EASTERN MICHIGAN PRESS CLUB

Met at Lansing Monday and Tuesday—A Very Enjoyable Outing.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Hoover attended the meeting of the Eastern Michigan Press Club at Lansing the first of the week. The company met in Detroit, and through the courtesy of H. F. Moeller, general passenger agent of the Pere Marquette Railroad, made the trip to Lansing in a special car. There were nearly fifty in the party and every arrangement had been made for their comfort, and all were loud in their praise of the perfect service and of the manner in which they were treated.

At the capital city the party attended an evening session of the legislature, and witnessed an exhibition of wind jamming, such as is rarely found outside of such places. After adjournment, Secretary of State Warner invited the party to his office, where he cut one of his incomparable cheese, and with various other edibles started to fill up the entire party.

Tuesday forenoon the party visited the industrial school for boys. This institution was a revelation to nearly all of the crowd, and much surprise was expressed at the work being done by Supt. St. John, his excellent wife, and their efficient corps of assistants.

At this place everyone was given an opportunity to witness the workings of the institution, and all expressed their admiration for the manner in which the boys are treated. Here every effort is put forth to make useful and upright citizens of the boys. At this place the party was entertained at dinner, a very elaborate menu having been prepared. The school choir rendered a number of songs in a first-class manner, which elicited much applause, as also did the school band.

From here the party went to the Agricultural College, which was pretty thoroughly covered by the party. Here luncheon was served, after which all returned to the city, and in a short time the members were making their way home. This was one of the most interesting and instructive meetings ever held by the club.

Peat in Michigan.

The annual report of State Geologist Lane, which is now in the hands of the printer, has the following to say on the subject of peat in Michigan:

"There has been a great wealth of peat in the state, but it has in places been destroyed by fire and by drainage. When fire gets into one of the peat bogs it will, as is well known, linger for a long time. Many of the peat deposits occupy the beds of filled or practically filled lakes. If one takes a map of the state and notices where lakes are abundant, one will also outline the areas most rich in peat. Channels of old ice drainage, like the Chandler swamp, Pine lake and Old Maid swamps, near Lansing, and others near Charlotte and Chelsea, frequently contain large deposits of peat, but it may also occur behind ridges of sand or gravel at the head of bays cut off from the lake. Not only is this true for the present shore line, especially south of the line from Port Huron to Frankfort, but also peat deposits are found back of ridges which were formed when the lake stood at a higher level.

"Originally peat was cut into blocks with a spade and laid out to dry in the sun, before being carted away to be burned, but the interest in peat at present is with a view of compressing it and drying it, so as to make an article of fuel much superior to the uncompressed peat, or even to go further and by distillation produce coke or gas with the byproducts, sulphuric acid, ammoniac, acetates of lime, wood alcohol and tar. Peat has often been used for packing nursery stock, and paper can be made from the fibrous kinds.

"Areas of peat to be worth considering for factory purposes should according to circulars, be equivalent to not less than 200 acres, six feet thick. This would mean 200 tons per acre per foot, only 2,400,000 tons, which at only 10 tons a day output would mean a seven year life for the plant.

"One ton of peat is said to be equal to one cord of four-foot red maple wood. The price at which it is retailed at the factory varies from $3.50 to $4.50 a ton.

"Peat factories have been planned for location near Capac and at Chelsea. The former is, I believe, nearly finished."

Amusements.

Quinlan & Wall's Imperial Minstrels one of the largest and most expensive organizations of this character in the world will be seen at the Athens Theatre Ann Arbor on Monday evening January 20th. This company is headed by those Chester-Helds of Modern Minstrels Dan Quinlan and Jimmy Wall. The beautiful spectacular first part, "A Reception of the Diplomatic Legion," is the invention of Mr. Quinlan and was staged under his personal direction. The vaudeville numbers are all recent European importations and are said to contain some of the highest salaried acts before the public.

The engagement of this splendid organization so near home is of considerable importance to Chelsea theatre goers from the fact that all of the musical numbers are under the personal direction of Mr. Wm. H. Freer of Chelsea.

The sale of seats will open at the postal telegraph office at Ann Arbor on Saturday morning, January 24th. Chelsea people should turn out en masse and give Mr. Freer a hearty reception.

Paralysis of the Heart.

Michael Looney of Chelsea, died at the Grand Rapids police headquarters at 11 o'clock Saturday morning, from paralysis of the heart. Looney was found on the sidewalk and was carried into the blacksmith shop of Owen Stephenson. The police ambulance was called for, and on the way to the hospital, where the attendants first intended to take Looney, he recovered sufficiently to warrant his being taken to police headquarters to recover.

Looney told the officers that he was from Chelsea and that he lived with a brother-in-law named O'Connor on a farm three miles west of that place. His talk was rambling and he appeared to be under the impression that he was still at Chelsea. He said he was 45 years of age. At police headquarters Looney walked around in the lower corridor and the turnkey's office. A physician was called by Turnkey Doherty shortly after this when the patient appeared to get worse and then a hurry call was sent to Dr. Moffat. While the turnkey was at the telephone Looney sat down in a chair in the office and appeared to be suffering intensely. Balliff Leishman of the police court, who was alone with the man, did all he could to relieve him, but Looney died before the turnkey returned or before Dr. Moffat reached headquarters.

The remains were taken in charge by Coroner LeRoy and from papers found in the man's pocket the name and residence which Looney gave to Officer Sturges in the ambulance were confirmed. The man seems to have been in poor health for some time, as several receipts were found in his pockets for medical assistance rendered him by Dr. Schmidt of Chelsea. A bottle of medicine procured from a local drug store on a prescription from Groner were also found in his pocket.

He leaves three sisters and two brothers, Mrs. J. W. O'Connor of Chelsea, Miss Belle Looney of Grand Rapids, Miss Lizzie Looney of Detroit, John and Arthur Looney of Chelsea.

The obsequies was held from St. Mary's church Tuesday morning, Rev. Fr. Considine officiating. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery, Sylvan.

TO RIVAL STEAM RAILWAY

Expected to Be Completed in Six Weeks—Schedule of Hour and 20 Minutes.

Detroit Tribune: Cold weather has stopped work on the roadbed of the Jackson & Battle Creek Traction Co. near Bath Mills. A gravel pit, steam shovel and a steam dirt train are expected to make a roadbed out of a mile stretch where there is no dirt of solidity. It will be the middle of April, say the officers of the company, before the road can be opened.

In the last few days the Jackson & Battle Creek Traction Co. has given an order for seven suburban cars to the Kuhlman Car Co., of Cleveland. Five of the cars are a combination passenger and baggage and two are express cars. The combination cars will be used for the local business.

Cars like the one exhibited at the electric car exhibition at Detroit by the Jackson & Suburban Traction Co., will be put on the run between Jackson and Battle Creek as fast limited cars. They will be geared to run better than a mile a minute, and the company expects to run cars as fast as the Michigan Central between these two points.

In the starting schedule of the electric line, which is necessarily slower than the speed expected to be attained, the time for the limited cars between Jackson and Battle Creek, a distance of 45 miles, is one hour and 20 minutes, including stops at Parma, Albion and Marshall.

The Michigan Central's fastest train, No. 17, which does not stop between Jackson and Battle Creek at all, is scheduled to make the run in one hour and three minutes, while train No. 10, a fast through train, is scheduled to make the run in one hour and 18 minutes, and make one less stop than the proposed electric run. The electric people feel that with their excellent equipment and smooth, fine roadbed, they will have no difficulty in making the time considerably better than even one hour and 20 minutes.

With favorable weather, six weeks work would put the line in fine shape to run. The company has water electric power plants at Allegan and Plainwell, and has now started to build a dam and a 3,000-horse power plant at Osago, Mich. Substations will be built at Jackson, Parma, Albion, Marshall and Battle Creek.

Government Doesn't Furnish Boxes.

An erroneous statement has been disseminated through some of the newspapers of the country that the postoffice department had decided to furnish boxes for rural free delivery service is causing much embarrassment on the establishment of new rural free delivery routes. The fact is that though numerous suggestions have been made by the department and in congress for the furnishing rural boxes at cost, no action of the kind indicated has been authorized. The patrons of rural free delivery service are requested as heretofore to supply their own boxes from lists approved by the department, these boxes then coming under protection of United States statutes in regard to the safe delivery of mail.

Cutting a Ray.

Julius Loecke, the man who slashed his wife across the forehead and then jabbed the knife into his own abdomen, Saturday night, is at the University hospital and is being guarded by deputy Sheriff Kelsey to prevent any attempt at escape. His wound is not as serious as was at first supposed, and he will live.

Mr. and Mrs. Loecke each charged the other with intoxication. They have several children and the oldest boy is 14 years old. Saturday night Mrs. Loecke went up town and bought some cakes and candy for a birthday present for the son. Upon her return they had some words. Loecke was paring an apple with a large knife.

"She made me so mad that I cut her," he acknowledged Sunday.

