12th. Subject, Modern Problems. Mr. Debs comes recommended by Eugene Feld, James Whitcomb Riley and the press throught the country. He spoke three years ago to the students at Ann Arbor, and was pronounced an orator of the first-class. He is engaged this sea. son on many of the best courses in Michigan. Don't fail to hear this great orator discuss the labor question.

The Wesleyan Male Quartette, December 16th. This is one of the best organization in the country. Read the press notices concerning it.

Thomas McClary, lecture, January 2d. Mr. McClary has recommendations from William Jennings Bryan and Bishop Fowler. He has been heard and indorsed by several Chelsea people, who pro nounce him a humurous and magnetic Imperial Hand Bell Ringers, February 16th; mandolins, guitars, banjos, etc. This company will give a popular concert. It consists of a bell quartette, banjo quartette, a mandolin and guitar club, also solos on the harp and zither. This is one of the finest organizations of the kind in the country.

Hon, Charles B. Landis, March 13th Mr. Landis will speak in the University course at Ann Arbor and needs no other recommendations. He is a member of Congress and one of the best orators in

The Bostelman String Quartette, March 27th. The quartette will be as sisted by Mr. Carl Crunce, basso. The quartette consists of three violins and a cello. Mr. John C. Bostelman, the first violin, made a tour of the United States with Madam Patti. Lovers of fine music should not fail to hear this company.

Every one of the above numbers can be found in the best courses in Michigan for the coming winter. No readers or entertainers have been engaged, thus making a complete change from last season. Season tickets will be sold for $1.00 Com plete circulars will be left at your home in a few days. Read the press notices. The young peoples' societies of the Congregational, Baptist, Methodist and Lutheran churches, offer you the above course for the coming season confident t will please you, and trusting that you will unite with them in maintaining a good class of entertainments in Chelsea.

The Calendar Tea.

The calendar tea which was given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church Friday evening was one of the most successful events ever held by the society. The receipts for the evening were about $50. The tables were very prettily decorated, and the last six months of the year were represented.

The July table was in charge of Mesdames R. A. Snyner and A. R. Welch and Miss Clara Snyder. The decorations were in patrioti colors, and the souvenirs were small flags.

The August table was in the charge o Mesdames G. W. Palmer and J. R. McLaren and Miss Florence Caster. Sunflowers, watermelons and colored dolls formed the decorations and emancipation day was represented. The souvenirs were small dolls.

The September table was in charge of Mesdames F. S. Welch and J. S. Cum mings and Miss Mary Shaw. The decorations consisted of a grape arbor in full trim and also jack-lanterns strung about promiscuously. The souvenirs consisted of pyrographic work.

The October table was in the charge of Mesdames E. Keenan, E. Hammond and C. E. Stimson. The decorations consisted of a shock of corn, also pumpkins and autumn leaves. The souvenirs were bunch of small red apples and hope tied together.

The November table was in the charge of Mesdames F. P. Glazier, O. T. Hoover and J. W. Schenk. The decorations consisted of an arch covered with ivy and cranberries,and candle sticks made of turnips and carrots, and a thirty-pound turkey occupied the center of the table. The souvenirs consisted of baskets of nuts.

The December table was in the charge Mrs. G. E. Hathaway and Misses Nen Wilkinson and Edith Shaw. The decorations consisted of a genuine Christ-

Fletcher-Erikson.

On Wednesday afternoon, September 24th at the home of the brides' mother in Sharon, occurred the marriage of Miss Mamle Etla Fletcher and Mr. Charles Edwin Erikson of Chicago.

The bride, one of Sharon's most popular young ladies, has been teaching in the Chelsea union school for the past five years, and has endeared herself to all who knew her by her many excellent qualities and rare accomplishments.

The groom, who is a native of Sweden, has won for himself a high place in the business world of Chicago by the excellency of his varied abilities.

The ceremony uniting these two accomplished young people, which was striking in its simplicity, occurred in the presence of the family and a small party of friends of the bride, Rev. Carl G. Zeidler of Detroit officiating.

The happy couple left the same evening on their wedding trip, and will be at home after October 15th at 2505 Ontario avenue, Chicago. We extend our hearty congratulations to the young couplemay they have a happy journey through

Angling Extraordinary,

At Winchester it is quite a common thing to see men fishing through the street gratings. Under High street there flow several streams which ultimately discharge into the River Itchen, a noted trout stream. These streams receive the storm and surface water from the street by means of the ordinary street grating. The line is dropped through and fastened to the end of a stick small enough to go through the grate. When the fish is rushes to the point where the stream They are going fast. emerges from under the street, and is there able to recover his line and land his fish .- Pastime Review.

A Temperate Protest.

