LUCKIEST MAN IN COUNTY

Dr. H. H. Avery Held The Ticket Which Drew an Astomobile.

Dr. H. H. Avery has been receiving the congratulations of his friends this week over the fact that he held the lucky number that drew the automobile that the Ypsilanti Kulghts of Pythias raffled off at their recent carnival

It almost makes the Doctor have a chill to think how close a shave he had. The number was advertised for several weeks, but no one appeared to claim the machine, and the men who had the matter in charge, announced that there would be another drawing this week if the number was not brought in.

Friday Dr. Avery had his attention called to the matter, and he looked up his ticket and found that he held the lucky number. He lost no time in claiming the machine.

Boland Line West of Jackson,

The rumble of the electric cars from the west, says the Jacksan Patriot, can almost be heard in the streets of Jack- ? son. The iron is laid on the Boland line, connecting Jackson and Battle Creek, with the exception of a short span near Bath Mills, and a gang of men is now engaged in ballasting. Work is now pro- $ gressing steadily, though slowly. It is said with the gang of men which it is practiceable to work, the road can be carried to completion from its present stage at the rate of half a mile a day. This progress is not however being made and it may be that the road will not be completed for traffic before work is stopped by freezing weather. The trouble seems to be the difficulty in obtaining men, although as high as $1.75 a day is paid. The men now employed are principally Italians.

The rails of the interurben line have been connected with the city system at West avenue, to which point the line was extended last spring.

The construction seems to be, on the whole, superior to any electric roadway entering the city, the grading approximating that of the steam road. Seventy pound rails are used. The third rail for transmitting the electric power has 'not yet been laid.

PATHETIC LITTLE TALE, WITH JOYFUL ENDING.

Old Man's Toll and Loyalty Well Rewarded-Abiding Love That Knew No Limit and Put All Doubts Be-

After milking was over and the cans had been started on their way to the cheese factory, Ezra came into the house with his lips pursed for whistling. But the whistle froze upon his lips as he stepped over the yellow painted doorsill. He dropped into his easy chair, and with a look of discomfort on his face he watched Cindy bustling to and fro from the stove to the table.

Occasionally he would lift his eyes to the clock shelf and sigh. He had seen that same sort of envelope before. The writing was in the same familiar hand. He could guess what the lines within had to reveal.

When Joe came from the factory the three sat down and ate in silence. The envelope on the clock shelf seemed like a bird of ill-fate, whose very presence seemed to choke every particle of food the quiet ones swallowed. The spell of that letter spoiled the meal and robbed the tea of its fragrance and taste.

After Cindy had gone to bed and Joe had dragged himself up to his room the old man opened the envelope and read the letter.

"Same old thing. Bright outlook for doing great things. With $500 he could make $10,000. Says he's got a tip, and that there is big money in sight sure this time."

The cat crawled upon his lap and cuddled down to sleep. The snowball bush tapped against the side of the house as the old man sat there.

ders free. Nothing was to be seen but an unbroken expanse of snow, and as he floundered about he found that around the house it lay more tha waist deep.

A weight of fear settled upon him. The sun had set an hour before, but he could see that the clouds were broken, although they were still drifting wildly with the wind. His only hope lay in the probability that there would be no further fall of snow. When he returned to the house he cooked a little of the food for his wife; then he endeavored to sleep that he might be strong for the ordeal of the morrow.

He could not guess how long it would take him to reach help, and his wife was far too weak to be left alone. So when the cold, clear morning came, he prepared to take her and the boy with nim upon horseback through the snow, They might all perish of cold upon the prairies, but he thought that such a death would be easier and quicker than death by starvation.

· His nearest neighbor's house was fourteen miles away, and to it he meant to go. Upon the back of one of the horses he placed his wife and boy, wrapping them about with all the blankets and bedclothing he could find; then he got upon his own horse and set off, leading the other by the bridle.

He was not an experienced plainsman, and he found the struggle even harder than he had feared. At first he tried to pick his way across the higher spots, where the snow had been somewhat blown away; but as the wind was still strong and pitilessly cold, he was forced to keep in the lower, more sheltered places where the snow was deep. This course was painfully slow. and it was also dangerous, for it made their path zigzag, and might lead them far to one side of the place they wished to reach.