The children say that after Loecke had slashed his wife he went towards the door and after looking around and seeing what he had done, he unbuckled his vest and plunged the knife into his stomach.

are overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Menard cured after doctors failed to help her.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me after doctors had failed, and I want other girls to know about it. During menstruation I suffered most intense pain low in the abdomen and in my limbs. At other times I had a heavy, depressed feeling which made my work seem twice as hard, and I grew pale and thin. The medicine the doctor gave me did not do me one bit of good, and I was thoroughly discouraged. The doctor wanted me to stop work, but of course, I could not do that. I finally began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and felt better after taking the first bottle, and after taking six bottles I was entirely cured, and am now in perfect health, and I am so grateful for it." — Miss GEORGE MENARD, 637 E. 152nd St., New York City.

MICHIGAN LEGISLATURE.

The Legislative Junket.

If Speaker Carlton of the house has his way the annual junket of the legislators to the various state institutions will come off at once instead of after Feb. 1 as usual. The reason he assigns for favoring the early junket is that the house will the sooner get down to the business of legislation after the junket is out of the way. Setting the junket earlier than usual will have several results somewhat disconcerting to the officials most interested. For one thing, the state institution officials will not have the usual notification of the visit. This will probably result in the conditions being more nearly normal when inspected by the legislators and there will be less time for the preparation of the elaborate entertainment that has been given the junketers in the past. This is in line with the idea expressed by Speaker Carlton in his address to the house at its opening that the visits be conducted by the legislators after the methods they would employ in going about their private business. Then, too, it may serve to free the legislators of the embarrassment of accepting the lavish hospitality of the railroads which in time past have taken weeks to prepare for the junket that the comforts and pleasure of the legislators might be better conserved. All in all the yearly junket, if it goes through, is generally expected to aid materially in making the annual visit a purely business trip such as is desired by the leaders in the house.

The first bill to pass the house of representatives in the session of 1903, changed the name of the lake district in Muskegon county to Lake Sapphires.

The first session after a crop of bills that were placed on their first readings. Standish, Arenac county, wants power to borrow, purchase or erect an electric light plant and water works; Rep. Randall noticed a bill to exempt from assessment and taxation land contracts, deeds of trust, mortgages, promissory notes and all agreements to pay money excepting bank notes circulating as money.

Congressman J. W. Fordney petitioned the house to consider a change in the general tax law to provide for the notification by registered mail of the owner of property about to be sold for unpaid taxes. The notification at present is made by publication only and Congressman Fordney hopes that by the proposed change many homes will be saved to careless owners.

There are five primary election reform bills to be considered by the legislature. The foremost of these is that of Representative Colby, of Wayne. The next most interesting, probably, is that of a Democratic member, Representative Powell, of Constantine. Representative Powell is heartily in accord with the plan proposed by Representative Colby. However, he will introduce his own bill in the hope that it will contain some suggestions that will improve the measure of the member from Wayne.

Representative Kirk, of Caro, introduced a concurrent resolution in the house on Thursday against reciprocity with Cuba, aimed to strengthen the opposition of the Michigan delegation in congress to it. The whereas portion of the matter is devoted to the growth and the importance of the sugar industry to Michigan, and the resolution reads:

Resolved, by the house of representatives, that we heartily endorse the attitude of senators and representatives in congress in connection with their opposition to the so-called Cuban reciprocity treaty, and they are hereby requested to use their best endeavors to defeat such legislation or other action whose tendency would cripple, embarrass and discourage the home production of sugar sufficient for the entire population of the United States.

Mr. Powell introduced a bill which provides that any person who assassinates a president, vice-president or cabinet officer of the United States shall be electrocuted in Jackson prison. Mr. Randall, of Oceana, introduced a bill providing that mortgages, notes, etc., shall be exempt from taxation. It was referred to the committee on taxation.

At a cakewalk at East Chester, N. Y., Thomas Evans, a big artilleryman from Fort Slocum, appeared on the floor, flourishing a knife, and inviting a fight. In the melee which followed Evans was stabbed in the stomach with a baton. Wm. Smith had an ear cut off and an unknown was badly cut.

PREVENTS SMALLPOX.

Alabastine will not cure smallpox and other contagious diseases, once they have fastened their deadly grip upon their victims. It will do much, however, toward preventing their spread.

It is a well recognized fact that certain wall coatings do much to harbor disease germs and propagate same; that of all coverings wall paper is the most likely to hold the germs of disease for months and years.

There are well authenticated cases where smallpox, scarlet fever and other germs have lain dormant for years, and have attacked persons afterward when the paper was removed.

Kalsomines stuck on the wall with decaying glue are not much better than wall paper with its vegetable paste.

Alabastine is recommended generally by sanitarians, as a coating for walls in any style of work, as it is perfectly sanitary, is in the nature of a disinfectant, presents a perfectly hard surface, is manufactured from a cement base, and does not furnish a lodgment ground for disease germs.

Years ago these matters received but little attention, but modern scientists becoming appalled at the spread of the dread disease, smallpox, and the difficulty in stamping it out, have gone to investigating causes, and unhesitatingly say that improper wall coatings have very much to do with this.

Alabastine is recommended to be used on all infected walls, to destroy germs and to get walls once more in a healthy condition.

GOES TO DEFINE BOUNDARIES.

English Officer to Fix Frontier Between Chile and Argentina.

Sir Thomas Hallidie leaves England within the next few days on his mission to lay down the new frontier between Chile and the Argentine Republic. It is not a light task, but Sir Thomas already knows something of the Andes, and he has probably had more experience in mapping out boundaries than any man living. Much of his work has been on the frontiers of India, which he knows as intimately as we know our London streets.

He has written a book called the "Indian Borderland," and if ever he gives us his reminiscences they should be full of agreeable accounts of travel. He was serving in India nearly forty years ago as a young officer of the Royal Engineers. The Abyssinian campaign took him to another continent, but the Afghan war took him back to the regions which he has done so much to make plain on maps. Sir Thomas is within sight of sixty, but a grand tour of mountainous South America has no terrors for him. He and his staff of engineers expect to be away several months.—London Chronicle.

THE HORNS OF A DILEMMA.

Gastronomic Problem That Puzzled Israel Zangwill.

When Israel Zangwill last visited America he was very hospitably entertained in Buffalo. At one dinner given in his honor things went along beautifully, with few evidences of Zangwillian eccentricities until coffee and cream were served. Then, as the hostess gave the signal, all the guests began to eat except Mr. Zangwill. Rather embarrassed, the hostess inquired politely if anything was wrong.

"No," said Mr. Zangwill, thoughtfully, "only I was thinking if I eat my ice cream first, my coffee will get cold, but if I drink my coffee first my ice cream will get warm."

How He Made Votes.

Wallace Muir of Lexington, Ky., has invented a new way of electioneering. He is a candidate for city attorney, and several other young men are after the place, making it a close race. Seeing some linemen patching up wires on a telegraph pole he stopped to canvass them, but was told they had no time to talk politics, especially at such long range. Mr. Muir, who was once a fireman, climbed up the pole and took a seat on the arm with them. This "caught" the linemen, all of whom promised to vote for him.

A Woman Brigand.

A story likely to be exploited by the American "yellows" comes from Vienna to the effect that a band of brigands now operating in the central provinces of Russia is led by a woman, young, beautiful, a perfect rider, a dead shot, and dressed, even when she leads the attack in person, in the "height of fashion." The brief dispatch, however, is silent as to details of the lady's clothes or how she wears her hair or whether she manicures or not.

Babcock Favors Pact.

A PASTOR WHO WAS REFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Rev. H. Stubbenvoll, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stubbenvoll is the possessor of two bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUBBENVOLL.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

WESTERN CANADA GRAIN GROWING, MIXED FARMING.

The Reason Why more wheat is grown in Western Canada is a few short months than elsewhere, is because vegetation grows in proportion to the sunlight. The more northerly latitude in which grain will come to perfection, the better it is. Therefore 60 lbs. per bushel is as fair a standard as 50 lbs. in the East. Area under crops in Western Canada, 1902, 1,967,330 Acres. Yield, 1902, 117,929,748 Bushels. AN ABBREVIATED SNOWSTORM

Blind Man in the Play Objected to Hamlets and Other Hardware Among the Flakes.

"Mechanical devices are now made wonderfully real on the stage," said the old stock actor, according to the Philadelphia Record. "It hasn't been so many years ago since even the simple device of depicting a snowstorm was regarded an achievement."

I remember on one occasion I was but with a "ten, twenty and thirty" company playing repertoire, and in one melodrama—I don't even now recall the name, for it was a pirated play—I took the part of an old man whose daughter, the heroine, had been abducted. I was supposed to be blind, and my strong scene was the third act, when I went out into a snowstorm in search of my daughter.

She was lying in a drift, and as I hobbled across the stage I kept crying: "My child! where is my child?"

"Well, it was early in the season, and the play was the first attraction at that theater. The scene painters had been at work, and had dropped several paint brushes, hammers and other articles into the sheet that held the snowstorm. As the stage hands in the flies shook the sheets to make the snow come out a couple of hammers came down and just missed me by an inch. I was blind, and didn't dare to look up, but when a monkey wrench just grazed my temple I had presence of mind enough to yell: "See yonder moon! The storm is over!"

The stage hands took their cue and let up on me, and the audience never stopped to question how a blind man could see yonder moon."

BEAUTIFUL TROPICAL FISHES.

Many Fine Specimens Gathered in the Bermudas for the Aquariums of All Lands.

