KILLED HERSELF BY CREMATION

Mrs. Geo. Parker of Lima Committed Suicide Saturday Afternoon.

Saturday afternoon, Frances Harriet Parker, wife of George W. Parker of Lima, committed suicide in a most horrible manner.

For the past two weeks Mrs. Parker has appeared to be depressed in spirit, but had made no threats of taking her own life. There was no domestic trouble. Saturday morning Mr. Parker came to Chelsea to do some trading, and when he returned in the evening it was to find his wife a blackened corpse.

Mrs. Parker went about her household duties on that day the same as usual, and prepared dinner for herself, her little daughter, Hazel, aged 7 years, and Mr. Parker's mother who made her home with the family. After dinner all three laid down and took a nap. When the mother-in-law awoke she missed Mrs. Parker, and sent the little girl to see if she could find her. She looked in the hen house and saw a blackened object lying on the ground and thought that it was a dog. She told her grandmother what she had seen and a farm hand was called, who upon examination found that it was the remains of a woman. Mrs. Parker had taken a quantity of kerosene oil with her to the hen house, and had poured it over herself and then ignited it. Her death must have been almost instantaneous as no one heard a sound. When found the body was blackened and charred, and was doubled up on the ground with the hands clutching the soil.

A few days before Mrs. Parker had read a newspaper account of a woman pouring oil over her body and then igniting it. She remarked at the time that it was a horrible death. The incident must have made a deep impression on her, as she carried out exactly the same method of ending her life.

The funeral services were held from her late home Monday morning, and at Ann Arbor, where the remains were taken for interment, in the afternoon. Mrs. Parker's age was about 44 years.

Want $33,000 of D., Y., A. A. & J.

The Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson railway was made defendant in this suit Saturday, and the total amount of damages asked is $33,000.

Gabriel Bockries of this place asks for $10,000 damages. James S. Gorman appears as one of the attorneys for the plaintiff. It is maintained that on June 21, 1901, Mr. Bockries was employed as a helper on the construction of the road. He was assisting in carrying rails and ties. It is alleged that it was necessary to have at least 12 men to carry a rail safely, but that Bockries was ordered to take hold when less number were on hand. Owing to the heavy load, it is said, Bockries tripped and fell and the rail fell on him, causing him to be lame ever since.

The city of Ann Arbor asks for $3,000 for building of crosswalks and doing graveling between the tracks.

Mrs. Phila Harrison, widow of the late Herbert Harrison, asks for $20,000 damages for the death of her husband. Mr. Harrison was a motorman and was electrocuted on March 11th at Chelsea, when he was assisting in fixing something about the car.

Baccalaureate Address.

The Methodist church was filled Sunday evening to listen to the baccalaureate address which was delivered by Rev. A. Schoen, pastor of St. Paul's church. The speaker took for his text Joel 2:30, "And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth." He said the purpose of education is primarily to rightly develop powers, and secondarily to impart ideas. Education, said a man of ability and experience, means to draw out, not to pour in. It develops latent powers. Notice botanical development: First the tender blade, then the stalk, the ear, the glorious flower, then the full corn in the ear. The tender blade, stalk, flower and fruit of humanity surpass in beauty and worth all other growths. Its conservatories have soul for soil, our noblest men for gardeners, love for sunlight and eternal years for growth. Everything we know has latent powers. They wait development.

For the majority of you, young friends, probably school life is finished and you enter into life's school. You sail "out of the harbor, into life's ocean." You are anxious to know what the future has in store for you, what this wonderful century, just begun, will reveal to you. May I give you a word of hope and cheer and advice? Let it be this: Stand, if possible, at the very centers of causation, and the future will be readable.

The botanist can tell from seed and buds the nature and quality of the coming flowers and fruit. The naturalist can look at any collection of eggs and tell what birds are slumbering potentially within the shells. The astronomer can tell where the planets will be at any given time. Even the comet is no longer a fugitive flaming through boundless fields of space, but moves in obedience to law. Its track and velocity of movement are now determined.

The future grows out of the present, as a man grows out of the child. The present is the seed of the future. And if we know the character and quality of the seed, we shall be able to foretell the character and quality of that which comes out of the seed. Each century will have some of the characteristics of its predecessor, as children repeat the bodily motion and facial expressions of their ancestor. But each century may be distinguished for certain things as radically new as the appearance of new constellations in the heavens.

Members of the graduating class, you have walked together and with your teachers over ways that are pleasant and paths that are peace. You have grown in knowledge, you have learned to live in some of the spheres of thought. Your intellectual house has become more spacious, with windows that give outlook over history, science and literature.

You have, I trust, gained knowledge and wisdom. Knowledge and wisdom are not identical. One may know many things and not be wise, he may lack good judgment or he may not perceive the best means of accomplishing good results. No theory without practice, no true knowledge without wisdom. Combine them for your own benefit and the benefit of your surrounding, and then take an active interest in the whole world's redemption. Prove yourselves worthy of the opportunities and the trust imposed upon you.

Generations of the past would envy you what your eyes will see of the 20th century. The church of Christ brought closer together, great social problems solved, nations drawn into brotherhood and peace the world's law. They saw through a glass, darkly, you will see prophecies fulfilled and predictions as blessed realities,—realities, to which the words of our text, the words of the Lord, call attention: "And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth."

The above is but a small part of the masterly address. The Standard would have liked to publish the entire address, but lack of space forbids.

Storm at Manchester.

A severe wind, rain and electrical storm passed over Manchester between 5 and 6 o'clock Thursday evening. The roofs were torn off the Freeman House, the postoffice and Schable's grocery store. Fragments were blown through the large windows of Lehr's restaurant, the Masonic hall and Dr. Kuhl's office. The chimney and cupola of the high school building were thrown down and went through the roof. The roofs of J. F. Schable and Dr. Lynch's barn were blown off, and a hole was torn in the roof of the barn of Knopp & Mayer. A large tree in front of Mrs. Ayer's residence was blown upon the house. Mrs. Ayer was hurt but not seriously, it is hoped. Large trees in front of William Burtless' residence were blown down, and the chimney of George Haesler's residence was blown over and crushed the roof.

The roof of the Kopp & Rehfuess block was also torn off, as well as the cornice of Haesler's store.

Several wagons were overturned on Main street and several buggies were wrecked.

May be a Bridgewater Man.

Times: From a description of a body found in New York harbor, as published in a German paper, it is believed that the man was David Frech of Bridgewater township. He was a laborer and worked for farmers. In April last Notary Eugene Oesterlin secured a passport for him. He said he was going to New York where he would buy a steamer ticket for Germany, where he proposed visiting a sister residing in the Nagold oberamt, in the Black Forest. Mr. Oesterlin advised him to take all the money he did not use for the journey and buy a draft, Frech only laughed and said he would carry his money on his body and no one could get it. The description published fully tallies with that of Frech, and his acquaintances fear he has been foully dealt with. The article stated there was nothing found on the body to identify it. It had the appearance of having been in the water six weeks. He was a man convulsively inclined, and may, when in such a condition, have showed his money to fellows who quietly put him out of the way.

Odor of the Water.

The Detroit Tribune is to blame for the following:

"The mineral bath department of the Occidental hotel at Ypsilanti has been discontinued and the struggle to maintain a sanitarium there, like the Boers' fight for liberty, has failed. Had the heroic South African Dutch possessed per man the relative strength of a glass of Occidental mineral water they could have easily whipped the British empire. Had they loaded their shells with Ypsilanti hydropathy instead of dynamite and bullets, and fired it at the foe, the war had ended long ere this in a blaze of Dutch glory and an odor of ripe eggs that would have constituted a lesson to all would-be tyrants not afflicted with catarrh. But the old bath has gone, and yet Mt. Clemens possesses no more of sulphuretted health and fragrance than belched from the muzzle of the Occidental gusher of the Grecian city. But though the sanitarium has gone in fact, it will linger in fancy."

Cuban Reciprocity Bill.

Sen. McMillan says: "The senate will pass a reciprocity bill, but it will not be the reciprocity bill passed by the house. The house bill enacted into law would ruin the beet sugar industry, because it provides for a reduction of duty on refined as well as raw sugar, and refined is the only kind the beet manufacturers produce. The kind of a bill the senate will pass will provide for a reduction of about 20 per cent on raw sugar only, with safeguards so no other interests will get unwarranted advantages from it or be injured. The senate Cuban committee will likely agree on the bill when it meets Tuesday, and the day following, we will probably have a Republican conference and very soon afterward pass the bill unless the Democrats insist on making a lot of speeches."

Senator Burrows has said: "Twenty of us Republican senators are united as determinedly as ever against the reciprocity bill. The president's message hasn't caused a single desertion. Our standard of no reciprocity in sugar will stay put." "Read us out of the party if we don't surrender?" "If that's to be the policy they had better read out Spooner and Allison for voting against the ship subsidy bill. I'm unable to see where there's hope for the reciprocity bill."

Burrows is the custodian of a document signed by 15 Republican senators which reads: "We, the undersigned, having at heart the best interests of the country and the best interests of the Republican party, hereby pledge ourselves to insist on the passage of the house bill without amendment, or in lieu thereof a rebate bill."

A Reciprocity Message.

President Roosevelt on Friday sent to Congress an appeal for reciprocity with Cuba, in which he maintained that not any American industry would be menaced by such legislation, while many American industries would be benefited by it. He took the ground that this nation is bound by every consideration of honor and expediency to pass commercial measures in the interest of the island's material well-being.

