BASE BALL NOTES.

CHELSEA-PINCKNEY. The Junior Stars went to Pinckney Satnine players the Chelsea boys won the game by a score of 10 to 2. Rogers, who pitched for the Stars, was at his best and team having but one error each.

The score by lunings: Batteries, Chelsea, Rogers and BeGole; Pinckney, Kennedy and Aulhane.

The Junior Stars of this place have fifteen games, and of that number have lost but three. They have made 188 scores to their opponents 99.

The business men of this place were lefeated by the Junior Stars in a game of ball Monday, by a score of 18 to 13.

The Junior Stars and business men's teams will play ball on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Wilkinson Park, for a purse of $10 and gate receipts. The winning team will donate the proceeds to the new ball park.

Primary Election Scheme.

The Republican county committee on Monday adopted, by a unanimous vote, Chairman Green's plan for a primary election this fall. Candidates are to hand their names to the chairman ten days before the primary election, so that ballots can be prepared with the names of all candidates, and to legalize the primary election caucuses will be held and delegates elected, who will be instructed to vote at the convention for the candidates who receive the majorities at the primary election.

Special Performance for Convicts.

The Robinson circus gave an exhibition on the lawn at the prison at Jackson to the convicts of the institution Monday afternoon. The performers requested Warden Vincent to be allowed to give a portion of the regular show, and upon leave being granted a ring was roped off within the enclosure and an exhibition lasting about an hour highly pleased the assembled convicts. John Robinson himself was in charge of the unique performance, which consisted of a slack wire act, the regular tumbling program of the show and an exhibition of trained animals, and wound up with a three round boxing contest between Tommy Wilson and Chin Fong, a Chinese boxer of the American school.

Won $5 at 3-Card.

Two three-card monte men tried to work John Coyle, a prosperous farmer of Northfield, for $5,000, but failed. One of the sharpers appeared at the farm and negotiated for the purchase of 260 acres of land. He saidthat his name was Hurd and that he was formerly the proprietor of the Hurd house in Jackson. This, of course, was assumed. He made arrangements to go out and look the land over the following day. Coyle and "Hurd" started out, according to appointment and met a "stranger" on the road. The fellow made some inquiries, and stated that he was a southerner whose daughter had been stolen.

"I've traced her as far as Pinckney," he said, "and I'll find her if money will

With this he opened his satchel and showed a large amount of gold and greenbacks. Then the three little cards were shown and the game began.

Coyle won $5; then "Hurd" won $500. "I'll bet $5,000 you can't pick it out again," said the monte mon.

"Coyle, how much money have you

"None of your business," said Coyle and with that he left the sharpers with the $5 he had won.

The "Mir" in Russia.

The mir exercises judicial authority in a large proportion of the cases arising in the village. It is practically an elective peasant magistracy, which disposes of the ordinary cases of dispute or disorder that may arise within its borders, thus securing to the poor peasant a judgment at the hands of his peers and neighbors, without being dragged away from home before a strange judge who knows nothing of him or his, and has no interest in his affairs; while the mir has a direct interest in the conduct and success of each one of its members, for which it is responsible. In more serious cases. not coming under the head of ordinary misdemeanors, the culprit may be brought before the whole commune, which is practically a mir covering a more extensive jurisdiction than a single village. By this assembly members may be expelled from the commune, sentences of flogging passed, and even decrees made out for the banishment of any of its members to Siberia .- Don-ahoe's Magazine. One of Them Escaped, Somehow. The wild pigeon, which existed in countless millions 40 or 50 years ago, is practically extinct, so far as this country is concerned. Some idea of how it has become extinct may be gathered from an incident which occurred in Chicago. The last wild pigeon seen in Chicago, so far as known, was encountered one morning in 1894 by Edward B. Clark, an ornithologist and bird-lover. He was strolling through Lincoln park, a favorite resort for birds, and saw the pigeon sitting on the topmost bough of a tree. He was examining it with interest through a powerful field-glass and feasting his eyes on its beautiful plumage, when a hasty exclamation from some one behind him caused him to turn his head. A middle-aged man was looking hungrily at the bird. "Good gracious!" said the man. "That's a wild pigeon! It's the first one I've seen for 30 years.

Painting on Human Skin. Marcus Lorenzzo, an Italian painter who flourished in the last century once paid 200 francs for a piece of human skin no larger than a dinner plate, upon which to execute a landscape in oils. The skin, which was chemically prepared to receive the paint, was taken from the back of an aged woman, whose body had been sold to a medical man for dissecting experiments. The human parchment was drawn tightly over a metal frame, and the artist spent nearly seven months in producing a painting that was afterward exhibited in various salons and ultimately realized 84,000 francs,-Leeds Mercury.

