Father Reilly Injured.

Detroit Free Press: Rev. Charles O. Reilly, of Adrian, well known in Detroit as a priest of the Roman Catholic church, met with a very painful accident at 5:30 Friday afternoon and, as a result, he will probably be confined to his bed in Harper hospital for some weeks.
 In an attempt to cross Grand River avenue at the intersection of Washington avenue, Fr. Reilly was struck by an east-bound Jefferson avenue car. Both bones of his left leg were broken about three inches above the ankle, he received a bad scalp wound and his side and hip were badly bruised.
 For some time Fr. Reilly has had a difficulty with his eyes which rendered him almost blind. Although on the road to recovery, his vision is by no means perfect, and it is supposed that he misjudged the distance of the car. The motorist says that he stepped directly in front of it.

The injured man was carried into the office of Drs. S. E. Sanderson and L. J. Goux, in the Stevens building. Although suffering considerable pain, Fr. Reilly was able to diagnose his own case, and told the physicians what the trouble was before they had had time to examine him. Together, they reduced the fracture of the leg, and, latter, at the hospital, Dr. T. A. McGraw and Dr. Sanderson dressed the wounds.
 Fr. Reilly's injuries, though painful, are not considered dangerous, but he is suffering considerably from shock.

Now comes news that the Chinese Dowager Empress has started a paper in Peking. It's hard to keep a dowager like that in her coffin.

Dodge City, Kan., is preparing to bore a hole in the ground for exploring purposes, but it seems to have no fears as to what the opening may disclose.

A painting by Troyon, "Landscape and Cattle," sold in New York for $550, which was deemed a very reasonable figure, considering the high price of beef.

A patient suffering from smallpox has escaped from New Jersey hospital, and the authorities are industriously searching for somebody to search for him.

We can't all be captains of industry, and we don't expect to be. There are quite a number of us who would be very glad to be first lieutenants retired on half-pay.—Puck.

Millionaire Ziegler has decided to back another polar expedition. Such persistence and nerve ought to put the crew under obligations to accumulate at least a few chilblains.

The men behind the guns have received due credit, and now Admiral Schley amends the famous phrase by adding "the men before the furnace." The amendment will be unanimously accepted.

President Elliot of Harvard complains that the graduates of that institution are not becoming the fathers of enough children. This seems to indicate that they are marrying into the very best circles.

A good example of marrying in haste is that of the young couple who took the matrimonial vows on a railroad train traveling at the rate of a mile a minute. Did they repent at leisure after the train stopped?

The two presidents advocate earlier and more prolific marriages, and the same week the De Beers mining company puts up the price of diamonds 5 per cent regardless of the financial condition of the young man seeking an engagement ring.

The Montana legislature is being urged to give Mrs. Steven Murphy a reward of $3,000 for being the mother of triplets. This is a good move. The mother of triplets ought to have consolation of some sort, and money is what she generally needs most.

MAD BOAR GOES ASSAILANT

Beast Makes Attack on Man Who Had Beaten It.

Much excitement was caused at the little village of Coleman by the ferocious attack on F. X. Hammes by a mad boar and his narrow escape from death. He was chasing the boar from a berry patch and struck the animal several times with a club when the beast became enraged and turned on him. Hammes started for the gate with the infuriated beast after him. In attempting to get over the fence he slipped and fell directly in front of the boar, which began immediately to savagely gore him. Medical aid was summoned, and though he will recover he was badly wounded and suffered a severe shock to his nervous system.

SIPHON BOTTLES USED IN FIRE

Menominee Man Uses Carbonated Water and Saves Establishment.

C. L. Hanson, manager of the Menominee Pope factory, is a fire department all by himself. A fire started in the roof of the pop distillery and efforts were made to extinguish it with water thrown with pails. It failed to yield and a fire alarm was about to be turned in when Mr. Hanson thought of the siphon bottles, which are filled with carbonated water ready for a squirt. Leveling the siphons at the blaze he fired away until he had exhausted a case of the water and put out the blaze. Mr. Hanson will now introduce the siphon into the fire departments of the two states.

Epidemic is Over.

Plainwell's scarlet fever epidemic is about over, as no new cases have been reported recently. Although there were quite a number of cases they were light and no deaths resulted. The primary school is closed on account of the epidemic and one of the teachers is a victim to the disease.

Bonds Do Not Sell.

Escanaba still has on its hands the $50,000 bonds voted some months ago to pay the indebtedness on the local lighting plant. They are 4 per cent bonds, and it is thought a higher rate of interest must be offered before they can be disposed of.

Seeks Sugar Factory.

Not content with its fruit and cabbage, Benzle county wants to raise sugar beets and a movement has been started to secure a sugar factory at Frankfort, which would furnish the farmers with a market close at hand for the beets.

Close Schools.

Graying health officials believe in an ounce of prevention. Two or three cases of diphtheria and several of measles caused schools to be closed and extra precautions taken to prevent its spread.

Quick Work.

Within ten days Cheboygan raised $30,000, bought a site and got ready the plans for the cannery factory, and the plant is to be ready for business June 1.

SETS FIRE TO HIS CLOTHING

Nursery Employee May Lose Both Hands as Result of Accident.

Nathaniel Steele, a young man employed at the Central Michigan nursery, south of Kalamazoo, may lose both hands as a result of severe burns. While filling a gasoline tank his clothes became saturated, and when he lighted a match he was enveloped in flames. He used his hands to extinguish the fire on his body and in a pile of rubbish nearby. As a result the skin and flesh were burned from them to a depth which exposes the arteries. It is feared the arteries will burst and that he will bleed to death. Physicians say both hands will probably have to be amputated. Steele is 30 years of age. A year ago he suffered another serious accident, falling thirty feet down an elevator shaft. He had but recently recovered from the effects of this.

Buy Land for Park.

The Sons of St. George at Iron Mountain have bought fifty-four acres of land west of that city, which will be converted into a park for picnic purposes. It will also be used as a base ball park. A half-mile race track will be built around the land, and a meeting held yearly. The annual convention of the Sons of St. George is to be held in Iron Mountain in July, and as there is no place to entertain the thousands expected, the local lodge bought the land for a park.

Many Empty Cars.

Residents of Monroe cannot understand why there should be the hue and cry raised by the railroads that they cannot get cars to move their freight. On the Michigan Central tracks in that city there is a string of empty cars nearly a mile in length. They have been lying on the side-track for nearly a month. The Lake Shore also has a large number of empties in the yard and more fill nearly every side-track between there and Adrian.

To Locate Her Relatives.

Mrs. G. F. Latty, 317 Porter street, Saginaw, is anxious to find some of her relatives whom she has not seen since 1863. When a child she was in the care of the late Dennis Bow of Bridgeport, who was at that time in charge of the county poor house. In 1864 she was adopted by Elder Christ Stoddard of Chesaning. Her maiden name was Richards.

Odd Verdicts.

A man was killed by a Houghton street car and his widow and children could get a verdict of $5 damages for his death. A woman was slightly injured while alighting from a car in the same town, sued the company and was awarded $3,000. Both these verdicts have been sustained by the Supreme court.

Election Rivals.

There is some excitement at Hancock in the matter of the coming village election. For years past A. J. Scott has been re-elected president of the village every March without opposition, but this year another candidate has been put in the field and a hot fight is being waged.

FRATERNITY HOUSE AT ANN ARBOR.

Plans have been prepared for a fraternity house for the Phi Delta Theta Society of the University of Michigan, to be built at the corner of Washtenaw avenue and South University street, Ann Arbor. It will be 40x33 feet in size, two stories besides finished attic and basement. It will be constructed of pressed brick with trimmings of white terra cotta, with roof of cypress shingles. The heating will be by steam and lighting by electricity. The building is intended as a boarding and club house for the fraternity. The rear of the building will be buried to the top of the basement story against a hill, but at the front it will be entirely above ground. This story will contain the main dining room, a lodge room, toilet rooms, store rooms and rooms for heating apparatus and fuel. The first story will contain a large hall for entertainments, a library, reception room, living room and matron's quarters, with toilet rooms attached. On the second floor will be six suites, including bed room and study rooms, with large closets, connected with each also linen rooms and a general toilet room. On the attic floor will be four more suites for students, same as on the second floor, also guest rooms for visiting alumni, general toilet and trunk rooms.

