The Veterans of the Society of Santiago de Cuba are looking for a great time at the convention to be held in Detroit, and express some disappointment that President Rooseveit will not be able to attend. RINCE'S ESCAPE FROM PRISON.

How Louis Napoleon Fled from the Fortress of Ham.

Prince Louis Napoleon, afterward Napoleon III., effected his escape from Ham in 1846 in a singular manner. He yas imprisoned for his attempts against the French government, made at Boulogne in 1840. At 7 o'clock one norning the prince, having shaved his nustache and thrown a blouse and workingman's trousers over his own clothes, and wearing wooden shoes juietly walked out of the prison, carrying a bookshelf over his shoulder, to complete his disguise. He was taken to be one of the painters then at work in the prison and was passed by several persons. A carriage was waiting in the neighborhood and by 3 o'clock in the afternoon he was at Valenciennes, where he took, a train to Brussels, and he arrived in London two days later. Meanwhile in the prison Dr. Conneau, the prince's physician, had placed a dummy in the prince's bed and told the governor that the prince was confined to his room by illness. This satisfied the governor until 7 o'clock in the evening, when he insisted on seeing the prince and discovered the fraud. By this time of course, the prince was over the frontier. Dr. Conneau got off with three months of prison. Within thirty-one months Prince Napoleon was the first president of a French republic, supplanting King Louis Philippe, who had abdicated.

A STUDY. IN REALISM.

Little Girl's Naive Comment on Her Mother's Photograph.

It was a funny little speech of wee Eleanor's, so father and mother agreed that evening as they laughed over the mental picture each had of the saucy turned-up nose and the merry blue eyes of their four-year-old. Yet, wasn't there a great deal of feeling in the speech, tco; and perhaps a bit of pa thos

Eleanor's mamma had shown her the beautiful new picture that a photographer had just sent home. She was a young mother, of course; and ever so pretty, in a tender, dainty way. But she could be a severe mother, an avenging spirit, and could show this in her clear-cut profile, all sweetness in the photograph.

SIGHTS SEEN BY TRAVELER ALONG THE MODERN NILE

Traveling by the ordinary methods | whole place is rigidly clean, an ex ou may go from Alexandria to Khartum in about six days, says the London Standard. Easily and smoothly you wing through the fertile cotton fields of the delta and its populous cities and villages, prosperous but dirty, and at Cairo you settle down into a most comfortable sleeping car for the night journey to Luxor. Early next morning you are in the cane fields of upper Egypt with the river close on one side and the desert on the other.

At Luxor you must change to the narrow gauge for Assouan, and there is time to refresh yourself with bath and breakfast and to look across at the plain of Thebes and the valley of the tomb of the kings, or to ride a donkey out to Karnak. From Luxor to Assouan it is hot and dusty enough, and you are glad to rest there for the night. Next day you embark at Shellal, above the dam, for Wady Halfa, a leisurely voyage of three days. It is a most beautiful reach of the river; the hills come down to the water in bold, rugged outlines, showing to perfection in the pure, dry desert air. The effect of the dam is clearly seen as far as Korosko. First of all, at Shellal the boat is moored amid a grove of palm trees, the temples of Nubian villages look quaint enough as they stand on the edge of the desert, forlornly mourning their strip of cultivated land, most of which the greedy re.ervoir has swallowed.

The boundary between Egypt and the Sudan, settled by the convention of 1899, runs along the twenty-second parallel; not far beyond this is the frontier town of Halfa. There is no mis- and, an hour or two later, we ran into taking the signs of British rule. The the terminus at Halfaya.

traordinary contrast to the filth of the Egyptian villages. The streets are well laid out and scrupulously swept, and shady avenues of trees are springing up. Halfa is the railway terminus of the Sudan. It is twenty-eight hours to Khartum. Nothing can be more comfortable than the well-appointed sleeping-car train, which runs twice a week. Starting at eight in the evening, you strike right across the Baynda desert, most desolate and forlorn of countries. The stations have no names, but are known merely by their numbers. In the morning you come to Abu Hamed --- back to the Nile once more. Here was the scene of one of the stiffest fights in the Sudan campaign, when Gen. Hunter made his dash from Korki, and here are the graves of the white officers of the Tenth Sudanese battalion, round which the black soldiers who died with them keep ghostly watch and ward forever, and so redeem the credit of the regiment, which came back from the battle without its leader.