Royal Lives Insured.

King Edward VII.'s life is insured for about $3,750,000, while the prince of Wales is contented with $2,500,000. The czar is insured for $1,500,000 and his eldest daughter, the Grand Duchess Olga, for $2,500,000, while the czarina's policies amount to $1,250,000. The most heavily insured monarch was the late King Humbert, whose life was valued "drummer evangelist." It perhaps should by himself at $7,500,000, so that the many insurance companies among which the risks were divided were very hard hit by his assassination. The German emperor's insurance also runs into seven figures .- Detroit Free

When Mustaches Were Scarce.

"I suppose I will surprise many readers," writes T. P. O'Connor, "when I tell them that I remember the time when a man who wore beard was regarded as something of a phenomenon, and, indeed, as scarcely gentlemanly; but so it was. At the bar a young barrister who wore a beard or a mustache would so outrage the etiquette of the profession that he would be refused a hearing by some judges, and by others so sneered at to make solicitors unwilling to employ him. A judge who has only just left the bench professed one day, while he was listening to a junior, not to understand what he was saying, and when at last the unfortunate junior began to shout, the judge sweetly remarked that it was very difficult to understand any gentleman who insisted on putting s hair screen on his upper lip."

The Typical Tramp.

There is no such thing as a "typical tramp" incarnate, says Cloudesley Johns, a tramp himself, in an article on tramps. He has his existence only in comic weekly and the newspaper supplement. The average hobo under a different environment would be the average man; under his existing environment he approximates thereto, though that environment tends strongly to multiplication of types rather than to uniformity. Consider that your hobo travels many thousand miles in a year, visiting places of interest and large cities, besides-in a majority of cases—doing many different kinds of work. And even the yegg man, the unmitigated beggar of the road, with his telltale visage and manner, is widely varied in general appearance, habits of thought and business methods. - Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Fortune Founded on Sand.

There is a solid citizen of New York whose fortune was founded on sand. It amounts to a few millions. James Everard dug the earth out of the hole in which sits that architectural monstrosity known as the general post office. The earth proved to be fine building sand, a very scarce article in New York. "Jim" not only received big pay for removing it, but sold it for fancy prices, thereby laying the foundation of his ample competency. Prior to this windfall he had been a patrolman on the police force. In ten years he would have been captain, and it is not unlikely that, with a captain's graft, he would now own numerous blocks of real estate.-N. Y. Press. We pay the highest market price for Novels That Brought Fortunes. It is remarkable how much money has been sunk and made in the pro duction and sale of Sir Walter Scott's works. It cost Robert Cadell about $200,000 to produce his fine illustrated Abbotsford edition, yet when he died he left a fortune of over $650,000, mainly derived from Scott's copyrights. What others have since made out of these same copyrights in special editions of the works it would be hard to say, but a conservative estimate places it as $1,500,000.—Literary Era.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

Durand, of Flint, for Governor on Fourth Ballot.

George H. Durand, of Flint, was ominated for governor of Michigan by the Democratic state convention late Thursday afternoon, after one of the most interesting contests that has Detroit between Aug. 10 and Aug. 15. been seen in a Democratic gathering lersey mosquite problem by moving in this state for a number of years. A great deal of bitterness was developed in the speeches of the morning session, the Durand men hissing intimataken and the fight was over, the scrap seemed to be forgotten. The complete ticket named is as follows:

Following is the platform adopted: We, the representatives of the Democracy of Michigan, in convention assem-bled, realizing that the people of the state are face to face with a crisis in which the honor and welfare of the commonwealth and its citizens are at stake, do hereby proclaim the following declaratien of principles: We hold that when government of, by and for the people has been destroyed by the seizure of the political machinery of power of government so gained to further only selfish and mercenary ends, as in Michigan to-day, the first duty of the patriot is to wrest this power from its unworthy possessors and restore it to the people. We therefore declare the supreme issue in this state, at this time, to be the destruction of boss rule, the restoration of political power to the people, and its employment for the good of all instead of for the advantage of a few. To this end we pledge the Democratic party to he following reforms:

First Big Riot of the Coal Miners' Strike at Shenandonk. Pa.

Four policemen and a score or more of the striking miners were shot in a riot which broke out at Shenandoah, Pa., Wednesday night when a deputy attempted to escort two non-union workers through the strikers' line of pickets. The chief of police gave the order to fire, which started the riot in which over 1,000 shots were exchanged.