He quoted a message from President Palma praying for trade concessions. Mr. Roosevelt concluded with an impassioned plea for the island, saying that this nation had made many sacrifices of men and money for Cuba and should not hesitate to make generous trade concessions. He added that the strong should help the weak; that this nation should help the island in its effort to reach prosperity. Much interest was manifested in the communication on both sides of the Capitol. When the president's secretary reached the Senate that body was in executive session. In order to receive the document the doors were reopened sufficiently long for it to be read.

The Chinese Rebellion.

Advices received from Hong Kong give details of the bombardment of Nanning by the rebel forces. It lasted over three hours and in that time from 300 to 400 of the inhabitants were either killed or wounded. After the siege the rebels, without ascertaining what damage they had done, returned to their mountain fastness, carrying with them the bodies of their slain and wounded, thus making it impossible to judge what loss they sustained.

"Boxers have been tearing up the rails and destroying the railway bridge in the vicinity of Tien Tsun and the Belgian engineers and others engaged on the railway have left their work."

Col. Lynch Arrested.

Col. Arthur Lynch, who fought with the Boers in South Africa and who in November last was elected to represent Galway in the house of commons, was arrested Wednesday morning on his arrival at New Haven, from Dieppe, France.

Col. Lynch, who was accompanied by his wife, was brought to London and was afterward taken to the Bow street police station. Subsequently Col. Lynch was arraigned on the charge of high treason and remanded until Saturday. Lieut.-Col. John Philip Nolan, nationalist, applied for the release of Col. Lynch on bail, but the magistrate said he had no power to grant the request.

Ten Killed, 30 Injured.

Nine men and one woman were killed and about 30 persons were injured in a fire which on Monday destroyed the sanitarium conducted by the St. Luke's Society, at the corner of Washburn avenue and Twenty-first street, Chicago. By far the greater portion of the patients received in the institution were those seeking cure from the drink habit and those who were addicted to the use of drugs. When the fire broke out there was on the fifth floor a number of patients suffering from delirium tremens and some who were deranged by drugs. Several of these were strapped to their beds, and it was found impossible to save them, so rapidly did the fire spread through the building.

Pennyacker Wins.

Judge Pennyacker, of Philadelphia, was nominated for governor of Pennsylvania by the Republican convention Wednesday afternoon on the first ballot. The vote was, Pennyacker, 200; Etkin, 152.

Two persons are dead and 25 injured as the result of a collision on the Southern railway at Juliette, 35 miles from Macon, Ga. The widow of Capt. A. P. Cooke, U. S. Louis Shug, a Chinaman, was twice strung up to a tree by a mob in Idaho Springs, Col., and threatened with death if he didn't leave town for good. He had attempted to run away with a white girl, Nellie Meechen.

Shot at the Rioters.

The street car men's strike in Park tucket, R. I., became so serious the militia was called out, the city officials refusing to increase the police force. Thursday afternoon a car, escorted by a squad of cavalry and filled with deputy sheriffs, was stalled on Main street by a mob. Stones crashed through the windows and a man was raised. Then a volley of shots fired by the deputies rang out.

Tanner Peterson, 12 years of age who was in the crowd, fell, having been hit by a bullet. Apparently he was the only one injured, but the incident staggered the crowd. The crowd was badly battered. A doctor who examined the Peterson boy said that he was critically injured.

The Philippine Debate.

At the opening of the session of the house Monday Mr. Cooper (Wis.) received unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution to make the Philippine civil government bill a special order from June 19 to 20 inclusive. The resolution provided for five days for general debate, beginning at 10 o'clock each day and for night sessions from 8 to 10:30 p. m.; for two days consideration, under the five-minute rule, and a final vote at 4 o'clock on Thursday, June 20. The intent is to give the widest latitude for amendment.

Tornado Kills Ten.

A tornado swept through the country 22 miles north of Lake Park, Minn., Monday, cutting a path two miles wide and three miles long. Nine farm houses were destroyed and three persons are reported dead. The church at Spangle was demolished.

Among the killed are Mrs. Herz, who lived near Voss postoffice, and Andrew Hoiv, four miles further north. Hundreds of heads of live stock were killed.

A Million Pensioners.

A Washington special says: One million pensioners on Uncle Sam's roll. This is the great roll that is likely to be soon reached. Instead of diminishing the number of pensioners is steadily increasing, and the million mark may be passed in a short time. A special statement that was made up Saturday, at the request of the commissioner, showed the total of 928,300 pensioners on the rolls April 30.

Root Assumes Responsibility.

Secretary Root has assumed full responsibility for the payment of money to Gen. Gomez by Gen. Wood during the American occupation of Cuba, and if congress asks for an explanation of the matter he stands prepared to furnish what he regards as the most convincing proofs that the payments were dictated by the wisest statesmanship.

The Cuban Question.

An effort is being made by leading administration senators to settle the Cuban controversy by leaving the whole matter in the hands of the president to negotiate a commercial treaty with Cuba, to be ratified by the senate next fall. The indications are that the compromise is meeting with satisfaction.

Out of a Job.

For having surreptitiously witnessed the naval maneuvers of the American warships from a private yacht after the navy department denied him permission to accompany the squadron, Capt. Lewis Bayley, naval attaché of the British legation at Washington, has left for England, and will not return to the United States.

CONDENSED NEWS.

Queen Wilhelmina has published a letter of thanks for the sympathy and solidarity shown during her illness.

Bennett Found Guilty.

E. T. Bennett is guilty of manslaughter in causing the death of Agnes Eberstein, of Battle Creek. This was the verdict of the jury in the circuit court in Bay City Thursday afternoon, after deliberating on the evidence for only one hour and thirty minutes.

Dr. Griswold, who is also charged with manslaughter, will next be tried. The evidence at the trial showed that the girl, whom Bennett met in Bay City and afterward met in Battle Creek, had been his constant mistress from May 5 to Dec. 31, 1901. There was then a confession by Bennett to his wife and Rev. Patchell and an attempt by Bennett, he claimed, to sever the relations.

Agnes Eberstein passed under the name of Mary Morris at the hotel where she died. She was the daughter of highly respectable parents, living on a farm near Battle Creek. She was famous at her home as a skillful horsewoman. In appearance she was of the brunette type and quite attractive.

Bennett is a former business man, once owned an interest in the Tribune of Bay City, and was for a time in the newspaper business in Minneapolis. Lately he had been selling life insurance.

Mr. Shear Suddenly Left.

Luther W. Shear, district agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co., of Milwaukee, a trustee of the First Congregational church and very prominent both in social and business circles in Muskegon, is mysteriously missing and it is claimed by the authorities is short in amounts aggregating between $75,000 and $100,000 in his accounts with the insurance company and to several prominent business men of the city. A reward of $200 is offered by Sheriff Payne for information of his whereabouts. He is charged by the authorities with forgery. It is claimed by his friends the reason for his absconding was because of his extravagant living. He had the most sumptuously appointed office in Muskegon, was the possessor of a magnificent residence and owned a palatial summer home on White lake, at Whitehall, and an expensive yacht.

An Alger Day.

The laying of the cornerstone of Alger county's new court house in Munising Saturday was successful. Many distinguished guests were present. In the parade were Masons, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, the fire department, labor unions, and 300 public school children. The cornerstone was laid with Masonic rites. Addresses were made by Gen. Alger, who was there with Mrs. Alger, Capt. Alger and wife, Hon. Timothy Nester, Hon. W. G. Mather, president Cleveland Cliffs Iron Co., and Hon. Peter White, of Marquette, who paid a glowing tribute to Gen. Alger. He said he had been told by those holding high positions in the national government that Gen. Alger was the greatest war secretary the nation ever had.

Three Perished.

A most tragic boating accident marred the Sunday pleasure at Port Huron, three lives being lost in the turbulent waters of Lake Huron during a sudden squall. The dead are Beatrice and Norma Abraham, aged respectively 14 and 8 years, daughters of James Abraham, of 2955 Omar street, and Arthur Martin, their cousin, aged 20 years.

The distressing affair occurred just off Edison beach, with Port Huron almost in sight of the victims and in only about three feet of water. Arthur Martin is a nephew of James Abraham and came from England about three months ago, making his home with the Abraham family. In the afternoon he proceeded to take his two little cousins out for a boat ride in a skiff belonging to the family.

A Narrow Escape.

Two letters to Miss Mae Smith from Blanche Hartrauf, of Chicago, caused her to leave her home in Saginaw, Mich., and come to Chicago to accept a position as parlor maid at a salary of $10 a week but Detectives Mulcahy and Sheehan arrested both women at the Michigan Central station, frustrating the plan. Blanche Hartrauf was leading the innocent and unsuspecting 18-year-old maiden away when the police interfered. The Hartrauf woman is a prisoner and will be tried June 19. Miss Smith is at the Young Woman's Christian Association, and will remain there until Inspector Layvin secures transportation for her to go home.

McGarry Guilty.

Thomas McGarry, the Grand Rapids lawyer, who acted as advisor for Briber Salisbury in the notorious Grand Rapids water deal, was found guilty by the jury in Allegan Tuesday. His counsel was given a leave of 30 days in which to file a bill of exceptions. The most important points of the court's charge were that the jury should first decide whether the $25,000 and $75,000 transactions were, in furtherance of the same deal and whether the acts and sayings of others before and after the alleged offense had direct bearing on the matter in hand before taking them into account or excluding them from their deliberations.