The collection of tropical fishes for various aquariums throughout the world, and especially for the American aquariums, is now a recognized industry in the Bermudas, says the Philadelphia Press.

It is carried on at all seasons, though for obvious reasons the fish are shipped north only in the summer months. As there are more than 150 varieties of fish in Bermudan waters, and every variety is found in abundance, it is not a difficult problem to secure good specimens. Only a few varieties reach this country, for the reason that tropical fish, as a rule, are unable to stand the trials of transportation. The ones on exhibition are the finest that can be caught.

The native fishermen go far and wide in search of specimens, for the aquarium will pay only for the best. Possibly the most voracious fish they have to deal with are the groupers and morays. The groupers have peculiar habits. During the month of June, which is their spawning or "snapping" season, they gather at two spots on the south coast, known as "grouper grounds," and rarely are caught elsewhere.

Not many tropical fish are as ferocious as the moray, but most of the larger varieties are truly sporting fish.

WORKING IN THE DARK.

Discomforts of Mining Before the Invention of a Lamp Suitable for Underground Use.

The difficulties under which coal mining operations were carried on before the scientist Davy had invented his safety lamp must have been very great. In many mines the only alternative the medieval miner had to pitch darkness was the phosphorescent gleam from dried fish. The miner's implements, originally of stone or hard oak, gradually improved; but he was forced to work in almost complete darkness until Sir Humphrey Davy by his remarkable invention enabled him to light his way through the tunnels he had excavated with comparative safety, says a mining journal.

Agricultural, an author who wrote about the middle of the sixteenth century, has left an elaborate treatise on coal mining as it was practiced during the middle ages. From this we learn that the horsergin, which survives to the present day in some of the mining districts of Great Britain and northern Europe, was the engine chiefly employed both for lifting the coal and for getting rid of the water. This latter object was also sometimes effected by means of pumps turned by windmills or by tunnels driven with great labor to an outlet at a lower level.

AUTOCARS IN ENGLAND.

There Is a Strict Enforcement of the Law to Make Owners Regardful of Others.

In one respect, at least, the persecution of the automobilists is indirectly serving a useful purpose, reports London Truth. The majority of the victims belong to a class which has hitherto had little sympathy with the discontent of humbler folks at the quality of justices' justice. Now that the wealthy motorist is coming into personal contact with this kind of justice, he is beginning to revise his opinions. He sees that policemen are capable of making grievous mistakes, and even deliberate misstatements, and that magistrates often exhibit the grossest incompetence and allow their judgments to be swayed by the most stupid prejudices.

It then occurs to the motorist that pouchers and other delinquents may sometimes have equally good cause to complain of police evidence and magisterial bias, and so he comes finally to the conclusion that the administration of the law by the Great Unpaid is, after all, not undeserving of the contumely that has so long been poured upon it.

LINES IN MAPLEWOOD.

The Only Way to Find the Bird's-Eye Is to Cut Into the Tree.

Nobody seems to know what cause it is which produces those delicate and beautiful lines in maple, known as bird's-eye. Some people think they come from the hundreds of little branches which shoot out over the trunk of the tree as soon as a clearing is made around it. Expert timbermen say that is not the case. The only way to tell a bird's-eye maple tree is to cut it. There are no outward signs by which one can judge. The Railroad Gazette tells a story of the late George M. Pullman. Many years ago he was offered a mahogany log for $3,000, to be cut into veneers. It was supposed to be a very fine piece of wood, but this could only be determined by cutting it. He declined the offer, but agreed to take the log out into veneers for what it was worth. The owner had it sawed and was paid $7,000 for his veneers. Anyone who can discover the secret of determining the interior nature of wood from the outside will have a fortune.

Feast on Butterflies.

Millions of butterflies are eaten every year by the Australian aborigines. The insects congregate in vast quantities on the rocks of the Bogong mountains, and the natives secure them by kindling fires of damp wood, and thus suffocating them. Then they are gathered in baskets, baked, skinned to remove the wings, and finally pressed into cakes.

SOAP IN THE GINGERBREAD.

A Product of the Maine Forest Which Is Regarded by the Lumbermen as Very Good.

"Did ye ever eat hot gingerbread with soap in it?" asked Frank Brown, the oldest camp cook on the West Branch, who, according to the New York Sun, boasts that he has made more than 2,000 barrels of flour into cream of tartar bread in the course of 35 winters in the forest. "Ef ye hain't e't it, you don't know what's good."

"Why, a lumberman would no more think of eating gingerbread without soap into it than he would think of drinking new rum without molasses. They always go together—soap into the gingerbread and molasses into the rum, and both are just about as good as is made."

"My rule is to dissolve a hunk of hard soap as big as a hen's egg in a gallon of water, then pour in a gallon of molasses, a half pound of baking powder and stir in the flour until the dough will almost run. Then grease yer pans, slap in the mixture and chuck it into a red-hot oven."

"When it comes out all golden brown and full of sweet bubbles that smoke when you break them open—the man who won't eat such food isn't fit to live or die."

"You can't tell me that soap gingerbread ain't fit to eat. I've eat it more than 25 years, and I'm just as sound to-day as I was when I first tasted the food."

INCREASE IN SUICIDES.

Figures Collected by an Insurance Company Prove That Self-Murder Grows More Common.

In the Spectator, an insurance journal, the statistics of an insurance company give an analysis of the suicide record for the year 1901. His figures are taken from 50 cities, and show an average slight increase over the ratio for the preceding decade of nearly one per cent, from 15.7 to 16.6 per 100,000 population. He estimates an approximate annual mortality by suicide of 10,000 in the country as a whole. The implied conclusion is that a further increase in the rate of suicidal tendency in the cities of this country may be expected during the next decade, and the suicide question, like arson in fire insurance, is thus becoming more and more one of the utmost importance to life insurance companies.

He also gives another table showing the experience of one company for the last 55 years, dividing it into two periods, including males only, as the female suicide statistics are too insignificant to be tabulated. This shows a percentage of suicides in the total mortality of 2.4 in the later as compared with 1.9 in the earlier period. The age of suicides seems also to have lessened, as the suicides under 45 increased from 2.1 per cent. to 3.9 per cent in the later period, and there was an actual decrease of those in advanced life.

OUR SHOES IN MEXICO.

They Are Much Liked by the Natives, But the Prices Are Excessively High.

According to United States Consul Canada at Vera Cruz, trade conditions in that part of Mexico have undergone a great change within the past ten years, especially with respect to American shoes. In former years it was impossible to buy anything in Vera Cruz in the line of shoe leather except that of native stock and manufacture, and ready-made shoes for Americans were not to be had at all.

United States shoes have, however, within a very short time made a name for themselves, and the consul says, were it not for the excessively high prices asked for them they would surely drive all others out of the market. As it is, however, he adds, only the better classes can enjoy the luxury of our shoes, and the great mass of the people is debarred from that privilege. The principal obstacle to a heavier business is the high import duty and the fluctuations in the value of silver. The duty on the cheapest shoes is the same as on the finest productions.

GAVE A LARGE REWARD.

So Thought the Bestower and the Young Hero Who Received the Money.

"The following story will illustrate a number of things," said the Detroit ship owner who narrated it, "but chiefly will it show how the value of money varies with the supply."

"A boy was telling me of his prowess as a swimmer. He could dive, too."

"Once," said he, "I dived down to the bottom of the river and pulled a little boy out."

"Bravo!" said I.

"An' I tell you," he continued, "his pa was glad! He give me a dollar-an'-a-quarter."

"Both the father and the hero live in a neighborhood the occupants of which are sometimes known as 'wharf rats'—the neighborhood or the docks. I have no doubt," concluded the ship owner, according to the Detroit Free Press, "that the dollar-and-a-quarter was as large to the man as to the boy."

Imprisoned for Yawning.

A Japanese M. P., Mr. Tanka by name, has been sentenced to 15 days' confinement and a fine of ten shillings for yawning in parliament. The crown prosecutor maintained that in an assembly where order has to be maintained, even an act of a physiological nature should be controlled. As the defendant, however, had yawned in order to annoy the government, the defense was even more punishable.

TATTOOING FOR HORSES.

Suggested as Better Than Branding as a Means of Identifying the Animals.

Owners of pure-bred registered animals are often bothered by the question of how best to mark them, to distinguish them in case they stray, and to establish their identity under any circumstances. The central expert tattooing in place of the more usual branding. The branding iron not only frequently leaves an unsightly and disfiguring scar, but it fails to serve every purpose, since it indicates the owner rather than particularly identifies the animal. The tag and button devices commonly used in the ear are usually a source of annoyance, due to the aptitude they display for attaching themselves to everything they may be brushed against.

Various live stock associations, says the Springfield Republican, have devised at one time and another more or less ingenious, and less or more satisfactory devices to insure identification, but nearly all are open to the objection that they fail in a short time to serve the end in view.

Little German Bands.

Where do the "Little German bands" come from? A writer in Blackwood's Magazine says: "Inhabitants of the northwest Palatinate generally are of a roving disposition. The shoelathers of Pirmasens, the brush dealers of Romberg and the showmen and peddlers of Karlsruhe are to be met with all over the valley of the Rhine. But these must yield the palm in numbers and enterprise to the muskanten, of the Hartz mountains, who have made the whole world their own. They are not so often seen on the continent as they formerly were, but they go to England, the Cape, Australia, the states, Canada, Brazil, Argentina, and one band has ventured as far as Chili. I have known of only two bands that did not come from this district. The one was from Nassau, the other from Pforzheim, in Baden."

