William Judson was chairman of the committee on permanent organization. H. G. Prettyman was a member of the committee on resolutions, and A. J. Waters of the committee on credentials. O. T. Hoover is sergeant-at-arms and Jas. E. Harkins is one of his assistants. B. D. Kelly is one of the vice presidents and Frank Creech one of the assistant secretaries.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Appropriate Exercises and Sermon at the Congregational Church.

The Congregational church was well filled Sunday afternoon at the annual Memorial Day exercises. The members of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. were seated on the east side of the church in a body.

The rostrum and choir loft were draped with National flags and red, white and blue bunting. Potted palms and flowers also graced the platform and a large picture of President Lincoln draped with the National colors occupied a prominent position in the foreground.

After singing a hymn, the scripture lesson, Psalm xxxiii, was read by Rev. F. A. Siles. This was followed with an earnest prayer by Rev. E. E. Caster. "The Boys Who Wore the Blue" was tastefully rendered by the choir, after which Edward Gorman, the post adjutant, called the roll of honor which embraced 91 dead heroes. Another hymn was sung and the memorial address by Rev. O. S. Jones followed. He took for his subject "The True Soldier" and delivered a fine address full of good thoughts and glowing with patriotism.

The Late Frank Forner.

Frank Forner, of Sylvan, who had for the past year been failing in health, died at his home Saturday afternoon, May 24, of cancer of the stomach, aged 55 years. He is survived by his widow, three sons, Frank, Peter and John, three daughters, Mrs. Ida Mohrlock, Maggie and Lena Forner, and one grandson, Leon Mohrlock. The funeral services were held at St. Mary's church Tuesday morning and were conducted by Rev. W. P. Considine. They were largely attended by the relatives and friends of the deceased. The pallbearers were his cousins Frank and Michael Staffan, Louis H. Hindelang, Philip Keusch, Thos. Beissel and Chas. E. Stapish.

Mr. Forner was a lifelong resident of this vicinity, having been born in the township of Lyndon. He had lived on the homestead in Sylvan, 2½ miles northwest of Chelsea, where he died, for 27 years.

Had Quite a Scare.

Jackson Patriot Electric patrons on car 25 of the Boland road Sunday afternoon received a good scare just this side of Michigan Center. Car 25 had left the depot for Grass Lake and was being followed by a Michigan Center "open." Every one forgot the rear car until 25 suddenly stopped on the curve entering the village, and then a roaring, rushing sound was heard that made everyone think that the Michigan Center car was out of control and rushing down Segar's hill upon them. In less time than it takes to tell, passengers began leaping off and just as all were becoming panic stricken a Hawks-Angus car went roaring by and then, how those who had been too frightened to leave their seats did laugh as their companions began piling on once more.

A rural mail route service has been ordered established at Salem July 1.

VETERANS OF TWO WARS.

Information Desired as to Their Last Resting Place and History.

The editor of the Herald has received from Mrs. S. W. Clarkson, chairman of the D. A. R. committee on burial places of veterans of the revolutionary war and the war of 1812, the following letter which explains itself.

"Dear Sir—In response to your courteous notice, the Daughters of the American Revolution have received from Mrs. Polly Tallman, of Chelsea, the valued information that her father John Maxon, was a veteran and pensioner of the war of 1812. He died in Sharon, Nov. 22, 1864, and is buried in Vermont cemetery, township of Sylvan.

"Will you kindly embody this information in an item for the Herald? We hope that these notices may awaken further interest.

"I give you a list of veterans of the Revolution and of 1812 buried in this county and vicinity received thus far by our society.

"Of the Revolution—1, Ensign John Terhune, Carpenter's Corners, Pittsfield; 2, George Sorter, Raisinville; 3, Sergeant Ebenezer Annabill, Bridgewater Center; 4, Messenger John Fream, Lodi Plains.

COMRADES.

Now sadly the dirges are swelling
O'er hills that are dotted with graves,
And muffled the drums that are telling
A Nation is mourning its brave.
For some 'neath the palms are sleeping,
For some 'neath the pine and the yew;
A trace through the years they are keeping
Our boys of the Gray and the Blue.

And some under palm trees are lying,
From native land gone evermore;
The waves of old ocean are sighing,
The breaking in foam on that shore
Where shoulder to shoulder as brothers
They died to humanity true,
For Cuba's fair children and mothers,
Our boys of the Gray and the Blue.