From here onward the journey is full of interest. Berber is springing up again from its ruins; it even boasts two, stations. Then comes the Atbara, with its famous bridges, and then Matiner, where there is this year a camp of exercise for the Egyptian army. The camp had a most business-like appearance. Just as we arrived a train came steaming in with a battalion of infantry, all in full marching order; it was exactly like a regiment detraining at the front in real war. Shendy is the Crewe of the Sudan.

Ballad of Old Songs.

Life is a song and love is sweet, Sing me then to the old refrain. Laughing lyrics with tripping feet Pattering music like drops of rain. Ragtime, ruffles our weary brain, Oh, for the ballad of surge and sway, Words that wave like a field of grain-Where are the songs of yesterday?

Stately in tune with the measured beat. But coon songs fill us with pensive pain.

Yet it's ever and always the thing w meet.

Ever and always and over again, Till it verily makes of life a bane! Singers, a respite of you we pray From the baby warm by the razor slain-Where are the songs of yesterday?

Verses like this we madly bleat. Trying to voice our deep disdain For the song and dance described as neat In comic opera's tangled skein. Oh, for the time of a poet's reign! These limping lilters to drive away is there nothing to lose and nothing to gain?

Where are the songs of yesterday?

Clock of Deceptive Value. Judge Newburger has a clock which is at once the joy and the bane of his life. Its case is of old Delft; and it is a gem which would make an antiquarian's mouth water. But its dingy appearance calls forth so much adverse comment from uncultured visitors to his office that the judge's feelings are constantly "riled." A man with long whiskers chanced to observe it one day recently and exclaimed: "Why, Jedge," that's a measly look in' old clock. What do you keep it fer? Looks like it costs six cents." "My friend," replied the Judge, "whatever your other virtues may be, you're utterly ignorant as to the value of time."-New York World.

coveries made recently at Beni Hasan a site in Egypt famous for its painted tombs and early architectural features, are detailed by Prof. John Garstang, of University college, Liverpool.

A vast necropolis has been unearthed, remarkable for the preservation of the furniture in its tombs and for the wealth of material which these supplied in illustrating the burial customs of the Middle Empire. Four hundred and ninety-two tombs hewn in the rock have been opened and examined. More than 100 of them had never been previously entered since their doors were closed at the time of interment 4,000 years before.

In the tomb of one Nefer-y, a chief physician, the huge painted coffin was surrounded by a number of wooden models of objects and scenes familiar from the wall paintings of the larger tombs.

Upon the coffin rested a great rowing boat, the twenty oarsmen standing and swing back in time to the beat of corded by photography, as the excavatwo figures seated on a raised platform | tion proceeded step by step, 450 negin the center. Beyond this was the atives being taken in all.

A well-executed group found by the excavators in another tomb represented the making of beer from fermentation of break by a similar process to that employed by the natives to-day. Beside the coffin was a sailing bcat, the numerous sailors assuming the rttitude necessary for hoisting the large square sail, of which the yards and rigging were preserved. Two men, in characteristic posc 3, were using poles vigorously over the sides.

In another tomb were found models of a number of warships. In the bow of one, by the side of the lookout, stood a negro sailor, bow and arrow in hand. In the tomb of Antef, a courtier, the boats had double steering cars. In one boat were seated two men under a canopy, playing a game of chess.