Honest New Zealanders.

The New Zealanders are universally honest. Nobody tries to steal from travelers. Hotel room doors are never locked; many have no locks. Hats, coats and valises are left around indiscriminately, and the owners always find their property where they put it. Neither does the waiter, nor the bell boy, nor the chambermaid hold up the traveler. They do everything asked of them, and do it cheerfully. As there are no indoor robbers, neither are there many highway robbers, and the percentage of murders is very small.

During the coal famine this winter many people are compelled to use soft coal and the following is the latest and easiest way of cleaning out the chimney. Place a sky rocket at the bottom of the chimney, after first wrapping some paper around the stick to act as a swab. Then light the fuse and in another minute the rocket has whizzed up the chimney and out, dislodging all the soot on its way. The soot will then all drop to the bottom. It has been tried with great success.—E

A nervous looking man went to a store the other day and sat down for half an hour or so, when a clerk asked if there was anything she could do for him. He said he didn't want anything. She went away, and he sat half an hour longer, when the proprietor went to him and asked if he wanted to be shown anything. "No," said the nervous man, "I just want to sit around. My physician has recommended perfect quiet for me, and says above all things I should avoid being in crowds. Nothing that you did not advertise in the newspaper, I thought that this would be as quiet a place as I could find, so I just dropped in for a few hours of isolation." The merchant picked up a bolt of paper cambric to bring him, but the man went out. He said all he wanted was a quiet life.—Ex.

The Kansas farmer who proposes to traffic himself and farm to marriageable women at twenty-five cents a "chance" is a true financier. If the scheme works, he'll get a wife and a pocketful of spending money—and still have the farm.

In several States the task of investigating unusual methods of insuring the lives of little children for the benefit of parents has been already begun, or is likely to be taken up soon. It would be impossible to set up too careful safeguards for the protection of the fledglings of the cradles.

Mr. Kruger, in his autobiography, was not much given to reminiscence, but he gives one story that will be appreciated. Speaking of his visit to Berlin in 1884, Oom Paul says: Bismarck had stumbled on the stairs of the palace and the old Emperor said jokingly: "Prince, you are growing old." "Yes, Majesty," replied Bismarck, "it's usually the case that the horse grows old before his rider."

A saltcellar of the spacious times of great Elizabeth has been sold at auction in London for the amazing sum of $15,000. Only a saltcellar! And there is no authentic proof that the lion hearted ruler of the England of Shakespeare and of Burleigh and the other men of high renown who lived in the latter part of the marvellous sixteenth century ever took salt from this small dish. If such a bit of tableware sells for $15,000, what would be a fair price for a genuine Elizabethan platter big enough to contain a baron of true British roast beef?

Cypress, according to Athenian advice, is in a state of destitution. Cypress recently arrived in Piræus, the port of Athens, state that bad harvests and exorbitant interest on loans have produced this result. In order to avoid the law regarding interest, the bonds which the villagers are required by the users to give are couched in such a way that no interest is mentioned. It being included in the amount for which a bond is given. The people are said to be charged as much as twenty or thirty per cent, on amounts advanced for periods not exceeding nine months.

The widow of General U. S. Grant has followed her distinguished husband to the grave. Mrs. Grant, in her married life of more than half a century, saw many strange vicissitudes of fortune, but in poverty and distinction alike she bore herself with dignity and discretion, and graced every position she filled, whether as the wife of the struggling farmer, teamster and tanner, or as the lady of the White House. She reflected credit on American womanhood, and will long be remembered with respect by all who honor the name of Ulysses Simpson Grant.

English papers inform us that a recent celebrated criminal case has given to the criminal classes of England a new word, one which is likely to be taken up by others. Mrs. Penruddocke, the wife of a county magistrate, was accused and convicted of shocking cruelty toward her little daughter. The case has excited intense interest in England not only because of the prominence of the woman but because she got off with a fine of $250, which for her was merely nominal punishment. Now when a prisoner gets off with an unexpectedly light sentence or fine he remarks that he has received a Penruddocke. The name may take its place in our language like those of Captain Boycott and Mr. Bowdler.

In view of the disposition of so many young persons in the rural districts and the smaller cities to settle in the larger ones, the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture that about 40,000,000, or more than half the people of the United States, live on its farm lands, has no doubt taken the country by surprise. The fact, however, is stated on the authority of the Twelfth Census reports, and is therefore accepted without question; and in view of the other undeniable fact that the prosperity of the country depends chiefly on its agricultural products and capacities, which are without a rival in the world, the statement causes general satisfaction. The sources of the Nation's wealth are in the cultivatable land, as is manifest from the fact that, without reckoning in the animal and the cereal products consumed at home, the amount of such products sent abroad has averaged for many years about twenty per cent. of the entire export value of the country.

THE NEWS OF MICHIGAN.

A Tax Change.

When the next tax roll is spread in Wayne county the immense fortune left by the late David Whitney, together with a number of other million dollar estates, may be taxed in the city of Detroit instead of Grosse Pointe or other suburbs. This will be the undoubted effect of a most innocent appearing bill for the amendment to the general tax law presented by Representative Denby, of Detroit, in the house to-day.

The bill contemplates the insertion of two words, "trustees or agents," after the words, "executors or administrators," in paragraph 5 of section 3837 of the compiled laws. The present law provides for the taxation of estates controlled by executors or administrators in the last place of residence of the deceased. In a large number of cases the law has been evaded by placing the estate in the control of trustees or agents only. In the case of the Whitney estate, the taxes are paid in the White Pine township at a much lower rate than would be necessary in Detroit, where the deceased lived all his life and enjoyed the benefits of the city's fire and police protection, etc.

Prices Lower.

In the official monthly crop report Secretary of State Warner says the temperature for December was two degrees below the normal. The precipitation for the month was practically normal. Correspondents generally agree that but little damage has been done to wheat. The ground was fairly well covered with snow during the month and the crop thus protected.

The average condition of live stock in the state, compared with the condition in the state, is: Horses, cattle, sheep and swine, 96 per cent.

The prices of farm crops are lower than one year ago, the decline being as follows: Wheat, 12 cents; corn, 8 cents; oats, 15 cents per bushel; hay, 23 cents per ton. The prices of all kinds of live stock are higher than one year ago. Fat cattle and hogs are worth 25 cents more per hundredweight, while dressed pork is worth 63 cents per hundredweight less.

Hillsdale County Will Be "Wet."

Because they neglected to make sure they were right before they went ahead, the temperance people of Hillsdale county are up against it. They were desirous of having the local option proposition submitted to the voters at the spring election, and circulated petitions on the understanding that signatures equal in number to one-third of the vote polled by the successful candidate for governor at the last election were required. When this number was reached, they stopped canvassing, only to find when it was too late that the number of signatures required is one-third of the total vote for all candidates for governor. Consequently the people of Hillsdale county will be able to take their drinks in saloons instead of drug stores for another year at least.

Must Pay the Fee.

The Sanitary Food Co. is a concern holding a charter under the laws of South Dakota, but with headquarters and a factory at Benton Harbor. It is capitalized at $300,000, but tried to file its articles with Secretary of State Warner at Lansing, and pay its franchise fee on $50,000, claiming that it should pay only on the actual property it owned in this state. Secretary Warner took a different view of the matter, however, and the company will have to pay a franchise fee on its entire capitalization of $300,000 if it wants to do business in Michigan.

Terrible Explosion in Greenville.

One of the most terrible accidents ever recorded in Greenville occurred Saturday morning when one of two boilers in the engine room of the Ranney refrigerator factory exploded, totally wrecking the engine room and both boilers and engine.

Added to the horror of the disaster the wreckage caught fire, and when the flames in a pile of slabs in a corner of the fire room were extinguished, the remains of the fireman, Ira Stanton, were discovered where he was thrown by the force of the explosion. The man's face and body were literally cooked by the hot water and steam.

Engineer Price was found a few minutes later under a pile of brick, every bone in his body being broken, and half a brick driven into his skull. Mr. Price leaves a wife and daughter, Stanton, a wife.

Edward Hammond, a machinist in the third story, had an arm and three ribs broken by flying brick.

Correspondents report the mercury from 12 to 20 degrees below zero, the roads blocked by immense drifts, and business and travel suspended. North of the center of the state, apparently, the storm and weather has been less severe.

Charles Yietter, while sawing wood on a power saw near Alto, let his hand get too close to the saw and the thumb and three fingers were cut off. He picked them up in the other hand and hustled to a physician, who sewed them back in their original places and told Yietter he probably would not lose the use of them, thanks to his prompt action.

Land Commissioner Wilder has had prepared bills empowering the commissioner to lease state swamp, state tax and tax homestead lands under such regulations as the state board of control of swamp lands may direct, and to lease agricultural college lands in a manner decided by the state board of agriculture; also to sell the timber on such lands under like conditions.

Frank Stout, the Huron county assessor, who has been missing since Dec. 28, has returned to his home. He cannot account for his actions, but it is said he went to Vassar and hired out to a farmer. After some days in his new employment he felt from a hay-mow and hurt his nose. This bid for a time, and his mind was suddenly restored.

