SUGAR BEETS.

More Acreage Wanted in This Section the Coming Year.

A. E. Wade, of the Detroit Sugar Co., was in town Friday looking up the prospects for sugar beet acreage here next year. He was very well pleased with the prospects and proposes to hold a meeting here at the town hall, Monday, Jan. 12, 1903, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of getting together the farmers in this vicinity who are interested in the new industry.

John Kalmbach, the local agent for the company, says there will be some 200 acres grown here next year. This means lots of work for the boys and girls in the spring during the thinning season.

The question of obtaining help seems to be somewhat of a drawback to some who would otherwise put in a considerable acreage, but they need not fear much trouble on that score, for help always comes where there is plenty of work to do, and the company is in a position to, and does, distribute a large amount of help among its contractors.

The past season was a very discouraging one for the farmers in general, but those who tried raising beets this year for the first time, while their profits did not loom up as might have been expected, are convinced that under ordinary conditions the sugar beet crop would make big returns.

The boy managed to keep his head above the water, and Mr. Howlett, who happened to be driving by at the time, quickly unfastened his lines and threw them out to the boy who by that time was nearly exhausted. He was taken to his home where restoratives were given him and he recovered from his immersion. It is to be hoped this will be a warning to the boys to keep off the ice until it is safe.

GREAT STRIDES MADE.

Wonderful Richness of the Soil of Western Canada Has Turned the Tide of Immigration.

The great strides which Western Canada is making, and the wonderful richness of the soil, is creating considerable excitement, not only in Canada, but in the United States and Great Britain. The large crops of the past two years, with phenomenal yields, have enacted a movement towards the west, which will not be checked until every available homestead is taken. The Edmonton Bulletin, one of the "farthest north" newspapers, in a recent article on the Northwest as a wide and open field, says: "There must be fertile soil, there must be a suitable climate, there must be the possibility of building up a modern civilization; and the conditions must be such that labor can reach the land; or in other words, land must be cheap. The Canadian Northwest contains the largest unbroken area of country on the continent, or in the world fulfilling these conditions. In its thousand miles of plain which stretches from the Lake of the Woods to the Rocky Mountains Canada is able to offer land to the landless of the continent, and of the world. This year (1902), the only complaint, over all the vast stretch of territory, of the farmers and ranchers, is that the railways have not sufficient rolling stock to move to market the returns of the past season.

The area under crop in Western Canada in 1902 was 1,987,330 acres. Yield 1902, 117,922,754 bushels. Wealth waits on industry in Canada. There is Plenty of Room.

Prices have advanced in Western Canada 50 per cent. in the last two years, and the upward movement seems still on. The migration into Canada is becoming notable. Somebody has estimated that 25,000 acres of Canadian land are sold a day to people from the United States.

Whatever doubts there have been as to the suitability of the Canadian Northwest for settlement, those doubts have been set at rest by the successive yields of previous years, and by the crowning glory of the past year (1902), which gives solid assurance as to possibilities that would not otherwise have been believed. The fact of the grain production of the past season in Manitoba and the Northwest, 117,922,754 bushels from 1,987,330 acres, and that a certain number of farmers have produced a greater value of wheat, oats, and cattle for sale than any other equal number anywhere else in the known world, is the best possible answer to the question: "Is there wealth in the Northwest?" Not only in the Northwest but in the whole country has there been prosperity.

The Canadian Northwest is not all alike in its production. Wheat growing is the specialty of one part, cattle ranching of another, and mixed farming—the growth of grain and live stock together—of still another. Speaking roughly, the southeastern parts of the Territories and Manitoba are wheat growing; the southwestern part of the Territories is ranching, and the northern part of the Territories is mixed farming. Differences of soil, climate, and other conditions are the causes of these differences in agriculture in the various sections. But it is safe to say that in no other area of the world is there an equal possibility of the production of wealth from the soil, whether by one branch of agriculture or another.

THE CAREX STRICTA.

A Marsh Weed Popularly Designated as "Wire Grass."

American Ingenuity and Enterprise Have Developed a Big Industry by Utilizing the Plant's Solid Stems.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

HAVE you ever walked along the outskirts of a peat bog, brushing your way through numberless long, thin weeds? The rods, reaching almost to your shoulders, are different from any other marsh weeds; they have round, solid stems unlike ordinary flat-bladed grasses and shoot straight up into the air three, four feet or more, without a joint from the root to the needle-like point.

That is wire grass. Carex stricta, the botanist calls it. And until five years ago the botanist alone was interested, for rest of the world considered it quite worthless stuff—unfit for cattle food and a nuisance on farm lands.

To-day $15,000,000 of American capital are invested, manufacturing this same wire grass into wonderful fabrics, from binder twine to fancy chairs and rugs. Five years hence the despised American marsh weed may supply domestic and foreign markets annually with products worth $50,000,000 or more. The supply of raw material is practically unlimited and the cost of manufacture much lower than that of any competitive article.

This prodigious development of a new industry—unprecedented, perhaps, in the history of the world—all sprang from an experimental machine which was worked out by George A. Lowry and put in operation in Chicago in 1896 or 1897. Various trials with carex stricta convinced Mr. Low-this fabric, the screen door, chairs, rugs, table and bookstand being pure grass. The effect of the unique furniture is simple but artistic.

