THE FLOODS.

Further Damage Is Caused by the High Water in the Mississippi Valley.

Keokuk, Ia., July 22.—The height of the flood in the Mississippi river was reached Monday south of here. The river fell an inch and a half at Keokuk and the fall will reach southern points by to-day. But the rise of a foot more in the vicinity of Canton, Quincy, Lagrange and Hannibal carried the water over thousands of acres previously uninjured. The highest water is between Lagrange and Gregory, where the water on Sunday was well below the rails of the St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern railway on the bank of the river. A flood is now pouring over the tracks and reaching to the steps of the coaches. This rise extended the flood clear back to the highlands at the foot of the bluffs. The roadbed is submerged and trains are delayed only by slow orders while running through water.

The rise Monday took out some more wheat in the shock which previously stood with its butts in water. Extension of the flooded district increased the damage total a large amount in dollars, though not a very great percentage on the enormous total of millions hitherto accomplished by the flood. The greatest part of the flood is between Gregory, ten miles below here, and Hannibal, 65 miles below, and conditions are the same havoc described during the last few days, only somewhat worse. Farmers are inclined to report much higher figures than a few days ago, but estimates sent up then need not be revised, and from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000 in Missouri along 75 miles of river frontage tells the damage done by the water in figures.

The river here is full of debris, the most northern point of the great flood, and rivers above are pouring in much drift from overflowed lowlands, though the Mississippi north of here is confined by bluffs close to the shore and not much farming land is exposed. South of here the flats include thousands of rabbits as passengers on logs, pieces of houses and other wreckage.

LARCENY CHARGED.

May Yohe Enters Formal Complaint Against Patnam Bradlee Strong.

New York, July 22.—A formal complaint of grand larceny has been made against former Capt. Bradlee Strong by May Yohe, who visited police headquarters accompanied by her mother and her lawyer, and there charged Strong, who recently disappeared from his home at Hastings, with the theft of jewels which she values at $250,000. Her complaint was entertained and a general alarm was sent out for the arrest of Strong. Miss Yohe's counsel said that the safe in the Knickerbocker Safe Deposit company, where Miss Yohe had kept her jewels, was opened Monday, and it was found that her jewels, valued at $250,000, had been removed, nothing of value being left in the safe except a few trifling trinkets. He also explained that pawn tickets calling for $100,000 worth of the missing gems had been recovered.

Miss Yohe offers $1,000 reward for Strong's arrest. It is said that the Strong family was willing to redeem all of the jewelry pawned by Strong, and represented by the tickets sent by Strong to his mother last week. This would cost them about $10,000. But they are not willing to assume the responsibility for all of the jewels which Miss Yohe now says were in the safe deposit box.

MINERS ADJOURN.

Practically Adopt President Mitchell's Recommendations and Issue Address to Public.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 21.—Having declared against a general strike, adopted a report calling on the American people to contribute $1,000,000 a month to aid the striking anthracite miners, provided for a maintenance fund and issued a stirring appeal to public opinion, the United Mine Workers' convention sang "America" at 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon and adjourned.

The appeal to the public recited the length the hardships and low wages of the miners, declared that they had lived up to the letter and spirit of their contracts and still refused to violate them, intimated that the purpose of the operators was to destroy the miners' union and then urged the people at large to bring all possible pressure to bear on the officers of the anthracite coal interests to induce them to treat considerately the appeal of the miners for arbitration. It continues:

"The miners believe that the best interests of the country are opposed to a general strike of the coal miners, and while they feel that in the present fight their union may be destroyed, nothing can compel them to break their agreements. The miners request the American people to bring such pressure to bear upon the anthracite operators and anthracite railroads as will compel them to submit to arbitration."

"The expenses of the miners call for a contribution of $1,000,000 per month from sources outside the union, and with this amount the miners are confident that they can win the anthracite strike."

The recommendations brought in by the special committee appointed in the executive session Friday, which were practically identical with those suggested by President Mitchell in his address on the first day of the convention, and which were adopted unanimously by the convention, were as follows:

First, that the national secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers be authorized to appropriate $500,000 from the funds of the national treasury for the benefit of the districts 1, 7 and 9. These are the anthracite districts.

Second, that all districts and sub-districts and local unions be asked to donate whatever they can afford for the support of the strike.