Poor and Suffering.

Superintendent of the Poor W. H. Wicand found a family in Batavia living in an old barn and in fearfully destitute circumstances. They were entirely out of provisions and practically naked. One side of the room they lived in was a corn crib and during the recent storms the family took refuge nights at a neighboring house. There were six children, between the ages of 2 and 12. Lack of management was the cause of their extreme destitution. They were provided with a house to live in by a kind-hearted neighbor.

Damage by Storm.

Reports from various parts of the state show that Thursday night's storm was quite general and showed no partiality in dispensing its unwholesome favors. So far three fatalities have been reported. Charles Gardener, who lived three miles from Munith, was killed by lightning, and a horse at his side escaped injury. At Ensey a woman named Tapping was reported killed. During the storm the barn on the farm of Edward Osborne, of Merritt, Bay County, was blown down and Osborne caught in the wreck and killed. Lightning struck the home of Albert Miller, Moulton township, doing considerable damage, but not injuring the inmates. The tornado swept through, one and one-half miles east of Vassar, carried T. M. Jones' barn entirely away, leaving 70 sheep unhurt; blew another barn off foundations and tore large fruit trees out by the roots. Hundreds of telephone poles are lying across the roads.

Howard Citjans thought they were being showered with gifts from the sea as the reports from that place say the hail stones measured six inches in circumference. Hundreds of window panes were broken and at Whitefish lake the resort was practically put out of business. At Jackson and vicinity the loss by the storm will reach several thousands of dollars. The Hawks-Augus line was put out of business for some time, and nearly a hundred telephones ruined. In the vicinity of Grand Ledge the storm assumed the proportions of a cyclone, and Burns' woods were demolished for half a mile. When the wind struck the clearing, buildings and fences were carried away like feathers. In the village of Manchester a number of buildings were unroofed, but no one was injured. Coral reports hail stones larger than base balls and the destruction of much property. Reports from scores of other places make it safe to estimate the loss by the storm in the state at not less than $100,000. At Sturgis the gale struck the Wallace shows as the performance was about to begin, blowing down the circus canvas and badly frightening the audience and slightly injuring a number. Damages about $5,000.

Committed Suicide.

James Smith, who resided with his son, Joseph Smith, in Edwards township for two months, committed suicide by taking a white powder. He came to West Branch about 9 o'clock and drew a check on the bank for his son amounting to $1,000, and took it home with him, and gave the pocketbook which contained it to his daughter-in-law and went to the water pail and put a white powder in a cup and drank the contents. He went out and walked up and down in front of the house for a while, finally sitting down on a log. A young man came by and he told him he did not feel well and wanted the young man to stay with him. He soon had five or six convulsions and died in one of them. He had appeared well and happy and had only come from Oshkosh, Wis., two months ago. His son and family have always been on the best of terms with him. He was 67 years old.

The G. A. R.

The encampment of the G. A. R. at Pontiac was one of the most successful held in years. The report of the assistant adjutant-general shows that during the year ending Dec. 31 there was a loss in membership of 524. Of this number there were 413 deaths. The aggregate loss of the year was 1,046.

Dec. 31 there were 348 posts in the state, with an aggregate membership of 14,496. June 30 preceding there were 364 posts and 14,534 members. The estimated value of the department and post property in the state is $87,500.99. Edward Anthony, of Negaunee, was elected Department Commander and L. D. VanKleeck, of Pontiac, was elected senior vice department commander.

The Next Encampment.

The next encampment will be held at Muskegon.

The Crops.

The monthly crop report issued by Secretary of State Warner Tuesday shows that the condition of wheat in Michigan as compared with the average year is 88; corn, 88; oats, 93. The damage to wheat by the Hessian fly is estimated at 5 per cent. The acreage of corn as compared with last year is 101 per cent, and of potatoes 97 per cent. The prospect for apples is 78 per cent, and of peaches 68 per cent. The peaches in southwestern Michigan were damaged by frost, but those in the northern part of the state were unharmed.

Searched the Postmaster.

Mrs. Christina Elde, aged 48, has been brought from Union City and placed in the county jail, Coldwater, on complaint of the Union City postmaster, who says she continually threatens his life if he does not hand her out a letter every time she inquires. She was once sent to the asylum for insane, but was later pronounced sane, and was later pronounced sane, but they have reported that they cannot declare her insane.

The Next Meeting of the Michigan Conference.

The next meeting of the Michigan conference of the Lutheran joint synod of Ohio will be held at Detroit in January.

The Augustana Lutheran synod has opened its sessions at Ishpeming. One hundred ministers and one hundred laymen from all parts of the United States are in attendance.

The strike of carpenters in the Bay Cities has been settled and the men returned to work. The contractors grant an eight-hour day at 30 cents an hour and the carpenters agree to do no contracting.

CHAPTER X.

The Game of Fox and Geese.

Events were crowding upon each other's heels. Charlie, while abroad, had seen something that gave him quite a start. This was nothing more nor less than a lovely woman with golden hair and blue eyes in a carriage, taking an airing, while at her side, stiff and stern-looking, the baron sat. Charlie bowed politely. The countess gave him a look of curiosity and of her ravishing smiles. So she passed out of his life—lucky man.

The sight of Charlie recalled to the baron's mind the promise he had made with regard to Capt. Brand.

Accordingly he took advantage of his first hour off to set the wires in motion, and learn certain facts regarding the worthy captain.

Charlie, relying on the baron to carry out the captain, had made arrangements for sailing upon the next trans-Atlantic steamer.

He had engaged passage for Arline, her companion, Artemus and himself. The captain, having paid a man to keep upon Stuart's track, found out what was in the wind.

He learned that the crisis had arrived. Whatever he proposed doing must be put through with all possible speed, since, ere many hours elapsed, those against whom his schemes were directed would be upon the sea, and, perhaps, beyond his reach.

Artemus had heard enough to know the three schemers were planning to do his friend an evil turn, but, strain his ears as he would, he had not been able to catch the particulars of the game, owing to certain sounds in the hotel that muffled even the bold voices of Captain Brand's champagne-bibbing friends.

All he could do was to warn Stuart on general principles, and it can be set down as an assured fact that he carried out this dramatic little episode quite to the queen's taste.

It would not have been Artemus otherwise.

Charlie promised to keep his weather-eye open for squalls.

He hoped his early departure from Antwerp would serve to entirely disconcert the beggarly plans of his enemies, and leave the fellow in the lurch.

About this time there was considerable hustling being done among the various forces circling around Arline Brand, just as the planets whirl about their central sun.

The baron tried to drive from his mind the startling phantoms that had been conjured into being by the mysterious power of Isolda, Countess of Brabant, and, as this could only be done by means of work, he gave himself up to the mission of the hour with redoubled zeal.

It was really a question what the scramble would result in—whether Charlie or the redoubtable captain would come out of it in creditable shape, and how Artemus might fare in the shuffle.

Lady Arline had an interview with her alleged papa, during which she announced her determination of crossing the Atlantic on business, and that she had provided liberally for him during her absence, as he would find upon applying in person to her banker in London.

The interview was possibly not devoid of dramatic features. Artemus was on guard near by, and heard the old sea dog blustering more or less in his usual way.

But he had evidently lost much of the power he formerly possessed over Lady Arline. He came forth from the rooms looking like an enraged hyena, because diplomacy had forced him to bottle up his wrath.

To Artemus Charlie delegated the task of seeing Lady Arline and her maid aboard the ocean greyhound, where he would join them later.

It was night again. Time and tide wait for no man, and ocean steamers have to put out very frequently at unreasonable hours, in order to cross the bar on the flood.

The baron and Captain Brand played a game of cross-purposes, as it were, for, while the ex-sailor shadowed Charlie with intentions that were both dark and desperate, he was, at the same time, under the surveillance of Peterhoff's emissary—the baron himself being too busily employed catering to the comfort of his fair prisoner—in reality his captor—to personally inject his individuality into the game.

Captain Brand knew he was followed, and perhaps could give a rough guess as to the why and wherefore.

But it was not his nature to be despondent.

He believed in utilizing whatever came in his way as one of the forces that might bring success.

When a man can thus twist threatening disasters into favoring factors he is indeed hard to beat in the game of life.

Charlie was feeling unusually bold and light-hearted on this night, which he proposed would be his last on European soil.

Presently he expected to be on board a stanch German liner, viewing the low shores of the old world with complacency—for at his side would be Lady Arline; and left behind as a memory of the dead past, such persons as the professor and his wife, Baron Peterhoff, Isolda, Countess Brabant, and Captain Brand of the Hespasia.

He intended giving Capt. Brand the full worth of his money, and then, by a duke, dropping him in some section of old Antwerp, while he himself took a fly and drove to the landing stage in time to catch the steamer.

Perhaps this might have been carried out had circumstances not united to arrange events in the captain's favor.

Charlie had his fun. He dragged his persistent pursuer over a good part of Antwerp—now they were on foot and anon chasing in vehicles at a pace to set the staid old burghers agog with surprise and consternation.

Outside a desire to have a little sport with his friend, the captain, his sole purpose in leading Brand this wild-goose chase was to keep his attention upon himself, while Lady Arline and Artemus left the hotel; for somehow Charlie had a vague fear lest the resourceful ex-sailor might use force to prevent his supposed daughter from departing, advancing some flaring plea that her mind was affected and having hired experts, who would perhaps decree that she should be incarcerated in an asylum.