The process of manufacture, though difficult, is not as complicated as that of many other branches of textile manufacture. In the beginnings of the industry one great problem was to secure the raw material properly. The grass twine men bought up, very quietly indeed, thousands and thousands of acres of marsh land—and the sellers of the waste soil laughed in their sleeves; they did not know what they were giving away and thought they had stolen a march on the rich men. There are about 1,000,000 acres of wire grass in Minnesota and Wisconsin alone, of which only a few acres remain for those not already in the grass twine business. Many sections of recently purchased land are practically unexplored; elsewhere roads have been built into the marshes. Besides huge "camps," where 2,000 men and as many horses are kept busy during the harvest season, have been established in the northern country. To cultivate the growth of the grass the marshes are regularly drained and fed with water.

The mowing begins in July and lasts until September, the bales of grass being "cured" by a sweat process for several months before they are shipped to the mill. The making of twine is a simple process—although many thousands of dollars were spent in experimenting before this simple process was evolved. The wire grass is "combed"—that is, the short pieces are brushed out of the longer, the latter being sent immediately through the spinner, where the sliver and twister turn them at once into finished twine.

The shorter blades, meanwhile, are shipped to another portion of the mill, where they are made into bottle covers.

The twine begins a wonderful metamorphosis after its first stage. Any one who has ever seen a loom making

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Seven New Poisons.

Prof. Julius Schlotterback, professor of pharmacology in the University of Michigan, has discovered seven new poisons. Three of them are made from Allegheny vine. He has named two of the poisons adlumine and adlurnidine, and one is still unnamed. From the calandine poppy the professor has extracted the fourth and fifth poisons, called stylophine and disphylline, and from the Japanese calandine the poison bacconidine, and one yet unnamed.

THE LAST RITES.

After Services in Washington Remains of Mrs. Grant Are Placed in Mausoleum at New York.

Washington, Dec. 22.—In the presence of a notable assemblage, including President Roosevelt, some of his cabinet, many senators and representatives, Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, and one of his attaches, and most of the army, navy and marine officers in the city in their dress uniforms, funeral services over the remains of Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, the widow of the former soldier-president, were held in this city Saturday morning, and the casket immediately afterward was taken to New York on a train over the Pennsylvania railroad which left here at 11 o'clock. All of the children of Mrs. Grant were present except Jesse Grant.

The president and Secretary Hay occupied the front pew. Back of them were seated Secretaries Moody and Hitchcock, Postmaster General Payne and Secretary Cortelyou. The next was the family pew, draped with the national emblem and occupied by the immediate family, and on the extreme left by Commander Cowles, U. S. N., and Col. T. A. Bingham, U. S. A.

Rev. Dr. F. M. Bristol, pastor of the church, officiated, and opened the ceremony by reading from the Scriptures as he walked down the aisle, followed by the honorary pall bearers, consisting of senators, the speaker of the house and others. The pall bearers were seated just back of the stricken family. The casket was covered and the pulpit was banked with floral tributes. The choir sang "Lead Kindly Light," after which Dr. Bristol offered prayer. Following this the choir sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and the service was closed. The family were then driven to the Pennsylvania depot and left on the 11 o'clock train for New York.

New York, Dec. 22.—The body of Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant lies in the great red granite sarcophagus beside that in which the remains of her husband rest, in the tomb overlooking the Hudson river. On the arrival of the funeral train at Jersey City the casket, piled high with flowers, was borne on the shoulders of six men on board the quartermaster's department steamer Gen. Meigs, a detachment of U. S. Grant post G. A. R., and the committee of the Grant Monument association, which accompanied the funeral party from Washington, acting as escort. The body was placed in a bier on the forward deck of the Meigs, which started immediately up the river for the tomb. The members of the funeral party proceeded direct to the Fifth Avenue hotel. On reaching the landing place the casket was transferred to a hearse and taken to the tomb, the route being lined by double ranks of police. The body was placed in the sarcophagus without any ceremony in the presence of Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., the escort and a little group of officials.

In the mausoleum on Riverside drive brief and simple services were conducted Sunday over the remains of Mrs. Grant. In addition to the members of the Grant family there were present among the 500 persons to whom invitations had been sent, Gov. Odell, Mayor Low, Secretary of War Elihu Root, Rear Admiral Barker and staff, Gen. James Grant Wilson, Gen. Granville Dodge, Gen. Horatio C. King, Gen. Charles F. Roe, N. Y. N. G., and staff; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie and many federal and municipal officials and officers of the army and navy stationed in the city.

Gen. Frederick D. Grant and the other members of the family occupied seats overlooking the crypt. The services, conducted by Bishop E. G. Andrews, of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Right Rev. Alexander Mackay E. Smith, Protestant Episcopal bishop coadjutor of Pennsylvania, opened with the hymn, "Lead Kindly Light," after which the burial services of the Methodist Episcopal and the Protestant Episcopal churches were read. The services were closed with the reading of a poem, "The Land Beyond the Sea," which had been a favorite of Mrs. Grant, and the singing of the hymn, "Abide With Me."

PASSED AWAY.

Death at Hammond, Ind., of Charles F. Griffin, Twice Secretary of State.

Hammond, Ind., Dec. 22.—Charles F. Griffin, former secretary of state, who last week was stricken with paralysis, died early Sunday morning at his home here. Mr. Griffin during life was one of the best-known men in the northwestern part of the state. Twice he was elected secretary of state, the first time in 1836, and he was reelected in 1888. In 1892 he was one of the delegates at large for the national republican convention which nominated Gen. Benjamin Harrison for the presidency. During his second term as secretary of state, Mr. Griffin was elected national commander of the sons of veterans.

TRAINS COLLIDE.

Disaster on the Southern Pacific Road in Which Sixteen Persons Are Killed.