In a time when the other nations of the earth are, because of jealousy, reviling Great Britain, the empire should keep fast to itself. It is certainly savoring of unfairness that Australia, minister for agriculture, has cabled to the agent general, Sir Andrew Clarke, directing that Australia's uce of all sorts shall be strongly brought under the notice of the British government .- Melbourne Times.

The Ruling Passion,

. Sir Herbert Maxwell, at the British sea anglers' dinner, told a story illustrative of the instinctive propensity of British nature to have a little innocent gamble on something. Three officers in the Transvaal were down with fever, and just before the doctor went his rounds in the morning each patient put half a crown in a basin and the one whose temperature was the highest took the pool.-Newcastle Chronicle.

Firemen's Teeth.

"The reason of the physical examination of applicants for the position of fireman is so strict on the point of perfect teeth, is because it may easily happen that one man may have to rescue a number of small children from a burning room," said a physician. "When the fireman can hold no more children in his arms he must carry one of them by holding it with his teeth."-Chicago Tribune.

Ought to Be Enough for Him. "Do tell me, Mrs. Barkins," said

the young mother, "whether you believe in one cow's milk for baby." It depends on the child. If he's a good, strong, healthy baby, and wants it, I'd give him two cows' milk; but it ! does seem as if any ordinary baby wouldn't need more'n one cow could furnish."-Youth's Companion.

Frightened by the little one's cries, it is alleged that he went away, leaving her to walk back to town alone. She was seen by two young women, who brought her in.

Labene was arrested a block from the railway station, and denied wrongdoing of any kind. The child's story doesn't agree with his, however,

A Mystery.

There is an air of mystery surrounding Mrs. Ernest Scholtz, of Tawas, City, who was found on the floor of her home with her throat cut and a razor beside her. She had indicated, by nods that it was her husband, Ernest Scholtz, who did the deed, while he vigorously denied the charge in her presence. She has been an inmate of a state asylum, and when released obtained a divorce from her first husband, named Allard. It seems that Allard drove Scholtz from the house, telling his son that Scholtz was not legally married to his mother, as Scholtz had a wife in an asylum. Scholtz bears a fine reputation, and says he can show that he was in East Tawas consulting as to the steps he should take to compel Allard to keep away at the time it is supposed the deed was committed.

BY WILLIAM BLOSS. (Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.) "Gentlemen of the leisure class don't carry watches, nowadays," said our host, Thompson, dogmatically, mausing to light a second cigarette. James, since Captain Barry wishes to be exact, you may look at the library clock and tell him what time it is." "It is striking eight o'clock, sir," replied James, respectfully, as he quietly filled the Captain's glass.

There was a snug party of six lounging over their wine and tobacco after dining regally at Thompson's bachelor board. Barry had to catch a train for St. Paul at 9 p. m. He wanted to stay just as long as possible before summoning a cab to take him to the depot, and upon consulting his watch for the hour had been seized by forebodings as to the accuracy of the hands. His inquiry as to the "right" time had led to the host's remark.

Barry flushed a little as it fell. The sertion seemed to his mind super cilious and barbarously un-American. Barry himself was a man of the people, and was proud of it. So, too, was Thompson, or had been, once.

"What do you mean by 'gentlemen of the leisure class,' you gray-haired fraud," he demanded, in half anger. "Do you mean to say I am no gentleman because I carry a watch and like to know what time it is when I have a train to make?"

"Certainly not," replied Thompson, with placidity. "Of course not. You are a gentleman because you are a man of education, intelligence, goodbreeding and some ancestry-

"Huh!" grunted the mollified Barry, "What then?"

"But you are not," continued the host, "a gentleman of the leisure class, tecause you busy yourself with your land. commercial affairs and even at your age continue-"

"At my age! I'm full five years younger than you are." Thompson waved the interruption aside as irrelevant. "I was going to say that if you quit business and became a loafer-"As you have."

"Yes, as I have, then you might account yourself a gentleman of the leisure class."

"When I was a young person," continued Thompson, "just beginning life on the Board of Trade, after leaving Ann Arbor, my Uncle Jackson Thompson, who had sent me to school and had in fact reared me from boyhood as his own son, with much ceremony one day presented me with a timepiece known as the family clock, and told me, with moist eyes, to cherish

The storm had begun the day before, blowing first in fitful gusts that whistled under the eaves, sent the hay from the stacks flying through the yard, and lifted the ends of the roofshingles threateningly. By noon it had gradually strengthened to a gale, and the steady downfall of flakes had been turned into a biting scourge that whipped up the soft cloak from the face of the open, treeless prairie, and sent it lashing through the frigid air. Long before night had begun to settle down, no eye could penetrate scudding snow a foot beyond the windowledges, except when a sudden stilling of the tempest disclosed the writhing cottonwood break to the north, and the double row of ash saplings leading south to the blotted, printless high-

