George W. Boynton.

The funeral of Geo. W. Boynton was city, 100. held Morday afternoon, at 1 o'clock at his residence. The services were conducted by Rev. J. H. McIntosh of Dexter and Revs. C. S. Jones and F. A.

Mr. Boynton was born March 17, 1844, on the farm where he spent his entire life. He passed away Friday January 23, 1903 age 58 years 10 months 6 days. He was married December 23, 1865 to Miss Emily

Mr. Boynton has been gradually failng in health for several months and suffered intensely during his last sickness but bore it with that fortitude and patience which was characteristic of his manly nature. He enlisted in the cause of Christ in 1869 uniting with the Lima M. E. church being a faithful and consistent member. He possessed real Christianity which reveals itself in kindly deeds and acts of charity making the worlds better and happier place in which to live. He has left the old homestead which was so dear to his heart, the scenes of his childhood, for the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. He was an affectionate husband, a genial friend and will be greatly missed in the circles where in he moved, but "To live in hear ts we leave behind is not to die." Interment in the family lot at Vermont Cementry beside the remains of his father and mother.

A Good Record.

Manchester Enterprise: In the elec tion of our townsman J. H. Kingsley, to the officers of grand master of the grand council of royal and select masters of Michigan, another of our citizens has been honored. And in speaking of thi we wish to call the attention of the readers of the enterprise and especially those who reside in Manchester, to the fact that Manchester has furnished more grand officers than any other village in the state. Wm. J. Doty formerly of. Manchester has been eminent grand commander of Michigan knights templar. Charles M. Norton, Geo, P. McMahon and Byron C. Hill have each served as grand masters of the grand council and now Mr. Kingsley is serving in that capacity. True, these men were not all from Mauchester at time of their election but they had been residents and are glad to be known as such. Each of the above gentlemen filled the place with great credit to themselves and honor to the fraternity. At the meeting just held in Detroit Mat C. Blosser was placed on the standing committee on finance and J. H. Kingsley was placed on the commitee on obituarles.

CHAPTER XI.- (Continued.) And it was during this hour of trial to Miriam, that Joris was talking to Lyshet of her. It did him good to put his fears into words, for Lysbet's assurances were comfortable; and as it had been a day full of feeling, he was weary and went earlier to his room than usual. On the contrary, Lysbet was very wakeful. She carried her sewing to the candle and sat down to think. In the midst of her reflections, Bram returned. She had not expected him so early, but the sound of his feet was pleasant. He came in slowly, and, after some pottering, irritating delays, he pushed his father's chair back from the light and with a heavy sigh sat down in it.

"Why sigh you so heavy, Bram? Every sigh still lower sinks the heart.

"I think so; many sweet hours we have had together. My heart was full persiflage.

"Well, then, my son, be not easy to lose thy heart. Try once more."

"Useless it would be. Miriam is not one of those who say 'no' and

"As one whom his mother comforteth!" Oh, tender and wonderful consolation! It is the mother that turns the bitter waters of life into wine Bram talked his sorrow over to his mother's love and pity and sympathy; and when she parted with him, long after the midnight, she said cheerfully, "Thou hast a brave soul, mijn zoon, mijn Bram; and this trouble is not all for thy loss and grief. A sweet memory will this beautiful Miriam be as long as thou livest; and to have loved well a good woman, will make thee always a better man for it."

CHAPTER XII.

London - Life.

The trusting, generous letter which Joris had written to his son-in-law arrived a few days before Hyde's departure for London.

Hyde knew well the importance of Katherine's fortune. It enabled him to face his relatives and friends on a very much better footing than he had anticipated. So he was no longer averse to meeting his former companions; even to them, a rich wife would excuse matrinmony.

His first social visit was paid to his maternal grandmother, the dowager Lady Capel. He found her in the most careless dishabille, wigless and unpainted, and rolled up comfortably in an old wadded morning gown that had seen years of snuffy service. But she had outlived her vanity. Hyde had chosen the very hour in which she had nothing whatever to amuse her, and he was a very welcome interruption.