The horse Warren rode was soon so fatigued that it could not go on. A horse is not at all skilful in breaking a way for itself through deep snow. Warren was forced to do what plainsmen and soldiers have often found necessary-to dismount, abandon his own 461; Colored Methodist Episcopal. horse, and go ahead on foot, breaking a 204.317; various other Methodist trail in which the led horse could fol-

As Mrs. Warren could not walk, her husband had to lift her upon his back and carry her, while the boy struggled horses, a strong wagon, and a little to look out, and the harsh wind chilled along in the rear. Soon, however, the little fellow's strength was quite gone. It was impossible for Warren to carry both; and to leave the boy where he was, without protection, would have meant speedy death. Warren searched until he found a

Spreading a blanket upon the bottom of the cave, he laid the boy on it and covered him warmi's; then he hung up his overcoat so as to keep the wind from entering the chamber. Dividing what remained of their food, he placed half of it beside the boy, and told him to stay within the shelter until help came; then feet in depth, as if for the beginning of upon the wall, and busied himself in again he took his wife upon his back and resumed his weary march.

It was not until four o'clock in the morning that he staggered to the door of his neighbor's house and found shelter and relief. His wife was benumbed almost to insensibility, nor was his own plight much better. Almost two hours passed before he could speak, and he shook with a palsy of utter fatigue. But as soon as he could eat and drink the warm nourishment that was provided for him he rallied bravely, and insisted upon leading the way back to the place where his child had been left. Before noon the party returned, bringing the boy with them, safe and sound. Then, the terrible experience being over, Warren collapsed completely, and was unable to rise out of bed for a month.

Was the pioneer discouraged? Not at all. When the winter was past those dauntless spirits returned to their home upon the lonely prairie, where they lived for many years afterward, until the boy and other children who came God drawing near. to the household were grown into sturdy men and women, who have lived such lives as cast no discredit upon the example of their father and mother.-Youth's Companion.

Recently, during the hearing of s charge of felony, a young man was called to give evidence on behalf of the accused, and was about to be sworn, when the inspector informed their lordships that the witness had disobeyed the order for witnesses to leave the court.

The bench were almost inclined to refuse his evidence in consequence. but the witness, in the most innocent manner, caused a burst of laughter which even the dignity of a whole row of judges was not proof against, and the position was saved.

The inspector, addressing the bench, said: "In order that there should be no mistake, I distinctly said: 'All witnesses on both sides must leave the court until they are called," and then, turning to the "You must have witness, he said: heard the order."

"Yes," at once responded the witness, according to the Detroit News-Tribune, "I did: but I am not a witness on both sides!"

Regular Classes Seem Drudgery After the Season.

A number of small boys who were at a summer school and have now gone back to their regular classes are disgusted with school life. They had such a delightful time in the summer that the work now seems drudgery compared with it. The particular boys under consideration were introduced to the workshop where manual training was in progress for the first time during the summer. That being the case, it was not strange that there were occasional accidents, and this was from many points of view an altogether satisfactory state of affairs, for next door to the work room was the girl's class for first aid to the injured. There were imaginary cases in the first part of the work, but it was not long before the boys in the workroom fell one after the other like wounded heroes, and were taken across the way to be treated by the amateur surgeons. No one will ever know whether that class of boys was unusually stupid, or whether the first aid to the injured workers were so remarkably skillful that it was a pleasure to sit under their ministrations. Whichever it was, it happened that there was seldom a day in which some boy was not brought in for treatment, and one day there man. Catarrh with its insidious ap-proach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years were seven patients from the workshop. It was delightful practice for the girl workers, and the teacher was even able to give them a practical instead of a theoretical lesson upon cleaning up blood spots from the floor. Of course, after such interesting practical demonstrations as this, the routine school work seems tame.

ODDEST OF ALL FADS.

Lovers of the Day Seek to Have Their Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cooper and Ictures on Their Sweethearts' Shoes.

It is said that the fashionable girl of the present day carries the picture of the young man she loves in her shoe, and the secret of her heart may, therefore, be learned by looking at her feet. There is nothing occult about it. Hypnotism, mental telepathy and things of that sort are not concerned. If the girl s up to date, all you have to do is tolook at her feet, for there you will see the picture of the happy man, says the Chicago Chronicle.

She wears it in the buckle of her slipper, so that the best time to learn the truth is when she is at a dance. At a function of the kind in Wissahickon retheir sweethearts at their feet, which, according to amatory tradition, is right and proper.

