Beeman and Robert Leach, who viewed the remains of the deceased, then adjourned to meet at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at the offices of TurnBull & Witherell. The remains were then turned over to Funeral Director Staffan, who removed them to the home of his mother.

At the hour named the jury and wit nesses, Jabez Bacon, M. J. Wachenhut, Philip Steger and Drs. Robinson and Schmidt, assembled at the apponted place and each told what he had seen and the part they had taken in relieving the injured man. The physicians testifying that death resulted from severe concussion of the brain, with fracture of the base of the skull and incomplete dislocation of the cervical vertebrae. The jury was then instructed regarding their duties by the coroner and returned their their verdict in accordance with the foregoing facts.

John R. Pierce, born 34 years ago last March, was the son of Hiram and Catherine Pierce. He has resided all of his life at the old homestead. The fun eral was conducted from the home of his mother, on Tuesday afternoon, Septem ber 16, 1902, Rev. C. S. Jones officiating The services were attended by a large concourse of his boyhood friends. He leaves besides the aged mother, five alstrrs and four brothers, who have the sympathy of the entire community in this sad afflction. The interment took place in the family cemetery, situated on the home farm.

Increasing Yield of Corn.

David Woodward of Clinton has a farm in Bridgewater that is run in a model manner. Three years ago he evolved the idea that it would be possible to raise 300 bushels of ears of corn per acre, and ac cordingly set about to reach that desired end. He began to look after the seed in the accident, had to unhitch the remaing a careful, painstaking way, and the result is he now raises not less than two and many times three or four ears on each stalk.

He raises one piece specially for seed summoned by 'phone from the waiting and keeps breeding up by cutting off the room, and Dr. Robinson, who was the tassels to every stalk that has less than first physician to arrive had the patient two ears. This year his seed patch shows removed to waiting room, and a few many stalks with two, three and in some minutes afterwards Dr. Schmidt arrived, cases four good ears on a stalk. The Washtenaw fair this year was a great success from every point of view except the financial. But for the heavy rain of Friday it would have been a great success financially. Friday would have been a big day, rivalling Thursday, which was the biggest fair day known in Ann Arbor, over 5,000 people being on the grounds. Secretary Bach thinks the as sociation is in the neighborhood of $300 behind.

The association held its election of flicers Friday afternoon and the follow ng were elected for the ensuing year: President-B. D. Kelly, Ypsilanti.

Prohibition County Ticket.

The prohibitionists of Washtenaw at meeting in Ypsilanti recently organized a Prohibition Alliance and made out the following ticket, which will be launched this fall:

Sheriff-Alfred R. Congdon, Ypsilanti Clerk-E. C. Stretch, Ann Arbor. 1 Register of Deeds-W. B. Warner

Treasurer-J. B. Steere, Ann Arbor. Coroners-T. W. Baldwin, Chelsea, and Charles Pinckney, Ypsilanti.

The officers of the Alliance are: President, C. M. Bowen, Ypsilanti; vice president, Alfred R. Congdon, Ypsilanti; secretary, F. M. Beal, Ypsilanti. Chelses cuts quite a figure in the foregoing, as Messers. Congdon and Bowen were former residents, and Messers, Warner and Baldwin still reside here.

Startled the People.

A. M. Harrington, of Freeport, Mich., one of the 15 deputy factory inspectors, struck Benton Harbor Friday and upset some favorite traditions and customs of that city. One of Benton Harbor's pet customs is to put up large buildings and then forget to put fire escapes on them.

To the great concern of property owners Inspector Harrington ordered fire escapes put on several buildings including hotels and store buildings, at once. He also ordered new low water bollers, and is closely investigating the employment of child labor in the factories in that city,

Benton Harbor never knew there was such a being as a factory inspector, and the sensation he has created is something terrific.

The Calumet Wild Man.

The Finnish fishermen who live on the shore of Lake Superior, west of Calumet, are in a highly nervous state. A wild man has been seen several times within the past month in the woods in that neighborhood. Oscar Sorensen, who brought the report to the city, states that himself and a party of fishermen have twice seen the wild man. Once he was sitting on a log not far away. He had a long beard and hair to his belt. His clothing was torn and shabby and he wore rubber shoes of antique pattern.

Another time when seen by a party of fishermen he was cating rotten ment, evidently part of the carcass of a long-decayed wolf. One of the fishermen examined the meat and is abcolutely sure that it was rotten.

As the wild man has twice attacked fishermen when they were alone, they are greatly alarmed, and leave their families with reluctance when attending to their fishing. They have resolved upon desperate efforts to capture the wild man, or free the region of his presence.

He Made Numerous Wills.

