THE GROWING POPULARITY

--OF--

GLASS.

The manufacture of Cut Glass is an art, and one which has been developed to a wonderful degree during the past few years, especially in America. A decade ago cut glass was almost all imported, today the dealers handle the American product almost exclusively.

American Cut Glass

in color, weight, and finish is unsurpassed, and it has a brillancy, sharpness and scintilating brightness which cannot be excelled.

Recognizing the growing demands for Cut Glass we have bought a fine line which we are now

Washtenaw Times: The Hon. Frank P. Glazier, senator elect from the tenth district, has already proved that he is the proper man for the place. In a most manly and courageous letter he told the readers of the Times yesterday that he proposed to stand by the interests of the University and work for the very people who by their votes in the University wards | cents per dozen; onlone 85 to 45 cents. had indicated that they did not work or vote for him. He has settled the "University" question at the very beginning and showed at the first moment how utterly false and misleading was the position taken by the Argus when one of its editors dragged the University into politics by stating that William Judson threatened the University and claimed that he controlled the vote of the state legislature on this matter. The statement of Senator Glazier has nailed the Argus' 'fake" and that publication was compelled yesterday to acknowledge his position in the matter and give him credit for his action. Senator Glazier has heaped coals of fire upon the voters of the University section of the city, by showing to them that he can be more loyal to his of silverware, cut glass, china, table linen to be to an honored and capable alumnus of the institution. Johnsthan McGee, the old colored man who passed for 116 years of age, died at Ypsilanti Saturday of last week, of old age after a gradual decline in strength for the past month. McGee insisted that he was 116 years of age, and many people believed him. while it was universally considered that he was probably at least 100. Whenever he was speaking from experience or from tales he heard in his youth he was full of interesting reminiscences of the closing years of the eighteenth century and the opening decades of the nineteenth. The old man. was wont to tell of seeing Washington on several occasions and he professed to have been on speaking terms with several other noted men of Washington's time. McGee astonished his friends and acquaintances two years ago by taking unto himself a wife-a widow who had passed the 60 year mark, but the old couple could not agree, and by mutual agreement they separated six months after effort was made to save them. When their rescue seemed almost assured two men who had been washed away from another ship clutched at a chain hanging from the jib. The weight of all four of them was too much. Something gave way and four more victims were added to the list of the dead.

A thin rope was drawn out to another vessel so that the crew could haul a heavier one after it. The man who happened to catch it jumped into the sea and asked to be hauled ashore. Those whom he had left behind shouted at him in despair. While tossing about in the sea he lost his hold on the line. Six brave fellows, among them an African, thought they could save him, he was so near shore. In a twinkling all of them were lost, and the man who had tried to save himself at the expense of his companions sank to rise no more.

It is known at this writing that four of the vessels that went ashore were British, six were German, five Norwegian, two Italian and one Swedish. They represent an aggregate of more than 15,000 tons. The names of some of the wrecked vessels are the Clara. a British steamer of 139 tons: the Gabrielle, a British schooner of 78 tons; the Thekla, a German barque of 288 tons; the Content, a Norwegian barque of 522 tons; the Sayre, a British barque of 684 tons; the Oakworth, a British ship of 1022 tons; the Agostino Rombo, an Italian barque of 807 tons; the Arnold, a German vessel of 800 tons; the Nautillus, a German barque of 678 tons; the Coriolanus, a German barque of 978 tons; the Emanuel, a German barque of 1147 tons; the Cavalieri Russo, an Italian ship of 1529 tons.

Many of the sailors rescued from the sea have died from exhaustion in the hospital. There will be a public funeral in the town hall for the victims who perished in the disaster, and efforts will be made to communicate with their relatives and friends in their native countries.

Tired Nervour Mother

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing a child involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly. She cannot help it, as her condition is due to suffering and shattered nerves caused by some derangement of the uterine system with backache, headache, and all kinds of pain, and she is on the verge of nervous prostration.

When a mother finds that she cannot be calm and quiet with her children, she may be sure that her condition needs attention, and she cannot do better than to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This medicine will build up her system, strengthen her nerves, and enable her to calmly handle a disobedient child without a scene. The children will soon realize the difference, and seeing their mother quiet, will themselves become quiet.

