CHELSEA K. OF P. ATHLETIC CLUB

Has Secured Grounds and Will Fit Them up in Good Shape.

Since the passing of old Recreation Park, Chelsea has not had any suitable place for playing base ball and foot ball games, and holding other sporting events. New this is all to be changed, and soon everything will be satisfactory.

Friday evening a number of gentlemen interested in good, clean sports, met at Knights of Pythias hall and formed the Chelsea K. of P. Athletic Club, and the following officers were elected:

President-D. C. McLaren. Vice President-Andres Gulde.

Secretary-B.-B. TurnBull. Treasurer-Geo, A. BeGole.

Trustees-H. S. Holmes, Wm. Bacon, H. D. Witherell, B. Parker.

The Club has succeeded in getting a ease of a piece of land containing thirteen acres, belonging to the D., Y., A. A. & J. Ry., situated just east of the peat marsh. A road will be built, beginning at the south end of Madison street and running to the grounds. The railroad will also put in a Y on the grounds, and cars will be run to all of the big events.

The club will raise money by subscripused. One of the means of getting funds played two games and had each won one will be by running an excursion to De- so the third was for blood. troit, Friday, August 29th, over the D., Y., of the Club. The Stove Works and this year. stores will close to allow employees to At the close of the game the members ets will be on sale at the ticket office, ten days before the excursion. The Club receives a certain per cent on all tickets sold, the proceeds of which will go to the park fund. Tell everybody, and come yourself. See bills for particulars.

Reunion of Hadley Family.

On Saturday, August 10th, occurred the annual reunion of the Hadley family at Smith Lake. Even nature seemed to be in harmony with the arrangements, for the day dawned bright and clear, an ideal | con, m. day for a picnic.

We rise early, and as we pack our commodious lunch baskets our thoughts fly to the old home, to the father and mother who now sleep 'neath the lillies. Yes, this day is set apart, and is a fac simile of the days of yore when we lived under the same roof tree and mother's words stilled our childish troubles.

A pleasant drive across the country and we find ourselves at the shore of the beautiful little lake. Not a wave ruffles its placid waters, even the most timid can enjoy a boat ride. The woods ring with childish laughter. But we pausedinner is ready, we glance at the table with satisfaction. There is everything one could wish for, nothing has been forgotten. We notice a few vacant places and wonder what has kept them at home After dinner the meeting is called to order by the vice president, Samuel Boyce, and the following officers were elected President, Samuel Boyce; vice president, Mrs. Z. Blakely; secretary, Thomas Blakely; committee on arrangements, Mrs. Anna Boyce and Mrs. Della Blake-

School Rally.

There will be a teachers, school officers and patrons bi-annual rally at the high school building, in Ann Arbor, Tuesday evening, August 19th, and Wednesday, August 20th.

On Tuesday evening Prof. C. D. Smith of the Agricultural College, will give a Ed Keusch, 1...... 2 0 0 0 lecture along the line of agriculture in our rural schools. The lecture will be free and every parent and friend of the public school should make a special effort to attend.

Miss Julia Ball has charge of the music for the evening.

NEXT YEAR

German-American Day Celebration Witt be Held Here Next Year.

It is estimated that notwithstanding the rain there were 8,000 visitors at the celebration of German-American Day at Ypsilanti last Thursday, and the celebration lasted until daybreak of Friday.

As it had been many years since the celebration had been held in Chelsea. the members of the Germen Workingmen's Society thought that it was about time things came this way again. They were entirely successful in their efforts to land the event and it will be held here next year.

Wedded Life in Sumatra.

The women of Sumatra have little to complain of. Before the nuptials are celebrated the husband is compelled to settle a marriage portion on his wife, and in case he is legally separated from her he can neither alienate this portion or touch any of the property she may have brought into the marriage contract. Married people live in separate houses, the husband visiting the wife in the evening. The boys live with their mother until their fourth birthday, when they take up their residence woman becomes a widow she plants a untorn by the winds she is compelled by etiquette to remain unmarried. When the first little rent in the flag appears-and it may be the most minute-she is free to accept the first suitor who offers.—Good Literature.