As a result of the serious rioting Shenandoah was guarded Thursday and ruled by the militia. The request for troops was made by Sheriff Beddell, who telegraphed to Gov. Stone that he was utterly unable to cope with the rioters. The town, he said, was without police protection and local government terrorized. The miners are incensed at the calling out of the troops, which action they say was unwarranted.

Violence Is Spreading.

Attacks on non-union men are becoming common in the various Wilkesbarre, Pa., mines, and the coal company officials say they will ask for troops to protect their men if it continues any longer. A crowd of 1,500 men and boys prevented the resumption of work at the Wanke washery at Duryea. Two crowds of strikers, numbering fully 3,000 men, women and children, collected at the Reading & Union Co. operations, between Mt. Carmel and Shamokin, and hurled stones and sticks at the non-union men. Six of the latter were captured by the mob near Richard's colliery and were badly pummelled. On promising to remain away from the colliery until the strike ends they were liberated. The attitude of the striking mine workers in Shenandoah is daily becoming more demonstrative. A mob went to West Shenandoah colliery and drove the non-union workmen from refuge in the camp of the coal and $250,000, iron police.

Although Rayne and his only daugh ter Violet were among my best patients, I failed to see his reason for writing to me in this strain. He had never even hinted at such a thing as a loan before, and now-yes, there could be no doubt but that the letter was for me. It bore my name distinetly in his own handwriting, and he addressed me as "Will," which he frequently did in conversation. At length I gave up the quest of a suitable solution, and going to my bureau penned a short note to Rayne acknowledging his letter, and saying I was sorry I could not comply with his request, and in a moment of irritation I added that I considered it a greater one than he had any reasonable right to ask. This done, I sealed the envelope and dropped it into the pillar-box, well aware that sooner or later I should discover the motive of his strange appeal. It was not unlikely that he, too, would be present at Lord Nithdale's ball, in which case we should meet, for I also should be

There was not the slightest doubt that Violet Rayne was the belle of the evening. Her beauty caught and fascinated every one; even Lord Nithdale could not resist her charms, for now and again he would cast a furtive glance in her direction.

A Headless Turtle,

It has generally been supposed by naturalists that the seat of the animal's instinct, as of reason in man, is in the brain. An incident related by Dr. Eugene Murray-Aaron, formerly secretary and curator of the American Entomological Society, which came under his observation while one of a party of specimen hunters in the West Indies, would go to show the contrary, cays the New York Tribune He says that a scapping turtle was discovered on the beach of an island where the party was encamped, making for the water. One of the party seized an ax and cut off the turtle's head. Still the headless body continued moving with scarcely diminished rapidity, leaving the head behind on the sand. The turtle was picked up and carried some distance inland, then placed down, the neck facing away from the sea. As if in perfect condition, the turtle turned round and made for the water again, apparently anxious to escape even without its Coloring Oleomargarine.

The Internal Revenue Department of the United States has issued rules as to how oleomargarine may be colored. It says that no coloring matter may be put into oleomargarine and Rayne said he was unable to come, as that no butter containing coloring matter can be put into it. But "if butter absolutely free from artificial coloration, or cottonseed oil free from artificial coloration or any other of the mixture of compounds legally used in the manufacture of the finished product has naturally a shade of yelthe morning. He hoped, therefore, low in no way procured by artificial coloration" the product, though looking like butter, will be subject to a tax of only 1/4 of one cent per pound. Four Kinds of Patrons.

A speaker at a dairymen's convention described four kinds of patrons of the creamery:

I. The model patron, the man with first-class barns, first-class cows and first-class feed. To these are added first-class methods.

The dairyman that has all the appliances named above, but has poor pliances named above, but has poor methods. 3. The man that has good ing about feed or methods, trying to get the most money out of the creamery possible for the least work. 4. The farmer that has poor harns, poor cows, poor feed and poor methods. He generally produces poor milk and lit-

Russin and the Trusts.

It is semi-officially announced that the Russian minister of finance expects a reply in the negative from the pow ers to the note regarding international action against trusts. When such replies are received the Russian government will once more affirm that any increase in duties on Russian sugar will be regarded as an infringement of existing treaties, and, if such increase is enforced, the Russian government will consider itself free to disregard its treaty stipulations. The ministry of finance does not propose to take tors, or on account of one or more of measures against the powers collective case will be considered with a view to Lisbon, N. D., was the center of fearful hurricane and destructive bailstorm Friday. Crops within an area extending 10 or more miles south are totally destroyed. In places even the prairie grass is swept off. Barns and outhouses in all directions were wrecked and dwelling houses damaged. All windows on the north side of the buildings were shattered by hall and the houses flooded by the torrent of rain which fell. In Lisbon hardly a building escaped damage. Stock is scattered and thousands of chickens and birds were killed. No person was killed, although a few were injured. The neighboring towns of Buttsville, Englevale and Sheidon were also affected.