Want Fire Protection.

Boysie City business men have organized to secure fire protection, more industries and good roads leading into the village. A $10,000 Odd Fellows' temple is also to be built there in the spring.

Dam is Washed Away.

The old stone dam that for forty years has furnished power from the Dowagiac river for a mill just west of Dowagiac has been finally washed away.

Demand Fire Escapes.

The owner of the opera house at Centerville has been forbidden by the village authorities to rent the house for any more attractions until fire escapes have been placed on the building.

Real Estate is Active.

Considerable property in the vicinity of Stanton has changed hands this winter, and it is said that in the spring a colony of Dunkards will settle there.

GUARD OFFICERS ADVANCED

Col. Abbey's Election Promotes Other Kalamazoo Men.

By the election of Lieut.-Col. P. L. Abbey of Kalamazoo to the coloncy of the Second Regiment, M. N. G., other Kalamazoo officers will be advanced all down the line. Joseph B. Westledge of Kalamazoo becomes second of the three majors. By previous announcement Capt. Don C. Ingraham of Company C, will be approved regimental adjutant. First Lieut. Wm. Redmond will probably be elected captain in his place and Wm. Osborne raised from second to first lieutenant. Kalamazoo is now headquarters for the second regiment which let had not been since Co. E. M. Irish was in command eleven years ago.

Saves His Daughter.

Hattie, the little seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strong, had a narrow escape from cremation at Ann Arbor. Her dress caught fire from touching a red hot stove, and as the flames rose she screamed. Her father rushed in and, with presence of mind, rolled her about on the carpet until the fire was extinguished. He was just in time to save her life. He received some burns about the hands, but the little girl escaped without any serious effects.

Hard Luck Tale.

Hugh McCann, a woodsman, reported to the Bay City police that he came from the pines and fell in with some companions with whom he made a good fellow of himself, spending about $50 in treating them. The remainder of his money, which he says amounted to $200, he claims, was stolen from him. The detective who took the case in charge came to the conclusion later in the day that McCann had drawn largely upon his imagination.

To Develop Power.

Plans are now being made for the harnessing of the Escanaba river about three miles above Escanaba. There is a fall of eighty feet and experts assert that it will be one of the most easily developed powers in the upper peninsula. The power will be transformed into electricity at the dam and transmitted overland to Escanaba for the operation of the manufacturing plants.

Woman is On Fire.

A Reading woman thought she smelled burning cloth the other day, and looked all over the house without finding the fire. Then she stepped out doors and a neighbor solved the mystery by the discovery that the woman was carrying the fire around her. The back of her skirt had been smoldering and when she struck the outdoor air it burst into a blaze.

Boys Get Reward.

S. A. Watt and Ed Wallingford, two Saranac boys, are richer by $300 apiece, presented to them by Uncle Sam for information they furnished which resulted in the arrest and conviction of thieves who robbed the postoffice at Coral about a year ago.

Wanted—Lumberjacks.

In the upper peninsula $45 per month is now being paid for good woodmen in that section, and the operators can't get all the men they want even at that figure. Many operators are losing what men they have, the lumberjacks deserting the camps for the cities.

County Seat Fight.

Benzle also has a county seat fight on its hands. About ten years ago the county seat was removed from Benzonia to Frankfort. Now Benzonia wants it back again and offers to erect new buildings if the people vote for the change of location.

Gets Machine Shop.

Ironwood will gain a new industry at the expense of the neighboring town of Hurley, just over the line in Wisconsin. It is a machine shop and foundry, and will remove from Wisconsin on account of the high rate of taxation in that state.

Falls Eighty Feet.

John Compre of Iron Mountain, aged 52 years, had been out of work the entire winter. He at last secured work at the Traders' mine and had been there just one hour when he fell down a shaft a distance of 80 feet. No bones were broken.

Onaway is Progressive.

It is only a couple of years since Onaway was incorporated as a village, but already there is talk of making it a city and with Onaway to talk of a thing means to do it.

Lake Contaminated.

The lake just southeast of Jerome has been found to contain an unlimited amount of fine marl, and options are being secured on the property for the ultimate erection of a cement plant.

Hold Onions for Raisin.

Hundreds of bushels of onions are being held by farmers around Brighton in the hope of getting $1 a bushel. This was the price last winter, but this year there have been few buyers.

Horribly Burned. Nathaniel Steele's clothing became saturated with gasoline when he was filling a tank in the Central Michigan Nursery, south of Kalamazoo. He struck a match, and flames enveloped him. He used his hands in extinguishing the fire, and the flesh was burned off them until the blood vessels were exposed. It may be necessary to amputate both hands. Steele only recently recovered from injuries received in falling 20 feet in an elevator shaft a year ago. He is 30 years old.

Fines and Jail.

John Kurtz, of South Haven, for violation of local option law, has been sentenced to 20 days in jail and a $50 fine. If the fine be not paid, he must spend 30 days more in jail. George McDougal, of Pine Grove, for the same kind of offense, was given 30 days' imprisonment and fined $30, with 30 days more in jail in case of non-payment of the fine. George Sams, of Bangor, convicted of indecency, was sentenced to 90 days in jail.

The Ithaca Fever Recurred.

James Francis McEvoy, of Bliss, N. Y., died of typhoid fever in Cornell infirmary Saturday night. He was a sophomore in the college of arts and sciences. Paul G. Wanke, a graduate student in Cornell, died Saturday at his home in New York from typhoid fever, contracted in Ithaca. Eighteen students have now died in Ithaca or at their homes during the present epidemic. Two deaths from typhoid of citizens of Ithaca also occurred Saturday.

While riding on a load of logs with his father a little son of Charles Baldwin, a farmer near Bronson, was crushed to death by the breaking of a chain holding the logs. The little fellow was caught under the logs as they rolled off the sleigh.

Empty coffins, numbering 70, were found in the county cemetery at Knoxville, Tenn., and a negro has been arrested charged with working the "dead pauper" graft on the county officials.

STATE LEGISLATURE

Brief Chronicle of Matters of Importance.

These are some of the propositions for the legislators to consider—to abolish the lock step in penal institutions; to make steam and electric roads exchange business at crossings; to tax sleeping and dining cars under a specific system; to increase the number of Supreme Judges to eight; to prevent retail sales of liquors by canvassers; to make liquor sellers at the flats pay the regular license; to submit to the people the question of calling a convention for a general revision of the constitution; a bill for a general primary election law; to close theatres on Sunday; to relieve county treasurers of responsibility in cases like that of Wayne county; a bill appropriating $1,500 annually to establish a chair of American archaeology in the University of Michigan; to extend the operations of the law for the examination of horsehoers; to provide for a central bureau for the identification of criminals.

Richard's liquor dispensary bill is a measure like which has been in effect for seven years in South Carolina, where saloons were abolished in 1896. In the place of the saloons, the state dispensary of liquor is established. Any community may have a dispensary on petition of a majority of the voters of the village, township or ward. This dispensary is to be presided over by a state officer receiving $1,000 a year. He will furnish liquor at market prices in sealed packages, which may not be opened in the dispensary. All profits are to accrue to the state. The system of dispensaries is to be presided over by a state board of five members, each paid $1,500 a year, and a state liquor commissioner at $2,500 a year, who is to be elected by the board. The bill also provides for chemical examination in the Agricultural College of all liquor dispensed.

The Michigan Federation of Labor is asking for the passage of a number of important bills affecting the interests of workmen. One of these bills is intended to impose regulations as to the construction of foundries and machinery in such shops in such a way as to better protect the health of molders. It is provided that any owner or manager who does not comply with the regulations laid down may be fined $500 to $1,000 or may be imprisoned from sixty days to six months. Foremen who refused to carry out the provisions of the bill may be fined $25 or be imprisoned from ten to thirty days.