Third, that an assessment of ten per cent be levied on the earnings of members of the unions 6, 8, 12, 13, 15, 23 and 25, and that an assessment of one per cent per week be made on the members of districts 2, 5, 11, 14, 15, 16, 20 and 21. This assessment is not to be made against members of unions now on strike, but in such cases the assessments are to continue when the strikes are over, the manner of this being arranged by the unions.

Fourth, the assessments to be paid direct by the local unions to Secretary-Treasurer Wilson.

Fifth, that 35 per cent be deducted from the salaries of all national district officers and organizers.

Sixth, that the assessments begin from July 16.

Seventh, that all contributions be made by the national organization be distributed pro rata to the anthracite district pro rata, as shown by the last Coal Reports.

Eighth, that each local union be requested to aid as far as possible in securing work for men now on strike. In this connection the good offices of the American Federation of Labor will be requested.

Ninth, that an address be submitted to the American people.

The reading of the report of the committee and the appeal to the public was listened to in absolute silence, but as the voice of Secretary Wilson ceased there came a tremendous cheer from the delegates that overshadowed their unanimous adoption which followed a few minutes later.

President Mitchell has made an estimate of the number of strikers and dependents in each district, and the weekly revenues to be derived from each district under the decision of the convention, together with amounts of weekly assessments by districts. He fixes the total number of strikers at 183,000; total dependents, $250,000; estimated weekly expense, $500,000. Total estimated weekly contributions from districts, sub-districts, locals and the general public, $404,000.

Kills the Woman Who Had Refused to Marry Him and Commits Suicide.

Marshall, Mo., July 21.—George Wiley shot and killed Miss Dovie Flynn, step-daughter of Richard Dearking, a Chicago & Alton railroad employe, at the latter's home here at midnight Saturday night, and then committed suicide. The woman had refused to marry him. Wiley had intercepted Miss Flynn on her way home from a religious meeting and walked with her to her home. Mrs. Dearking had called to her to come into the house, and as she was passing through the door Wiley shot Miss Flynn from behind. She died with a few minutes without making a statement. Later Wiley's body was found in the street in front of the Dearking home. He had shot himself between the eyes, and apparently died instantly.

Charles Kubicek, who lived at 7434 Langley avenue, was 28 years old and leaves a widow and son three years old. Duffy Kubicek lived at 7444 Champlain avenue and was 24 years old. He leaves a widow and daughter.

MORE LADY CHAMPIONS.

St. Louis—Misses Faye Johnston and Adele Armstrong won the bread-making championship against sixteen contestants in the competition at the institute. We call the winners champions. And each of them display their skill to the hilt. "Hurray," "hurray," and all the others that can be said. For these attractive maidens who are best at baking bread.

The "woman leader at the bar" is something good to see. And she who plays the violin may fill our hearts with gladness. Each gave profession and each sport. Each woman at its head. But here's a "good for you" to those who won by making bread.

The world is full of heroines. A large and lengthy list. May be compiled of those who win from boxing down to whist. But here's to those who realize that making must be fed. The lovely ladies who have won the prize for baking bread.

O, yes, the bands have played for maids who tell us "why" and "how." Each going, riding, ping-pong dame has laurels on her brow. But these two maidens. How easy 'tis to know that soon they'll wed. They must be beautiful and wise. They won at making bread. —Josh Wink, in Baltimore American.

A WINSOME VILLAIN

BY JOHN H. RAFTERY.

THE advent of Helen Barr as stenographer created a genuine sensation in Hotel Packingham. The staid manager, broad of paunch and bald of head, began to dictate his own letters. Instead of leaving them to his assistant. The chief clerk surprised even his own high standard of sartorial splendor and curled the ends of his mustache so high that the points served him as "a sight" for the aiming of many glances of admiration. The captain of the bellboys began to throw out his chest and take on the airs of a grown man, the clarion tones of "front" became music to the ears of the "buttons," for it required a sudden appearance within range of Miss Barr's incomparable eyes. Even the house detective, the steward and the door men lighted up, and as for the male guests, they suddenly developed into continuous and most voluminous letter writers.