These things might appear ridiculous, but such happenings have come to pass ere now, and he chanced to have personal knowledge of at least one similar case.

Whether or not Charlie were foolish in thus conjuring up phantoms that could not exist, was a question that should not be decided hastily.

He believed Brand to be a desperate man, against whom he could as yet hardly appeal to the law, since Arline would not give her consent.

He was convinced that Brand did not desire the heiress to get beyond his reach, and would hardly hesitate at any end in order to hold her until his sinister plans could be worked out.

Hence it was, after all, in a spirit of self-sacrifice that Charlie undertook to have a little fun with Capt. Brand, and led him this fine chase up and down the crooked streets of Antwerp.

All would have been well but for two cronies of Brand. They chanced to be standing at a dark corner where the other had agreed to meet them, and, hearing his signals, sprang upon Charlie ere he comprehended his danger.

As a result he was struck senseless by a blow from some blunt weapon.

When Capt. Brand arrived on the scene his first act was to sprinkle a powdery white pigment in the young man's hair, to give him the appearance of age, and to smear his face with a little street dirt in order to disguise his features.

Then, for the benefit of the man whom he knew hovered near by, a little one-act drama was carried out, the two men chasing Brand hither and yon—then, as the baron's spy came in sight, two men running away, while a form lay on the street.

It worked like a charm. The emissary of Baron Peterhoff hastened up as people began to open the windows of houses to learn what the disturbance might mean. There he found one who appeared to be the old fellow he had been set to watch.

The man called a vehicle, placed the limp figure in its interior, entered himself, and then started to report the astonishing result of his espionage to Baron Peterhoff himself.

While Capt. Brand, rejoining his confederates down the shady street, set off in hot haste to get aboard the steamer, which, in another hour or so, would be moving down the River Scheldt, bound for the far-off distant shores of America.

Artemus stood on the hurricane deck of the great Red D ocean liner and looked back in the morning sunlight to the distant and fast-receding coast of Belgium.

Hemeward bound! There is always a pleasure in this thought and Artemus experienced it with enthusiasm.

So far as he knew, Charlie's plans had progressed all right, the ogre was left behind, lamenting in the land of the Belgians, and clear sailing seemed ahead.

Then his thoughts ran back to the events of the previous night. He chuckled to remember the adroitness with which he had seen Lady Arline, her companion and their luggage on board the waiting steamer, while Charlie was leading the ogre a wild-goose chase around Antwerp, partly to amuse himself and at the same time keep Brand occupied up to near the sailing time.

By the way, where was Charlie? It was strange that he failed to show up in time to see the last of Belgium's shores.

Lady Arline and her companion were walking the deck with jersey and golf cape to keep off the stinging chill.

"I'll go and arouse the sluggard," said Artemus to himself. "His little jaunt about town must have worn him out—not the first case of his kind, I rather guess," with a sinister leer at his wit.

So he went below. The door of Charlie's stateroom was just opposite his own—a single step across the little passage.

As he approached he heard the sounds of loud snoring from within.

On the spur of the moment he decided to arouse his friend with a sudden shout, or by the advent of a convenient shoe tossed across the little room. Artemus had never wholly forgotten his college days, when he gained the reputation of being the champion practical joker of his class.

So he quietly opened the door, which was conveniently unlocked.

Through the bull's-eye windows enough of the morning light crept to allow a fair survey of the miniature apartment.

One of the first things Artemus saw was a shoe that had been tossed aside.

As he seized upon it eagerly, he failed to note its generous proportions as contrasted with the neat footgear which Charlie Stuart affected—such trifles do not impress themselves upon the mind when weightier things are demanding recognition.

Now for a carter shot. He turned his attention to the lower berth, which was occupied by a human form.

Just then the nasal sounds came to a sudden stop with a savage snort, and the sleeper whirled over on his side.

The act brought his face directly within range of the morning light that struggled through the small openings beyond.

No wonder Artemus crouched there as if frozen. Talk about the magic touch of the genii! When had such a wonderful transformation ever taken place before?

For one to retire as Prince Charlie Stuart, gay, handsome and debonaire, to awaken in the guise of grim and grizzled old Captain Brand was a mystery that almost paralyzed the seeker after sensations.

Artemus took one last fearsome look at the smooth and red physiognomy of the sleeper, passed out, and then softly closed the door.

Only when safe within his own room did he give vent to his over-wrought feelings in a whistle.

"Great Jupiter! That beats everything I ever saw. Instead of Charlie—the ogre! What does it mean? There is treachery afoot. I seem to detect it in the very air around. But the question arises, where is Charlie? And shall I have to take his place as her warrior bold, and will it be necessary for me to give up my liberty?"

Poor fellow! He did not know whether to look on it as a huge joke or a grim reality.

He thought of warning Arline; she ought to know her dear papa was on board, and that he had refused to break the paternal bonds that had become so very strong since his return from exile.

Artemus buckled on his armor. If he was to be pitted against the old ogre, it would be a pretty fight. Capt. Brand might have succeeded in outwitting Charlie, but he too frank for deep diplomacy, who was he would find quite another thing when he ran up against the new knight who had shied his castor into the ring.

Ah! A gentle tap at the door. Artemus almost fell over himself in his eagerness to open a satchel and clutch a little affair of steel and nickel which he carried there, and armed with which he called:

"Come!" The door opened and a figure whisked in, immediately closing the same again.

Artemus gave a cry—the half-raised arm fell useless at his side. There was more witchery. He had expected the old ogre, armed with a shoe, and bent upon turning the tables upon him.

Instead he saw—why, Charlie, of course, though at first Artemus reckoned it his ghost! Charlie, with a finger pressed mysteriously on his lips, a la Artemus' favorite style of communicating a secret, and his face wreathed in what appeared to be a broad grin.

At any rate, Barnaby was delighted to see him in the flesh, and as soon as he could get his wits into thinking order he dropped the weapon and held out an eager hand.

"This is a treat, my dear boy—after seeing that grim old Trojan in your bunk. What have you done? Brought him aboard a prisoner, I reckon? Ah! I didn't give you enough credit, I fear. You see, my first impression was he had outwitted you and turned the tables on you."

Artemus was boiling over with curiosity regarding what had taken place ashore, especially when his friend declared, with a wry face, that Capt. Brand had indeed come near proving too much for him.

The story was soon told. (To be continued.)

KING OF SWEDEN AND NORWAY.

Oscar One of the Best Rulers Who Ever Sat Upon a Throne.

If all earthly rulers and potentates were of the character and temper of King Oscar of Sweden, the line about the uneasy heads that wear crowns would lose a good part of its significance. King Oscar is noted as being not only one of the best monarchs who ever sat upon a throne, but as one of the handsomest, most urbane and courtly of men. Nearly, if not quite, six feet six inches tall, finely built and stately, like King Saul, he towers "head and shoulders" above most of his subjects. Now nearly seventy years old, for thirty years he has been the beloved ruler of the sturdy northmen. The king is a deeply religious man, but his consort, the queen, is even more devout. She is intensely religious, sympathizing with every good effort, while his second son, Prince Bernadotte, is noted throughout Europe for his philanthropy and religious zeal. He is the president of the Young Men's Christian Association of Stockholm, too chairman of a missionary society, and of many like institutions. He has himself organized a mission to the Lapps, to whom he preaches the gospel, as he frequently does to others when he has an opportunity. When it is remembered that King Oscar is the grandson of Bernadotte, a well-known marshal of the first Napoleon, and the great grandson of the Empress Josephine, whose daughter by her first husband married Bernadotte, the religious character of this royal family may seem the more remarkable. King Oscar has great literary gifts; he has published more than one volume of verses, and he is never happier than when surrounded by literary people.

Shipping in Hot Weather

From what has recently transpired at the Chicago Stock Yards it becomes very apparent that great care should be taken in the manner of shipping fat hogs during heated spells of weather.

Last week a few exceptionally hot days were experienced and the percentage of humidity was out of the common which made suffering extreme. The result so far as animals was concerned seemed greatest amongst hogs.

It is estimated that on Monday and Tuesday not less than ten thousand dollars worth of dead hogs was pulled out of railroad cars at the yards. The hogs died of suffocation from overloading and heat referred to. It is likely that but few would have been lost had such fat animals been given more room in the cars during hot weather. It certainly seems that when hogs are selling at such high prices that a less number might profitably be consigned to each car.

Another point has been brought to our attention in this connection and that is that the practice of bedding shipped hogs may have a good deal to do with deaths in hot weather. Where straw or other "long litter" is used in hot weather and the hogs are crowded in the car the bedding becomes foul and gives off ammonia gas which is very suffocating under the circumstances and may be the real cause of the deaths referred to. Certain it is that cholera or other disease was not present among the dead hogs. They died from overheating and suffocation and were in a condition from heavy feeding and lack of exercise to make them peculiarly liable to die under such circumstances as those in which they were placed. For the bedding of hog cars straw or hay should not be used and an old shipper tells us that he considers clean sand the best thing to use as it is dry, gives the hogs footing and does not give off so much ammonia. We do not know that he is correct in the latter statement but if the main object be to keep down ammonia gas then the best thing to use would be gypsum (land plaster) which is cheap and at the same time has a wonderful affinity for water and prevents evolution of ammonia better than anything else that could be cheaply employed. Sand and gypsum mixed together in equal parts would be most suitable.