Martinez, Cal., Dec. 22.—As a result of a rear-end collision between the Stockton flyer and the "Owl" train on the Southern Pacific, at Byron, Saturday night, 16 deaths have already been recorded, and there are indications that the total will soon be raised to 20. Most of the wounded passengers who were too severely injured to be taken to their homes were taken to the Southern Pacific hospital at San Francisco Sunday, and on the way to that place five victims died. Eleven of the dead have been identified, as follows: Elizabeth L. Smith, Fresno, Cal., aged 38; Clarence D. Oluffs, Fresno, aged 22; Miss Birdie Elliott, San Francisco, aged 22; Mabel Vezey, Modesto, Cal., aged 19; George Sessions, Oakland, Cal., aged 50; Charles Owens, Fresno, aged 55; Miss Myers, Fresno; Robert Renwick, San Francisco; Len Irwin, Oakland; W. F. Temple, and Tung Tia Yong, a Chinese girl, of San Francisco. The unidentified dead include one white man, evidently a sailor; two Chinese, one Japanese woman and a Japanese child. The dead were brought here. An inquest will be held to-day. Most of the corpses are terribly mutilated. This made the work of identification very difficult. The injured were taken to Oakland.

It was a rear-end collision, the engine of the local plowing its way into the last coaches of the "Owl" which was filled with Fresno people. The passengers who escaped death were hurled to the fore part of the coach crushed in between the mass of debris, their sufferings and danger intensified a hundredfold by the clouds of scalding steam that poured out upon them from the shattered boiler of the Stockton engine. After the "Owl" left the Oakland Mole it was noted that there was a leak in the flue of the engine. This increased to such an extent that it was deemed advisable to stop here to take up a freight engine for relief. The train officials knew that the Stockton local train was following a half hour behind, and a flagman was sent back down the track to give warning of the presence of the "Owl." It is said that the Stockton train, in charge of Engineer Maguire and Fireman Joyce, got the warning signal in due time and gave the usual response with whistle blasts.

Why the incoming train was not checked, however, has not been thus far explained, the men who could give the facts being numbered among the badly injured. On came the train, with apparently scarcely any diminution of speed, and the Fresno coach was completely telescoped. So forcibly did the local meet the rear of the "Owl" that the end of the second car, the dining car, was smashed in and the three cooks were seriously hurt. It seems miraculous that the horror of fire was not added to the direful disaster, but the penned-up victims were with seemingly Providential intervention, spared from flame, for the oil burners were extinguished when the crash came.

THE HUMBERTS CAPTURED.

Notorious Paris Swindlers Are All Taken in a Bunch at Madrid.

Madrid, Dec. 22.—Mme. Humbert, other members of the Humbert family, and M. and Mme. d'Aurignac, the brother and sister-in-law of Mme. Humbert, who became notorious in connection with the great safe frauds in Paris, have been arrested here. They had been in Madrid since May 9.

Later it became known that the police made a clean haul of the whole family, Mme. Humbert, her husband, Eva Humbert and the three d'Aurignacs, Komain, Emile and Marie. The police suspected a house on the Calle Ferray. Some time Friday Romain d'Aurignac was seen to enter the building, a search warrant was obtained, and the house was surrounded. After some difficulty the police were admitted and arrested the long-sought-for defaulters. The prisoners protested that they were the victims of infamous proceedings. They threatened to "get even" with certain persons in France, and said they had come to Madrid direct from Paris.

Mlle. Eva became hysterical and Mme. Humbert clasped Marie d'Aurignac and her daughter in her arms, pleading with the police "for the love of God not to separate me from my daughter."

The police made an inventory of the contents of the apartments and found a parcel of jewels valued at $2,000, a couple of lottery tickets and about $115 in cash. Seals were then attached to the house and the whole family were removed to jail and were placed at the disposition of the French ambassador.

The police suspect the Humberts of having disposed of important papers in the lavatories while delaying the entry of the officers. The family tried to escape by the windows but failed.

The Humberts maintain they are innocent, declare they themselves have been victimized, and say they desire to return to France and defend themselves against the charges.

EVERYTHING IS MADE OF GRASS TWINE EXCEPT THE DESK.

ry and others that the grass could be used for making a very tough binder twine much cheaper than any other. J. F. O'Shaughnessy, of cotton seed fame, saw the opportunity here offered. So in October, 1897, a small factory with ten machines was opened in Oshkosh, Wis. Within a year a large grass twine factory was started at St. Paul.

Others of the leading business factors of the west became interested in grass twine, so that millions of capital poured into the industry. Inventions and new patents came out at the rate of one a month—often more frequently. Factory followed upon factory in the western country, and just now another gigantic grass twine mill is being built in New England.

The variety of products in these variribbons, or cloth-fabrics of any kind, must have wondered at the almost human intelligence of the machine, throwing the threads in and out, above and below, while a beautiful figure shapes itself. To be able to do this work by machine was the problem of a century. But the grass twine industry required machines different from any other ever made, and the problem was solved in a few months. The first of these new mechanisms was put in operation in June, 1898; now hundreds of grass twine looms are weaving day and night. The earlier machines made simply floor matting; then the twine was wrapped with colors of cotton yarn and rugs were made, as well as ceiling and wall-coverings. Later, by continuous experiments, it was found that in the manufacture of furniture grass twine could be used wherever willow had served.

As the whole industry is practically but five years old, no one can prophesy what may yet be accomplished with wire grass. The extreme-toughness of the fiber gives it remarkable wearing power. Builders are now using it as floor-deadeners for houses, for which it is said to give particularly good service. What other uses in the building line may be discovered, is, of course, problematical; but with the growing menace of a timber famine, American woodland being chopped away by the thousands of acres every year, it is not impossible that the marsh-grass will go far as a substitute for wood. Because of its great cheapness, also, the grass fabrics are taking the place to an appreciable extent of cotton and woolen goods, and it is thought, will crowd willow-ware practically off the market.

