TRUE ART OF BREATHING.

Easy Way in Which Some Diseases Can Be Cured.

It is perhaps one of the signs of the times to those alert for indications that the art of breathing has become more and more a subject of attention. Oculists as well as physiologists go deeply into its study in a way hardly to be touched upon here. Physicians have cured aggravated cases of insomnia, by long-drawn, regular breaths; fever-stricken patients have been quieted, stubborn forms of indigestion made to disappear.

A tendency to consumption may be overcome, as some authority has within the last few years clearly demonstrated, by exercise in breathing. Seasickness, too, may be surmounted, and the victim of hypnotic influence taught to withstand the force of an energy directed against him.

There is a famous physician in Munich who has written an extensive work upon the subject of breathing. He has besides formulated a system by

FOR GRANDPA'S SAKE.

My grandpa went to war long years ago, never saw him, but they told me so, And how, after a battle, sad news came, Among the "missing" was my grandpa's name.

They never heard of him again, they said, And so we know that grandpa must be dead; And when I think of him, so good and brave, I wish we knew where he had found a grave.

When Decoration day comes, every year, I feel so sad, and sometimes shed a tear. To see the soldiers' graves all spread with flowers. While grandpa cannot have one rose of ours.

So if some little Southern girl should know A nameless grave where never blossoms grow. I'd love her so, if there some flowers sned lay For granupa's sake, this Decoration day. -Youth's Companion.

The Last Charge.

BY J. WHITFIELD SCATTERGOOD. Copyright, 1902, by Dally Story Pub. Co.)

Dressed in his only suit of navy blue. Old Weak-Eyed Jones sat uncomfortably on one of the backless benches in front of the speake, s' stand. The post adjutant was reading the post orders. The boys in blue, scattered hither and thither, bent an attentive ear and held their yellow-corded hats to one side to shade their fading eyesight from the waning sun.

Far away under the trees of the park lounged hundreds of people. Polite attention prevailed among those with in heating distance; farther away the hum of voices and shouts of unsuppressed laughter arose on the air in unmistakable volume. This was sacritege to the ears of Weak-Eyed Jones. To him no event was more solemn Than the present, and it seemed the same dignity and reverence he feit should actuate the conduct of others. The air was suffocating. Early 'n to move along. Shouts of "Hurrah!" Hurrah!" greeted his ears from every side. Proudly he lifted his head and threw his shoulders back with unctious military dignity.

The ovation continued with increased enthusiasm as they passed up the street. Someone tried to retaliate with a "Hurrah for the boys of '61!" but the voice was lost in the lusty tide of cheering for "The boys of '98!" Following the squad of so'd ers came a bicycle brigade, men on horseback. and, lastly, wagon loads of flower girls dressed in white-wagons for strong, healthy girls, while decrepit old veterans must go afoot.

As the long line rounded a corner and passed from the boulevard into an east and west thoroughfare, Weak-Eyed Jones tottered. Bravely he pulled his remaining strength together and ambled on, his faltering footsteps unable to beat time to the rapid music. Many of his comrades, too, had long since forgotten bow to march. And how few they numbered nowthese veterans!

Mount Zion cemetery was a beautiful spot-lifted above woods and sky just beyond where the lake nestled quietly between two hillsides-the valley, with its ribbon of a rivulci, winding verdure-laden at its woody base. straight to the breeze as hke clock- ently, there came the long, low, solwork that human phalanx moved to obey.

Was that the foe there, entrenched at the base of the hill, calmly waiting with muskets primed and ready? But never a man did he see falter. Onward they pressed, with music soaring and flags flying, into the fray and into the face of death. Then, when the first volley had been met and passed. they were over the breastworks and upon the foe. He felt an absence about him then. He looked for Billy. Eilly. was gone! A bullet had carried him down at the first onslaught, he concluded. Then he saw the men in the trenches waver for a moment, club their muskets for a last feeble stand. That was all: then they fled. The Federal troops, forgetting their orders in the enthusiasm of the moment, were as quickly over the ramparts and after them-through woods, over logs, past gulches, and into the face of a murderous musketry from above!

Presently Weak-Eyed reeled and fell from the marching column, striking his head as he fell. Grasping a shade tree by the side of the thoroughfare he slowly raised himself to his knees. Had he, too, been struck by a flying bullet? He put his hand to his head. Yes, there was blood! -and the bridge of his nose was gone! But he forgot the pain momentarily as he heard the order: "Charge the crest of the hill!" pass from mouth to mouth as it came from Grant. His pulses leapt. His blood fairly bounded at the words. He tried to rise and obey, but he could neither see nor walk.