Miss Barr was a beauty, as anyone could see. Her hair was auburn and her eyes dark blue. The clerk insisted that they were "royal purple," and bet a box of cigars with a bold traveling man that she would say so herself if asked. He lost the wager, however, for when the saucy question was put to her, she blushed beautifully, and said: "I never noticed, sir." But, as the inquisitor attempted to push his investigation, the girl turned back to her typewriter and murmured: "Anyway, there's no green in them." This innocent retort had the effect of a rebuff, and Miss Barr's popularity "went off a point" with the clerk. But she could be very gracious without stepping across the limitations of perfect decorum, and her calm amiability of disposition and habitual cheerfulness of expression intrenched her popularity without permitting familiarity.

Capt. Hugh Baldwin, U. S. A., came to the Packingham to "recuperate" after a period of detached service in South America. He was tall, sunburned, blond, good to look at and distinguished, with all the frank gentility of a soldier and an officer. Of all her customers Miss Barr had found Capt. Baldwin the most interesting. He was friendly without being obtrusive, gay without being silly and respectful without being distant. The alert beauty had found out a great many things about him in the course of a week, for he wrote to Mrs. Baldwin every day. He had assured her that "he didn't know how soon he'd be home" because he was still "far from well," etc. These seemingly unwarranted explanations gave Miss Barr the idea that the handsome captain was something of a rogue, for she had never seen a finer example of robust manhood.

The number of gay young men who called on him seemed to indicate that he might be what she vaguely suspected as "one of the boys." Some times he wrote letters to other women than Mrs. Baldwin, and, although these were usually noncommittal and of the jolly sort that might well pass between a jolly bachelor and his society acquaintances, yet Miss Barr fancied that they were not the kind of letters she would like her husband to be writing if she were married. Then, thought the girl, "he has children. Let's see." He mentioned Amy, Tom, Catherine and Baby Hugh. Umph! I think he is pretty gay for a man of family." It was not till he began the practice of leaving flowers and bonbons on her desk that Helen awakened to a realization of Capt. Baldwin's possible villainy. Without reflecting that his character, good or bad, should in no way interfere with her peace of mind, she began to worry, grieve and get pale. She knew that his wife was urging him to come home, and she was sure that his trumped-up excuses were either frivolous or utterly untrue. Finally she asked him to "please stop giving her presents," but try as she might she couldn't find an excuse for mentioning his wife and his duty toward his family. "I'm not supposed to know anything about that," she thought, and yet she puzzled over the question whether his candid display of his own duplicity was not proof positive that he was a shameless wretch, making love to an innocent girl without even taking the precaution to conceal his life obligations.

And yet she could not suppress the consciousness of pleasure in his presence. He quit his gift giving and dictated more letters, which proved that his wife was suspicious and had perhaps accused him of infidelity of some kind. He never discussed the contents of these letters with Helen, but rattled away as if she were a mere machine, and then changed the subject to any of a hundred delightful themes of which he seemed to be anxious to hear her talk. When at last he seemed to drift into a more serious frame of mind and habit, Miss Barr found herself unreasonably gratified. Her heart gave a joyful bound one day when she heard him tell a friend one day that he was "on the water wagon," but an access of virtuous anger seized her that same evening, when, for the first time, he came to her and asked quite calmly and respectfully, if she would go to the theater with him. She made a pitiful effort to "freeze him" with her answer, but her eyes were brimming before she could turn away, and she said nothing. He walked away, and from the corner of her downcast eye she could see that he went into the buffet.

The unhappy girl spent a sleepless night, for she had neither parent nor relative to share her troubles. A dozen times she resolved to beg of Capt. Baldwin to quit the hotel and go home to his wife. She thought of writing to him, or refusing to take his letters, of ignoring him, and finally resolved to do his work if he persisted, but remain deaf and blind to his personal attentions as she had done with every other man at the hotel. But her tired heart was in a flutter again the moment she got behind the railing of her little office, for she saw the captain strolling nervously about the rotunda. She kept her eyes on her work, but she knew he was watching her. Her work was cleared away and she was ready to leave for luncheon when he came suddenly to the desk and said:

"Take a couple of letters, please, miss?" She did not look up, but she was aware of a strange, hard note in his voice. He began with a letter to "Dear Catherine," as usual, and Miss Barr was wondering what new subterfuge he would palm off on his wife, when he began: "You have been a good sister-in-law to me, and I hope you will succeed in satisfying my brother, that—"

Miss Barr's cheeks were aflame with excitement. Catherine was not his wife, then! She could hear her heart beat the music of those words. But when he came to the end of that letter and said: "The fact is, I've made up my mind to get married and settle down if the girl will have me," Miss Barr got pale again and trembled. But the worst was to come. She could have struck him when he leaned across the rail and said: "Now, I want you to write out a proposal for me." She didn't hear exactly what followed. Her trained fingers flew mechanically over the keys as he dictated a stilted and very formal proposal, beginning "Dear Miss" and ending "Your anxious and devoted Hugh Baldwin."