And, upon the whole, she liked her

So she heard the rattle of Hyde's sword and the clatter of his feet on the polished stairs, with a good, deal of satisfaction. "I have him here and I shall do my best to keep him here," she thought. "Why should a proper young fellow like Dick bury himself alive in the fens for a Dutch woman? In short, she has had enough, and too much, of him. His grandmother has prior claim, I hope, and then Araa Suffolk will help me. I foresee mischief and amusement. Well Dick, you raspal, so you have had to leave proached it. Sunday night was Lady America! I expected it. Oh, sir, I Capel's great card night and it. have heard all about you from Adelaide! You are not to be trusted, by powdered and painted beauties

"No, madam: she preferred to remain at Hyde, and I have no happiness beyond her desire." "Here's flame! Here's constancy! And you have been married a whole year! I am struck with admiration."

"A whole year-a year of divine happiness, I assue you."

"Lord, sir! You will be the laughing stock of the town if you talk in such fashion. They will have you in the playhouses. Pray let us forget our domestic joys a little. You can make a good figure in the world; and as your cousin. Arabella Suffolk is staying with me, you will be the properest gallant for her when Sir Thomas is at the House. Here comes Arabella, and I am anxious you should make a figure in her eyes."

Arabella came in very quietly, but she seemed to take possession of the room as she entered it. She had a bright, piquant face, a tall, graceful again, mother. For me there is no form, and that air of high fashion which is perhaps quite as captivating.

Arabella made Hyde a pretty, mocking courtesy, and he could not help looking with some interest at the woman who might have been his wife.

Katherine was ignored in the conversation that followed, and Hyde did not feel any desire to bring even her name into such a mocking, jeering, perfectly heartless conversation. He was content to laugh and let the hour go past in flim-flams of criticism and

A couple of hours passed; and then it became evident, from the pawing and snorting outside, that his horse's patience was quite exhausted. Hyde went away in an excitement of hope and gay anticipations. A momentary glance upward showed him Lady Capel and Lady Suffolk at the window, watching him; the withered old woman in her soiled wrappings, the youthful beauty in all the bravery of her white and gold poudesoy. He made them a salute, and then, in a clamor of clattering hoofs, he dashed through the square. During the next six months society made an idol of Capt. Hyde, and, if he was not at Lady Arabella's feet, he was certainly very constantly at her side.

They drank deeply; they played high; they very the boy was asleep and that Katherine seldom went to church, for Sunday was the fashionable day for all kinds of frivolity and amusement. And as gently tuck in the cover and stant the men of any generation are just what the women make them, England never had sons so profligate, so she turned away, smiling, and quite profane and drunken. The clubs, especially Brooke's, were the nightly scenes of indescribable orgies. Gambling was their serious occupation; with such a sympathetic understand duels were of constant occurrence.

> Such a life could not be lived except at frightful and generally ruinous expense. Hyde was soon embarrassed. Towards Christmas bills began the swift rapture of meeting heart to pour in, creditors became importunate, and, for the first time in his life, creditors really troubled him. The income from Hyde Manor had never been more than was required for the expenses of the place; and the interest on Katherine's money had gone. though he could not tell how. He was destitute of ready cash, and he foresaw that he would have to borrow some from Lady Capel or some other accommodating friend.

He returned to barracks one Sunday afternoon, and was moodily thinking over these things, when his orderly brought him a letter which had arrived during his absence. It was from Katherine. His face flushed with delight as he read it, so sweet and tender and pure was the neat epistle. "She wants to see me. Oh, the dear Not more than I want to see her. Fool, villain, that I am; I will go to her. Katherine! Kate! My dear little Kate!" So he ejaculated as he paced his narrow quarters, and tried to arrange his plans for a Christmas visit ot his wife and child.

He had determined to ask Lady Capel for a hundred pounds; and he thought it would be the best plan to make his request when she was surrounded by company, and under the pleasureable excitement of a winning rubber. And if the circumstances proved adverse, then he could try his fortune in the hours of her morning

The mansion in Berkeley Square was brilliantly lighted when he ap-Capel's great card night, and the rooms were full of tables surounded orther among men or women. And intent upon the game and the gold.

"That will do. It is a worse punishment than I should have given you Norfolk! There is only one word between it and the plantations. Give me your arm, Dick; I shall play no more until my luck turns. Losing cards are dull company."

"I am very sorry that you have been losing. I came to ask for the loan of a hundred pounds, grandmother." "No, sir, I will not lend you a hun-ought to have asked Katherine." "No, sir, you ought not to have asked Katherine. You ought to take what you want. Jack Capel took every shilling of my fortune and neither said, 'by your leave,' nor 'thank you.' Did the Dutchman tie the bag too close?"