American inventive genius, American business "gumption" and American cash are the sole makers of this industry. The possibilities in export trade are simply stupendous; for, in the first place, the grass is primarily an American product, and, secondly, the entire industry depends upon specially constructed machines, from the harvesting of the grass to the weaving of the last warp, every one of the machines being protected throughout the world by patents. Hence, English, German or French capital would hardly care to undertake the role of rivals, and the world's market of a vast industry is in the grasp of a handful of keen-minded, far-sighted "Yankees."

BALING THE WIRE GRASS.

ous institutions is stupendous. Here are some:

Rope, binder twine, cordage, rugs, floor matting, handsome carpet linings, wall coverings, finishings for ceilings, baskets, bottle covers, chairs, settees, tables, screens, doors, baby carriages, go-carts, jardinières, hassinets, furniture novelties.

And all this from the despised wire grass, which American farmers have cursed for generations!

To show what can be done toward furnishing a house with grass products, the general manager of a company located at Brooklyn, N. Y., has fitted up his entire office with wire grass. Everything in the room is made of grass twine except the desk. Even the walls and ceiling are covered with

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Entirely.

"If it hadn't been for Dr. Miles' Remedies I would not be here to write this letter. Two years ago last June I lost the use of my left arm, could not use it and could only move it with the help of my right hand. My heart was so weak I could not sleep nights for smothering spells. I was out of sorts all over and could eat nothing. I grew so weak that I could not walk without staggering like a drunken man and my home doctor said he could do nothing for me. I was in so much pain I was almost wild. I could not take morphine nor opium as they made me worse. So I got to thinking about Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine and the more I thought about it the more I wanted to try them. I wrote to the Dr. Miles Medical Co. for advice which I followed to the letter. I can say today that I am glad I did as I am a well woman now; can work and can walk two or three miles and not mind it. I can also use my arm again as well as ever. You do not know how thankful I am for those grand medicines Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and Nervine. I think Dr. Miles' Remedies are the best in the world, and if I should get sick again I should take the same course. The remedies also helped my daughter Vida so wonderfully that I should have written you before to thank you, but I wanted to be sure that the cure was permanent, which I now know to be the case."—Mrs. Frank Loomis, Allen, Mich.

Now, my life is a heavenly day." Don't fail to see Dr. Watson on his next visit to Chelsea, Chelsea house, on Monday, January 5, 1903. One day. Come early. Lake house, Grass Lake, Tuesday, January 6, 1903.

A Word to the Teachers.

I think perhaps I ought to utter a word of caution to the teachers of Washtenaw county in reference to the Teachers' Library Union. I am in sympathy with any movement that will induce teachers to do systematic reading in good books, and it is probably true that this would be one of the results of the work, but I think I should hesitate somewhat before entering into a four year contract with a company to take such books as they might offer from time to time. However, this is a matter which each teacher must settle for himself or herself. It would be well to take time to consider the matter and perhaps write the commissioner.

A Destructive Chicken.

Grass Lake News: Verne Seager knows more about the destructiveness of a chicken than he did a week ago. Some boys were trying to catch a chicken on the walk in front of Mr. Seager's shop a few evenings ago and to be accommodating and to witness the capture Verne opened the door and invited the chicken in. After taking a survey of the surroundings the chicken started in to wreck the shop and succeeded admirably. A tea kettle was knocked off the stove and several bottles of face cream, hair tonic, linden bloom, perfumes and dandruff cure were soon flying about the room. Verne stood breathless and after the capture had been made, an inventory disclosed the fact that the damage the pesky chick had wrought amounted to about $3.00. The chicken was worth seven cents.

When Twelve Is Odd.

One would think that 12 was more entitled to be considered an "even" number than 10, for its half is an "even," whereas the half of 10 is "odd." Yet on the Stock Exchange 12 is an "odd" number. The house takes five shares as the basis of dealing, remarks Commerce, and all multiples of five are considered "even" numbers. Any intermediate numbers are "odd," and parcels of shares not divisible by 5 are difficult to sell except at a reduced price.

THE TOYS OF LAST YEAR

Oh, little girl, oh, little boy, you look ahead with glee
And wonder what the gifts the Saint shall bring to you may be:
A thousand fancies fill your heads, a thousand dreams you dream
Of dollies made in wondrous ways or things that go by steam;
You'll like whatever comes, you know, And childishly you vow
To keep your treasures well, but, oh, Where are the toys of last year now?

You shouted at the Jumping Jack you'd begged the Saint to bring;
You laughed to see the antics of the monkey on the string;
The fairy book, the pictured blocks, the little train, the doll—
Ah how you danced with gladness as you looked upon them all!
But that was long, so long ago, And you, you know, somehow,
Have newer wants to-day, and oh, Where are the toys of last year now?

Oh, anxious man, oh, lady fair, you court the fates to-day,
And there are blessings rich and rare for which you meekly pray;
A loving glance, a happy smile; perhaps the strength to take
New-found responsibilities for wealth or honor's sake!—
You grasp new hands and gladly go, And faithfully you vow
To cherish and to love, but, oh, Where are the toys of last year now?
—E. Kiser, in Chicago Record-Herald.

Christmas Evening with AUNT DEBBY. —BY ERNEST GILMORE.