CHAPTER II. The Storm Bursts. There was a cloud hanging over the distant mcuntain peak, and occasionally the low muttering of far-off thunder could be heard, but it did not disturb the young pleasure seekers, who had come out from Fresno, California, to have a good time. One tall, graceful girl whose golden hair and deep blue eyes would have attracted any beholder, was standing in the shadow of a tree, whither she had wandered alone. She took very little interest in the sports of her youthful companions, no more youthful, however, than herself. As she strolled under the shades of the pines her pale blue parasol half concealed a face that was exquisite in its loveliness. "Oh, Laura, why are you alone?" asked a pretty, dark-eyed girl leaning on the arm of her lover as she passed. "There are plenty of young fellows who would be glad to take Paul's place. Shall I tell them they can?"

Thank you, Nellie; I do not want them," while a faint smile flitted over her face.

At this moment another couple passed where the three stood, their faces half hidden behind a pink embrella. Nellie, smiling, said:

"There goes Clarence and Nellie Bush. People say they are to be married in the spring and start for the Klondike."

Laura sighed and her little friend went on. The gaze of Laura Kean was now riveted on Clarence Berry and Ethel Bush. The rumor that they were going to that strange, far-off northern country awakened in her mind a new interest in them. Ethel Bush was one of her dearest friends, and Clarence and Paul had been boys together.

As Clarence and Ethel sat in the shade of a tree, they built anew their air castles amid the glaciers and icebergs of the frozen north.

"I hope I don't intrude," said a sweet, silver-like voice, and, looking up, they beheld their friend Laura Kean standing near, a smile on her is to discuss your intended journey to the Klondike. I have heard you are going in the early spring."

"We have so decided," Clarence Berry answered.

accompany you." Ethel Bush was delighted, and declared if they could find a preacher in Alaska the wedding would be celebrated in the frozen north. The three sat on the green and planned and talked with increasing enthusiasm, and Laura, with her pretty face beaming with happiness, arose, left the lovers to themselves, while she strolled down the grove, that her mind might con-

Unconsciously she strolled deep into the wood and was lost to the sight of her friends, when a footstep near caused her to start in surprise if not alarm. Before her stood a young man of twenty-eight, with a pale cast of countenance and keen blue eye. He was of a figure that might have been called handsome, but to Laura Kean he was repulsive. She gave him a glance and gasped:

"Mr. Lackland!" Theodore Lackland had followed Laura to this picnic and into this wood with a set purpose in his heart. He was wealthy, a young man of good family and reputed ability, but a man of firm and fixed purposes. To accomplish an end he would go to almost any limit. He had known Paul Miller long before he set off for the Klondike and hated him because he loved Laura Kean. Why should this beautiful girl, the only woman whom he had ever loved, prefer this rude, penniless country boy to himself? Mr. Lackland failed to realize what so many have in this life—that it is the soul that attracts and not the face and figure. There is no freemasonry so subtle as the freemasonry of the

"I am pleased to see you happy, Miss Kean," he said. "There has always been something wrong with me, and while others are happy I am sad."

"Surely it is a morbid fancy," said Laura. The light was dying out in her eyes. She made one quick downward look at the path, as if wishing to pass him. He observed her glance and said: "No, no, Laura, walt a moment; I have something of great importance to say to you, which I must say now. "I have just been told that you have decided to go to Alaska in the spring." He looked earnestly into the girl's glowing face, and added, with deliberation: "Laura, there are reasons why you should not undertake such a journey."