"What's the address?" she asked, coldly.

"Here's the envelope," he said in frigid tones.

She picked it up with quivering fingers, said: "Fifty cents, please," and read the address—"Miss Helen Barr, Hotel Packingham, City."

And they stood there smiling into each other's eyes.—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Fancies of Fashion That Are Seasonable

Some Charming Gowns and Beautiful Materials for Mid-Summer Wear.

THE daintiness of the muslins, those that are printed in color as well as those painted by hand, is something to see, baffling description in the delicacy of shading and beauty of effects. Lace incrustations and insertions give additional lightness to these fairly like confections. A novelty, one of the few that we are being permitted this year, is the use of the open-work embroidery on cambric, that we know under the generic name of "Swiss work," as a dress trimming. This is used in combination with lace.

For example, a frock of painted gauze, the ground the palest lilac tint, and floral wreaths in shades of rose-pink and green hand-painted all over it, is footed with a deep flounce of Swiss work which is both edged and topped with medallions of ecru guipure. The bodice boasts a yoke of Swiss work, this also passing in a narrow line down the center of the front, while the mauve painted muslin pouches under the yoke and at each side of the vest, edged with ecru lace medallions. In like manner, the cuff is a puffing of Swiss work set into a tight band of lace, and the bell of the upper sleeve above this cuff is edged with ecru lace. String-colored lace is laid as a flat band about ten inches from the foot of a pink muslin skirt; under the band is a full flounce of Swiss work, edged with five frills of narrow Swiss edging. The slightly pouched bodice is set into the belt of Swiss work, and trimmed in several lines with the string-colored lace running up to a deep collar of the Swiss work edged with narrow lace; plaits of pink chiffon make a tiny three-cornered vest up to the throat.

Voiles, canvases and open weaves under various names—aeolienne and etamine, and so on—are extremely fashionable, and many gowns are prepared in these light semitransparent fabrics. The combination of green of a vivid tone and dark blue, vulgar in its essence as it certainly is, claims many suffrages.

A pale blue glaze, covered with a green canvas, the lining well shown by lines and diamonds of lace, is pretty and smart; it has a belt and sash ends in a dainty chene silk, in which green predominates, and a choux of the same silk is at the bust, under a yoke of the blue glaze, left plainly unfolded and unplaited, but trimmed with insertions of lace.

A fawn-colored aeolienne is placed over rose-pink glaze, and trimmed with pink-tinted lace; the skirt has a deep flounce of the lace, headed by several rows of pink silk machine stitching, showing well enough on the fawn; above that, the skirt is in long-wise tuckings. The bodice has a narrow vest of the pink lace, and the edges of the bodice are tied across this with straps of silver braid, each fastened with a silver tassel ornament. The sides of the bodice are tucked liberally, and there is no collar band.

A black and white spotted aeolienne has several tiny flounces in black and white spotted muslin round the foot; it is made over white silk, which also forms the belt, fastened with a diamond buckle; the vest is of painted white chiffon, and there is a lovely deep cape collar of Irish point lace.

A biscuit-colored canvas is trimmed with three curved bands of chene silk embroidered with gold thread on the skirt, the bodice being a coatee with postillion-tailed basque in ecru Irish point, finished with a deep collar of chene silk, on which motifs of Irish point are embroidered with gold thread.

One of the prettiest things in the world of dress at the present moment is spotted chiffon. Hitherto we have fallen enthusiastic victims to spotted muslin, spotted velvety, spotted foulard, to everything spotted, in fact, except spotted chiffon, and I have never seen anything daintier than a white chiffon frock pin-spotted with black, the skirt adorned with three graduated flounces trimmed and headed with horizontal lines of narrow black velvet, the cool, full transparent sleeves being gathered into innumerable tiny tucks just below the shoulders and again at the wrist, while the bodice is softened with "old ivory" Alencon lace, which forms also a tiny pointed yoke over pale blue satin, the deep foiled "ceinture" being of the same.

