CHELSEA TELEPHONE NUMBER 8

CHELSEA IS AGAIN FLOODED

Last Night's Storm the Most Severe One of the Season--Large Damages.

During the day yesterday and nearly all of last night rain fell in torrents and at times during the night it seemed as if the clouds had simply let go of rain by barrels. The village and surrounding country in many places resembled miniature lakes. Twenty acres of Snyder's onion marsh is under water, and Dr. Palmer's and Davis & Gates marsh are in the same condition. Hundreds of acres of hay and gardens were under water from one inch to two feet and the damage will run well into thousands of dollars.

The storm was accompanied last night with considerable lightning and thunder. The home of Mrs. Matthew Schwickerath on Congdon street was struck, knocking down the chimney, badly damaging the roof and breaking a large hole in the ceiling of the room where the lightning entered the house. A few minutes later the barn in the rear of the dwelling was struck but not damaged materially. While the inmates of the house were considerably shaken up and shocked by the electric elements none of them were injured.

Reports from the rural districts this morning are that many bridges are gone, or in unsafe condition, and the highways in many places flooded and washed out, and it will in all probability require some time to repair the damage.

About the village the streets in many places being badly washed out, the board sidewalks are floating pontoons. The lawns covered in many places with water from six inches to two feet in depth. One dwelling on North street had considerable water on the first floor. Half of cellars about town have from one to three feet of water in them, and the boys of the family can be seen at home today working the pump handle.

The Hawks-Angus road has a 50-foot washout near the Gutherie crossing and report says the track east of town is more or less washed out, while between Grass Lake and Jackson there is considerable water at places covering the track.

Traffic on the Michigan Central has been tied up since early this morning by washouts between Chelsea and Dexter, and Dexter and Ann Arbor. The company had every available man and two work trains working all night repairing the roadbed and by night expect to have everything repaired.

There has been between two and three inches of rainfall during the past twenty-four hours at this place. The storm seems to have covered the entire state. The weather reports for today indicate showers.

Kellogg Fletcher.

Two more of Chelsea's well-known young people have set sail on the matrimonial sea. Dr. E. Burton Kellogg of Belleville, a former Chelsea boy and student of our high school, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kellogg of Sylvan, and Miss Cora A. Fletcher, one of Sharon's most highly esteemed young ladies, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony Wednesday, June 26th. The wedding, which was a quiet one, took place at 8 a. m. at the home of the bride's mother, Rev. Carl G. Zeldner of Detroit performing the ceremony. A wedding breakfast was served, after which the doctor and his bride left for a trip up the lakes. Dr. and Mrs. Kellogg will be at home after August 1st in Belleville, where the groom is very popular and one of the leading physicians. Our best wishes and congratulations are extended to the happy couple.

Appeared in Female Attire.

Argus: Representative Byron C. Whitaker of Dexter is accused by some of his friends of having appeared in woman's garb at Portage lake last week Wednesday, and thereby hange a tale.

The jolly representative in the state legislature was out on a dock at Portage lake that day with some ladies. He is no featherweight and the dock broke, precipitating Mr. Whitaker head first into the lake. He had but one suit of clothes at the lake and that of course he had on. Hence he toggled himself out in this apparel while his clothing was drying, not forgetting, however to console himself with a pipe while he endeavored to look serene, notwithstanding the limitations of his apparel.

Dispute About Land Boundaries.

Argus: A dispute over boundaries has brought Walter Waters, Jr., a farmer of the vicinity, into court to stand examination on the charge of assault with attempt to murder, and has landed Ike Bumpus and his hired man, Straub, in justice's sanctum to be tried for assault and battery.

Waters recently bought a farm of the Eaton brothers, and found that with the title he had acquired an interest in an active dispute with his neighbor, Ike Bumpus, over one of the boundaries.

The trouble progressed until finally Bumpus carried the war into the enemy's country by pulling up the fence and placing it two feet over the line.

Waters went to work Friday to put the fence back in its old position, when Bumpus and his hired man appeared upon the scene, and commanded him to desist.

Words followed and the result was that Waters received an artistic polishing off from Bumpus and Straub, the "help," and that the two last mentioned were subjected to a vigorous fusillade from Waters' revolver.

The mutual swearing out of warrants occurred Saturday, so Waters is to be examined by Justice Joslyn on Monday for alleged assault with intent to murder, and Bumpus and Straub will be tried on the same in Justice Childs' court for assault and battery.

MAY HAVE CEMENT WORKS

Company Incorporated with $1,000,000 Capital to Operate Cement Plant at Four-Mile Lake.

Last Saturday L. S. Lerch and other Detroit men, incorporators of the West German Portland Cement Co., of Chelsea, capitalized at $1,000,000, and filed articles of association at Lansing. It is reported that the new company will build a large plant at Four-Mile Lake, and will employ a large number of men.

The incorporators of the company have of late spent a considerable time looking over the ground and securing options on the property, and they claim that they have the best prospect in the state for successful cement works.

Tuesday, representatives of the company were in Chelsea looking for houses for several families. They say that operations will be begun at once on the works which will be first class in every respect. The Standard hopes that the men who are back of this venture will meet with no obstacles and that the works will soon be in operation.

Attendance at Summer School.

The attendance at the U. of M. summer school this year beats all previous records and the faculty are greatly elated over the fact. The registration to date in the literary department is 262. This is forty ahead of the registration on the corresponding day last year.

The attendance in the law department is 46, about five less than the corresponding day last year.

It is a noticeable fact that there are more of the students of the regular winter school remaining for work this year than usual. A number of older men are in attendance brushing up on some subjects or branching out into something new. Everyone appears to be in earnest in their work and a good deal will undoubtedly be accomplished.

The campus has quite a busy appearance between class hours, when students are passing to and from classes.

Another Indian Trophy

Times: Dr. Leonard, the mysterious benefactor of the University, has added another trophy to the long list of valuable articles with which he has presented the institution.

A valuable medicine wand of an Indian tribe was received at the University a few days ago. The wand, which is valued at $1,000, is fearfully and wonderfully made and is an awful combination of everything ever heard of. The wand has a handle or bar in the center with long, brush-like ends. In the make-up of the potent weapon are found, among other things, five kinds of sweet grass, the dewclaws of a deer, eagle feathers, bells, beads, the scalp of an hostile Indian, an osprey's feather and a porcupine's tail. The article is unique and valuable and is another evidence of Dr. Leonard's untiring work in behalf of the University.

LOGS AND DESKS SENT BY MAIL

Light thrown on a Peculiar Condition in the Postoffice Department.

One of the results of Third Assistant Postmaster General Madden's efforts to place the department on a paying basis was an order issued from the department Tuesday prohibiting the sending through the mails of logs and bags of earth and similar articles when they weigh 200 pounds or more.

It appears according to the complaint of the agricultural department that some of its agents have been in the habit of sending through the mails packages containing sections of logs weighing from 100 to 200 pounds, and that some postmasters accept such packages while others refuse. Investigation shows that not only were logs shipped as mail, under frank, but also that bags filled with specimens of earth were sent in the same way.

The order to the postmasters is that they will be held responsible if they permit the law to be violated in that way.

Some time ago it was discovered that roll-top desks and other articles of furniture were being sent through the mails under franks and it was particularly true when the mails were being weighed to determine what was to be paid to certain railroads for carrying mails.

She Wedded a Comedian.

Argus: A wedding of interest occurred one night last week, when Mrs. Goosley, colored, became the wife of Sam Lucas, a colored comedian.

Mrs. Goosley secured a divorce from her husband, Sam Goosley, two years ago and began suit against Mrs. Ross, also colored, for alleged alienation of affections, with the result that she was given judgment for $3,000 last October and was paid the money in April. The Goosley family roomed at the home of Mrs. Ross for some time, and thus Cupid had ample opportunity to get in some of his deadly work.

The $3,000 will come in handy in the Lucas establishment, and was doubtless looked upon by the happy couple as a wedding present.

A Writ For Board.

James L. Board, Port Huron's millionaire, will be arrested if Sheriff Maines can find him, as the officer has a warrant in his pocket, issued for Board by Judge Wagner for contempt of court.

Board was to have appeared in court Tuesday morning to answer for examination on a charge of not appearing before the state tax commission some time ago in response to a subpoena to make disclosures regarding his property holdings. Mr. Board's examination was partially finished and he should have appeared Tuesday morning, but failed to do so. The state tax commission, which is represented by Mr. Freeman, has raised the assessment of Port Huron from over $7,000,000 to over $11,000,000, and Mr. Board's personal assessment from $3,000 to $182,000.

The first civil war soldiers' monument ever erected in the United States stands in the little, obscure cemetery of Tipton. It was dedicated July 4, 1886, the date of the unveiling of the soldiers' monument near the Detroit city hall. Other shafts to the honor of the Union dead rapidly reared their spires upward, but the modest, yet neat shaft at Tipton is, we believe, the undisputed original pioneer to the memory of the men who fell in defense of the Union flag.—Detroit Tribune.