Of Northland and Southland united,
To-day with our flag at half-mast,
The wrongs of a nation are righted,
One hope and one purpose at last;
For these are our comrades who slumber
'Neath blossoms the sweetest of May,
And in their ranks do we number
Our boys of the Blue and the Gray.

THE GRAVES IN THE OLD BREASTWORKS

By Francis Lynde

H. TOM, I do hope father won't go to law with old Maj. Loudon! It's bad enough as it is, but that will make it ever so much worse. I met Kate in the post office yesterday, and she pretended not to see me."

Tom Hartwood rapped the iron from the plane he was using, and began to whet it on the oilstone. "I'm with you, Dorothy," he said, "but what are you going to do about it? Father has settled it in his mind that the major is wrong, and he's going to law about it down here in Alabama, just the same as he would back in New Hampshire. He isn't bitter about it, and he can't see why the major should be."

The bright-haired young girl sitting on the end of the workbench nodded her head emphatically. "I know," she said. "But the major is bitter; he'd be untrue to all his traditions if he wasn't. Going to law with anybody down here is just like a declaration of war. The neighbors take it up on both sides, and there's no end of trouble. Just look at the Peterses and the Reddys! They're ready to fly at each other like cats and dogs all the time."

Tom laughed. "If it comes to that it will be pretty one-sided with us," he said. "The Loudons used to own the whole valley before the war, and they set the pace for nearly everybody in it now. And as between the blue-blooded old major and a despised Yankee farmer, who persists in plowing deeper than his neighbors, and making money when everybody else is losing it?"

"Now, Tom, you know that isn't fair. We couldn't have been treated better anywhere than we were two years ago, when we came here with mother sick, and father discouraged, and everything so dreadfully dreary and—tacky. Everybody was just as kind and thoughtful as could be. They never asked where we came from, and they didn't seem to care."

Tom's plane was curling long shavings from the edge of the board, and he laughed again. He was a broad-shouldered young fellow, with a resolute jaw and unafraid eyes, and laughing came easy to him. "It costs a pet prejudice or two, but you're right, little sister. There is no north nor south any more. But that doesn't help us out of our tangle with the major."

"No; and it's such a little thing—a foot and a half of land on one side of an old field!"

"A foot and eight inches," Tom corrected. "But it's the principle of the thing with father. He believes he is right, and he is going to insist on that foot and eight inches, if it costs us every friend we have in the valley."

Dorothy's gaze went adrift out of the workshop window, wandering aimlessly until it alighted upon the bent figure of a man digging in a distant field.

"The dear old pater!" she said, softly. "He is so just and upright that he has quite forgotten now to be generous. If this dispute grows into a neighborhood quarrel, it will break mother's heart."

In the distance. She thought it was her father, and went around through the orchard and out into the lane, meaning to take him unawares, and to try once more to dissuade him from his purpose. She came out opposite the bent figure in a thicket of old-field pines, and gave a little start of surprise when she discovered that the deliver in her father's field was Maj. Loudon's grizzled old house-servant.

"Why, Uncle Patel!" she said; "what are you doing here?"

"I's a-doin' 'whut ol' Marse Loudon sent me ter do, Miss Dor'thy; and I's a-wishin' ev'ry minute dat dishyer spade brek off short-up to de han'le," said the old negro.

Then Dorothy looked over the fence and saw a row of freshly dug post-holes. The major had evidently taken the law into his own hands and was going to make sure of the nine points of possession.

"Does my father know you are here?" she asked.

"No'm, I s'pect he don't. But I reckon he gwine find out 'fore long. I des been watchin' for him ter come 'larin' out dishyer way wid his gun ev'ry minute."

"You needn't be afraid. My father doesn't settle his difficulties with a gun. And, anyway, he wouldn't say anything to you."

The old negro leaned on his spade and glanced timidly over one shoulder toward the distant farmhouse, and over the other at the great house on the knoll.

"I's gwine tell you somepin, Miss Dor'thy, but you musn't never let on dat I tol' hit. Ol' Marse Loudon he been hearin' dat your pa gwine do dis an' dat an' t'other, an' he get pow'ful troubled in his min'. He done let on to young Marse Percy like he gwine to run your pa clear off'm dishyer place 'fore he get t'rough wid him."

"Why, uncle, how could he do that?"