John Wise, a negro, who committed an assault upon Mrs. John Smith, a young white woman living near Pembroke, Ga., was lynched.

A close game was that played between the Linia Center and Jerusalem ball nines this week on the ball grounds situated just west of Lima Center on the Hawks-Angus interurban car line. The game was hotly contested and it was even doubtful who the winner would be until the last half of the ninth mning, when Lima scored the deciding run. The way every one played ball made the spectators think that the only "Larry" Lajoie and the real Delehanty were certainly in the game No doubt if Manager Dwyer of the Detroit American had been there that he would have extended contracts to at least three or four of the star performers, but as the fates forbid they will be compelled to search for some other manager before securing their contracts. Everything considered though it was quite a well played game, there being some sharp fielding done and some nice stick work The score was 20 to 19 in favor of Lima.

GREAT USE OF BANANAS.

Immense Amount of the Fruit Annually Consumed in This Country.

How largely the toothsome bananas and the festive cocoanut enter into the dietary of the American people may be judged by the fact that the United Fruit company alone, during the past year, distributed in the United States and Canada, approximately, no less than 17,500,000 bunches of bananas and 13,500,000 cocoanuts, in addition to other tropical fruits. Sixty ocean-going steamers were engaged exclusively in the banana trade.

Estimating not over 100 good bananas to a bunch, these figures show an average consumption of more than twenty bananas for every man, woman and child in the United States, and a few millions extra for good boys and girls. But an attempt to divide up the cocoanuts per capita will probably get us into trouble, for, while the bulk is enormous, it means only one cocoanut to every half-dozen persons, enough for all, perhaps, if the division were made on strictly equitable principles.-Leslie's Weekly.

Old Religious Books. The dispersal of the religious orders in Paris has been followed by the appearance of a large number of religious books in the boxes of the dealers on the Quai d'Orsay. Here they jostle with Voltaire, under the shadow of his statue, and with ditties of the "cafe concert." These books principally come from the Carmelites' library, in the Rue de Vaugiard, which was dispersed two months ago, when the order turned its back upon France at the bidding of an inhospitable law. Some of the books are very old, dating back 200 or 300 years. The signatures of their plous owners are pale and rusty on pages that have turned yellow with

THE VECTORIES PALLS-OF THE ZAMORELY THICE AS WIDE AND OVER

By JOHN R. MUSICK,

CHAPTER I.

Strange Information. From the flowery fields of California to the barren region of the Klondyke, from 1849 to 1897, is a wide reach, but the gulf of time is bridged over and the hopes and fears of thousands of hearts follow the argonauts who go to search for the golden fleece in the confines of the Arctic Circle, as they did forty-eight years ago the California prospectors. The real story of the discovery of gold on the Klondyke is not generally known, and to unravel that mystery is the purpose of this story.

On a certain night, about three years ago last May, five men were seated about a camp fire, built under the south side of a cliff, among some pine trees, near the banks of the Yukon river, fifteen miles above Dawson City.

As some of this party have become well known by the development of the Klondyke gold fields, it will be as well to introduce them to the reader before we proceed with our story. That large man dressed in moose-skin coat and trousers, with a bear skin thrown over his shoulders, was once well known in the great northwest as the most daring hunter, miner and adventurer in all Alaska. He was as honorable as he was brave, and as kind hearted as 'e was sullen. His name was Jack Raiston, but along the Yukon he was commonly known as "Glum Ralston."

Ralston was once an American He was getting along in years, for his hair was growing frosty, yet his frame was still strong and his heart had not abandoned its hope.

George W. Cormack, or "Lucky George," as the miners nicknamed him, sat on the log just opposite Glum Ralston. George was an Englishman, a brave, adventurous fellow, who was also an expert miner. Perhaps it was his knowledge of geology and mining that tended to his success. Nevertheless, the miners attributed it to hick.

Gid Myers was a man of thirty, with pale blue eyes and sandy con. plexion. Gid had had considerable experience as a hunter and prospector, but in the miner's parlance had never struck it rich.

Porter Allen, or "Big Port," was a giant in size, being over six feet in height, with broad shoulders and sinews of steel. He was forty, his hair and long beard quite grizzled with time and exposure.