When the miniature fad originated the modish girls were pleased to wear the counterfeit presentments of their courtiers at their necks. Then they moved to the belt buckle, but it is the prerogative of woman to change her mind, and man is once more lowered.

Already the new fancy is gaining supporters, and many slipper miniatures are being made with the portraits of "matinee idols." This is for the accommodation of those girls who have not yet succeeded in finding a man to admire at close range.

USE AMERICAN COACHES.

Large Conveyances for Traveling in South Africa Made in the United States.

The coaches used in South Africa are built in the United States—at Concord. Most of them hold 12 people inside in rows of three, six people facing and six back to the mules, says Lippincott's Magazine. By experience we learned that the two corner seats back to the mules are most agreeable. Luggage on these journeys is a consideration, as it is charged for at the rate of a shilling a pound, but each passenger may take a rug-or "blanket," as they are always called-and a small basket of food. The great object is to get as much food as possible into a small space, for when we traveled we could only be sure of two meals—one break fast and one dinner-during the three days and nights of continuous travel-

We made inquiries about the out side places, thinking they might be preferable; but some fellow-passengers, who were old hands at such Fred Bruestle and Will Hezeltraveling, explained that when the coach upset the outside passengers were those to suffer; those inside come off, as a rule, with a few bruises, the others getting broken arms and the like; and this outbalanced our desire for the open air. Not that one suffered from want of air, for the coach has no windows at all; glass would not stand the jolting for an hour. There is a tarpaulin that one may unroll and pull down over the windows when the rain comes in intolerably. The sun one must bear, for if the tarpaulin is down it is too insufferably hot.

SAURIAN SEIZES CHILD.

Narrow Escape of a Little One from the Jaws of a Florida Alligator.

While a number of passengers were waiting for the morning train at Pablo Beach one day recently they heard the wail of a child seemingly in great distress. Jerry Delaney, deputy sheriff and a former Cincinnati policeman, headed a number who hastened to search for the cause of the cry. A short distance away they saw a big alligator dragging a child away, having secured a hold of its dress in its mouth. The child was shrieking in fright, says a Jacksonville correspondent of the Inter Ocean.

The posse rushed to its rescue, and the alligator redoubled its efforts toward getting into the bay near by. A big dog belonging to the child came running along and dashed at the saurian's head. The alligator whacked its tail around with great force and struck the dog, knocking the animal toward the gator's mouth, which opened with a gulp, taking in the dog. The saurian killed the dog and swal-of the child's dress in the struggle. The posse at once killed the 'gator. It was 15 feet long. It is thought to loo spent several days of last week have been made fiercer by hunger, as it is seldom they will attack human beings, and especially so near a habitation. The child was uninjured.

HIS DIGNITY INJURED.

The Awful "Roast" Given a Reporter by the Lady He Sought to Interview.

A reporter on one of the local daily papers is small of stature and looks and behaves like a very young boy. One night recently he was sent to Everett on an assignment by the night city editor, relates the Boston Herald. He called at a house and asked for the lady he wished to interview. It was after nine o'clock, and the curfew had warned all children from the streets on penalty of being arrested and locked up.

The questions the reporter asked the lady were impertinent but important. She gazed at the innocent looking "child" before her a moment, and then said: "Little one, you are not a reporter. You are an imposter whom some idle, malicious gossip has sent here to worry me. You ought to be in your bed. Now run along home or you will get arrested and locked in a cold member, the curfew has rung, and all little boys must be in bed, nicely tucked in, before the curfew rings. So run along like a good little child."

The reporter choked down his wrath and went his way. But his dignity had been assailed, and he gave vent to his feelings later when he related his experience to his chief.

The American Steer,

In tracing the course of this humble but useful bovine that has fulfilled his part in the American civilization of Britain, we have followed the path that is traveled every year by tens of thousands of his dind, says Frank Leslie's. The total annual export value of United States meat-of which beef forms the principal item-is in round figures $100,-000,000. If we add to this the distributive sales of the various packing establishments in the United States for the domestic market as well, we find that it reaches the enormous total of 1,000,000 carloads, valued at $2,000,000,000. Added to this is the value of the many by-products of the packing house, which amount to many millions more.