ADAM EPPLER.

New Story by Conan Doyle.

"The Hound of The Baskervilles," another adventure of Sherlock Holmes, the first installment of which will appear in the Sunday Detroit Free Press of July 6, and continue for twelve consecutive weeks, is the greatest story ever written by this famous author. The sale of the book at $1.50 per copy has been phenomenal. If you are not at present a reader of the Sunday Free Press send in your order for a three months' trial subscription at once. It will only cost you 65c for three months, either by carrier or mail. Remember the story starts July 6.

SAVES A WOMAN'S LIFE.

To have given up would have meant death to Mrs. Lois Cragg, of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from a severe lung trouble and obstinate cough. "Often," she writes, "I could scarcely breathe and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was completely cured." Sufferers from Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Trouble need this grand remedy, for it never disappoints. Cure is guaranteed by Glazier & Stimson. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

Governor A. T. Bliss Renominated on the First Ballot.

In the shortest time on record for a state convention, Michigan Republicans Thursday did what shouting and counting was to be done. At 5:30 p. m. the speeches had all been made and the following ticket had been nominated:

For Governor—Aaron T. Bliss, of Saginaw; Delos Fall, of Abion, renominated. For Lieutenant-Governor—Alexander Maitland, of Negaunee. For Auditor-General—Perry F. Powers, Cadillac, renominated. For Attorney-General—Charles A. Blair, of Jackson. For State Treasurer—Daniel McCoy, Grand Rapids, renominated. For Secretary of State—Fred M. Warner, of Farmington, renominated. For Commissioner of the Land Office—Edwin A. Wiley, of Van Buren, renominated. For Superintendent of Public Instruction—Delos Fall, of Abion, renominated. For Members of the State Board of Education—Patrick H. Kelley, of Detroit; Luther L. Wright, of Ironwood.

The convention was called to order at 10:30 o'clock by Gerrit J. Diekmann, of Holland, chairman of the state central committee, who introduced Rev. James M. Barkley, pastor of the Forest Avenue Presbyterian church. After prayer the temporary chairman of the convention, William Alden Smith, congressman from the fifth district, delivered an address that called for frequent applause.

Gov. A. T. Bliss, candidate for a renomination, was an interested spectator in the gallery. Candidate Stearns was not present during the morning or afternoon, but his Wayne county manager, Homer Warren, sat in the gallery a few yards to the left of the governor.

The Bliss men were very nearly accurate in their estimate of 800 votes for their candidate, the Saginaw colonel rolling up 811 on the first ballot, against 214 for Stearns, 40 for Horton, and 22 for Patton.

The hardest worked lot of men in the convention were those on the committee on resolutions. The cause of their troubles was the disagreement over the question of primary elections. The State League of Republican Clubs had declared for primary reform, and Charles E. Townsend, representing the league, appeared before the committee to urge the adoption of the plank prepared by the league committee. He was backed by Charles D. Joslyn, of Detroit.

The members from the interior, however, objected to any plank which would positively demand the passage of a primary bill next winter, holding that the voters in the less populous counties do not want to drop the convention system.

Accordingly there was a long debate running all through the noon recess, the result of which was a compromise, which commended the primary election plan, but which merely recommended that the subject be carefully considered by the legislature, instead of instructing the lawmakers to legislate the convention system out of existence.

Homer Warren, chairman of the primary election committee of the state league of Republican clubs, after reading the plank of the platform on election reform, said: "The convention declaration is not as strong as we would have made it, but I feel satisfied with what has been done, and we shall keep on with our campaign to bring about the passage of a general primary election bill in the next legislature."

Fred R. Fenton, president of the league, also expressed his satisfaction with the platform and his belief that a primary bill will be passed next winter.

A Tragedy at Unionville.

The 17-year-old son of Jim Henry, an Indian residing three miles west of Unionville, was shot and killed Saturday afternoon by Al Adams, a farmer. The story as told by the excited father of the boy is that Adams came to the Henry home and while there attempted to assault Mrs. Henry. The boy rushed to his mother's assistance and in the light which ensued Adams drew a revolver and fired three shots at the boy, all three taking effect in the head.

The story told by Adams varies somewhat from the one told by Henry. He states that the boy and his father assailed him and that in self-defense he fired the fatal shot at young Henry. The fact that Adams is considerably battered would seem to substantiate his story to a certain extent. He has always borne a good reputation.

New Rural Routes.

Additional rural free delivery to commence August 1: Harbor Springs, Emmet county, one carrier; population served, 585; number of houses on route, 130. Routes 1, 2, 3, Imlay City, Lapeer county; population served, 2,133; number of houses on routes, 474. Lapeer, Lapeer county, routes 1 and 2; population served, 1,147; number of houses on routes, 255; postoffice at Five Lakes to be supplied with closed pouch by rural carrier. Romeo, Macomb county, additional service, route 3; population served, 459; number of houses on route, 102. St. Joseph, Berrien county, routes 1 and 2; population served, 1,642; number of houses on routes, 365; postoffice at Hollywood to be discontinued.

Lansing meat dealers, it is said, will make an agreement not to use trading stamps any more. It is claimed they cost more than newspaper advertising, with less beneficial results.

As a result of the strike of the miners in the Michigan coal fields since April 1, the coal supply has been shortened by 350,000 tons with a market price of about $750,000. The miners have lost $300,000 in wages. The strike still continues.

The men who framed the resolutions adopted unanimously by the Republican state convention, were as follows: First district, C. D. Joslyn; second district, E. P. Allen; third district, H. B. Coleman; fourth district, E. W. Keightley; fifth district, Sybrant Weselhus; sixth district, B. T. O. Clark; seventh district, H. L. Chipman; eighth district, Watts S. Humphrey; ninth district, J. C. McLaughlin; tenth district, H. B. Bradley; eleventh district, Dennis E. Alward; twelfth district, J. H. McLean.

The resolutions in full are as follows: "We unreservedly pledge to President Theodore Roosevelt our sympathy and support in his administration of the great trust which came to him through the death of President McKinley. We realize the great problems and serious questions of state, foreign and domestic, with which he has to do and hereby express our sincere admiration and approval of the ability, integrity and desire for justice which he has brought to bear on all public affairs.

"We cordially approve of the record of Michigan's senators and representatives in congress on matters pertaining to the advancement of our country's welfare and in the fulfillment of our party's pledges and we especially desire to note our appreciation of their zealous and able work in behalf of Michigan's important industries and to thank them for the services rendered.

"We congratulate both the president and congress upon the successful establishment of the new republic of Cuba, thus fulfilling to the letter the second pledge of the nation.

"We gladly express again our loyalty to the broad principles and national policy of our party as last affirmed in the platform adopted by the national Republican convention in Philadelphia in 1900.

"We continue our abiding faith in the protective tariff and are opposed to all efforts to destroy it or emasculate it or weaken its beneficent operation. We favor no plan that would interfere with the industries of the United States and would lessen the legitimate fruits of American labor.

"We denounce all unwarranted and disgraceful attacks upon the frontiers and upholders of our flag in the Philippines, and we pledge faithful support to the government in the efforts to establish good government and personal liberty in those islands.

"The honest and commercial administration of state affairs under Gov. Aaron T. Bliss and the zealous and business-like conduct of the several state departments meet with our cordial approval and endorsement.

"We favor such amendments to the tax laws of our state as will justly and efficiently relieve the owner of real estate from double taxation by reason of taxes on outstanding mortgage thereon.

"We favor a safe, equitable and effective primary election law by which the nomination of all candidates for office will be so directly controlled by the people as to secure absolute purity in politics, and we commend this subject to the careful, painstaking and conscientious consideration of the next legislature.

"We are glad to note the advancement of American industries in foreign markets, and realize that large combinations of capital may be necessary to successfully compete with aggregated capital in disinterested industrial fields as well as for the purpose of advancing operations of great cost in our own country, but we desire to express our condemnation of all conspiracies and combinations to restrict business to create monopolies, to limit production or control prices, and we favor such legislation as will effectively restrain and prevent all such abuses.

"We cordially approve and commend the efforts of President Roosevelt to enforce the laws against illegal combinations in restraint of trade.

"In common with the citizens of all the states of our union and the members of all parties, we mourn the great loss which came to our country through the tragic death of President William McKinley. His public life was dominated by the highest patriotism and honesty and his private life was pure and gentle. The addition of his name to the list of departed heroes who gave up to our country and our party high and noble service, adds incentive for continued efforts in behalf of the principles and the policies he so wisely recommended.

"We mourn in common with all the people of the state the untimely death of the Hon. Hazen S. Pingree, whose public career will long live in the history of our state. We extend to his bereaved widow and family our sincere expression of sympathy and sorrow."

Seventh District Convention.