The fifth was a young man twenty-two or twenty-three years of age, with the freshness of youth and innocence still on his face. While his older companions were smoking their pipes, the younger man of the party gazed abstractedly into the glowing fire. His mind went back over the mountains, rivers and seas to his quiet little home in Fresno, where he had left his widowed mother, dear to his heart, and one still dearer. Her name was Laura Kean. They were lovers and betrothed.

While he sat gazing into the fire ard seeing only the well-beloved face of his betrothed, his companions toasted and ate their suppers and talked of their present situation. "Glum, how long ye been in Alaska?" asked Lucky George. "It's now twenty-one years."

"An' never been back to the States?"

"No."

"Are you ever goin'?"

"Don't know,' he answered, with a sigh. "It'd be like goin' back to a graveyard now. Most everybody I knew's dead. If-" but he did not finish the sentence. His weather-beaten eye seemed to gleam with softer light as he gazed into the fire, and Gid Myers thought he saw a shade of moisture gathering there.

"Glum, you often promised us you would tell your own story sometime -how you came here, and why you have spent all these years in Alaska. Why not tell now?" asked Lucky George.

Glum moved ureasily on the log on which he was sitting and, clearing his throat, said:

"Boys, 'tain't much of a yarn when it's spun. I came to Alaska in '73 in the sealin' schooner 'Eleanor.' We had good officers and crew, an' the sun never shone on a better man than our captain. We all loved him and would have died for him.

"Well, we had no luck sealing, and the captain and sailors went with a party of Indians who said they knew where gold could be found. I didn't believe them, and wouldn't go. But he asked me tot to leave Alaska till he came back, and I promised.

"At the end of six months an explorin' party came back with the cap o' one o' the sailors which they had found on the snow several days' jour-

"Winter was on us, and we ran into Sitka, where we anchored until spring. It was a hard winter, and I have often wondered why we didn't all die, but all but two pulled through, and when spring came on, an' the captain hadn't hove to in sight, the first mate said he was going back with the ship. sight more risky'n ye think." They tried to make me go, but I'd "Oh, let us alone for that; we'll let promised the captain I'd stay until no red nig he came back.

"Our ship sailed away, an' I stayed didn't tell the story of my captain and the Injun chief with the gold beads for a good many years. Then I went into the interior to try to find him. I got in with some moose hunters and traveled one whole summer and part of a winter and nearly starved an' froze a hundred times, but not a word could I hear of him, so I suppose I am doomed to make my last voyage from this port, When I meet my captain on that unknown sea to which we are all steerin', I'll tell him I kept my promise."

When the ex-sailor had finished his story a silence fell on the group, 'No one spoke for several minutes.

The youth, known only by the sobriquet of "Crack Lash," sat gazing abstractedly into the fire. He had heard no part of the story, for his mind was still on his far-away home, where dwelt mother and the fair being who had promised to be his wife, for whom he had braved the dangers of the wilderness.

At early morn the little camp on the Yukon was astir. Paul was the last to awake. Youth is healthful and innocent, so sleep lingers longer about its eyelids than those whose bodies are freighted with disease or minds burdened with cares.

"Where's George?" asked Gid, as he toasted steaks.

"Been gone these two hours," Big Port answered. "Alone?"

"Yes." "That's strange."

Breakfast was disposed of, the dogs fed and harnessed and the party prepared for their journey up the river to Dawson City, then an insignificant village, and yet lucky George had not returned. As the sun rose higher the mud and snow made travel more uncomfortable yet Paul trudged on, uncomplainingly, He could bear any burden or hardship without a murmur when he reflected that it was for Laura. Her presence gave strength to his arm and keenness to his eye, spurring him on to efforts more than superhuman.

When they halted at noon they were compelled to get to leeward of the smoke to protect themselves from the mosquitoes. But little had been said of their missing companion, Lucky George. Gid followed his trail through the snow without difficulty, and gave it as his opinion that he was going straight to Dawson City. Glum Ralston, who had not expressed an opinion on the subject for some time, at last said: "Boys, I heard him say somethin' one day 'bout goin' up the Klondyke." "What for?" asked Gid.

"Boys, he's tryin' to give us the slip, I a'm afeard, or run a cold deck on us," said Gid.

"What if he does!" asked Port. We don't lose much.' "We might if he struck pay dirt' pay dirt as George?" "No."

"Why ?"

"Because George is allers in luck. Every time he draws from the Geck it's a trump. If a feller holds a straight George has a flush. I'll gamble my dogs an' packs that he makes a ten strick right now."

There was a silence, and the men sat and smoked and steamed, to drive away the mosquitoes. At last Paul own head, threatening to ruin himbroke the silence by saying:

"If there is gold on the Klondyke let us go and find it ourselves."