If we could take stock of our civilization, to-day, we would find that the men and women who have done most to sweeten and refine our national life have not been, as a rule, the millionaires, or those who have attained notoriety, but the plain, everyday people, the burden-bearers, the sacrifice-makers, observes Success. We should find that those who are doing the most to advance civilization in the aggregate, and to preserve the greatest of all our institutions-the home-are the unknown toilers.

It is alleged by critics that the smile of the modern English woman has become as fixed as the laws of the Medes and Persians, and almost equally unendurable. It is, they say, becoming a muscular habit like that of the Japanese women, who must always smile, even in the depths of wee, and must never under any circumstances before any relative to whom she owes respect display a depressed countenance. The effort to imitate the vivacity of American women is said to be at the root of the modern perpetual smile in Eng-

In his youth he wrote "Nothing to Wear" and a good many of the miners, other good pieces, in spite of which he became an eminent lawyer, unequaled in admiralty cases, and with a good title, finally, to be called the leader of the New York bar. But all his life, amusing to tell, he was much more widely known as the author of "Nothing to Wear" than as a lawyer, and so, combining the advantages of a large law practice with the reputation of a poet, he lived long and well and died much respected.

Are fellowships almsgiving or investments? As ordinarily granted in American universities, they may be either. Still more often they are rather advertisements, and they may in any case partake of the nature of all three of these. The great gifts to education have been for the purpose not of feeding men but of furnishing means of study and investigation beyoud the reach of individual effort. This is "investment put to the credit of the country's future." The ordinary fellowship furnishes not special facilities, but board and lodging for individuals, matters quite within the range of individual effort on the part of almost any student worth educating. It does not increase scholarship but multiplies the number of those who scramble for its rewards, states President Jordan in the Popular Science monthly. The same amounts expended in better teachers and in better facilities for work would do more for American scholarship than the fellowships now accomplish.

Saturday's results him, he has entered on a service of 15 years. Andrews maintained his calm exterior to the last. Mrs. Andrews hade her husband good-bye at the Detroit jall at 7 p. m. and returned to her home. At midnight the prisoner was taken to the depot and departed at 1 a. m. for the prison city. Just one man of all those who had called themselves his friends was at the train to see him off and that man was Will Allen, the evangelist, whom Andrews while police commissioner had arrested several times. The magnificent polse of Andrews is a matter of surprise even among the prison officials, accustomed as they are to the assumed courage of newly arrived prisoners. It isn't bravado either, but simply a manly determination to live the best that he can in the midst of his unattractive environments. After he was left alone Wednesday night Andrews, a "freshie" in prison parlance, slept calmly. Early Thursday morning he was given breakfast in his cell. While the coffee is not such as a millionaire is accustomed to, yet it is not bad and furthermore the bread provided is sweet and nutritious. This noon Andrews joined his comrades, representing all classes of crime, and marched to the prison dining room, where he partook of the plain fare. While his appetite was not as keen, perhaps, as that of the men who had been engaged at hard work during the day, yet the inward repugnance which he must have felt was not visible. Warden Vincent had a short talk with Andrews this morning during which the latter expressed his intention of obeying the rules and of being a model prisoner.

"I shall not violate the rules nor ask anyone to violate them in my behalf,"

Bitten by a Mad Dog.

Seven small children are known to have been bitten by a mad dog in Saginaw Thursday, and it is reported that some person was injured at Carrellton, down the river, where the dog is said to have first made its appearance. Francis, the oldest son of Geo. Wirth, 623 North Hamilton street, was the first victim. The dog then proceeded to Court street, where Eddie and Abe Oppenheim were both marked. The young daughter of James McComb, 1412 South Granger street, was badly bitten through both calves, the child being thrown in the ditch by the brute. A. D. sin, and should she win she would, with Minnesota defeated, probably claim second place, her victory over Wisconsin putting her on a par in one sense, while the fact that Minnesota had been twice defeated, once by Nebraska, would be argued against any claim of tie for second. Minnesota, however, if victorious here, will be conceded the champlonship. Chicago, 11 defeated, will drop to fourth place.

Minnesota's record against Wisconsin is better, in the matter of points, than that made by Michigan, Wisconsin, however, was a weakened team, trained for the Michigan game. She had passed her best point, and was, in addition, minus Juneau, her captain, and admittedly the star individual performer of the Michigan-Wisconsin game.