Another delicious confection which ran it very close in my affections, was of white spotted muslin—feather stitch muslin is, I believe, the right name—lavishly trimmed with broad Valenciennes insertion, edged either side so quaintly with narrow muslin embroidery and little quillings of pale blue silk, while there are touches of narrow black velvet and silver braid on the bodice.

Such are some of the gowns of which more or less are seen every day at Newport at the present time.

Another class of gowns are those for dinner or tea wear, and of these we show two rather elaborate models in our illustrations. One is chiefly composed of lace with large medallions set over an underdress of plaited chiffon; loops of velvet, centered with diamond ornaments, complete it at bust and waist.

The other is in accordion-plaited chiffon or gauze, with a deep cape collar and stole front, cut slightly low, is finished with a scarf of black chiffon, and fastened with a diamond ornament, a similar touch of black completing the waist, all of which form an effective toilette.

DESTROYERS TO BE TESTED.

The British Admiralty Orders a Remarkable Experiment to Be Made.

In order to test the strength of the torpedo-boat destroyers the British admiralty has ordered a remarkable experiment to be made at the Portsmouth dock yard. One of the dry docks is being especially prepared for the destroyer Wolf, where she will be subjected to a series of tests which will include hogging and sagging strains.

At first she will be sagged by being hung by the head and stern only from two platforms, having no support beneath. The middle will then be hogged that is, she will be balanced across a pile of timber so that the full strain of the unsupported fore and aft parts will be thrown on the center of the vessel. The experiments will prove whether a destroyer's hull is so weak, as was suggested in the case of the Cobra, that the back breaks when a wave lifts her amidships or a sea lifts her in such a manner that the wave is hollow beneath her middle.

Palilian Festival at Rome

A Twentieth Century Picture of Caesarean Splendor.

THE Palilian festival, which is observed annually at Rome with imposing ceremonies commemorates the founding of the eternal city. It derives its name from the old Latin divinity, Pales. Originally the festival was of a purely bucolic character; shepherds and cattle jumped over a straw fire for purposes of purification, and cakes and milk were offered as a sacrifice to the goddess. Nowadays more elaborate customs prevail, the name being the only feature that has been retained. This year's festival, which was observed on the 4th of May, exceeded in sumptuousness anything that has been seen of recent years. On the heights of the Urbs quadrata was inaugurated a historical procession which took astonished sightseers from abroad back to the days of imperial Rome. The procession was led by Numidian horsemen, mounted pretorians and bodyguards on foot. They were followed by mimes, dancers and acrobats, a group of Dacians clothed in wild animal skins, and the cohorts of legionaries. Gladiators in white, red and blue tunics were grouped in picturesque tableaux. A palanquin, carried by four Moorish slaves, housed Signora Millotti, the famous Italian artist. It was followed by gay groups of patricians and their ladies in elaborate Roman and Grecian gowns with gold and jeweled trimmings, and dainty dandies, accompanied by slaves and beautiful pages. Pompous freedmen filled the space between the first and a second, still more elegant, palanquin in which reclined a noble matron, accompanied by a page who wielded a magnificent peacock fan. Two steers with gilded horns drew the carriage of the imperial family, which was preceded by a detachment of slaves and a troop of Gallic guardsmen. Then followed the emperor, clad in consular robes, reclining in a carriage drawn by Ethiopian slaves. Next came more pretorians and the ephebes, who were to take part in the festival games, children with wreaths and flower baskets, shepherds and peasants, and finally the young steers and sheep set apart for the sacrifice, priests, and their attendants, vestals in white robes and the lictors, bearing the axe and fasces, the insignia of their office. A motley crowd brought up the rear. After marching twice around the stadium the procession approached the center, where an altar had been erected. The imperial family and the senators were then seated in a semi-circle upon curules, chairs of state, the children scattered their flowers among the patricians, and the high priest with the Vestals Maxima approached the steps of the altar and lighted the fire, amid the applause of the gaping multitude. A chorus of 300 voices accompanied the sacrificial ceremony with the song of Horatian Carmen Saeculare, which had been set to music by Maestro Cellini especially for this occasion.

The War Dogs of Germany

They Are Taught to Carry Messages and Ammunition.

