POLITICS ARE GETTING WARM

Both Parties Held Their Campaigns Saturday Afternoon.

The republicans and democrats of Sylvan held their caucuses at this place Saturday afternoon. There were large crowds out and much interest was manifested. The republicans nominated the following ticket:

Supervisor—William Bacon.
Clerk—H. H. Avery.
Treasurer—G. J. Crowell.
Highway Com.—Philip Schweinfurth.
Justice—B. Parker.
Member Board of Review—A. W. Chapman.

School Inspector—B. F. Kruse.
Constables—Henry Schefferstein, Rush Green, Edgar Alexander.
The Democratic nominations are as follows:

Supervisor—George Beckwith.
Clerk—B. B. Turnbull.
Treasurer—H. Lighthall.
Highway Com.—Wm. Long.
Justice—D. R. Hoppe.
Member Board of Review—F. H. Sweetland.
School Inspector—Joseph Sibley.
Constables—Frank Leach, Ed. Chandler, Pat. Murphy, Chas. Paul.

A "Jolly" by Telephone.

Stockbridge Sun: Thirty-nine years ago last Monday Wm. B. Gildart, a raw Waterloo product, went to work for himself on the farm of Dennis Spaulding. Dennis set him to work on a wood pile of enormous proportions, and Monday morning Mr. Gildart rang up Mr. Spaulding to let him know he had been "sawing wood" ever since. Mr. Spaulding had a farm of 60 acres; those were war times. That summer he raised 20 acres of wheat which brought $3.00 per bushel. He paid for his farm and had $600 left.

Rural School Statistics

Argus: It has been said that the average age of the pupils of the rural schools who attended the last examinations for eighth grade was less than that of city pupils of the eighth grade. At the recent examinations there were 189 pupils in attendance; their average age was 13.82 years. The ages ranged from 12 to 17 years. Only a few of these passed in all branches. Those that did not pass have another opportunity at the May examinations. School Commissioner Foster sent letters to the secretaries of the city and village schools inquiring as to the average ages of eighth grade pupils. He received the following answers.

Ann Arbor 134 pupils enrolled, average 14 years 6 months; Ypsilanti, 32 pupils, 14 1-8 years; Dexter, 9 pupils, average 13 years; Chelsea, 29 pupils, average 14 years; Saline, 15 pupils, 13 years; Milan, 15 pupils, average 13 2-8 years.

In the recent examination there was a prodigy in little Bertha Fischer, aged 10 years, the daughter of John Fischer. She passed in all branches the second of the entire class of 189 examined. Her parents have wisely decided to keep her out of school for a year so that she may not be unduly encouraged to work more than her tender age permits.

Will Sue for Damages.

The inquest on the death of Herbert J. Harrison, the motorman who was killed at Chelsea on March 11, was started at Ann Arbor Tuesday.

There is no doubt but that the widow of the unfortunate man will sue the electric line company for heavy damages. She will base her claim on the amount of support he was able to give her and her minor children during the expectancy of his life.

A. J. Sawyer & Son and J. C. Knowlton are representing Mrs. Harrison, and Attorney Morgan, of Detroit, is looking after the interests of the electric line people.

It is claimed by the attorneys for the wife that Harrison was killed by the negligence of the company in having its high tension wire so close to the trolley wire that an "arc" was possible.

In other words it was so close that the electricity could jump from the high tension wire to the trolley pole.

Machinery Working Admirably.

Prairie City Miner: W. H. Washburn foreman of construction of the Prairie City on Sunday, en route to other parts of the district. He will establish headquarters at Baker City for three or four months.

"The Prairie Diggings mine," he said to The Miner, "ought to establish the record of the coast in the matter of the cheapness of mining and milling ore. The force is now handling 80 tons of rock per day and is gradually increasing the tonnage. The saving made is remarkable good. The concentrators are doing excellent work much better than the old one used by the former company when it operated only five stamps. The mill will soon be crushing 100 tons per day. It has been increasing its work gradually during the three weeks it has been running.

"The mill is solid as a rock. The batteries have settled less than a sixteenth of an inch.

"The ore now being crushed shows considerable free gold and is much more easily amalgamated than at first estimated. The ponderous machinery is working perfectly in every part.

"Those of the company who are personally watching the progress of the first month's run of the new mill on the big mine seem entirely pleased with the results and conditions, but, of course, no definite knowledge is yet obtainable as to what the clean up of the initial run will be.

"The electric light plant is now at Whitney. It will be taken in and installed immediately. It will light the mine tunnels and the mill, besides the buildings of the camp, and furnish power to operate the ore cars."

A March Lion.

This is what the Jackson Citizen said of the Sunday storm: The horrible beast arrived on time. Following a week of exceptionally fine weather, as the closing of a remarkably pleasant March, the weather lion began to shake his mane on Saturday evening, and he continued his unmannerly conduct through Easter Sunday and became roaring and tearing mad this morning. It has been the most severe storm of the season up-to-date. The wind has blown in strong hurricane since Saturday, and the snow began falling on Sunday and has continued up to date. All over the state and country there have been disasters large and small, the worst being the almost entire derangement of telegraph and telephone lines and trolley roads, delayed trains, and here and there severe damage to shipping and towns. Talk about "sugar snows," there is nothing sweet about the snow blizzard that has raged the past sixteen hours. It is wet, sticky, lumpy, inconvenient and uncomfortable, as all things that come out of time. But it can't last long, for the March lion marches out tonight and tomorrow sweet and smiling April will begin her more genial reign.

Lima Nominations.

The following are the Republican nominees:

Supervisor—William E. Stocking.
Clerk—Otto D. Lulek.
Treasurer—Henry H. Lulek.
Highway Commissioner—John Steinboch.

Justice—Herman E. Fletcher.
School Inspector—Emanuel Strieter.
Board Review—Henry A. Wilson.
Constables—George Savory, Henry H. Lulek, George Trunkley, Charles M. Morse.

The following are the Democratic nominations:

Supervisor—Fred C. Haist.
Clerk—Eddie J. Parker.
Treasurer—Emanuel Elsemann.
Highway Commissioner—William J. Beach.

Justice—Fred Wenk.
School Inspector—Edward G. Gross.
Board of Review—John A. Schmid.
Constables—Emanuel Elsemann, Jacob Strieter, John H. Wade, Michael Gross.

A Pleasant Wedding.

It was a beautiful marital scene that transpired on Thursday evening of last week, March 27, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carpenter, of this village. It was the marriage of their only daughter, Nina Belle, to Ernest Cooke, only son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cooke, also of Chelsea. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Caster, under a beautiful canopy of lace and flowers, and in the presence of a large company of friends and invited guests. After congratulations an elegant wedding supper was served in the dining room, which, with the other rooms was tastefully decorated with potted plants and cut flowers. The presents consisted of articles of furniture, sets of dishes, silver ware, crystal sets, linens, and a nice time piece. Mr. and Mrs. Cooke will try their skill at farming a few miles north of Chelsea. The Standard offers congratulations.

Will Soon Resume Work.

The Hawks-Angus interests are making preparations for the opening of their season's work, and the first extension will be northward on Milwaukee and Cooper street, Lansing being the objective point. Building operations which have been discontinued during the winter season, will probably be resumed about the middle of April. The company, it is stated, may defer the construction of their power house in Jackson until work is well under way on the north and south line, as they are able to generate power sufficient to operate the road well beyond Lansing from their extensive plant at Ypsilanti.—Jackson Press.

The Story of the Horse.
Horses began in western America, says Prof. W. B. Scott, of Princeton, in the form of animals hardly higher than domestic cats, whose remains are found in the Wasatch beds of Eocene time. Later on, in the form of mesohippus, these animals attained the stature of sheep, and showed considerable advances in organization. In time the protohippus was developed, and it not only attained a great size, but had a skeleton "so like that of a horse as to require a careful examination to note the differences." The change from the protohippus to the existing equus occurred early in the Pliocene. Yet "the true horse in the restricted sense of the term (species Equus caballus) was not developed in North America, and appears never to have reached this continent until brought here by the European settlers. For reasons which can hardly be even conjectured, the horses disappeared entirely from the western hemisphere before the discoveries of Columbus, and continued to exist only in Eurasia and Africa."—Nature.

Glove Making.

Most people think that France is the glove-making country par excellence. Germany, however, has the largest number of concerns engaged in the making of leather gloves of any country in Europe, the number being over 1,100. Of these, 1,000 are engaged exclusively in the making of kid gloves. There are besides 100 tanneries for kid and 40 tanneries for shoemaking leather. There are 85 glove concerns that work exclusively for export. Of the other countries, Austria-Hungary has 350; France, 225; England, 190; Italy, 100, and Sweden, Norway and Spain between 50 and 60 glove-manufacturing firms each. Russia has only about 30. There is in Germany no important glove-making center, the industry being scattered. In Austria the glove-making centers are Prague and Vienna; in France, Paris, Grenoble and Chaumont; in England, London and Worcester; in Italy, Naples, Milan and Turin; in Sweden, Stockholm and Malmo, and in Belgium, Brussels.—Invention.

Seasonable Vehicles.

"I always like to ride in seasonable vehicles," said Miss Frocks.
"I wonder what you mean by seasonable vehicles?" asked Miss Kittish.
"Well, in the vernal months, of course, spring-wagons are the proper thing; but in the fall I prefer to use autumn-mobiles."—Judge.

In the Ballroom.

She—Do you dance, Mr. Skiggleton?
He (modestly)—Well, my teacher said I did when I left the academy, but those ladies I have danced with since express a different opinion.—Detroit Free Press.

The Worst of It.

He—Come, now, Carrie, did I ever deny you anything?
She—Not even the horrid stories they tell about you. That's the worst of it. You couldn't.—Boston Transcript.

A VALUABLE MEDICINE

For Coughs and Colds in Children.

"I have not the slightest hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to all who are suffering from coughs or colds," says Chas. M. Cramer, eq., a well known watch maker, of Colombo, Ceylon. "It has been some two years since the city dispensary first called my attention to this valuable medicine and I have repeatedly used it and it has always been beneficial. It has cured me quickly of all chest colds. It is especially effective for children and seldom takes more than one bottle to cure them of hoarseness. I have persuaded many to try this valuable medicine, and they are all as well pleased as myself over the result. For sale by all druggists.

For all kinds of sores, burns, bruises, or other wounds DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is a sure cure. Skin diseases yield to it at once. Never falls in case of piles. Cooling and healing. None genuine but DeWitt's. Beware of counterfeits. "I suffered for many years from a sore caused by a gun shot wound in my left leg," says A. S. Fuller, English, Ind. "It would not heal and gave me much trouble. I used all kinds of remedies to no purpose until I tried DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." Glazier & Stimson.

A Remarkable Story of Love, Gold and Adventure.

By ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

CHAPTER XX.—(Continued.)

It seemed that the captain owned a house far off in the neighborhood of West Brompton, and into this he had moved the wreck of his fortunes, including his family.

The marquis waited a certain length of time.

Then one afternoon he appeared at the new home of the Livermores.

To himself he declared many times that he intended this visit as a post-mortem means of increasing his hold upon the captain's wife, over whom he seemed to be exerting some peculiarly hypnotic power, with the eventual aim in view of inducing her to leave home and seek some asylum on the continent.

For years he had looked forward to this same moment with the keenest anticipation; for years he had in his mind gone over every little detail, had seen her surprise and alarm, with his own great triumph, as he sent his shafts home with the arm of ample revenge; yet, strange to say, he did not approach the subject with the eagerness he had expected, the feverish thrill was only conspicuous by its absence, and he even started guiltily when from some distant part of the rambling old structure a peal of childish laughter was borne to his ears; there was something so condemnatory in the merry sound.

By degrees he brought the subject around to where he wanted it, and the manner in which he accomplished this declared that his strategic powers had not waned a particle.