"Deed, I don't know dat, Miss Dor'thy. 'Pears like de white folks kin do mos' anything dey wants ter. He say something about some ol' deed dat ain't been s'trend'ed yit; an' when he 'low dat, young Marse Percy he des up an' r'ar back an' Missy Kate she let on like she gwine ter cry. Den ol' Marse Robbitt look like he gwine to brek somepin, an' holler at me ter tek de spade an' go dig dem postes-holes."

Dorothy turned away sick at heart. She remembered something about a flaw in the title; that there was an unrecorded gap in the transfers of the farm dating back to its purchase by some former owner many years before. It had been represented that the deed had been lost in the registrar's office, and her father had so far departed from his cautious custom as to accept the faulty title.

And now, out of this trivial contention over a bit of land barely wide enough to carry the boundary fence, was to grow a monstrous injustice which was to turn them out of house and home! Dorothy's breath came thick at the thought, but she was a brave girl, and she hastened home to do what she might before it should be too late.

She found her father in the stable putting the harness on one of the horses. There was stern determination written in every line of the fine old face.

"Where are you going, father?" she asked.

"To town, to swear out a warrant against Loudon for trespass," was the curt reply. "He has sent his man over to move that line fence."

"Oh, father, I wish you wouldn't! And on Memorial day, too! Surely we can afford to be generous on this day of all others."

"It isn't a question of generosity; I'd give him the land willingly if he needed it, but I won't let him take it when it doesn't belong to him."

"But, father, just think how kind they've all been to us since we came here, strangers in a strange land. Have you forgotten how Kate used to come over and sit up night after night with mother in that awful time two years ago? And how the major used to come twice a day to ask if there wasn't something he could do for us?"

The hard lines in her father's face melted ever so little, but he went on harnessing the horse.

"No, I haven't forgotten; and I'd do as much for him and his, this minute. I'm not angry, child, but it's a matter of principle. In justice to you and Tom, and to your mother, I am bound to defend my legal rights."

"Please don't go to-day, father. Won't you wait just a little while? As it stands now the major is the aggressor, and I'm sure he'll be sorry if you'll only give him a little time to think about it."

For a moment she thought she had won. He paused with the horse on his arm, grasping the horse's forelock. Then he shook his head and slipped the bridle into place.

"It's no use, Dorothy, girl. It's got to come, sooner or later, and I'd rather have it done and over with."

She let him go at that, but when he climbed to his seat in the sulky she gave him a parting word.

"Remember the day, father—we used to call it our 'forgiving day' at home. Think of the good things the major has done for us, and try to forgive him."

She went to the gate and watched her father driving down the winding road. He was letting the horse walk, and as long as she could see him she fancied that his determination was wavering. When the sulky disappeared over the final hill she opened the gate and walked aimlessly in the opposite direction.

Her walk was a long one, and it led her far up the slopes of the great mountain which walls in the sheltered valley on the west. Near the cliff line she had stumbled upon a dell thickly starred with sweet-scented white azaleas; and remembering in the midst of her troubled musings her mother's fondness for this particular wild flower, she had filled her arms with the fragrant blooms.

She came out of the forest at the foot of the mountain into an open space which appeared to be an old field long uncultivated. It was in the little depression between the knoll and the mountain, and the Loudon orchard ran down to its farther edge. She could see the roof of the great house above the trees in the orchard, and thinking to save time she cut across the old field toward the road.

In mid-passage she came upon a low, curving mound, grass-grown and half hidden in a thicket of old-field pines. It was the remains of an old breastwork, and between the horns of the curve were seven graves. Only one of them was marked, and she knelt to read the inscription on the plain white headstone:

Sacred to the memory of
CAPTAIN ROBERT PERCY GORDON, who, with six members of his command, gave up his life on this spot,
September 6, 1863, while resisting the advance of the Federal Army of Invasion.

"My dear young lady," he began, but something choked him and he had to try again. "Do you know who these men were? They were rebels; they died fighting for the 'Lost Cause.'"

"I know," she said simply; "but they thought it was right; and they were brave men. And—and to-day is Memorial day."

The tips of the fierce white mustache twitched again, and the major took off his broad-brimmed hat with the most stately courtesy.

"Tell me, Miss Dorothy; did you come here to—?" he could not finish, and she answered the unspoken question.

"Not purposely," she said. "I had been gathering wild flowers, and I came here quite by accident. I didn't know there was any one buried here."