Corn Crops of the World.

Recently the United States Department of Agriculture issued a report on the corn crops of the world for the five years 1896 to 1900 inclusive. The striking fact about it is that the yield has not materially increased, though the demand for corn for commercial purposes is constantly on the increase.

During the entire five years the corn crop of North America has run from 2,900,000,000 to about 2,400,000,000 bushels. In 1896 was the largest crop, namely, 2,384,000,000, so far as reported. Allowing 16,000,000 for the regions not reporting (Central America, the West Indies, etc.), we have a crop of about 2,400,000,000 bushels. Try as they would, the farmers of North America have never since been able to come very near that high water mark. The corn crop of South America runs anywhere from 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels, according to the season. The usual yield of corn in Europe is approximately from 400,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels. The African product amounts to about 30,000,000 bushels annually, and the Australasian crop to only about 10,000,000. The yield for the whole world runs from 2,600,000,000 bushels to about 3,000,000,000 bushels, stating the yield in general terms. While the government reports give us statistics down to the thousands of bushels, yet it is known that corn is raised in many countries that furnish no statistics, such as China. The United States is the great corn producer of the world, and is credited with more than two-thirds of that grain entering the channels of commerce. Corn statistics of the last few years seem to indicate that the corn crop of this country and of the world cannot be easily increased.

Influence of Food Upon Firmness of Bacon

Prof. G. E. Day of the Canadian station at Guelph, referring to an experiment carried on at the farm, says: Hogs that have had plenty of exercise and a mixed diet, or that have received a reasonable allowance of dairy by-products and a mixed grain ration, until they are over 100 pounds in live weight, can be finished on corn without injury to the quality of bacon.

Close confinement in pens from birth to time of marketing has a tendency to injure the quality of bacon, though the effect is not always well marked. The national use of dairy by-products tends to produce bacon of excellent quality and seems to compensate largely for lack of exercise.

Unthrifty, unfinished hogs, or those that have been kept on a mere maintenance ration to keep them from becoming too heavy while holding for a rise in prices or other reasons, have a marked tendency to softness. Exclusive corn feeding during a somewhat extended period has given very unsatisfactory gains and has produced bacon of very soft, undesirable quality.

The mixing of middlings with corn to the extent of two-thirds of the ration at the commencement and one-third at the close of the feeding period has not been successful in counteracting the bad effects of corn, the bacon thus produced being soft and generally undesirable. Barley, to the extent of at least half the ration, seems to have an influence in mitigating the effect of corn. Barley, either alone or in conjunction with oats or middlings, has produced bacon of first-class quality. Peas appear to have an influence similar to barley. So far as our work has gone, roots have had no injurious effect upon the firmness of bacon.

Poultry Briefs

In the commercial world bad management and poor business methods are the causes of many failures. The same is true of poultry enterprises. Bad management usually consists in about no management at all, the keeper having somehow got the idea that poultry raising consists in getting a good place for the hens to stay and putting a large number of hens into the said place, expecting that thereafter the fowls will look after themselves. The poor business methods consist in not keeping account of the purchases or sales or of the egg production of the fowls.

Perseverance and patience are the requisites for the successful management of a poultry establishment. The same is true of a flock of fowls on the farm. The new poultry raiser will certainly meet with some disasters due to his inexperience. He will kill his chicks with too low temperature if he is running an incubator or with too much grease if he is using an old hen. Or perhaps he will forget to slat them up and they will be found dead in the morning, the cats, skunks or rats having got at them during the night. We have known a very large number of chicks drowned by sudden thunder showers. It would take too much space to relate the various mishaps that the amateur stands a chance of encountering. In the midst of these he must persevere. If at the end of the first year he figures up his accounts and finds that every fowl he has raised has cost him more than it would have cost him if purchased in the open market, let him not be discouraged. He is learning how.

Tankage.

From Farmers' Review: In your issue of the 23d of April we notice an article on page 306 on "Tankage." We are pleased to note that your paper is publishing some information regarding this subject, as we believe it is of very great importance to stock raisers. Believing that you wish any articles published in your paper to be reliable, we wish to give you some facts about tankage for feeding live stock:

Tankage for feeding purposes is not the ordinary fertilizer tankage. It must be tankage from the cooking of only meat scraps and bones. There are only two different kinds of tankages—one is unfit for feeding purposes and the other is a very nutritious food. The usual term of No. 1 and No. 2 tankage simply indicates the differ-

Now that the hen is considered of enough importance to be the object of trust operations on a considerable scale, the poultryman has a fine opportunity to make the trust magnates trouble. If the men behind the money bags want to pay high prices for fowl meat they should not be stinted in their supplies. Keep the sitting hens and the incubators at work.

In the commercial world bad management and poor business methods are the causes of many failures. The same is true of poultry enterprises. Bad management usually consists in about no management at all, the keeper having somehow got the idea that poultry raising consists in getting a good place for the hens to stay and putting a large number of hens into the said place, expecting that thereafter the fowls will look after themselves. The poor business methods consist in not keeping account of the purchases or sales or of the egg production of the fowls.

Perseverance and patience are the requisites for the successful management of a poultry establishment. The same is true of a flock of fowls on the farm. The new poultry raiser will certainly meet with some disasters due to his inexperience. He will kill his chicks with too low temperature if he is running an incubator or with too much grease if he is using an old hen. Or perhaps he will forget to slat them up and they will be found dead in the morning, the cats, skunks or rats having got at them during the night. We have known a very large number of chicks drowned by sudden thunder showers. It would take too much space to relate the various mishaps that the amateur stands a chance of encountering. In the midst of these he must persevere. If at the end of the first year he figures up his accounts and finds that every fowl he has raised has cost him more than it would have cost him if purchased in the open market, let him not be discouraged. He is learning how.

When John Casey, former resident of Milwaukee, but for a number of years a wandering laborer, says the Economical, Sentinel, was informed that there was a cash credit of $10,000 waiting for him in the hands of the Milwaukee probate judge he remarked: "It's rather sudden, but I guess I know enough now to hold onto money when I get it." This would imply that Mr. Casey has at some time in his career as a bridge carpenter learned a lesson. It tells a story of money that he did not "hold onto." It speaks of many days of hard work following one another in rapid succession, and they, in turn, giving place to other days when there was no work and no money, because the money had been spent—perhaps unwisely—as it was received. But Mr. Casey need not feel lonesome. With his $10,000 in bank he can walk down the streets and find other men who did not "hold onto" their money. Some of them managed to save a part of their earnings, while others saved nothing. But every man of them all let go of money that he afterward regretted spending, even when he felt at the time it was going that he was getting its worth in return. If it is a fact that Mr. Casey has learned "how to hold onto" his money he must have learned how to get along without many things that make life really worth living. It would be better if he would determine to spend judiciously, having invested his funds to the best advantage, continuing to work meanwhile to increase his store. Above all things, he should buy those things which a normal, intelligent man requires to fill out his days with profit.

A child of the city once upon a time was sent into the country by well-intentioned persons. The Cow's Consent says the New York Post, but she did not appreciate rural delights, and soon returned to her native element of brick and flagging. Being questioned one day concerning her discontent while in the country, she cried out: "Why, they don't even get their milk out of nice, clean cans; they squeeze it out of an old cow." They may still have to "squeeze it out of an old cow," but the manner of the squeezing is presently to be more in keeping with urban ideas of progress. Or, perhaps it is. Men have long been at work on schemes for milking cows by process instead of by hand, but their efforts have not hitherto been crowned with any great measure of success. A man in Oskaloosa, Ia., has now, however, devised something which is expected to fill the bill. A flexible tube is connected at one end with the can and at the other with the udder of the cow by means of four teat cups. A person with an operating suction pump does the rest. It is all very simple, and the picture of the apparatus looks all right. In the picture there is a cow who has a calm and placid expression on her face. This leads one to believe that the inventor consulted the cow before he put forward his invention. If he did, it may be that no further news of a sensational character will come from Oskaloosa. But if the picture is misleading, and the cow is yet to be heard from, it would seem unwise to pass judgment on the invention in the meantime.

Zeal in the prevention of cruelty to animals is commendable, but sometimes it gets one into a ridiculous predicament. Instance: A kind old lady staying at a New York hotel called a cab, and the driver drew up to the door and gave a jerk to free his reins from the horse's tail. Now the horse was old and had lost what hair his tail naturally wore, and the driver had replaced it with an artificial switch skillfully tied on. The jerk on the reins pulled the tail off, and the old lady shrieked in horror at such an exhibition of what she supposed was cruelty, and then summoned a policeman to arrest the inhuman brute. When she was told what had happened, she adjusted her false front, which had got away in her excitement, and called another cab, declaring that she would not ride behind a horse that wore another horse's hair where his own ought to grow.

It is a reproach to the traditional inventiveness of the Yankee that no one has yet devised an appliance for keeping the electric trolley upon the wire while crossing railroad tracks. In several cities a very large percentage of fatalities on the electric lines is due to the misplacement of the trolley, leaving cars helpless in front of advancing locomotives. A recent accident in Milwaukee is only one of a long list due to the same cause.

The automobile, which the Chelsea Manufacturing Co. has been working on, has made several quite satisfactory runs this week, and when a few minor changes have been made will be ready for business. A full description of the machine, which is a beauty, will be given our readers within a short time.