The Seventh Congressional District convention completed its work Saturday, and on the 15th ballot Henry McMorran, of Port Huron, was chosen as the candidate to succeed Hon. Edgar Weeks, who threw his strength to McMorran on finding that his own nomination was practically hopeless. In the convention there was none greater surprised than the nominee himself. In addressing the convention he said: "The nomination came to me like a stroke of lightning. If I had been told yesterday by any of my friends that I would be the candidate I would have told them they were crazy."

Judge Long's Successor.

Gov. Bliss says that at present he will take no action regarding a successor to Justice Long, of the Supreme Court, preferring to leave the selection to a state convention, which lawyers generally agree must be called in order to legalize the nomination. A nomination by the state central committee would be of doubtful validity. However, the attorney general will give an opinion in the matter.

The Supreme Court will hear no more cases until the October term, and a new man could not participate in the determination of cases already heard and now pending.

Hugh Cannon, the composer of the popular songs, "Goo-Goo Eyes" and "Ain't It a Shame?" has been sent to the Jackson county jail as a common drunk.

A colored man who answers the description of the man who murdered Charles Parks in a box car at Bridge-man, last Tuesday night, was arrested here. The fellow claims he has been traveling with a circus.

Edward O'Donnell and John W. Turk, two old soldiers and inmates of the Soldiers' Home, quarreled over a woman, and O'Donnell stabbed Turk over the eye. Turk is not seriously hurt. O'Donnell escaped.

The infant daughter of John Dempster, of Port Huron, got hold of a match and succeeded in lighting it. The little one's clothing caught fire, and she was so terribly burned that it is believed she cannot live.

The registration in the summer school of the University is as follows: Literary and engineers, 268; law, 35; medical, 52; music, 17; total, 372. This is slightly in excess of a corresponding time last year.

William C. Simmons, of Grand Rapids, former Newaygo county postmaster, who has served four years in the Detroit house of correction for misappropriation of funds, has been discharged from paying a fine of $2,381.31, on poor debtors' act.

Halibutons an inch in diameter fell in Benton Harbor, destroying fruits and vines and in some instances trees. The streets were flooded. The wind, rain and hail storm also did serious damage to fruits in Quincy, Coldwater, Mendon and Kalamazoo.

Michigan gave the Detroit & Mackinac railroad 1,327,047 acres, which were put up as security for bonds to construct the road. The annual report of Commissioner Cottrell shows that last year 3,140 acres were sold at an average of $3.05 per acre.

The Supreme Court has granted a stay of sentence in the case of ex-representative Arthur L. Rich, of Newaygo, found guilty of assault and sentenced to two and one-half years' imprisonment. The case will be appealed, and Rich admitted to bail.

Local Hawkshaw, of Kalamazoo, have captured a man who gave his name as Charles Ritchie, by first knocking him insensible with a stick of wood. He had a revolver, skeleton keys and a flash lantern on his person. They think he's a bank robber.

The railway companies of the state are beginning to pay their specific taxes to the state, which are due during the month of July. Saturday the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad paid $91,855.21; the Wabash, $48,865.22; Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie, $24,518.

The local attorney of the Detroit United Railway in Flint has asked an injunction to prevent the Common Council from interfering with the road, threats having been made to tear up the tracks on South Saginaw street, where the Street Railway Company refuses to pave.

Pearl Pelisky, the 12-year-old granddaughter of old Chief Pelisky, was run down and killed in Petoskey by Fred Johnson, colored, Saturday night. He was coasting down a steep grade when the accident occurred. The child's skull was crushed. Johnson was placed under arrest.

The President has nominated the following Michigan postmasters: Winthrop A. Hayes, Rochester; Oliver H. P. Green, Orion; Kenneth E. Struble, Shepherd. The following Michigan postmasters have been confirmed by the Senate: W. E. Osmon, Montague; G. H. Pond, Ann Arbor.

The heirs of Andrew Jackson, an aged colored resident of Niles, are wondering where the old man hid his money. He died yesterday, and just before the end he was stricken dumb while trying to tell them where he had secreted several thousand dollars in gold. A systematic search is being made.

The semi-annual meeting of the Joint state prison boards will take place at Mackinac island, July 26-28, which will comprise the board of control of Jackson and Marquette prisons and Michigan reformatory at Ionia. The state board of pardons, and board of charities and correction will also be in attendance.

Galesburg has lately been treated to a rigid enforcement of the "blue laws." A communication signed by every business and professional man or woman in the village, save one, and also those of all who conduct manufacturing or mechanical industries, 40 in all, has been sent to the prosecutor asking him to desist.

What was at one time the greatest preserve for wild ducks and geese to be found in the state—the old F. B. Brewer marsh near the center of Ottawa county—is to be converted into a big cattle ranch. Two Chicago men have purchased 3,000 acres of the marsh for something like $75,000, and will raise stock and grain upon the land.

The following are the new trustees of Olivet college: Dr. Robert W. McLaughlin, Kalamazoo; Dr. Heman P. DeForest, Detroit; Howard Benent, Lansing; Rev. James A. Blaisdell, Olivet; Frank J. Cobbs, Cadillac. New members of the executive committee are: George W. Radford, Detroit; Dr. Robert W. McLaughlin, Kalamazoo, and Rev. Wm. Ewing, Lansing.

The Fischer-Cockreller feud has taken a new tack at Birmingham. Fischer came out to visit his farm in an auto and legal papers in a $10,000 damage suit for eviction were promptly served upon him. Cockreller was fired from the farm and his goods were set on the road. Fischer has heretofore paid visits on holidays and Sundays, when papers couldn't be served.

Albert Bleyer, hotel keeper of Metamora, went to Toledo with his wife where he cashed some checks. The $1,000 in currency and certificates was placed in a small grip, which was either lost or stolen.

The new mill which has just been erected at Grass Lake by E. W. Parker, formerly of Napoleon, is opened for custom work. It is a fine building, three stories high, with a basement, and is equipped with all the modern machinery for grinding flour, meal and feed. It has a capacity for 50 barrels of flour a day, and is prepared to pack for export trade equal to any mill in the state.

KING EDWARD IMPROVING

The following bulletin was issued from Buckingham palace at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon: "The king's condition still remains satisfactory."

King Edward saw several members of his family during the morning. The queen remained at the palace, but the Princess Victoria drove out. The duke of Connaught called at Buckingham palace Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Later he said: "The news concerning the king this morning is most encouraging. The king's pulse and temperature are normal, and his condition, on the whole, is most satisfactory."

The official bulletin on the condition of King Edward, issued at 10:15 o'clock this morning, is as follows: "His majesty has had a better night and has had some refreshing sleep. He has improved in all respects. His constitutional condition is quite favorable, and the state of his wound also is satisfactory." His majesty looks well and has a cheerful appearance, quite bearing out the good tenor of the medical bulletin.

King Edward's progress in convalescence occasions the greatest satisfaction in all official circles. His majesty already is displaying the greatest interest in all public questions, and is expressing his gratitude over the evidences of the world's solicitude by opening a number of telegrams with his own hands.

This action caused some restlessness during the night and aroused some trifling solicitude on the part of the attendant doctors.

All this really was unimportant, as his majesty soon quieted down, and on the whole rested satisfactorily.

Everybody in Buckingham palace is delighted and high hopes are entertained that his convalescence will be much more speedy even than was expected last night.

On the eve of the proudest day of his life, King Edward was forced to undergo an operation, which was performed by Dr. Treves, who is a specialist in this line. The operation was in the king's own room and was attended by the other physicians. After the operation his majesty was removed to his bedroom, where consciousness returned immediately.

His majesty is suffering from perityphilitis, an old name for a form of appendicitis.

The first intimation that his majesty

Judge Long Is Dead.

Justice of the Supreme Court Charles D. Long died at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. John M. Barton, in Detroit. The early life of Justice Long was a struggle earnestly made to acquire an education. When he was ready to enter the university the civil war broke out. Without hesitation the youth enlisted as a private in the Eighth Michigan infantry. In the battle of Wilmington sand, Ga., April 16, 1862, hardly eight months after his enlistment, he received two severe wounds, both of which rendered him an invalid for life. A shot shattered his left arm, which had to be amputated above the elbow, a bullet at nearly the same time struck and pierced his hip. This bullet it proved impossible to remove, and to the hour of his death this never-healing wound, which had to be dressed every day, caused him untold suffering and discomfort. As soon as his condition permitted, the young, inviolated, but undaunted, veteran took up the study of law in Flint.

In April, 1887, he took his seat as Justice of the Supreme Court of Michigan after election on the Republican ticket, by a vote in round numbers, of 174,000 to 140,000 for C. H. Camp. April 5, 1897, he was re-elected for the full term of 10 years by a vote of 201,000 to 130,000 for Geo. L. Yapple.

December 6, 1862, he married Miss Anna A. Franklin, of Genesee county. His two daughters, Mrs. John M. Barton, and Mrs. Mae Schremsner, and one son, Burt E. Long, a police sergeant, reside in Detroit.