> $$$$$$$$$$$$$ THE FOOD VALUE OF BANANAS

In a paper read at the annual meeting of the Illinois State Horticultural Society, Mrs. Sada V. Blair had this to say of the banana:

The banana is probably the best example of the food fruit, containing a fair amount of carbohydrates and an appreciable amount of preteid matter. It is, however, too bulky to constitute an essential item of diet, as it would require about 80 per day to supply enough energy to keep a reasonably active man going, and about 160 to supply him with sufficient proteid matter, so says one authority. It has been estimated, however, that a given acreage of bananas will support a larger number of persons than will wheat. Recognition of the food value of the banana is rapidly spreading, although even ten years ago so great an amount as 12,695,386 bunches of this fruit came into American ports in one year, while at the present time over 100,000 bunches are sold each month for distribution in and about New York City alone. Bananas having been imperfectly ripened in most cases are scarcely fit to serve unless cooked in some of the many appetizing ways in which they can tickle the palate even of an epicure. It may be of interest to know that in its native land the variety of bananas shipped to us is never eaten raw. There is one variety, possibly more, whose flesh is considered delicate enough to serve uncooked, but these never leave the home lands. If a banana has been properly baked it is sufficiently tempting to forever destroy the aptempting to forever destroy the appetite for a raw one. My method of baking bananas is probably not new to any one here, but for the sake of emphasizing this mode of serving I give it herewith.

Cut off each tip and remove that secion of skin which is uppermost as the fruit lies in its baking pan. Loosen the remaining edges so that the juice will not escape. Dust lightly with sugar and put in a hot oven for fifteen minutes or until the banana is thoroughly softened and a delicate brown.

Banana flour is a new secondary product and said to be highly digestible, nutritious and palatable. An objection to bananas is that they cause constipation in many instances. Dates and raisins have even greater nutri-Live value than bananas, and Densmore says one-half pound of dates and one cup of milk is an ample meal for a sedentary person; while dried figs are proportionately more nourishing than

A SYRIAN MAID.

The Law Drives Her Insane and Sulcide.

years ago to make a home in the United States, Before he left he promised to be a true lover to Alexandra Joseph, and send for her to come to this country and marry him. He kept his word and some mouths ago the Syrian girl landed in Montreal and was met by her lover. There it was found she was suffering from a disease of the eye that barred her entrance into this country. She spent five months, with the faithful Joseph by her side, in a Montreal hospital. On Aug. 19 the pair tried to cross the border at Detroit, but were promptly stopped by the customs officials. Since then she has been languishing in the Wayne county fail. Her lover came and made all the attempts that his limited means would warrant, to secure her freedom, then he returned to Iowa te work and secure more. On Thursday, a brother arrived to rescue his sister. On the same day she was taken from the jail by the U. S. customs officers and started for New York -to be deported. Alexandra could not speak a word of English, and her mind had become unbalanced. Shortly after the train left Detroit she left the officer to go to the tollet room, from the window of which she leaped to instant death. Her bruised and broken body was taken to the morgue in Newport. Though there are numerous Syrians in Detroit, it does not appear that one was called to explain to the poor girl her situation and the confinement in fail made her insane.

Punished for Discovering Goid. Not all the old documents and records relating to the early history of Australia have been destroyed, as many suppose, and in a recent search among some family papers a curious item was brought to light bearing upon the discovery of gold at the antipodes. According to this, gold was first found by a convict near Parramatta in 1789. The unfortunate fellow was at once charged with having stolen a watch and boiled it down," and being convicted by the rude court of those early days, was given 150 lashes for his pains. In later years the record of this incident was closely examined by an undoubtedly competent authority, who was quite convinced of the genuineness of the convict's story. > Havre is still the principal harbor of France, however, and is perhaps destined to remain so. This city has wharves as the entire American union can boast, and the old conundrum, "Why?" arises as we pause to admire. The jingo song said, "We've got the shops, we've got the men, we've got the money, too!" and granite enough to line her shore from end to end, if need be, and much more money than Havre to pay the bill. Stone piers are probably even cheaper, reckoning long periods of time, than wood. What are we waiting for?

> And Havre is much more than a seaport. It is a very handsome city, with fine public buildings, beautiful parks and gardens and a beach of its own that needs only gravel instead of cobble stones to make it much finer than Trouville.

On the Committee.

"In my county," said Senator Blackburn recently, "there's an old fellow who has many scruples about the Bible, and is more noted for his moneymaking tact than for his general intelligence. Among his many peculiarities is his dislike for the Scripture and its teachings, and he improves every opportunity to make his dislikes known. "Not long since while in conversation with a neighbor on the merits of the Bible, he was asked to state some of his objections to its teachers, 'Wall,' said he, 'there's a great many things that hadn't never ought to have been there. I'll tell you, there's the whole Book of Job that had better been left out; an, he added with much earnestness, 'it would never have gone the committee."