"Hurrah fer th'-stars an'-stripes!" he shouted in the exultation of the moment, but the effort cost him throbs of pain.

A vehicle full of belated celebrationists, hurrying after the procession, heard his shout. "A drunken soldier," they said. Weak-Eyed thought an ammunition wagon was hurrying to the front.

His sight cleared a little after the first daze from his fall. In the distance he saw clouds of dust arising.

emn roll of the drums-the slow, melancholy, almost human roll. "Ah! it's-all-over!" he said, faint-

now. "It's-over," he gasped, "an'-Billy -you'll have t'-go-with th' rest -into th' trenches-an' under th' sod. But-not-me! They said-l c'd-go home. I'm wounded. I'lltell her-Billy-when I git-therethat you-died a-fightin'-an' a-thinkin'-o'-her! An' I'll-give-her-th' things-you sent,-her picture-an' th' testament! You've-got-mine yet -Billy, I give-'em-t'-ye, but-I'llnot need-'em."

He attempted to rise, but could not. Some one held a flask to his lips and he drank.

The procession meantime wended down the hill again.

The first columns swept past where Weak-Eyed Jones was prone upon the grass. Some one stepped out to hall some passing vehicle. The mayor's carriage aproached. "A jolly old drunk, there!" the occupants remarked, then bowled away up the street and out of hearing. Another carriage swept past without a heed, a load of flower girls drew near. The driver was beckoned to halt, but his attention was centered upon his screaming. laughing passengers.

The sun was now almost set. Presently Weak-Eyed Jones feebly raised himself upon his emaciated elbows, peered with all the power he could muster through his almost sightless orbs in the direction of the bloodred sun and moved his lips to speak: "Yes-they're waitin'-fer me, Billy. I wish-you-was-a-goin'-too!" he said.

Later, when strange hands gathered from the wayside all that was mortal of the dauntless soldier, a withered spray of honeysuckle slipped unheeded from his nerveless grasp. In the meantime the city had resumed the noisy tenor of its way, and Memoria: day and its meaning had all but become forgotten.

If all the conditions are normal will be found in the morning the there is a good deal of dew on the white board, much less on the gree board, and still less on the bla board; indeed, there may be none a all on the latter.

The difference is due to the fact that the three boards absorb the sun's my unequally, and are, therefore, of diferent temperatures at the close of the day. The black board absorbs the most heat, the the white board the least They all begin to lose their heat a soon as the sun's rays leave them, the white board cooling first, the grees board next and the black board last As soon as they become cool enough to condense the watery vapor of the ale in contact with them, dew will begin to form on them, and the most dew will form on the one that cools first It may be that the black board win absorb more heat during the day that it can throw off at night; if so, no dev will form on it.

time day the heated atmosphere had become saturated with clouds of choking dust, which rolled into the city behin i hundreds of incoming farmers' conveyances. But Weak-Eyed Jones took it all with a generous degree of numility and uncomplaining. A young couple at his elbow indulged so busily in conversation he could not hear the voice of the adjutant, yet he bore it silently. Even though his obscure sight, years before made almost use tess by a rebel minie ball, which carried away the br.dge of his nose and grazed both eyes, was powerless to penetrate the dust-heavy distance between him and the speaker he was se--cretly happy.

flis meditations were cut short by a sudden commotion at his elbow. People were hurrying from their seats; the program must be over. He was carried along with the rest, towards the speakers' stand, but he hadn't gone far when he noticed some one trying to speak. Above the noise he just caught the last phrase: "Will close with a selection by the young ladies' quartette."

Then it wasn't over yet! There was to be one more number! He tried to be seated, but a buxom country woman pstled hard against him, nearly sending him off his rheumatic lefs.

The quartette commenced to sing. but their voices were drowned in the mmult of confusion.

Presently a drum corps somewhere nut in the street struck up "Marching Through Georgia"-the line . commenced to form. Hurried along with the throng. Weak-Eyed Jones took up marching position with others of his blue-coated comrades. The heat was still more stifling here, as they stood waiting for what seemed like hours. Presently Weak-Eyed began to grow faint. The morning had found him physically indisposed, but never yet having missed meeting with his soltes comrades on the thirtieth of May, didn't propose to to-day. It might the inst time-probably it wouldbut ho'd go this once!

he band up the street struck up he Star-Spangled Banner"-he was sous of the column moving. He stood still so long his legs were till and action made him stag-the azure heavens outlining its great white gates. its marble monuments, its flowering shrubbery, its trees of green, with rare exactness beyond, Weak-Eyed Jones raised his eyes to the bill yet in the distance. He could see but the outline of the hallowed spot rising against the lurid sky. His spirit was awed! The heavy march was telling on his weakened body, his steps were getting more and more uncertain. A momentary dizziness came over him.