The major cleared his throat and came around to stand beside her. "We buried them just where they fell; it seemed most proper and fitting. They were on the picket line, and the order to fall back never reached them."

"Did you—did you know—any of them?" she faltered.

The erect figure of the old soldier unbent at the question, and the major choked again.

"They were all old neighbors of mine," he rejoined; "and this boy—this Capt. Robert Percy Gordon—was my sister's son and my name-child."

She started back at the word, and the miserable boundary wrangle came to its own again.

"Then this is your land? These are your—please forgive me, Maj. Loudon; I didn't know!"

The stately old man put on his hat with a bow that Lord Chesterfield might have envied. "It's getting right late, Miss Dorothy. Will you permit me to see you safe to your father's house?"

He tucked her arm under his own, and they went, not by the road, but up through the orchard and past the great house. At the side door which opened out of the library the major excused himself, and when he came out a moment afterward he was buttoning his coat.

Five minutes later they were crossing the road in front of the farmhouse, and the major's hand was on the gate latch when Dorothy's father drove up in the sulky. Notwithstanding all that had befallen she expected an outburst of bitter words on one side or both, and caught her breath nervously. But there was no need.

"Good evening, Neighbor Hartwood," said the major, genially. "I just found your little girl here, projecting around in my old field, and I took the liberty, sah, of seeing her safe at home."

John Hartwood was a man of few words, but he climbed down from the sulky and made the proper acknowledgment of thanks.

Surprise and Presentation.

St. Mary's Literary Club having elected its last year's staff of officers as given in last week's Herald and completed the course of Bible studies which it entered on at the beginning of the season has closed its labors until next fall. The club is to be credited with an amount of successful work, which only could have been completed by enthusiastic and persevering members. The attendance at the various meetings proved the unity which existed among them.

The president had understood that the closing banquet was to be held later, but the members understood otherwise and successfully planned a surprise for her at her home on South Main street, and carried their plans into execution last Tuesday evening. After refreshments had been served a very handsome hand painted rose jar was presented to Mrs. McKune to partially make known to her the appreciation the members felt for the successful efforts she had put forth to make pleasant and instructive the evenings they had spent together.

ITEMS OF LOCAL INTEREST.

Tomorrow is Decoration Day and a public holiday.

A council of the Knights of Columbus will soon be formed in Chelsea. The formal application has been made to the Hon. Geo. F. Monaghan, of Detroit, state deputy.

Last week's Stockbridge Sun has a very complete write-up of the Commercial Bank of Glazier & Gay of that village and a cut of the handsome stone building occupied by it.

Rev. J. E. Ryerson gave a highly interesting lecture on "Ben Hur," at the Methodist church Friday evening. The stereopticon views helped all to understand Lew Wallace's great work better than they had ever done before.

The 500-horse dynamo has been taken out of the Boland-power house here this week and has been shipped to Grass Lake. It will be set up in the power house at that place and will furnish the power to run the cars to Wolf Lake.

The scholars of the eighth grade accompanied by their teacher Miss Clara B. Hemens, enjoyed a day's outing at Cavanaugh Lake last Friday. Twenty-two scholars in all were there and the day was spent in games, paddling in the lake and other amusements.

One of the trio of cottonwood trees that surround the property at the southeast corner of South Main and Park streets, recently purchased by Munson Burkhardt, was cut down Tuesday to allow of putting down a new cement walk. It was 42 inches in diameter at the thickest part.

John H. Cutting, of Ann Arbor, who is a member of the firm of W. P. Schenk & Co., of this place, Theodore Reyer, of Ann Arbor, Herman Kalmbach, of South Lyons, and William Houseman, of Galt, Ontario, have formed a company for the manufacture of woolen goods. Y., national secretary of the National Protective Legion, has sent a circular letter to the secretaries of local lodges in Michigan, informing them that Commissioner Barry has now issued them a license to do business in this state. A number of the lady friends of Miss Margaret B. Nickerson met at the residence of Mrs. T. E. Wood Monday afternoon and gave her a linen shower. The occasion was the approaching marriage of Miss Nickerson to Mr. Fred Welch, and she was the recipient of many handsome presents which included table linen, napkins, bread and cake throws, towels, etc. During the afternoon light refreshments were served.