Patrons of the Detroit, Plymouth & Northville electric cars, who last winter complained of cold cars, are now exposed to the opposite extreme. It is said the company now uses a live wire under the carpeting with which the seats are cushioned, and the heat is intense in proportion to the speed of the cars. When at full speed it is claimed the passengers prefer to stand.

Edward J. Eisbrenner, of Rogers City, has put himself up in a raffle, offering himself as a husband to the "lucky" woman who will draw the prize out of 1,000 chances at 25 cents per ticket. The restrictions are that she must be respectable, healthy, unincumbered and a Catholic, between 40 and 55 years of age. He is 35, has a son of 15 and an 80-acre farm.

Discussing the neat brimstones, which are to be made at the factory near Capac, in which he is interested, Prof. M. E. Cooley said that the cost of the product will probably be $1 to $1.50 a ton. Biquettes will not stand exposure to rain or wet snow. But they will stand at least several months if protected against the weather. They can be kept six months in stock.

Henry C. Hamill, the former Alpena man who was drowned while skating in Washington, D. C., Wednesday evening, was editor and proprietor of the Alpena Pioneer for 10 years previous to June, 1898, when he disposed of the plant. He served during the Spanish war as second lieutenant of Co. E, Thirty-fifth M. V. I. He had filled a position in the war department under Gen. Corbin since the close of the war. Mr. Hamill was 45 years old.

The pastor of a church at Metamora also preaches at Thorville and entertains his audience with appropriate selections on the phonograph. By this method the attendance has increased at a rapid rate. After the opening prayer at a recent service, a solo was given, when to the horror of the pastor and deacons, and the delight of the young people, the machine ground out a rag time coon song, instead of the "Holy City." The deacons consider it a very serious matter. The young people treat it as a joke.

A heavy snowstorm in Turkey has suspended telegraphic communication and the European train service.

The Mason County Medical Society wants the supervisors to establish a county hospital and the board has appointed a committee to look into the matter and report at the board's April meeting.

Owen Churchill, druggist of Three Oaks, is being sued by Henry Lowe for $2,000 because Lowe's nose was broken in a fight by Wm. Klute, Churchill, Lowe claims, sold Klute the liquor that made him fighting drunk.

Ambrose R. Crain, of Colon, said to be about to realize $100,000 from an industry which will utilize the result of years of experiment on his part, is an inmate of the county house at present.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD.

Mormon Smoot.

The Republican members of the legislature have chosen Reed Smoot, of Provo, as their nominee for United States senator to succeed Joseph L. Rawlins. The nomination is equivalent to an election.

Reed Smoot was born in Salt Lake City in January, 1862. He has been since 1888 a member of the council of 12 apostles of the Mormon church, and therefore is in direct line for the presidency of the church.

Previous to his candidacy for the United States senate he had never taken any important part in the political affairs of the state. Mr. Smoot served his church for nearly a year, during 1900-01, as a missionary in England, also visiting Belgium, Holland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy and France, in connection with the church work.

Mr. Smoot is interested in a number of important manufacturing and mining enterprises of the state and is considered wealthy. He was married in September, 1894, and has five children. He is a monogamist.

Seventy Thousand Starving.

Telegrams from Stockholm confirm the distressing accounts of the famine in northern Sweden. About 70,000 persons are affected by the famine. The starving people are eating pine bark, which is dried, ground to powder, mixed with stewed Iceland moss and made into a kind of famine bread. Coincided with the failure of crops is the extreme scarcity of fish.

The expenditure of about $6,300,000 will be necessary to save the population from decimation. Thus far about $200,000 has been subscribed, of which sum over $12,500 was sent by Sweden in the United States. This does not include the money necessary to save the breed of cattle, which alone can live through an Arctic winter, or supply seed for the spring sowings.

Finely chopped twigs of birch, willow and ash are being boiled and fed to the cattle, but the milk of the cattle thus fed is certain to spread typhoid fever. A repetition of the terrible famine of 1867 is threatened, when thousands died of starvation and typhoid.

Abram S. Hewitt Dead.

Abram S. Hewitt, former mayor of New York, and for many years representative in congress, died at 6 o'clock Sunday morning in his 81st year, having been critically ill for 10 days. With him at the moment of death were his wife, his three sons and three daughters. In 1845 he was admitted to the bar, but soon gave up his practice owing to a weakness of his eyes. He went into the iron business with Peter Cooper, and married the latter's daughter in 1855. He was elected to congress in 1874, and served, with the exception of one term, up to 1890, when he was elected mayor of New York city. He was chairman of the national Democratic committee in 1870.

Taft to Remain in Philippines.

Wm. H. Taft, who has won fame as a jurist on the United States Circuit Court bench, and whose great desire was to be to the United States Supreme Court, has sacrificed his ambition and has chosen instead to remain in the Philippines as governor of Uncle Sam's far east domain. To Judge Taft belongs the honor of having established civil government in the Philippines after two years of the stern rule of the sword and to him was given the further honor of being the first governor of the new nation. But at this time Gov. Taft has had all the glory from these honors and his further stay in the islands is clearly at a sacrifice of a notable career at home.

Confiscated Ten Cars of Coal.

About 200 citizens of Tuscola, Ill., confiscated ten carsloads of coal at the Illinois Central yards and it was distributed among the sufferers who are out of fuel. There is not a pound of coal in any of the coal yards, and when the people saw the loaded cars sidetracked here they determined to relieve the situation to some extent. Mayor Roberts threw no obstacle in the way and the board of health passed a resolution stating it was necessary for the preservation of the health of the people. Business men, bankers and prominent citizens joined in the raid, but the coal seized was paid for, a committee being appointed to collect the money and hold it for the railroad company.

Now Free Coal.

The president signed the bill suspending the duty on coal Thursday. The original bill reported from the house, coal to be placed on the free list for one year, passed the house by a vote of 238 to 5.

The senate passed the bill as soon as it was received from the house, with an amendment adding a section to prevent the imposition of a duty on anthracite coal after the expiration of the time provided for in the bill, granting a rebate on all coal.

The house concurred in the senate amendment to the coal bill, which passed the bill.

Thomas Whitman, of Hopkinsville, Ky., aged 13 years, shot and killed his young aunt, Miss May Phipps, as she was choking his mother.

Eight young persons coasting on a long sled at Scranton, Pa., were hurled striking a telegraph pole by the sled striking a smaller sled. All were seriously injured and three of them will probably die.

The Fuel Supply.

The Reading Railway claims cold weather reduced the number of cars of coal shipped last week.

The Reading Railroad has to have its trains guarded by policemen while in transit to prevent people suffering from fuel from taking coal.

President Mitchell, in addressing the coal commission Saturday, claimed that 3,000 miners are idle and there is a shortage of cars which restricts production.

Though Detroit has a municipal coal yard run by the mayor no coal was sold up to Saturday night. There seems to be a hitch about the weighing of small lots and suits are threatened.

A mob, including over 200 men, women, boys and girls, seized five carloads of soft coal, which had just arrived in the Wheeling & Lake Erie railroad yards, Toledo, Saturday, consigned to the National Malleable Castings Co. and local oil men.

Justice C. H. Webb, of Youngstown, O., decided with the Toledo courts that it was not a crime to steal coal. Eben Nichols was arrested by a railroad detective in the act of stealing fuel from a car. The man said he stole the coal to keep his wife and family from freezing, and was dismissed.

Comptroller Caro rules that Grand Rapids cannot use public funds to go into the coal business, emergency or no emergency. The coal commission appointed by Mayor Palmer will go ahead as though nothing happened in trying to get coal, and are investigating Canadian sources of supply.

A true bill was returned Monday by the grand jury which investigated the alleged coal combine in Chicago against 45 coal operators and retail dealers, charging conspiracy to do an illegal act injurious to public trade.

The indictments are against both corporations and individuals doing business in Illinois and Indiana. Bail was fixed at $1,500.

Attorney General Sheets has filed six suits in the Ohio Supreme Court against leading coal companies. He asks that they be compelled to show why they have entered into a combine to boost the price of coal to an exorbitant and unreasonable figure, why they are misusing their charters and why they are discriminating against towns of Northern and Western Ohio in the matter of supplying coal.

Corliss Won a Hard Fight.

In the bill creating a department of commerce is a section which Representative Corliss, after a big fight on the floor of the house, succeeded in having eliminated, because the effect of it would be that Michigan and other states not only will have their powers of supervision over the insurance companies materially decreased, but will lose the states many thousands of dollars they now collect annually in taxes. The objectionable clause reads: "It shall be the province and duty of the said bureau of insurance to exercise such control as may be provided by the law over every insurance company, society or association transacting business in the United States."

Corliss declared that the powerful insurance companies wanted this section passed and have had lobbyists in Washington working for it. The federal supervision which it was proposed to have over the insurance companies is deduced in the bill in somewhat general terms, but as a federal law is paramount to the state law, the states will not have the same extensive powers to control and regulate such companies as heretofore. He cited Supreme Court decisions that insurance is not commerce, so the supervision of insurance companies would not be a proper function for the department of commerce.

Pacific Cable Goes.