"What reasons?" "A million natural obstacles are in Theodore Lackland fell back a pace. "Laura, hear me-hear me again." But she had found her voice at last. "Sir, you have outraged my feelings as much as if I was at this moment

Paul Miller's wife!" Theodore Lackland felt his self-control rapidly slipping away, and in the height of his passion said:

"You shall never marry Paul Miller, Laura Kean! I swear it! I hold your fate and his in my hand, and have more ways of crushing you than you imagine. Be sensible; recall your insulting words, and do not throw yourself away on that impecunious ne'erdo-well-a hulking brute, made for a pick-ax and shovel---"

"Enough!" she cried. "I would rather marry a plow-boy than such a 'gentleman' as you!"

Face to face, eye to eye, with panting breath and scornful looks, there they stood for one moment; then Laura, without a word, swung about and walked away to where her friends were preparing to return to town.

The features of Theodore Lackland underwent a frightful change. The gathering thunder cloud was not more black than his face. He raised his clenched fist to heaven and cursed his the mining camp well muffled in bearrival, heedless of the rolling thunder | skin robes and furs, strapped on a sled and on-coming storm.

"It is a long way to the Klondike," he finally muttered, while the smile of a devil flitted over his face; "but, great as the distance is, he will feel my power, and so shall she."

A heavy peal of thunder and the falling of rain roused him to the fact that pretty face. "My excuse for coming | the little excursion had all gone, leaving him alone in the wood and storm. He hurried to where his horse and buggy were, and, leaping in, drove furiously to town. In a few weeks Laura had forgotten the unpleasant scene with the wealthy Mr. Lackland. She was busy preparing for the journey in the spring.

It was the last of February, and on the next day Laura was to draw her money from the savings bank and put it in the hands of a friend to secure her a passage and outfit for the Klondike. Late in the afternoon she saw jure up her lover's joy and surprise a great crowd of men on the street at meeting her in those faraway re- talking in an excited manner, and a moment later Mr. O'Bourne, the butcher, came running toward her, wringing his hands.

"What is the matter, Mr. O'Bourne?" she asked.

"We are ruined, Miss Kean; we are ruined. The savings bank has failed; can't pay a cent!"

She grew dizzy and clutched at the let's hang the feller Crack Lash door for support. Quickly all her bright dreams of surprising her lover vanished.

Mrs. Miller consoled her with the assurance that the loss would be made up by the great fortune Paul was taking from the Klondike. A few days later she learned that the bank had been wrecked by Mr. Tom Harris, the cashier, speculating on San Francisco Board of Trade. Later came the whisper that Harris had fled to avoid arrest, but before going had confessed his crime, and said that he was induced by Mr. Lackland to speculate. He went on the wrong side of the market and was ruined.

The evening post brought Laura a letter. It was addressed in the wellbeloved hand of Paul Miller. But there was something in the chirography to alarm her. It was in a scrawling, feeble hand, and with many misgivings she broke the seal and glanced at the contents. Then, with face ashen white, she shricked:

"Wounded, robbed, ruined!" and fell senseless to the floor. Ethel Bush, learning of her friend's trouble, hastened to see Laura, who sank so rapidly under the double blow that she was confined to her bed.

Ethel tried to console her. "Don't worry, dear. We shall soon be with Paul, and if I find him I will nurse him back to health, and Clarence will defend him if he is attacked until he is able to defend himself." "Will you take a message to him from me, Ethel?" "Yes, dear, a thousand." "Warn him, Ethel; warn him!"

ments of gladness for her summer of roses and wine. There is an exhilaration about Newport in summer which is bund nowhere else. Besides the brightness of the sparkling evershing sea, the blueness of the sky hot with sunlight, "like a great vault of lapis tazuli flecked with gold," and e air mingled with the breaths of an and green fields, to inhale which is like drinking a very dry champagne, there is the greater exhilaration of thousands of people all bent m having a good time and doing it on a grand and generous scale, regardless of expense.