The heirs of Jonas Marsh, who re cently died in Scio, leaving an estate of about $100,000, are hustling for a satisfactory will. There is one on deposit in the Probate Court. It was made out in 1886 and one son is given about $10,000 extra. Since that time the records show that he has deposited six different wills with the probate judge and has drawn out each of them. The 1886 will was passed over to the Probate Court among other legal documents by Mrs. D. Cramer upon the death of her busband last May, it having been in her possession up to that time since it was executed. It is not now known whether the subsequent wills are in existence or have been destroyed.

Later in the day the prince and the others concerned in the charge were placed in the dock at the central criminal court and pleaded "not guilty." Prince Nicholas, of Braganza, and other relatives and friends were in the crowded court room,

In opening the case counsel for the prosecution said the offense with which the prince was charged was far too common in London.

The hearing of the charges brought against the prince and other men took place in the Southwark police court early in July and attracted much attention. Sir Edward Clarke, the former solicitor-general, defended the prince. The prosecutor altered the charge from "felony" to "misconduct under the criminal law amendment." Sir Edward intimated that the defense 5 per cent. According to the bill the would be conspiracy to rob and blackmail. Strict secrecy was observed by the court officials regarding the exact issue. Asked if it will control the European supply, he said, with equal candor, 'that it is impossible for any combination in the United States to control the meat trade of Europe because of the large shipments of cattle from Argentina and other South American countries. And yet Secretary Shaw blandly argues that our tariff does not safeguard the meat trust!"

The duty of two cents a pound which our tariff imposes on cattle and beef, if abolished, would allow the Argentina and Canadian beef and mutton to be brought in here to a limited extent and thus act as a regulator of prices. The freight and cold storage expense on meat shipped from Argentina would still protect the farmer, probably to the amount of the present tariff, but beyond that the trust would be powerless to extort the additional profit it is now making.

the individual who was guided by it That the Republicans at the head of the various bureaus in Washington occasionally suppress or distort unpleasant statistics is true. But we can never expect to have reliable statistics while protection is on the throne and can continue its rule only by deceiving the people. Our socalled "balance of trade" about which the Republicans are continually crowing exists only on paper. Our expert figures are far too high, because the trusts are ashamed to give the very low prices charged to foreigners, while our imports are far too low because of the undervaluation and wholesale smuggling. These are only instances of our unreliable statistics. Another is found in the attempts of the protected trusts to pad their wage roll and make wage earners feel that they are far better off than they really "Addition, Division and Silence." The Republican policies of "Addition, Division and Silence" have been quite effective in keeping from the American people the facts about the war with Spain, the Philippine war, and our trusteeship in Cuba. But in spite of the closing of mouths by those methods a good deal has leaked out that was intended to be preserved in "silence." No account has vet been rendered of the disposition of the $50,000,000 which was intrusted for, though when these appropriations were made it was expressly stipulated in the Senate that an accounting be

The thought then occurred to his mind that the prisoner, having been arrested for treapassing, might be released on his solemn promise never to return. With this new danger in his mind he started toward the deor, when he was met by Father Dun-

There is a mystery in it all which I am unable to solve. I cannot comprehend who this strange hermit can be, unless he is the captain to whom you refer."

"It looks very much as if the unfortunate man was the beloved captain whose mysterious disappearance has occasioned so much distress."

Paul remembered the story which the ex-sailor, Glum Ralston, had told thim of his captain, and also recalled to his recollection the mysterious walrus hide.

His anxiety to escape from the Tsland and return to the Klondyke, where his friends were, was more than over-balanced by a desire to learn something of the motives of the trespasser

"Mr. Duncan, will your friends see that he does not escape?"

"There is little danger of his doing so." Father Duncan answered. "My friends are kind and Christian men, yet they have by n. means lost their native watchfulness."

Paul had ampie proof, in time, of the darger of over-confidence. The third night after his visit to the jail he was awakened by a loud noise in the direction of the little wharf. There came the report of a gan something rarely heard at Metla ahthe, and he leaped from his bed hurriedly dressed and ran out upon the At last he met Father Duncan, whom he found as calm and firm

Paul gavo utterance to a groan sank upon a large store at the side of the road and bowed his head in his hands. One more hope, and, in fact, about the last hope he had, was gone. Paul remained two weeks longer with the Metlakahtlas, and then decided to leave his dusky friends and start for the Klondyke.

Father Duncan selected four stout young Indians to accompany him. The Indians were well supplied with provisions suitable for crossing the mountains, and he and his escort were provided with dried meat and compressed bread and hardtack.

The four Indians selected for Paul's party were stout young fellows, inured to hardship and danger. They were strong, brave and faithful. The instructions given them by the old missionary were carefully listened to and they promised to carry them out to the letter.

There is always something enchanting in a great, deep forest, with its tall trees clothed in moss and solemn depths which seem to speak of divinity. At night in the forest adds to the gloom, the solemnity and awfulness of the scene. A camp fire in the great northern woods, with its rocks and cliffs, its moss-covered trees, has something grand in it.