STRIKE IN JAPANESE SCHOOL

Students Demand the Dismissal of the Entire Faculty.

We had to report recently a strike on the part of the students of the Miye Middle School, writes the Japanese Mail. On that occasion the fault seemed to be largely on the side of the faculty of the school and the governor of the prefecture. News now comes of a strike at the Middle School of Oita, in which the students appear to be chiefly to blame. The account given in Tokyo journals is that the elder students, angered some severe strictures passed by Mr. Uki, one of the teachers, against an increasing habit of imbibing sake demanded his removal. Apparently the principal yielded so far as to suspend Mr. Uki, but, at the same time, he rusticated some of the students. This led to a renewal and stronger demonstration on the latter's part. They drew up a document arraigning the principal and the teachers on various counts and demanding the dismissal of the whole faculty. Thirteen of them were now expelled, with the result that meetings began to be held outside the school for the purpose of planning a general strike. The trouble is not over. Of course this version comes from the side of the teachers.

"No, thank yez!" said the Celt, emphatically. "Oi'll not go inta th' house uv me inimies!" "Well, that's rather harsh," an-

"Yis-He did that," assented the Celt, according to the Philadelphia Times, with growing warmth, "and yez didn't do a t'ing to him, ayther!"

In Germany a new microbe has been discovered and a very dangerous one it is said to be. Only in inkstands and ink bottles is it found, and for this reason it is known as the ink microbe. ### Americans in Rome

Historians, Sculptors and Authors That Have Lived in the Eternal City.

(Special Correspondence.) HE habit which prevails in Florence of marking by a memorial slab bearing a fitting inscription the place rendered notable by the dwelling of a great man has also spread to Rome.

In that city, however, the records are fewer by far than in Florence, though it is evident this cannot arise from a dearth of notable personages, for the gates of Rome have ever been opened wide to men of mark.

The memorials that are affixed to the walls bear the names of men from many lands-here a Polish poet, there a Neapolitan sculptor; in the Via delle Mercede a marble slab affixed to the wall of a large house marks it as the dwelling place of Sir Walter Scott; on the Palace Verospi (now Theodoli), a slap records that there Shelley wrote "The Cenci;" the house in which Keats died in the Piazza di Spagna is denoted by a marble slab; and so Leopardi, the Recanati poet, whose muse affected all Italy, is remembered by a slab at his residence in the Via Con dotti.

There is but one American, so far as I know, thus remembered in Rome by an honorary inscription on the walls of the house in which he lived. This is Samuel Finley Breese Morse, the artist and inventor, whose name is indissolubly associated with the earlier stages of development of the electric telegraph.

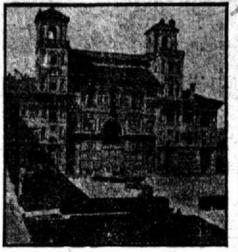

The slab was placed on this house in 1883. It is worthy of note that the great reputation of Morse was acknowledged in Rome wellnigh twenty years before the propriety of raising a statue to him was discussed at Washington.

There are, however, many other memories of Americans in Rome, associated with different places, although not recorded in sempiternal bronze or inscribed marbles. It is impossible to say who were the first visitors from the newly discovered continent of the west to the Eternal City: but it is a notorious fact that the elaborately carved wooden ceiling of the great church of Santa Maria Maggiore was gilded with the first gold brought to Spain from South America, which was if ordinary records are to be trusted.

Among the earliest visitors from the United States to Rome in the last century was William Hickling Prescott. the historian of Mexico and Peru, whose delightful account of Ferdinand and Isabella is a classic. In 1816 he made a visit to Rome, coming from Paris, after leaving which he and his companion, John Pickman Gray, "stopped a day at La Grange to pay their respects to Gen. Lafayette," as his biographer, George Ticknor, re-

A contemporary of Story's Rome a generation ago was the pool and painter, Thomas Buchanan Read, a man of most winning personality and remarkable ability. He then lived in the Via Babuino, having the windows of his apartment on the fourth floor, looking into the Plazza di Spagna, that beloved resort of the English-speaking foreigner in Rome. This house was afterward inhabited for several years by the distinguished archaeologist, Commendatore Rodolfo Lanciani.

Early in Story's days in Rome, the ablest among American artists of his time, William Henry Rheinhart of Baltimore died. He also was sculptor, and all his fellow-artists of had occasion at times to resort to America and all the Italian artists Doan's Kidney Piels when I noticed who were capable of judging good! warnings of another attack, and on work were unanimous in placing him in the Piazza Barberini, a short distance from the palace in which Story resided, Louisa Alcott took up her residence. Here in this house, that stands between the Vias S. Basilio and S. Nicolo di Tolentino, she had an apartment, and here she began her book "Little Men."