In a long abandoned counterfeiters' den at West Van Buren and Halsted streets, Chicago, $15,000 in bogus coin and currency and a complete counterfeiters' outfit, including plates for making $1,000 bills, have been found in a secret vault by workmen engaged in tearing out the interior of the building.

Donner suffered damage by the storm estimated all the way from $10,000 to $50,000. Eight inches of snow fell in Leadville and many other places in the mountains.

The steamship Ohio has arrived at Seattle from the Klondike with the report that the first steamer to arrive down the Yukon at St. Michael brought $1,000,000 in treasure.

Lieut. Newberry, formerly of the Thirtieth Infantry, testified in the hearing on the charges of Maj. Gardener yesterday. An order from Gardener was introduced wherein he had commanded that force be used to impress the natives.

An Early Morning Hunt For Black-Tail Deer.

BY CLARENCE A. LYMAN.

W E slept that night as we ever do in the hills, with the front of the tent wide open, so that from my pillow, the side of a saddle, I could watch the Great Dipper do its slow somersault around the North Star. When the camp-fire died the night before, and we went to bed, the Dipper was lying along the tops of the mountains, this great hand in the astronomical clock than to light unwilling matches from time to time in the night and exclaim a watch; and I knew that when the constellation had nearly reversed itself, it would be time to start moving.

A man in camp sleeps sweetly, yet lightly. A dozen times through the dark hours the distant sharp bark of a fox, the rustle of a leaf, the deep sigh of a satiated and sleepy horse on a picket rope, the cracking of a coal in the embers of the camp-fire, the call of a night bird, or the snap of a twig under the tread of some of the animals of our cavalcade, called me with a gentle thoroughness from slumber. Each time it seemed as though the position of the encircling attendants of the North Star had changed by only a slight angle; and each time I sank instantly again into the perfumed rest that comes from a bed of balsam boughs after a hard day's work.

The hush that comes over all nature just before the dawn was near being my undoing, after all. The Dipper seemed to have made a great sudden sweep and was dangerously far over when my eyes opened again. The canvas was throbbing with the pulse of the morning breeze, but the eastern was darker than the western sky, where hovered a faint glow. It took an effort of will to get out into the cold air, but necessity compelled haste and I scrambled as gently as I could over the dewy covert, hurriedly put on the few clothes I had taken off the night before—dressing and undressing are mutually short operations in a hastily made camp—found my damp and clammy shoes, raked together the coals in the ashes, fanned a flame, belted coffee and munched a hasty breakfast of bread and some cold trout. My partner, chum, helpmate never stirred. It is wonderful how a trustful woman will sleep in the wilderness, safe in the superstition that he who sleeps beside her is competent to meet danger which may arise.

I dropped half a dozen cartridges into my pocket, together with a couple of biscuits in case the chase should be unduly long, shouldered the heavy rifle and strode out through the high grass, which was so beaded with dew that walking was like wading an ice-cold stream. The horses were standing on widespread legs, heads near the ground, asleep, while the burros, weary with the long pull with the heavy packs of the day before, were huddled together, lying on the ground.

The morning star was at its brightest as I started across the valley, but by the time I had picked a splashing path across the current of the little river and got fairly started up the trail, it was palling. Little flecks of purple cloud began to appear above the sun's approaching glow, as though they had been newly created. The range to the west began to lift its huge ascents into view in a purple radiance. The eastern hills grew from shapeless masses of gloom into rounded eminences with dainty fringes of aspens and slender minarets of spruces against the faintly glowing sky. I wished I had started half an hour earlier, and quickened my pace a little.

In the growing twilight I could see a furry skunk in his sleek coat of jet black and snowy white, treading the clumps of bunch-grass, picking up the benumbed insects before the sun's heat might give them the vitality to escape. In the trail ahead of me a fox trotted. I was conscious of the faint presence of his scent, but did not place it until I saw the flash of his fur above the grass. He knew I was following, but knew too that he was safest down in that sinuous passage between high walls of grass and flowers, on whose smooth surface he could make a far safer, swifter flight than over the rough ground to either side.

A mile or so above camp I left the trail and crossed the stream again, getting my feet no wetter in wading, but feeling the icy chill pervade the water in my shoes which my feet had warmed in the comparative dryness of the beaten track. Close to the rippling surface a colder breath moved and the scrubby willows had a coating of white frost. I brushed a furry moth from a twig in passing, but it was too cold for more than one very feeble flutter. It fell wide-stretched on the water and as the current swept it into a quiet eddy it disappeared so quietly that one might suppose it had sunk of its own weight. I marked the spot where lay a trout, so big that its mouth could take in an insect of that size without a splash, as a good place to drop a feathered imitation when I carried my rod that way.

There was no mistake that it was very light. My eyes had been growing accustomed to the dimness, meeting the dawn half way, but the first glow of the rising sun was just striking the tops of the higher hills. The sky was a turquoise blue all across the dome. The clouds, which had been purple, had faded to lavender, flamed with a tint of orange, and were now melting away to yellow fleeces. It would soon be time when all sensible deer would be deep in the thickets of the green timber, where it would be all but impossible to come upon one of them unawares. Already the burros, far down the valley where camp lay, were up and moving stidily down to get a drink at the river.

The southern hill before me was one I had made the year before as a likely place for deer. It rose in smooth slopes and narrow benches a thousand feet or so, fringed on the top with the edge of the deep thick forest of spruces which ran back on the plateau beyond. The ascending surface had spruce and aspen groves lying on it in long streamers, divided by half a dozen open grassy glades, each with a tiny rill gurgling down the centre, coming from the banks of snow which still lay protected by the dense shade of the crown of spruces. The streams were fringed with the succulent marsh herbs which deer and elk most fancy as dessert after filling up on vines and tender boughs.

It does not pay to hasten or to get out of breath when hunting deer, so I climbed very, very slowly upward, keeping in the shelter of the bushy young aspen that fringed the bigger trees at the edge of one of the ascending glades. At each step, as I placed my foot to avoid any crackling twig, I looked all around and listened for any sound of game. The simulation of the color of the early coat of the deer to the dry bunches of grass is so close that in the imperfect light it was well to study closely each outline, else some proud stag might bear his coveted burden of venison out of range at a bound, before my eyes had seen the slender legs and gracefully borne head.

There were plenty of tracks in the mellow earth, some almost obliterated by two or three successive dews, and some apparently as fresh as though the cushioned hoof had just been lifted from them. In spite of all my caution, a crack of twigs and stamp of hoofs off to the right indicated that an alarm had reached eyes or ears or nostrils of some deer, but I sat still and listened to the beating of my heart until apparently it decided that its suspicions did not justify precipitate flight, for though it went on, it was in a noiseless walk. From tree to tree I edged in that direction. I found the fresh tracks, evidently a buck of good size, and I followed carefully on a slant up the hill. I saw something moving ahead of me, and was ready to shoot, but it came fearlessly down toward me, evidently not seeing its danger. A doe with her two fawns was working down to a safe shelter in the willow tangle along the river. I did not want to turn them back in the direction in which the buck had gone, so I crouched behind a bush to let them pass. Only a pot-hunter fails to respect femininity and infancy in hunting deer. The mother was pushing along with all the ungainliness of her kind, neck out, ears back. One fawn wanted to stop for refreshments and was pushing in front of her like a calf at milking time. The other spotted pet was intent on play, bounding about in extravagant semicircles. His erratic course brought him directly upon me, and he stopped suddenly with legs braced at wide angles, so close that I felt the breath of his startled snort. His ears were opened wide, and his dewy nostrils quivered as he drew in a scent of whose danger he had yet to learn. His great soft eyes looked full into mine for a moment, and I could almost have reached out and touched him. Then he remembered his mother, who had passed on out of sight, gave a new-like expostulating bleat, bounded a couple of yards to one side, and gambled on in pursuit.

The shadow of my hill had by this time crawled down to the opposite slope in the valley, and the sun was shining full through the tops of the trees. A raven cawed and flapped lazily across the valley, high overhead on a tour of investigation. His keen eye had marked the murderous weapon I carried, and he circled above the mountain and lighted in a tall dead spruce to await the outcome of the hunt. The buck on whose track I was following was evidently intent on reaching shelter. He had been in no haste, cropping the herbage as he went along, but the determination with which the tracks forced themselves up the hill meant that he had a mind for the safe protection of the growing green timber forest. I must make haste to head him off, and as it would be fatal to hurry directly behind him, I crossed over into the next glade and then pushed steadily up the mountain toward the summit. Just at the very brow was a continuous grassy bluff over which any animal seeking the upper shelter must pass; and on this I threw myself down. I had no breath, and could not have aimed my rifle to save my life, so I devoted my whole strength and attention for a few moments to regaining some steadiness of respiration. In the valley way below three tiny spots of buff, the deer family I had intercepted, were crossing through the grass to a wide bed of willows that marked the filled-in site of a old beaver dam. Down at camp everything was still, and the absence of smoke told that the sleeper was still dormant. The raven cawed impatiently.