One of Ed. Chandler's drays, driven by Charles Merker, was delivering some carboys of acid that is used in soldering at the stove works Thursday. The dray canted over as he was turning it and the carboys slipped off. Two of them were broken and the acid that ran out burned the horses' heels badly and narrowly missed burning the driver. It is hardly expected that one of the horses will recover from the injuries received.

Those who patronize the electric cars in going to and from Cavanaugh Lake, think the company would do a good act if they put up a cheap building for a waiting room at what is known as the Sylvan crossing. The company could make improvements that would not be as useful to them as that, as the travel between Ann Arbor, Chelsea and Cavanaugh Lake is likely to increase rather than decrease for some time to come.

The next International Epworth League convention will be held in Detroit early in July of 1903.

Washtenaw Daily Times: "Ald. Clancy and Kearns were in Chelsea yesterday. They went there to inspect the Massillon brick paving jobs in Sylvan." What kind of a joke is the Times trying to work off in this item?

THE SOLDIER'S TRUCE

"I could not love thee, dear, so much, Loved I not honor more."

SOUTH MOUNTAIN lay to the right—gray and gloomy, save for the summit, pierced by a few bayonets of light—advance guard of the sun which had already scaled the rampart of the eastern horizon.

Along the narrow path that skirted the base of the mountain rode a man. As he emerged from the thicket the early sunlight dazzled his eyes, and he tipped the brim of his soft, felt hat and gazed eagerly about. Before him was a little farm—scarcely more than a clearing in the woods. The partly burnt fence, the outbuildings leveled to the ground, told the story as plainly as the smoke of camp fires curling over the hill, or the sounds of drum and trumpet that mingled occasionally with the mutterings of cannon.

By a gap in the fence, her feet half hidden in the charred rails, stood a girl who, as the rider came in sight, waved a sunbonnet in response to his lifted hat. Her hair was a reddish brown, her skirt of purple delaine, and she wore a scarlet waist; but the tones of all were dulled by fading here, or brightened by sunlight there, to a harmony of color.

"Good-morning, sweetheart," was the soldier's greeting as, throwing the bridle over a limb of a cottonwood near, he dismounted and strode up to her. She gave him her hand with a faint little smile, but her eyes wandered past him, and she said nothing. He frowned.

weapon and the newcomer. With a few swift strides, the latter came toward them. He lowered his rifle and saluted. Looking from one to the other: "Do I intrude, Miss Price?"

She stepped aside, still keeping her hand on the scout's gun. This the soldier resented. "Don't be afraid, Mattie," and his voice was unconsciously tender; "that pale cheek of yours is as good as a flag of truce any day." Then to the union officer: "I have but a few moments with this young lady; can you not see that your presence is an intrusion?"

The other flashed a look at the girl—a look of love militant, triumphant. In response, her cheeks flaunted now, a crimson banner signal; bashful consciousness of a new love she was powerless to resist—of an old love set aside, overwhelmed her. A mocking-bird swung from the bow of a pawpaw bush near, and a tiny spray of dew flung in her face. She watched the bird soar away until its gray crest was lost in the mountain's gloom, then she gathered courage to say: "No, Jack; Maj. Strong does not intrude."

The scout stared from one to the other, then mastering himself, he spoke: "You must decide between us now, Mattie," he said. "I will not be rivals with the same man in love and war."

Her eyes on the mountain, half-dreamily she spoke: "And I will be the rival of war in no man's heart. He, who would win me, must choose between his flag and me!"

The union officer drew a long

MILWAUKEE PEOPLE

Could Hardly Believe It. A Prominent Woman Saved From Death by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suppose a large number of people who read of my remarkable cure will hardly believe it; had I not experienced it myself, I know that I should not.

MRS. SADIE E. KOCH.

"I suffered for months with troubles peculiar to women which gradually broke down my health and my very life. I was nearly insane with pain at times, and no human skill I consulted in Milwaukee could bring me relief.

"My attention was called to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; the first bottle brought relief, and the second bottle an absolute cure. I could not believe it myself, and felt sure it was only temporary, but blessed fact, I have now been well for a year, enjoy the best of health, and cannot in words express my gratitude. Sincerely yours, SADIE E. KOCH, 124 10th St., Milwaukee, Wis."

Such unquestionable testimony proves the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over diseases of women.

Women should remember that they are privileged to consult Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., about their illness, entirely free.

Measured, He Purchased.