"Councillor Van Heemskirk left it open, in my honor. When I am scoundrel enough to touch it, I shall not come and see you at all, grandmother."

"Upon my word, a very pretty compliment! Well, sir, I'll pay you a hundred pounds for it. When do you start?'

"To-morrow morning."

"Make it afternoon, and take care of me as far as your aunt Julia's. And I daresay you want money to-night. Here are the keys of my desk. In the right hand drawer are some rouleaus of fifty pounds each. Take two."

The weather, as Lady Capel said, was "so very Decemberish" that the roads were passably good, being frozen dry and hard, and on the evening of the third day Hyde came in sight of his home. His heart warmed to the lonely place; and the few lights in its windows beckoned him far more pleasantly toan the brilliant illuuminations of Vauxhall or Almacks, or even the cold splendors of royal receptions. He had given Katherine no warning of his visit. He wanted to see with his own eyes, and hear with his own ears, the glad tokens of her happy wonder.

The kitchen fire threw great lustres across the brick-paved yard; and the blinds in Katherine's parlor were undrawn, and its fire and candle light shone on the freshly laid tea table and the dark walls gleaming with bunches of holly and mistletoe. But Hyde loved his wife, loved her ten- she was not there. He only glanced smile on his face, went swiftly up part of the charming domestic scene both a little flushed and weary and NTENSE interest is be- | ing evinced in the recent decision to which the vicar of St. Leonard's church at Hythe, England, has arrived in regard to the collection of human bones in the crypt of that church. Beneath the high altar there is deposited a vast accumulation of human remains. The walls on either side are lined with skulls, some 600 in all, arranged in ledges, extending almost to the beautiful groined ceiling. Neatly stacked on the floor at the back is a pile of bones about seventy-five feet in length, eight feet in height and over six feet deep. These are probably the remains of 7,000 people.

It is an historical fact that endeavors have been made for the past two or three hundred years to find something about these curious relics of past days.

It is evident from a work written by the two races.

FIRE DRIVES TO DEATH

In a special dispatch from Tacoma Wash., not long ago, the strange story was told of a lake in Clarke county that was choked with the bodies of forest fires. L. E. Eph awoke, looked around, saw it struggling and flopping toward the river, got up, rubbed his eyes in sleepy bewilderment, grabbed the fish, and, while securing him by slipping a little willow through his gills, gave him a bit of salutary advice:

Portraits on Tombstones.

Local marble dealers are taking a keen interest in an enterprise, which had its origin in Denmark, for reproducing the pictures of dead persons on their tombstones, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. They say that it is very probable that the movement will spread to America in a short time. The picture-on-the-tombstone craze started among the Danes as a result of the use of artificial marble. A Danish master builder succeeded in producing a stone of such delicate tints that it was impossible to distinguish it from the natural product. The imitation of the more expensive specles was found to cost far less than the natural, and is made in any form desired, columns, plain, or fluted, and capitals-as readily as flat slabs. The durability is said to be as great as that of the genuine marble. It was also found that it was possible to reproduce, by carving, a picture of the churches in dythe, and in the vault deceased person, in the imitation marof one of these the skulls and bones ble, much easier and far cheaper than the work could be done with the genu-

WAS PUNISHED FOR SLANDER.

How the Laws Were Vindicated in

In the year 1364 John de Hakford was convicted of bringing a false charge of conspiracy against the "chief men" of London. The sentence of the court was that "the said John shall remain in prison for one whole year and a day. And the said John within such year shall four times have the punishment of the pillory—that is to say, one day in each quarter of the year, and in this manner: The said John shall come out of Newgate without hood or girdle, barefoot and unshod, with a whetstone hung by a chain from his neck, and lying on his breast, it being marked with the words, 'A false liar.' And there shall be a pair of trumpets trumpeting before him on his way to the pillory, ments shall be solemnly proclaimed. And the said John shall remain on to remain until his punishment shall be completed."

The mark of battle and the weapons of ancient Britons are left in many a skull; in some cases they are cleft almost from the top to the base. The Venezuela War.

President Aranguren, of the state of Maracaibo, has, by a decree published Thursday night, called to arms all citizens from 16 to 60 years of age belonging to the militia, in order to resist the possible landing of German forces at Lake Maracaibo, About 500 men immediately answered the call.