Gathered about a camp fire built at the base of the mountain range were five persons-Paul Miller and his four Christian Indians.

It had been a long, hard day's travel, and the poor fellows were almost exhausted. It was only Paul's indomitable will driving him on to more than super-human energies that kept him on his feet. He had abandoned all hope of finding the men who had robbed him, and now he longed to get back to the Klondyke, take another fortune from the frozen earth, and return to Laura and his mother

The faces which ever seemed to smile at him from the smoke and darkness gave him courage and hope.

"It has been a long time sirce I wrote to them," he though.. "They have no doubt given me up for dead How sad to cause them grief, and all through a mischievous yet truthful message v itten in a fit of delirium!"

He was suddenly roused from his pairful reverie by the falling and rolland across the camp fire, scatto be recognized by the man who had direction. He cried: "Throw the wood on the fire!"

They obeyed, and the light flashed up, throwing out a broad red glare on be-grimmed face of the man who The interest of good Father Duncan | had tumbled down the cliff. Paul, starting back, said:

"It is the escaped prisoner, the abis certainly very, very ductor—the robber—and perhaps murderer." He seized one of the Indian's muskets and raised it to brain the scoundrel, but two stout Metlahaht'as seized him and said:

good a prophet. The prisoner has | Breakfast over and they began to prepare to ascend the mountain.

It had showed considerable during the night, but toward morning it changed to a rain and later in the day a sleet.

The ascent became every moment more and more difficult. About every one hundred paces they came to mountain torrents, fed by the glaciers, and augmented by recent rainfalls, which they had to wade, the cold water often coming above their knees.

After struggling up a steep ascent of twenty-five or thirty feet they were often forced from sheer exhaustion to rest for a moment, but when they stopped ever so short a time the piercing wind cut them to the marrow, thilled them to the bone and they were compelled to continue their course to keep from chilling to d ath.

When evening came they were on the other side of the mountain in a valley wet, shivering and benumbed with cold. They had no tent nor shelter, save the lowering heavens from above. Some dry pine and scrub oak wood was collected and a fire kindled. They all gathered about it to dry their bedraggled garments and warm their shivering bodies.

They had just made a supper on dried salmon, moose meat and hardtack, when they were startled to see an old man with long white hair and beard standing on a slight elevation not far away, gazing at them. He wore a seal-skin cap, which shaded his face, but not too much for him to be recognized by all the camp.

"The captain!" cried the Metlakahtlas.

'The hermit!" exclaimed Paul. The prisoner gave utterance to a curse and was bounding away when a blow from the hermit's staff sent him staggering to the earth.

Paul Miller started quickly toward the hermit, saying: "Where are you from?"

The old man gave him a piercing look and answered:

"I am from ever where, which means nowhere. This is precious fine company you keep!" He clutched his stout staff as Paul approached and warned him not to come too close. "I will strike you as I did your companion if you come too near me," he added, in a voice made ferocious by long years of suffering and disappointment.

Paul halted and gazed at him in amazement.

The old man at last said: "I have been cheated, deceived, betraved and Do you know those men?" asked

FREAK DINNERS A FAD.

Entertainments Where Guests Cook for Themselves.

Freak dinners are a fad. An ordinary dinner has lost its charm for some people who go out much during the season, and now that Paris has set its seal of approval on the Corinthian dinner at which everyone is obliged to cook something, New Yorkers and Chicagoans will select this form of entertainment as a giversion.

In a studio a few weeks ago the wife of an artist gave one of these cooking parties to a dozen guests who knew rothing of the fun in store for them when they arrived at the house. The studio was arranged with a long table holding a chafing dish for each "Tryin' to cross. Was any harm in person, with some particular vland before it ready to be cooked. Each guest received a chef's cap and apron, and in a short time the dishes were bubbling and simmering in a promising fashion. When the meal was cooked it was served by the men, who acted as the walters. Strangely enough, the dinner in every particular was a success. But cooking has become such a fad of late that it is considered quite smart to know how to cook some particular dish in a chafer. The bachelor apartment feasts, at which the host acts as cook, have increased the desire for culinary knowledge, as these occasions prove very enjoyable to those used to more formal enter-reminent and Wealthy Men Figure in Sensational Case.

All California is discussing the chooting at San Francisco of Frederick Marriott, publisher of the News Letter, a weekly paper, by Truxton Beale, the diplomat, or T. H. Williams, president of the California Jockey club.

Williams and Beale both admit assaulting Marriott, and each is willing to shoulder the charge of shooting. They declare Marriott attacked the reputation of a young society woman, Miss Marie Oge, and that they punished him for the attack.