Local talent at Jackson, under direction of Warren Lombard, will produce the comic opera Ermine, Thursday and Friday of this week for the benefit of the Associated Charities. They also give a matinee on Saturday. The chorus consists of over fifty persons, and the opera is full of fun and beautiful and catchy music. Quite a number of Chelsea people contemplate going as cars now run so they can return the same evening. Any one desiring to arrange for seats can have them reserved without extra charge by calling on A. W. Wilkinson or H. H. Avery. The price of admission has been placed at fifty cents, about one third the usual price for productions of this order.

Sunday afternoon Charles Clark of Lyndon was driving a team of colts into the barn belonging to Mrs. Baner, on south Main street, when lightning struck the building scaring the team so that they started off on the dead run, trampling on Mr. Clark and bruising him up considerably. He is able to be around but is quite sore as a result of the accident.

The storm of Saturday disabled the power houses of the Hawks-Angus line at Michigan Center and Francisco. After 5 o'clock Saturday, there were no more cars until Sunday morning. There was no extra car run Sunday between Jackson and Grass Lake, but the other cars were running on time, most of the day. Sunday afternoon the storm got in its work at Detroit, and the Hawks-Angus cars were not running into Detroit Monday.

If you have anything in the produce, grain or stock line the Chelsea buyers will pay you the following prices today: Wheat 74 cents; rye 54 cents; oats 42 cents; corn 28 cents; beans $1.20 for 60 pounds; clover seed $4.00; potatoes 35 cents; beef cattle 3 to 5 cents; veal calves 4 1/2 to 5 cents; live hogs $6.25 to $6.50; sheep 3 to 4 cents; lambs 4 to 5 cents; chickens 7 cents; fowls 6 cents; hides 5 cents; pelts sheared 10 to 12 cents; pelts good 25 cents to $1.00; eggs 14 cents; butter 15 cents.

Chelsea has been very fortunate during the hard storms of the past week. While reports of considerable damage to orchards are reported from around here, yet this section got off nearly free of damage. Lightning struck the barn of R. A. Snyder during the storm of Thursday, doing but slight damage. Saturday afternoon lightning struck the flagstaff on the new Chelsea Savings Bank building taking out a splinter about the size of a man's finger and about three feet long, but doing no further damage to the building.

The Michigan Central will put on the new Grand Rapids train, which was installed Sunday, a combination parlor and observation car and sleeper which will embody all the latest improvements in passenger car construction, including staterooms, parlors provided with easy chairs, and at one end a large open platform twenty feet square for observation. The car will be beautifully finished in handsome woods, and it is expected it will surpass in beauty and convenience, anything now in use on the railroads of the country in the general passenger service.

Montana Girl Puzzles Students of Humanity

Erratic in everything that characterizes a normal human being, with vice in all of its horrifying attendants as an ideal, hungering for fame as a man-eating tiger does human blood, Mary Elizabeth MacLane has made her sudden appearance upon the literary stage.

"I would as soon tell a lie as eat my dinner," says this morbid literary paragon. "In fact, I am going to the devil as fast as I can. Some call it the demitison bow-wow—it's all the same. After I am dead I shall be herded along with the goats."

Good-looking in appearance, in spite of the fact, as she declares, that she has graduated from every school of evil that has been recorded on the calendar of crime, Miss MacLane is apathetic in disposition and slow in the very speech in which she declares herself a liar, a thief, in short a lover of everything that is evil. She is of medium height, slender of build, with light brown hair, and has a peculiar, cold expression in her eyes that defies descriptive powers.

The book which owes its origin to her pen is entitled "The Story of Mary MacLane." When or where she wrote it no one but herself knows. She makes her home with her mother, sister and stepfather, who reside on the fashionable street of Butte. From her very childhood Mary has been an enigma to her mother, who herself states that she never understood her girl. What Miss MacLane cares for the ones who brought her into this world may be readily inferred from her own statements. "My mother," said she, "is a perfect stranger to me. She does not understand me. She is nothing to me. My father was the acme of selfishness."

In answer to the question whether she would not miss her mother were she taken away, she replied: "Well, I suppose I would miss her; I would miss that telegraph pole which has been standing there for years if it were taken away."

Her usual way of addressing a stranger is thus: "I am a genius. I care nothing for your opinion; you are nothing to me. You have only a glass heart, and any one can see through you; but I am a genius. That is sufficient. Nobody understands me, but I understand myself. I know myself. Is that not enough? I have attained an egotism that is rare, indeed. All this constitutes oddity, and I am quite, quite odd. But I am alone—alone, for nobody understands me. A genius is never understood. It has always been so, and it always will be so."

Why this authoress attributes to herself so many horrifying vices is inexplicable, for she lives a quiet, uneventful life. Yet in a tone such as one describes the state of the weather she declares that she would like to steal something or kill some one.

To be eccentric seems to be the aim of her life. Some declare that she is insane, others that she is a dissembler, and still others that she is simply taking this strange course to get herself before the world. That she has a morbid disposition is very true, for every day she takes a walk to an abandoned shaft, where she loves, she says, to gaze into the "deep, still darkness below."

"The MacLanes are a strange family," says she. "I have an aunt from whom I inherit my nature. She was not a genius, but her life was one bitter disappointment from beginning to end, and so will mine be."

Yet she is very willing to be unhappy, she declares, and in the very same breath says: "There is no happiness for me. I cannot get away from myself. I am bound."

From the time she was 13 years old her history is thus told in her own words: "From 1 to 13 years I was a terror; from 13 to 14 years I was a person; from 14 to 15 years I was a young person; from 15 to 16 I was a paragon; from 16 to 17 I was a perfect lady; from 17 to 18 I was an old maid, and from 18 to 19 I was a genius; these other characteristics were simply a veneer."

"There is one plague that I should have added to my litany, and that is: 'Good devil, deliver me from the newspapers.'"

What Miss MacLane means by a perfect lady, of which she has written so often in her book, is thus answered: "A perfect lady is one that wears a silk petticoat and calls on her friends and sips tea and eats little cakes, all the while talking about—oh, such shocking things—in a tragical whisper."

"I want fame," says Mary MacLane. "I want to write—to write such things as compel the admiration of the world at large—such things as are written but once in years; things subtly but distinctly different from the books written every day. I can do this. Let me but strike the world in a vulnerable spot and I can take it by storm. Let me but win my spurs, and then, my good people, you will see me, a woman kind and young, valiantly astride a charger, riding down the world with fame following at the charger's heels, and the multitudes agape."

Miss MacLane does not expect to realize a fortune from the sale of her book, which, she says, is a "portrayal" of her soul; a "communion" with her inner self during a period of three months.

Stopping Damage Claims.

"Do you see that long crack down the side of that building?" inquired the official photographer of the subway. We were standing in an excavation sixty feet below the surface of the street, and the bare wall of a building towered 150 feet above. "Suppose the owners claimed that the excavations here had caused that crack. I would go over my photographs taken here before the work was begun at all, and I would show a picture of that building with the same crack in it. I have taken hundreds of pictures just as a matter of record to show how buildings, streets, sidewalks, etc., looked before we began work, and how these have actually been affected by the excavation." You would be surprised at the number of damage claims which we can stop in just this way.

Education of Statesmen.

The President is forty-four years old, a lawyer, and a graduate of Harvard. Secretary Hay is sixty-four, a literary man, and a graduate of Brown. Secretary Shaw is fifty-four, a graduate of Cornell College, Iowa, and a lawyer. Secretary Root is fifty-seven, a graduate of Hamilton, and a lawyer. Attorney-General Knox is fifty, and a graduate of Mt. Union College, Ohio. Postmaster-General Payne is sixty, is a business man, and received an academic education, as did Secretary Hitchcock, who is sixty-seven, and also a business man. Secretary Moody is forty-nine, a lawyer and a graduate of Harvard. Secretary Wilson was born in Scotland, received an academic education, and is a farmer.

Longevity of Peacocks.

Lady Warwick has a peacock which is believed to be more than 100 years old. A writer in Country Life says: "A friend told me he has had the same peacocks for fifty years. How old they were when he had them first he did not know."

The least man is an essential part of God's great plan.

with many branches. Under the tree are plainly shown the figure of a man and a woman, and two of the branches of the tree, one on each side, are sinuous in form and terminate in a well-defined serpent's head.

The lace, which is of silk, is estimated to be more than 900 years old.

Purifying Daws a City.

J. H. Ross, the young politician from the Northwest Territory of Canada, who was not long ago appointed lieutenant governor of the Yukon province, has been showing extraordinary vigor since he went to Dawson City. He has now issued an ordinance abolishing all the gambling-houses in his capital, and is steadily backed in this policy by the Dominion government.

His One Enemy.

Edward Everett Hale said at the celebration of his eightieth birthday last month, "I never had but one enemy, and last week, when I was trying to think of his name, I found I had forgotten who he was." This is better than keeping him in mind by making plans every day for "getting even."

WILD ANIMALS TAMED BY HUNGER

Mountaineers and Farmers in West Virginia Are Feeding Them.

All kinds of wild game in the mountains of West Virginia are in danger of almost total destruction owing to the heavy snows which for months have covered their feeding grounds. The deer, bear, wild turkeys, and smaller game have been unable to get at their feed of roots, herbs, seeds, grubs, etc., and in a great many instances the animals and birds have either been frozen or starved to death.