"Hark!" Suddenly the music of the ifes and drums floated to his ears with a strangely famillar sound. It took him back to the front again, back to the days of '63! Once more he was a youth-strong, vigorous, in arms. And could this, then, be Thomas' brigade?-and yonder-yonder hill-Missionary Ridge where, proudly drawn in battle array, the Confederate legions awaited them calmly with a we'come of leaden death?

And whence all this rub-a-dub-dub. rub-a-dub-dub, that fired the very blood within the veins? Ah! Foolish question! Why ask when there was Soffels, the drummer boy? Nob-dy but Soffels could drum like that! Soffels was the only one who could make his drum "talk" in accents so c ear and true-now gay, gay as the morning sunlight: now sad-sad as the hour of death, as he turned the tide of battle into victory or defeat!

"Take the rifle-pits at the base, then halt and reform!" Weak-Eyed Jones heard the order as clear as on the day it fired the souls of thousands of Union soldiers to battle and to victory. The march of many feet was mind, his whole being was centered iheard; ti e glint of polished bayonets another direction. Back of Mt. Z'on's Weak-Eyed Jones feebly raised him self upon his elbows and peered at the blood-rea sun.

"The smoke of the battle," he thought. The music was still playing, clearer and louder than ever, indicating the enthusiasm of battle. Someone ap proached his side.

"Only a-scrape-comrade!" he said. Never-mind me-I'll be-all rightsoon. There's work-fer you-up there!" He indicated the hill with a wave of his hand.

"I tell you he's not drunk; he's sick." The man at his side addressed some one near at hand.

In pity they tried to raise him to his feet. His legs would not support htm; he collapsed again at the fuot of the tree.

A roll of drums floated across the valley and into the old man's ears. "Hark!" he exclaimed, raising himself with heroic effort. "I hear-th sound o' vict'ry!" Volleys of musketry rang out on the air. "Give it-to 'em-boys!" he added.

"Chances are against him." a voice was heard to remark nearby. "He mus be taken to a physician."

"Aw! He's only had a drop too much t' drink, I tell you," some one answered.

Honor the Living.

Persons of middle age wao but dimly remember the closing days of the awful struggle and the sceres of joy that followed the return of the soldiers to their homes, participate in the ceremonies of the day with feelings of reverence, and the children with almost a sense of awe. Reverertly and gratefully we remember the services of those who fought and sufered for the union. We can but strew with fragrant flowers the graves of the dead; we should with fragrant leeds remember the living. Not long re they to be with us. More graves all for tribute each year. Let us do he living honor while we may.

CHAPTER VII. "Take Care, Captain Brand!" Artemus looked into his companion's face as the other made this strange and unexpected announcement.

Himself something of a practical joker, it was natural that the dramatic student of human nature should be suspicious lest he fall a victim to some deep-laid plot to bring down upon his head the laugh that cuts so keenly. But Charlie looked as grave as a deacon. Had he been attending the obsequies of the man who was hung, he could not have appeared more solemn.

Matters of this character always possessed for him a peculiarly strong interest, and he was eager to glean the particulars.

My Dear Doctor It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative Well, it isn't given to most of us to see a man hung, and then meet him Vanalin. I have been afflicted more or afterward alive and well. Tell me hes for a quarter of a century with caabout it, Charlie, my boy."

There isn't a great deal to narrate. At the time an insurrection in Chili was causing the most intense excitement, and some very bloody battles were fought about Santiago.

"I chanced to be, as I said, in Valparaiso. One day I found myself in a crowd of excited citizens and soldiers. in the midst of whom stood a prisoner -a spy, caught red-handed, upon whom they were about to execute summary judgment.

"That was Captain Nathaniel. "The word was given, and I heard a roar from five hundred throats as "One moment I saw him as he dang.ed in space, hands and feet striking out wildly-a spectacle I shall nev-"There came a sudden shot, and Kedge fell to the ground in a heapsome one had cut the rope with a wellaimed bullet. "Immediately the deuce of a row broke out, but bless you, the affair died away as speedily as it began, and then, gradually, it dawned upon the minds of the crowd that a great hoax had been successfully carried out,

"For when they looked for Kedge. in order to complete their artistic little job, behold! the man who had already been partially hung had disappeared, nor were they able to discover him, though Valnaraiso was thoroughly searched. "That is my little story, and I am almost ready to swear that our Capt. arm. Brand in yonder is the identical Kedge, grown a little gray in the service of beating the world, but just began. the same old sixpence." Artemus nodded, and they separated ceived? Why did an occasional lingering doubt still find lodgment in Charlie's heart. No woman could about with complacency. play such a game. Arline must be what she seemed. Hank Peterhoff and his miserable warnings! So he trusted blindly. If there was a pit, he would fall into it, headlong, for love had already blinded him.