The state boards of control have certainly made calls for money for the various state institutions which, in the aggregate, are somewhat startling. The footings give the enormous total of $7,813,834 31 and this great sum does not include all, as there will be the money needed for the care of inmates of a number of penal and charitable institutions, which are paid for at the rate of 44 cents a day per inmate. Then, too, the $250,000 asked for a soldiers' monument is also not included. This amount would bring the total up to over $8,000,000.

Wednesday ended the first introduction of new bills and the legislators had the usual boys' play on in celebration of the event. It is, of course, supposed that the two bodies will now settle down to business. The total number of bills introduced in the house is 1,199, whereas there were 1,353 in 1901, so that this year's number is 159 less. The senate, however, has more bills than in 1901, 547 being introduced, which is an increase of 11. The total in both houses this year is 1,746, or 148 less than in 1901.

If Gov. Bliss signs before end of the week the bill for Wayne county primary election reform, which passed the house and senate late Tuesday afternoon and goes into effect immediately, there will be time to put the preliminary machinery into operation before the primaries. Gov. Bliss, it is understood, has already given his intimation privately that he will delay no longer than decency requires, and that the bill will be a law shortly after the printer and embosser finish their work.

It begins to look as if all the trades, as well as professions, would be provided with state boards of examiners. Examinations for barbers and horsehoers are already provided for by law, and bills are in to have accountants, engineers and firemen placed under state supervision. Some butchers also want their tradesmen to come under the public eye.

Representative Ashley, of Detroit, has introduced a bill to cut off the fees for the sheriff of Wayne county. It provides an annual salary of $8,000, all fees to go to the county general fund. The sheriff is to feed the prisoners in the jail, keeping an itemized account of his expenditures for that purpose, the bills to be audited by the county auditors.

Another bill provides for damages to workmen injured in the construction of a building, and still another extends the personal liability act, so that the contributory negligence plea may be less easily set up, and so that it will not be so easy for employers to hold that part of the blame is due to fellow workmen.

Senator Barnes believes the expense of $200,000 which is expended every ten years to take the state census is without proportionate returns and he has introduced a joint resolution to amend the constitution in this regard.

There is a bill proposing an $80,000 state factory, where blind persons could earn their living. One provision of the measure is that at least one of the members of the board of trustees shall be blind.

Representative Batchelder has a bill providing that supplies for all institutions shall be advertised for by the board of state auditors and he says it would save the state many thousands of dollars.

The house, at the request of Gov. Bliss and ex-Senator Barie, listened for 10 minutes to Highway Commissioner James H. MacDonald, of Connecticut, on the subject of good roads.

The governor has appointed Mr. Mary C. Spencer, of Lansing, as state librarian. The four-year term for which Mrs. Spencer is nominated will begin April 1 next. He has also nominated Arthur Hill, Saginaw, to be a member state board of forestry commissioners, term of four years, beginning July 1, 1903; John R. Bailey, of Mackinac Island, to be member of Mackinac Island state park commission, for the term of ten years, beginning June 22, 1903.

Friday saw the senate without quorum, and ended with no business done. The house had a quorum, but the session lasted only about an hour and a half. The session was adjourned until 10 o'clock on Monday.

The sessions will be resumed at 10 o'clock on Monday, but the week at Lansing will probably not be a long one on account of the Republican state convention and Michigan club banquet which will take place in Detroit, Friday. It is expected that nearly all the Republican members will attend these events, and that an adjournment will be taken Thursday night.

A delegation of Lapeer citizens protested against the passage of a bill providing for an epileptic colony. Sup W. A. Polkise, of the state insane asylum at Lapeer; John Hevener, of the board of control, J. R. Johnson and County Clerk J. H. Bidwell appeared before the committee to object to the removal of the epileptic patients from the Lapeer institution.

Friend Palmer worked for years to get from the national government an award to Michigan of its war claim, but was never able to get any part from the state for his work. Representative Denby has introduced a resolution instructing the board of auditors to examine Mr. Palmer's claim to pay.

Another labor bill provides that $2 a week of any household's wage shall be exempt from the provisions for the garnishment law. This will probably stir up the old fight over garnishment proceedings.

Lerry has introduced a bill providing for a colored regiment of state troops. It is the same measure which Representative Ames fathered in 1894 and which failed to pass.

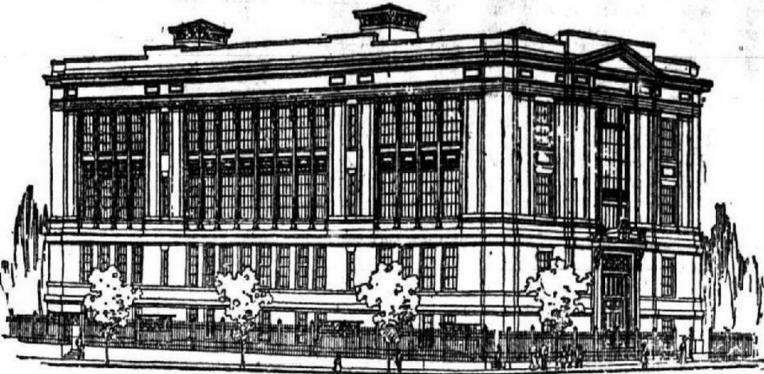

The senate confirmed the nomination of James McNaughton, of Calumet, and Wm. Kelly, of Ulenau, as members of the board of control of the College of Mines.

Representative Dennis has revived the bill to have women placed on the boards of control of state institutions where there are inmates of the weaker sex.

The bill appropriating $10,000 for the semi-centennial celebration of the opening of the Sault Ste. Marie canal was passed by the house Thursday.

MODEL SCHOOL HOUSE TO BE ERECTED AT ROXBURY, MASS.

The architectural scheme of a new grammar schoolhouse, to be erected in Roxbury, Mass., is claimed by its designer to be an absolutely model school building. The site contains 38,215 square feet, of which the schoolhouse will occupy 12,345. The building will be placed to within ten feet of the rear line of the lot, and, with this exception, will have ample permanent light on all sides. The playgrounds will be on either side of the rear and will be entered from the side streets. The area at the front of the building will be graded and sodded the entire length of the street frontage, and will eventually have ornamental planting. There will be three stories and a high basement, nineteen classrooms, cooking and manual training rooms. The basement will contain the boiler room and toilets. On the second floor there will be eight classrooms, coat rooms and emergency toilets. The third floor will have four classrooms and an assembly hall. The construction will be fireproof throughout, the exterior of red brick, with limestone ashlar in the basement walls, and limestone trimmings. The main partition bearing walls will be of brick and the smaller partitions of terra cotta. The floors are to be steel frame with terra cotta arches, and the roof steel frame, book tile and asphalt covering.

RELIC OF JOHN BROWN.

Chicago Colored Man Owns Part of Rope Which Hanged Him. One of the interesting curios on view at the late Middle States and Mississippi Valley Negro Exposition at the First Regiment armory was owned by Henry Washington of 591 West Lake street. It is a piece of the rope with which John Brown's existence was ended at Harper's Ferry, Washington vouchers for the authenticity of this relic of the martyr, whose spirit "goes marching on." He bases his credence on the following circumstances, as related by him.

His mother, Harriet Duckett, a free woman, was married to a slave owned by Edward Stonebreaker of Pleasant Valley, Md. Because of the difference in the social condition of the two she was compelled to live apart from him at Harper's Ferry. When John Brown made his appearance at that place his arrival was known only to a few free colored people thereabouts. Notable among these was Harriet Duckett.

On the day that Brown became a martyr to the cause which he believed to be right throughs of curious people came to view his execution. After the hanging the rope was cut and the pieces distributed among the owners of the near by plantations as souvenirs. Among those who secured a piece of the rope was the master of Henry Washington's father. When freedom finally came to the slaves this black man found himself in possession of this historic relic, which at his death he left to his son.—Chicago Record-Herald.

CLOVER IS HIS MASCOT.