The bombardment of Fort San Carlos by the German cruisers Vineta. Panther and Falke was continued Wednesday afternoon until 6 o'clock. The destruction of the garrison is reported and it is claimed many soldiers and villagers were killed to enforce the blockade.

Notwithstanding the irritation felt in Washington in government circles at what is regarded as the purely needless and revengeful bombardment of the Venezuela forts by the German warships, the conclusion at the present time is that this incident will not prevent Mr. Bowen from successfully carrying out his mission of peace.

Incidentally the United States government is informed that Germany has no intention and has had no intention of taking any action in South America that would bring on a test $25,000,000 at the end of the first of the Monroe doctrine. ABOUT MEN AND WOMEN.

Both Have Their Failings, But, According to This Writer, Men Are at a Disadvantage.

Women were put here to make the world look pretty, though the fashion papers have never guessed this, says a facetious writer.

They are fond of dressing, except at dances and dinner parties. A great traveler once met a lady friend, whom he had not seen for many years at a dance. "Why, how you have altered," said the lady. "I declare I should not have known you from Adam." "Nor I you," retorted the man, "from Eve." Another hobby is talking. They are quite as garrulous when sober as men are when in their cups, and their conversation is often just as well worth hearing.

As a rule, they have more heart than head. This is apt to render them thoughtless. A woman will walk to the end of a street, then turn sharply round without looking to see whether there is anyone immediately behind her, and as a consequence, gouge your eye out with the end of her sunshade. Sometimes she will beg your pardon, but I have known one to just flip the eye of the ferrule into the gutter and sail serenely on without saying a

Both men and women have sprung from monkeys, but the women certainly sprang farther than the men.

VERY STRONG TOBACCO.

Perique, Grown in the South and Put Up in Ropes, Is Too Powerful for Most Smokers.

In many of the tobacconists' shops perique tobacco, chopped into granulated form, is displayed for use by pipe smokers. This is the same perique that has been grown by Frenchmen and Spaniards in Louisiana since before our revolutionary war, says the New York Herald. It is a jet black, intensely strong tobacco, famous for its flavor and its ability to wreck the

"They let things drift," he says, "and come only when pain drives them here. Americans, and especially southerners, hasten to their dentist immediately they detect even the slightest signs of coming trouble, and the result is that there are by far more "saved" teeth in this country than in any other. WAGES IN FORMOSA.

The Highest Pay for Skilled Labor Does Not Come Up to One Dollar a Day.

The people of Formosa have just become up to date enough to have a railroad of their own, and a detailed report of its construction has been forwarded to the stockholders, many of whom are Frenchmen and Englishmen, says a London paper. The rails are English; the locomotives are English and American; the bridge works and girders are American, and the rolling stock is native built on American trucks. The labor employed was Formosan and Japanese, but the work was done under the direction of French, English and American engineers. The rate of wages paid per day to the machinists and laborers furnish an interesting contrast between the value put upon work in the occident and orient. The Jap, on an average received one-third more than the Formosan, and the day ale of the highest rates paid: Carpenters, 62 cents; sawyers, 64 cents; masons and plasterers, 80 cents; roofers, 68 cents; coolies, 37 cents; workmen on scaffolding, 52 cents: navvies, 47 cents; painters, 68 cents;

THE RETIRED BURGLAR.

He Doesn't Set Himself Up as a Teacher, But Draws a Lesson from Experience.

"No matter what business a man may be in," said the retired burglar, according to the New York Sun, "it is only by actual hard work and by everlastin'ly keepin' at it that he will get on in it. No amount of dreamin' will put a man anywhere; but there ain't anywhere that a man can't get by steady, hard work.

"I've seen this illustrated in my own business; as a matter of act, in my own experience. "I've wasted many and many a night dreamin' of robbin' banks, makin', in my mind, a million dollars at a clip, but never actually makin' a cent, while some chap that I knew that didn't have half as lofty ideas about things as I did would be doin' very well, indeed, robbin' just small houses and places like that, just by gettin' down to business and stickin' to it: not wastin' his time dreamin'. They have the pointed ear, the keen eye and the restless less about their teeth, although in late ways of their wild ancestors. The elder of the two, Stella, is two years old and is of a tawny yellow color. Wolf is well-named, for he has all the characteristics of his grandmother, a she wolf. He is nine months old. Both of the dogs have been trained to take care of sheep, and they can round up a flock in short order. Like the wolf, they refuse to sleep but in daytime and never so happy as when circling around their charges at night.