Marriott, his physicians say, will recover unless blood poisoning sets in. No affair in recent years has caused such a sersation. Both Beale and Williams have been preminent financially and socially for years and they are nearly as well known in other parts of the country as in Colifornia. Truxton Beale is the son of the late Gen. Beale, who went to California many years ago and accumulated a vast estate. Beale was at one time United States minister to Persia and later to Greece and is at present a member of the wool dealing firm of Shobert, Beale & Co.

T. H. Williams is known all over the country as a racing man. He is president of the California Jockey club, which controls racing in California. He inherited a large fortune from his father and is rated as a millionaire.

the records for desertion and petty offences are compared this year with those of last year, ft would appear as if the abolition of the canteen had other than a wholesome effect upon the morals of the service.

Last session, in order to provide reading rooms, gymnasiums and recreation halls which the profit of the canteen allowed, Congress authorized an appropriation of half a million dollars to establish amusement halls at the army posts throughout the country, and a board of officers will shortly be appointed to visit the various posts. In many cases it will be necessary to erect a special building for this purpose. At other places it will be possible to utilize buildings already in existence.

The abolition of the capteen feature of the post exchange materially reduced the revenue from that source, and it has become necessary for the government to provide some means of entertaining the soldiers when they are off duty.

ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.

Writer Describes Characteristics of Bulwer and Tennyson.

I wonder if Tennyson's hard fight up Parnassus took some of the tender expression from his face; he had something to say against the envy. hatred and malice that impeded his way; and, alas with temper! What would you have thought of his bitter satirist, Bulwer, if you had been called upon to diagnose his genius at first sight? I saw him not very long before his death, and with all my admiration of his genius, and my gratitude for "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Last of the Barons." and "The Caxtons," I could not help feeling that there was truth in Tennyson's bitter description of his personal appearance. often the only time school kept. Young folks learned more from woods and stream and earth then they are apt to now. So it was with Whittier. Up to the time he was 14 he had read no poems except those in the Bible. At that time his first schoolmaster brought with him to the house of Whittier's father a copy of the poems of Robert Burns. "I begged him to leave the book with me," said Whittier, speaking of the occasion. "It had a lasting influence upon me. I began to make rhymes myself, and to imagine stories and adventures."

Four or five years after this Wilitam Lloyd Garrison was editing a country newspaper in Newburyport, Mass., and to him Whittier ventured to send some of his verses, which were published. This is said to have been the beginning of his life as a poet.

Millionaires Are Quite Human.

Well, it may seem odd, but some of the Newport cottages were conceived in much the same way as your own dream house, says Ainslee's. I haven't a doubt that Cornelius Vanderbilt and his wife had the jolliest evenings possible when they talked over the new Breakers that was to rise from the ashes of the old. And don't you suppose that while Foxhall Keene and his bride were in Europe they made delightful little guesses as to progress on the splendid place under construction on Long Island, and cabled over all sorts of absurd suggestions? Why, of course they did. At the present moment, too, the young Payne Whitneys, yachting somewhere around Norway, are chattering away to each other about the arrangement of rooms in that million-dollar home that Colonel Oliver Payne finally decided to give them in place of several pounds of candy as a wedding gift. The American telephone and telegraph company want to know what inducements Ann Arbor could offer for the location of their plant there. They would employ from 2,000 to 3,000 men and put up a big factory.

Joseph Kierzek and W. Burski of Presque Isle county were found dead Monday morning in their room at the Newman House, Ann Arbor. They had turned on the gas full force and had evidently been dead for several hours when discovered.

At the common council meeting a Ann Arbor Monday night an ordinance was passed to its first and second readings to limit the speed of automobiles to seven miles an hour and to oblige them to slacken when approaching crossings to five miles an hour.

Ed Hooton of Saline visited Ann Arbor last week and stopped at the American house. When he retired he closed the windows and transom and blew out the gas. The blow was almost too much for Hooton, who would never have seen the beauties of nature had it not been for the bell "hop" who smelled the escaping gas. It took four hours' work to get the man out of danger.

Mart Reynolds, a salesman for Wad hams, Ryan & Reule, Ann Arbor, was locked up at the county jail Monday night on the charge of embezzlement from his employers. He was caught by a $3 purchase after hours, paid for with a silver dollar and two marked dollar bills. He pocketed the money. About a year or so ago he was up for the same offense, but it was settled for $1.000. His habits were expensive beyond his income.

Young bicycle riders are "tickled most to death," because Warren Kimble, one of our city fathers, was arrested this morning, by the city marshal, and fined for riding his bicycle on the sidewalks, contrary to the ordinance. since the ordinance was passed young people, especially have complained because they were not allowed to ride on the sidewalks and no attention was paid to the old men. They seemed to think that they had as good right to ride as they. The authorities decided to stop the nuisance or make an example of someone. Mr. Kimble we understand took it as a good joke and paid his fine Manchester Enterprise.