The scores bearing on the championship race are: Michigan 6, Wisconsin 0; Minnesota 11, Wisconsin 0; Michigan 21, Chicago 0.

A row of piles had been driven long the base of the embankment, and laborers were at work digging a trench along the inside of the piles in order to set a heavy sheeting of plank well down in the earth.

Without a moment's warning tons of earth were precipitated upon the men in the trench, burying them out of sight. The other men, realizing that every moment of time was precious, set to work to dig them out and summon medical and other assistance. After 15 minutes of vigorous work the head of the first man was uncovered, but he was insensible. The last man was not dug out with nearly a alf hour later. were insensible. No bones were broken, but one of them was struck several times on the head by the shovels of the rescuers.

Their escape from death is considered almost miraculous.

Assaulted the Teacher.

Harold K. Righter, who presides over the destinies of the Orinoko disstreet. Her face was badly lacerated trict school, brought suit in Circuit Court to-day against John Ford, father of one of his pupils, claiming $1,000 damages. Plaintiff alleges that as a result of some trouble in school with young Ford, the father called at the school house and thrashed him. The bill of complaint states that Ford made a vicious assault upon the schoolmaster, knocking him down and dragging him about the room until he was badly injured about the "face, eyes, ears, nose, head, back, shou! . . s. arms. legs and body." Righter claims great injury to health and feelings.

Removal Asked.

Formal charges were filed in the Ingham Circuit Court Saturday against County Clerk Woodworth. It will be recalled that Woodworth deposited some $2,500 to cover any amount which might be found due from him. This they passed out of the barn yard, that still remains about $1,000 due the county. The petition makes no criminal charge, simply alleging incompetence, misconduct and habitual neglect of duty, and asking that the clerk be removed from office. Judge Wiest made an order citing Woodworth to appear Nov. 24 to answer to the charges. Woodworth says he will be able to ex-

Often he sent is thoughts backward to remember ow he walked by his father's side, or aned against his mother's chair, as bey told him the tragic tales of the d Barneveldt and the hapless De litts; or how his young heart glowed their memories of the dear fatherad, and the proud march of the Bawian republic.

"Good evening, Mr. Justice. Good vening, neighbor," and he stood a inute, with his hands on his garden ate, to bow to Justice Van Gaasbeeck nd to Peter Sluyter, who, with their ives, were going to spend an hour r two at Christopher Laer's garden. "Men can bear all things but good ays." said Peter Sluyter, when they ad gone a dozen yards in silence; since Van Heemskirk has a seat in he council room, it is a long way to us."

Come, now, he was very civil, luyter. He pows like a man not sed to make a low bow, that is all." "Well, well, with time, every one ets into his right place. In the city fall, I may yet put my chair beside is, Van Gaasbeeck."

"So say I, Sluyter, and for the presnt it is all well as it is."

This little envious fret of his neighor lost itself outside Joris Van Heemkirk's home. Within it, all was love nd content. aly the elder." Elder Alexander Semple was a great can in his sphere. He had a reputaion both for riches and godliness and as scarcely more respected in the parket-place than he was in the Midle Kirk. And there was an old tie seemskirks—a tie going back to the ae Netherland Coniessors clasped ands as brothers in their "churches nder the cross." Then one of the emples had fled for life from Scotand to Holland, and been sheltered the house of a Van Heemskirk; and tom generation to generation the dendship had been continued. So ere was much real kindness and ery little ceremony between the famies, and the elder met his friend Joris th a pleasant "good evening," and down in front of the blazing logs. Joanna tied on her white apron, and, a word from her mother, began to ake from the cupboards various Dutch ainties, and East Indian jars of fruits oules, and some fine lemons, She

At this point Katherine Yan Heemskirk came into the room, and the elder slightly moved his chair and said, "Come awa', my bonnie lassie, and let us hae a look at you." And Katherine laughingly pushed a stool towards the fire, and sat down between the two men on the hearthstone. She was the daintiest little Dutch maiden that ever latched a shoe-very diminutive, with a complexion like a sea-shell. great blue eyes, and such a quantity of pale yellow hair that it made light of its ribbon snood, and rippled over her brow and slender white neck in bewildering curls.