Youth Believes Four-Leaf Variety Brings Him Luck. Superstition seems to be connected in the minds of most people with women, ladders, rabbits' feet and horseshoes," said the young girl at the piano. "As a matter of fact, however, I know that men are fully as superstitious as the women of my acquaintance, and sometimes more so. One young man of my acquaintance, for instance, who has literary yearnings, and who feels sure he could astonish the public with his brilliant stories if he could only get some editor to accept them, spends his summers in the country gathering inspiration, local color, and—four leaf clovers. When winter comes he returns to his hall room in the city, writes stories by the whole sale and dispatches with each consignment to the editor a four-leaf clover. Sometimes the articles are accepted and then the writer ascribes his success to the talisman. More often, however, they are returned, with the mascot in a more or less crumpled condition and he spends what leisure hours he has in trying to figure out why it is those clovers don't work every time. Never for a moment does he ascribe failure to any faults in his manuscripts. Isn't that the limit in the way of superstition?"

A Swindle.

In the wire grass region of Georgia quail are very abundant, and are known to the natives as "partridges." Recently one of the South Georgia "crackers" sold off a lot of turpentine land, and decided to indulge himself in a trip to far off New York while his money was still in hand. Once in the amazing metropolis, there was another Delmonico's was a name that had long ago tickled his fancy, and quail on toast was a high bred dish that he had long yearned to know personally. So to Delmonico's he hid himself and there ordered the delectable bit, and he eyed it severely, then tasted, finally sampling thoroughly. But his after comment on the feast savored of that sad knowledge which borders close to disgust.

"Wall, if I hadn't come to New York, I'd never knowed that quail on toast war'n't a blamed thing but Glyn county partridges stuck up on burnt light bread.

MEDICINE TOO GOOD FOR HORSE.

Doctor Prescribed Whisky and Quinine and Grooms Celebrated. A gallon of quinine and whisky, ordered for a valuable horse belonging to Miss Genevieve Winterbotham, daughter of a Chicago millionaire, was responsible recently for the temporary uselessness of two stablemen at Bryn Mawr.

When Miss Winterbotham, who is a student at Bryn Mawr college, came east she brought with her a valuable bay saddle horse, but on account of the change of climate the animal became ill and it was necessary to secure the services of a veterinarian, who prescribed quinine and whisky. The mistress of the sick horse took special pains to secure the best brand of whisky obtainable and taking it to the stable gave it to the men and told them how to use it.

When she called the next morning she approached the horse, but detected no smell of liquor. The stablemen, when seen and asked why the horse was not given any of the medicine, winked and said the demijohn must have been cracked, for it was empty. The two men were ill for the rest of the day, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, but declare they feel safe from catching a bad cold. The next supply of the fiery stuff was given in charge of the owner of the stable to be administered to the horse by him.

What Did She Mean? The Rev. Harry P. Jewey of Brooklyn tells the story of a friend of his who once attended a meeting where a Presbyterian minister preached only ten minutes—a most unusual thing for a Presbyterian minister to do.

"Brethren," said the minister, when he stopped suddenly, "I have a dog at home that must be peculiarly fond of paper. He has eaten that part of my sermon that I have not delivered, and I'll have to stop here."

After the meeting a woman met the clergyman at the door, and after shaking him by the hand, asked: "Doctor, I want to know whether that dog of yours has any pups. If so, I want to get one of them and give it to my minister."

What Did She Mean? They were at supper. Between the courses the young man with the voracious appetite discoursed eloquently on things in general.

"Do you know, Miss Dash," he remarked, "I think there is a very intimate relation between our food and our character. I believe, don't you know, that we grow like what we are most fond of."

The fair girl smiled sweetly. "How interesting!" she murmured. "May I pass you the ham, Mr. Jones? I am sure you will like it."

And the young man relapsed into deep thought.

A LONG SENTENCE INDEED.

Senator Ewart Was Easily Outdone by Recorder Smyth. The late Abram S. Hewitt had a very nimble wit and dearly loved a joke. He was once a guest at a dinner which included the late Recorder Smyth and Senator Ewatts. The recorder was poking fun at the senator, and, adjusting his eyeglasses, read from a newspaper clipping what purported to be a sentence from a recent speech made by the senator, but was in reality wholly fictitious—as the recorder knew quite well. At its conclusion the laugh was long and hearty at Mr. Ewatts' expense, and no one laughed longer or heartier than the senator himself.

As soon as the laughter had subsided Mr. Hewitt suddenly leaned across the table, and, looking rather sternly into the smiling face of the recorder, said, in a well-assumed tone of reproach:

"That certainly is a remarkable sentence, your honor, but criticism of it does not come well from you if to-day's newspapers are to be believed, for they contain a sentence of much greater length which is attributed to you."

"Why—why—how is that, Mr. Hewitt?" inquired the recorder with considerable confusion.

"Because," said Mr. Hewitt, with the utmost gravity, and that grim smile which always accompanied his best sayings, "you are there quoted as uttering a sentence that was to last through the whole life of the prisoner."—New York Times.

INGENIOUS DEVICE FOR SOOTHING FRETFUL INFANTS

A Swiss mechanic has invented an automatic baby's nurse which will, if it proves practical, save fathers from walking floors at night and permit of mothers leaving their infants to themselves. The apparatus is attached to a cradle. If the baby cries all ways cause specially arranged wires to operate a phonograph, which sings a lullaby, while simultaneously clockwork is released and rocks the cradle. When the crying stops the wires cease to vibrate and the cradle stops rocking.

Why all this abuse of the meek and lowly mule? The mule is a faithful worker, and no one can gainsay that he sings contraalto with fervor and "lanked sweetness, long drawn out!" Irving was a man who could appreciate a mule, and in his description of the beautiful and skittish Sleepy Hollow he firmly believes mention of the mule was omitted merely through oversight! His muleship would have looked well against a background of tall foliage in the heart of the Hollow, galloping like mad along the highway where the unfortunate Ichabod met his unseemly fate, or serenely poking his nose over the barnyard fence at the Van Tassel homestead! Somehow we love a mule. Considering the size of his ears, his feet are so fanciful and trim, his coat is so sleek and he is "patience on a monument"—waiting for something to kick at! But we can't blame the mule for kicking. The city man kicks at the janitor, the country man kicks at the calves in the cabbage patch—and if your ears were as long as a mule's you would kick also—or anyone else you got a chance at!

Charles Dana Knottington, the itinerant "type sticker," was weary, hungry and footsore—but not discouraged. He was a man of many towns, a peregrinating bum printer, known from Kalamazoo, Mich., to Butte, Mont. He was not only known of men but his acquaintance was wide, varied and reminiscent. He knew a man who worked with Horace Greeley and once he had held cases "longside o' Lazarus" on the Butte Miner. With the "perfresh" he was a man of many ties, typographical and railroad. In fact his knowledge of great editors and association with "swifts," was as endless as the railroad ties over which, during a nomadic career, he had passed on the bumpers.

Thus it was, in the course of events, he had landed in Podunk and sought the usual employment. But, alas! the deadly machine had shown its head in the "beautiful little city on the Squirtlet" and Charles Dana Knottington had been turned down. The alley wherein once was heard "the silent messengers" of the gang as they "clicked, clicked" in the sticks, was no more—the invention of man, with ruthless clank and clang, had usurped the bread and butter of hundreds like Charles Dana K.

Having been refused work he asked for a "pan-handle," but the cruel heart of the editor was petrifying fast and Knottington turned from the office of the "Podunk Pumpkin" with sorrow in his very soul.

But he was not discouraged. Had he not successfully combated the stern realities of life innumerable times, and exultant, rose joyously above the sordid obstacles that barred his printorial way? Aye! aye! indeed!

"It is to think," said Charlie, who was a faithful subscriber to the colored supplement.

"It is ten miles to Bumperville and no freight train before midnight." Ere the stary stars burst through the canopy of night he would starve like a common hobo who chalked gate posts and begged for "dookies" of the kitchen mechanics. "Nay! Nay! Pauline," he would not let the gnaw of hunger eat at the vitals of his inner self like a rat chewing an old shoe in the garret.

Philosophically Charles Dana Knottington tapped his forehead with the index finger of his right hand and, sinking down beside a pile of ashes in the back lot of the Pumpkin office, pulled from his pocket the "Morning Cow Bell" and began to read.