A tattered, forlorn mis of 15 summers entered the office of a young real estate man the other day. Ordinarily he is the possessor of individuals, but this day he was so busy that he didn't know where he was at. So, with a swift glance out of the corner of his eye, he said rather sharply: "Well, what do you want?"

"P-p-please, mister, won't you buy a ticket on our cuckoo clock?" replied the girl, hesitatingly.

"Buy a ticket on your cuckoo clock? What the deuce would I do with a cuckoo clock, even if I should get it?"

"Oh, you won't get it, mister. Please buy a ticket."

He bought.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

"Do you think that people are less romantic and imaginative after they are married?"

"I don't know about the romance," answered Mr. Phillips. "But if they are going to try to explain everything, they've got to be more imaginative."—Brooklyn Eagle.

SUFFERED 25 YEARS

With Catarrh of the Stomach—Peru-na Cured.

Congressman Botkin, of Winfield, Kan.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman Congressman Botkin says:

"My Dear Doctor—It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peruna and Mannin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure."—J. D. Botkin.

Mr. L. F. Verdery, a prominent real estate agent, of Augusta, Ga., writes:

"I have been a great sufferer from catarrhal dyspepsia. I tried many physicians, visited a good many springs, but I believe Peru-na has done more for me than all of the above put together. I feel like a new person."—L. F. Verdery.

The most common form of summer catarrh is catarrh of the stomach. This is generally known as dyspepsia. Peru-na cures these cases like magic.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

ROY W. BROWN.

"HE TIPPED THE BRIM OF HIS SOFT FELT HAT AND GAZED EAGERLY ABOUT."

"You are not glad to see me," he said. "You haven't enjoyed our last meetings, and I know why; it's that cursed Yankee that has come between us."

Her eyes flashed. "Don't call names, and don't abuse my friend!"

"Friend?" he echoed scornfully. "Shame upon you, Martha Price, to call him 'friend'! A man whose business it is to trail that in the dust, and he pointed to the tiny Confederate flag at his saddlebow, 'who would stain this uniform we wear with the best blood of the south!'"

Her eyelids quivered, but she was silent.

"I know," he went on, passionately, "you make a great deal of his service—of that one act of decency. Yet, no wonder—decency from a Yankee is astonishing," and his lip curled scornfully. Here the fire came back to her eyes, and the ring to her voice.

"Decency is a light word! You call it 'decency' that he saved home and honor for all of us? Was it only 'decency' that brought him up just in time, made him disperse all the forgers, and save the place, and mother and—and me? I call it goodness, soldierly honor!"

The man sneered. "And I suppose you call it 'goodness' and 'soldierly honor' to dangle about you the rest of the time? Look there!" He pointed to where, on a slight rise of ground was a clump of hazel bushes. Her eyes, not sharp as those of the trained scout, saw nothing. But just then a man's head rose from behind the copse.

The click of a trigger warned the girl, and she turned back. One glance at her companion's leveled gun, then with a shrill cry, she clapped her head over the barrel—set slight form directly between the breath, and involuntarily took a step away from her. The scout shrugged his gray-clad shoulders.

"A change has come to you, sweetheart—but, but it has not come to me. Perhaps you will change again. You may again be proud of your soldierly lover; you could only be disgraced by the vows of a deserter; good-by, sweetheart." He held her hand in a lingering clasp, then mounted and rode away without a backward glance.

At that moment sounded the bugle from the federal camp. Slowly the union officer advanced to her. "Before—I met you, dear, that call was a glad summons; now it is the trump of doom, but—but I obey it, just the same. There is only one thing dearer than a soldier's love—it is a soldier's honor. Farewell!"

Over the battlefield rose the moon—wan, pitying, a veil of cloud between her and the unshriven dead.

On the outskirts of the field two men limped slowly, painfully away. Their uniforms—gray and blue—were torn and reddened. One arm of the officer supported the wounded scout; the other arm dangled helplessly in the bloody ravellings of blue.

"Will she be there?" the man in gray murmured. "Will she come?"

"Cheer up, old man; she is there—by the stile yonder—see." But the scout could go no farther, and they sank to the ground together—the wounded and the dying—waiting for her.

And she came, and ever both bent compassionate eyes, while her lips breathed a prayer. The man in gray half rose on his elbow and slipped her hand from his own into the hand of the union soldier. "He was true to his flag," he whispered; "he will be true to you, sweetheart. Good-by."

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsanitary conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and share alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package.