MISS DEBORAH STRAYER, or Aunt Debby, as we girls called her, lived in a quaint old one-story house in an old-fashioned street. She was "Aunt Debby" to all the young folks of the village. Although she was over 80 years old, her memory was excellent, and she could tell a story that would interest anyone. She was a dear, cheery old soul, and we all loved her. An old colored servant lived with her. We girls often dropped in to see Aunt Debby and to remember her in various ways. It was late in December of a hard winter that we found out that Aunt Debby was in straitened circumstances. She did not tell us, however, and we did not let her know that we knew. But a half dozen of us planned a surprise for her. We invited ourselves to a Christmas eve supper at Aunt Debby's. It was a bitterly cold evening when we dropped in about half-past five, informing her laughingly that we had come to take tea with her. She had always been so hospitable that it was pitiful to see the dear old face suddenly pale. Of course we knew the reason—a scarcity of provisions. Doubtless there was enough on hand to satisfy the hunger of herself and Sukey, but what could she do to satisfy the healthy appetites of six young girls? But we chased the pallor from Aunt Debby's face by hastily telling her that, it being a surprise, we had brought our supper along. How pleased she was then. And how delightedly she watched us as we arranged the table! Such a supper! We had brought coffee, sugar and cream, and Sukey made the coffee and waited on the table. We had cold sliced chicken and tongue, bread and butter, biscuits, jelly, fruit and sponge cakes. And when we were through eating there was more food in the basket than we had eaten. We told Sukey to take care of it and her face was aglow when she put the good things away. When the supper was cleared away, Aunt Debby told us stories of auld-lang-syne. There was a bright fire in an old open Franklin stove, Aunt Debby looked at the glow and felt the warmth.

"We didn't have such a nice warm room as this when I was a girl," she said. "Folks hadn't even heard of stoves where we lived."

"Oh, Aunt Debby!"
"You needn't say, 'Oh, Aunt Debby!' Mollie Gray," the old lady continued, smiling on us. "for it's the truth. We had big fireplaces then, that would hold great logs. Over those blazing logs we cooked our meals, boiling, stewing and roasting. We used to bake apples over the fire, stringing them on wires. As for potatoes we baked them in hot ashes."

"Oh, my, that must have been lovely," cried Isabel Howell. "I wish we had such big fireplaces now."

"Well, they were nice," said Aunt Debby, "but they had their disadvantages. You see a great deal of the heat from the open fire went up the chimney. When we were scorching our faces to get our feet warm, our backs would feel—sometimes—as if some one was rolling snow down them. And if we were warming our backs over noses and our feet would be cold."

"How did you bake your bread without a stove?" asked Edith Brown.

"In the oven, to be sure."
"What oven?" questioned Edith. "The fireplace didn't have an oven, did it?"

"Our ovens were made of brick and built right in the kitchen wall. We heated the oven with glowing logs from the fireplace."

Then Aunt Debby went on telling stories until she fell asleep in her chair. We girls were so quiet one could have heard a pin drop. Presently there was such a noise outside that Aunt Debby awoke with a start.

"What's that noise?" she asked, looking around in a dazed way.

"I think it must be Santa Claus," Betty Jones answered with a chuckle. It was Santa Claus, and he was superintending the unloading of a ton of coal. Presently he came again—this time with a load of wood. Aunt Debby's dear old face fairly shone by the light of the fire.

"How good God is!" she exclaimed.

"How good you all are!"

"How good you are, dear Aunt Debby!" cried out Isabel Howell.

When things had quieted down again, Fannie Stearns said: "What did you use to do Christmas when you were a girl?"

"I can tell you what I did one Christmas eve. Christmas was on Monday that year. On Sunday we went to church as usual. The pews were like little houses. They were high and square, with swinging doors. There were seats on three sides. The pulpit was high and was reached by a flight of deep steps. Over the pulpit was a sounding board. Father used to give out the hymns and Melinda Wyckoff's father would sound the key on his pitch-pipe. Folks can talk all they want to about the music in church nowadays, but, oh, wouldn't I like to roll time back just to hear that music of auld-lang-syne? We had a choir—Mr. Wyckoff was the leader—and they sat facing each other, the men on one side, the women on the other. We had instruments, too, violins, flutes, clarinets and bass-violins. Oh, my dears, it was beautiful.

"I told you we didn't have any stoves in our houses. There were none in our churches either until after that Christmas eve that I'm to tell you about. Every one who went to church carried hot bricks or stones or foot pans filled with glowing coals. There was a time when some one who had been to an eastern city on a visit, suggested of-open, and in came 'Alabama,' an Indian chief whom Deacon Van Brunt had once befriended. He was glittering with ice and snow, but his face shone. The 'Great Spirit' had sent him, he said. An Indian can find a path or a road if anyone can. Alabama had made a path from Deacon Van Brunt's to the church—a difficult task and we had to hurry for fear the path would be closed. The horses were brought from the shed and the women and children were put on their backs. Then we started, Indian file, for Deacon Van Brunt's, which was half a mile away. Alabama headed the procession. It was a wearisome march in the cold and storm, but everyone was too thankful to complain. Mrs. Van Brunt—dear soul!—was looking for us. The logs were blazing in the big fireplace and there was an abundant and excellent supper ready. Alabama was given the seat of honor. There was a prayer-meeting worthy of the name at Deacon Van Brunt's before the dawn of another day. As for the heaters, they were sent for and put in before we had another service in the old church."

There was the sound of sleigh bells outside and presently in came Judge Howell.

"Well, Aunt Debby," said he, in his genial way, "if these girls don't know enough to go home when it's bedtime, why don't you send them?"

"We know enough to stay," laughed Isabel, "when Aunt Debby is telling stories."