"Horrible! What's this! 'Mt. Pelee swallowed up a thousand lives! 'Life is but as candles snuffed out in the twinkling of an eye!' The entire island buried in a storm of ashes!"

"ASHES!" "The recumbent form of Charles Dana arose vigorously to a rectangular figure!

"Ashes!" he gasped, "Ashes!" In a moment he was gone, but in the dusky shadows of eventide a dark form might have been seen diligently engaged at the ash pile in the alley back of where the "Podunk Pumpkin" had its abstract being!

And in the next issue of the "Pumpkin" appeared this notice: "A DASTARD'S WORK." "A miserable tramp printer of the name of Charlie Knottington filed several hundred envelopes with ashes and clinkers from some Podunk ash-heap last Tuesday evening and sold them to our inhabitants for ten cents each as souvenirs of Mt. Pelee. Hanging is too good for such boobies."

But many miles away, like Sheridan, Charles Dana Knottington was calmly smoking a clear sauer-kraut leaf cigar in the rear of the office of the "Strawberry Point Sweet Corn"—and beside him rose, full high, another pile of ash and clinkers, or Mt. Pelee after the eruption!

St. Valentine's day, 1903, has passed another Rubicon. The two little doves contraalto to each other on a stubbed twig have been put away in Mamie's escritoire with the arrow-pierced hearts and the passionate verse of yesteryear, and once more we are wobbling along with only our courage to help us get married. Dan Cupid is recovering from his dissipation of love-making and recuperating for the time when the redder iris comes upon the breast of robin, when the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, and when pa is better natured because he doesn't have to buy more coal and more gas!

Apollo and Hymen and Venus and Cupid have all done their worst with the paper love-tokens, and once again we are up against the cold, cruel problem of getting our spring overcoat out of pawn. It is like leaving Utopia to go to the woodshed to split kindling. Life is so practical at times it makes us grow pessimistical and long for a false and unfriendly stimulant. It is only those who receive comic valentines who are not plunged from heaven to a stranded cable car in the twinkling of an eye.

The editor of the Richfield (Utah) Reeper is so nervous these days he jumps when the fair type drops a three-em quad or the devil enters his presence unannounced. The reason is his son, aged seven and one-half years, has a bow and arrow sent by a loving aunt. As a result the Reeper family members are all Indians and the boy is zealously stalking them in a mad desire to snatch their scalps. He is also practicing the William Tell racket on his sister. Pity the poor editor!

WHEN THE LANE TURNS. I. There'll be light and joy forever— When the long lane turns— When the singing of the river— When the long lane turns— When the light that falls in showers over you— And over me, And we'll revel in the gardens where the fairest roses be— When the lane—when the long lane turns!

THE HUMAN WAY.

A Charming Little Story For the Discontented.

"WONDER," muttered young Mrs. Perry, jerking a hatpin from the cushion, "if I'll ever in this life possess suitable and reasonable things to wear?"

She thrust a hatpin rather viciously through the dainty summer creation that crowned her head.

"One would suppose I didn't know," she indignantly told her reflected image, "that a trim, tailor-made dress and walking hat are the correct dress for summer. One would suppose I didn't realize how shabby and out of taste is this hat, winter skirt and odd spring jacket. But what use to know these things, when one has no money?"

She sighed despairingly and rummaged in a box for her oft-cleaned gloves. The sight of them lying beside a small pile of newly washed sock ribbons provoked a fresh burst of scorn.

"Oh, the littleness of it!" she cried, bitterly. "To spend one's God-given energies in cleaning and mending and turning and dyeing—all because of a miserable, soul-pinching lack of money."

Catching up gloves and pocketbook she passed into the sitting-room of the little flat.

"Be sure to take good care of Freddie while I'm gone, Dora," she advised her cousin, who bent over her school book, the two-year-old youngster playing at her feet.

"I'll try," was the rather weary answer. "He's always getting into mischief, though, no matter how I watch him."

The mother sighed impatiently. "I suppose," she said aggrievedly, "that I ought really to stay with him. But it does seem as if I might have some recreation once in a while, even if it's no more than going to do a little shopping. But then, I'm always made to feel guilty if I demand any release from the daily grind."

She kissed the child hastily. Good-bye, Freddie—mamma's coming back soon. Gracious! how dirty that dress is, and I just put it on an hour ago. I must make him some new things this week. Oh! the hundreds of things crying to be done. Shall I ever, ever have any leisure?"

"It isn't right," she protested, as she hurried along the street, "that any human being should be obliged to waste precious powers on miserly economies and paltry strivings. There should be time for something else than getting meals and making beds and keeping clothes in order. There should be leisure! Time to think and study and develop the higher regions of one's being. Time to appreciate the beauties of the finer things of life. Oh, there's something wrong with the system of things!"

The sight of gorgeous shop windows only accentuated her bitter mood. Mrs. Perry did not possess the philosophy that enables one to enjoy beauty regardless of possession. The display of exquisite garments only filled her with wretchedness.

"It is cruel!" she persisted. "Cruel to be deprived of these things, when one has the taste and the artistic ability to appreciate them so keenly." It was half an hour later, as she stood at a counter making modest purchases that the sound of a woman's voice nearby arrested her attention. There was something exceedingly familiar in the well-modulated tones.

Glancing up, she saw that her surmise was correct. The perfectly apparelled woman who stood looking at silks was no other than a friend of her childhood.

"Do sit back and relax and forget if you can all about the duties waiting for you at home. I shan't listen to your going under two hours at the least. Dinner to get? Oh! well, can't you let it go for to-day? There! Perhaps it is thoughtless for me to talk so. You see, I have no responsibilities whatever. I've lived in hotels ever since I married. Howard is out of town so much it really wouldn't be sensible to keep house. And then I travel with him most of the time."

Mrs. Perry leant forward impulsively. "What an ideal life!" she cried. "Just what I've always wanted. You have leisure—time to think and study and see the world and accomplish great things. Oh! Clara, you should be very thankful."

Mrs. Eberly laughed rather helplessly. "Accomplish great things!" she repeated. "Why, Margaret, I don't accomplish anything. If you ask me why, I am sure I cannot tell. All I know is that I am constantly on the go, and yet I do nothing. My life is absolutely of no use to the world. Doesn't it sound dreadful? Especially when you think of my essays at school on the subject of higher living and all that. I'm sure you must be shocked—"

"I'm not shocked, but greatly astonished. I thought—I was sure—that having money and opportunities would make a difference. You don't have to spend your forces worrying about dress—"

"Dress! 'Tis the bane of my existence. That is just it. The tailor and the milliner and the modiste and all the rest of the terrible train take up so much of my existence that I sometimes long to cry out for release. Fashion makes greater demands upon women every year. Oh, it's a problem! I don't pretend to know the solution of it. But I sometimes yearn for a simple, quiet life—for a life utterly free from all this foolish frippery and nonsense. I would like a little home that I could care for myself. Oh! what joy I would take in making it sweet and attractive for my husband! And I would be willing to wear simple clothes—and to have only a few of them—numerous clothes are such a burden—and I would be happy—oh, so happy—for to me that would be living!"

On her way homeward an hour later Mrs. Perry gazed musingly at the shop windows.

"Strange!" she sighed. "People always want what they do not possess. And somehow I really believe Clara meant what she said."—New York News.

How Wars Begin. "Here is a remarkable statement," said Mr. Bibbin, looking up from his newspaper.

"What is it, dear?" his wife asked. "It says that there has not been a decade in the last five centuries in which war has not been waged somewhere in the world."

"Isn't that dreadful? Why can't people be reasonable and live in peace?" "Because people are mostly intolerant fools," Mr. Bibbin answered. "I declare, it makes a man ashamed of his kind." He crumpled the paper and dashed it to the floor.

"There, there, Elias," said his wife, "don't get excited over it." "Who's getting excited? I s'pose I've got a right to express an opinion in my own house."

"It's no more your house than mine, I'd have you know," said Mrs. Bibbin. "I guess I worked and scrimped as hard as you did to get it."