The only Newport society the great world knows is the rich society of the nummer. It is a most difficult one to "arrive" in. Many folk, after spenddag any amount of money, have given up the attempt after a few seasons and gone elsewhere to spend their summers. The favorite entrance into its inner circles for those who are not born there is by way of London, but even that path is not so sure of Teading to the goal as it used to be. The colony is divided into strata. Entrance into the higher one depends for one thing upon how long a family has made Newport its summer home. Newport ceased to exist as a great commercial port with the revolutionary war. Then, in the '40's, the wealthy southerns discovered it and each summer saw them assembled there in force with their best of everything in clothing and slaves, horses and carriages. A great deal of digcity and not a little magnificence in its way attached to the "afo' de wah" seciety of the south which used to assemble in Newport. The predominating society of the place always has been given to doing things on a grand scale—there is something in the air and his guests ate heartily and drank

They like to tell of the Quaker maiden who fell in love at first sight with Rochambeau and threw a rose at his feet as he passed down over the hill riding with Washington. The ghost of the maiden, dust and ashes so and the sunshine "tangled in the fringes of the sea" which makes one he can.

Of late the Newport colony has been going in for landscape gardening. Italian gardens and such adjunct to their villas. Magic, Pills.

An entertaining little trick can be done with two pills made of bread. 'One of the pills I throw away," the performer says, "the other I put in my left hand, which I close. At the same moment the pill which I have thrown away will come back and join the other in the left hand." And, opening the hand, he shows the two little pills. The whole trick lies in the right hand of the performer. Taking one of the pills, he shows it between the thumb and index finger, and, under the pretext of throwing it away, slips it between the index and middle finger by a slight pressure of the thumb, opening the hand with a reality also the other one held between the index and middle finger of the right hand, closing it immediately. pills. It is very amusing to have a bunch of artificial flowers on which the butterflies can alight, only to fly away at a motion of the fan.

The Boy's Own Hammock.

There are times again and again in camp and in the out-of-doors dens that boys love to have, when a place to roost while reading or a place to drowse through a day of drizzling rain is in great demand. Generally, just when one most wants it the forest branches and twigs are too wet to use for a bed, and, besides, it is too much trouble.

Houses Built of Grass.

The grass houses formerly built by the Wichita Indians of southern Oklahoma are exceedingly interesting. The grass is gathered early in the spring, when it is yet fresh. The sod cutting usually takes place immediately after a rain, the sod being removed to a thickness of about eight inches. Buffalo grass sod is the only kind that will answer the purpose of the builder. He commences to lay the foundation as does the stonemason, digging away the earth to a depth of about one foot. The grass portion of the chunks of sod is laid to the outside and the house is built to a height of twelve to fifteen feet, in the form of a pointed dome. There is no hole in the top for smoke to pass out, the latter being carried away through a pipe outside of the hut. The door is usually in the south and there are no windows. Through each tuft of sod is run a willow reed string and these strings are bound clear around the structure. The grass remains green and will grow if there is plenty of rain. It is not at all uncommon to see the sides of these grass houses turn green as spring approaches, just as do the pestures near them. The houses are very warm in winter and cool in summer. They never leak.

It is possible to exercise one's whole body, to keep it strong and well, simply by breathing properly. Children should be taught to breath and to get into the habit of filling the whole lung space at each inhalation and of emptying it completely at each exhalation. There is no better way of getting to sleep soon after going to bed than by breathing properly. Push away the pillow and lie flat upon the back with the muscles relaxed. Slowly draw in the deepest breath possible, hold it for four seconds, then slowly expel it unt∏ the chest and abdomen have collapsed. Repeat this until you are tired or fall asleep. There are scores of ways of varying this exercise. But this is the essential. Of course it is assumed that one sleeps with his bedroom windows open.

Match Trick.

Eighteen matches are needed for this trick. Assort them in such a way that you have three single ones, three lots of two, and three lots of three, separately on the table. The task is to group the matches in three lines, each containing three parts, in such a way that the aggregate sums of all lines, horizontal, perpendicular, and diagonal, is six. The illustration shows how the matches must be arranged,

The do such execution that we cannot no fort looked like any other Moro fort, icule the devices. Of course it but the Americans lost many men in the very close range that made the trying to get into it.