Mrs. May Brown, of Chicago, Ill., says:

" DEAR MRS. PINEHAM : - 'Honor to whom honor is due,' and you deserve both the thanks and honor of the mothers of America whom you have so bleesedly helped and benefited. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I would feel run-down, nervous and irritable, or have any of the aches and pains which but few women escape, and I have found that it relieved me at once and gave me new strength. How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Mrs. McKinny. DEAR MRS. PINKHAM: - I feel it my duty to write and let you know the good you and your Vegetable Compound are doing. I had been sick ever since my first baby was born, and at the birth of my second, my doctor, as well as myself thought I should never live through it. After that menstruation never came regular, and when it came I suffered terribly. I also had womb and ovarian trouble. A friend of my husband's advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. At first I had no faith in it, but now nothing could induce me to be without it. Menstruction has become regular, and I feel like a new woman. Your medicine is a God-send to suffering women. I hope this letter will lead others to try Lydia E. Pinkhan's Vegetable Compound. Yours truly, Mrs. MILDRED McKINNY, 28 Pearl St., San Francisco, Cal." Fearing to learn the worst, yet determined to know the truth at any cost, Ninette, the dark-eyed artist's model, master of the studio and of her heart. "Ah! This is better"-with a smile of satisfaction-"why, here is good luck again! Perhaps, after all, Cecil is true. If I could only understand their language! so miserable?" said Ninette between her sobs. "Why, bless my soul, Ninette, I never saw you!"

"You have no eyes for me. You would have seen another if she had been here.'

"Another would not have kept so silent, perhaps-and tears, too! Now this is very tiresome, when I have had such a turn of good luck. Listen, Ninette, and dry your tears. My pic-

"Of me?"

"No, no-the great one, 'The Dawn,' will be exhibited. Then if luck comes our way, as is sure to happen, we can be-you know what!"

Cecil drew Ninette to him in affectionate embrace, too elated with his own hope of prosperity to question doubts vanished somewhat as the tender avowals of love fell from the lips of her lover. She could not believe him quite false, and yet-why did he not exhibit her portrait in the Salon? Could not "Dawn" have black hair as well as golden? and surely the fair lady was not otherwise more beautiful than she.

Cecil interrupted the unpleasant reverie with, "Ninette, do you know I believe my love for you has made me a better painter! Monsieur de Thales was here this morning and said the warm h and soul of 'The Dawn' were extraordinary." The announcement that love for her had aided him in putting warmth and soul into the eyes of another woman was not very comforting to Ninette, and she dashed out of the studio, and shut herself in her own little chamber, which was on the ground floor.

"The little vixen!" laughed Cecil. " suppose old Gretha gave her a bad breakfast this morning. She did not seem properly pleased with the possibility of our being soon-Ah, Julia! I am glad you have come. The picture is nearly finished-and such good news! De Thales was here this morning, and was delighted. Why do you look at the door-are you afraid of ghosts following you in?"

"No, Cecil, but do you know I have when I see Ninette! She peered at me to-day as I came up the stairs, and her black eyes looked like those of a tigress. Cecil, that girl is dangerous! I hope she isn't too fond of you; you know that is easily possible with these French creatures of impulse." "Oh, that is just like you women."

Julia, Ninette's love is less dangerous than her hate, although I should not like to trifle with either. But I, who so thoroughly understand Ninette, shall take care that no danger attends her love for me."

Ninette had crept from her chamber and was listening at the keyhole of the studio with hot breath and angry eyes, How tender his voice! Almost the only English word that Ninette knew was "dear," and she heard him apply it to Julia-the fair-haired. She felt she could burst with jealous passion, but at this moment she heard familiar voices on the steps and several comrades stood before her.

"Good morning, Nina!" exclaimed the foremost on beholding the model, whom all knew to be a favorite with Cecil, and locking his arm familiarly Is it not so?-you dare not deny it?" in hers they entered the studio, followed by the others.