The first section of the Pacific Cable Co.'s cable was completed Thursday night, when the two ends were brought together in Molokai channel, 35 miles from Honolulu, and Hawaii is now 2,000 miles nearer the parent continent. A large crowd had gathered about the cable station there, and the announcement was received with cheers. Judge Cooper, representing Gov. Dole, who was absent from the island, sent a message to President Roosevelt announcing the opening and extending a greeting from the citizens of Hawaii.

Boy Kills His Mother.

Mrs. Frank Tucker was killed at Carbondale, Ill., by her 9-year-old son, while the boy was in a fit of rage. The son then committed suicide. The mother had tried to reason with her son who was playing with a gun, and who paid no attention to her. She then started to take the weapon away from him. As she approached the boy, he drew the gun to his shoulder and killed his mother instantly. He then deliberately shot himself.

NATIONAL CAPITAL NOTES.

Rep. Warner, of Illinois, introduced a bill appropriating $50,000 for a statue to the late Maj.-Gen. Franz Sigel, to be erected in this city.

Senator Perkins presented to the senate a communication from Gov. Sayres of Texas, tendering to the United States statues of Gen. Sam Houston and Stephen F. Austin, to be placed in statutory hall, at the capitol to represent the state of Texas.

The house committee on judiciary by a vote of 8 to 7 decided not to favorably report the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution changing the inaugural date and the date for the beginning and ending of congress which was passed by the senate at the last session.

President Roosevelt had a long conference with Representative Babcock, of Wisconsin, who has just returned from Cuba. Mr. Babcock told the president he was heartily in favor of the ratification of the pending Cuban treaty, particularly as he regarded ratification as a good stroke of business policy for the United States.

The Shadow of Death.

Editor N. G. Gonzales, who was shot by Lieut.-Gov. Tillman last week, died Monday, after battling almost four days for his life. Mrs. Gonzales was with her husband when death came.

When the bulletin was posted announcing the death, the crowds which have been about the bulletin boards almost constantly since the tragedy took place, increased rapidly, and all phases and details of the tragedy were discussed. Sorrow was generally expressed.

In his cell, where he has been confined since the shooting, Lieut.-Gov. Tillman heard the news with visible emotion.

Lieut.-Gov. Tillman is within the shadow of the scaffold, as South Carolina has a hanging law. All the evidence of the crime gathered so far points to deliberate murder on the part of Tillman, and he will undoubtedly be charged with murder in the first degree.

More Prospective Wealth.

A tremendously rich strike, the magnitude of which has never been equalled since Bob Henderson told his wonderful story of the Klondike, has been made 18 miles north of a point on Tanana river, 300 miles from its source. The report of Japanese territory. The report of Japanese territory. The report of Japanese territory.

The gist of his report is that the district resembles the Klondike in its physical formation, but has a heavier growth of timber. Gold in widely different kinds had been found in eight different creeks when he left for Dawson, on Dec. 22.

Joris was so wrapped up in his thought that he did not notice Bram was coming. Bram got the brunt of the world's wonderings and inquiries. People who did not like to ask Joris questions felt no such delicacy with Bram. Joris could, in some degree, control himself; he could speak of the marriage with regret, but without passion; he had even alluded, in some cases, to Hyde's family and expectations. The majority believed that he was secretly a little proud of the alliance. But Bram was a different matter. First, if the marriage were at all doubted; second, if he were supposed to be a satisfactory member of the Van Heems-kirk family.

Hyde's brother officers held high festival to their comrade's success. To every bumper they read the marriage notice aloud, as a toast, and gave a kind of national triumph to what was a purely personal affair. Joris read it with dim eyes, and then lit his long Grouse pipe and sat smoking with an air of inexpressible loneliness. Lysbet read it, and then put the paper carefully away among the silks and satins in her bottom drawer. Nell Semple read it and re-read it. It seemed to have a fascination for him, and for more than an hour he sat reading, with his eyes fixed upon the printed words. Then he rose and went to the hearth. There were a few sticks of wood burning upon it, but they had fallen apart. He put them together, and, tearing off the notice, he laid it upon them. It meant much more to Nell than the destruction of a scrap of paper, and he stood watching it long after it had become a film of gray ash.

Bram would not read it at all. He was too full of shame and trouble at the event; and the moments went as if they moved on lead. But after tea he gathered a great nosegay of narcissus and went to Isaac Cohen's. He went into the store, and she seemed to know his footsteps. He had no need to speak; she came at once from the mystery behind the crowded place into the clearer light.

Their acquaintance had evidently advanced since that anxious evening when she had urged upon Bram the intelligence of the duel between Hyde and Nell Semple; for Bram gave her the flowers without embarrassment, and she buried their sweet face in their sweet petals, and then lifted it with a smile at once grateful and confidential.

Then Bram told her all the little things that had grieved him, and they talked as dear companions might talk. It was not more than an hour or so when she came home. He looked quickly at the young people and then stood by Bram, and began to talk courteously of passing events. Miriam leaned, listening, against a magnificent "apple's cabinet" in black oak. Against its carved and pillared back-ground, her dark drapery fell in almost unnoticed grace; but her fair face and small hands, with the mass of white narcissus in them, had a singular and alluring beauty. She looked at Bram as something sweetly supernatural might have done. It was an effort for him to answer Cohen; he felt as if it would be impossible for him to go away.

But the clock struck the hour, and the shop boy began to put up the shutters, and the old man walked to the door, taking Bram with him. Then Miriam, smiling her farewell, passed like a shadow into the darker shadows beyond; and Bram went home, wondering to find that she had cast out of his heart hatred, malice, and all uncharitable things.

CHAPTER XI.

At Hyde Manor, and Bram and Miriam in Hyde Manor House, there was that stir of preparation which indicates a departure. Hyde and Katherine were taking a hasty meal together. Hyde was in full uniform, his sword at his side, his cavalry cap and cloak on a chair near him. They both rose together—Katherine bravely smiling away the tears and looking exceedingly lovely in her blue morning gown trimmed with frillings of thread lace, and Hyde, gallant and tender, but still with the air of a man not averse to go back to life's real duty. He took Katherine in his arms, kissed away her tears, made her many a loving promise and then, lifting his cap and cloak, left the room. Evidently he had quite recovered his health and strength, for he sprang very easily into the saddle, and, gathering the reins in his hand, kept the restive animal in perfect control.

A moment he stood thus, the very ideal of a fearless, chivalrous, handsome soldier; the next, his face softened to almost womanly tenderness, for he saw Katherine coming hastily through the dim hall and into the clear sunshine and in her arms was his little son. She came fearlessly to his side, and lifted the sleeping child to him. He stooped and kissed it and then kissed again the beautiful mother; and calling happily backward, "Good-by, my love; God keep you, love; good-by," he gave his horse his own wild will and was soon lost to sight among the trees of the park.

Katherine stood with her child in her arms, listening to the ever fainter beat of hoofs. Her husband had gone back to duty, his furlough had expired, their long, leisurely honeymoon was over. But she was neither fearful nor unhappy. Hyde's friends had procured his exchange into a court regiment. He was only going to London, and he was still her lover. She looked forward with clear eyes as she said gratefully to herself, "So happy am I! So good is my husband! So dear is my child! So fair and sweet is my home!"

Katherine would not have been happy had the estrangement between herself and her parents continued a bitter or a silent one. She did not suppose they would answer the letter she had sent by the fisherman Hudde, so, immediately after her arrival at Jamaica, Katherine wrote to her mother; and, without waiting for replies, she continued her letters regularly from Hyde. They were in a spirit of the sweetest and frankest confidence.

She asked her advice with all the faith of a child and the love of a daughter; and she sent through her those sweet messages of affection to her father, which she feared a little to offer without her mother's mediation.

But when she had a son, and when Hyde agreed to the boy being named George, she wrote a letter to him. The letter, full of love, starred all through with pet words, and wisely reminding him more of their own past happiness than enlarging on her present joy, made his heart melt. He could do no business that day. He felt that he must go home and tell Lysbet, and the mother could fully understand and share his joy. He gave her the letter with a smile, and then walked up and down while she read it.

"Well, Joris, a beautiful letter this is. And thou has a grandson of thy own name—a little Joris. Oh, how I long to see him! Would God he was here!"

The face of Joris was happy and his eyes shining; but he had not yet much to say. He walked about for an hour and listened to Lysbet, who, as she polished her silver, retold him all that Katherine had said of her husband's love and of his goodness to her. At last he rose and went into the garden and she watched him wander from bed to bed, and stand looking down at the green shoots of the early flowers. About three o'clock he came into the house with a firm, quick step.

"Lysbet, thinking I have been—thinking of Katherine's marriage. Better than I expected, it has turned out."

"I think that Katherine has made a good marriage—the best marriage of all the children."

"Dost thou believe that her husband is so kind and so prudent as she says?"

"No doubt I have."

"See, then, I will send Katherine her portion. It is for her and her children. Can I trust them with it?"

"Katherine is no waster, and full of nobleness is her husband. Write thou to him, and put it in his charge for Katherine and her children. And tell him in his honor thou trust entirely, and I think that he will do in all things right."

"What then, Joris?"

"The drinking-cup of silver, which my father gave us at our marriage. It was given to my great grandfather when he was mayor of Middleburg. His name, also, was Joris. To my grandson shall I send it?"