"Have you had any American friends?" he asked.

"Yes, one," came the rather confused reply, and the listener knew he had caused her mind to revert to that unhappy past about which she usually avoided thinking.

"Pardon me; but I once knew a poor fellow, an artist, out in Mexico, who said he had been well acquainted with Captain Livermore's wife," he went on deliberately.

"An artist," she echoed, looking pained, and yet showing an eagerness in her voice.

"Yes; by name Jack. I chanced to do him several favors, and he even confided his history to me. Poor fellow, he had suffered bitterly."

"Confided to you—then you know—" in alarm.

"That you and he were once betrothed—yes. That while he labored unceasingly in the hope of gaining fame and fortune, your love for him began to grow cold. He had been the means of reconciling you to your proud old English grandfather. In the whirl of society you met Captain Livermore, then the lion of the hour. You forgot to write to the man who believed in you as he did in Heaven. He came to London, unable to breathe outside your presence. Then you crushed him by declaring that while you still loved him, you loved position still more; and that you had agreed to marry the captain."

Fedora's head had fallen on her wildly heaving bosom, but she neither looked up nor uttered a word as yet, being too stunned as the tremendous revelation was forcing itself upon her mind.

He went on pitilessly!

"Jack sought a quarrel with the man who had robbed him of all he had on earth—perhaps you never knew of it, but they met at dawn in the deadly duello, each determined to kill the other. The captain, as they advanced toward each other, fired first and only inflicted a wound. He was then at Jack's complete mercy, since he was allowed the privilege of walking up as close as he pleased and sending a ball through the heart of his adversary."

Fedora groaned, but never moved.

"The captain was no coward; believing his hour had come, he deliberately opened his coat and awaited the fatal shot, his eyes looking into those of the man he had wronged without knowing it. Twice Jack took aim, but each time he failed to pull the trigger. Finally he raised his pistol, fired in the air and fled from the scene."

For the first time she raised her head and looked at him, her troubled face marked by conflicting emotions.

"Then came the wedding, which poor Jack saw from the organ loft, enduring the tortures of the damned while the woman whom heaven had given to him was united by law to man she did not love."

"Then he fled from London as from a place accursed and sought fortune's smiles upon a new field, hating women because one had been false to her vows, and always hugging to his heart the resolution to some day return and take full satisfaction for that treachery."

"That was Jack's story—doubtless other men have suffered in the same way from a woman's hand, but none more cruelly. And yet it seemed that fortune took a strange delight in compensating him his loss by throwing into his hands the most wonderful treasure ever known, surpassing all tales from the days of Ophir and Solomon down to the present. More than this, he was given power and made the head of the Central American republic whither fate had drifted him."

"Thus, when five years had passed, rich beyond the wildest dreams, made a noble of Spain because of some financial assistance he had given the government at Madrid, Jack came back to London with the full determination to repay the debts he owed, at compound interest, down to the last penny."

She was looking at him now with fear-haunted eyes, looking at him as one might gaze upon some dreadful spectre of the past.

"You are—Jack!" she said, slowly, as if almost unable to grasp the idea at once.

"I am that once miserable wretch. Having embarked upon my campaign, I lost no time in making your husband's acquaintance. It was my hand that, in a fair and honorable way, stripped him of all he possessed. That is only a beginning."

"Jack! Jack! Have you no mercy?" she groaned, wringing her hands wildly.

"Did you have any when you so coolly turned me down to stay in the mine, while upon my shoulders you mounted to a position in society and gave yourself to a man you never loved? I know all you would say, and be sure, I have steeled my heart against all arguments. What I seek is only justice—a fair equivalent. I have suffered, God only knows how much. It is your turn."

He looked like a man of stone, upon whom pleading and tears would be wasted.

Fedora attempted neither at first—she seemed to act and speak as if in a dream, for his influence, whatever it sprang from, dominated her personality to a remarkable extent.

Had it been so in those days of yore Fedora would never have willingly given him up.

"You speak of heaven in the same breath with vengeance—surely you cannot believe, Jack, that God approves of such things. I did wrong you, oh, most grievously; but I have bitterly repented it ever since, and hoped the day might come when I could tell you so. Often I have wept to remember your despair. It has been the one black spit upon my life, and kept me from being truly happy. But, Jack, won't you forgive if you can never forget—see, I plead with you; hold this wretched remembrance no longer against me. Be my friend, my brother. You already respect my husband; why be the means of his ruin?"

"While I cannot forget, I must not forgive. You have not yet begun to know what suffering means. When the world seems dark and your soul prays for death—"

"But, Jack, stop; consider; you cannot have revenge upon me without injuring my children," she said, suddenly remembering his weakness of old, and how a child had never appeared in vain so long as he had a soul left.

This was a harder task than the other, and the indomitable marquis was compelled to grit his teeth in the endeavor to stem the signs of retreat that threatened to overwhelm him.

"I regret exceedingly that they must suffer, for I am not that cruel to desire through their hold on your heart to inflict pain on you; but as I, an innocent party, once paid the penalty of your sin, so they, too, must inherit the legacy."

"Is there no way in which you may be satisfied without the burden falling on them?"

"I know of none. They must suffer when you do, all being members of one family. It is fate."

"Jack, have mercy!—see, on my knees I beg you to forgive. It is true I wronged you most fearfully. God knows, I am wretchedly sorry. But out of that wrong has come your bright fortune, and, perhaps, Jack, some more worthy woman may fill the place in your heart I once occupied. Forget the past and live for the future. Grasp them before they have flown. Rise above this spirit of revenge upon a weak, wretched woman, who in her thoughtlessness did you harm and lived to repent. Already you have as you say brought ruin upon us, and cast us out from society. For that I care little; but for God's sake, leave me the love of my husband, my children."

It was enough to melt a heart of ice, and reason combined with emotion in the argument. Had not the marquis thrashed this same straw himself almost daily—had he not been thrust suddenly upon him, he must have been fairly overwhelmed.

It was not his design that Fedora should see any sign of weakness in his manner, and he maintained the same passionless exterior he had shown through the whole interview.

"I promise nothing. Only this I say, that your children have doubtless saved you from a fate that might have come upon you. I do not relent, I simply change my tactics, and for their sakes spare you that humiliation, that shame. What further means of punishment I may decide to invoke you will know in good time. As you sowed so must you reap. That is the law of recompense, of stern justice. Therefore, weep over your wretched lot, and bitterly regret that false step in which you were tempted by pride. I do not dare remain here longer in your presence. At least thank heaven that I have decided to abandon the plan upon which I was working as unworthy of an honorable man."

"You are going, Jack?"

"Without seeing the children?" pressing a button while he was not looking.

"They remind me too bitterly of what you, their unhappy mother, seemed to me in the long ago—all innocence and trusting love. No, I don't wish to see them now."

"Oh, Jack, be reconciled—I shall pray daily that you cease to hate me, for the sake of those little ones. Did you know the boy's name is Jack?"

"What!" he gasped, weakening. "Do you mean to say your husband allowed you to do that—and I the man you loved? Incredible!"

"I told him all, and it was he who first proposed it. You don't know his generous nature. I can see now what it was so disturbed him—you took his fire and freely gave him his forfeited life. Oh! wretched woman that I am to have been loved by two such noble men, and to have brought sorrow to both. Who will deliver me from the bondage of my sin?"

As if in answer to her forlorn cry the patter of little feet sounded somewhere—the marquis, alarmed at his own weakness, turned to fly, but made a miscalculation, for in the hall he was waylaid by the enemy, who rushed upon him with exultant cries.

He made a swoop for the little girl and swept her up in his arms, until her golden curls nestled against his shoulder when he kissed her pouting lips again and again.

Then came the boy, to whom he had paid so little attention before. Now he held him off at arm's length, where he could look into his resolute face and bold black eyes—yes, he was surely the image of what Livermore must have been as a lad, and yet, and yet, strange to say, the marquis actually believed he could see some traces of his own characteristics in the boy—learned philosophical and psychological scholars and doctors have long argued this point, and agreed that it is not only possible, but actual—the image of her first love still remained strong in Fedora's heart at the time the child was born.

Kissing the youngster, the marquis hastily quitted the house, followed by the anxious gaze of the wretched Fedora, until the children, astonished at the strange actions of their friend, loudly bewailed his flight, and demanded her attention.

Weep no more tears of repentance and fear, wife and mother, since the seed has been sown and the harvest must come in due season—that name of Jack, together with the captain's generosity, proved the last straw that broke the camel's back.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Love has redeemed me!"

The game was drawing near its close.

With each struggle that iron will of the marquis, which had been the marvel and admiration of his friends, came out much weaker.

Perhaps the thing that had the most decided influence upon him was the startling conviction that there had been awakened within his heart a glow of love for the little miniature painter.

With the flower of love blossoming again in his heart he could hardly have continued in his former policy.

Should he be magnanimous and freely forgive, or should he turn aside the bright vision that tempted him, shut himself up in a narrow compass and carry out the miserable plan of the past?

Thus he debated, pro and con. But it chanced that the marquis was not given an opportunity to fight his battle to a finish in the usually accepted term—there was a surprise in store for him, a flank movement, as it were, on the part of one who meant to be an ally, yet proved his worst enemy.

That person was the Spanish-American belle of San Jose.

It was on the evening following that when the marquis received such a shock at the hands of Fedora.

It was probably 11 o'clock when one of the hotel lackeys came with a card on a silver salver and presented it to the marquis.

This was a frequent occurrence, but on this special occasion those who were near by saw the usually cool nabob give a plain start.

Photographers as Sportsmen.

In a recent book a hunter tells how he spent many weary months in the attempt to shoot an eagle, and at last ambushed so successfully that he actually touched the bird with his fingers. Having got so far he was content, and let the eagle go free. It may be a hunter's tale, but there are at present a very considerable number of sportsmen who are a great deal keener to see their game at close quarters than to kill it. Instead of the old phrase, "Let us go and kill something," the hunter now says, "Let us go and focus something." The camera has supplanted the gun. There are now made all manner of devices, more ingenious and intricate even than the older trappers devised, for getting the camera to bear on unsuspecting animals.

A boat, resembling a little the duck-shooting boats used on the Irish coast, has been devised, which is propelled without oars or sails, and has a beautiful photographic apparatus rigged up in the bows. There are other not less clever means for approaching and photographing deer in their native haunts, and they have been used with altogether remarkable success. Humanitarians are already pointing that this sport with the camera gives all the excitement of the chase without any of the cruelty, and at least this much may be conceded, that the difficulties of photographing, say, a weasel are considerably greater and therefore more attractive than those of shooting it.

The busiest man on earth is the man who keeps on a continual run getting out of the way of work.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

CHRISTIAN DEATH AS THE ENTRANCE TO FULLER LIFE.

eloquent Easter Discourse Preached from Corinthian, "Death is Swallowed Up in Victory"—Why Should We Doubt That God Can Raise Us from Death?

(Copyright, 1901, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.) Washington, March 30.—The Christian view of death as the entrance to a fuller life is presented in this Easter discourse by Dr. Talmage from the text I Cor. xv. 54, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

About 1,870 Easter mornings have watched the earth. The royal court of the Sabbath is made up of fifty-two. Fifty-one are princes in the royal household, but Easter is queen. She wears richer diadem, she sways a more jeweled scepter, and in her smile nations are irradiated. How welcome she is when, after a harsh winter and late spring, she seems to step out of the snow bank rather than the conservatory, to come out of the north instead of the south, out of the arctic rather than the tropics, dismounting from the icy equinox, but welcome this queenly day, holding high in her right hand the wrenched off bolt of Christ's sepulcher and holding high in her left hand the key to all the cemeteries in Christendom.