"Now yer shoutin'," cried the prospectors. "Why not go to the Klondyke ourselver?"

"Truth is, boys," said Glum, "Fve never had any very exalted opinion o' Lucky George's honesty. If he makes a big strike we can, o' course, come in for a claim, but he'll strike out the best an' work on the others with. out us a-knowin" it."

They decided to set out at once for the Klondyke. It was a journey attended from beginning to end with great danger and hardship. Glum Raiston was the only member of their party who had been on the stream, and he acted as guide.

Again night came on, and they went into camp and prepared their suppers. Paul was a little disheartened on this night. Continual disappointment had made him heart-sick. Rising to relieve his cramped limbs, he turned his back toward the fire and gazed across the wood-covered hill into the darkness beyond. To his surprise he dir overed a glow on the woods far in the distance. For a moment he gazed upon it in doubt, and then, touching Gid Myers, who sat rear, on the arm, he whispered:

"Look off there, Gid, in the direction I am pointing. Don't you see anything suspicious?" Gld Myers did as directed, and said:

"Yes, thar's somethin' onratural, Crack Lash."

"What is it?" "Wel., I'd say it was th' glow from

Two men were at work with pick shovels and pans. Late as it was dark as it was and tired and hungr as they were, they toiled on and or "Crack Lash," Gid gasped in hoarse whisper, "it's Lucky George and the squaw man, Lattimer."

"Yes." "What are they doin'?"

"Digging! Great heaven, look the shining ore! See! the bucket and pans are full of nuggets and dust Oh, Gid! Gid! It's a boranza!"

"Hush, they will hear you." "I am going to make myself known to them."

"And be shot?"

"Why should they shoot me when we are friends? If they are like say age dogs over a bone, then we can shoot first."

Gld consented to go to them, and advancing to within a hundred paces. they called to the diggers. At first they were a little confused, but Lucky George, who was a shrewd felow, saw it was best to admit to the discovery.

"Come down, boys; come down," he cried, cheerfully. "I tell you we have made the greatest strike in the world Look at the work of a few hours." "George, are there more goo claims?" "Plenty of them. Let us all set a work, stake out the best and get the very cream before the world finds out. Lattimer here put me onto this he got it from the Indians."

This was the discovery of the great gold fields in the Klondyke. Lucky George got the tip from Lattimer, the white man with an Indian wife, and had determined to work it alone if he could do so, but now that his friends had found him, he decided to make the most of it and divide.

The others were sent for, and claims for all staked out.

Next morning with the dawn of day Paul began to work his claim From the first shoverful of earth is began to take out gold. There was danger hovering over the happy youth. His claim was some distance up the stream from the others, and one day, as he was toiling and heaping up the golden treasure, two pairs of fierce, avaricious eyes glared at him from the dense foliage of pines. They watched him a long time as be totad, and then exchanged knowing looks, winks and smiles, which said:

"Let the fool toil on. When he has taken his thousands from the earth we will have it."

BRIGANDS QUEER IN GREECE.

Treat Prisoner Woll, But Insist of Ranson Marry

M. Stravalopoulos, a young man, who was captured recently by brig ands, has returned to Athens. He states that as he was about to go on board his yacht at Eghion he was at costed by a fashionably dressed young man, who kept him in conversation while four other men crept up behind him and seized and gagge him. They then carried him of to the mountains to which they were accompanied by the fashionalis young man, who turned out to be notorious brigand chief named Page poulos. M. Stravalopoulos was take to a large cavern or grotto, very com where U fortably furnished, brigands compelled him to write to his father, a rich banker, for a rate son of £4,000 in gold: His captors gave him plenty of food and wines, and even insisted on his saying his prayers twice a day. They also made him read various improving books, of which there was a large supply in the grotte. On the amival of the money it was conveyed to a monastery in the mountains, where one of the monks counted it and handed it over to the robbers. A great feast wa held the same evening in the grotto and the brigands becoming intoxicated, the prisoner made his escape and reached the railway after a journey of five hours on foot. He re turned to the grotto as soon as force of police could be got together. but the brigands had all decamped. London Globe.

BY JAMES BUCHANAN. Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.) Mr. E. Wilbert Marsh sallied forth me morning, with a brand new light evercoat thrown jauntily over his left rm. About half way between his lodging house and the station where he was wont to climb up to that bominable inconvenience, the "elevated," he observed a young lady dart down the front steps of one of the most imposing and least flaked of the veneered brown-fronts. She carried a letter in her hand. On her head was nothing but a great glodous mass of piled-up saffron hair. she was striking y pretty and strik-ingly conscious of the fact, if one night judge from her make up and nanner. It was evident that she was ound for the nearest letter-box.