"See here, madame!" "Don't you madam me, Elias Bibbin, I won't stan' it!" "Oh, you won't, won't you? Well, if you were a man, I'd punch your impertinent jaw!"

"No you wouldn't, you big bully. You wouldn't dare say boo to a man."

"I wouldn't, heh?" He strode toward her, shaking his fist. "For two cents I'd—"

"You lay a hand on me," said Mrs. Bibbin, snatching up the rese vase, "and I'll—"

The Changed Grizzly. There are numerous reliable statements of grizzly bears having attacked men, but nowadays the grizzly does not seek out his human victims as he used to do. Neither does he lie in wait, and pouncing upon a hunter, tear him into blood; shards in delirious fiendishness, as the oldtime stories used to tell. The change in the grizzly's disposition is likened by veteran hunters to the change in character of the white cousin of the grizzly, the polar bear of the Arctic. When the stations for the Hudson's Bay Company were established, the diaries of the men there often referred to the fright of attacks by polar bears. Many a navigator in the Arctic seas has been clawed and chewed to death by polar bears. But for nearly a century the polar bear has not been regarded as so very fierce, and nowadays it is looked upon as a cowardly beast. Association with armed men has modified the polar bear's disposition.—Outing.

How to Win Mothers-in-Law. A man has written a fiery and furious letter to the Post denouncing his mother-in-law. He demands the abolition of mother-in-law and declares that they are a blot on civilization. Let him ask himself if he ever tried to be loving and kind to his mother-in-law. The only way to settle a dispute with your wife is to clasp her to your heart and smother the row with kisses. It is idle to attempt to out-argue a woman, and the futile attempts to do so are the cause of untold misery. The mother-in-law is a woman. You can't get the best of her except by two means—brute force or love. To love.—Denver Post.

Mrs. Ford thought of the alarm clock, wound it up, let it ring and, after the racket, in a loud tone of voice said: "Is this the marshals? Please come here at once. More in Touch. A placard announcing "Fine Skating on Crystal Lake" prompted a well-known Reading man to indulge in that diversion the other day. Not having essayed it for some years, he soon showed his want of practice by sitting down very unceremoniously on the ice, which operation he repeated at frequent intervals. One small boy, observing him in that position, skated up and said: "Mister, you haven't got your skates on right." Etiquette in Sweden. The Swedes are a quiet, taciturn people. There is no jostling, even among the lowest classes. You are expected to lift your hat to the shabbiest person you meet in the street, and to enter a shop, office or bank with the hat on is considered a bad breach of good manners. In retiring from a restaurant you are expected to bow to the occupants. Bowling and hat lifting are so common that people seem to move around more slowly than elsewhere in order to observe the courtesies.—Detroit Free Press.

Why Dead River. The western branch of the Kennebec has been given the name Dead River, because in 1775 it was full of drowned soldiers. So one may read, but there is not a syllable of truth in it; and the next picture conjured up by the name, a doleful Styx, turbid and miasmatic, is equally false. The plain fact is that the river flows for a long distance through meadows, and, unless the water is high, is scarcely seen to move at all. That is why it has been called dead. Nothing gloomy belongs to the name. A detectable and captivating stream is Dead river.—Century.

THE MAID of MAIDEN LANE

Sequel to "The Bow of Orange Ribbon."

A LOVE STORY BY AMELIA E. BARR

About six o'clock Arenta Van Ariens made a personal response to her friend's message. She was all excitement and expectation. Who do you think called on me this afternoon. No less a person than Madame Kippon. Gertrude Kippon is going to be married. She is going to marry a French count! And Madame is beside herself with the great alliance.

"Our drawing-rooms, and even our streets, are full of titles," said Cornelia; "I think it is a distinction to be plain master and mistress."

"That is the truth; even this handsome dandy, Joris Hyde, is a lieutenant."

"He was in the field two years. He told me so this afternoon. I dare say, he has earned his title, even if he is a lieutenant."

"Don't be so highly-tighty, Cornelia. I have no objection to military titles. In fact, I rather lean to official titles of every kind."

Then Arenta, having arranged her ringlets, tied her sash and her sandals, the girls went down to the parlor.

Dr. Moran, Rem Van Ariens, and Lieut. Hyde were present. The latter was handsomely dressed in a dark-blue velvet coat, silver-laced, a long white satin vest and black satin breeches. His hair was blown back-wards and tied with the customary black ribbon, and his linen and laces were of the finest quality. He met Cornelia as he might have met a princess; and he flashed into Arenta's eyes a glance of admiration which turned her senses upside down, and

"Dear Arenta, we shall have so much more time, to-morrow. Come to-morrow."

But Arenta was not pleased. She left her friend with an air of repressed injury, and afterwards made little remarks about Cornelia to her brother, which exactly fitted his sense of wounded pride.

"Ever since she was a little girl, eleven years old, I have loved her," said Rem; "and she knows it."

"She knows it; that is so. When I was at Bethlehem, I read her all your letters, and many a time you spoke in them of her as your 'little wife.' Come, come, we must go to our rooms, for that is our father I hear moving about. In a few minutes he will be angry, and then—"

She did not finish the sentence; there was no necessity; Rem knew what unpleasantness the threat implied, and he slipped off his shoes and stole quietly upstairs. Arenta did not hurry, though the great Flemish clock on the stair-landing chimed eleven as she entered her room.

"After all," she mused, "the evening was a possibility. It was a door on the latch—I may push it open and go in—who can tell? I saw how amazed he was at my beauty when I first entered the parlor—and he is but a man—and a young man who likes his own way—so much is evident."

Then she heard her brother moving about the floor of the room above her and a shadow darkened her face. She had strong family affections, and she was angry that Rem should be troubled by any man or woman, living.

The fresh sea wind and the bright sunshine.

made her feel, for a moment or two, as if she could hardly breathe.

Upon Arenta's brother he had not produced a pleasant impression. Without intention, he had treated young Van Ariens with that negative politeness which dashes a sensitive man, and makes him resentfully conscious that he has been rendered incapable of doing himself justice. And Rem tried in various ways to introduce some conversation which would afford him the pleasure of contradiction. He failed to consider that his barely veiled antagonism compelled from the doctor, and even from Cornelia and Arenta, attentions he might not otherwise have received. So Hyde easily became the hero of the hour, he was permitted to teach the girls the charming old-world step of the Pas de Quatre, and afterwards to sing with them merry airs from Figaro, and sentimental airs from Lodoiska.

Fortunately, some of Dr. Moran's neighbors called early in the evening. Then what parties were formed. But though Cornelia was all sweetness and graciousness; though Rem played well and Lieut. Hyde played badly; though Rem had the satisfaction of watching Hyde depart in his chair, while he stood with a confident friendship by Cornelia's side, he was not satisfied. There was an air of weariness and constraint in the room, and the little air of departing visitors did not hide it. Rem approached his sister and said, "It is time to go home." Arenta looked at her friend; she expected to be asked to remain, and she was offended when Cornelia did not give her the invitation.

"I expected you would ask me to stay with you, Cornelia."

"I think it is best for you to go home with Rem. Otherwise he might, in his present temper, find himself near Becker's; and if a man is quarrelsome he may always get principals and seconds there. In the morning Rem will, I hope, be reasonable."

"I thought you and I would talk things over to-night. I like to talk over a new pleasure."

"I have always thought Cornelia a very saint," she muttered, "but Love is the great revealer. I wonder if she is in love—to tell the truth, she was past finding out. I cannot say that I saw the least sign of it—and between me and myself, Rem was unreasonable; however, I am not pleased that Rem felt himself to be badly used."

And she said her prayers, and fell calmly asleep, to the flattering thought, "I would not much wonder if, at this moment, Lieut. Hyde is thinking about me."

In reality, Lieut. Hyde was at that moment in the Belvedere club, singing the "Marsellaise," and listening to a very inflammatory speech from the French minister. But a couple of hours later, Arenta's "wonder" would have touched the truth. He was then alone, and very ill satisfied; for, after some restless reflections, he said impatiently:

"I have again made a fool of myself. I have now all kinds of unpleasant feelings, and when I left that good doctor's house I was well satisfied. His daughter is an angel. I praise myself for finding that out."