"Hello, Thorne-just heard of your fuck, my boy! Give us a shake of the hand, old chap, before you get too high up in the world to recognize old friends. Let's have a holiday now in celebration. Come out of the studioafter to-merrow you will be too grand loving bim." Careless and free as are only the pleasure loving English artists who alternate the study of art with that of "La Vie" in the Eden of both, Cecil Thorne and his companions made the cafes in the Latin Quarter of Paris ring with their merriment until a late hour, when Cecil returned to his lodging, intoxicated with the thought of the morrow. He spent a half hour or so in his studio, and after making a few final arrangements started for his attic bedroom. As he passed the door "How can you whistle when I am of Ninette's apartments he wondered if she slept. Then, at a sudden recollection of his hopes, and all they meant to him, he broke into a merry whistle, and mounted light-heartedly to his own door. His burst of merriment was the last straw.

"To-morrow," she thought, "I will not forget that I have helped you to put warmth and soul into her eyes! You think you shall find fame to-morrow, and that the fair-haired, coldhearted English girl will help you to rejoice; but you do not know Ninette."

Springing from her couch she felt for matches, but could find none. "No matter," she said, "I know the easel well. Have I not watched him bending over it as though he loved the canvas itself? Dieu! you should have exhibited Ninette." Noiselessly, vinlictively, she groped her way along the dark passage into the studio. Not even a moonbeam to assist her feet over the cold stone floor. "Ha-the easel!" she gave a little cry of pain as her tender foot came in contact with the sharp edge. Then, seizing a wet brush. with delirious joy she drew it again and again across the picture, smearing beyond recognition every corner of the canvas. "There!" she said, as she threw down the brush and started to leave the studio. "There! Mademoiselle Yellow Hair-I hate golden hairat least, I should hate it if Cecil had not golden hair."

The thought of Cecil's fair hair, which she had so often covered with ardent kisses, recalled her to a moment of sudden reproach. What had she done? She who pretended to love Cecil had destroyed the result of a whole half year's toil and his hope of fortune, and perhaps-yes, that selfish "perhaps," swept over her with over whelming force, and the little criminal erept back to her chamber, threw herself upon her couch, and there remained till her restless slumber was disturbed by the sound of Cecil's footsteps entering the studio. She awoke with a start. He was walking toward the easel. She dared not go to him; she would wait till the first outburst of his passion had passed, For a long time there was absolute a strange feeling of fear sometimes silence in the studio. At last, unable longer to bear the suspense, she timidly opened the studio door and looked in. All trace of the defiant insolence which made her so bewitching had vanished, and she paused submissively. awaiting the volley of reproof which she felt she so richly deserved. Instead of this, Cecil smiled at beholding

A cat named Troubles, possessed by Francis Bane, a political worker in the Eighth Ward, has made numerous friends. One morning Troubles was purring on the window sill of the fourth floor of its home when it o served Kane on the sidewalk below. Espying its master, the feline uttered a faint "meow" and made the awful leap. Somersault after somersault it turned until it landed on terra firma, The hard asphalt pavement was too much for the kitten's feet, and its right foreleg was broken at the knee. When Kane noticed what had happened to his pet he couldn't conceive that the cat had made the frightful leap. He hurriedly ascended the stairs to ascertain if any of his servants had been cruel enough to throw the cat out of the window. Upon learning that the cat had made the jump he carefully conveyed it to the Jefferson Hospital, where the feline had its broken limbs put in splints. Since then the cat has been carefully nursed and foudled .-

Philadelphia Telegraph. A Baby Bird Ten Feet From Tip to Tip. George L. Stillwell, who has just returned from a trip to Santa Barbara County, has brought back with him a young bird of the giant condor family, the largest species of birds in existence. The bird was captured after a most thrilling and dangerous experience. Stillwell and a companion scaled a lofty crag and engaged in a battle with the mother bird. The parent bird measured fifteen feet from tip to tip of its wings, and both men suffered many bruises. The young bird has never learned to fly, and its wings are not yet strong enough to bear the weight of its body. It measures ten feet from tip to tip and is developing well in captivity. The parent of this bird is the only one of the species known to exist in the State. Its home is one of the wildest spots in Santa Barbara County, a crag in the heart of the mountains, fifty-six miles east of Santa Maria and midway between Bakersfield and Santa Barbara,-San Francisco Chron-

When I went up stairs, I found that she had gone off into the guestroom to sleep, leaving me our bedroom to rave in as much as I liked. Although I was disappointed that she had not received me humbly after the outbreak and endeavored to pacify me, it was plain that she was afraid of me, and this was so much to the good. I didn't sleep very well and the next morning went down to breakfast feeling much in need of a good cup of coffee. Entering the dining room, I was surprised to see no cloth on the table. What I did see was a note from Kate saying that as the servant had departed bag and baggage the day before there would be no meals served in the house for the present. She (Kate) had gone to her mother's for breakfast, and I could get mine where I liked.