My text is an ejaculation. It is spun out of hallelulahs. Paul wrote on in his argument about the resurrection and observed all the laws of logic, but when he came to write the words of the text his fingers and his pen and the parchment on which he wrote took fire, and he cried out, "Death is swallowed up in victory!" It is an exciting thing to see an army routed and flying. You have read of the French falling back from Sedan, of Napoleon's track of 90,000 corpses in the snow-banks of Russia, of the retreat of our armies from Manassas or of the five kings tumbling over the rocks of Beth horan with their armies while the hailstones of heaven and the swords of Joshua's host struck them with their fury.

In my text is a worse discomfiture. It seems that a black gnat proposed to conquer the earth. He gathered for his hosts all the aches and pains and malarial and cancerous and distempers and epidemics of the ages. He marched them down, drilling them in the northwest wind and amid the slush of tempests. He threw up barricades of grave mound. He pitched tent of charnel house. Some of the troops marched with slow tread commanded by consumptions, some in double quick command of pneumonias. Some he took by long besiegement of evil habit and some by one stroke of the battleaxe of casualty. With bony hand he pounded at the door of hospitals and sickrooms, and won all the victories in all the great battlefields of all of the five continents. Forward, march! ordered the conqueror of conquerors, and all the generals and commanders in chief and all the presidents and kings and sultans and czars dropped under the feet of his war charger. But one Christmas night his antagonist was born.

As most of the plagues and sicknesses and despotisms come out of the east, it was appropriate that the new conqueror should come out of the same quarter. Power is given him to awaken all the fallen of all the centuries and of all lands and marshal them against the black giant. Fields have already been won, but the last day of the world's existence will see the decisive battle. When Christ shall lead forth his two brigades, the brigade of the risen dead and the brigade of the celestial host, the black giant will fall back, and the brigade from the risen sepulchers will take him from beneath, and the brigade of descending immortals will take him from above, and death shall be swallowed up in victory.

The old antagonist is driven back into mythology with all the lore about Stygian ferry and Charon with oar and boat. Melrose abbey and Kenilworth castle are no more in ruins than is the sepulcher. We shall have no more to do with death than we have with the cloakroom at a governor's or a president's levee. We stop at such cloakroom and leave in charge of a servant our overcoat, our overshoes, our outward apparel, that we may not be impeded in the brilliant round of the drawing room. Well, my friends, when we go out of this world we are going to a King's banquet and to a reception of monarchs, and at the door of the tomb we leave the cloak of flesh and the wrappings with which we meet the storms of this world. At the close of an earthly reception, under the brush and broom of the porter, the coat or hat may be handed to us better than when we resigned it, and the cloak of humanity will finally be returned to us improved and brightened and purified and glorified.

You and I do not want our bodies returned as they are now. We want to get rid of all their weaknesses and all their susceptibilities to fatigue and all their slowness of locomotion. We want them put through a chemistry of soil and heat and cold and changing seasons, out of which God will reconstruct them as much better than they are now as the body of the rosiest and healthiest child that bounds over the lawn in Central Park is better than the sickest patient in Bellevue hospital. But as to our soul, we will cross right over, not waiting for obsequies, independent of obituary, into a state in every way better, with wider room and velocities beyond computation, the dullest of us into companionship with the very best spirits in their very best mood, in the very parlor of the universe, the four walls burnished and paneled and pictured and glorified with all the splendors that the infinite God in all the ages has been able to invent. Victory!

This view, of course, makes it of but little importance whether we are cremated or sepulchred. If the latter is dust to dust, the former is ashes to ash. If any prefer incineration, let them have it without cavil or protest. The world may become so crowded that cremation may be universally adopted by law as well as by general consent. Many of the mightiest and best spirits have gone through this process. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's children have been cremated—P. P. Bliss and wife, the evangelistic singers, cremated by accident at Ashtabula bridge; John Rodgers, cremated by persecution; Latimer and Ridley, cremated at Oxford; Potholus and Blandina, a slave, and Alexander, a physician, and their comrades cremated at the order of Marcus Aurelius; at least a hundred thousand of Christ's disciples cremated, and there can be no doubt about the resurrection of their bodies. Whether out of natural disinclination or cremation we shall get that luminous, buoyant, gladsome, transcendent, magnificent, inexorable structure called the resurrection body. You will have it; I will have it.

I say to you to-day, as Paul said to Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" That far up cloud, higher than the hawk flies, higher than the eagle flies, what is it made of? Drops of water from a river, other drops from a lake, still other drops from a stagnant pool, but now embodied in a cloud and kindled by the sun. If God can make such a fustrous cloud out of water drops, many of them soiled and impure and fetched from miles away, can he not transport the fragments of a human body from the earth and out of them build a radiant body? Cannot God, who owns all the material out of which bones, muscle and flesh are made, set them up again if they have fallen? If a manufacturer of telescopes drops a telescope on the floor and it breaks, can he not mend it again so you can see through it? And if God drops the human eye into the dust, the eye which he originally fashioned, can he not restore it?

"Why should it be thought with you an incredible thing that God should raise the dead?" Things all around us suggest it. Out of what grew all these flowers? Out of the mold and the earth. Resurrected! Resurrected! The radiant butterfly—where did it come from? The loathsome caterpillar. That albatross that smites the tempest with its wings—where did it come from? A senseless shell. Near Bergerac, France, in a Celtic tomb near a block, were found flower seeds that had been buried 2,000 years. The explorer took the flower seed and planted it, and it came up. It bloomed in bluebell and heliotrope. Two thousand years ago buried, yet resurrected! A traveler says he found in a mummy pit in Egypt garden peas that had been buried there 3,000 years ago. He brought them out and on the 4th of June, 1844, he planted them and in thirty days they sprang up. Buried 3,600 years, yet resurrected! "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

Where did all this silk come from—the silk that adorns your persons and your homes? In the hollow of a staff of Greek missionary brought from China to Europe the progenitors of those worms that now supply the silk markets of many nations. The pageantry of banquered host and the luxurious articles of commercial emporium blazing out from the silkworms. And who shall be surprised if out of this insignificant earthly body, this insignificant earthly life, our bodies unfold into something worthy of the coming eternities? Put silver into diluted niter, and it dissolves. Is the silver gone forever? No. Put in some pieces of copper, and the silver reappears. If one force dissolves, another force organizes.

"Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The insects flew and the worms crawled last autumn feeble and feeble and then stopped. They have taken no food. They want none. They lie dormant and insensible, but soon the south wind will blow the resurrection trumpet, and the air and the earth will be full of them. Do you not think that God can do as much for our bodies as he does for the wasps and the spiders and the snails? This morning at half-past 4 o'clock there was a resurrection. Out of the night the day. In a few weeks there will be a resurrection in all our gardens. Why not some day a resurrection amid the graves?

Ever and anon there are instances of men and women entranced. A trance is death followed by resurrection after a few days; total suspension of mental power and voluntary action. Rev. William Tennent, a great evangelist of the last generation, of whom Dr. Archibald Alexander, a man far from being sentimental, wrote in most eulogistic terms—Rev. William Tennent seemed to die. His spirit apparently left the body. People came in day after day and said, "He is dead, he is dead." But the soul that fled returned, and Will Tennent lived to write what he had seen while his soul was gone.

It may be found some time that what is called suspended animation or comatose state is brief death, giving the soul an excursion into the next world, from which it comes back, a furlough of a few hours granted from the conflict of life to which it must return. Physiologists tell us that while the meat of our bodies is built with such wonderful economy that we can spare nothing, and the loss of a finger is a hindrance, and the injury of a toe joint makes us lame, still there are two or three useless physical apparatuses, and no anatomist or physiologist has ever been able to tell us what they are good for. They may be the foundation of the resurrection body, worth nothing to us in this state to be indispensably valuable in the next state. The Jewish rabbis and the scientists of our day have found out that there are two or three superfluities of body that are something gloriously suggestive of another state.

I called at my friend's house one summer day. I found the yard all piled up with the rubbish of carpenter's and mason's work. The door was off. The plumbers had torn up the floor. The roof was being lifted in cupola. All the pictures were gone, and the paper hangers were doing their work. All the modern improvements were being introduced into that dwelling. There was not a room in the house fit to live in at that time, although a month before when I visited that house everything was so beautiful I could not have suggested an improvement. My friend had gone with his family to the Holy Land, expecting to come back at the end of six months, when the building was to be done. And, oh, what was his joy when at the end of six months he returned and found the old house had been enlarged and improved and glorified. That is your body. It looks well now—all the rooms filled with health, and we could hardly make a suggestion. But after awhile your soul will go to the Holy Land, and while you are gone the old house of your tabernacle will be entirely reconstructed from cellar to attic, and every nerve, muscle and bone and tissue and artery must be hauled over, and the old structure will be burned and adorned and raised and cupolaed and enlarged; and all the improvements of heaven introduced, and you will move into it on resurrection day.

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Oh, what a day when body and soul meet again! They are very fond of each other. Did your body ever have a pain and your soul not pity it, or your body have a joy and your soul not re-echo it, or, changing the question, did your soul ever have any trouble and your body not sympathize with it, growing wan and weak under the depressing influence? Or did your soul ever have a gladness but your body celebrated it with kindled eye and cheek and elastic step? Surely God never intended two such good friends to be long separated.

And so when the world's last Easter morning shall come the soul will descend, crying, "Where is my body?" And the body will ascend, saying, "Where is my soul?" And the Lord of the resurrection will bring them together, and it will be a perfect soul in a perfect body, introduced by a perfect Christ into a perfect heaven. Victory! Do you wonder that on Easter day we swathe our churches with garlands? Do you wonder we celebrate it with the most consecrated voice of song that we can invite, with the dearest fingers on organ and cornet and with doxologies that beat these arches with the billows of sound as the sea smites the basalt at Giant's Causeway? Only the bad disapproval of the resurrection. A cruel heathen warrior heard Mr. Moffatt, the missionary, preach about the resurrection, and he said to the missionary, "Will my father rise in the last day?" "Yes," said the missionary. "Will all the dead in battle rise?" said the cruel chieftain. "Yes," said the missionary. Then said the warrior: "Let me hear no more about the resurrection; there can be no resurrection; there shall be no resurrection. I have slain thousands in battle. Will they rise?" Ah, there will be more to rise on that day than those whose crimes have never been repented of will want to see! But for all others who allowed Christ to be their pardon and their life and their resurrection it will be a day of victory.

The thunders of the last day will be the salvo that greets you into harbor. The lightnings will be the torches of triumph procession marching down to escort you home. The burning worlds flashing through immensity will be the rockets celebrating your coronation on thrones where you will reign forever and forever. Where is death? What have we to do with death? As your reunited body and soul swing off from this planet on that last day you will see deep gashes all up and down the hills, deep gashes all through the valleys, and they will be the emptied graves, they will be the abandoned sepulchers, with rough ground tossed on each side of them, and slabs will lie uneven on the rent hillocks, and there will be fallen monuments and cenotaphs, and then for the first time you will appreciate the full exhilaration of the text, "Death is swallowed up in victory."

Hail the Lord of earth and heaven! Praise to thee by both be given. These we greet triumphant now; Hail the resurrection thou!

BOYCE'S CORNERS.

Wirt and Myrtle Boyce were Mason visitors the first of the week.

Harrison Hadley's bees swarmed on the 15th day of March. Foolish things!

Mrs. Alfred Wallace, who has been very ill with pneumonia, is slowly recovering.

Newell Boyce of Toledo has been spending a couple of weeks here with his brothers.

It would seem by looking over the names of the nominees of the two parties in this township that most of them went by the name of George.

The measles have put in an appearance in ten different families in this locality during the last month, attacking thirty people mostly children. All are getting along nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. English of Chelsea have organized the much talked of Grange in this vicinity, holding a meeting in the basement of the church March 21st, and another at George Runciman's March 27th. The membership thus far is about twenty, and the prospects are that it will be double at the next meeting, which will be held at John Clark's April 11th.