Hardly, however had the little kid alppers of this pleasing damsel trip-ped along the pavement a dozen pards when, with the exasperating un-espectedness which nature sometimes displays in her most perverse moods, t began to rain. The attractive figure stopped short, wavered a moment and then turned back-just in time to meet young Marsh, struggling to raise his umbrella over his $25 overcoat.

With a silvery laugh and, apparentiv the most perfect unconsciousness of any impropriety in thus accosting a stranger, the girl exclaimed: "How sudden!"

E. Wilbert Marsh smiled, and raised his hat with a gratified blush.

"Would you have the kindness to drop my letter in the first box you pass?" asked the girl, putting the little square missive into the young man's hand, and gathering her skirts preparatory to flight. The next instant she fled, rustling and laughing, back to the shelter of the brown stone front, and E. Wilbert Marsh found himself caying "With pleasure!" to the empty air. The young lady looked back as she was vanishing and modded. "I wonder if she would rec ognize me, if she met me again?" mused Marsh. Then he walked brisk-

The rattle of an approaching train fell on his ear. He had just time to reach the station and catch it. There would not be another train for five minutes, and it happened that he was somewhat late that morning. With an inward vow that he would mail the young lady's letter immediately on leaving the car, he made a wild dash for the stairway and rushed upon the platform of the nearest car just as the guard was closing the gate. Then he slipped the letter into his overcoat pocket, and straightway did what all men do under such circumstances

Presently another young man left his seat, came up the aisle, and stood the ball game, this afternoon?" he

"Why, hello!" replied Marsh, recoghizing a chum in whose company he had aforetime done his part toward him, and disappeared in the crowd. hoarsely eulogizing the national same. "Yes, I want to go. Shall, if can get away. You going?"

kept planning all the morning. In the early afternoon he got away. He just went.

It was a glorious day and a glorious game. The rain had let up. Everybody was there. The grand stand was jammed. The bleachers groaned. The entire field was shut in by black parentheses of humanity. The visitors began to score briskly in the first inning. They made four runs in succession, with out a man out. At the end of the fifth inning the score stood six to two in favor of the champions.

Walked away against a drizzling rain.

Then it was that an eager face was upturned to E. Wilbert Marsh from the tier of seats below. "Three to one that the Chicagos win!"

"I'll take you," replied Marsh, with a fierce, desperate thrill of pride and confidence in the home team. They would win yet! Anyway, it would be cowardly to go back on them in their extremity. He would try to turn their luck by betting beyond his usual figure. "Let it be X's!" he exclaimed. "All right!" responded the eager voice below.

The Chicagos won.

"I'll trouble you for that X," said the young man sitting at Marsh's feet, as the bleachers rose with a howl, at the completion of the last inning. The champion of the home team began to search in his pockets in a dazed way. He finally gathered together a handful of coins and two bills. "I'm stuck at $4.75," he said, ruefully. "Didn't suppose I was so short. Ought not to have bet. Butsay." He looked desperately at the resplendent overcoat lying across his arm. "You'll take this coat in pledge, won't you? I'll meet you here to-morrow afternoon-right here on the smiling down upon Marsh. "Going to bleachers—with the cash to redeem

The other young man hesitated. Then he took the garment which E. Wilbert Marsh tragically handed to

A few hours later, the temporary owner of the new overcoat pulled a letter out of a pocket of the garment, and stared at the envelope with startled and flashing eyes. "I'd know her writing anywhere!" he muttered. 'And addressed to my rival, Sam Niebaum. Confound it! I'll open it!" He impetuously tore open the envelope and read:

Dearest Sam-What a shame that your invitation to the theater, tonight, came just after I had accepted as a dernier ressort, one from that odious Fred Crombie, who has been persecuting me with attentions of late! I should not have accepted his invitation, anyway, if I had not been just dying to hear that particular play. And then came your welcome but tantalizing note. What a contretemps! But, Sam, I will go with you, and I will tell you how we will outwit Fred and give him the slip. Do you be at, or near, the head of the stairway at the Brooklyn entrance of the bridge at 7:30 sharp, to-night. I will drop my fan over the stairway, as Fred and I are going up. He will, of course, run back to get it. I will then seem to be pushed upward by the crowd. Meet me at the head of the stairs. Then, adieu, Mr. Fred.

Lovingly yours, OLLIE. Mr. Fred Crombie did Indeed run dutifully back for the fan that evening when Miss Ollie dropped it from Lair down and barefooted go in prothe bridge stairs. CHINESE AND HIS PEN.

