The London Doctor makes a few suggestive comments that can but be helpful to many women. "Why do so many women have melancholia?" asked a physician who had a large practice among depressed and nervous women. "Because they don't care to avoid it. Because they absolutely disregard the rules of mental and physical well-being. Because they would rather eat what they like and suffer indigestion and the blues afterward than eat what is good for them. Because they would rather sit about on soft cushions than take a tramp of six miles through the open air. Because they haven't enough to occupy their minds and their hands." This observer of women says further that it is never the women who have cause to feel blue who indulge in blues; and that the women with shiftless husbands, sick babies and all the usual accompaniments of poverty never become so depressed that they have to be treated for it. They are too busy; but it is the woman with an adoring family, social position and a comfortable income who does not find life worth living. There is no habit which grows so rapidly. It becomes a disease in a very short time. It is wisely suggested that every woman who has a tendency to melancholia should have an occupation which, if it does not entirely absorb her, will at least keep her busy, and that she should give her mind up to practical rather than theoretical affairs. She should, for example, study how to put an extra shelf in a cupboard, or how to stop a squeaking door, or how to make an overshoe that won't come off at the heel, rather than the teachings of the theological school or the philosophy of Herbert Spencer. Ordinarily good health, plenty of exercise, plenty of work, and an interest in the affairs of the world are the great preventions and cures of melancholia.

WATER WINDOW GARDEN.

Number of Small Aquatics Flourish in It as snugly as if in Their Native Homes.

One of the most curious of window gardens is attracting attention at a suburban home in Philadelphia. It is simply a deep box made to fit the window, and carefully lined with tin in order to hold water instead of soil. As the tin is thoroughly soldered and painted with several coats of white lead before filling with water, there is every promise of durability; and in this novel garden a number of small aquatics flourish quite as snugly as though in their native homes.

It would be absurd to attempt the culture of the large varieties of water lilies, of course, in these cramped quarters, but the water hyacinths, the parrot's feather and the dainty little "umbrella plant"—Cyperus antherifolius—and this small water garden on the shady side of the house exactly suited to their requirements.

Two varieties of the water hyacinth produce the showy display of flowers—the blue with purple center (Eichhornia azurea) and the lilac variety (Eichhornia grassipes major) bearing tall spikes of bloom. The Cyperus antherifolius supplies an abundance of delicate upright foliage, while the parrot's feather, with its masses of feathery green, supplies the necessary drooping foliage that makes the beauty of the window garden complete.

As there are several inches of soil in the bottom of this box, and water then filled in to within half an inch of the top, the plants require very little care, as those which prefer an anchorage of soil find a place for their roots, and there is no danger of the "drying out" so often fatal to window gardens.

HAPPY MRS. GILBERT.

"Grandmother of the American Stage" is Still Playing Leading Roles at Eighty.

Mrs. Anne Hartley Gilbert, the "grandma" of the stage, is still industriously pursuing her profession at the advanced age of 80. Mrs. Gilbert is with Annie Russell in "A Royal Family." She is frankly and delightfully old, but time has dealt gently with her and her powers of endurance are remarkable. Her debut was made with the old school of actors, when she was a mere girl, and now as an old woman she plays in a modern company. She has outlived the manager who once called her "grandma"; she has outlived the associations of youth, but Mrs. Gilbert at heart is young, and perhaps that is the secret of her success. She attributes her fine health, high spirits and long life to her early training as a dancer. She was a member of the ballet in England, where she was born and reared. When but 12 years of age she used to appear as a "supe" on the stage of the old Her Majesty's theater that stood on the ground where Beerbohm's Tree theater now stands. She received lessons in the ballet school as pay for her services.

MRS. ANNE H. GILBERT.
(Lovingly Known as the "Grandmother of the American Stage.")

The actress married during her early dancing days and while still an English woman she toured England with her husband. She came to America in 1840, and from that time has been thoroughly American in feeling. She and her husband went west upon their arrival in New York, and for a long time they played in Wisconsin, Illinois and Ohio. Mrs. Gilbert has had a vast amount of experience in stock work, and has played every conceivable kind of role. She supported Edwin Forrest and most of the famous stars. The veteran actress is best known to the public as a member of Daly's famous stock company. She went under Daly's management in 1869, and remained with him until the time of his death. She played mostly old lady and character parts during the rise and fall of many leading women. She played with Fanny Davenport when the plump Fanny was not yet taking herself seriously, and was assigned to comedy roles. The dear old lady laughs at her burden of years, and is as sprightly as in the days when she played lively soubrette roles.