Bringing of the specimens to this country was attended with difficulty. They were purchased from shepherds in the neighborhood of Mannheim, who were not inclined to part with them until a large sum had been offered, as they said that animals of any real value were scarce.

DESERT PLANT RESERVOIRS.

A Species of Cactus That Stores Up Water in a Stronghold Within Itself.

Many a traveler in desert lands, when in danger of dying from thirst has been saved by the plant known as the water or fishhook cactus. During the moist season it stores up a large quantity of water for the subsequent dry one, when all the ground is parched with heat, and only channels filled with stones mark the course of former rivulets, says the Portland Telegram.

So well has this cactus provided for the safety of its precious liquid that it is no easy task to obtain it. The exterior skin is more impenetrable than the toughest leather, and, besides, it is protected with long wiry spines curved into hooks at the end, yet so strong and springy that if a large rock be thrown against them they remain uninjured. If the spines be burned off one may, by long and tedious effort, cut through the rind with a stout knife; otherwise nothing but an ax will enable him to get at the interior of this well-armored plant. When the top is removed and a hollow made by scooping out some of the soft inner part, it immediately fills with water-cool and refreshing, though a blistering sun may have bee beating upon the tough skin above it all day. The water when first obtained has a whitish or smoky tint, but when settled is as clear as crystal.

The Empress had her costly and novel plaything, and then, in the manner of Empresses and human beings in general, she tired of it. Time eventually dissolved the shining walls, melted the gorgeous trimmirgs and thawed the polished floor. Owing, however, to the intense cold of the Russian winter, this royal plaything lasted some time and was the wonder of Europe. Hughes and Gunner Kuhlwein went below to the magazine, picking up powder charges, and prevented further explosions, while Lieut. William C. Cole and Gun Captain Soneman entered the turret and withdrew the charge from the other gun, whose breech was open.

The survivors of the guns' crew when rescued were burned, mutilated, and nearly dead. One man, whose clothing was on fire, jumped overboard.

In less than a minute after the explosion three streams of water were pouring into the turret, preventing the charge in the other eight-inch gun from exploding.

The men met their death heroically, and the wounded men who were horribly burned about the body walked without assistance to the hospital in the clothes they wore at the time of the accident. They were heartily cheered by their companions.

A funeral service for the men who met their death in the explosion was held next day on board the Massachusetts, Chaplain Wright officiating. Afterward a procession was formed on shore and proceeded to the military

Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli, who has been appointed successor to Cardinal Parrochi in the vice chancellorship of the holy Roman church, was created a cardinal on March 14, 1887, while he was serving as papal nuncio to Vienna. He holds the rank of a cardinal bishop and presides over the see of Frascati. One of his offices is ish Navy. Among things not generally known is the fact that the hour glass is universally used on board British ships when the log is heaved at night. Every hour the boatswain, or one of the boatswain's mates, blows on his whistle a peculiar shrill note called the reel. The person in the watch to whom this duty is assigned then heaves the log, a small piece of wood with a sinker fitted in it, and at that moment the glass is turned. Though termed an hour glass generally, it is only a 14-second glass really. As the last grain runs out the log line is stopped with a jerk, which also loosens the lead sinker. The log floats up to the surface of the sea, the line is hauled in, and an entry made in the book, which, from its containing this among other items of the daily and nightly events of the voyage, is called the log book.—Country Life, London.

Helpless Invalid For Three Years.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Made My Nerves Strong.

"For many years I suffered from terrible headaches and pains at the base of the brain, and finally got so bad that I was overcome with nervous prostration. I had frequent dizzy spells and was so weak and exhausted that I could take but little food. The best physicians told me I could not live; that I would die of paralysis, as my father and grandfather had. I remained a helpless invalid for three years, when I heard of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and began using it. That winter I felt better than I had before in many years, and I have not been troubled with those dreadful headaches since I first used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. "For many years I suffered from nervous prostration, and could not direct my household affairs, nor have any cares. My stomach was very weak, headaches very severe, and I was so nervous that there was not a night in years that I slept over one hour at a time. We spent hundreds of dollars for doctors and medicine. I was taken to Chicago and treated by specialists, but received no benefit at all. Finally I heard of Dr. Miles' Nervine and began its use. I was surprised that it helped me so quickly, and great was my joy to find, after using seven bottles, that I had fully recovered my health."—Mrs. W. A. Thompson, Duluth, Minn.