We put on our wraps, kissed Aunt Debby good night and piled into the sleigh. Sukey told me as I passed her at the door: "De judge done bring Missie Debby a mighty nice turkey an' all kin's er fixin's."

There were other delightful surprises for dear old Aunt Debby, but we had to go home and go to bed first.

The girls went in a crowd next day to wish Aunt Debby Merry Christmas. It was a glorious day, clear and cold and bright. We smelled roast turkey before we opened the door. Aunt Debby was at the table with four small guests, ranging in age from six to twelve years. In response to our wondering looks, she said, sweetly:

"They are orphans. They came to wish me a Merry Christmas and I kept them so that they could have one, poor dears!"

Dear Aunt Debby, she was "passing on" her blessings. All that day gifts dering some heaters for the church. But so many were opposed to it that the church continued to be fireless. This Sunday, in the midst of a long, tiresome sermon, the weather, which had been extremely cold, suddenly grew bitter. The storm broke. The church seemed to shake and groan, but the preacher preached on. When he thought best to stop an hour or more later he found himself and his congregation in a dilemma. The snow was falling and blowing at such a rate that one couldn't see a yard ahead. The drifts in places were taller than a man's head. There was not even the faintest trace of a road; in fact, we were blockaded. It was then that everyone wished for those heaters. The hot foot-warmers were cooking fast. Children began to weep and wail as night closed in. The prospect was that we would all be frozen before morning. No one ever went to church in those days without having an abundance of wraps and their feet well protected; this fact was in our favor. All the children were well wrapped up and fell asleep in the big square pews. The men and women kept up their courage by singing and praying. But as time passed it grew colder and colder, and no voice was heard except at intervals when Deacon Van Brunt, after going the rounds of the church and looking at everyone—including the sleeping children, would call out: "All's well!" and Elder Schuyler would respond, "Praise the Lord!" The last time Deacon Van Brunt called out: "All's well!" his voice was faint and his teeth chattered. We knew then that it wouldn't be 'All's well' much longer—not much longer. Suddenly from outside we heard a noise that was not the storm—it seemed to ride the storm—it was a yell of triumph. Simultaneously with the yell the door burst kept coming, baskets, hampers, and even barrels full to the brim.

"Things been a lookin' da'k fo' some time," Sukey confided to Betty Jones, who went into the kitchen on an errand, "but Missie Debby done say: 'Don't yo' fret, Sukey, behin' a frown-in' Providence God hides a smilin' face.' Den she say: 'Sukey, I's fo' scoah yeahs en ober an' de good Lawd neber failed ter provide—I's not 'fraid, Sukey.'"—Chicago Advance.

A VICTIM.

This is the picture of an obliging bachelor uncle who, in a moment of amiable weakness, consented to play Santa for his charming nieces, and their little ones. Being a spare man, he had to dress for the character—hence the fan and his disconsolate appearance. How cruel for them to laugh behind his back!

The Fads and Fancies of the Winter Fashions

What Dame Fashion Prescribes for Women's Adornment During the Cold Months.

THE blouse still lives as a practical illustration of the longevity of all things smart and useful. Fancy bodices and the new coffee jackets are some of the latest creations we may revel in. The coffee jacket is really a sort of elaborate tea jacket. It has smart coat tails, or a small bunchy arrangement at the back, often composed of loops of those lovely wide ribbons that are so much in vogue. But the latest style is a sort of directoire bodice, which can be made with or without short swallow tails at the back.

In sleeves there is a very decided appearance of the leg-o-mutton sleeve, shaped in widths, which is not to be commended or admired, but it is considered smart according to the dictates of fashion.

The novelty of novelties is the pelerine or cape, which falls over the shoulders and into a point at the back, and at the front ends in a bolero. These look best in lace or crepe de chine trimmed with fringe. They are often made of soft woolen fabrics, or even velvet.

The most fashionable material for dresses, coats, blouses—in fact, for everything or anything—is velvet, soft, pliable, and luminous. Velvet, however, is expensive, but the new velveteens, which are well fitted for tea jackets and blouses, can be had very cheap, and delightfully soft and supple they are. Every material has to be made pliable, to allow for the box plaiting which is seen so much on dresses.

Skirts are box plaited from a yoke. Blouses are box plaited, and so are sleeves. Short, full skirts are becoming, happily, very popular for everyday wear; and trains are narrow and box plaited at the back. All things reminiscent of oriental garments are in vogue. Tea gowns, morning gowns, opera and carriage mantles, all affect the "kimono" shape. It is so ample and loose that nothing can equal it for comfort. The Arabian "burnous" worn in the early days of the third empire as an opera mantle or carriage cloak will be revived this winter. Mantles, capes, empire coats, and all sorts of semimantles are worn by matrons.

Gray furs predominate. Scarves of fur, made very wide and flat, are worn round the neck. Pelerine capes, narrow to the waist, fall in long stole ends to the hem of the skirt, muffs are bedecked with endless tails, a fashion not much to be encouraged; but what are entrancingly lovely, are the cape-shaped boas and frilled muffs of chiffon edged with fur.

Ermine, marabout, silver fox and mink are being largely used.

Cloth coats have bright velvet collars, and colored velvet coats are are used. Painted and embroidered gauze, crepe de chine, accordion-plaited chiffon, wreathed with dainty roses made of chiffon, form the most delicate and evanescent dresses imaginable for gala wear. Matrons affect painted velvets, brocaded silks, bengaline, and such-like sumptuous fabrics.

Wedding dresses and trains are made of white moire, a material we are reviving, and a great deal of silver and mother-o'-pearl embroidery is used. Eastern, Russian, Byzantine and Breton embroideries are fashionable trimmings.