Then he rose, threw off his velvet and lace, and despondently let his thoughts turn to Arenta. "She is pretty beyond all prettiness," he said softly as he moved about. "She dances well, talks from hand to mouth, and she gave me one sweet glance, and I think if she has gone so far—she might go further."

CHAPTER III.

Hyde and Arenta.

Scidom is Love ushered into any life with any pomp of circumstance or ceremony; there is no overture to our opera, no prologue to our play, and the most momentous meetings occur as if by mere accident. A friend delayed Cornelia a while on the street, and turning, she met Hyde face to face; a moment more, or less, and the meeting had not been. Ah, but some Power had set that moment for their meeting, and the delay had been intended, and the consequences foreseen!

In a dim kind of way Hyde realized this fact as he sat the next day with an open book before him. He was not reading it; he was thinking of Cornelia. Soon he closed his book with impatience, and went to Prince's and bought a little rush basket filled with sweet violets. Into their midst he slipped his visiting card, and saw the boy on his way with the flowers to Cornelia ere he was satisfied that he would reach her quickly enough. Then turning aimlessly into Pearl street, he saw Cornelia.

She was dressed only in a little morning gown of Indian chintz, but in such simple toilet had still more distinctively that air of youthful modesty which he had found so charmingly tantalizing.

Cornelia was going to the "Universal Store" of Gerardus Duyckinck, and Hyde begged to go with her. He said he was used to shopping, and could tell the value of laces, and knew how to choose a piece of silk, or match the crewels for her embroidery; and, indeed, pleaded his case so merrily, that there was no refusing his offer. And how it happened lovers can tell, but after the shopping was finished they found themselves walking towards the Battery, with the fresh sea wind, and the bright sunshine, and the joy of each other's presence all around them.

Now Love has always something in it of the sea, and the murmur of the tide against the pier, the hoarse voices of the sailor men, the scent of the salt water, and all the occult unrecognized, but keenly felt life of the ocean, were ministers to their love, and forever and ever blended in the heart and memory of the youth and maid who had set their early dream of each other to its potent witchery. Time went swiftly, and suddenly Cornelia remembered that she was subject to hours and minutes. A little fear came into her heart, and closed it, and she said, with a troubled air, "My mother will be anxious. I had forgotten. I must go home." So they turned northward again.

At the gates of her home they stood a moment, and there Hyde touched her hand and said, "I have never, in all my life, been so happy. It has been a walk beyond hope, and beyond expression." And she lifted her face, and the smile on her lips and the light in her eyes answered him.

Cornelia trembled as she opened the parlor door; she feared to look into her mother's face, but it was as serene as usual, and she met her daughter's glance with one of infinite affection and some little expectancy. This was a critical moment, and Cornelia hesitated slightly. Then she said with a blunt directness which put all subterfuge out of the question:

"Mother, I have been a long time, but I met Lieut. Hyde, and we walked down to the Battery; and I think I have stayed beyond the hour I ought to have stayed, but the weather was so delightful!"

"The weather is very delightful and Lieut. Hyde is very polite. Did he speak of the violets he sent you?"

"I suppose he forgot them. Ah, there they are! How beautiful! How fragrant! I will give them to you, mother."

"They are your own, my dear. I would not give them away. Take your flowers and put them in water—the young man is very extravagant, I think. Do you know that it is quite noon, and your father will be home in a little while?"

And there was such kind intent, such a divining sympathy in the simple words, that Cornelia's heart grew warm with pleasure, and she felt that her mother understood, and did not much blame her. She went with some haste to her room, and, forgetting all else, sat down and permitted herself to enter the delicious land of Reverie. She let the thought of Hyde repossess her, and present again and again to her imagination his form, his face, his voice, and those long caressing looks she had seen and felt, without seeming to be aware of them.

PHOTOGRAPH WINS A CASE.

Bright Idea That Was Worked by Clever Lawyer.

A Philadelphia lawyer tells the story that a picture of Fanny Davenport once won a case for him. His client was suing the Pennsylvania Railroad company, of which Wayne MacVeagh was counsel, for $7,500 damages for the death of her husband. "Just a few days before the case was to have come up she happened into my office and announced that she had married again." "Good Lord, madam," I gasped, "why couldn't you have waited until your case came up? It's next to impossible for me to get damages for you now." She said she didn't care very much, and went out, seeming very happy.

"Well, it just happened that I had a photograph of Fanny Davenport on my desk, and when the next day Wayne MacVeagh happened into my office to discuss quite another matter he picked up the photo and admired it. 'Who's your friend, isn't she?' he asked."

"I had a sudden inspiration and I said: 'Why, that's the lady who is suing your company for $7,500.'"

"The deuce you say," said he. "Handsome woman, isn't she?"

"She is, indeed," I replied.

"H—m!" he exclaimed, looking at the picture closely. "A deuced handsome woman. I should say. A deuced handsome woman. There was a slight pause. 'What'll you take to settle this case?' he asked."

"I thought of my client's second marriage, and I fixed the figure at $5,000. The deal was consummated, and the case never came to court."—New York Tribune.

THE CHINESE NEW YEAR

Celestials Celebrate the Event With Gorgeous Ceremonies and Feasting—Huge Flags and Colored Bunting Decorate Buildings in Their Quarter.

Now is the time to be a Chinaman if you would live on the fat of the land without paying for it, do no work, wear brilliant robes, entertain your friends and be entertained by them in general be a man of importance. For now is the Chinese New Year celebration.

New York's Chinese are very hard to find in their own homes, for they are going from house to house, pasting red New Year's cards on the doors bad luck and the devil from their daily life, and it is thought among them that the person receiving the coin takes upon himself the evils which surround the giver. In other words, the child bribes the devil to depart into some other human being.

In all the stores, and especially in the restaurants, there are piles of fruits, and delicacies which are to be had, not for the asking, but for the taking. If any one enters he of friends. All through Chinatown and in Pell and Mott streets in particular, are to be seen men in flowing robes of silk, decorated with various ornaments. These are worn in honor of the celebration and each tries to outshine his neighbor in gorgeousness.

Chinatown presents a lively scene from one end to the other. Huge yellow flags with a big dragon in the center are interwoven with the stars and stripes and colored bunting almost hides the fronts of buildings from view. It is not uncommon to see large silk banners spangled with particles of mirrors and jade floating from flagstaffs projecting from windows. Banners, lanterns and brilliantly painted signs hang from windows, balconies and fire escapes.

Great strings of firecrackers are strung from one side to the other and back again and suspended from these are hideous pictures. At night these firecrackers are set off with a deafening roar. The objects which were suspended from the strings are sent up into the air attached to balloons. Before the shrine in the joss house are piled sweets and fruits of the costliest kinds and the aromatic odor of incense sticks hangs about the place. Strains of weird music are heard, and in and out of the building there is a clattering all day of wooden cymbals.

In the clubhouse back of the joss house all the prominent men of

Not a Pleasant Trip.

It was on his return from a more than successful concert trip that one of the best-known composer-musicians was met in the street by a friend.

"Pleasant trip?" his friend inquired.

"Pleasant drip!" the musician answered. "Ach, himmel, no! Vy, when got down there the barytone haf i rot his tress drouzers, und vot shall we do?"

"So I go on und blay und I run quick behind the scenes and chunch, und he go out und sing und come quick back again und I put 'em on und blay."

"Ach, I haf chanced my drouzers sefen times dose von etenings already!"—Stray Stories.

Broncho Has Fun Abroad.

A curious episode in the annals of military horsemanship terminated on Friday week near Colchester, says an English paper. A Mexican broncho remount broke out of the depot stables, and defying all attempts at recapture, ran wild over east Essex for nearly a month.

The account of its successive escapes by flood and field reads like a romance of Mayne Reid and De Wet, as the horse was nicknamed, led his pursuers the merriest dance of all on the last day of his freedom.

The Children, Too, in Holiday Attire.

Chinatown meet and exchange greetings. They partake of refreshments and have a jolly time.