"Oh, my Joris, much pleasure would thou give Katherine and me also! Let the little fellow have it. I will tell Katherine. But thou, too, write her a letter; for little she will think of her fortune or of the cup if thy love thou send not with them."

And Joris had done all that he proposed and done it without one grudging thought or doubting word. And Hyde was not indifferent to such noble trust. He fully determined to deserve it.

As Joris sat smoking that night he thought over his proposal, and then for the first time it struck him that the Middleburg cup might have a peculiar significance and value to Bram. When Lysbet sat down with a little sigh of content beside him and said, "A happy night is this to us, Joris," he answered, "God is good; always better to us than we trust him for. I want to say now what I have been considering the last hour—some other cup we will send to the little Joris, for I think Bram will like to have the Middleburg cup best of all."

"Always Bram has been promised the Guilderland cup and the server that goes with it."

"That is the truth; but I will tell you something, Lysbet. The Middleburg cup was given by the Jews of Middleburg to my ancestor because great favors and protection he gave them when he was mayor of the city. Bram is very often with Miriam Cohen and—"

"What mean you, Joris?"
"I think that he loves her."
"Well?"
"That he would like to marry her."
"Is she so fair?"
"A beautiful face and gracious ways she has. Like her, the beloved Rachel must have been, I think. Why do you not stand with Bram as you stood with Katherine?"

"Little use it would be, Joris. To give consent in this matter would be a sacrifice refused. Be sure that Cohen will not listen to Bram; no, nor to you, nor to me, nor to Miriam."
"Say to Bram, 'I am willing,' and Cohen will say to him, 'Never, never will I consent.' If you keep the Jew's cup for Bram and Miriam, always you will keep it; yes, and they that live after you, too."

At the very hour Joris and Lysbet were discussing the position of their son with regard to Miriam Cohen, the question was being definitely settled at another point. For Joris was not the only person who had observed Bram's devotion to the beautiful Jewess. Cohen had watched him with close and cautious jealousy for many months; but he was far too wise to stimulate love by opposition and he did not believe in half measures. When he defined Miriam's duty to her he meant it to be in such shape as precluded argument or uncertainty; and for this purpose delay was necessary. But it happened, that, after some months of negotiation, a final and satisfactory letter had come to him by the same post as brought Katherine's letter to Joris Van Heems-kirk.

He read its contents with a sad satisfaction and then locked it away until the evening hours secured him from business interruption. Then he went to his grandchild.

She looked so pretty and happy and careless, that for some time he did not like to break the spell of her restful beauty. Then he said in slow, even tones, "My child, listen to me. This summer my young kinsman Judah Belasco will come here. He comes to marry you. You will be a happy wife, my dear. He has money, and he has the power to make money, and he is a good young man. I have been cautious concerning that, my dear."

There was a long pause. He did not hurry her, but sat patiently waiting, with his eyes fixed upon the book in her hand.

"I do not want to marry, grandfather. I am so young. I do not know Judah Belasco."

"You shall have time, my dear. It is part of the agreement that he shall now live in New York."

"Put from your heart or fancy any other young man. Have you not thought of our neighbor, Bram Van Heems-kirk?"

"He is good; he is handsome. I fear he loves me."

"You know not anything. If you choose a husband, or even a shoe, by their appearance, both may pinch you, my dear. Judah is of good stock. Of a good tree you may expect good fruit."

"Bram Van Heems-kirk is also the son of a good father. Many times you have said it."

"Yes, I have said it. But Bram is not of our people. My dear, will you take your own way, or will you obey the word of the Lord?"

"My father, I will keep the promise that I made you. I will do all that you wish."

Cohen bowed his head solemnly and remained for some minutes afterwards motionless. His eyes were closed, his face was as still as a painted face. Whether he was praying or remembering, Miriam knew not. But solitude is the first cry of the wounded heart, and she went away into it. She was like a child that had been smitten and whom there was none to comfort. But she never thought of disputing her grandfather's word, or of opposing his will.

DEAD MAN MAKES TROUBLE.

Presence in Spirit Form Obnoxious to His Successor.

A colored family in Almagro has recently been broken up because of the nightly appearance of the wife's former husband, says the Danville (Va.) correspondent of the Richmond Dispatch. The fact that the man in question has been dead a year or two does not seem to affect in the least his desire to look upon the happiness of his former helpmeet. He invades the privacy of the woman's chamber, much to the annoyance of her present husband. He made one of his frequent visits the other night. He was dressed entirely in white, and came and stood at the foot of the bed.

The living husband decided that the dead man had the best right to the woman's presence, and he dived through the window, carrying the sash with him. The woman, who seems to have preferred the living to the dead, followed his example. The pair spent the night, thinly clad, under the stars.

And now there will be a divorce suit, the man refusing longer to live with a woman whose dead husband visits her in the night.

A Suggestive Amendment.

A wealthy brewer in Montreal built a church and inscribed on it: "This church was erected by Thomas Molson at his sole expense. Hebrews xi." Some college was altered the inscription so as to make it read: "This church was erected by Thomas Molson at his soul's expense. He brews."

JAPANESE landscape is distinguished by the torii which invariably belongs to it. Wooded hills and waterfalls, overlooking miles of the valley, and shaded roads fringed with wayside flowers, appeal more strikingly to travelers than in other lands, because nature, having none too much room, was forced to compress her material. But unlike the scenery, the torii is of that temple. Elsewhere we had seen that animal so fastened that he could barely thrust his head through the bars and protrude his lips for the beans which visitors fed into a flattened trough. The animal here was free, and had been taught to pay for his food by nodding his head in thanks, taking a turn or two around the stall as visitors said "omawari" to him; and at a motion from the girls then feeding him, who apparently had called at the stall often enough to get well acquainted, he would hold his peculiar to Japan; and when one becomes accustomed to it, a view seems strangely incomplete without it. One learns early that the two wooden uprights and crossbar of the original design were built to provide a roosting place for the sacred fowl. With the addition of an extra crossbar it looks at first as if that use would be suitable for it now. Having come to expect it, the visitor goes in its simple outline a certain charm and is converted before long to the belief that in dealing with nature as well as art, whatever Japanese taste touches it usually adorns. The torii marks always the approach to a place of worship. It points to the humble shrine as well as to the spacious temple of the Shinto faith. In the busy, narrow thoroughfares, along the seashore, or river bank, in the fields where the back of labor is bent, on mountain paths, and in the depths of the woods, it is the unerring sign of a temple beyond.

Our local guide told us at Nikko, the tourist Mecca, a story of cryptomerias, as we passed between the ranks of those stately sentinels. There we were entreated to take a long look at their towering height, for the trees had not thrived elsewhere in Japan. At Nikko they have formed an avenue more than twenty miles long, for 300 years. We found a similar display of them off the Tokaido, the highway to Tokio, near the sacred mountain of Fuji. Now, quite a journey further south, we saw that we had not bidden them farewell, the new guide explaining that cuttings had been transplanted in various places. The Nikko story was that when the Japanese put up the telegraph poles they were so proud of them that they were unwilling that anything in the shape of a tree should overtop them.

mouth sideways, lightly closed below but with an aperture above into which a handful of beans could be easily emptied.

Protection for the Sun Goddess, the central deity at every Shinto temple, is furnished by two dogs of granite or bronze, standing at the immediate approach to the temple. There can be no doubt why they are there, for the art of the sculptor has been taxed to throw into their attitudes and expressions so much ferocity that disturbing spirits would be bold, indeed, to dare molest their charge. They sit on guard, but this does not betray a heedless watch, for their arching backs, upcurled tails, and their bulging necks, fortify well their shaggy heads. One of them has its jaws open, revealing a capacious and ravenous mouth; the fangs of the other project from its clenched jaws; and the eyes of both challenge the most riotous approach, and speak for the gloating pleasure with which they await the time when they may crunch and devour.

There were devotees at the temple porch, bowing to the round mirror within, which represents the soul of Amaterasu, the presiding goddess, and calling attention to their petitions by tugging at a rope which dangled over the entrance, and to the upper end of which was attached a metallic globe, resembling an exaggerated sleighbell. The prayers that accompanied this demonstration were brief and silent, as though the deity petitioned understood what was wanted, and utterance might thus be as well spared. Last they should not be overlooked, however, when they went away each devotee tied in a conspicuous place, some of them to the legs of the dogs, a slip of paper containing the wishes in writing. In this proceeding nothing

In their zeal for the new civilization they proceeded energetically to cut down the cryptomerias; and did not desist until a vigorous protest from the foreign press at Yokohama led the imperial authorities to order them to stop. The destruction of these trees would be especially unfortunate, since they stand almost alone as examples of extraordinary growth in this land of little things.

On the lanterned pathway to the temple we stopped in front of a box stall in which stood the sacred horse may be taken for granted. The paper must be tied by holding the ends between the thumb and little finger of each hand, taking pains not to allow the other fingers to touch either it or the object to which it is to be fastened. If that should be successfully done, the devotee feels assured that the prayer will be answered favorably.

ALLIGATOR AS A BOATING COMPANION

Sportsmen Have Exciting Experience With One That Had Apparently Been Killed Several Times.

Alligators move rapidly under water, are hard to see, harder to hit, and the harpoon will penetrate only the least accessible portions of the body. Nor does the title to the hide necessarily pass with making fast the weapon.