Many forts, stockades and intrenched positions of the Moros had very promtly surrendered to our col- the aim by holding the cannon in umn in the march from the sea to the lake country in the interior. There were many fortified places, because the entire lake region is divided up among Sultans and Dattos, each with his following and fortification. In fact about every house is a fort.

There are trenches about it and stone walls and bamboo stockades. In each house thus protected live a Datto and his immediate family and working force of slaves, who cultivate the lands and care for the stock. Every fortified place is supplied with one or more old cannon, a few small guns and many home-made bamboo cannon, spears, bolos, etc.

I shall never forget the march from the sea to the lakes, some thirty-four miles, in which we overcame all opposition. Forts and stockades were taken without much resistance and oftentimes without loss on either side.

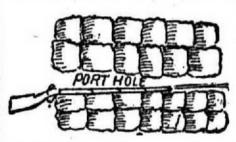

Our first view of Fort Pandupatan occurred shortly after the taking of a large stockade in the Bayan district. The little fort, which was to cause us so much loss looked much like any other Moro fort.

In a general way the fort was a square inclosure. The walls are of stone, earth and bamboo and about twelve feet thick at the base. They are some fourteen feet high.

These walls are covered with bamboo pols on the outside and also with an immense entanglement of thorn; brush both on the sides and the top. This brush made the fort look easy to take, as the stone walls did not show.

The walls of stone and loose earth neatly and tightly piled and packed have many portholes and the fighting Moro seemed to have a cannon or a rifle at every porthole and their shouting proved to be effective.

The Moro engineers had also constructed two trenches about the fort of considerable depth. One trench was crowded with desperate Moros who had taken the cath of their tribe to die facing the enemy. I can certify that practically every Moro in that trench kept his oath.

They fought our officers and enlisted men on the edge of the trenches, in the trenches and everywhere. It was shoot, cut. bite, throw rocks, and yell for fully thirty minutes. By that time the Moros in the trenches were all dead, but our loss was heavy. Three or four of our officers were wounded and some twenty-five of our soldiers were killed and wounded.

The shooting from the fort continued all this time. The inner side of the walls is several feet lower than the outer and affords a position from which the Mc os could fire at our men without exposing themselves to return

There were several "lantakas" or cannon arranged to shoot from the port holes at the sides and ends. In the middle of the fort is a bamboo

W. K. Jacques: The first prepara-tion for the planting of an orchard should be in the mind of the planter. rult is the product of environment. Nature's product is the wild crab apple; the luscious fruit is the result of man's ability to control the tree's surroundings. All the requirements of the tree from the time it is planted and during its twenty or thirty years of life, should be clearly in the mind of the planter before he plants his orchard. He should select for the schard site that ground which has the largest number of natural favoring conditions for fruit, whether it is pear the house or a mile away. garbed wire and a bulldog will protect the fruit when he gets it, but fruit is what he plants for, and that should have first consideration. When he plants the orchard he should make yow that that ground has been set spart for the production of fruit, and that he will do all in his power to assist the trees to do their best. The amount of fruit that he gets will depend, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, upon how faithfully he keeps conditions present, his next problem is how to aid and control these conditions in such a manner as to give the best result. I have had an opporunity to meet a number of successful Maine, and I have found one characteristic common among them all—and that was their intelligence. The great artist said the secret of his sucress was that he mixed his colors with brains. That can also be said of the successful fruit grower. He carries the magic fertilizer under his much interested in the demonstrations of the science of Japanese wrestling which have been given at the capital for some months by an American athlete recently returned from the Orient. The Saturday Evening Post recalls the fact that while serving as governor of the State of New York the news came out that he was having a daily bout at the executive mansion with an athletic instructor and that these bouts came to a sudden end, the reason being known to but few people.