Mrs. Dunbar, wife of Rev. M. J. Dunbar, died at her home in Waterloo township on Saturday, March 22, of pneumonia, aged 70 years. The funeral services took place at her late home the following Tuesday, interment at the Mt. Pleasant cemetery. Mrs. Dunbar was a faithful member of the Lyndon Baptist church, and was an earnest and sincere Christian. Her last words were, "I have perfect faith." Mr. Dunbar has the deepest sympathy of the entire community.

The Lyndon township caucuses were held at the town hall Saturday, March 29th, with very little interest taken on either side. The trouble seemed to be to get candidates enough to accept the nominations. The republicans did not place in nomination anyone for supervisor. Their ticket follows:

Clerk—Edward Gorman.
Treasurer—Emory Rowe.
Highway Com.—Griffin Palmer.
Justice—Delaney Cooper.
Board of Review—James Barton.
School Inspector—Samuel Boyce.
Constables—George Gregg, George Dody, George Boyce, George Marshall.
The democratic ticket follows:
Supervisor—George Runciman.
Clerk—John Young.
Treasurer—Charles Haggerty.
Highway Com.—Matthew Hankard.
Justice—A. J. Boyce.
Board of Review—John Howlett.
School Inspector—George Beeman.
Constables—George Klink, George Goodwin, George Otto, George Shanahan.

How To Gain Flesh

Persons have been known to gain a pound a day by taking an ounce of SCOTT'S EMULSION. It is strange, but it often happens.

Somehow the ounce produces the pound; it seems to start the digestive machinery going properly, so that the patient is able to digest and absorb his ordinary food, which he could not do before, and that is the way the gain is made.

A certain amount of flesh is necessary for health; if you have not got it you can get it by taking

Scott's Emulsion

You will find it just as useful in summer as in winter, and if you are thriving upon it don't stop because the weather is warm.

Giving Her Encouragement.

"Do you know," said the gushing maiden, "I should just love to write for the papers, and I believe I could do it, too."

"My dear young woman," replied the sympathetic editor, "there's no reason in the world why you shouldn't."

"Really!" she cried, delightedly.

"None at all," he asserted. "Anyone can write for the papers; it's no trick at all. Why, that waste basket is full of stuff that was written for the papers."—Chicago Post.

Sick Citizens Can Vote.

In Victoria a sick voter can record his vote by post; it has been enacted that he can obtain his ballot paper through the local postmaster from the returning officer, fill it up in the presence of the policeman, who must not look at the name he is writing, and post it.—N. Y. Sun.

Latest Typewriter.

"Pardon me, sir," began the peddler of supplies, "but may I ask what is the style of your typewriter?"

"Right up to date," replied the business man, enthusiastically. "Elbow-sleeves, lace insertion, shirt waist and all that sort of thing."—Catholio Standard and Times.

Soap in Old-Time Wales.

Every farmer's wife in South Wales in the good old days used to make her own soap. During the autumn season after the harvest the men cut fern from the hillsides. This was burned and the ashes mixed with water and rolled into balls. With this crude product the household linen was washed and the pewters and brasses made to shine.—Chicago Chronicle.

Schley's Santiago

BY GEORGE EDWARD GRAHAM.

The Intrepid Associated Press war correspondent, who was aboard the U. S. S. Brooklyn during the entire five months of the campaign. Illustrated with photographs taken by the author during the fight.

The Most Sensational Book of the Day.

The true story of the famous cruise of the Flying Squadron under Commodore Winfield Scott Schley, including the blockade and destruction of the Spanish fleet, TOLD FOR THE FIRST TIME.

Contains an authentic endorsement and personal account of the battle by Rear-Admiral Schley.

"The facts of the story of the movements and operations of the Flying Squadron as the author tells them in this book are correct."

W. S. SCHLEY.

An interesting narrative of facts. Explains the so-called "Retrospective Movement," the "Loop," the "Coaling Problem," and settles conclusively every adverse ruling of the Court of Inquiry.

THE NEW YORK HERALD says:—"Mr. Graham, in the telling of facts, leaves the reader free to make the deduction that several naval officers need a Court of Inquiry to re-establish their reputations, if they can be re-established."

No subject has ever been before the public that has interested everybody as the manner in which Admiral Schley has been treated, and the American people demand the full revelation of the facts of Santiago. This book tells everything that as it occurred and as the eyewitnesses saw it. Book is selling like wildfire. Liberal commissions. Outfit and books now ready. Send seven cents stamps for canvassing outfit. ACT QUICK. Now is the time to MAKE MONEY.

Price $1.50, $1.75, $2.25, $2.75, according to style of binding desired.

G. W. BECKWITH, Clerk.

Stilly Ailly the half-breed, in original matted sorrel, tomorrow night.

Testing a Waiter's Patience.

"Do I have any odd people to wait on?" said the waiter. "Well, rather, and it isn't the cranks and particular sort of people who give the most trouble. They know what they want, and you can find out and give them good service. It's the fresh guys that get us riled. One fellow who comes in here regular and isn't bad on tips, either, gets me crazy. Every night when it's time for his dessert he says: 'Waiter, have you any mince pie?'"

"Yes, sir, I answer."

"Is it good?"

"Excellent, sir."

"Then bring me a portion of Camembert cheese," he says.

"And he does this night after night. Sometimes he takes a table d'hôte dinner, and then when I ask him if he wants roast chicken or stuffed veal he says: 'Yes, please.' He generally gets veal. I thought I had him once, but I didn't. He started his mince pie deal, and I says: 'Yes, sir, the Camembert is good,' and what does he do but say: 'Then I'd like a piece of cantaloupe.'"

"Still, there's always a quarter in it for me," N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

Animals That Cast.

"In India, where I was a cornet of her majesty's hussars, I gave a good deal of attention to elephants," said Murray Garde, a salesman of automobiles, the other night. "What particularly interested me was the bold, original method an elephant has of getting down a hill when the gradient is too steep for walking. He sits calmly down on his hinderlands, you know, pushes off, and—bzz, bzz—he's at the bottom. It hurts, though. The friction, the inequalities of the descent, the tenderness of the hide, don't you know. But I only speak of this because the bears of your country remind me of it. The bears of Utah and Wyoming are the cleverest wild animals I have ever seen. They, too, slide down the precipices and the mountains, but they are more tender of themselves than the elephants. They cut bark from a tree with their teeth and claws in strips big enough to be sat upon comfortably, and on these toboggans they coast down the steep slopes of their wild country without any evil effects. A strange sight it is, I tell you."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Tyranny of the Tip.

It is becoming a common occurrence to hear of railway passengers being charged with assaulting others in the fight for seats. The system is a scandalous one which admits of the inconvenience from which these brawls arise. It regularly happens that the London, Chatham and Dover and Southeastern trains coming into town in the morning have certain compartments labeled: "Reserved for Mr. Various Party." The occupants of these half-filled carriages have secured their unfair advantage by tips to the guards or porters earlier in the journey. The result is that others awaiting the trains nearer town must travel second or third class after paying first-class fare.—London Black and White.

Where Uncle Sam Is Stingy.

France has just bought for $100,000 enough land in Washington for a handsome embassy. All the leading governments are providing homes for their officials—even China—Mr. Wu having recently shown that he is as shrewd in bidding for land as he is in doing business of other kinds. Foreign governments are showing excellent judgment in this matter. Land is appreciating in value all the time at the capital, and building may be cheaper now than in the future. In contrast to this, United States officials are living in foreign lands in rented houses. The salaries of our ambassadors and ministers are much below those paid by the leading nations.—Baltimore American.

Warned in Time.

He was a Loughnan cyclist, who loved to scorch. He put on an extra spurt one day as he was passing through Seven Oaks. One of the peaceful inhabitants chanced to be attempting to cross the street, and was half-way over when the scorcher swooped down upon him like a whirlwind, laying him low.

"Look out!" yelled the wheeler, as he flew over the victim.

"Why?" meekly inquired the vanquished one. "Are you coming back?"—London Answers.

Wireless Telegraphy on Motors.

Mr. Marconi has perfected a wireless telegraphic apparatus inside his motor car by which he can quickly travel to any part of the country and communicate to other cars and stations. The messages are taken successfully with the funnel, which may be raised or lowered. Messages can be transmitted while the motor is travelling. This motor was specially built for military purposes, and will take part in the next maneuvers.—London Sphere.

Might Have Been Worse.

"Poor boy!" exclaimed O'Hara, con-rolling with Cassidy, who had been injured by a blast. "Tis tough luck teh hav yer hand blowed off."

"Och! Faith, it might 'ave bin worse," replied Cassidy. "Suppose O'Hara had me week's wages in it at the toime!"—Philadelphia Press.

Mr. Kruger's Lunch.

Mr. Kruger is very fond of grouse. Two brace are sent to him every day by a London dealer, and a bird, with a bottle of the best champagne that money can procure, forms his daily lunch.—Financial News.

The Open-Air Cure.

Desmond—What do you find to say in favor of Sunday golf?
Gordon—Well, I suppose all of people from reading trashy novels.—Brooklyn Life.

Where Air Is Pure.

During this recent scientific expedition to Spitzbergen under the direction of Prof. Nathorst, the bacteriologist of the expedition made careful examinations of the polar atmosphere to determine the amount of impurities it contained. In more than 90 different places on Bear Island, Spitzbergen and King Charles Land air was filtered and not a single germ was found in it, although over 20,000 liters of air were subjected to the test. Similar investigations were made in regard to the purity of the water, snow and ice. Even salt water from a depth of 5,000 feet was subjected to the bacteriological test. A few bacteria were found, but they were extremely rare. An examination of the intestines of different polar animals proved that the animals are almost free from bacteria. Only the polar gulls made an exception. In the intestines of polar bears and seals some bacteria were discovered, which resembled the bacteria usually found in human intestines.—Chicago Tribune.

He Was Sick.

"That boy of mine has got to turn over a new leaf," declared the well-known citizen, who it is doubtful really knows how much he is worth. "It isn't so much a question of money as it is teaching him its value. He has been away most of the summer, and the letters he has written home have been short but to the point—more money."

"Growing tired at last of his repeated demands upon my purse I ceased replying to them. Inside of two weeks I received three more demands, but ignored them all. Then he wired me, and I made no answer. 'Send money quick. Am sick,' he wired again."

"With what?" I telegraphed back.

"With waiting for cash," he answered, collect.

"He got it. But I am going to have a talk with him when he gets back. It is time that he was doing something else besides spending money."—Detroit Free Press.

The Mushroom Season.

What is commonly known as the mushroom season is at hand, although there is really no special season, for mushrooms may be obtained almost the whole year through. But it is in the early fall that they are most plentiful and at their best. Those who tarry in the country until late in the autumn and rise at dawn, when the dew is heavy, to gather in the delicate pink gilled mushrooms, have the first right to nature's gift. Numerous rules have been given to distinguish the good from the bad fungus, but they are practically useless to the amateur mushroom gatherer. The only rule which can be relied upon is knowledge of the different varieties, gained by study and experience.—Science.

Ought to Be in Practice.

"I've been hearin', John," said the old farmer to the son who had just returned from college, "that ye spent a good deal of yer time in chophouses."

"Well, yes," admitted the boy, "I suppose I did frequent them quite a bit."

"I'm glad to know it, John," asserted the farmer with a sigh of relief. "I was afraid ye might git out of trainin' while ye was away an' fergit how to handle the ax. Our chophouse, John, is in the same old place right back of the kitchen, an' ye can't git to work there too soon to suit me. There's nigh onto six cords o' wood that needs to be cut up right away."

—Chicago Post.

The True Source of Woman's Beauty.