I became suddenly conscious that there was a deer in the trees off to the right and a little below me. How long he had been there I do not know, but I am certain that my eye had rested on the spot and its surroundings a moment before and saw nothing. I slipped down off the grass and into the trees and worked very cautiously in that direction. A shot downhill is so deceptive that hitting is pure luck, and I sought a place on the same level.

A stately buck he was, stopping for a final lunch on the tender shoots of a clump of vetch vines on the edge of the stream. His black nostrils were wet and shone with the high polish of new patent leather. His form was well rounded, his coat was smooth and glossy, and his spreading antlers full grown. In the motions of his eating, every muscle moved and quivered. The sight was so superb that it almost precluded murder, and I sat with rifle half raised and watched for fully a minute. His nostrils caught a breath of hostile odor, and he flung his head high, poised for flight, but not quite sure which way the danger lay. He remembered the alarm downhill and turned to look that way. The white head of the front sight rested against his curving neck, just back of the head, and the white bend rested in turn on the lower rim of the circle of the hind peep-sight. The sight was perfect and the finger crooked against the trigger almost without conscious volition.

A 45-70 bullet in the cervical vertebrae snuffs out all power of motion as though it were the flame of a candle. There was never a struggle, just a sudden collapse, and the beautiful animal lay in limp confusion sprinkling blood upon the verdure where he had just been feeding. The hunter's work was done and what remained was mere butchery. The rough surgery of the hunting knife must let out the blood in a foaming torrent before the heart ceases beating, and with the same flow release the remnant of life which still showed dimly in staring eyes. Then must follow the sneaky task of dressing the carcass, which had been a deer and was now venison. The raven flew from his perch and brushed through the trees above. It seemed as though the sound of the shot had summoned all the smaller predatory birds, the magpies and gray-jays, and I could hear their harsh cries approaching through the trees, as they fluttered closer and closer in short flights. Before my gory task was done they were busy, without fear for me, picking the dainty flecks of meat from the entrails, while two or three other ravens had joined the pioneer and were scolding from the tops of the trees because I was so slow in completing my work and leaving them a clear field. I hung the venison in a tree, protecting the exposed meat with boughs, and washed hands and arms in the waters of the rill. Then I struck out for camp. Under the tall grass red-leaved plants hugged the ground. Drops of dew had fallen on some of them, making the homeward path seem through a trail of fresh blood. The sun shone down on the valley hot and ungente. It seemed as though the warring grasshoppers unduly extended their flights to escape my presence. A startled grouse, breakfasting in a bear-berry bush, instead of rising to the nearest tree, whirled away clear across to the foot of the mountain, where it flapped deep into a tree as though murder was behind it. As I came up into camp the horses scented the blood and snorted as if I were some strange wild animal and moved uneasily on their picket-tops.

She had just awakened and was looking with sleepy eyes out into the sunny world. "Fresh meat," I cried. "Oh, did you get a deer? I can't know you were gone until just before I heard you shoot." Her eager interest flamed up in question about the events of the chase, and then, in a reverie—"One of those pretty, pretty things! How could you do it?"—Outing.

Trades For the Blind. At a recent conference on matters relating to the blind, held at London, a member announced that he had sent out papers to 100 institutions at home and abroad asking what trades and occupations they recommended for the blind. The following was the list he obtained, in order of merit: Basket, brush and broom making, piano tuning, mat weaving, chair caning, music (in all branches), mattress making, knitting, typewriting, legal and clerical work. As new employments he suggested telephone exchange work, linotype typesetting, reporting, gardening (for the partially blind), massage, lecturing, commercial agencies, organ blowing, bell ringing. In the discussion which followed much time was given to the question of massage, several doctors speaking in favor of it. In regard to typewriting, it was mentioned that such an office had been started in Birmingham. Four blind girls are now employed.

Avalanche Breakers. In Switzerland the people have entered upon effective plans to defeat the avalanche in its devastating work. No more need the traveler be told, "Be aware the awful avalanche," for these rolling, sliding bodies of snow, that accumulate into masses of destruction, are now broken up before they gain a dangerous amount of material or velocity sufficient to make them dangerous.

Along the mountain sides, where avalanches form, earthworks in the form of a V are constructed, with their points upward, and when the moving masses of snow come in contact with them they are broken apart and so deflected as to be rendered harmless.

Russian Railway Stations. Most of the railway stations in Russia are about two miles from the towns which they respectively serve. This is a precaution against fire, as many of the Russian dwellings are thatched with straw.

SIGNS USED ON RAILROADS.

Their Signals are Understood Every-where on the Continent.

It is not deaf mutes alone who employ the sign language. Railroaders have a tongue of this sort that, since railroadings began, has been growing until now anything that needs to be said in it can be expressed as perfectly as in words, says the Philadelphia Record. The signals of railroaders are made with the hands and arms in the daytime, and with a lantern in the dark, the lantern signals, by the way, being comprehensible at a far greater distance than the daytime ones. The latter are made with one arm or with both, at the brakeman's option. To go ahead, to stop and to back are the leading ones. The arms moved horizontally and vertically make the two first signals; the back turned and the arms pushed out makes the last one. The main lantern signals are an up-and-down, a crosswise and a circular movement. There are, of course, a hundred other minor signals, and these vary slightly in different parts of the country. But the main ones are as common and as intelligible everywhere among American railroaders as the English language itself.

MAKES GIFT TO UNIVERSITY.

John Dwight Donates $60,000 to Mount Holyoke College.

June 18 was a most notable day in the history of Mount Holyoke College. The day was celebrated by the dedication of the new Dwight Memorial Art building and the presentation by Miss Helen Miller Gould of $40,000 to endow a chair in Bible literature. At commencement, 1900, the announcement was made that John Dwight of New York had given $60,000 for the purpose of erecting an art building as a memorial to Mrs. Nancy S. Dwight, his mother, and Mrs. Clara Leigh Dwight, his wife.

The Manufacture of Ice. Thirty years ago the census found only four plants in the whole country for the manufacture of ice and they were all located in the southern states. In 1900 the number had increased to 787 (not counting concerns which manufacture ice for their own use exclusively, and only about one-half of them are located in the south. Since 1890 the amount of capital invested in this industry has increased from $9,846,468 to $38,204,054, or by 288 per cent, while the value of the product has increased from $4,900,983 to $18,874,513, or by 183 per cent.

FAVORITE OF THE KING.

Gen. Sir Dighton Probyn Carries His Majesty's Pocketbook.

Gen. Sir Dighton Probyn's title is "Keeper of the Privy Purse"—a title that can be taken pretty literally, for he really does carry King Edward's pocketbook and acts as his personal business manager. Sir Dighton will be 70 in another year, and has been a member of the King's household ever since his majesty took a liking to this veteran of the Indian Mutiny, some twenty-five years ago.

ago. At present Sir Dighton comes nearer to being assistant king than the prince of Wales.

Too Much Even for Him. Senator Daniel of Virginia tells of a man down in his state who never could be induced to acknowledge that any brand of whisky was bad, though he was willing to admit the truth of the ancient saying that some makes were better than others. Some jokers induced him to try some of a most villainous compound which they had labeled as a popular brand. The man took a generous drink, made a wry face and said: "Well, all whisky is good, but that's a little the poorest good whisky I ever tasted."

Dewey Knew Aguinaldo.

Admiral Dewey, in his testimony before the Philippine commission, told his opinion of Aguinaldo very concisely.

"Since you have asked my opinion," said Dewey, in answer to a question, "I will say I believe Aguinaldo was there for gain, for loot, for money and that independence never entered his head."

Senator Carmack asked him why he furnished such a man arms and helped to organize his army, to which the admiral replied that "all was fair in war," and that there were no American troops in the islands to oppose the Spaniards. When he assisted Aguinaldo he did not call him a robber and plunderer, but the "insurgent leader."

"I say I think he was there for loot and money," he continued. "Do you think he was there for anything else?" he asked, turning to Senator Carmack.

"I do," responded the senator.

"Well, I swear I don't," said the admiral emphatically. Answering several questions the admiral said he thought he knew Aguinaldo better than Gen. O'R. Gen. Bell or any other officer, as he saw more of him. He had not been "in Manila 48 hours before I saw he was there for loot, for he was then taking everything he could lay his hands on from everybody and I expect he got the lion's share."

The inquiry ended rather abruptly at 10 o'clock.

Senator Carmack asked: "You don't know of a single dishonest act on the part of Aguinaldo, yet you regard him as a thief?"

Admiral Dewey said: "I think I shan't answer that question," and taking his hat and bowing left the room.

Rathbone Again.

In the Senate Saturday Mr. Teller (Col.) presented a petition from Estes G. Rathbone praying for a full investigation into his performance of duties as director of posts of Cuba during United States occupation. He maintained that he was unjustly tried and unfairly convicted, and that he is entitled to a full, fair and impartial investigation by Congress.

Mr. Teller said the petition was unusual and the conditions were unusual, and at his request the petition was read in full.