Or was the Russian bear still on guard? Could the hotel be surrounded by his emissaries, ready to entrap the wonderful adventuress? Having decided to smoke a weed and take a look around ere retiring to his bunk, Charlie lighted up and sauntered toward the open door leading to the street.

When he stepped out of the hotel door, he was astonished to discover little knots of men, dressed in the well-known uniform of the Antwerp gendarmes, standing near the Hotel de la Paix.

Then it burst upon him that he had not placed enough significance upon what the baron had confided to him. This did not mean the mere arrest of a clever adventuress, charged with no specific crime save that of enslaving men of rank, and compelling them, through her witchery, to contribute from their wealth toward her regal support. It stood for something grander, something that might yet shake a greater part of Europe with a mighty convulsion, since the conspiracy in which the Countess Isolde was connected concerned more than one imperial throne. Charlie forgot that he had been sleepy. His eyes were never brighter than now. It seemed that the countess had finally made a stupendous blunder, and Peterhoff's hour of triumph was at hand.

It would mark an epoch in the lives of many prominent men in Europe when Isolde Brabant vanished behind the walls of a military fortress.

Some who had been in the tolls would breathe easy for the first time in many moons, and drink a bumper to her long residence in her new and exclusive palace.

So Charlie watched and waited, deep in reflection.

When his cigar was about half consumed, he thought he would saunter down the street a short distance, to see what effect, if any, his appearance might have upon the officers on guard. The result was really more than he had anticipated.

He had not gone more than a dozen paces before, without the least warning, he felt a rough hand laid roughly upon his arm.

And the cause was one in which he could stand considerable knocking He watched the hotel door. The baron would be sorry on account of his blunder. Naturally, he would want to make amends, and Charlie had already concluded to enlist his valuable services in the work of unmasking Captain Brand. If anybody could accomplish this matter, surely it was Peterhoff, whose long experience and facilities for securing information would stand him in good stead.

Ah! there were signs of life. A number of sombre closed vehicles came dashing down the gassen.

They drew up before the hotel. A few loungers gathered in the doorway out of idle curiosity. Heads appeared at the windows across the way, as though some spirit of intuition, passing through space, gave warning that strange events were occurring.

Charlie's captors began to move along toward the hotel door, and of course, he was forced to accompany them.

He was still twenty paces away when the baron came out bearing upon his arm a lady with a sylphlike form, but who was heavily velled.

Charlie's traitor heart leaped at sight of her. The graceful carriage was so likes that of Arline, so queenly and perfect.

Yet he knew beyond peradventure that this was the countess who had finally fallen into the toils of the fowler.

Charlie was inclined to rush and seize upon his friend, the baron; but those two guards held his arms in a grip of steel.

Attract the attention of Peterhoff he could not, since the other had eyes only for the woman at his side, knowing his men were capable of executing the orders previously given.

So he assisted her into a vehicle and swept one last glance around.

Charlie cried out. Other sounds there were in the street just then. At any rate, the baron never vouchsafed a single look in his quarter, but waved an arm, jumped into the vehicle and was gone. By this time the gendarmes were issuing from the hotel, each with a companion, most of the prisoners being gentlemen. As fast as the vehicles were filled with guards and captives they dashed away.

Charlie's turn came. He attempted a protest, but was roughly shoved along and thrust into one of the closed vehicles, which presently lumbered down the street.

And so the innocent suffered with the guilty.

D. Arnold, President German Mrs. Woman's Club, Grand Pacific Hotel, Los Angeles, Cal., Relieved of a Tumor by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM :--- I suffered four years ago with a tumor in my womb, and the doctors declared I must go to the hospital and undergo an operation, which I dreaded very much and hesitated to submit.

" My husband consulted an old friend who had studied medicine, although he was not a practising physician, and he said he believed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure me. That same day I took my first dose, and I kept it up faithfully until twelve bottles had been used, and not only did the tumor disappear, but my general health was very much improved and I had not felt so well since I was a young woman.

"As I have suffered no relapse since, and as I took no other medicine, I am sure that your Compound restored my health and I believe saved my life."-MRS. D. ARNOLD.

for a time. But their meeting had not been unobserved. The ubiquitous baron had his eye on them, and possibly figured out some wonderful game as connected with his mysterious conversation. Charlie went back to Arline and Capt. Brand, and the three chatted for Then Arline graciously consented to play several favorite pieces, while Charlie idly glanced through a book made up of fugitive songs and music.