A beautiful skin without any blemishes comes directly from good health, and the first step to health and to a beautiful skin is to get and keep the blood pure. The whole blood system is like a gorgeously colored Venice with red waterways, and little boats hurrying to and fro. The latter carry two kinds of messengers, market boys and scavengers. If these are both trained to accomplish their work every day then health and beauty are assured. If the blood is clear the skin is sure to be clear.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Practical View.

"What is your belief concerning the possibilities in the higher development of the intellectual life?" asked the tall lady with the convex brow.

"I believe in plain loafing and high living," said the gross animal, who had long since lost his waistline and his ideals.—Indianapolis News.

Effective.

"Did your new alarm clock get you out on time in the morning?" asked the salesman.

"It did," answered the nervous man. "I couldn't fail to be awake on time. I got to thinking about the noise it was going to make and I couldn't sleep all night."—Washington Star.

A Fairy Cradle.

In South America the Brazilian peasant women often take their infants down to the water and use the leaves of the Victoria Regina water lily as cradles. The leaves are often a yard in diameter, circular, and with an inch-high border which stands up like the rim of a tea tray.—Detroit Free Press.

Time Brings Change.

First Fisherman—I think we enjoyed fishing more when we were boys.

Second Fisherman—Yes; but in a different way. We didn't get thirsty.—Puck.

What the Fisherman Says.

An Irishman says the apple that caused old Adam's fall must have been a banana peel.—Chicago Daily News.

A Medicine for Old People.

Rev. Geo. Gay, Greenwich, Kas., is past 83 years of age, yet he says: "I am enjoying excellent health for a man of my age, due entirely to the rejuvenating influences of Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep and rest when nothing else will, and gives strength and vitality even to one of my old age."

"I am an old soldier," writes Mr. Geo. Watson, of Newton, Ia., "and I have been a great sufferer from nervousness, vertigo and spinal trouble. Have spent considerable money for medicine and doctors, but with little benefit. I was so bad my mind showed signs of weakness. I began taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I know it saved my life."

Dr. Miles' Nervine

Saved me from the insane asylum," Mrs. A. M. Heimer, of Jerico Springs, Mo., writes. "I was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself, could not sleep nor rest, would even forget the names of my own children at times. I commenced using Dr. Miles' Nervine and it helped me from the first, and now I am perfectly well."

TEST FOR CIGAR SMOKERS.

How an Inevitable Lost a Bet and a Dealer Lost a Customer.

"I have a customer who thinks he smokes twenty-five cigars a day," said a New Orleans dealer. "As a matter of fact he smokes about three-eighths of that number. The other five-eighths represents what he gives away, lays down partly consumed and a generous disregard of 'butts.' However, he is firm in the conviction that he smokes more actual tobacco than any other man in New Orleans, and a boast on the subject in my store yesterday led to a curious bet. He declared, to begin with, that he could smoke three ordinary cigars in half an hour, and a bystander remarked that no man alive could smoke even one cigar continuously, until it was consumed, without taking it from his lips. 'Bosh,' said the 25-a-day gentleman. 'I do that right along and think nothing of it.' 'I'll bet you a box of perfectos you can't do it right now,' said the other, and in half a minute the wager was made. By its terms the cigar was to be consumed in steady, consecutive puffs and not removed from the lips until burned to a mark, 1 1/4 inches from the tip. A clear Havana, Colorado maduro in color, was selected for the test and the smoker took a seat and began. He puffed like an engine for about two minutes and accumulated something under half an inch of ash, and then he began to wobble. He shifted the cigar from side to side, pulled slow and fast, and seemed to have difficulty getting his breath between the draws. At any rate he kept moving his head to avoid the smoke and finally got to coughing. I could see he was in torture, but he stuck to it until he got within half an inch of the mark. Then he jumped up suddenly, threw the cigar away, and walked out of the store. I paid him bet, and charged it to his account; and he told me last night that the very idea of tobacco made him sick. It is not unlikely that the affair may lose me a good customer. I doubt whether it would be possible for anybody to smoke even a moderately strong cigar through in the manner I have described."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NEGLECT MEANS DANGER.

Don't neglect biliousness and constipation. Your health will suffer permanently if you do. DeWitt's Little Early Risers cure such cases. M. B. Smith, Butte, Mich., says "DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the most satisfactory pills I ever took. Never gripe or cause nausea."—Glasier & Stinson.

VERSES GRAVE AND GAY.

The Scarlet Tanager.
Where shines the water-lily, like a star
at eventide,
Upon the slough's dark water, with the lotus at its side—
Where the cypress trees, like Trappists,
stand silently all day,
And the boles of giant oaks uplift in columns of gray—
There often with his flute-song, when the dew is on the leaves,
The tanager, a scarlet flame, his web of beauty weaves.

Oh, the deep woods know his coming; all still, all still to hear,
And the lily and the lotus breathe softly:
"He is near."
As he glows, a splendid flower, on a golden-glazed screen,
With his image in the water, like a ruby set in green,
Ah, then his magic crystal flute is blown among the leaves
Until his heart is captive in the web of song he weaves.
—Ingram Crockett, in Youth's Companion.

The Sermon of Love.
The preacher took the very text—the dear,
devoted brother!
'Twas just that simple one and sweet—
"Love one another!"
He must have known my heart made moan in all this life so dreary;
He seemed to preach at me, and then—he seemed to preach at Mary!

She turned her eyes—blue as God's skies—
when that dear text came ringing;
And, to my grieving soul's surprise, she joined not in the singing.
I thought I heard her lips repeat the text
of that dear brother,
And that her heart was saying, sweet:
"Love-love-love one another!"

A blessed sermon 'twas to me; the benediction over,
I walked with her in ecstasy, across the fields of clover;
And then I told her all the love my true
heart could not smother,
And now, through life, forevermore, we're loving one another!

—F. L. Stanton, in Atlanta Constitution.

Rainy Day Song.
What is the rain that beats
In the face of the sad, gray world,
But the breath of fair green streams that once
Among their rushes curled?
Sweet mist that quivered once
In waxen lily throats,
Or over the rose sunset sky
Drifted in amethyst boats.

What will it one day be
But the green of the growing grass,
Or the spring that bursts from the friendly hill
To fill the traveler's glass.
The pansy's purple hood,
The heads of anemones,
The violet shine of the muscadine,
Its lavish tangle of leaf and vine—
But first of all the rain.
—Ola Moore, in Youth's Companion.

Have Only Left the Earth!
Ah, woe is life, an endless weeping!
And dark is death, a boundless tomb!
For death is always busy weeping.
And there is naught but graves and gloom.
This is, indeed, the dismal seeming
To those who see but dust and earth;
But others see another meaning—
That moans of death are groans of birth.

Since life and death are made harmonic,
The earth is Nature's fruitful womb;
And mortal life is embryonic,
And death is birth beyond the tomb.
The soul's departure is not dying,
But only man's completed birth.
Oh, then, ye mortals, cease your crying—
Your dead have only left the earth.
—J. M. P. Otto, in N. Y. Observer.

The Kiss of Children.
No thought or sense unsatisfied
The kiss of children brings,
No after-taste of bitter things,
No tearful prayer for peace denied,
No shadow of remorse's wings,
No sense of fallen worth or pride,
No feverish search of Lethe's tide—
But from their lips contentment springs.

The kiss of little children wakes
The hope of endless better things.
It stirs our hearts, till memory sings
Of our lost innocence and takes Us by the hand—that childlike clings
To her—along her path, and makes Us nobler for the truth, that breaks
The dream the kiss of children brings.
—N. E. Magazine.

Dawn.
O glorious Dawn when Day awakes
And Night goes crouching from the scene—
When, from his bed of crimson-green,
The Sun lifts up his head and takes
His first peep at the Lord's domain—
Looks at the peaks that rise in air,
Then at the dewy plains between,
And greets the yawning flowers there,
How wonderful! How favored he
That gazes on the reddening East
With wondering eyes beholdeth the Lead Day up from her cell released!
They say that this secure, at least—
I don't get up in time to see.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

Along Earth's Roughest Ways.
Some people sneer at what is here
As if, sometime, somewhere
They'd lived upon some other sphere
More excellent and fair—
As if, through false pretenses, you
Or I had basely led them to Desert contentment there.

Why stay to hear or heed the cries
Of bitterness they raise?
There's little even in the skies
That might evoke their praise!
For him who seeks with heart aglow
Fair flowers in abundance grow
Along earth's roughest ways.
—S. E. Kiser, in Chicago Times-Herald.

A New Creature.
The child is happy with its toys,
They make his Heaven; but by and by
The last is gone, without a sigh.
What does a man with children's joys?
So doth the new replace the old.
Nor leave the life a moment bare:
The tree is but more tall and fair
For turning last year's green to mold.

And may Heaven grant me, from its store,
Thus to grow old, and thus to die;
Losing the earth to find the sky,
Outgrowing myself for evermore.
—Bradford Torrey, in Congregationalist.

Two Little Girls.
I'm twins, I guess, 'cause my Ma say
I'm two little girls. An' one of 'em
Is Good little girl; an' the other 'er
Is Bad little girl; an' she can be
An' Ma say so, 'most every day.
An' she's the funniest M! 'Cause when My Doll won't mind, an' I let cry,
W'y, nen my Ma she sob an' sigh,
An' say: "Dear Good little girl, good-by!
Bad little girl's comed here again!"

Last time 'at Ma act' that a-way,
I cried all to myse' awhile
Out on the steps, an' nen I smile,
An' git my Doll all fix' in style,
An' go in where Ma's at, and say:
"Morning to you, Mommy, dear!
Where's that Bad little girl was here?
Bad little girl's gonad clean away,
An' Good little girl's comed back to stay."
—James Whitcomb Riley, in Century.

Not Anxious to See a Spook.

Harry Carpenter, of Yuma, took out his watch in Washington street one day lately and set it by the courthouse clock. In order to move the hands of the watch he had to unscrew the case.
During this process a friend said:
"Harry, why don't you carry a decent watch?"

"Well, I guess if you got this watch the way I did you'd carry it."
"How did you get it?"
"Man walks into my office one day in Yuma, pulls out this watch, puts it into my hand and says: 'Keep this for me until I come back.'"

"He was a stranger to me, and I said:
'How long do you want me to keep it?'

"Where are you going?"

"That's all right," he said. "You keep this watch until I ask for it."

"I took the watch and put it into my pocket. The man went down to the Southern Pacific railroad bridge, walked out to the middle and jumped into the Colorado river. He has never asked me for the watch, and that's the reason I carry it."—Arizona Graphic.

Whisky in the Highlands.

"Whisky is almost as good for sore heels as it is for bagpipes when the leather gets too hard," says an English sportsman, writing of the Scottish highlands. "The highlander who drank the whisky supplied to soften the leather, and explained that 'she likes it blawed in,' understood no better than the average gillie that internal application was a salve for outward wounds. Whisky is the medicine of the country, as well as the luxury, but it is rather a surprise to an Englishman going north for the first time to see how they take it. No highlander ever thinks of mixing water with his favorite drink, at least not until after he has drunk the whisky. When this has been done he will walk over to a spring, if there is one, as there always should be at a well-selected lunch place, and lie down and have a good pull at the water, if the day is a hot one, but never first."—Chicago Daily News.

Beans and Fishballs in Boston.

Beans were baked in a brick oven over night, with corn-fed pork, and served hot. Now they are baked with any kind of pork in a stove, and served in that neither-hot-nor-cold condition so common to modern cookery. Fishballs were made of codfish and cold boiled potatoes; both were chopped comparatively coarse and fried in almost boiling fat to a beautiful brown, the fine fibers of the fish sticking out "like quills upon the fretful porcupine." Now the fish is chopped very fine, the potatoes mashed, and the mixture fried in fat always too cool; or, if the fat is hot at first, it is chilled by the dumping of too many cold balls at one time.
—Boston Transcript.