Through all the ceremonies attending the New Year no Chinese women are to be seen. They go into seclusion and stay there.

On the other hand, children are to be seen everywhere. They dress in gorgeous robes, almost equal to those of their fathers, and go from house to house calling in the same fashion as their elders, but they go a step further.

They wrap a silver coin in bright red paper and give it to the first person they can induce to accept it. This they find is a hard task, for the object in view is to drive away all

A small army of soldiers, assisted by an ex-cowboy and a lady rider, were engaged against him, and after being surrounded by troops and brought to bay he is alleged to have jumped on the roof of a barn, broken through a barbed-wire fence, swam a river, executed a wonderful double leap over two hedges and a lane, twice extricated himself from the noose of a lasso and flogged a guardman in a cabbage garden before he was headed in a disused stable and lashed through a hole in the roof.

De Wet, one learns, is now in the "equine hospital," under special guard, and receiving every attention from the authorities, who entertain hopes of breaking him in.

SYMPATHY OUT OF PLACE

The Only Way to Offer Help in Some Instances is to Buy a Pie.

"Out West, a few years ago, while journeying around with a friend of mine, I overheard a conversation which goes to show that sympathy is often misplaced," said the roving man, "and the moral is not by any means a bad one. The quick way in which the man turned on his friend, who had offered him an abundance of sympathy, so far as sympathy can be extended by mere words, was very amusing and showed that the fellow was quick-witted and unusually bright, despite the fact that he had fallen into a rather rough road."

"The young man had been out West for some time. He had gone out there with the idea that he could win a fortune, but instead of finding the way to success a smooth one, it was rather rough and rocky, marred by thorns to prick the feet, pitfalls and all that kind of thing. Put in plain, unpoetic language he was run down at the heel and bagging at the knee. In order to make a living he had been forced to become a pie merchant on a small scale. He was in this business when we found him, and had a small movable stand on the corner of two streets in a well known mining town. My friend recognized him at a glance, and rushed up to greet him. The fellow seemed to be just a little embarrassed and my friend thought it would be the proper thing to do to offer a little sympathy."

"Sorry to see you situated as you are, old fellow, and in this business," said my friend feelingly.

"D— your sympathy. Buy a pie!" was the quick rejoinder of the vendor, and in a few moments we had left him shrieking out his wares to men who passed that way.

"At least he convinced my friend that there are moments in a man's life when the mere sympathy of the mouth, no matter how earnest or how fervent the words, can not meet the requirements of the case, and that the real and only way to offer help in such instances is to buy a pie."

RULE WORKED BOTH WAYS.

And if Anything, the Ducky Had the Best of It.

At a country fair a free for all horse show was organized. Among the early entries was a small beast, ridden by a voluble individual, who pulled from his pocket a long document and commenced to entertain the crowd by reading the pedigree of his steed. He was the center of attraction until a colored man rode in, mounted upon a splendid black—large, glossy and symmetrical.

Without waiting for an invitation from the rider the crowd soon gathered about the beautiful horse and many questions were asked, which the negro modestly answered. Soon the white man and his diminutive quadruped were left practically by themselves, and the rider found himself smarting from wounded pride. He watched the new arrival for a short time, and then rode over.

"Where is your horse's pedigree?" he roared.

"I dunno, boss; I reckon he hain't got none. He's des plain hoss."

"Oh, well, darn a horse without a pedigree!" shouted the disgruntled white man, and he swung the precious record of his own animal over his head, proclaiming what it was and how long it was. Then he started to ride away. The negro looked at the little beast over his shoulder, rolled his eyes and retorted, "Yes, darn a hoss without a pedigree, is it? Well, darn a pedigree widout a hoss! Dat's whut I say."

Two Birds.

The birds there are that I do love—The turkey and the eagle; One walks the earth, one soars above The clouds, supreme and regal. The turkey, too, can fly, but he aims not at elevation. Some safe limb of an apple tree Best suits his humble station.

By night, there, from his wily foe, The fox, he's safe, and all his looms. All undisturbed by any woe That mortal dread can bring; By day, in orchard wanderings, He humbly seeks his living; Unconscious of the joy he'll bring To gourmands on Thanksgiving.

And while the eagle, plumed borne, Doth cleave the vaulted azure, He gobbles up the golden corn, And gobbles forth his pleasure, And, daily adding to his girth, For man his chief attraction, So fills this bird of solid worth, His role with satisfaction.

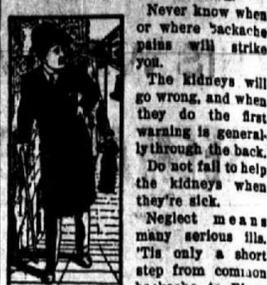

Each in his sphere has rightful fame; The eagle first in favor As emblem of the nation's aim. The turkey for his favor, But while the eagle's chief renown Lies in his life, a winner, The turkey's still, when dead and brown, Served for Thanksgiving dinner.

Senator Perkins' Idea.

Senator George C. Perkins of California has some unusual ideas regarding the election of United States Senators, and on account of these he refused to listen to the appeals of his friends to go to California during the recent senatorial fight there.

"I regard the members of the legislature," said he, "as the jury of the people, so far as the election of senators is concerned. Before the election of the legislature I made a campaign which extended the length and breadth of my state. I told the people that I was a candidate for re-election and I made my promises to them. They elected a Republican legislature, and by so doing made that legislature their jury. When opposition appeared to my re-election my friends urged me to leave Washington and personally conduct my case before the legislature, but I do not think it is right for senators to try to influence the action of legislatures, so I remained in Washington. In other words, I refused to tamper with the jury."

STRIKES YOU ANY TIME.

Never know when or where backache pains will strike you.

The kidneys will go wrong, and when they do the first warning is generally through the back. Do not fail to help the kidneys when they're sick.

Neglect means many serious ills. This is only a short step from common backache to Rheumatic pains, Urinary disorders, Dropsy, Diabetes, Bright's Disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all ills of the kidneys and bladder. Read this testimony; it tells of a cure that lasts.

Mr. A. W. Lutz, carriage wood worker, of 109 17th avenue, Sterling, Ill., says: "After procuring Doan's Kidney Pills in the month of November, 1897, I took a course of the treatment which cured me of backache and other annoyances due to over-excited or weakened kidneys. During the three years which have elapsed, I have had no occasion to retract one word of my statement. I unhesitatingly and emphatically reindorse the claims made for Doan's Kidney Pills.

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Lutz will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

Chess and Nerves.

Dr. Lasker, the chess champion, in a recent interview granted to a reporter of the Minneapolis Journal, declared that chess playing, not carried to excess, improves a man's health. "Most of the prominent players," he added, "live to an advanced age. But nervous people shouldn't play chess at night. If they do, they can't sleep. Nor in the morning, or they can't work. They shouldn't play at all, in fact. Chess is beneficial to a normal man, just as athletics is good for him. The chess player lives longer than the athlete."

RED CROSS BALL BLUE Should be in every home. Ask your grocer for it. Large 2 oz. package only 5 cents.

The Intelligent Dog.

"Speaking about dogs," said Congressman Beldier of Ohio, "I suppose I have the most intelligent fox-terrier in the country and he's only a puppy yet. The other day he spilled his milk and I cuffed his ears and chucked him out of the window. Next day he spilled his milk again and I cuffed his ears again and chucked him out of the window. The next day, after he had spilled his milk again, he cuffed his own ears and went and jumped out of the window."

Many women and doctors do not recognize the real symptoms of derangement of the female organs until too late.

"I had terrible pains along my spinal cord for two years and suffered dreadfully. I was given different medicines, wore plasters; none of these things helped me. Reading of the cures that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought about, I somehow felt that it was what I needed and bought a bottle to take. How glad I am that I did so; two bottles brought me immense relief, and after using three bottles more I felt new life and blood surging through my veins. It seemed as though there had been a regular house cleaning through my system, that all the sickness and poison had been taken out and new life given me instead. I have advised dozens of my friends to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Good health is indispensable to complete happiness, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has secured this to me."