Long before supper was over, Madam Van Heemskirk had discovered that this night Elder Semple had a special reason for his call, and when the meal was finished, and the girls gone to their room, she was not astonished to hear him say, "Joris, let us light another pipe. I hae something younger children should not move to speak anent-Sit still, guidewife, we shall want your word on the mat-

"On what matter, elder?" "Anent a marriage between my son Nell and your daughter Katherine." The words fell with a sharp distinctness, not unkindly, but as if they were more than common words. They were followed by a marked silence, a silence which in no way disturbed Semple. He knew his friends well, and therefore he expected it.

Joris at last said slowly, "For Katherine the marriage would be good, and Lysbet and I would like it. However, we will think a little about it; there is time, and to spare. One should not run on a new road. Say what you think, Lysbet."

"Neil is to my mind, when the time comes. But yet the child knows not perfectly her Heidelberg. And there is more; she must learn to manage a house of her own. So in time, I say, it would be a good thing. We have been long good friends."

"We hae been friends for four generations, and we may safely tie the knot lighter now. The land between this place and my place, on the riverside, is your land, Joris. Give it to Katherine, and I will build the young things a house; and the furnishing and plenishing we'll share between

"There is more to a wedding than house and land, elder. A young girl should be wooed before she is married. You know how it is; and Katherine, the little one, she thinks not of such a thing as love and marriage."

"Wha kens what thoughts are under curly locks at seventeen? You'll hae noticed, madam, that Katherine has come mair often than ordinar' to Semple House lately?"

"That is so. It was because of Col. Gordon's wife, who likes Katherine. She is teaching her a new stitch in her crewel-work."

"Hum-m-m! Mistress Gordon has likewise a nephew, a vera handsome lad. I hae seen that he takes a deal o' interest in the crewel-stitch likewise. "It will be Neil and Bram"; and, as the words were spoken, the young men entered.

"Again you are late, Bram"; and the father looked curiously in his son's face. It was like looking back but those made from minerals will all upon his own youth; for Bram Van tween the Semples and the Van Heemskirk had all the physical traits of his father-his great size, his comwe'khen the Scotch Covenanters and | manding presence and winning address, his large eyes, his deep, sonorous voice and slow speech.

With the advent of Bram and Neil, the consultation ended. The elder, grumbling at the chill and mist, wrapped himself in his plaid, and leaning on his son's arm, cautiously picked his way home by the light of a lantern. Van Heemskirk put aside his pipe, nodded gravely to his son, and went thoughtfully upstairs.

In his own room he sat down on a big oak chest; and, as he thought, his wrath slowly gathered. Semple knew that gay young English officers were coming and going about his house, and he had not told him until he and sweetmeats, and a case of crystal feared they would interfere with his own plans for keeping Neil near to as a fair, rosy girl, with a kind, him. He remembered that Semple course, but working two or three the erful face, a pleasant voice, and a mile that was at once innocent and light. at all to the purpose. That is the truth. Always I have found it so."

Then Lysbet, having finished her second locking up, entered the room. She came in as one wearied and troubled, and said with a sigh, as she untied her apron:

"Joris, the elder's words have made trouble in my heart. What did the man mean?"

"Who can tell? What a man says, we know; but only God understands what he means. But I will say this, Lysbet, and it is what I mean: If Semple has led my daughter into the way of temptation, then, for all that is past and gone, we shall be un-

"Give yourself no kommer on that matter, Joris. Hove not some of our best maidens married into the English set? There is no harm, I think, in a girl taking a few steps up when she puts on the wedding ring."

'Mean you that our little daughter should marry some English good-fornothing? Look, then, I would rather see her white and cold in the deadchamber. I will have no Englishman among the Van Heemskirks. There, let us sleep. To night I will speak no

But madam could not sleep. She was quite sensible that she had tacitly encouraged Katherine's visits to Semple House, even after she understood that Capt. Hyde and other fashionable and notable persons were frequent visitors there. Lysbet Van Heemskirk saw no reason why her with the current, when it might set them among the growing aristocracy of the New World.

She tried to recall Katherine's demeanor and words during the past day, and she could find no cause for alarm in them. She could not remember anything at all which ought to make her uneasy; and what Lysbet did not see or hear, she could not Yet the past ten hours had really been full of danger to the young girl. Early in the afternoon, some hours before Joanna was ready to go, Katherine was dressed for her visit to Semple House. It stood, like Van Heemskirk's, at the head of a garden sloping to the river; and there was a good deal of pleasant rivalry about these gardens, both proprietors having impressed their own individuality upon their pleasure grounds.