"The result of the first move was not quite satisfactory. I didn't seem to have terrified my wife, and I had been vant. The truth is that I didn't have the heart to go any further. I sent it by a messenger, directing that the answer be brought to me at the office. I was afraid I wouldn't get an answer, but I did. Cooking Steaks and Chops.

In the course of an instructive lecture on the cooking of meats, Mrs. Sanborn, a well-known teacher of domestic science, said: A steak an inch thick should be broiled five to six minutes; one and a half to two inches, eight to ten minutes. Properly broiled steak is puffy from the expansion into steam of the imprisoned moisture, and should be well browned on the outside, and juicy and red without being purplish. A steak less than an inch thick can never be made juicy; it loses too much water by evaporation and the inside is dry before the outside is brown. Always have a hot platter to serve your steak on as soon as it is cooked.

Lamb and mutton chops are cooked like beefsteak, allowing six to eight minutes, according to thickness. A mutton chop may be a little red in the middle, but lamb chops should be well cooked. Pan broiling may be done successfully if a cast-iron pan is used and it is allowed to become almost red hot before putting in the meat.

War Department Forgot Trousers New Uniform

Col. Asa Bird Gardiner was wandering about the big committee room of the board of aldermen, in the east wing of the City hall, a day or two ago, looking at the paintings of wellknown generals of the American army. After gazing at the painting of Gen. McClellan for some moments he said: "How well I remember when that plain old uniform was introduced into our army. I was in Jacksonville, grow worse, and on Sunday evening Fla., at that time, and the day the order for the new uniforms was received happened to be at headquarters. Gen. Triggs took the order, turned to the section prescribing what a brigadier-general should wear, and subsequently tore it into bits and threw it upon the floor. He was a very proiane man, and it was some time bethat means had to be adopted to keep fore he quieted down so that I could ask him what the matter was.

She was with him, too, when his lower lip began to tremble and his eyes to grow yellow, and a wave of chalky whiteness overspread his face.

"Nice cigar, isn't it?" she said in her pleasant way. "So soothing and restful and enjoyable. Don't you find it so?"

The boy couldn't steady his voice sufficiently to reply, but he forced himself to take another puff, and when his hand with the cigar in it dropped he gave the smoldering thing a glance that expressed nothing but the deepest loathing.

"I always like the looks of these nice, large cigars," said his mother. "They 80em 80-

Swords Made from 1,000 Bits of Steel. The Japanese are the manufacturers of a wonderful sword. The blades of these sabers are made from magnetic iron ores. The steel is produced in small, very thin sheets and the workman begins by fixing one of them to the end of fron rod which serves as a handle. 2 this are soldered other small sheets until the mass has a length of about eight inches, a width of about two inches and a thickness of a little more than a quarter of an Miss Bertha Meyer of Lima Sunday. inch. This bar is brought to a white heat, doubled on itself and hammered until it is down to its original dimensions. This process is repeated fifteen times. Four similar bars are then soldered together, doubled upon themselves, resoldered and heated, the operation being repeated five times. This process makes the superposed layers so thin that a saber contains at least 1,000 sheets of metal.

Judging from the ground rents secured on 10 Cornhill, which five or six years ago realized £42,500, that is to say, at the rate of practically £55 a square foot, or £2,452,023 per acre, there are many other delectable spots in the city worth their area in beaten gold, but it is wonderful how prices fall away when the site has not got a frontage on a main thoroughfare. Twenty-two pounds for a piece of ground measuring 12 inches by 12 inches would doubtless be a price that would tempt even an Irish landlord to part with his property.-Good News.

Appealed to His Pride. It was the most obstinate mule in the lot and refused to enter the car of a train held up at a little wayside station in Tennessee.

Threats, cajolery and blows were alike useless. The mule refused to budge, and the slant of his ears told those of the passengers who were familiar with mule-ear talk that where he was he intended to stay. Then the aged African who was trying to load him in said, in honeyed tones: "Whuffo' yo' behave dis way befo' all desestrange people? Why, you fool mule, doan' yo' know dat dese people will jes' believe dat yo' neber done trabelled befo' in all you' life?"