The Solution.

Here's a state of things! Mrs. Greene calls upon Mrs. Gray, and before they have a chance to say anything, in comes Mrs. Brown. The problem is as to the separation of the ladies. If Mrs.
Greene goes, she will leave Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Gray together to talk about her. If Mrs. Brown goes, she will be the subject of Mrs. Gray's and Mrs.
Greene's conversation. If her two visitors go away together, then Mrs.
Gray will be the subject of conversation between those ladies. There is only one solution: Mrs. Gray puts on her things and goes out with her visitors, just for a walk.—Boston Transcript.

Flower Farming for Perfumes.

The department of agriculture is anxious to encourage the growing of flowers for perfume-making in this country, and attention is called to the fact that conditions in the southern states, and particularly in southern California, are exceptionally favorable for industries of this kind. It is believed that in California the essential oil, or attar, of roses might be produced on an extensive scale to great advantage. An acre of land will give 1,500 pounds of rose-petals, from which five ounces of the attar
may be distilled, and this quantity has a market value of from $45 to $85. The rosewater, a by-product, amounts to 300 gallons the acre, worth from 75 cents to one dollar a gallon.

Lavender gives a net profit of $100 an acre. Pure lavender saturated with the scent of flowers (pomade) is worth from six dollars to $7.50 a pound. Cologne of the finest quality (obtained by soaking the saturated lard in alcohol) brings as much as $17 a pint.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

A Bulky Bible.

Count Otani's representative, who visited China during the campaign, received the Lima scripture, preserved in the Yong-ho-kung at Peking. "Received" is a euphemistic way of stating the fact. It is the expression used by Japanese papers in describing the manner of the scripture's transfer. But the accounts originally transmitted were not of a character to suggest ordinary giving and taking. They spoke of the Japanese Buddhists as very anxious to remove this celebrated scripture, and Gen.
Yamaguchi as refusing to sanction
the operation. Rumor then represented the volumes as sufficiently numerous and bulky to load 20 pack horses; so, by whatever process the scripture was secured, its transmission to Japan was no small undertaking.—Japan Daily Mail.

Queer Russian Enterprise.

A regular system of incapacitating men from serving in the Russian army, by causing them to go temporarily deaf, has been discovered at Odessa. The proprietors, Messrs.
Schapiro & Essigmann, who did a great trade, have been arrested.—N.
Y. Sun.

The Future of War.

The first and most important lesson which will be learned from the next great naval battle, will be that armored protection will not protect, and that the fight will be a duel between battleships at long range, aided by various forms of torpedo boats and light unarmored cruisers, throwing high explosives; and these latter will be the factors which will determine the fight. The heavy armor-clad will be a wild scramble by the nations in the endeavor to make up for the lost time wasted on its construction, and light and very swift unprotected war vessels will be constructed, depending for their safety upon their speed and upon their own ability to strike death-dealing blows.
These are the true principles which must sooner or later be recognized.

The British government now proposes building still larger and heavier battleships, and, of course, enormously more expensive. Within the next decade, and sooner, in the event of a great war, this will be learned by the British war office to be a great mistake.—Hudson Maxim, in Popular Science Monthly.

How Chinese Became Laundermen.

Chow Tzechi, the Chinese consul of this city, is anxious to raise the social condition of his compatriots. He believes they could fill clerical positions advantageously to business men as well as to themselves, and obtain a better standing in the country than they now possess. He has given much thought to the subject of why they have made laundry work a specialty here, and believes he has found the reason. "When my countrymen first began to come to this country," he said,
"in any numbers, mining was the great industry of California, and they drifted to the mining towns. There,
I suppose, they were obliged to do their own washing, and not being strong enough for the heavy work of mining, they gradually undertook to do the washing for the miners, became expert at it, and gradually adopted it as a profession. Work of this kind is never done by men in China."

Weak on Its Feet.

Jimson in a rash moment undertook to plant a new clothes post in the garden, and after much labor he delved out a hole into which he managed at length to coax the post to a perpendicular position, and he went indoors
a proud and happy man.

Ten minutes afterward, however, he went out to feast his eyes again upon the spectacle of the family clothes post pointing skyward like a miniature telegraph pole, when to his consternation he found the late erection lying prone across the onion bed.
"You pushed it down, did you?" said Jimson, wrathfully seizing his youthful son and heir, who was playing about near.

"That I never, dad," replied the boy, earnestly; "a sparrow perched on the top an' overbalanced it. I seed him do it."—Spare Moments.

Posing Her Mother.

In an apartment house in this city lives a little girl called Hildegarde.
She is very pretty, with yellow hair and blue eyes. To induce Hildegarde to eat bread her mother has often said to her: "Dearest, if you eat lots of crusts your hair will curl beautifully."
The other evening Hildegarde sat in a corner, gravely regarding her mother at her toilet. Finally she said: "Mother, when you were a little girl did you eat lots of bread crusts?"

"Indeed I did," the mother replied.
"Then why is it," said the inductive Hilda, who is only three years old—
"why is it that now you have to use a curling iron?"—Philadelphia Record.

Its Use.

While a certain infantry regiment was stationed at Aldershot, it had among the recruits a country yokel who was such a great duffer that the drill sergeant could not beat anything into him.

One day, while the recruits were being inspected by the officers, the countryman seemed more awkward than ever. At last the angry drill sergeant shouted to him:

"Man, what is your head on for?"
"Why, to keep my collar from slipping off," was the ready retort.—Boston Globe.

A New Product.

Vegetaline is a new product prepared from the cocoanut, that is being manufactured by a Marseilles firm. It is a kind of butter, which, it is stated, is especially adapted to the uses of bakers and confectioners. The article is harder and whiter than butter, which it only resembles in its fatty nature.
It is obtained by refining the oil extract of the dried cocoanut.

Didn't Get Her Money's Worth.

Lady Artist—Since we have been married, I have been trying to cultivate my husband's taste to love the beautiful and ignore the unattractive.

you're wise?—London Sketch.

A man went into a clothing store in another town a few days ago and said he wanted to have his son try on an overcoat. He found one that fitted and inquired of the size. He also learned that the coat which he paid $7.45 for in Chicago could have been purchased at home for $4.50.—North Adams Advocate.

The Trust Now After the Michigan Sugar Factories.

McGARRY'S STRUGGLE USELESS

The Condition of the Bank R. C. Andrews Wrecked—Fisherman Drowned—Taylor Let Off With a $2,000 Fine—Valuable Horses Cremated—Various Matters.

After the Beet Sugar Factories.

It is understood that the sugar refining trust, or parties closely allied thereto, have made overtures to the six Kilby sugar beet plants in the Saginaw Valley, the proposition being to take over 51 per cent. of the stock, the remainder to be held by the local people. President Benoyar, of the Saginaw Sugar Co., in a general conversation, said that "something is going on but I am not at liberty just now to give any information." The Church-hill factory in Bay City is included in the list, as is the Alma factory. W. L. Bert, a large stockholder in the Alma factory, says that there has been talk of this kind but he is not aware that it has yet reached the point of consummation. Much apprehension is felt here that the passing of the local factories into the hands of the trust means the destruction of the industry, but Mr. Penoyar and other local stockholders in sugar companies laugh at the proposition. They say that it will be to the advantage of the owners of the factories to operate them, since they will be as profitable as any other form of business in the country and there will be no incentive for the trust to shut them down. Besides new ones could be built. It is to the greater advantage of the trust to control the output than to attempt its destruction.

May Get 50 Per Cent.

The report of the appraisers of the assets and liabilities of the Detroit City Savings bank indicates that the depositors of the wrecked bank will receive at least 50 per cent. and if the $602,000 of Frank C. Andrews' certified checks held by various Detroit banks are decided not to be good claims, the dividends will probably amount to more than 60 per cent. The receiver asks for the privilege of proceeding against the stockholders of the bank to collect the amounts for which they are liable under the banking law. The report of the appraisers shows that the liabilities of the bank amount to $3,274,523.31, and the value of the assets of the bank as appraised thus far is $1,974,427.

Short $5,700.

The expert who examined the books of Martin Kallander, deceased, treasurer of Gogebic county, reports a shortage of $5,700 in his accounts. He had been using the county's funds in his own private business, no doubt with the intention of making the shortage good before the expiration of his term of office, next January. When his books were examined by the county auditors last October they found no shortage, because Kallander had deposited enough money to square himself, but immediately after the examination the money was withdrawn, having probably been borrowed for that purpose.

Taylor's Fine.

Henry A. Taylor, the young eastern millionaire who was found guilty of complicity in the Grand Rapids water deal, appeared before Judge Newnam in the Superior Court Friday afternoon, and submitting to the sentence of the court, paid a fine of $2,000 and was released from custody. Taylor is the Connecticut man who sent $100,000 to Grand Rapids to be used in securing a water contract with the city, and although he claimed that all but $7,500 was afterwards returned to him it is believed that he received but a small portion of it back, if any.

Easter Bonnets Spoiled.

T. C. Tucker, an Albion dry goods man, had occasion to stop in at his store Thursday night to get an umbrella, as it was raining. When he stepped inside he found that it was more than raining there. A family pipe over head had sprung a leak, and was drenching everything in sight. He summoned help and they worked until 1 o'clock in the morning removing coals to places of safety. All his fine Easter stock was ruined and the loss will reach several thousand dollars.

Fire in Durand.

Durand people turned out at 5 o'clock Thursday morning to see a large frame house burn down. It was located just out of the corporation limits, and occupied by Nellie Hamilton and two other females. The house was well furnished, and the furniture dealers lose. An Owsoso music house lost a piano. The females escaped without enough clothes to appear on the streets with. Miss Hamilton claims the house was set on fire. Others bear her out in this statement.

Lots of Smallpox Still.

Reports to the state board of health from representative physicians in active practice in various parts of the state indicate that rheumatism, bronchitis, influenza, neuralgia, and tonsillitis, in the order named, caused most sickness in Michigan during the past week. Meningitis was reported at five places, whooping cough at 18, diphtheria at 25, typhoid fever at 46, measles at 76, scarlet fever at 102, smallpox at 158 and consumption at 211.

The fish boat of John Lundgren was swamped in Lake Michigan while trying to make Saugatuck harbor Saturday morning, and John Lundgren, Jr., aged 23, drowned. His brother reached shore exhausted. It is estimated that 100,000,000 logs will come down the Menominee river this season.

Grand Rapids Crimes.

From one to seven homes have been robbed in Grand Rapids every night for the past two weeks, but hitherto the burglars have taken nothing but money. The police are making strenuous efforts to catch the robbers, but as yet there seems to be no clue to their identity. In nearly every instance the burglaries have been committed when the families were absent.

The body of an eight or nine months' old baby was found in a basket in the river at Grand Rapids by Claude Brown, a fisherman, Thursday afternoon, and turned over to Coroner Wright. The baby was covered by a coffee sack and the basket weighted down with stones. The basket was found in shallow water, and it is believed was placed in the river farther up stream than where it was found.

Fire at Highland Park.

How the Highland Park training stables, just outside Detroit, which were destroyed by fire early Saturday morning, came to be burned is still a mystery. The entire loss will reach $25,000. Mr. Colby lost two colts, and a number of vehicles and considerable harness. Their value he places at $1,500. Among the horses burned were: Red Royal, 224 1-2, owned by W. W. Collier and valued at $5,000; The Klutz, 226 1-2, a trotter valued at $2,000; Harry P., 223 1-4, value $2,500; Maiden Queen, pacer, 213 1-4, valued at $2,000; Money, trotter, 232 1-3, valued at $5,000; Marie, trotter, valued at $1,500, beside eleven colts. These were owned by different horsemen in and out of Detroit who had left them at the stables for training or for safe keeping.