The mountaineers and the farmers living in the valleys have done what they could to feed the game. Some of the farmers in Randolph, Webster, Hampshire, Nichols and other mountain counties, are actually feeding deer, wild turkeys, pheasants, partridges and other game birds as regularly as they feed their stock. Hunger has made the wild things tame, and on one farm in Randolph county, a Mr. Arbuttle is feeding ten head of deer, twenty wild turkeys and as many pheasants and several coveys of partridges in his barnyard daily.

On some of the farms the deer have become as tame as the cattle and horses, and the wild game birds show no more fear than the chickens. The farmers draw the line at coons and catamounts, and many of the latter have been killed almost at the doors of the farmhouses.—Parkersburg (W. Va.) Correspondence New York World.

Whitney's Many Palaces.

A writer in the World's Work says that the princely character of William C. Whitney's hospitality, the number and extent of his places of residences, are part of the gossip chronicles of the day. Mr. Whitney has on Fifth avenue, New York city, a house only opened once when a ball was given, which is said to have the most artistic interior in America. Another house, among the most important on Long Island, is surrounded by about 1,000 acres in what are known as the Wheatley hills at Westbury. On this estate is one of Mr. Whitney's training stables. At Gravesend, near the Coney Island Jockey club, he owns the old Garrison place, and there keeps his racing stable during the meetings of the Brooklyn and Coney Island Jockey clubs in the spring and fall. These, however, fade into insignificance before the records of the land office at Albany, which say that Mr. Whitney is the largest individual landowner in the state.

Rival for Baltimore.

The famous residence of George Vanderbilt at Asheville, N. C., known as Biltmore, is to have a rival erected by a man who but a few weeks ago was a day laborer. Michael Minke-wicz is the name of the new capitalist, and he has fallen heir to $2,000,000 through the death of a relative in Germany. He has gone to claim the money, but before leaving secured an option on one of the most beautiful tracts of land in the suburbs of Asheville. It includes several thousand acres, and runs out in the neighborhood of the famous Switzerland dairy, which George Vanderbilt tried hard to buy before he purchased the Biltmore estate. The plans of this upstart, as he is called, have thrown the Vanderbilts into a state of consternation, and there is promise of a serious social upheaval. An attempt is already being made by friends of the New York aristocrats to secure the vitiation of the option secured by the German-Pole.

Lord Roberts Carried His Point.

Archdeacon Wilberforce is conducting daily services in Westminster Abbey for workmen engaged in preparing the venerable structure for the coronation. The men sit on either side of the cloister during their dinner hour and listen to the service, enjoying their pipes the while. The archdeacon told them a story one day about Lord Roberts and the Afghan war. A chaplain named Adams saved two troopers who had been badly wounded and Gen. Roberts recommended the preacher for the Victoria cross. The war office demurred that there was no precedent for giving that coveted decoration to a clergyman. To this Lord Roberts replied: "You give Parson Adams the V. C. or I resign my command in India." The workmen cheered with a will at this and broke into still more vigorous applause when the archdeacon added: "I need hardly say that Mr. Adams received the cross he won so gallantly."

The Spread of Smallpox.

The outbreak of smallpox in the United States, which has made itself to some extent felt in Canada, is attributed to the presence of so many American soldiers in the Philippines and Porto Rico, and the consequent traffic that has grown up between those countries and the republic. The receipt of letters, curios, and various articles from these infected islands brought smallpox to the United States.

His Guess.

A good story is going the rounds in the house of commons, says the Canadian Friend. A friend is supposed to have met Sir Wilfrid Lawson by chance and to have asked him: "Well, Lawson, and what do you feel about the war?"

After a pause Sir Wilfrid replied: "I try to feel about it as our Captain Christ would wish us to feel."

"Ah," rejoined the friend tartly, "I might have guessed that you'd be a pro-Boer!"

Cows With a "Jag."

Fermented Apples Work Demoralization on Fine Herd of Jersey Cattle.

Fifteen fine Jersey cows on the Whitney Point Stock Farm went on a disgraceful spree last Monday and almost frightened the men in charge of them out of their wits.

For a long time no one knew just what was the matter with the cows. They went reeling across the fields like a lot of drunken soldiers, rolling their eyes, and every once in a while giving vent to the most hideous howls. When they got tired they either leaned against one another or against the fences, and that was the way the men found them when they screwed up enough courage to go out in the field and investigate.

A hurry call was sent to Binghamton for a veterinary, because there was such unmistakable signs of suffering on the part of the cows that the men thought they were poisoned. When the veterinary took a look at the cows he was puzzled. They were glassy-eyed and tired. Those that had fallen asleep were sleeping so soundly that they couldn't be waked up even with a pitchfork. The local veterinaries were called in to assist the man from Binghamton, and the three sat up with the cows all night long.

The next morning the cows appeared to be all right. True, most of them looked a trifle ashamed, but on the whole they seemed in fair shape and quite ready to go back to eating grass and making milk. It wasn't until the cows were turned out for their morning drink, and almost dried up the creek in the field, that the veterinaries got an inkling of what had been the matter.

"Well, I swan," said the man from Binghamton. "I do believe them these cows was drunk last night. What did yer give them to eat?"

"They couldn't be drunk, Doc," said the boss keeper, "cuz there ain't anythin' in this here stockfarm for make man nor beast drunk. All them cows has had out of the usual feed this week is a wagon-load of apples that was dumped in the field on Sunday."

"Well, I'm clear dinged," said the Binghamton man. "I hearn tell on a thing like this happenin' once afore, but I never see it myself. Say, yer know what was the matter of them cows? Well, they was drunk from them apples."

"Now, see here. Them cows has two stomachs, and when you gave 'em them apples they just loaded 'em up the second stomach, where they stores things, like all ruminants does, with apples. They kept them there till they fermented and then they all got drunk. That's just what was the matter of them cows."

The logic of this explanation appealed to the local veterinaries, and they agreed as to the cause of the jag. Undoubtedly this explanation is the correct one, as the cows have been all right ever since.—New York Sun.

BEAT REDSKIN GAMBLER

"There may be citizens in Deadwood who remember Buck Joseph," said the man with the taper fingers as he permitted a smile to lurk around the corners of his mouth. "Buck was a full-blooded Sioux Indian, but he had learned a thing or two in his time. One of 'em was how to play poker, and another was how to hold the best hand. He was early on the ground at Deadwood and he was a winner from the start.

"There were some pretty slick gamblers hanging out there in the old days. They believed a good deal in luck, but a good deal more in fingering the cards. None of them had Buck Joseph's sleight-of-hand, however. They tried him on time and again, and they worked all the arts known to the profession, but he was still ahead of the game. As a last resort they sent over to Abilene, Kan. for me. I'm not going to say what I was doing over there, but the boys who knew me best were ready to bet 2 to 1 that I'd downed Buck at his own game.

"When I reached Deadwood," continued the narrator, "I had $800 in cash with me. Old Lo came up smiling with an equal amount and we sat down for an all-day tea party. I started out as square as a dot, depending on luck alone, and I had lost $500 before I made a change. Then I went in for nothing less than flushes and inside of an hour I got my money back. Buck knew I was beating him at his own game, and he laid for me. On one of his deals he got four aces and I knew it. I got king, queen and jack of diamonds, and it was $20 to come in.

"I drew a long breath and chipped and drew two cards to his one. My heart thumped as I found a ten and nine of diamonds in my hand—a straight flush. Of course, Buck knew there was only one hand higher than his, and he came for me with bets of $50. He had friends to borrow from and so had I, and when he finally called me we had $4,000 in cash on the table, and he had three ponies-two squaws and five poposes up against my watch and pin. He was getting ready to yell when I showed my hand. His yell died away, and he sat there like a stone man for five long minutes. Then he slowly rose up, gathered his blanket around him, and as he walked out of the place he said:

"'Humph! Heap smart white man! Heap ass Injun!'"

Beautiful St. Pierre

SOME IMPRESSIONS OF AN OBSERVING VISITOR MADE BEFORE THE RECENT CATASTROPH.

"St. Pierre was one of the most picturesque little cities in the world. I spent a few hours there once and shall never forget the gay appearance it presented," said Capt. John A. Hassell of New York yesterday at the St. James Hotel. "The women of St. Pierre dressed more gayly than in any other part of the world I ever visited. They wore many colors, and, strangely enough, combined them quite harmoniously.

"There was practically no harbor at St. Pierre, and the ships anchored a short distance out at sea. As soon as our vessel came within hailing distance of St. Pierre a number of small boats would set out from shore. They were filled with women dressed in gaudy colors and carrying fruits, which they offered to the passengers. I remember that many of the women had cocoanuts from which the ends had been removed. Part of the milk had been poured from the fruit and replaced by rum. Cocoanuts prepared in that way are quite delicious and in great demand with travelers.

"Few of the people in St. Pierre were pure black. The negroes who were originally in the island, the Malays who were brought there to serve as slaves, and the French and other white people who located there, intermarried so freely that most of the inhabitants showed only a trace of the negro blood. The women were quite dark, but had good features, and many of them were quite handsome. Their clothing was very unusual. On their heads they wore scarfs of bright colors and their gowns were very fantastic. All through the city there seemed to be an air of gayety and abandon.

"St. Pierre was located in a small indentation in the shore line and its houses were queer affairs which seemed like a lot of fancy blocks piled up against the side of the mountain. Many of the houses were whitewashed or painted some very light color. They were all short buildings of quaint French architecture. Nobody worked in St. Pierre any more than was necessary. There were music and dancing everywhere, and the immorality of the city will probably lead many people to suggest that judgment has been brought down upon the ill-fated city."