The long ears lost their aggressive slant, and the beast went sedately up the inclined plank with the air of a man entering a drawing-room car for the first time and determined not to betray the fact .- N. Y. Tribune.

been bloodshed there!" They ran to the camp now deserted by the Indians and Esquimaux. Two men lay where they had fallen, the snow crimson with their blood. An old man came from the tent, holding a pale, trembling girl by the hand. Clarence snatched up a burning brand that had fallen from the hand of some fugutive, and at a glance cried:

"Laura-Laura Kean!" His shout was drowned by a roar

CHAPTER XIX.

Conclusion. The reulnon of the sea captain and the faithful sailor was mild compared to a reunion that quickly followed. Another party was coming across the ice. The long, Arctic night was spent and the opening door of dawn was filling all the eastern Heavens with glory, when Paul, Kate, old Ben and their faithful canine friend sprang from the ice and hurried up the hill to the narrow valley, where the camp

Paul led the party, with Kate close behind. The first object he recognized was his faithful old friend, who had long mourned him as dead-Glum Ralston. The meeting can be better imagined than described. He was told that Laura was inside with Clarence and the long-lost captain, who was making desperate efforts to explain something which had befuddled everybody, and Paul tumbled head first into the tent, the worst befuddled of any one, and embraced Laura and Clarence, and for several moments the only rational being in the party was the faithful unknown dog, who sat on his haunches and panted.

It was fully an hour before every body inside and everybody outside were at all themselves. Paul after ward had a dim recollection of hearing a voice very much like Glum Ralston's "Ain't you Kate Willis, my Kate?"

and then he heard a voice which sounded very much like Kate crying: "Ain't you Jack Ralston, my sailor

Then there was a collision, explosion, and the hub-bub increased.

At last, when all had time to recover, Kate and Jack, as she still called him, entered the tent, she declaring she would never permit him to leave her again. Jack explaining that he was staying in Alaska in compliance with an order from his captain to the effect that he was to never leave until he returned.

"And he has returned," said Jack. "He has come back and is here now: and Kate, I am ready to go."

The man whom we have known as the hermit captain said: "My friends, this is the happiest day I ever knew. But one person more is necessary to make the reunion complete, and my cup of happiness run over. I want to ask some questions, and then make some explanations. First, is your name Paul Miller?"

"Yes, sir." Paul answered. "Who was your father, and where is he?"

"My father was Captain Joseph Miller, who was lost before I can remember in Alaska or some of the islands of the Bering Sea."

"Do you know the name of the ship he last sailed in, and from what port?"

"Mother told me he sailed from San Francisco in a sealing schooner called the Eleanor."

"Jack-Jack! Have you' been with him all these months and not know this?" Glum Ralston leaped to his feet with

In the sub-basement of one of big life insurance companies is a safe so large that a theatrical company might perform therein. There are three doors, the combinations of whose locks are controlled by ten men. Each man, a high official of the company, is an integral part of the integral whole. In instance: Five men are required to open the outer door, each knowing a fifth part of the entire combination and no more. A having set the gatings in his combination, is followed in turn by B, C, D and E, when the bolt may be moved. In the same manner the secand door is opened by three men in combination, and the third by two, in the latter case each being in combination with one or more of the other eight on the outer and second doors. The safe is regarded as safe.-New York Press.

PENS MENTIONED IN BIBLE.

Various References Made to Imple ment of Writing.

The earliest references to (says "Great Thoughts") are probably those in the Bible, and are to be found in Judges v. 14, I. Kings xxi. 8, Job xix. 24, and Isaiah vili. 1. But these cut out the characters in the tablets of limestone or soapstone. There is they even went so far as to have the a reference to pen and ink in the third Epistle of John xiii. 5, which was written about A. D. 85, and as pens made in brass and silver were used in the Greek and Roman Empires at that time, it is probable that a metallic pen or reed was alluded to. In the Far East, and perhaps in Egypt, the camel's hair pencil was substituted for metal implements, but the quills of geese and crows were discovered to be more useful than either the reed or brush, and were introduced, it is enought, about A. D. 56.

Darwin's Coffin.