Dr. Kellogg of the Battle Creek Sanitarium says that the boy who consumes cigarettes may not immediately feel the effects, but the narcotic poison is pervading the system, ruining the nerves and affecting the heart, and he will be apt to die early of paralysis, heart failure, or Bright's disease. The doctor is mistaken, so far as the latter is concerned. Nothing bright about any user of cigarettes. Even the odor is killing.—Adrian Press.

MOTHER ALWAYS KEEPS IT. "My mother suffered a long time from distressing pains and general ill health due primarily to indigestion," says L. W. Spaulding, Verona, Mo. "Two years ago I got her to try Kodol. She grew better at once and now, at the age of seventy-six, eats anything she wants, remarking that she fears no bad effects as she has her bottle of Kodol handy." Don't waste time doctoring symptoms. Go after the cause. If your stomach is sound your health will be good. Kodol rests the stomach and strengthens the body by digesting your food. It is nature's own tonic. Glazier & Stimson.

We do not pretend to advise any contemporary how to conduct his paper, but we can suggest to the Detroit Today, that it does not add to its influence to continually refer to the Governor and spell the name "bliss" not using a capital letter for the name. If Today does not admire Mr. Bliss, it need not belittle its own standing by descending to such a school boy folly, as to have the small "b" do duty. It's pretty small—and is no argument.—Adrian Press.

NOTICE OF SALE.

It is through the bowels that the body is cleansed of impurities. Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dizziness, and melancholia at first, then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. DeWitt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strengthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. Glazier & Stimson.

VACATION DAYS. Vacation time is here and the children are fairly living out of doors. There could be no healthier place for them. You need only to guard against the accidents incidental to most open air sports. No remedy equals DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for quickly stopping pain or removing danger of serious consequences. For cuts, scalds and wounds. "I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve for sores, cuts and bruises," says L. B. Johnson, Swift, Tex. "It is the best cure on the market." Sure cure for piles and skin diseases. Beware of counterfeits. Glazier & Stimson.

WASHTENAW FAIR, SEPT. 9-12. Stops the Cough and works off the Cold.

Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets cure a cold in one day. No Cure, No Pay. Price, 25 cents.

NEED MORE HELP. Often the over-taxed organs of digestion cry out for help by dyspepsia's pains, nausea, headaches, liver complaints, bowel disorders. Such troubles call for prompt use of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They are gentle, thorough and guaranteed to cure. 25c at Glazier & Stimson's drug store.

ACTS IMMEDIATELY. Colds are sometimes more troublesome in summer than in winter. It's so hard to keep from adding to them while cooling off after exercise. One Minute Cough Cure cures at once. Absolutely safe. Acts immediately. Sure cure for coughs, colds, croup, throat and lung troubles. Glazier & Stimson.

CHAPTER XI. HOT SHOT.

One look told Charlie that his friend had good news. Artemus was fairly bubbling over with the intelligence he had picked up. Such a smile upon the face of Barney looked bad for Capt. Brand and his great game; the foundations of his Spanish castle were getting shaky, and possibly the whole tremendous structure must come crashing down, engulfing him in the ruins. "What's the word?" asked Artemus. "All goes on serenely, so far as I know." Artemus shut one eye. "There's some high old fun in prospect." "Well, yes, I suppose so; St. Patrick's day is always oozing with good cheer in New York." "Ah! I mean for us; for our friend the captain." "That strikes closer home. Now, I knew you were the bearer of good news when I saw you enter." "I always said I was born under a lucky star, and this settles it beyond peradventure." "Well, tell me your adventures, and how good fortune attended you. All of which shall be to the glory of our cause, the vindication of truth and right, and the utter demoralization of Capt. Brand." "Come over here, where comfort and velvet chairs await us, and prepare yourself for a surprise that will, I guess, surpass anything you ever heard." So they settled down. Charlie endeavored to retain his composure and possess his soul in patience. He knew Artemus of old and that a ceremony had to be gone through with ere he would disgorge the secrets he possessed, such as would not disgrace the cross-questioning in one of the higher courts. "Well, now, you know what hopes I had with regard to the fellows on the Rialto; how I built up air-castles concerning the finding of one or more among them who knew Macauley by heart, and would, for a proper consideration, take pleasure in denouncing him to his face. "I only ran across one man who had played upon the boards with the great Macauley; he declared he would know him under any disguise; that his mannerisms must always betray his individuality even though he represented an Arab or a heathen Chinee." "Ah; that's the man we want," said Charlie. "And that's the man we won't get. You see, he had one experience with Macauley, and to this day he declares the mention of the man always sends a chill up and down his spinal column. In a word, he fears him worse than the devil fears holy water, and neither bribes nor pleading could induce him to say he would open his batteries on Brand. The most I could get him to promise was to see the other from a safe hiding-place, and then secretly give us his opinion, with the iron-bound proviso that his name would never appear in the matter." Charlie elevated his eyebrows. "I should say that man was a little bashful." "He admitted the soft impeachment, and confessed to a ghastly fear. No Macauley for him, thank you. A burnt child dreads the fire, you know." "It might be some satisfaction to us if he added the weight of his secret testimony to our own strong convictions in the matter; that is, it would perhaps influence Lady Arline." "No doubt, no doubt." "Will it pay to summon him, then?" This direct method of questioning was the best way of assisting Artemus along. It compelled an answer, and thus necessitated the unmasking of his strong batteries. "I hardly think so." "You know best, but I should like to hear your reasons for refusing what small favors the gods throw in our way." "And you shall, Charlie, my boy. In the first place, it would hardly pay us to depend at all upon such secret testimony. If we could inject some alcoholic fluid into this low comedian, to give him backbone, so that he would face Brand and finish the game in a blaze of glory, it would do very well; but I fear the only thing that would give the poor devil artificial courage, would at the same time steal away his senses, so that our cause would hardly make much progress. Don't you agree with me?" Charlie nodded in the affirmative. "That is one reason, you see. It wouldn't pay to bother with such a witness; time and labor and good point I wish to make. His evidence isn't needed." "Ah!" "Since I have found another way of ensnaring the wonderful Capt. Brand in a net which must render him utterly helpless. When the Rialto prospects grow dim, I had in my mind another alternative, by which I meant to make one last, desperate move, you know. It was suggested by something you said a long time back, in case business took us to London. "First of all, I began to make diligent inquiries among the various shipping houses down in the region about Fulton market, and soon struck off