The opening of each tomb was re-caused by vendetta, and at least threefourths of the vendetta cases are the result of a curious marriage custom which is now decimating the population. The native of those parts who wishes to take unto himself a wife cannot arrange the matter in the simple offhand manner in vogue in west-ern Europe by "popping the question." He must go home, sell his belongings, and buy her fairly and squarely of her parents, the price ranging from $175 to $1,000. This is a costly custom man who can afford to invest such a large sum in a wife, however accomplished. What generally happens in such cases is that the indigent candidate for the order of Benedick induces maiden and carry her off.

What too often follows then may be lowed to take the place of bullets.

At first liniment seemed to help but in about two weeks nothing did, any good the doctor gave him. We called another doctor but his medicine did no good so we changed to another who called it spinal dis-ease. By this time the child's body was drawn out of shape; his backbone was curved to one side and his hands and feet out of shape. His sufferings were terrible, and he was having from two to six fits a day. I was taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for mervous trouble and saw it was recommended for fits, so I thought I would see if it would help him. All three doctors had given him up. One-half bottle stopped the fits and his limbs straightened, and another bottle cured him. He is now a strong, healthy boy going to school. "Our Summer in a Barn," in the August Delineator relates the story of a unique undoubtedly enjoyable outing during the warm days. Certainly, if the barn be located without city surroundings, be big cool and clean, and admit of comfortable interior arrangement, as did this one, it is a pleasant place in which to pass away time. Such a summer outing is the happy mean between camping out and country boarding, and the experience of the author of the paper, Frederick J. Burnett, war rants that it possesses advantages over either. The illustrations show that a large measure of comfort and cozinesss can be introduced even into a barn.

TO THE

TE LUDLUM "At a Girl's Mercs." Etc red According to Act of Congress in the Year 1890 by Street & Smith. In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

That night his comrades at the tavern had told him of this; they taunted him with it; they laughed at the girl. They did not like her-not one of them. Narrow natures dislike and distrust that which they cannot understand. Young Green also had aroused his fears. Green had an education; he had asked where the girl obtained her education, therefore she must have an education. To night he was assured of this. He kicked the book contemptuous. ly, and muttered, under his breath, an oath against young Green. If ever he came there again it would be a sorry day for him.

Dolores said nothing.

A sudden frenzy, seized him. He stooped and snatched the book from the ground. It was an old astronomy. She had been reading the book, for she preferred it to any of her mother's books, and when young Green saw it the day he was there he was. much surprised, and promised to take a volume on the subject the next time he went that way.

She thanked him, and it was the first time she had thanked any one since Betsy Glenn died. That was two weeks before, and he had not come again as he said he would, but she watched for him, feeling sure that he would keep his promise to her; feeling strangely glad when she thought of him. She had perfect faith in him. Her father's face was lurid as he snatched the book from the ground. His small eyes, close set, were full of brute cruelty; the veins of his forehead were swollen. In his hands, used to wielding the heavy hammer, the book was a toy; his fingers closed over it, and in an instant it lay in shreds at her feet.

For a moment she did +not comprehend what had been done; she looked from the book to him and back again. Then she arose; her face was white, and her eyes flashed. She looked at him, and he cowered before her. She was tall and stately; he had never before appreciated her dignity. Now he appreciated it to the full. The book was the dearest thing in the world to bent slightly forward. Dolores was her: he could have wounded her in no other way. Mechanically he gathered up the scattered fragments and as she held out her hand for them he gave them to her without a word, without even glancing at her. For the time she was more than his daughter; her eyes were on his face, and her spirit ruled his. Then they strayed away to the mountain top veiled in haze. The fire died out of her eyes; her hands, mechanically holding the torn leaves of her book, fell listlessly at her side; her shadow lay long and dark behind her.

"Her right shoe this time. Come. Bess: come, my girl!'

There was a sudden, sullen glow on Johnson's face as he took the bellows and blew the fire into a fierce blaze. He laid the iron on the fire and raised the hammer.