His Fortune Would Not Be Considered Large To-day.

Whether Washington can be put into the envied category of millionaires no | Mobile (Ala.) Register. To counter one can assert positively. According to the late Paul Leicester Ford, whose work, "The True George Washington," has received wide recognition, "the Father of His Country," when he died, was worth $530,000. counts. Then they went on by Lyons, Mont Cenis, Turin, Genoa, Milan, Venice, Bologna, and Florence to Rome. There they remained about six weeks, but there is no mention, at least in Ticknor's life of Prescott, of the place where this historian resided. In later times the number of visitors from the United States increases. George Stillman Hillard, a Boston lawyer, beheld Italy for the first time on Sept. 2, 1847.

In 1856 another lawyer, who had forsaken the art of persuading by words for the art of winning by sculpture, William Wetmore Story, entered Rome for the third time. In the later years of his life Mr. Story was not only a representative American artist, but his residence in the magnificent Palazzo Barberini was a center to which the great bulk of the intelligent and prominent Americans were attracted. Few strangers know Rome as Mr. Story did. He had seen it when it was an artist's seen driving along the Corso or walking in the avenues of the Pincian Garden; when living was cheap and when talent was regarded as far above rubies. And then he was such an excellent talker! He had a fund of anecdote which, when in humor for talking, he gave forth in words that were the best suited for his narrative. He was one of the last of the conversationists. Another of them was a painter named Freeman, who had seen point, had the two ever come together. In one of his recurrent moods of bitterness and jealousy toward Washington Adams asked: 'Would Washington have ever been commander of the revolutionary army or president of the United States if he had not married the rich widow of Mr. Custis?" According to Mr. Ford, it seems that he would, for he had achieved colonial military fame before his marriage. That the Widow Custis was a desirable "partie" is not to be denied, however, as her part of the Custis property equalled "fifteen thousand acres of land, a good part of it adjoining the city of Williamsburg; several lots in the said city; between two and three hundred negroes, and about eight or ten thousand pounds upon bond," estimated at the time at about twenty thousand pounds in all. This property was further increased on the death of Patsy Custis in 1773 by a half of her fortune, which added ten thousand paradise; when the Pope might still be pounds to the sum.-Richmond Dispatch.

CHURCH IN SPANISH STYLE

Form of Architecture Popular in Pensacola as in Early Days.

It is noticeable that the vestry of Christ Church parish, Pensacola, Fla. has taken the Spanish architectural form, for a new church building for the parish. This is most appropriate Pensacola was in all its early history a Spanish colonial city; its streets and public places are known by Spanish Lames; many of the people have Spanish blood in their veins; there is still the Spanisa atmosphere tiere, as in St. Augustine, although modern Pensacola is truly American. Visitors to that city expect to see some thing recalling the ancient history of the place; but such is the force of innovation that, with the passage of time, all relics are likely to be oblierated, and no distinction be trace able between a town in Spanish File ida and a town in Oklahoma, says the act this tendency-at least in partthe new church building is to be return to ancient forms. It will resemble a Spanish mission church in general style, with here and there the graceful ornamentation that is seen in the Seville cathedrai. This much we deduce from seeing the picture of the new church. We assume that the design was selected with the object above stated.

an' blood he trembles." "Well, d'ye reckon that's certain?" sked Padgett, rabbing his bullet head get the idea through. "Know it."

"Why didn't we light on that afore?" "Because the youngster goes under nickname. He's Crack-lash here an' Paul Miller in Fresno. That's the whole long and short o' it."

"Well, sail in on the capen an' see what ye kin do with him," growled Ned seating himself on a stone and twirling his stick in his hand. "I leave it all t' you; take it an' see how ye'll come out." Then followed another long consultation among the other three. it was not until late that night they proceeded to carry out their plan. The old hermit whom they called the captain was taken apart from his fellow prisoner and seated on a stone. Ben Allen then proceeded to interrogate him.

"You are Captain Joseph Miller of the schooner "Eleanor,' ain't ye?" he "Those two rogues told you that.

They know it, and it's no use to deny "You left a wife at home-a wife and child?" "Yes." "Your wife was named Mollie and your boy baby's name Paul?"

"I don't admit or deny." "After you sailed away so many years your wife gave you up for dead, and with her child removed to Fresno, where she lives now. She never told her son the sad, uncertain fate of his father, fearing when he grew up he would start in search of him, and she always had a superstitious dread o' the forests o' Alaska."

The sea captain sat unmoved throughout the narrative. Ben went

"But when Paul Miller grew to be a man he heard of the fabulous riches in Alaska and came to find it. He had amassed quite a fortune, when he was robbed, followed the robbers to the woods and was captured by them. Now, the young man yonder is Paul Miller, your son."