The man who gave Governor Rooseveit his daily, wrestle was called away to New Orleans. The governor was not inclined to give up his wrestling, which had done him a great deal of good, and so he asked the "professor" if he could not find a substitute. The instructor sent up a brawny Irish longshoreman to whom he had taught the "science," and recommended him to the governor's consideration.

At the usual hour the next day the mat was spread on the top floor of the govern r's mansion, and Mr. Roosevelt and the longshoreman went at it. Unfortunately, the longshoreman had not been trained in the art of self-controi, and instead of the gentle and scientific resistance which the "professor" had offered, he went at the governor fiercely.

In an instant Mr. Roosevelt's fighting blood was up, and for about twenty minutes there was a fine exhibition of wrestling.

Finally, however, the big longshoreman's brawn, coupled with the science imparted to him by the "professor," told, and told disastrously. The governor was flung violently. The crash almost shook the rafters.

In an instant Mr. Roosevelt was on his feet again, ready to go ahead. Suddealy he felt a twinge of pain in his right side. With much reluctance he concluded that perhaps he had had enough for one day. The pain in his side grew worse after he had once towards nightfall a doctor was sent each is its method of producing seeds for. An examination disclosed the or spores. fact that three ribs had been broken, and further wrestling was strictly for-

A Western exchange states that M. F. Gordon, an old-time miner of Colorado and Alaska, left the coast recently for Corpus Christi, Tex., to join an Indian maiden who loves him, and whom his friends feel certain he will marry. Gordon's most thrilling experience during a life of adventures appened a number of years ago, when he became lost in the mountain wilds of Western Mexico, and wan- blow about and lodge in the hull of sight of human beings. He was led the kernel. The young smut plant from the wilderness by two Indian maidens, one of whom fell in love with him. When they got within aight of civilization this maiden refused to leave him. Her companion, becoming jenious, left them, but returned next day with the tribe, who seized Gordon and prepared to burn him at the stake. While the ceremony was delayed awaiting the chieftain's arrival, Gordon broke the bands which bound him and escaped. After which bound him and escaped. After several years spent in Alaska and other Northern camps, Gordon received a letter from an Indian girl which reveals a remarkable story. Refusing to marry any one else, she decided to become his equal by educating herself. This she accomplished, finally becoming a teacher in one of the Texas Indian schools. Her father, an Indian chief, died, leaving her a valuable estate. She waited for Gordon vainly until one day she saw his picture in a Denver paper. She wrote him in Alaska, and finally at Tacoma. In response to her letter Gordon now joins her.

Another Forest Reserve

The people who have for years been working to interest the public in the project of a national park in Minnesota, and to persuade Congress to make the necessary provision for it, see the realization of their hopes in the act, which has just been signed A planter should start out with as by the President, relating to the Minnmany natural favoring conditions as esota Chippewa Indian Reservations possible, such as climate, soil, air, of which there are four containing drainage and those materials in the in all 830,162 acres, of which 218,470 soil which can readily be converted are covered by lakes, rivers and into plant food. With these natural streams. Under this act, every Chippewa Indian, man, woman or child, is entitled to an allotment of 80 acres. This will dispose of 140,000 acres. Of asked: the remainder 231,000 acres are to be made into a forest reserve which will fruit growers from California to be under the control of the Secretary of Agriculture, and which will be managed by skillful foresters in such a manner that an annual income will be derived from the sale of timber and at the same time the forest will be preserved and improved. The government will also retain the timber lands on the islands in Cass and Leech lakes numbering 17,000 acres. The 223,692 acres remaining are to be thrown open to settlement. The proceeds of the sale of merchantable pine on the forest reserve and of the sale of land to homesteaders are to be paid into the United States treasury to the credit of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota.