THE natural instincts of the dog, his docility, watchfulness, endurance and reliability, have induced the German war office to use him for military purposes. The raising and training of the so-called war dogs has been entrusted to the sharpshooter branch of the service, with a commissioned officer in charge. It is his duty to train the dogs, especially for picket duty. The prime essential in the canine educational scheme is to develop the faculty of watchfulness so that the pupil will give warning of the approach of a stranger by a subdued growl, instead of a loud and dangerous bark. Next, the dog must learn to carry messages from one point to another with absolute precision. Reports entrusted to him by advance pickets he must carry to headquarters without loss of time. As soon as he has delivered the message he must return to the place from which he was dispatched. The picture shows how the canine messenger carries his papers—in a small leather bag attached to the collar.

But a truly efficient war dog has still other missions to perform. He should be able to carry ammunition to the sharpshooting detachments at the front. And after the battle he is supposed to assist in locating wounded and disabled soldiers and announce eventual discoveries by short, sharp barks.

Results like these indicated can be obtained only after a prolonged course of expert training, and then only with pure-blooded animals. The breeds most in demand are poodles, pointers and Scotch collies. The latter are preferred, because with marvelous intelligence they combine a hardiness which enables them to defy climatic changes.

Germany is not the only country which employs dogs for military purposes. France has, for some time, used them in connection with the army hospital corps and the army police service. In Italy they are employed for carrying drinking water and light refreshments to detached posts. In the Alpine divisions of Austria they are taught to act as guides as well as messengers.

The officers of the United States army do not take kindly to the introduction of canine auxiliaries, but the wonderful success which has attended their enrollment in the continental armies may work a revolution and lead to the formation of a military dog-training establishment.

Lovers of dogs are not surprised at the intelligence displayed by the German war dogs. They consider their feats merely as a rational development of the wisdom of which every dog is possessed in a greater or less degree.

RUIN BY HIGH WATER

Floods in Mississippi Valley Are Very Costly.

The Damage, It Is Said, Will Exceed $2,000,000.—Farmers of Illinois, Iowa and Missouri Suffer Severely.

Keokuk, Ia., July 21.—Exploration of the flooded districts of the Mississippi river from Keokuk south, show conditions beyond the appreciation or realization of any but people of long experience with the father of waters. In its most destructive mood, the situation is growing worse hourly and a great conflagration in a great city could not be more rapidly destructive of values than the antithesis a hundred miles below Keokuk. There is absolutely not the slightest chance of stopping this dozen times most costly flood in the history of the great river above St. Louis. The correspondent went all over the worst damaged area Sunday in the steamer Silver Crescent and found everywhere the greatest crop ever known under water deep enough to float a steamboat. People at the river cities give an immense mass of details, all to be generalized in losses aggregating many millions of dollars; hundreds of farmers, rich ten days ago, penniless and homeless, hundreds watching and praying that the great levees may hold, which are now their bulwark against additional millions of loss and many cases of penury.

Loss Will Exceed $2,000,000.—Careful estimates of the territory covered and generalization of the statements of best informed people indicate the loss up to this time is about $6,000,000, with every prospect of $2,000,000 or $3,000,000 additional by the rise above not yet reaching the lower stretches of the river. Most of this loss is on the Missouri side of the river, between Keokuk and Hannibal.

Saved by the Levee.—Alexandria was protected to the last by the Egyptian levee, the breaking of which would send four feet of water all over the town. Gregory is submerged, except the white church in which service was held Sunday, the praying congregation from the country reaching the house of God by the railroad track, which is still above the flood in a waste of water miles wide. Other towns and cities on the islands are beyond the danger line. Immense fields are seen in a great lake with the shore visible only with a glass, where the high bluffs bound the bottoms. Islands dotting the river at its normal stage have disappeared except for the tops of trees or fringe of high shore willows slightly protruding like a circular green coral reef. Occasionally a house on piles or stilts is seen, but generally only roofs protrude to mark the center of farms of corn.

River Still Rising.—The river is rising all the time, six inches during the day in the immense area of 700 square miles, and the worst to come by the extension of the flooded area by the water passing levees it is now topping. The chief flood thus far is on the Missouri side from Keokuk to Louisiana, with Canton and West Quincy as centers of the country hurt worse. On the Illinois side are three continuous levees for 40 miles from Warsaw to Quincy above the water, and are thus far safe, but farmers are afraid of crevasse from muskrat holes and every rod of the redoubt is watched day and night. The breaking of these levees would flood 175 square miles in Illinois and destroy $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 worth of corn. The levees below Quincy are in the same situation, except that they are lower and less firm.