The stern old captain was unmoved save a slight twitching at the corners of his mouth, but he made no answer. Ben continued: "Though you may have lost the walrus hide on which the map to the buried treasure is, yet you know the spot, and can take us there. You shall do it or I swear that your son shall die before your face."

Again Ben Allen was disappointed. The old man was wholly unmoved, as if he had been talking to stone. The captors waited about him with halfsuppressed breathing, hoping that something would occur to break his imperturbability, but they were disappointed.

The threat of Morris had only been to intimidate the prisoner. He was willing to make any sort of threats, but not being the hardened criminal Ned Padgett was he called a halt at the line of murder. "Boys," continued Morris, "I haven't given up all hope yet. We may be able to do somethin' with him. Let's keep up the scare."

"Agreed." We can even get a rope and go through pretense o' hangin' the youngster."

"That's it; go through anything to make the old rascal tell us where it

With this resolution more firmly fixed in their minds they once more returned to where the old captain sat as unmoved as when they left him. Well, Captain Miller, have you decided to tell us where you cached the treasure?" asked Ben Allen. "No," was the immediate answer.

"Do you want to see your son hang before your eyes?" "I have no son."

"Don't you know that young man is your son?"

The prisoner fixed his great blue orbs on the speaker and in a firm, unmoved tone answered: "He is not my son. I may have a son living. I once did, but he is not my son. I like the young man, for he is noble, brave and honest, but he is no relation to me." They were wholly unprepared for this answer. The sincerity with which it was given took everyone aback and for several moments they stood aghast and silent. The ex-sea captain, after a brief silence, continued: "Even if I had the walrus hide I would not give it to you. Even if I could now go and unearth that buried treasure I would not do it."

"Why?" "For two reasons, First, I will not compromise with crime. Second, even If I did decide to do so and turn over the treasure to you it would be the would never dare let us go after what gan to act. They rolled up the blank-ruled, and after some more deliberation it was decided to try the effect of the rope on the young prisoner.

"I tell you he is the son of the old man; watch him closely when we go to hang him up and see if his eye does not grow moist."

They had a rope made of seal hide, and, cutting a pole with their hand axes, stretched it across/the narrow end of the cavern and placed a rope about Paul's neck.

"Now old man, confess that you have lied, and swear that you will fellow will die." Paul, who had not heard the conversation between the hermit and his captors, was unable to explain their conduct to his own satisfaction. He believed his last hour had come and determined to meet his fate like a hero. When told to prepare for death, he rose, made no resistance, and his arms were tied behind his back. The noose was adjusted about his neck, and he took his position under the cross-bar, and, closing his eyes, murmured a short

All eyes were on the other captive, but he sat with face averted and said not a word. There was no change in his expression-no more indication of at the death of a stranger. When the miserable farce was 'over Paul had been released, and the four rascals retired again to confer with each each other. Tom Ambrose said:

"Well, it's my opinion that we've lost our last chance of ever getting his buried millions."

At this Padgett again proposed his knotted stick and swore he would brain both with it, but he was prevented by Morris and Allen, who dechared there should be no real violence. The two prisoners were given a meagre supper of dried beef and a little meal gruel, and driven to the far end of the cavern for the night. When they were apart from the guard Paul asked: "What was meant by their extraordinary course to-day?" "They labor under the mistaken idea that we are related and both have some knowledge of the buried treasure. As they are mistaken they will succeed in getting nothing from

I have been mystified at their strange conduct all along," said Paul, "and I would not be surprised at any time at their taking our lives."

His companion shock his grizzled head and answered:

"No, no; they won't harm us so long as we have the secret in our own breasts. If we should tell them and they should find the treasure, then we would be killed in short order."

"Then say nothing."

Though night and day were the same in that dungeon, the captors had their sleeping and waking hours. Paul and his companion threw themselves on their miserable pallet of straw, but not to sleep. They lay so they could watch their captors.

At last, one after another, they began to grow drowsy. One rose and went toward the pile of straw, and stretching himself upon it, was soon snoring. A short quarrel followed on the subject of guarding the prisoners. Padgett was the man selected and he swore he had done more than his do any more of it, but Morris, who | goat seemed the person in command, declared he must take his turn of two hours, and left him on duty while the others went to bed.

The whole matter could not have been better planned for Paul, for Padgett was careless and yawned sleepily before his companions had closed their eyes. For a long time he made a fight against the wiles of Morpheus, but at last his head dropped forward on his chest.