The lace shawl pelerines are very pretty draped about a low Victorian bodice. Cameos, hair bracelets, and all the old-world jewelry one can pick up is now worn, and the treasured possessions of our ancestresses are being sought after by collectors.

In materials all zibeline cloths are la mode. Costumes of these are frequently trimmed with strappings of plain cloth of the same color, or of velvet. Tiny flat buttons of quaint shapes also form a pretty finish of bodices and blouses, and for the latter, most lively fabrics in the "Viyella" and "Remino" makes are to be had. Indeed, the flannel blouse, like Cinderella, has become quite transformed, and what was once rather a dowdy possession, is now one to be envied. Tuckings, box plaitings, ribbon trimmings, lace, herring-boning, all help to make the flannel blouses for this winter smart and pretty enough for both day and evening wear.

Narrow collars of embroidered lawn or lace are worn with the majority of woolen blouses. These a deft needlewoman can fashion for herself out of a pretty bordered handkerchief, so that they need cost only a few cents.

Net and crepe de chine are favorite materials for evening gowns, but net is made in large and small meshes, and is woven from that of a pin's head up to a quarter.

Picture hats show a tendency to increase in size, chiefly, perhaps, owing to the width that the undeniably lovely fur stoles give to the shoulders.

Innumerable offerings of silk, laid closely together, form the substance of some of the newest winter toques. The fur toques are wider and trimmed far more extensively with fur tails or lace, etc., than they were last year.

Toreador hats still claim attention, and look very attractive in white felt, trimmed with black velvet, black Chantilly lace and full ostrich-feather pompons in black or white.

Feathers are the favorite trimming for all picturesque-shaped hats, and are usually made very full and curling at the tip, and, when colored, shade off almost to white.

Silk and velvet ribbon is much used for waist belts, cravats, sashes, etc. In narrow widths, chine ribbon makes a very heavy trimming for flannel blouses.

Certain makes of tartan are very fashionable for street costumes, of which the box-plaited skirt is made of the tartan, but the short basque coat is composed generally of black velvet with revers, and undersleeves of tartan to match the skirt.

Coarse wool embroidery is a stylish trimming for cloths of a hairy surface, and is very effective looking. Jet is also being revived in tringles, and is seen in knobs and buckles used in millinery.

Drop ornaments of every description trim dresses, mantles and millinery.

much worn. The tight-fitting coat with basques, sometimes has a belt and pouched front, which transforms it into a Russian blouse. Fancy and artistic buttons lend a pretty touch of color to boleros and coats.

Moleskin is in high favor for boleros and very small sacques. Macaroons with hanging tassels and military braiding are seen on many of the new coats, all of which have very full and wide sleeves. Fur coats vastly affect the bolero or the sacque shape, and to wear with them we have short sealskin and other skirts made rather narrow to save them from looking disproportionate.

A COMPLIMENT TO THE PRESIDENT.

Great Britain and Germany Request Him to Act as Arbitrator in Settling the Dispute with Venezuela--He Is Undecided.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Germany and Great Britain have united in requesting President Roosevelt to act as arbitrator in the Venezuelan controversy. It is believed that the president, although reluctantly, will accept the responsibility, if no other solution presents itself. President Roosevelt on Friday suggested to the governments at London and Berlin that the controversy be submitted to the international tribunal at The Hague. In reply to this suggestion the powers proposed that the president himself arbitrate the issues. The president has been assured that Germany and Great Britain are in perfect accord in their desire that he shall take charge of the whole matter.

Roosevelt Is Reluctant.

President Roosevelt does not wish to act as arbitrator in this dispute, for, as such, it is felt here, he would be at once judge, jury and constable, and would be under the moral obligation to execute his own judgment. The president feels that a reference to The Hague tribunal would vastly strengthen the cause of arbitration. Still, rather than see the present dispute proceed to extremes, it is probable the president will reluctantly assume the duties of arbitrator. It is fully realized that any decision rendered by him in that capacity would be sure to bring him the enmity of one or the other of the parties to the controversy, and this fact was pointed out to the president early in the week by a leading senator who had been called into consultation.

Has Not Decided.

Nevertheless, to prevent bloodshed and the destruction of property and interference with great commercial interests that would result in loss, it is believed that the president would assume the charge, providing his own view cannot prevail.

Public Men Anxious.

The situation is the cause of great anxiety to public men here, and there is good ground for the belief that if the president does consent to act as arbitrator it will be against the strongly expressed opinions of his secretary of state, John Hay. In reality the president practically agreed to act as arbitrator when he sent word to the European countries concerned saying that he was unwilling to act as arbitrator, but would do so if they insisted upon it. They have insisted upon it, and the understanding is that when the president returns to Washington he will be confronted with the actual necessity of redeeming the implied pledge he made Friday.

The anxiety which is felt here arises from the belief that if the president assumes to act as arbitrator he will be forced to provide a means of executing his own decree.

An Awkward Responsibility.

From the tone of the dispatches received by diplomats here it seems probable that Great Britain and Germany have announced that they will withdraw their forces and abandon their alleged peaceful blockade provided President Roosevelt consents to act as arbitrator. If he does not consent, they say there will be nothing left for them to do but to seize the custom houses and administer the revenues for their own benefit. This puts an awkward responsibility upon the president, because if he declines to act the disturbance of commerce with Venezuela continues indefinitely, and besides that there is always the possibility of a clash resulting in the loss of life.

A Diplomatic Blunder.