On the Missouri Side.—Opposite Quincy, in Missouri, is still another center of special devastation which is appalling. North 12 miles to La Grange and south to Holton large prairies are well under water, reaching from the Illinois bluffs to the Missouri bluffs, at least ten miles. Levees hastily thrown around farms disappeared in a fierce current rushing from above through the draw of the Burlington bridge, carrying everything before it. Lone Tree prairie, ten miles square, is deserted, the population having flown to Quincy and the bluffs on the Missouri side, from which they watch the complete destruction. Fabius river, 15 miles above Hannibal, is high and furnishing a route for the Mississippi to flank and reverse the levee, as the Fox river does 40 miles up the Mississippi. This flanking movement makes even the highest Missouri levees ineffective. Around La Motte, Silverton, Busch Station, Clemens, Ashburn, north of Hannibal, there is more wheat than at other places, and all in the shock is mostly washed away. The chief crop there is corn, however, and there is the same ruin as at other places.

Rough Weather on the Lake.—Milwaukee, July 21.—F. & P. M. steamer No. 1, with 100 passengers aboard, was compelled to return to Milwaukee by a storm which caused a panic on the vessel.

HONORS FROM GERMANY.

Decorations to Be Conferred on Many Americans Who Aided in Entertainment of Prince Henry.

Berlin, July 22.—Cabinet orders conferring decorations on about 300 Americans who had to do with the trip of Prince Henry of Prussia to the United States are in Emperor William's hands for signature. The foreign office sent the papers to his majesty a fortnight ago, and their return and the announcement of the decorations are expected any day. The list was made up largely by Dr. Von Holleben, the German ambassador at Washington, though of course Prince Henry personally suggested a good many names.

The delay in fixing up the list seems to have been due to the necessity for ascertaining beforehand whether persons in official positions would and could accept. There has been much correspondence between the foreign office and Dr. Von Holleben regarding the attitude of the American officials, whose individual preferences, as set forth in the correspondence, are kept inviolable here. However, after months of exchange of views the list was finally agreed upon and sent to the United States embassy for revision. The United States ambassador, Andrew D. White, following precedent in such cases, politely declined to make any suggestions, and returned the list to the foreign office without any expression of opinion. It appears that a standing instruction of the state department is that the bestowal of decorations shall be discouraged as much as possible, because decorations have no place in the American government system, cannot be returned in kind, and nearly always lead to diplomatic annoyances.

It is understood that the decorations are chiefly various classes of the Crown order. Each class of the several Prussian orders has a number of shades. In the Red Eagle, for instance, there are 30.

WILL NOT ACCEPT.

Senator McLaurin Sends President His Declaration of a Proffered Appointment.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 22.—President Roosevelt is in receipt of a letter from Senator John L. McLaurin, of South Carolina, declining the proffered appointment to the vacancy on the bench of the United States court of claims. The president, it can be said, much regrets Senator McLaurin's decision, as he believes that his senatorial experience and his career as attorney-general of South Carolina would have rendered him a particularly good addition to the court of claims. The president now is uncertain what he will do about Senator McLaurin. It is understood that he is anxious to appoint him to some position in recognition of what the president regards as his services to his country and his ability in public life. Senator McLaurin's letter is couched in the most positive terms and evidently was based in particular upon a newspaper article which accompanied the letter. The article stated that the senator had sold himself for the prospect of getting such an office as that offered to him. It can be said, however, that the president regarded such a type of accusation as beneath notice and sincerely regrets that Senator McLaurin should have deemed it necessary to pay any attention to it. Senator McLaurin evidently has changed his mind about accepting the proffered appointment since he was in Oyster Bay on July 11. At that time he indicated his readiness to accept the vacancy of the court of claims and the only question then was when he should resign from the senate.

CHANGES HANDS.

Adolph S. Ochs Purchases the Philadelphia Public Ledger—Over $2,250,000 Involved.