The space between the two houses was an enclosed meadow; and this afternoon, the grass being warm and dry and full of wild flowers. Katherine followed the narrow footpath through it, and entered the Semple garden by the small side gate. Near this gate was a stone dairy, sunk below the level of the ground-a deliclously coo!, clean spot even in the hottest weather. Passing it, she saw that the door was open, and Madart Semple was busy among its large, shallow, pewter, cream-dishes. She was beating some rich curd with eggs and currants and spices; and Katherine, with a sympathetic smile, asked delightedly:

"Cheesecakes, madam?" 'Just cheesecakes, dearie."

"Oh, I am glad! Let me fill some of these pretty little patty-pans."

"I'll do naething o' the kind, Katherine. You'd be spoiling the bonnie silk dress you hae put on. Go to the house and sit wi' Mistress Gordon. She was asking for you no' an hour ago. And, Katherine, my bonnie lassie, dinna gie a thought to one word that black-eyed nephew o' hers may say to you. He's here the day and gane to-morrow, and the lasses that heed him will get sair hearts to them-

The bright young face shadowed, and a sudden fear came into Madam Semple's heart as she watched the girl turn thoughtfully and slowly away into the house.

Many Colors. In an article on the subject of tattooing, in Pearson's, the marvelous are thus described:

"Until comparatively recently only two colors, indigo blue (or India ink black) and red were used in tattooing, but a Japanese increased the number by discovering a permanent brown, and Sutherland Macdonald has now added four more to the list, so that he works with no fewer than seven colors altogether. The difficulty has been to get a color that will hold; any color can be pricked into the human skin, set up, sooner or later, a state of inflammation of the skin and the color will be forced out again, leaving only an ugly scar to mark the spot. "But by careful experiments on his own body, experiments which have been going on for years now, he has been able to produce a very beautiful green, a permanent ultramarine blue, a lavender, and, most difficult of all, a rich yellow, all not only perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, but colors that will hold, and by blending some of these together he is able to produce brilliant effects, which to the uninitiated would appear to be altogether impossible.

"Tattooing in so many colors, with all their graduations of shading, is a lengthy process-Mr. Macdonald will spend a matter of sixty or seventy hours in completing a design to cover a man's chest-not at a stretch, of

From the slave quarters would be heard the voices and laughter of the rappy blacks "servants," as Washington would have termed them, for the word "slave" was obnoxious to the ears of the owners of these human chattels even at the time of the birth of our nation. It is well known that Washington, with far-seeing, statesmanlike view, recognized the peril that dwelt in the institution of slavery and would gladly have seen it abolished, and we may be sure that on his estate the "servants" had as happy homes and light labors as could be given them. His great heart was incapable of countenancing anything that even savored of oppression.

seen in the love that "bad" men have for their wives and children. By "bad" men we generally mean those lawbreakers who thrive in communities by the purchase of protection from law upholders. If you please, let Tom Gould be mentioned as a type, or "The" Allen, though I do not know anything about their families. Men of that stamp, with their hands ever against their fellow men, living only to "do" them, usually have happy homes. The family ties are sacred. The gambler's daughter is the light of his soul, and his only holy ambition is to shield her from knowledge of his moral obliquity. I could name dozen such men in this city whose names are as well known as District Attorney Jerome's. No matter how black the record against them on the outside, within the threshold of their homes they become loyal husbands and indulgent fathers.-New York

JOKE WAS ON ENGLISHMAN.

Mark Twain Has Fun With Individual "Just Over."

An Englishman who recently came to New York for the first time and who did not know that Mark Twain was Mr. Clemens' nom de plume, expressed the opinion to one of his friends that Americans were very poorly informed concerning English monuments of international interest.

"Why so?" said the friend. "Why, my dear fellow, a man I met on the steamer asked me if Westminster Abbey was not a hotel and seemed surprised when I told him it was

Mr. Fritz, a native of Pennsylvania, began life as a blacksmith and has been interested directly in nearly every important step in the iron and steel industries. From 1860 to 1893 he was chief engineer and superintendent of the great forge and armor plant of the Bethleher Steel company. He is thought to be the only survivor of those who i oduced the Bessemer steel process in the United States and the leading men in that industry toiay are pupils of John Fritz.