On the other hand, many of the president's warmest friends and admirers believe it would be a great diplomatic blunder for the United States to take a hand in the Venezuelan difficulty in any way except to prevent, by force if necessary, any violation of the Monroe doctrine.

It is pointed out—and the president will be bombarded with such statements—that he cannot fail to decide in favor of the European governments, only the amount of the actual claims being in dispute. President Castro has admitted that he owes the money, or some of it, but pleads that he is unable to pay on account of the drain of the recent revolution, which came dangerously near landing him outside the breast-works.

The real question at issue, therefore, is how and when Venezuela will be compelled to pay its just debts. President Roosevelt as an arbitrator would have to decide this question. Whatever his decision may be, Venezuela would certainly plead inability to comply with the mandate of the court, and thereupon the president would be forced to issue an execution of an international character and send Dewey or some other naval constable down to serve the papers.

Might Lead to Protectorate.

Members of the cabinet, who are opposed to the president acting as arbitrator, say that if he does consent, he will sooner or later be forced to do the thing which Great Britain and Germany are now doing, which is to seize the only available revenue of the country. This would mean, it is feared, a protectorate, either temporary or permanent. Many conservative men look upon this contingency, as one to be avoided.

Acceptable to Castro.

Caracas, Dec. 22.—In the name of Venezuela President Castro has signified acceptance of President Roosevelt to arbitrate the Venezuelan difficulty.

Selected After Consultation.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—The semi-official statement made Saturday night says: "The invitation to President Roosevelt to act as arbitrator was made after a thorough consultation between Germany and Great Britain. An understanding has been reached by the two powers on the reservations attached to the offer and the German note will agree with the English note on all essential points."

Blockade in Effect.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 22.—The blockade of Venezuelan ports was begun with an effective force at midnight Saturday night. The British have the cruisers Indefatigable, Alert and Tribune, the special service steamer Columbine and the torpedo boat destroyer Rocket along the coast. The cruiser Ariadne, the flagship of Vice Admiral Douglas, is here and will remain here. All the British operations will be directed from Trinidad.

The cruiser Vineta, the German flagship, left here Sunday morning for LaGuayra to reinforce the German cruisers Gazelle, Panther and Falke and the training ship Stosch. The Charlotte, another training ship, has left here for St. Lucia, her presence on the blockade apparently being unnecessary.

It is reported here that Mr. Haggard, British minister to Venezuela, has said that Great Britain acted only after great provocation and that the whole world must approve of what she did. The climax to Anglo-Venezuelan relations was reached when a Venezuelan gunboat captured a British merchantman on the high seas, shipped her crew and valuables and landed them at Margarita island. Then Great Britain determined to act. Mr. Haggard and the German representative, Herr von Pilgrim-Baltazzi, are said to have left Caracas secretly in the fear that they might be held as hostages by President Castro.

Broke His Neck.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 22.—A Detroit United railroad construction car was struck at the Dearborn street crossing in the western suburbs of this city by the Pierre Marquette passenger train, which left for Saginaw at two a. m. Sunday, and Otto C. Deringer, 23 years old, a trolleyman in the employ of the street railway company, had his neck broken and died a few minutes after the collision.

Died of His Injuries.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 22.—In a quarrel over a crap game in a gambling room Saturday night Kennon J. Newlin assaulted Walter Grossman, crushing his head with a cushion. Grossman died at St. Anthony's hospital at six o'clock Sunday morning. Newlin escaped before the officers reached the gambling room and has not been apprehended.

Church Gets $20,000,000.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 22.—Rev. E. M. Mills, corresponding secretary of the Methodist Episcopal church, is completing his final report here, and Dr. Mills says that every dollar of the $20,000,000 called for three years ago has been raised in cash and pledges. More than $500,000 for educational purposes has been received within 45 days.

There are plenty of people who have become depressed and discouraged, because that dry, hacking cough hangs to them continually. They have taken much medicine, mostly of the advertised quack sort, nothing like Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, the discovery of a noted German physician. We do not say that this will cure a case where the lungs are badly diseased, for it will not, and up to this date, there is nothing that will cure under these conditions; but on the other hand, if the lungs are not hard hit, the patient should take Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Breast Tea, a cup full every night on going to bed, have it hot, drink slowly, then every other night, rub the throat and top portion of the lungs with St. Jacobs Oil, cover with oil silk, let it remain an hour, then remove. Eat good, plain, nourishing food, live in the open air as much as possible. By all means sleep as near out of doors as possible, that is, windows wide open, except in the very severe weather. Take a cold sponge bath every morning; then immediately rub the body vigorously with a coarse towel. Take Dr. August Koenig's Hamburg Drops every other day according to directions. One can buy the three remedies for $1.25 of any reliable druggist. Begin the treatment at once, and see how much better you will be almost within a week's time.

'I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, and in the end I was cured by it. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health.'—Miss ALICE BAILEY, 50 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. The genuine article may be bought anywhere of all reliable druggists at fifty cents per bottle. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. If you have transgressed against the laws of nature, you must suffer. Self abuse, later excesses and private diseases have wrecked thousands of promising lives. Treat with scientific physicians and be cured. Avoid quacks. E. A. Sidney, of Toledo, says: "At the age of 14, I learned a bad habit and at 19 contracted a serious disease. I had given promise to cure me. They got my money and I still had the disease. I had given up hope when a friend advised me to consult Drs. K. & K., who had cured me or no pay. After taking the New Method Treatment for six weeks I felt like a new man. The drains ceased, wormy veins disappeared, nerves grew stronger, hair man. The drains ceased, wormy veins disappeared, nerves grew stronger, hair man. The drains ceased, wormy veins disappeared, nerves grew stronger, hair man."