Philadelphia, July 22.—The Philadelphia Public Ledger has been purchased by Adolph S. Ochs from George W. Childs Drexel and the Drexel estate, and possession was at once given Mr. Ochs. The purchase includes the Public Ledger estate, comprising about half a block of improved property on Chestnut and Sixth streets facing Independence Hall. The price paid is not made public, but it is stated on good authority that over $2,250,000 are involved in the transaction. Mr. Ochs has no associates in the transaction except that a substantial interest has been acquired by James M. Beck, of Philadelphia, who represented the purchaser in the negotiations. There is no underwriting and with the exception of Mr. Beck's interest, Mr. Ochs is the sole owner. The new owners say there will be no radical changes in the appearance or policy of the Public Ledger. Mr. Ochs, who is the principal owner of the New York Times, Philadelphia Times and Chattanooga Times, when asked if the Philadelphia Times, which is now being successfully conducted by his brother, George W. Ochs, is to be consolidated with the Public Ledger, replied: "Not at present, perhaps not at all."

MANY ARE DROWNED

Steamship Sunk in River Ebb by a Tug.

Between Fifty and Sixty Lives Are Lost—Ferryboat Capsized in Volga River and Fifty-Night Perish.

Hamburg, July 22.—The steamship Primus, of Hamburg, with 185 passengers on board, was cut in two and sunk by the tug Hanna on the River Elbe at 12:30 o'clock Monday morning.

It is asserted that divers have already recovered 45 bodies, but as yet it is impossible to verify the death list. An attempt will immediately be made to float the vessel, and when this is done it is believed a number of bodies will be found. Estimates of the number of dead vary from 50 to 60. A large number of the survivors were injured, though not seriously.

The Primus was an excursion steamer from Buxtehude, province of Hanover, Prussia. The disaster occurred between Blankenese and Nienstedten. Among the passengers were the members of the Ellbeck Male Choral Society.

At the time of the accident the Primus was crossing the river channel near Blankenese, from the southern into the northern fairway. According to witnesses aboard the Hanna, the movement was made too precipitately.

The Primus struck the tug's engine room and the Hanna endeavored to push her ashore, but the tug grounded and the ships parted. The Primus then sank. In the interval, however, about 50 of her passengers were able to reach the Hanna by means of ropes and ladders. Seventy more were picked up by the tug's boats, while others swam ashore.

Stories of the Disaster.

The terrible panic that occurred on the Primus when the Hanna struck her rendered the efforts to save her passengers almost useless. Fortunately, the steamer Dolphin came up immediately and succeeded in saving 60 of those on board the sinking steamer, while other boats assisted in the work of rescue. Some of the survivors furnish graphic descriptions of the awful suddenness of the disaster. According to their story, the band was playing and many couples were dancing on deck when the crash of the collision came like a thunderbolt. The vessel gave a great list, her deck taking such an angle that it was impossible for the passengers to keep their feet. Those below scrambled up the companionways, but most of the persons in the saloon were drowned. Men fought for their own safety regardless of others.

Boilers Explode.

In the midst of the confusion, the boilers exploded, adding to the horror of the scene, and many persons are said to have been injured by flying splinters of metal. More of the Primus' passengers would have been saved by the ropes thrown from the Hanna had it not been that before those who seized the ropes could be hauled on board they were pulled off from the lines they had grasped by other persons struggling in the water, and all were drowned in the hideous confusion.

Monday morning enormous crowds poured out from Hamburg to the scene of the collision, and the shore was thronged with thousands of friends and relatives of those on board the sunken steamer, who had come in heartrending anxiety to learn the fate of their friends who were among the excursionists. Many sad scenes were witnessed as the bodies of those lost were washed upon the beach or brought ashore by divers.

Fifteen Drowned in Russia.

Kieff, European Russia, July 22.—Fifteen persons were drowned by a sudden inrush of water into the basements of various houses in the lower portions of the town. A torrential rainstorm, accompanied by violent wind and hail, broke over Kieff during the afternoon and turned the streets into veritable torrents, flooding cellars and drowning their occupants before they were able to escape.

Heavy Loss of Life.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—A ferryboat while crossing the River Volga Monday at Herasnik sank and 58 harristiers were drowned.

American Horses Wanted.

Washington, July 22.—In the French military service, and on French farms, American horses are much in demand, according to a report from Commercial Agent Griffin at Limoges. Mr. Griffin says that care should be taken to send only sound horses to France, as on arrival they are carefully examined by veterinarians, who exclude all defective animals.

Accepts the Place.

Boston, July 22.—Rev. Walter Gallie, pastor of the Tabernacle church, Bowdoin square, has decided to accept the position of general secretary of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, recently tendered him. Mr. Gallie has presented his resignation to the church, with the request that he be relieved by September 15.