Andrews' Financiering.

Sensational disclosures of enormous deals in Amalgamated Copper stocks carried on by Frank C. Andrews, during the months of September, October, November, December, January and February were made by the firm of P. P. & J. T. McLaughlin, before Circuit Court Commissioner May, of Detroit, Tuesday afternoon. His operations extended to within a few days of his failure, and mounting in the aggregate to the almost fabulous sum of nearly $8,000,000, exceeded greatly the largest figure that had previously been mentioned. This broke the Detroit City Savings Bank, of which he was vice-president.

McGarry's Bad Fix.

Thomas F. McGarry, whose trial under indictment for conspiracy in the Grand Rapids water boodle scheme, has exhausted every means to escape trial before Judge Newnam. At a conference of attorneys and Judge Newnam it is reported that McGarry made a proposition to take no action for venue if the judge would promise to let him off with a fine without a jail sentence, as in the case of Taylor, if convicted. It is said Judge Newnam would make no promises.

Censured the Senators.

The executive committee of the state grange has adopted resolutions censuring the Michigan senators for their vote on the ship subsidy bill; also urging the adoption of the bill calling for the election of senators by direct vote of the people, and urging the Michigan senators to support the amendment.

CREAT DAMAGE BY STORMS.

Tennessee Loses Millions by Great Floods.

DEATH BY FLOOD AND STORMS.

How the Raging Rains Swept Through Tennessee Carrying Destruction of Life and Property—A Pennsylvania Church Unroofed and Many Injured.

Disaster in Pennsylvania.

One of the fiercest wind storms ever known in the section struck Pittsburgh Sunday just before noon and did—almost incalculable damage to property and injured many people, some of whom may die from the effects of their wounds. Scores of houses were unroofed, many trees were blown down, mill stacks toppled over and telegraph and telephone wires generally disabled. The most serious accident reported was the unroofing of the Knoxville Presbyterian church, in Knoxville. The church at the time was filled with an Easter congregation numbering about 600 persons. While the minister was in the midst of his sermon, a particularly strong gust of wind blew over the large chimney and lifted a portion of the roof off the building. The bricks from the chimney crashed through the roof and carried a huge piece of the hardwood ceiling, measuring about 40x20 feet, down upon the worshippers in the pews. An indescribable panic ensued, and a frantic rush was made for the doors and windows. The excitement was soon quieted, and the work of rescue begun. At least forty persons were caught by the wreckage and more or less hurt. Of this number five may not recover.

The Tennessee Floods.

Reports from the flooded districts of Tennessee emphasize the gravity of the situation. The damage resulting, it is believed, will reach $4,000,000, while twenty-two lives are known to have been lost. Several counties, certain to have suffered heavily, are still cut off from communication, and the loss in property and life may go higher than these figures. The section visited by the flood embraces one of the richest portions of the state, and the damage to farm lands is a serious item. It includes counties lying between the mountains on the east and the Tennessee river on the west, and between the Cumberland river and the Alabama line. Stone fences that have stood the storms of forty years were washed away in many of the well-known riverside farms of Lincoln county, and crops have been destroyed.

Guthrie's Heavy Loss.

Guthrie, Ok., was visited Sunday by a $350,000 fire and as a result the State Capital printing plant, the Hotel Capitol, the St. James hotel, the Cammack livery barn and the Richey general merchandise store are in ruins. Everything in the Capital plant was destroyed, including two presses, machines of every kind, heating systems, electric and steam heating systems, libraries and a large stock of supplies. Frank H. Greer, the owner, states that the total loss is $250,000. Not a thing but mailing lists of the paper was saved. The loss in the other building will make the entire loss to the town fully $350,000.

A Bloody Battle.

Sensational reports were received in Williamson, W. Va., Saturday about another fight with the Hatfields, in which four were killed, among them being Harry Watts, proprietor of the Palace hotel. John Rutherford, a detective, had a warrant for the arrest of Ephraim Hatfield, who is wanted in South Carolina. He finally located Hatfield in Pike county, Ky. Watts went with Rutherford, and they found Ephraim at the home of his father, Thompson Hatfield, on Blackberry creek. Rutherford and Watts broke in the door and secured Ephraim. The father opened fire on them. Both Hatfields and both officers were killed in the melee. The wife and little children of Ephraim witnessed the tragedy.

Cecil Rhodes Dead.

Cecil J. Rhodes, the great promoter of South African enterprises, died of heart disease at Cape Town. Rhodes had been a victim of enlargement of the heart for many months. Some weeks ago the disease began to make rapid strides. About three weeks ago he was compelled to take to his bed. Severe and frequent attacks gradually weakened his robust constitution, and it became apparent a few days ago that recovery was impossible despite repeated rallies and the most skillful medical treatment. Dropsy complicated the case during the last few days, and the great statesman presented a pitiable spectacle, becoming very nervous, irritable and restless.

Noriel Caught.

Noriel, the only insurgent general with the exception of Malvar still in the Philippines, has been captured by Lieut. Frank E. Bamford, of the 20th Infantry. A major, a captain, a lieutenant and five men who were acting as a bodyguard to Noriel were captured with him. They have all been held as prisoners of war. There is some reason to believe that one member of this bodyguard is Gen. Malvar in disguise. Lieut. Bamford is certain that if this general is not one of the captured party he is in the immediate neighborhood of the scene of Noriel's capture.

The revolver from which was fired the bullet that killed President McKinley, the handkerchief with which the assassin covered the band which held the revolver as he thrust it toward the president, and the cartridges in the revolver have all been turned over to the Buffalo Historical Society and will be placed in the museum of the society.

The council of Caro will give the Lacy Shoe Co. of Middleport, O., a bonus of $4,000 for the erection of a factory there to employ 100 hands 10 months in the year. It is expected the factory will be ready for operation by June 15th.

Christmas Story Fishy.

Carl Fischer-Hansen, of New York, who was attorney for Walter Christman, the representative of the Danish government in the overtures for the purchase of the Danish West Indian islands in 1900, was indignant at the conduct of his client, shown in his secret report to the Danish ministry lately published.

"Ordinarily, legal etiquette," said he, "would prevent my speaking. But this report is so defamatory and outrageous that I feel justified in washing my hands of the whole affair."

Christmas undertook, according to Fischer-Hansen, to start the sale of the islands for the Herring ministry. As far back as 1880 the sale had been almost consummated, but at the last moment this government had drawn back. Thus Denmark could not make overtures or do more than suggest that overtures would be acceptable. This Christmas did. He conducted Secretary White, of the American embassy to London, to Copenhagen.

"At that point," said Fischer-Hansen, "his services ended. The negotiations from there were carried forward by the American minister in Denmark and the Danish minister at Washington."

Hanged to a Telegraph Pole.

Mrs. Henrietta H. Miller, a gray-haired woman, aged 67, going from Los Angeles, Cal., to Denver, to visit relatives, was brutally assaulted in the Santa Fe railroad yards by a negro porter on a Pullman car, running between Denver and La Junta. She was knocked down by a blow on the head and after a struggle with her assailant was choked into insensibility. Washington H. Wallace, a Pullman car porter, was arrested in the car of which he had charge. He was identified by Mrs. Miller and locked up in jail. With a telegraph pole for a battering ram, the crowd broke in the doors and Wallace was taken out. The crowd moved down the street dragging the negro by a rope. A boy was sent up a telegraph pole with a rope. It was thrown over the cross bar and then dropped into the crowd. A hundred hands grasped it, and in an instant the negro was in the air. Hardly had the boy climbed out of danger when hundreds of pistols were drawn and before the negro's body reached the top of the pole it was riddled with bullets.

Cuba's Own Government.

Secretary Root has made public his order to Gen. Wood directing him to turn over the control and government of Cuba to its people on May 20 next. The order requires the Cuban government to assume all treaty obligations and directs Gen. Wood to continue a small artillery force to avoid leaving the island entirely defenseless until the Cuban government shall have opportunity to organize its own force. Gen. Wood is also directed to convene the Cuban congress before May 20. He also is directed to consult with President-elect Palma and substitute such persons as he shall desire for those now holding official positions in Cuba. On May 20, 1902, Cuba will formally acquire absolute independence and install her first president.

A Chicago Church Uproar.

Five men and three women entered the Seventh Day Adventist church, Chicago, where an interstate adventist conference was in session, shortly after noon Saturday and created such a disturbance that they were finally beaten and rushed from the church by almost 150 worshippers.

The eight alleged disturbers were arrested and taken to the police station. All these persons are members of this same religion, but of another church. The trouble began when one of the party denied a statement being made by Mrs. Anna White, a "prophet" from Battle Creek, Mich. When this man was ordered out, it is said, his seven companions spoke up and in a moment the church was in an uproar.

Great Strike Coming.

The United Mine Workers of America, whose national offices are in Indianapolis, have for some time been making preparations for trouble in both the Pennsylvania anthracite region and the bituminous fields of West Virginia and Virginia, and it is said that the organization is in better position than ever before to make a fight for recognition. If there is a strike in the anthracite region all the members of the organization, which covers twenty-four states, may be called out, as the January convention in Indianapolis empowered the national officers to go to that extreme if necessary to bring about a settlement.

Six Men Smothered.

As the result of a cave-in of a huge bank of earth at the Main street plant of the Cleveland Gaslight & Coke Co. six men are dead.

The men were working close to a bank of clay, when it suddenly gave way without the slightest warning, burying them beneath the mass of earth. Fellow workmen immediately began the work of rescue, and in a very short time six of the men had been taken out. Some of them were alive, others were already dead, their lives having been smothered out. The living were started to the several nearby hospitals, but died en route, and their bodies were then taken to undertaking establishments.

THE LIGHT OF LOVE

By T. Y. McFarland

(Copyright, 1920, by Daily Story Publishing Co.)

The county courtroom of St. Anne's was crowded to the door. It was an extraordinary scene, a trial for murder in a country where a trial for murder is an extraordinary event. The courtroom was filled with people, and the atmosphere was one of intense interest.

Never before within the memory of those present had a white woman been sentenced to the gallows. The case was a sensational one, and the trial had attracted a large crowd of people.

The crime itself was as old as history. The tragedy familiar to every generation was the wayward wife—her husband Jim was the victim; and the crime was a common one, a crime of passion.

There had been no doubt as to the guilt of the murderer. The circumstantial evidence was crushing, and in addition, the widow herself had confessed the crime.

The crowd was fairly stunned by this unexpected declaration. That anything less than an incriminating disclosure was to follow had been undreamed of. All eyes instinctively sought the state's attorney.

This had been three months before, and the excitement had begun to subside when a new sensation was created by the arrest of Haskell's relict as an accessory to the murder.

It was the third day of the Haskell trial, and the interest was intense. A definite rumor was abroad that the state's attorney had a trump card to play, and a thrill of excitement swept through the crowd as he arose to address the court.

He proposed, he declared, to produce a witness who would testify to the unquestioned guilt of the prisoner—to her identification with "the foulest deed recorded in the criminal annals of St. Anne's."

In the intense stillness every sound without was audible—the rumbling of the train; the stoppage at the station; and the ring of footsteps on the flags that led from the road to the courtroom.

An instant later there was an agitation about the entrance and Thome, the convicted murderer, guarded by the officials of the city jail, crossed the threshold. The woman uttered a half-suppressed shriek, and the state's attorney smiled blandly.

And two weeks later the county seat again became a Mecca. It was the day set for expiation, and the natives had begun to jog into town hours before sunrise. There was something more than merely morbid curiosity in the throng that clustered about the little jail yard, and swarmed over the hillside at its rear, and the belief that Thome in this last scene would prove worthy of the prestige he had earned was fully realized.

sentenced. It's laid heavy on my mind, and when I found it could be fixed up so I could come and tell, I was glad. There was one reason in particular why I was so glad. His eyes rested upon the prisoner as instant as he spoke. His look was steady, and his voice, while low, was perfectly distinct.