One afternoon in the Cheesewhite-kee river I harpooned a large alligator which towed me up and down the stream for an hour or two and then sulked in its deepest part. I pulled on the line until the boat was directly over him and stirred him up with the harpoon pole. He rolled himself up on the line in the manner peculiar to sharks and alligators, and banded the boat suggestively. We rowed to the bank and, making fast to some bushes, hauled on the line until we succeeded in worrying him nearly to the boat, when he rose to the surface and attacked us with open mouth. We repelled the attack with harpoon pole and rifle. The former was promptly bitten in three places, but the latter apparently finished him. It was so nearly dark that we decided to carry him in the skiff a mile down the river to where our sloop was anchored. We broke the seats out of the boat, and together managed to lift the head of the alligator aboard and tie it. We then tied the other end, when the reptile came to life and landed a blow with his tail which lifted me out of the skiff into the saw grass, with the breath knocked out of my body, and my hand and face badly cut by the grass.

Boat and boatman were capsized. As my ride had fortunately been left upon the bank, I was able to kill the alligator again. We secured him by fastening the boat, under him and then bailing it out. The alligator completely filled the boat, so that my companion and I sat upon his back as we paddled down the river with gunwales unpleasantly near the water.

It was growing dark and the water around us was becoming live with alligators. While we were reflecting upon our overloaded condition, our alligator came to life again and shifted ballast until water poured over the gunwale. We quickly balanced the boat, only to see it again disturbed and to ship more water. A scramble for the shore followed, which we reached without capsizing and where we left our victim for the night after again killing him. In the morning our bus zard friend from the Homosassa river, surrounded by his family, was sitting above him in the tree waiting for us to attend to our carving duties.

There are drawbacks to hunting in the Great Cypress swamp. Even natives have been killed and died in its recesses. It is bounded on the east by the Everglades and on the west by a series of impenetrable mangrove thickets, alternating with deep channels. If lost one should turn his face firmly to the north, and as a guide remarked to me "be out-hut to get some where in three or four days."—Country Life in America.

STORIES OF LIFE IN VENEZUELA

Incidents That Break the Monotony of Existence in the South American Republic.

Two members of parliament have quaint stories to tell of adventures in Venezuela in times past.

An honorable baronet, while on a visit to the republic, had interviews with certain members of the government. He dined with them in the evening, and retired at a late hour. He was awakened from his sleep by a noise in his room, and saw, as he thought, one of his hosts disappear through the bedroom window leading to the veranda.

Concluding that this was a polite custom of the country, the visitor returned to sleep, but in the morning he found his trousers upon the floor, their pockets turned inside out. His old-fashioned, highly decorated chain purse was gone, but its contents were on the ground. His gold-edged cigar case and some gold charms attached to his fob had also vanished.

The Englishman went straight to the seat of government and complained to one of the ministers, who expressed his dismay, and was thereupon informed that the person seen in the room bore a resemblance to himself.

"Very strange," replied the minister, "for there is no one alive who resembles me."

"In that case," rejoined the visitor dryly, "you should have no difficulty in securing the restoration of my property."

Later in the day the Englishman discovered an anonymous package upon his room table. Opening the cover he found all the missing articles save the gold-edged cigar case and one of the charms—a little goddess in diamonds and emeralds.

Mr. Henry Labouchere went through a revolution in Venezuela some years ago.

A battle took place on the Plaza one afternoon," said Mr. Labouchere, "telling his story, "and I watched it from a grass hammock on the terrace in front of my hotel. The government forces were put to flight, and I was joined by my revolutionary friends keen from the fight."

"Later one of the fallen ministers visited us and said he could show us where 250,000 silver dollars were hidden. He was as good as his word, and patriotism being sunk by my friends in obedience to the comforting moral of the place, 'Be kind to ourselves,' it was proposed to divide the swag."

"I said, 'No, don't do that; it might offend the people. Play for it!' Which was agreed to. The government was allowed in, and we played and the government man won it all to the last dollar. So after all no harm was done."—London Mail.

PAWNBROKER SEES HUMAN NATURE

Comedy and Pathos Strangely Mingled in These Resorts of the City's Unfortunates.

In a pawn office on First avenue, near Tenth street, a red-nosed woman handed in a Marseilles quilt and a pair of sheets which had evidently been in recent use. The pawnbroker flung them back with a crisp, "Don't want 'em; they ain't clean."

"You lyin' rogue an' robber, they're a blanket-blank sight cleaner than you," was the retort courteous.

"Get out of here, madam, and never show your nose inside my door again," he commanded.

"Don't dare 'madam' me," she shrieked, "or I'll have the law on you! I want you to understand that I'm a lady, an' me mother before me was a lady, too!" Finally she was ejected and went her way protesting.

In the same compartment stood a bleary eyed man whose breath aroused fears of spontaneous combustion. He asked 50 cents on a pair of small boots, and clutching the coin, hurried to the saloon across the way. No sooner had he disappeared than a thin, frightened looking woman stole in. "He took the boots off the child's feet," she explained to the pawnbroker, "and I followed him to ask how much he got on them. While he's sleeping it off to-night I'll try and get the ticks away from him, and maybe I can scrape up the money to redeem them."

In one of the pawnshops that do Third avenue a man demanded $1.50 on a family Bible. The pawnbroker refused to accept it at any price, on the ground that he already had a stack of Bibles. The man then offered a gold pin set with imitation stone, and a silver watch chain. The pawnbroker said: "Well, as you're a steady customer I'll let you have a dollar on these, if you'll promise to take them out again." "Ah, what's the use?" was the sulky answer. "If you won't take the Lord's word for a dollar-fifty you won't take mine for a dollar."

At a loan office on Sixth avenue a young fellow asked $4 on a wedding ring. The attendant nodded and put the usual question as to the name. The man did not appear to hear him; he was looking at the ring, and his lip quivered like a girl's. Suddenly he took off his overcoat and said eagerly: "Please take this instead. You see we're not long married and I'm afraid she'd miss the ring." He went out into the biting air without his coat but with the ring.—New York Times

CHURCH A MODEL OF BEAUTY.

Glory of the Structure Known as Stanford Memorial.

Across the quadrangle is the Memorial church. The original rudimentary architectural design of Shepley, Rutan and Coolidge, who drew the plans for the inner quad, has been developed and ennobled by Clinton Day of San Francisco. Although surrounded by the majestic buildings of the outer quadrangle, the church fulfills the original architectural conception by its dominating pre-eminence. From every point on the campus it is the spire with its glittering cross which first meets the view, just as the notes of the great organ roll out, and the sweet chiming of the tower bells ring across the tiled roofs and greet the ear. The architecture is a modification of the Moorish and Romanesque and the ground plan is in the form of a cross with rounded ends. It is almost 300 feet long through vestibule, nave and apse, and over 150 feet wide through the transept. The buff sandstone has lent itself readily to the most elaborate effects. Flying buttresses and ornate columns help to beautify the exterior of the most costly church in California.

The beauty of the interior defies description. The soft light floats down from the windows in the great dome aloft. The rich glass in the arms of the transept flashes out blood red and royal purple against the neutral tints of the natural stone and the yellow brown of the woodwork. In the chancel gallery at the rear the massive silver pipes of the great organ tower up on each side of the little console—the instrument has nearly 3,000 pipes and forty-six stops.—Cecil Marnack in Sunset Magazine.

Manley M. Maxson, of Hudson, was a business caller at the Register of Deeds office Monday, and he had in his possession, two patent deeds, of land that his father, Jessie Maxson, purchased of the government Sept. 16, 1885 and both were signed by Andrew Jackson, president. The paper used was a heavy parchment paper and is still in good condition, and the writing was just as plain as though it was written yesterday. The land described in the two deeds is 120 acres, one of 80 acres and one of 40 acres on sec. 25 in the township of Pittsford, which is about three miles southwest of Hudson. Pain

From Inflammatory Rheumatism Would Have Killed Our Son.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills Saved Him.

"We began to use Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills six years ago. My wife had liver trouble and a neighbor gave her some of your liver pills to try, after which we bought a bottle of them and my wife and son were cured. Since then I have used them and I must say that I have never used any pills that gave me the satisfaction these have. We also use Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills with greatest satisfaction. Three years ago our son, Harry had inflammatory rheumatism, but he had suffered so much that I believe if we had not given him Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills which relieved him almost instantly he would have died. I am always glad of the opportunity for praising Dr. Miles' Remedies."—James Everett, Alton, Ill.

"I was afflicted with neuralgia for years and never found any permanent relief till I began using Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. They are a sure cure for headache and neuralgic pains. Only this morning I recommended them to a friend with a severe headache and in a half hour he came into the store smiling. The headache was gone. We use them in the family and find them excellent for the women folk. This high altitude makes them very nervous. Things We Like Best

Often Disagree With Us

Because we overeat of them. Indigestion follows. But there's a way to escape such consequences. A dose of a good digestant like Kodol will relieve you at once. Your stomach is simply too weak to digest what you eat. That's all indigestion is. Kodol digests the food without the stomach's aid. Thus the stomach rests while the body is strengthened by wholesome food. Distilling is unnecessary. Kodol digests any kind of good food. Strengthens and invigorates.