It was while doing this he suddenly came upon an opportunity to make another test of the man's identity. So Charlie handed the well-worn book of music to the fair girl.

"Play that for me-an old favoritealways revives pleasant recollections." Charlie was so situated that a side glance into a massive pier glass gave him an excellent view of the man who had arisen from the dead.

What Stuart had so-accidentally, yet fortunately, come across was the Chilian National Hymn. He watched the effect upon Capt. Brand.

When the first rather weird notes of this Spanish-American music throbbed upon the air, Brand sat bolt upright upon the divan.

Involuntarily he seemed to gasp for breath; his tongue partly protruded from his mouth, as though he were being choked, while his hand crept up to his throat and clutched his loose collar, as if to tear it away.

Charlie exulted in the sight. It confirmed his suspicions.

There was no longer the faintest doubt remaining in his mind. This was the man!

Finally they said good-night.

Charlie managed to whisper a few sentences in Arline's ear while the captain waited at the door, so that he was assured of seeing her again on the morrow.

Capt. Brand led her away.

One smiling glance she sent back over her plump shoulder-gods! what a thrill it gave the bachelor who received it! Here was a miracle.

He felt dazed-felt as though he walked in a dream. He who had scoffed at such a ridiculous thing as love at first sight, who had always declared the holy passion a flower of slow growth, founded upon mutual friendship and esteem, now discovered his theory in utter ruin, and not only that, but himself engulfed in the chaotic debris.

Finally he aroused himself to a realization of the fact that there were a few more people in the world besides "Silence!"

"Have made a little mistake."

"Silence on your life!" was hissed. He saw frowning pistols. It was evident that the officers meant business. Charlie began to grow a little indignant. "See here! send for the baron!" he insisted.

"He is engaged."

"But he is my friend-he will be angry with you for making so ridiculous a blunder."

"So. But we carry out his orders. Now, not a word more, mynherr." "Confound-"

"Do you hear? Not one word, on your life!" Charlie shrugged his shoulders.

Ah! a whistle!-evidently a signal. The game was about to Le called. Even as he stood there, held fast by his captors, he saw a man enter the door of the hostelry.

It was Peterhoff. Another and another followed, until Charlie had counted a round dozen. At the same time there was a stretching of lines in the street Signals passed from mouth to mouth. and Charlie understood that the wellknown Hotel de la Paix was in the center of a strong cordon of officers, through which escape was impossible. Alas! for the countess! It was her hour of doom!

He listened, swayed by contending emotions.

Somehow Arline was in his mind. Perhaps there might be a fight. Some of those who would be found in the society of Isolde Brabant were desperate men, connected with anarchists and nihilists, sworn to reduce society in Europe to one dead level.

They might take their lives in their hands and endeavor to give battle. Still, the awful influence of Peterhoff's dreaded name was sufficient. under ordinary conditions, to freeze the fighting blood in the veins of most men, however brave they might be.

To his surprise, he heard no shot, not even a shout or a scream.

The baron's sudden appearance in their midst must have paralyzed the conspirators.

Presently they would be trooping forth under escort, to be hurried away to gloomy prison cells. And as for himself.

Charlie smoked calmly on. This was another experience, that was all.

He seemed bound to suffer in the cause of Arline Brand. Because she chanced to resemble the notorious Countess Isolde in possessing an en-

The recent capture and release of Lord Methuen by the Boers has given rise to a number of stories relating to this unlucky commander's career in the army, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Long before the Boer war began Lord Methuen was campaigning in South Africa at the head of the famous band of rough riders known as Methuen's Horse. A member of the regiment, G. L. Chesterton, has since made a reputation as a worker in the field of London journalism, and he it is who tells this anecdote of campaigning on the borders of Bechuanaland:

"When we were encamped on the big hill overlooking the Setlagoli River, not very far from Mafeking, Lord Methuen used to occupy a common bell tent, near to which slept a couple of his orderlies and myself, his field trumpeter. One dark night the Hon. 'Dick' Cotton came stumbling into camp and, endeavoring to discover the whereabouts of the commander, approached us, shouting in a high voice: 'Paul, I say, Paul, where are you?' Presently from the inside of the tent came a more sonorous sound: 'Is that you, Dick? What do you want?' The jaded wayfarer remarked: 'Do ycu know, Paul, that I asked one of your men where I could find you, and he told me to go to ---!' Without a moment's hesitation Lord Methuen replied: 'Come inside, Dick, come inside.' "