"And I'm going to tell all I know," went on Thome, "and it's this." He paused an instant, and there was a slight smile upon his face as he met the gaze of the prosecutor. "Nobody

"A man's got a duty even if he stands within the shadow of the gallows," he said.

guilty for the murder of Jim Haskell but me, and she—she's as innocent—as Mr. Howard himself."

The crowd was fairly stunned by this unexpected declaration. That anything less than an incriminating disclosure was to follow had been undreamed of.

"Do you mean to say," he had furiously begun, when his words were lost as the voice of Thome rang through the hall like a trumpet.

"It isn't what you expected, is it Mr. Lawyer Howard? You thought because she told the truth about me you'd get me here to maybe swear her life away. And you thought your bribes would make me do it. Why, Judge, this man offered me my life to go back on her. He told me he could handle the governor like a child and that he'd make him sign a pardon if I'd say she put me up to it. As if twenty lives and pardons could ever make me do that."

The assemblage was quiet for a moment, and then someone with a finer appreciation of dramatic effect than decorum proposed three cheers and the hall rang with instant clamor. It was an uproar too vast for the efforts of the court officials to suppress. It was the glorification of what was regarded as undoubted perjury and of a convicted murderer—but of one who had become a hero because, despite all bribes, he had shielded and screened the woman who had betrayed him.

She did not even give him a glance as he was led out. Her whole soul was concentrated in the expression of smiling insolence with which she favored the outraged prosecutor. It was a smile that later became a badge of triumph as the twelve good men and true delivered the verdict of acquittal that enabled her to leave the courtroom—an innocent proclaimed.

It should be added, however, that there was a disposition to enlarge upon the theme of ingratitude among the groups that delayed to gossip in the courthouse yard, and that in the evening the gentlemen of the jury called upon the vindicated widow and suggested the advisability of her prompt departure from St. Anne's.

And two weeks later the county seat again became a Mecca. It was the day set for expiation, and the natives had begun to jog into town hours before sunrise. There was something more than merely morbid curiosity in the throng that clustered about the little jail yard, and swarmed over the hillside at its rear, and the belief that Thome in this last scene would prove worthy of the prestige he had earned was fully realized.

DANISH INQUIRY IS TO BE PUBLIC

Committee Decides to Hold Open Sessions in West Indies Affair.

SUGAR BEET WAR NEARING END

Mr. Babcock's Decision to Stand by His Party Places the Measure in Shape to Be Reported to the House, When It Will Be Taken Up at Once.

Washington, March 31.—The special committee appointed by Speaker Henderson to investigate allegations in connection with the Danish West Indies purchase held an executive meeting and determined to begin the investigation to-morrow in the foreign affairs committee room. The hearings will be open to the public.

In an interview at Copenhagen on the subject of Congressman Richardson's resolution for the appointment of a committee to investigate charges made by Captain Christmas in connection with the negotiations for the sale of the Danish West Indies, a high official said:

"Neither Christmas nor Gron was ever given credentials as agent for the sale of the Danish West Indies. They never negotiated from Washington, and have in no way influenced the negotiation."

"Before the commencement of the negotiations Christmas and Gron actually tried to become connected with the matter as agents. The then premier, Dr. Hoerring, gave them some encouragement, and private parties favoring the sale furnished small amounts for their traveling expenses."

"Dr. Hoerring was indiscreet. He discussed a commission, but bribery was not suggested. He and the other parties speedily discovered that they had been imposed upon and broke off their connection with Christmas and Gron, considering them to be without influence. Christmas has now been forced to declare that his report of bribery was false."

Washington, March 31.—The best sugar war is virtually at an end. Representative Babcock will vote for the bill. Mr. Babcock announced his position as follows:

"I shall vote in committee in accordance with the instructions given to the committee at the last conference of Republicans of the house by a large majority of my party colleagues. It is well known that I was opposed to the measure which was finally adopted in the conference. But I return to the house after an illness of six weeks' duration and find that as a result of five conferences of my Republican colleagues the administration's bill has been indorsed."

"Regardless of my own views, I am too good a Republican to revolutionarily oppose a measure promulgated by the administration and indorsed by more than a majority of the Republicans of the house. Such a bill becomes a party measure, and I would vote for it even if I were opposed to its provisions than I am to the bill in question."

Explanation by Evans.

Washington, March 31.—Pension Commissioner Evans said in regard to his resignation: "I seem to me that not much remains to be said. I had this resignation in mind months ago. I have served in this office now for five years—four years more than I served in the war of the rebellion—and I have found it to be five years of harder fighting than the war of the rebellion. With the help of an exceptionally capable office force I have tried to administer the law generously."

"No one, it seems to me, could have been any more liberal and could have enforced the law. Yet my incumbency has begun to embarrass public officials and statesmen. More than one member of the house—not long ago it was a prominent Republican—has risen to say to the house of representatives that I was opposed to the granting of pensions on any grounds or under any circumstances."

"Of course, that is not true. As I have said, I have been as generous as I possibly could be. But that has not sufficed. I am glad now to be ending the whole controversy."

Week's Program in Congress.

Washington, March 31.—The friends of the oleomargarine bill hope to secure a vote upon that measure in the senate on Tuesday, and as soon as it shall be disposed of the Chinese exclusion bill will be called up. According to the present understanding Senator Mitchell of Oregon, who was largely instrumental in framing the exclusion bill, will make the first presentation of its merits to the senate.

Senator Penrose, who has charge of the measure, hopes that the senate will be able to conclude its consideration within ten days after it is taken up. It is expected that the Indian appropriation and the rivers and harbors bills will be reported during the week. Both are subject to immediate consideration even to the extent of displacing other bills, but it is not believed that either will be used to deprive the Chinese bill of its chance for consideration. The Philippine government bill will also be reported, probably to-day, but its consideration will be postponed for some weeks.

The house will be largely occupied by the sundry civil appropriation bill. Such time as remains will be devoted to consideration of the senate bill to promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service and the Chinese exclusion bill, both of which, on special orders, but they do not interfere with revenue or appropriation bills.

Cuban Postal Chief Named.

Washington, March 31.—Action looking to the relinquishment of the United States postal regime over the Island of Cuba was taken when appointments were made to fill the two most important posts in the Cuban postal service. Charles Hernandez was appointed assistant director general of posts of Cuba, and on the withdrawal of the United States from that island will assume full charge of the Cuban postal service. At the same time Jose Alvarez was appointed postmaster of Havana. The changes become effective April 1.

Discuss Irrigation Bill.

Washington, March 31.—President Roosevelt, in a conference with a number of western congressmen, plainly stated his opposition to some of the provisions of the irrigation bill, now pending in the house. He is especially opposed to the section providing for state control of the appropriation, distribution and use of the water from the irrigation canals. The president believes federal supervision is essential, not only to success, but to fair and impartial distribution altogether removed from political or other considerations.

Predicts Early Adjournment.

Washington, March 31.—"In my judgment congress will adjourn not later than June 15," said Senator Elkins of West Virginia, "and I would not be surprised if we finished our work by June 1. If we should adjourn at the earlier day we would have at least fifty working days in which to transact the business which will be brought before us. I believe that will be efficient time, as when congress buckles down to work in earnest it can dispose of its business with great rapidity."

Pension for Mrs. McKinley.

Washington, March 31.—Chairman Sulloway of the house committee on invalid pensions is preparing a report on the bill granting a pension of $5,000 annually to the widow of President McKinley, and will present it probably next week. The bill has been before a subcommittee for some time and has now by common consent and without division been favorably recommended by the full committee.

Washington Notes.

Washington, March 31.—C. H. Thompson, United States marshal for Oklahoma, has resigned to engage in private business.

James R. Garfield of Ohio, son of the former President, has accepted the place on the Civil Service commission made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Rodenberg of Illinois.

Joseph K. Wood, United States attorney for the second division of Alaska, has resigned. Wood is serving a term in prison for contempt of court in connection with the Judge Noyes case. The department was about to take action in his case when his resignation was received.

The house committee on public buildings and grounds has decided to visit Cleveland and Toledo for the purpose of looking into the needs of those cities as to government buildings.

The secret service has announced that a new $5 national bank note, the face of which is fairly deceptive, is in circulation. It is a photographic print on two pieces of paper, with fiber between, on the Union National Bank of New Orleans.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hay authorize the announcement of the engagement of their second daughter, Miss Alice Hay, to James W. Wadsworth, Jr., son of the representative from the Genesee district of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont spent Easter Sunday in Washington. They were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Howland. Mrs. West Roosevelt and her two sons are the guests of Mrs. John Rogers, and with her visited the white house.

The Belgian minister and Baroness Moncheur will have as their guest General Clayton, father of the Baroness and ambassador to Mexico. The Minister and Baroness Moncheur have issued invitations for a dinner in honor of the ambassador for April 3.

Admiral and Mrs. Dewey have ordered their Washington residence put in order for them, and will spend the spring months here. They have started north, but will reach Washington by easy stages to avoid too abrupt a change of climate for Mrs. Dewey, who is said to be much improved in health by her trip south.

Aged Indiana Man Commits Suicide.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 31.—C. S. Bittzer, aged 68 years, committed suicide by shooting in the Illinois street tunnel under the union station. His body was found by a pedestrian. He formerly traveled for a Cincinnati distilling company.

Charged with Stealing Stamps.

Columbus, Ohio, March 31.—Julius Bernstein, a pawnbroker, was arrested by a deputy United States marshal. He is charged with receiving stolen postage stamps, some of which are suspected to have come from the Chicago robbery.

Big Nickel Company.

Trenton, N. J., March 31.—The International Nickel company was incorporated here with a capital of $24,000,000. The company will manufacture nickel and other metals.

The house Tuesday, by a majority of 10, unseated Mr. Rhea (Ky.), a Democrat, and seated in his place J. McKim Moss, who was formerly a Democrat, but who, according to his brief, is in accord with the Republican party on the dominant issues. The Republican majority in the house is 43. While only two Republicans, Hanbury and Vreeland, of New York, voted with the Democrats, enough Republicans remained away or declined to vote to reduce the majority to 10. The conclusion of the debate on the case was rather spirited, Rhea making an eloquent defense of his right to the seat.

Education Comes High.

A young man, a member of the Knickerbocker Club, and the son of one of New York's most exclusive and richest families, lost $108,000 at roulette in Canfield's gambling place in two nights recently. The first night he lost $103,000, the second night $5,000 more. Reginald Vanderbilt, youngest son of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, who came of age a few months ago, and entered into possession of a large share of the fortune left to him by his father, is said to be the unfortunate player. New York is "wide open." More than that, the gambling houses, the pool rooms, the crap games, even the cheapest of the policy shops, are running as they never ran before.

To Stop Scraps.

As a result of the fight between Senators Tillman and McLaughlin, the senate committee on rules has ordered a favorable report upon the adoption of a new rule proposed by Mr. Hoar. It reads as follows:

"No senator in debate shall directly or indirectly, by any form of words, impute to another senator or to other senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a senator. "No senator shall refer offensively, while in debate, to any state of the union."

There will be a fine list of star vaudeville acts on the program at Wonderland and Temple theater, Detroit, the week of April 7. Among them will be Maggie Cline, the famous comedienne, who years ago earned the distinction of being called the "Irish Queen." Ada Arnoldson, known as the Swedish Nightingale; Rudinoff, who does a marvelous act of making shadow pictures, and Al. Leach and the Three Rosebuds, who do one of the funniest acts in vaudeville, will also be featured of that week. Visitors to Detroit will find Wonderland and Temple theater a delightful place to spend their leisure time while in town.