HOW TO BOIL WATER.

Ten Minutes of Boiling Will Free It from Its Gases and Make It Absolutely Tasteless.

It may seem presumptuous to suggest that few people know how to boil water, but such is the case. The boiling point, under ordinary atmospheric pressure (sea level), is 212 degrees Fahrenheit; this point changes according to the altitude. When bubbles form on the bottom of the kettle, come clear to the surface and rupture quietly, without making an ebullition, we have simmering. At this point the thermometer should register 180 degrees Fahrenheit, and it is at this temperature that we cook meats and make soups. When the bubbles begin to form on the sides and surface of the vessel and come toward the top of the water, there is a motion in the water, but it has not really reached the boiling point. It is only when the thermometer reaches 212 degrees Fahrenheit and the water is in rapid motion that it can be said to boil; and the atmospheric gases still continue to be given off with the steam for a considerable time after the water has commenced to boil rapidly; in fact, it is difficult to determine when the last traces have been expelled. It is safe to suppose, however, that ten minutes' boiling will free the water from its gases, make it tasteless, and render it unfit for the making of tea, coffee or other light infusions of delicate materials. Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

SOCIETY AND SOCIAL CUSTOMS IN NEW YORK

When I was in Naples in 1897 a New York man had just climbed Vesuvius from Pompeii, and at the "white house"—the last chance on that route to get a drink—had seen his guide kill another fellow in a fight.

Since 1870 the Italian government has really "taken notice" when people slay each other, even in Naples. The murderer was arrested and the New Yorker asked to give his name and address, so that he might be called as a witness. With a winning smile he consented and the official copied it down:

"John Smith, U. S. A."

I'm reminded of this incident by the latest social flurry in Washington, where ladies of official families are now printing their visiting cards with out their husbands' titles.

The new fashion is right. For years people have poked fun at the woman who describes herself as "Mrs. First Assistant Deputy Commissioner Smith," but now that the card reads simply "Mrs. Smith" without even an address, how is the recipient to know whether the lady who leaves it is the wife of the F. A. D. C. aforesaid, or a congressman's wife from the state of Maine?

The custom arose from too slavish following of precedent. "Mrs. Roosevelt," "Mrs. Fuller" and "Mrs. Henderson," the wives of the president, the chief justice and the speaker of the house, have by custom no other words upon their cards. When "Mrs. Dewey" and "Mrs. Miles" follow the precedent there is no danger of confusion, but when everybody follows suit trouble ensues.

In New York a lady's name is preceded upon her cards by her husband's "front names" in full. "Mrs. Zerubabel Baker Smith" is easily recognizable.

A "Quiet" Social Season.

The purse may be flattened as of old, but the word on everybody's lips in society is "quiet."

It is the desired adjective for entertainments, balls, parties, dinners, dances. The newcomer in society, unless skillfully advised, may spend money extravagantly in securing a box at the opera, in hiring Sherry's for a dance, and, in other ways preparing to make a splurge, only to find that many of the "best people" are sitting in orchestra chairs this year, and that a hotel dance is not "good form."

The change has been of service to common sense in abolishing the big "coming-out dance" for debutantes. Last winter the change began in giving, instead, "coming-out teas;" modest little affairs where a woman's friends could be apprised that her daughter was in the field for invitations. This year some smart girls are brought out without even this formality. Simply send the girl's visiting cards out with her mamma's, and the thing is done.

The Manchester Enterprise says: A funny scene on Exchange place. Saturday night was a man driving a team hitched to a big sleigh and dragging a horse and carriage backwards. Song the horse fell down or was pulled over backwards, then someone stopped the team. Nobody seemed to know how the sleigh hitched onto the carriage wheel but a broken tie strap showed that the horse had been hitched a short distance from where the man was discovered dragging him away.

Let us speak of man as we find him
And censure only what we can see,
Remembering that no one can be perfect,
Unless he uses Rocky Mountain Tea.