"One man remembered the Hespa-sia and her sad fate perfectly. He had sailed a voyage on her, and was later on connected in some clerical way with the American branch of the house in whose interests she was sailed up to the time of her loss. "That branch house is still in existence and only a block away from where we stood talking at the moment; if interested in the Hespa-sia or her gallant captain, I could not do better than to turn in and make inquiries there. "When I opened my business with a gray-headed chap, who was really an agent, I wish you could have seen him jump about six inches off the floor, while the look of astonishment on his face was quite killing. For, as he presently informed me, as luck would have it, I had come asking about a vessel lost many years ago, about which no vestige had ever been discovered, in the very hour that the sole survivor of the luckless Hespa-sia had been sitting there in the same chair I occupied, and telling the most thrilling tales of his adventures in the deserts of Africa—the most exciting that ever fell from the lips of mortal man. "That was quite a unique situation—to sit in the same chair and this survivor of the Hespa-sia wreck had occupied within the hour. How it must have stirred your blood and set your nerves tingling! And then, just to think what rollicking adventures he had to tell of his life in Africa. By the way, haven't we heard something in that line before? I have an indistinct recollection of listening to some very entertaining reminiscences that rivaled the feats of old Munchausen. Perhaps, after all, it was only a dream. "Plainly, then, you think the old boy has been up to his tricks, and spinning his yarns to a fresh audience," Artemus remarked. "I confess that thought came to me." "Well, it struck me that way—at first." "Ah! then you found occasion to change your mind?" "I did." "And it wasn't the ogre?" breath-lessly. "Not a bit of it." Then Charlie gave vent to a whistle. There were two Richmonds in the field. The man they knew as Capt. Brand had a rival for the honors. It was growing decidedly interest-ing, and Charlie Stuart realized that his friend had certainly stumbled upon news of importance. Here, then, was Mate Ben Hazen, come to the surface after his long exile. Yes, it was a grand stroke of luck. They could doubtless easily prevail upon the mate to meet the imposter face to face, and tear away the mask with which he had all this time con-cealed his identity. Surely he would be willing to do this for the sake of his old captain's daughter. No wonder Charlie felt pleased. "Well," he said, at length, "it be-gins to look like business, I declare." "Very much so," remarked Artemus. "I can readily see there is some great fun in prospect if we can bring these two wonderful African travelers into contact." "Oh! glorious!" "And if we can get the mate to de-nounce this old ogre, our end is gained." "Who is to denounce him?" "Why, Ben Hazen, the mate, of course." "Ah! where will you find him?" "I thought—that is, I understood, or, at least, I took it for granted, you had found him." Artemus slowly shook his head in the most tantalizing manner. "I never said so." "Then I jumped at conclusions, and was wrong?" "You were." "If Ben Hazen is out of the ques-tion, I suppose this is one of the crew who has turned up?" Artemus lay back in his chair, with thumbs in the armholes of his vest. His attitude was consequential and triumphant; it plainly gave warning that he was about to fire a volley. "Guess again." "I am at my wits' ends." "How about the genuine Simon Pure captain?" Charlie caught his breath. "Good Heavens! that would be the most stupendous thing on record—coincidence without a parallel. But see here," as he detected a quizzical gleam in the other's fun-loving eyes, "this is too serious a thing to joke about, you know, my dear fellow." "You bet it is." "And you are in dead earnest?" "Never more, so in all my life—cross my heart if it isn't so." Then Charlie realized that he could believe him. "Tell me," he said, eagerly, "were you incredulous at first?" "Rather." "And how did you set about proving matters?" "I saw only one way—that was to look up this new claimant for the honors." "You did it?" "I had to. You see, I couldn't rid myself of the idea that it might after all be Macauley, our ogre, spinning his spider web." "That would have struck me the first thing." "Well, with me it was somewhat different, for the case stood out so clearly. You see, he came to the agency in company with the captain of the English steamer that picked him up in a small boat off the coast of Africa—he having at last escaped from the Arabs, who held him prisoner so many years. "This steamer was bound from Cape Town to New York, and had been thrown out of her regular course by a series of terrible southern storms. "They wanted to put him aboard some vessel bound for London; but, strange to say, spoke none during their subsequent voyage, so that he has been landed here." "Most remarkable. What a sur-prise for Arline! I truly hope this papa will prove more acceptable than the ogre has been," said Stuart, re-flectively. "I think he will," remarked Ar-te-mus, calmly. "What grounds have you for believ-ing so?" "The evidence of my judgment as brought to bear upon the matter by eyes and ears that are at least equal to the average." "Then you have seen him?" "Oh, ay." "And talked with him?" "Spent three hours in his company and he was very loth to have me break away, then." Really, that should settle it. In three hours Artemus could learn scores of things that would go to prove matters were as the new claim-ant declared. "And the captain—what of him? Is he anything like—well, our ogre?" "Not a whit in manner, and very little in appearance. These long years on the desert have darkened his skin and whitened his hair, but they could not destroy his noble nature. It shows in the determined and kindly glow of his eyes, in the almost heavenly smile, and warm clasp of the hand." "H'm! Well, I hope he'll be friend-ly," said Charlie. "Oh, he's wild to see you—to thank you for all that has been done. Don't worry a bit about that part of it—I've fixed matters," significantly. Charlie blushed a little. "Hope you haven't overdone it and made me out a heroic sort of figure. By the way, what did he think of the other?" "You mean—the ogre?" "Yes, Capt. Brand Number One we may say." "Well, I wouldn't care to stand in his boots when those two meet. There's going to be war to the knife, I can tell you." "Just as I thought." "All these years he has lived on the hope of seeing his dear ones again, and to find an usurper in his place makes him furious." "Could he cope with the rascal?" "His wild life among the Arabs has hardened his constitution like iron. Besides, he isn't an old man, although his hair is white. God help the ogre if once he falls into the avenger's hands." "Then we must see that this hap-pens as soon as possible. There is need of haste. Such a romantic story as the captivity and escape of Capt. Brand can't long be hidden under a bushel. Some enterprising reporter will get hold of it, and the affair can be spread out over a whole page of a yellow journal." "Correct. And for that reason I thought you had better see my cap-tain at once, so I took the liberty of fetching him along, and if you will kindly take a little walk with me, I'll introduce you to—papa!" (To be continued.)

WOULD BUY JERUSALEM.

Dowie Tells His Followers of His Ob-ject in Life.

For the first time in his career John Alexander Dowie has announced to his followers what his real aim in life is. Before a gathering of 4,000 persons in Shiloh Tabernacle, Zion City, he said that his only purpose in building Zion was to make enough millions of dollars to buy outright the city of Jerusalem and lead his people there to await the coming of Christ. "From the present outlook it will not be many years before we will have several Zion cities," said Dowie, "and we will make enough to accom-plish our great purpose." The theme of Dowie's talk and ev-ery remark were to show that Zion City is the fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah. He spoke upon "The City of God," and told of the great things Zion was to do in the world. Dowie averred the millennium is closer at hand than people imagined. The recent volcanic eruptions, he be-lieved, are warnings to prepare for the end of the world. He cited the Lake Shore as particularly suscepti-ble to seismic disturbances and de-clared that when the world is burned up in the awful fire that is kindling for Zion City will stand alone, un-harmed. "The theocratic party," declared Dowie, "will before long rule the world. Zion City will be the leading city of America in education, religion, commerce and finance. It will have a fleet of vessels plying between the continents." Cities like Zion are to be estab-lished in other places. Already offers of land have been received. Crowning a Queen Consort. There is quite a little difference between the ceremonies attending the coronation of queen consorts and those in connection with the crowning of reigning sovereigns. Thus while both are anointed with the holy chrism and invested with the crown the words accompanying these acts differ. When the crown is placed on the head of the queen consort, it is called "the crown of glory, honor and joy," and in the same way the sacred oil is described as "destined to in-crease her honors," but not to "set her apart for dominion."

Disposal of Diseased Carcasses

The Missouri State Board of Agri-culture calls attention to the following state laws relative to the handling and disposal of carcasses of animals that have died of contagious diseases: Section 2325.—Carcasses of Stock Dying of Contagious Diseases.—That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to engage in hauling the car-casses of swine, sheep, cattle and horses that may die of any contagious or infectious disease, or to sell, buy or give the same away. Section 2326.—Disposition of.—That the owners of such domestic animals that may die of any such contagious or infectious disease are hereby required to keep the carcasses of all such animals upon the premises of said own-ers, and shall in no case be permitted to sell or give such carcasses away, or remove the same, except as hereinafter provided. Section 2327.—Diseased Swine.—The owners of swine that die of any disease shall dispose of the carcasses within twenty-four hours after they die by completely burying the same at least two feet deep or burning the same upon the premises where they have died. It shall be the duty of the owner of swine that may be sick of any fatal disease to notify all persons owning or keeping swine on any ad-jointing premises of the existence of such disease as soon as the fact is known. Upon the failure of any per-son to comply with the requirements of this act it shall be the duty of any-one having knowledge of the same to report the facts to the constable, who shall proceed forthwith to enforce the law as provided in this act by caus-ing the carcasses to be disposed of by burying or burning the same at the expense of the owner: Provided, It shall be unlawful to bury said car-casses in or immediately adjacent to any water-course, ravine or slough leading through or into other prem-ises: Provided, that nothing con-tained in this act shall be construed as interfering with the rights of any city, incorporated town or village making such disposition of the car-casses of such animals as may die or be found dead within the corporate limits of any such city, town or vil-lage, as the municipal ordinances and regulations of such cities, towns and villages may provide. Section 2330.—Importing Diseased Sheep.—If the owner of sheep, or any person having the same in charge, shall knowingly import or drive into this state sheep having any contagious disease, or turn out or suffer any sheep having any contagious disease, knowing the same to be so dis-eased, to run at large upon any com-mon, highway or unenclosed lands, or sell or dispose of any sheep, knowing the same to be diseased, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