Not Rockefeller's Church.

Among the older members of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, New York, there is a strong feeling that altogether too much stress is being laid on the fact that Rockefeller and his son are members. Last Sunday a stranger entered the building and asked an elderly man at the door, "Is this Mr. Rockefeller's church?" "No," was the emphatic reply, "this is the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church." "Well, does young Mr. Rockefeller's Sunday school meet here?" "No," the man who was being questioned answered vigorously, "the Sunday school of which young Mr. Rockefeller is leader meets here." The members do not hesitate to express the opinion that Mr. Rockefeller's great wealth should not be permitted to overshadow the work that is being done by other members of the congregation.

Secretary Moody Is Economical.

Some consternation has been aroused in the navy department by an apparent determination on the part of Secretary Moody to run the place with some regard to economy. Some days ago an appeal was made to him for more clerks, it being declared that only by the most diligent industry could the work be kept up with the present force. Mr. Moody astounded the applicant for more help by saying that the condition described was exactly as it should be. The clerks, he said, had easy hours and should employ every moment of their time in the department in doing government work. As they were able to keep the business up to date, even with difficulty, this was what was required of them.

LACE 900 YEARS OLD.

Most remarkable in its beauty is a piece of old lace in the collection owned by Mrs. A. L. Vrooman of Minneapolis. This piece was excavated from the ruins of the ancient city of Pozzuoli, beyond Pompeii.

The city was built on the original site of the city of Puteoli, mentioned in the Bible. It was partly buried during a volcanic eruption in the twelfth century, and it was totally buried by another eruption 400 years later.

This remarkable piece of lace was one of several found when excavations were made. It is a thread lace, every stitch having been made with the needle, and the pattern is plainly intended to represent the scene in the Garden of Eden. In the center of each repetition of the pattern is a tree

CONGRESSMAN FITZPATRICK.
Says Pe-ru-na is a Splendid Catarrhal Tonic.

Congressman T. Y. Fitzpatrick.

Hon. T. Y. Fitzpatrick, Congressman from Kentucky, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"At the solicitation of a friend I used your Peruna and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with catarrh or who needs a good tonic."—T. Y. FITZPATRICK.

A Good Tonic.

Pe-ru-na is a natural and efficient nerve tonic. It strengthens and restores the activity of every nerve in the body.

Through the use of Pe-ru-na the weakened or overworked nerves resume their natural strength and the blood vessels begin at once to regulate the flow of blood according to nature's laws. Congestions immediately disappear.

Catarrh Cured.

All phases of catarrh, acute or chronic, are promptly and permanently cured. It is through its operation upon the nervous system that Pe-ru-na has attained such a world-wide reputation as a sure and reliable remedy for all phases of catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice free.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Couldn't Straighten Up.

Breed, Wis., June 16th.—Charles F. Peterson of this place, Justice of the Peace for Oconto County, tells the following story:

"For years I had an aching pain in my back which troubled me very much especially in the morning.

"I was almost unable to straighten my back and the pain was unbearable. I did not know what it was, but seeing an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills I concluded to try a box.

"I can only say that that one box alone has done me more good than anything else ever did.

"I feel as well now as ever I was. I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to several others, who are using them with good results."

Mr. Peterson is a highly respected man and one who would not so positively make a statement unless it was absolutely true.

Roads Made of Gold.

The people of the two counties south of Lacrosse, Wis., especially near Prairie du Chien, have been for years using gold-bearing quartz for road making and house building, thinking it was common stone. The finding of a heavy, paying vein of gold on a farm of Mrs. N. S. Dousman set them right. By following up the vein it was traced for many miles around, touching in some places, quarries where rock has been taken for years.

Lightning striking in the same place during successive storms led Miss Violet Dousman to think that metal in some form existed there. Her investigations led to the discovery of the gold.

Curious Trade Discovered by the Police of France.

The Paris police have recently been informed by one of the fraternity of whip-crackers that such a calling exists and claims recognition as one of the "professions" by the exercise of which men earn their livelihood in France.

Whip-crackers, it appears, are men who possess strong wrists and are willing to crack whips all day long, if required, on receipt of a suitable fee. At the commencement of the shooting season, when the proprietors of neighboring demesnes are not good friends, the one who bears ill-will to the other engages a whip cracker, whose duty it is to crack a whip so as to frighten away all the birds at the approach of the disliked sportsman and his friends.

The whipcrackers are also found useful by farmers afflicted with diseased cattle which they cannot sell. Having engaged a whipcracker, they turn out the sick beasts on the most frequented highway they can find. The cracker follows with his whip, ostensibly to guide the cattle, really to drive them under the wheels of a carriage, a motor car or a tram. This he does by cracking his whip at the critical moment so as to frighten the beasts and drive them to destruction.

Ladies Can Wear Shoes

One size smaller after using Allen's Foot-Ease, a powder. It makes tight or new shoes easy. Cures swollen, hot, sweating, aching feet, ingrowing nails, corns and bunions. All druggists and shoe stores, 25c. Trial package FREE by mail. Address Allen S. Olmsted, LeRoy, N. Y.

His White Umbrella.

Aubrey de Vere, the aged English poet who died recently, cared little about his appearance, and even when called upon to act as "best man" at a wedding saw no reason for disregarding his shabby tweed suit and white cotton umbrella in favor of a wedding garment. In later years he still clung to his white cotton umbrella and on one occasion electrified London by appearing in Hyde park in Mary Anderson's carriage, at a time when she was at the zenith of her popularity, calmly holding up this dilapidated machine, the sides of which were ornamented with long tassels.

WHERE DOCTORS FAIL

To Cure Woman's Ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Succeeds. Mrs. Pauline Judson Writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Soon after my marriage two years ago I found myself in constant pain. The doctor said my womb was turned, and this caused the pain with considerable inflammation. He prescribed for me for four months, when my husband became impatient because I grew worse instead of better, and in speaking to the druggist he advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. How I wish I had taken that at first; it would have saved me weeks of suffering. It took three long months to restore me, but it is a happy relief, and we are both most grateful to you. Your Compound has brought joy to our home and health to me."—Mrs. PAULINE JUDSON, 47 Hoyt Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

It would seem by this statement that women would save time and much sickness if they would get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and also write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and always helps.

Sugar Legislation.

The president has removed uncertainty as to his attitude on the Cuban rebate proposition by frankly telling the friends of reciprocity that he will veto any rebate bill that may be passed.

Wm. Alden Smith, speaking for house Republican insurgents, notified Senator Spooner to-day that if he's counting on his 20 per cent reciprocity bill passing the house without a provision for reducing the duty on refined sugar, he will be disappointed. He assured Spooner that Republican house insurgents and Democrats are united as determinedly as when they defeated the ways and means proposition.

"Let the senate pass the house bill," said Wm. Alden, "which makes reciprocity contingent upon Cuba adopting our immigration and contract labor laws. Cuba probably would not accept these laws, but in that case responsibility for there being no reciprocity would be with the Cubans themselves. That's the way we insurgents now view the matter."

Thurber's Testimony.

Reet sugar members of both branches of congress are in high glee over the testimony of F. B. Thurber before the senate committee on Cuban affairs Wednesday, which they are sure establishes the fact that not only the sugar trust, but the Cuban government, by the authority of Gen. Wood, put up money to create a sentiment throughout the country in favor of reciprocity. There is a saying that Thurber's unwilling testimony, as they call it, resulted in positively scandalous things. It would be the essence of gall, so they are proclaiming, for the administration to press reciprocity in the face of the showing. None are more jubilant than the Michigan delegation, Thurber is known as an agent of the sugar trust, and though several times notified to come to Washington and appear before the committee he did so only when threatened with arrest.

HEALTH AND ALL ITS BLESSINGS

Health will come with all its blessings to those who know the way, and it is mainly a question of right-living, with all the term implies, but the efforts which strengthen the system, the games which refresh and the foods which nourish are important, each in a way, while it is also advantageous to have knowledge of the best methods of promoting freedom from unsatisfactory conditions. To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value, and the one remedy which acts most beneficially and pleasantly, as a laxative, is—Syrup of Figs—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

With a proper understanding of the fact that many physical ills are of a transient character and yield promptly to the gentle action of Syrup of Figs, gladness and comfort come to the heart, and if one would remove the torpor and strain and congestion attendant upon a constipated condition of the system, take Syrup of Figs and enjoy freedom from the aches and pains, the colds and headaches and the depression due to inactivity of the bowels. In case of any organic trouble it is well to consult a competent physician, but when a laxative is required remember that the most permanently gratifying results will follow personal cooperation with the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs. It is for sale by all reliable druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

The excellence of Syrup of Figs comes from the beneficial effects of the plants used in the combination and also from the method of manufacture which ensures that perfect purity and uniformity of product essential in a perfect family laxative. All the members of the family from the youngest to the most advanced in years may use it whenever a laxative is needed and share alike in its beneficial effects. We do not claim that Syrup of Figs is the only remedy of known value, but it possesses this great advantage over all other laxatives that it acts gently and pleasantly without disturbing natural functions, in any way, as it is free from every objectionable quality or substance. To get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine and the full name of the Co.—California Fig Syrup Co.—is printed on the front of every package.