At a public house near Bromley, in Kent, England, a second-hand coffin forms an attraction and has a curious history. In it the body of Charles Darwin is said to have been placed for two days before his burial in Westminster abbey was decided upon, when a new shell was provided. The coffin was made by the village carpenter. who frequently made cases and boxes for Darwin's collections. One day the carpenter complained of slackness and asked Darwin for a job. He was told that he could make a coffin and the order was carried out, a name plate being affixed after Darwin's death.

Future Newspaper.

What will the newspaper of the future be like? Mr. Victor Murdoch, addressing the Kansas Editorial association, declared that within forty years the daily newspaper in large cities would be issued in a series of editions, each being devoted to one kind of news. In each city there would be only one paper, and a single corporation would control the papers everywhere. Political information would be given mainly in the form of kind of news. In each city there authentic interviews with public men; but the paper as a whole would have of Death no political bias.-London Express.

De Wet Insists on Title. Gen. De Wet, the sturdy Boer leader, carried his independence with him to London and showed it in marked fashion during his interview with Colonial Secretary Chamberlain. The latter addressed him as "Mr. De Wet." whereupon the warrior from South Africa corrected him by saying "Gen. De Wet." Almost immediately afterward Chamberlain repeated the "Mr." and De Wet said sternly, "General or nothing." Then the suave Chamberlain followed Lord Kitchener's example and recognized the military status of his visitor.

From then, ordinary Anglo-Saxon fails to describe the annoyance and suffering I endured. The fearful pain through my body, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, consequent loss of energy, and, finally, indication of complete dissolution compelled me, from sheer agony and pain, to either lie on the floor and scream, or forced me into spasms. On such occasions my husband called in a physician, whose morphine treatment relieved me temporarily. I grew weaker and thinner, and so run down physically that nothing was left but skin and bone. All my friends, acquaintances and neighbors knew about my critical condition, and on one occasion I was reported dead and they came to see my corpse. I had taken so much medicine that I was more than discouraged, and had little, if any, faith in any preparation. BLACK-DRAUGHT THE ORIGINAL LIVER MEDICINE

A sallow complexion, dizziness, biliousness and a coated tongue are common indications of liver and kidney diseases. Stomach and bowel troubles, severe as they are, give immediate warning by pain, but liver and kidney troubles, though less painful at the start, are much harder to cure. Thedford's Black-Draught never fails to benefit diseased liver and weakened kidneys. It stirs up the torpid liver to throw off the germs of fever and ague. It is a certain preventive of cholera and Bright's disease of the kidneys. With kidneys re-inferced by Thedford's Black Draught thousands of persons have dwelt immune in the midst of yellow fever. Many families live in perfect health and have no other doctor than Thedford's Black-Draught. It is always on hand for use in an emergency and saves many expensive calls of a doctor.

"This is to certify that I have used Dr. Miles' Remedies quite extensively, especially the Restorative Nervine, which has done wonders for me. Six years ago I had nervous prostration and again three years ago, at which time I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I kept taking it for six months and have taken an occasional dose during the last two years. I am practically a new man and feel that I have been given a new lease of life. I used to have very bad attacks of stomach trouble but since using the Nervine I can eat most anything I want with impunity. I was examined in Omaha by a noted German doctor three years ago. He told me I was liable to a paralytic stroke any moment; that my whole left side was badly affected. That was just before I began taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. My work for two years and a half has been very trying on my nerves. I am a presiding elder traveling my districts at the rate of My work for two years and a half has been very trying on my nerves. I am a presiding elder, traveling my districts at the rate of ten thousand miles a year, preaching on an average of five times a week, besides many business meetings, and the multitudinous cares of my work in general. Thanks to Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine I have been gaining in flesh despite this hard work until now I weigh a hundred and ninety-six pounds, nearly twenty pounds more than in all my nearly twenty pounds more than in all my life. I preach Nervine wherever I go to those afflicted with nerve, heart or stomach trouble."—Rev. M. D. Myers, Predding Elder, Free Methodist Church, Correctionville, Ia. THE PEOPLE'S

I have opened a livery and ten-cent feed barn in the McKune barn, south Main street, and ask for a share of your patronage. Don't leave your horses out in the cold and storm when they can get good care for ten cents. This is the only barn in the town where you can hitch or unhitch your horse without being out in the storm. In the livery you will always find first-class turnouts.