Catching Fish With Mirrors.

In France a novel method of catching fish is being tested by anglers. A tiny mirror is attached to the line near the baited hook. The assumption is that a fish, when it sees itself in the mirror, will conclude that some other fish is trying to carry off the bait, and will make haste to secure the tempting morsel for itself, the result being that it will speedily be caught on the relentless hook. From experiments which have been made there seems to be some foundation for this assumption. At any rate, some anglers say that they catch more fish when they use the little mirror than they ever caught before.

The exports of cheese from United States in the fiscal year ended June 30, 1902, were smaller than in any like period for the past thirty years, and amounted to only 27,203. 184 pounds, valued at $2,745,597, against 39,813,517 pounds, valued at $3,950,999, in the previous year, says a report of the United States Department of Agriculture. In fact, as far as value is concerned, the imports of this product are now almost equal to the exports, the imports of the foreign varieties in 1902 having amounted to 17,067,714 pounds, valued at $2,551,366, against imports of 15,329,-099 pounds, valued at $2,120,293, in the previous year. To appreciate the decline in the export trade in this product, it is only necessary to recall that in 1880 the total exports of cheese from the United States amounted to the large total of 127,-533,907 pounds, with a value of $12,-171,720.

Exports of butter also continue to decline. In the fiscal year 1901-02 exports of this product from the United States amounted to 16.002,169 pounds, valued at $2,885,609, against 23,243,526 pounds valued at $4,014,905, in the previous year. Twenty-two years ago the exports of this product also were at the maximum and amounted to 39,236,658 pounds, valued at $6,690,-687, constituting an export trade that in value was worth about half the like trade in cheese. In 1895 exports of butter had declined to the low record mark of 5,598,812 pounds, with a "I think he said his name was Sam- | value of only $915,533. As early as 1897, however, they had recovered to 31,345,224 pounds, worth $4,493,364; but since that date they have declined steadily, excepting for the slight recovery in 1901. Exports of butter, as measured by values, exceeded exports of cheese in the last fiscal year by over $140,000.

Fertilizer Facts.

A report of the New Jersey experiment station says that fertilizers are fertilizers only when they contain one or more of the essential constituents of plant growth, i. e., nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid in such materials as nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia, acid phosphate, ground bone, muriate of potash, etc., and when their application to the soil will contribute quite as much or more to the growth of crops and the constituents already there. The chief cause of unsatisfactory results from the application of fertilizers to soils deficient in available plant food is that the person using them does not understand the character of the materials he is handling or the characteristics of growth and specific needs of the plant whose growth he intends to encourage. While the value of a commercial fertilizer is determined almost exclusively by the amount and form of the nitrogen, potash and phosphoric acid which it contains, it does not follow that all soils or crops will respond equally to applications of fertilizers containing those elements because the needs of soils and the requirements of crops vary. Soils differ in respect to their need for specific elements owing either to their method of formation or to their management and cropping. A sandy soil is usually deficient in all the essential elements of plant food, while a clayey soil usually contains the mineral elements in abundance, particularly potash. On the other hand, a soil very rich in vegetable matter is frequently deficient in mineral matter, while a limestone soil is likely to contain considerable

The comment of Thompson, Johnson County, Nebraska.

Planting potatoes under straw has been tried for a good many years, yet the practice does not seem to increase. We would like to know what are the objections to the practice. It seems there must be some, or the plan would be more generally adopted. Will some of our readers give us their experiences in this matter.

Fatness is Not Health. It has been remarked that some swine breeders mistake fatness for health and vigor. Fat does sometimes indicate thrift, but not always. When a pig has been properly fed on balanced rations and lays on fat it is an indication of vigor, for the animal is getting the most possible out of the food. But when the ration is one of corn only and the pig gets fat the indications are not such as may be trusted to indicate health. The fat comes in that case from an attempt of nature to build up the body throu sue is elaborated in the work of ge

THE PEOPLE'S

I have opened a livery and ten-cent feed barn in the McKune barn, south Main street, and ask for a share of your patrouage. Don't leave your horses out in the cold and storm when they can get good care for ten cents. This is the only barn in the town where you can hitch or unhitch your horse without being out in the storm. In the livery you will always find first-class turnouts.