Paul raised his own head and shoulders from his pallet of straw and surveyed the entire cavern at a sweeping glance. There was a fire burning in the center which threw out a dull, ruddy glow, dimly lighting the scene. Where the fire had been built the cavern was wide, and from the lofty ceiling ages ago great fragments of stone had been torn loose and lay in a heap on the floor, a little to one side of the fire, leaving a dark path in the shadow. Paul could also see that their captors had placed their rifles in a corner farthest from them. The three men sleeping on the straw were between the prisoners and the rifles, which were on the right of the sleeping sentry. All the advantages and disadvantages of the position were taken into consideration at a giance. Paul's companion arose and gave their surroundings a quick survey, and then they exchanged glances. The look was sufficient. They understood each other as well as if they had spoken volumes. Paul was to look after the guard and the captain to seize the rifles. The young man nodded assent to the request expressed by the captain's eyes, and beets and left them on the straw, with Bob Allen and Morris and the sail- their caps stuck over them, giving literature of Biblical days. them, in the uncertain light, the apbefore the pierciag glance of the officer against whom they had mutined. went first on hands and knees, creepers, and Ned Padgett made an appeal and earth and over the loose stones a human being at a distance of 1,000 with all the caution possible. The sentry stirred in his sleep when Paul was within ten or fifteen paces of him. The determined youth seized a stone and leaped toward him. They had given up all hope of finding their Metlakahlan friends, who no doubt supposing them lost, had returned to their home on the island. After wandering three or four hours into the forest and being completely exhausted, the two fugitives rolled themselves in their blankets and slept. They dared not build a fire, for it might attract the attention of their pursuers. When day dawned they made a breakfast on some of the dried moose they had brought with them and prepared to resume their journey. They discovered that they were gradually ascending a mountain side. "We are a long way from civilization yet," he said to one of Paul's remarks about their being safe. "So often, my friend, have I had my hopes raised only to be blighted that I allow myself to believe nothing good "I am willing to trust you implied can come to me. BIBLICAL TALE OF POWER.

"Jezebel," by Miss Lafayette Mc-

Laws, Has Won Favor. Miss Lafayette McLaw's "When the Land Was Young" instantly sprang into popular favor, and for a first book was a pronounced success. The promise in her first book has been more than realized in "Jezebel," a work of singular power and insight. It is a Biblical tale of the days when Omri and Ahab were kings of Israel and Elijah was a prophet of Jehovah. Ahab, the Israelite, takes to wife Jezebel, the worshiper of Baal. When Ahab comes to the throne and Jezebel sets up the worship of Baal, the prophets and believers of Israel are incensed against the queen, and Jezebel begins a fierce persecution of her enemies. This contest is the chief motive of the story.

Miss McLaws has endeavored to throw new light upon the character of Jezebel, and, while she does not depart from the Biblical account, she surely presents this strong-willed, beautiful queen in a somewhat novel and striking manner. We get glimpses of Jezebel the woman as well as Jezebel the queen, and it is as a woman with warm passions and jealous instincts that Jezebel is most and best portrayed.

The book is replete with dramatic situations, the action is rapid and stirring, and the denoument is original and startling. Altogether it is one of the books of the day and a distinct contribution to the novel-

The species all flower in June. In addition to the above there is a hybrid between C. bignonioides and C. ovata, called Teas' Japan Hybrid (also called C. hybrida). It is a profusely flowering and hardy tree.

Obstacles to Plum Growing.

Arthur Bryant, before the Illinois fruit growers, said: The most formidable obstacles to the successful growing of plums in this state are the curculio and the rot. The destructiveness of these vary somewhat with seasons, though the curculio is almost always present in sufficient numbers to ruin a crop if measures are not taken to destroy it. This is done by spraying and spreading sheets under the treessand jarring the insects off. This course is followed by most of the successful Eastern plum growers. For the last three years the destruction of this fruit by rot has been very great in Northern Illinois. Theoretically, spraying with Bordeaux should remedy this trouble, but so far I have not seemed to effect a great deal, especially if the trees were very heavily loaded with fruit. Perhaps I did not apply it at the right time or of the right consistency. I, however, think that with thorough and continued spraying and proper thinning of the fruit at an early date much of this trouble can be overcome, as I have found that the rot was usually worst on trees that were overloaded with fruit, and when a cluster began to be affected all those that were near were sure to go. There is another advantage in severe thinning when your trees first begin to bear. When so heavily loaded the tree is much weakened, sometimes nearly ruined. If the crop is reduced I think there will be likely to be a moderate annual crop instead of an attempt to overload alternate years, and also a more desirable quality of fruit. Prof. Goff, in the Wisconsin report, thinks that the American varieties of plums need more pruning than the European or Japanese; they are liable to get too dense in the head. I have thought of and intend to try that method of thinning the crop of fruit to a certain extent. This I think would have to be done with care as they would not bear as severe cutting back as the peach.

Pigeons.