A Trip Through Illinois

From Farmers' Review: After pass-ing Joliet, the right of way was gay with wild prairie flowers, phlox, geranium, spiderwort, etc. Corn was four inches high and oats ankle deep. At Wilmington I saw the first peonies in full bloom. Wild spiraea were abundant along the right of way. The wild roses were in full bloom. Corn was six inches high and mostly once cultivat-ed. Rye was in full head. Near and through the coal region much of the soil needs thorough draining. Here the oats were overgrown with wild mus-tard, showing bad farming. After pass-ing Dwight agriculture improves. Oats here are exceedingly forward and strong. Peas are entertained that they may overgrow and lodge—but not al-ways does the forecast of the farmer come true. The probability now is that all crops will be heavy. Wheat in Adams and Schuyler counties will be heavy. Fruit, especially on the apple trees, has set in abundance. At Fairbury there is an extensive sorghum plant, at which hundreds of acres will be worked up this fall into syrup, sorghum and sugar. The stand is good and the crop clean. The park at Fairbury is now being laid out and is full of flowers, the local florists there having charge. Coal mines of many years' standing are located at this place. At Chenoa, 17 miles west, there are extensive tile works. Between Gridley and El Paso we found the first indications of an un-even stand of corn. There are many "scalds" where the clay comes near the surface, and there the stand of corn is uneven, and some washouts oc-cur, but these are local and not fre-quent. At Gridley we saw corn fully twelve inches high and strong. As we neared Peoria we saw a field of wheat and barley, both heading out. The blue grass was turning yellow with its bur-den of seed. Oats were strong and even, but with no serious indications of overgrowth. The fields of clover were in full bloom. In this section there are many remains of osage or-ange hedges, but their day, like that of the famous Hawthorne hedges of England, is about past. Near Peoria we found the loss of the Mississippi region, and along the region of the bottom lands, black walnut, sycamore, and so forth. One lusty black walnut, almost twelve inches through, gave promise of rare curls and crotches if it should live to be a hundred years older. Leaving Peoria en route to Keokuk, the Toledo, Peoria & Western Valley passed through one of the most beautiful garden centers of the world—the famous millinery district of Illinois. This was bright with the farms, orchards, rolling lands and a verdant scenery. It is the home of famous herds, blooded cattle, horses, and other live stock, and is populated by wealthy farmers. Here are the Mis-sissippi river counties, the location of the great fruit growing farms of the state, a region perhaps never equaled in its great diversity of agricultural products; a tract between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers smiling with farms and gardens and inhabited by intelligent citizens. It was pleasant to see it as we did in these pleasant June days, with its lush pastures, lustily growing crops and trees of dense and varied foliage. After passing La Harpe, wheat was found in full head and already bend-ing with its seed. A field of oats near the railroad was showing heads. A farmer at Burnside thought that his wheat and oats would turn him out $20 per acre, which is a probable over-estimate, even if the crops of those grains prove good. It seems, however, pretty certain, unless disaster over-takes the growing grains, that Illinois will this year harvest an immense crop of cereals. Near McCall we saw pastures thick-ly grown up with compass plant, an in-dication that these permanent pastures have been made naturally from the prairie sod without plowing. Near by were fields with corn more than a half knee high as it stood naturally. At Hamilton the writer climbed the high bluff, from which a fine view of Keokuk was obtained, as well as two long reaches of the Mississippi river. In the journey up the steep incline we saw in a village garden corn standing naturally as high as the hips and po-tatoes almost in blossom, which means tubers underneath the size of black walnuts. We have often been asked why the crops in village gardens are so much advanced over the same crops in the farmers' fields. There are four reasons at least. 1. Their situation is better protected from winds and changes in the weather. 2. The soil is better drained. 3. The crops in the gardens are more carefully cultivated. 4. These gardens are better fertilized. At Hamilton strawberries were fully ripe and cherries were red on the trees.—Jonathan Perlman.

Sorrel

Prof. J. C. Arthur, Botanist of the Indiana Experiment station, has this to say about sorrel: Sorrel is among the most trouble-some of weeds when once it has gained a foothold. It flourishes most on sandy soil, where the usual farm crops give only a poor stand. Its presence in a field is generally an in-dication of limited fertility, and it may become a pest on any thin soil, and especially sour soils. The farmer with rich fields and clean culture is not likely to notice it. Sorrel sends out runners just be-neath the surface of the ground, which start new plants and bind the whole together in mats. Patches of it are usually conspicuous from the red color of the stems, especially dur-ing the flowering time, and give fields a red appearance even at considerable distances. It is sometimes called red sorrel and occasionally horse sorrel. There is no direct method of exter-minating sorrel; it is too tenacious of life to be easily vanquished. First efforts must be given to cultural methods. A succession of hoed crops, if extra care is taken to let no plants escape destruction, will greatly re-duce the numbers; but plants at the edges of the field and seeds in the soil will be likely to restock the ground. It is generally in pastures and clover lands that the weed is the greatest pest, where it is not always expedient to use the plow. But whether the ground is under the cultivator or in sod chief reliance must be had upon means for increas-ing the fertility. The land must be made to grow good crops by using manure or chemical fertilizers. In this way the weed is choked by the other plants, and although it will not be exterminated, yet it is so much re-duced as no longer to give trouble. In this connection the use of air-slaked lime is especially to be recom-mended in addition to the fertilizers. Lime has had a reputation in this connection for a long time, and recent experiments confirm the opinion. Its application will do no harm to other crops, and is usually decidedly ben-eficial to them. It is a corrective for acid soil, improves the mechanical condition of stiff soils, and makes the natural fertility of the ground more quickly available. It should be ap-plied on sorrel infested fields at the rate of one to five tons per acre. Yorkshire-Berkshire Crosses. The Minnesota Experiment station has been carrying on some tests in swine feeding and breeding, under the direction of Professor Thomas Shaw. The professor publishes as one of his conclusions the statement that "these experiments do not sustain the view that the results will be less satisfac-tory from each succeeding cross of Yorkshires on Berkshires." It has been frequently asserted that one or two crosses were good, but that a con-continuation was bad. The conclusions, if borne out by future experience, will prove valuable to many swine raisers, especially to those that live outside of the corn belt or who wish to produce what are styled "bacon-hogs."

Paris, was a clerk on the house a few years ago, with no knowledge of dress-making. He is a very handsome man, and when he met a pretty dressmaker, gradually the two extended their ac-quaintance until to-day they are the joint aristocrats of fashion, standing easily at the head of all dressmakers in the French capital. Once through-ly established in a prominent way, the clever and ornamental young couple inaugurated a new regime. No hastily decision, no barred doors at the Ma-son Pequin. Madame was met at the door by monsieur himself, and to be met by Pequin was a treat. The most beautiful of Parisian elegances and the homeliest old dowager received the same flattering welcome, the same tender interest. The charming young man, the handsome man, both so deeply interested, both so deferential, both so intelligent. This was a new expe-rience and the Parisienne smiled and purred, bought more than she intended and came again. Taking a Man Unaware. Bland, Mo., June 30th.—F. B. "I began treatment at once and used one medicine after another, but with-out help, till at last I was just about to give up in despair. There is a vacancy in the corps of teachers at Milan owing to the resignation of one of the teachers and the position is now open for applicants who desire to teach the young ideas how to shoot.

Hillsdale has an automobile manufacturing company and they turned out their first complete vehicle last week. The company expect to manufacture their machine on quite an extensive scale and are having their plant enlarged.

Word has been received from Ira Savary, who went from this county to teach in the Philippines, that he has been ordered home on account of ill health and he is probably now on the way. He has a fine position of $1,500 a year. Mr. Savary is well known here.—Dexter Leader.

Some of those who started to raise tomatoes for the canning factory have met with bad luck. The potato bugs attacked the plants and ate them. The state veterinarian, who examined the cattle on the farm of Benjamin Feldkamp in Bridgewater, several of whose cattle have recently died under suspicious circumstances, advised Mr. Feldkamp to remove his cattle from his farm and to keep no more there for a couple of years. The doctor thought the disease was a fever brought in by Western stock.

At Jackson on Monday Herbert "Tug" Wilson and Walter Briggs, local toughs of that place unmercifully pummeled Joseph Preston, a visitor from the country, for the alleged reason that Preston was not generous enough in buying liquid refreshments. Preston was kicked about the head and was in a fair way for being killed when rescued by two prominent business men, who captured the toughs and handed them over to the officers. Preston will recover.

Hugh Cannon, who achieved fame and plenty of money as an inventor of universally-known topical songs, including "Goo-Goo Eyes" and "Ain't It a Shame?" languishes in the Jackson county jail as a common drunk. Cannon has made his home in Jackson for some time. Last Sunday, at the end of a protracted spree, he was landed in the police station, and the next day he lacked the $3 which was the extent of the fine assessed. The alternative was six days, which the songster is now serving.

A new switch board for the North Leoni, Grass Lake and Munith telephones was placed in D. L. Livingston's drug store the first of the week. The switch board has a capacity of over 100 'phones and it is hinted that an effort will soon be made to establish a local exchange in the village. This would be a very great improvement and we believe many of our business men and citizens would avail themselves of the opportunity of having a 'phone placed in the stores and residences if an effort should be made along that line. A 'phone is a very great convenience and saves many steps in the course of a year.—Grass Lake News.

Timothy Fohley, a farmer of Webster, says for 40 years he has planted potatoes in the old fashioned way by carrying the seed around in a basket on his arm, but this year an idea struck him and he clinched the idea by putting it into practical use. He says he made furrows to drop his potatoes into and then constructed a stone-boat that would hold eight or ten bushels of cut seed. He then hitched one horse to the stone-boat and started him in the furrow. He getting on his knees and dropping the potatoes in the furrow in front of the boat, thus planting as fast as a horse can walk, and he is very much pleased with the experiment.

WANTED.
We would like to ask, through the columns of your paper, if there is any person who has used Green's August Flower for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and Liver Troubles that has not been cured and we also mean their results, such as sour stomach, fermentation of food, habitual constipation, nervous dyspepsia, headaches, despondent feelings, sleeplessness, in fact, any trouble connected with the stomach or liver? This medicine has been sold for many years in all civilized countries, and we wish to correspond with you and send you one of our books free of cost. If you never tried August Flower, try one bottle first. We have never known of its failing. If so, something more serious is the matter with you. Ask your oldest druggist, G. G. Green, Woodbury, N. J.