The awful waste which has resulted from the reckless destruction of forests by lumbermen in many parts of our country, has been pointed out time and again, but the Department of Agriculture has finally been given an opportunity to enforce its teaching by practical demonstrations of the returns which may be realized from timbered lands when a system of economical forest husbandry is practiced. In Europe where forests are properly valued and preserved, forestry is a recognized calling demanding skill and knowledge; but this country has no foresters-only lumbermen, and between the two there is the difference between the devastator and the preserver. The work which the department has undertaken in assuming the manag ment of the various forest reserves which have been created, will afford the best kind of a school for teaching the art of forestry and we hope that many enterprising young men who expect to become farmers and perhaps possess timber land of their own, will take this opportunity to learn how to manage them profitably. Washington correspondents report that many college students have taken up the work this summer, the department paying $25 per month and board for their services.

Smut of Wheat.

A publication of the University of Illinois says:

That wheat smut is the cause of an enormous annual loss to the wheat farmers of this state is beyond question. The average per cent of smut in Illinois wheat fields has never been actually determined. However, it has been found in various wheat fields of the United States that the maximum per cent of smut was from 50 to 75, indicating that in these instances over one-half the crop was destroyed by smut, resulting in a low yield per acre. It is known that this fungous disease is widely distributed over the state. There are two varieties of smut which commonly affect wheat, and the distinguishing features of Stinking smut is reproduced by microscopic cells which attach themselves to the grains of wheat during threshing, so that the smut is planted with the seed wheat. When the wheat kernels germinate the smut spores also germinate, and by means of strong infection threads penetrate the tender covering of the sprout of wheat in which it grows, keeping pace with the growth of the wheat stalk. During this time the wheat plant is not visibly affected, but on the heading out of the wheat the arfected buds will usually have a dull appearance and upon examination will be found to have kernels filled with brown dusty spores that have a foul characteristic odor.

The loose smut of wheat is of a powdery formation which blows of the stalks of wheat after heading out, leaving a bare stem. These spores about eight months, living on the unaffected kernels, where they animals and berries, without germinate and attach themselves to Witty Reply of Celtic Suitor to Prospective Father-in-Law.

An anecdote of Celtic wit has to do with a young Irishman of good birth and small property who heard that a very wealthy man of the community was understood to be ready to give a handsome dowry to his elder daughter, who was unfortunate in having a hump on her back. He wanted her to have a husband before the younger daughter, who had beauty to commend her. The Celt, taking a chance on the strength of the rumor, laid siege to the older girl's heart and hand, and was accepted. The father received the announcement with a dignity that concealed his joy, but could not refrain from saying:

"And, my dear sir, ten thousand pounds goes with her-that is her

The prospective son-in-law made no reply and seemed lost in thought. After a few minutes the happy father slapped him on the shoulder and

"What in the world are you thinking about?"

"Oi'm thinking," was the reply, "that it's a pity it is ye haven't a daughter with two humps!"

The dogs in Jackson have been ordered muzzled by the police. All dogs found without muzzles will be shot.

Ypsilanti expected that the Cannon Wheel Co. would locate in that city, but the whole thing has exploded and the plant will remain at Pontiac.

Jackson is easy to reach and handy to leave, if the latter is desired, which is not often, the eight railways having 75 passenger trains arriving and departing each day. The electric lines have 10t cars coming and going each day. The Boland line run 74 cars and the Hawks-Angus 27. Jackson is a railway center. - Jackson Citizen.

For the past two weeks Mrs. D. L. Ball has been awakened about midnight by a great commotion in her hen house, Last week Wednesday Mrs. Ball's dog succeeded in "treeing" a big fat coon on the highest perch of the roost. Mrs. Ball hurried to the scene and fired five shots from her revolver, the last one bringing the robber to the ground, when his coonship was soon dispatched.-Grass Lake News.

Ann Arbor has a wide and enviable reputation for the protection by ordinance, it affords to the hundreds of squirrels in that city. Olney Belknap was taken before Justice Doty last Thursday and pleaded guilty to shooting one of the little creatures. In explanation he said that the university professor, for whom he is working, fined $5 and costs.

State street business men are cucu lating a petition to the postoffice department sking for a sub-postal station. E. E.