From the Farmers' Review: Do any of the readers of the Farmers' Re view keep pigeons? If so, what do they find to be the best varieties to keep? What are the profits? Does it pay to raise them for squabs to be used on the farmer's table? Does it pay to raise the squabs for sale? If so, where are the squabs sold? Is it much trouble to keep pigeons? How are they taken care of in winter and hew often do they have to be fed in winter? Anyone that can give me an answer to these questions will greatly oblige a reader of the Farmers'

CLOTHES ON.

This is what Miss Jessie Stephen son of 30 Hartington Road, Aberdeen says when writing to the Proprietors of St. Jacobs Oil, the remedy which cured her:

"I was very bad with rheumatism. I could not put my clothes on without crying out. I always had to have assistance to dress myself. I obtained a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, and after its contents were used I was much better, I used the contents of two more bottles, and now I am able to do my work as usual. 5 would recommend anyone troubled with rheumatism to uso St. Jacobs Oil." Miss Stephenson's present condition is a very great contrast to what it was before she used St. Jacobs Oil; then she was practically helpless, suffered the greatest agony-but now she work. Surely such evidence as this is most convincing that St. Jacobs Oil "Conquers Pain."

County and Vicinity

A stranger in the village remarked upon the fine turnouts the farmers of this section have. He said he never saw as many good horses and fine carriages and few poor ones in any town he was ever in .- Manchester Enterprise.

As if the weather had not been enough to discourage the Lenawee County Agricultural society, fire Saturday morning completely destroyed the grandstand at the track. The loss is $2,000 and the origin of the fire

Milan postoffice will have three free rural mail routes after November 1st. One will go through Milan township; one through the Stony Creek district, and the other through York township west of town. The carriers have not yet been appointed.

In a few days the old cooper shop in the east part of the village will again resound with the sound of hammer and adze. W. M. More of Ypsilanti, was in town yesterday and made arrangements with Seymour Hammon to make from 2,000 to 4,000 apple barrels .- Manchester Enterprise.

One day last week A. W. Holcomb found $100 in gold secreted between one of the partitions of his in Milan township. It had been put there by his father, the late Seymour Holcomb, and Mr. Holcomb immediately turned it over to the administrator of the estate, Frank Campbell. - Milan Leader.

GOES LIKE HOT CAKE.

"The fastest selling article I have in my store," writes druggist C.T.Smith of Davis, NOTICE TO HUNTERS-No hunting, Ky., "is Kr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, because it always cures. In my six years of sales it has never failed. I have known it to save sufferers from throat and lung diseases, who could get no help from doctors or any other remedy." Mothers may rely on it, best physicians prescribe it, and Glazier & Stimson guarantee satisfaction or refund price. I'rial bottles free. THE WORST FORM.

Multitudes are singing the praises of Kodol, the new discovry which is making new discovery which is making so many sick people well and weak people strong by digesting what they eat, by cleansing and sweetening the stomach and by transforming their food into the kind of pure, red blood that makes you feel good all over. Mrs. Cranfill of Troy, I. T., writes: For a number of years I was troubled with indigestion and dyspepsia which grew into the worst form. Finally I was induced to use Kodol and after using four bottles I am entirely cured. I heartly recommend Kodol to all sufferers from indigestion and dyspepsia. Take a dose after meals. It digests what you eat. Glazier & Stimson.

NATURAL ANXIETY.

Mothers regard approaching winter with uneasiness, children take cold so easily. No disease costs more little lives than croup. It's attack is so sudden that that the sufferer is often beyond human aid before the doctor arrives. Such cases yeild readily to One Minute Cough Cure. Liquifies the mucus, allays inflammation, removes danger. Absolutely safe. Acte immediately. Cures coughs, colds, grip, bronchitis, all throat and lung trouble. F. S. McMahon, Hampton, Ga.: "A bad cold rendered me volceless just before an oratorical contest. I intended to withdraw but took One Minute Cough Cure, It restored my voice in time to win the medal." ### Nobility Recommends Nervine.

The above portrait is that of Countess Mogelstud, of Chicago, Ill., whose gratitude for the benefit received from the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine prompted her to make this statement:

"It affords me great pleasure to add my testimony to the very excellent merits of Dr. Miles' Nervine. Although I am past 80 years of age I find it soothes the tired brain, quiets the irritated nerves and insures restful sleep. I never feel contented without a bottle of it in the house." Views on Ambition and Dyspopsia.

"Dyspepsia," wrote Eugene Field, "often incapacitates a man for endeavor and sometimes extinguishes the fire of ambition." Though great despite his complaint Field suffered from indigection all his life. A weak, tired stomach can't digest your food. It needs rest. You can only rest it by the use of a preparation like Kodol, which relieves it of work by digesting your food. Rest soon restores it to its normal tone.