Little Anecdote that Shows Deftness of the Oriental.

A certain newspaper man, who was induced to "try" a stylographic pen, got it out of order by reckless treatment, and took it to a pen-shop for repair. The man there soon showed him that there was nothing serious the matter with it, the only trouble being that he had neglected to do some little thing in using it. Then he began to take the pen apart for the newspaper man's instruction, so that he might see how very simple a thing it is.

"Simple!" cried the indignant owner of the instrument, "it is as complicated as a Chinese puzzle! I don't wonder that I can't make it 'go' when I want it to!"

The penman laughed. "You remind me," he said, "that there is a Chinese in this town who used a stylographic regularly. He came here to buy one several months ago, and when I showed it to him he began to take it all apart. I hurriedly stopped him, supposing that he would do it an injury, but he at once put down the value of the pen, saying tha' it was his, and then continued his dissection of it. I give you my word that he handled that pen more deftly than the man who made it. and in five minutes he had it put together again, so that it worked better than it did at first. A Child's Faith.

One of Philadelphia's politicians who was a looker-on in Harrisburg during the recent convention told a group of friends an incident that illustrated his wee daughter's firm faith in his all-around ability. The crescent moon had excited her amazement and wonder for the reason that theretofore she had always associated Luna with a round and cheeselike fulness. So, she rushed into the house and informed her mother that the moon was "all broken up," and that only a very small piece of it remained. The mother, not thinking the child old enough for an explanation of the lunar phenomena, simply muttered:

"Too bad, dearie-too bad!" The child seemed downcast for a moment; then, her face illumined with joy, she leaped up and exclaimed: "O! it will be all right when papa comes home, mamma-he'll mend it again."

Thorough Paced Economy.

A young man living in Cincinnati is a close worker in money matters, that is, he stays close to the shore with his expenditures. He had the good luck to marry a girl whose parents are quite wealthy, and is at present living with his wife in one of his father-in-law's houses.

One day not long since, while discussing affairs with a friend, the latter asked: "Did the old gentleman give you that house?" "Well-er-no, not exactly," was the answer. "He offered it to me, but I wouldn't accept it."

"How's that?" asked the friend. "Well," answered the man who had made the lucky matrimonial venture. You see, the house really belongs to me. I'm living in it, rent free, and I'll get it when the old man dies. If I accepted it now I'd have to pay the taxes.

A Unique Procession.

A correspondent of the London Graphic writes: "The Church of the Madonna del Rosario at Valle di Pomperi, or, as it is called, the Madonna di Pompeli, is the best known shrine of the Madonna in the south of Italy, on account of the wonderful miracles which are supposed to be performed there. People from all parts, far and near, come on pilgrimage from the far distant mountains, and even from Sardinia. Some most wonderful costumes are seen in and about the church. Got Rid of Sharks.

"The waters around Martinique are usually swarming with sharks," said old "Skipper" Perry, a retired sea captain. "They have the repretation of being man-eaters, which makes bathing dangerous as well as an exciting sport. I shall never forget how, on one of my visits to the island, the engineer effectually got rid of the monsters. He took a lot of bricks, heated them to a white heat. took them down in the fire room, and then poured oil over them. Then he quickly got them on deck, and, with the aid of a pair of tongs, he threw them overboard one by one. The first one had scarcely struck the top of the water before a hungry shark swallowed it whole. The scorching brick inside naturally made him feel as though there was a volcano in his stomach, and he started to do all sorts of crazy stunts before disappearing in deep water. Each one of the hot bricks was swallowed by a snark, and in a few minutes there wasn't one to be seen."--Philadelphia Record.

Woman's Shrewd Business Sense. Miss Ella Connard of New York, until recently, was employed by a lifeinsurance company in that city, where her shrewd business sense had come under the notice of an official of the Pennsylvania Railroad company. The company was desirous of purchasing some land in West Thirty-fourth street to be used as terminals, but did not wish this fact to become public, for the reason that publicity of that kind would inevitably put the price away up. Miss Connard was employed to negotiate for the property, and so well did she manage that the company was saved a vast sum, the total payment being in millions. The clever young woman's commission was of such proportions that she will have a comfortable income for life.

His Heavest Loss. A correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger has found in an old book now out of print this anecdote of the original John Jacob Astor: "He was asked one day what was the largest amount of money he had ever made in one transaction. This he declined to answer, but said that he would tell the largest sum that he failed to make. Then he went on to relate how he, De Witt Clinton and Gov. Morris had planned to buy Louisiana from France and to sell it to the United States government, retaining the public domain