Young Green began to talk. spoke of the dry weather and the hard roads; he told the news of the town and of the trial that was to come off of a notorious horse thief who had been caught attempting to steal Eess. The blacksmith listened in sullen silence between the blows of the hammer.

By and by young Green left him and went up to the house for a drink. Johnson was not the only silent one that day. His daughter listened mutely to the young man's conversation. If anything she was even more listless than usual, though 'a strange color tinged her cheeks as he talked. He left the promised book with her; he had not forgotten it, he said, but had been unable to take it before. For a moment her face glowed with pleasure, and the silken lashes, lifted swiftly, but fell ere their eyes could meet. She thanked him in a few simple words in her low, sweet voice; then her gaze wandered away to the hazy mountain top in the distance. He left in a few minutes, deeply disappointed in her, and yet strangely interested and puzzled. Had he mistaken her? Was she incapable of the thought he believed she possessed? Had she not, after all, the ambition to be more than an untaught village girl? Did her thought end with the blue line of the mountains and the hamlets scattered along their sides? Dolores disappointed him; he thought her so much better than she had proved herself, and yet under it all there was a sting in the thought which he did not understand, student of character as he was.

It seemed to her in a strange, far-away fashion that this was what she had been expecting. This was why the kindly blue eyes were always looking into hers, and the pleasant face was forever in her thoughts.

Her eyes were on her father when the news was told by one of the and the suspicion was pretty well And here the story ended.

New words, many of which are not found in the dictionaries, are cropping up to puzzle proofreaders. The introduction of the automobile has developed the term "garage," which is frequently used. It signifies a place where automobile parts are stored, to be assembled, or brought together when required.

"Grog" is a term used by builders to designate broken brick.

"Savage," as a verb, originated on the race course, and is now used in coursing circles. It signifies to make a victous, unprovoked attack-usually by a stallion or a dog.

"Racket store" is used in commercial circles to designate a store-often opened for temporary use-in which cheap goods are sold at "bargain prices." It some times includes what are usually termed "notions."-Typographical Journal.

CHAPTER IV.

The Mare.

"I have come again," said young Green, laughing. 1 1 2 1 35 He stood in the doorway of the shop, holding the black mare by the bridle.

Johnson had been sitting on a bench outside of the shop, smoking a clay pipe. As the young man spoke the simple villagers a fabulous sum, sentimental.

'She was positively stupid," he said regretfully. "Yet her face shows such. possibilities."

He was walking slowly down the narrow path to the shop, his hands clasped behind him, his fair head watching him, but he did not know it. He never guessed of the wistful brown eyes following him down the stubbly path.

Bess whinnied shrilly when he came in sight. She was restless and snappish, but when he mounted and rode out of the shop she grew gentle again. As he rode away Johnson called after him that she must have gone some distance without her shoe, for her foot was tender.

Dolores watched him with her far seeing eyes as he rode up the mountain, then her gaze went down to the shop. Her father was standing in the doorway also watching the rider. He had forgotten his pipe; his face in the hazy sunlight was full of sullen hatred, and he looked capable of committing almost any act. His muttered threat of the previous evening returned to her clearly and distinctly. Her eyes widened with nameless fear. She looked up the mountain again to where the black mare was bearing her rider proudly along the yellow thread of road; she was no longer listless; her face was white, her lips quivering with excitement.

. CHAPTER V.

Whose Was the Deed?

Dolores was waiting for something to happen. A vague terror possessed her; she could not have defined it had she tried; she did not try. Young Green's face seemed to haunt her. She watched her father continually while he was in the house, for a sort of fascination was upon her, and she could not keep her eyes from his face. She could not explain the terror that possessed her, but her whole listless nature was aroused. She was different, and her life was somehow different, she knew not how.

The slow days passed, it seemed to her, with even more slowness than was their wont. Every morning the red sun arose out of a veil of haze from the mountain beyond the valley; every evening he sank . behind the gray peaks in the west.

Nothing happened after all; life was stagnant; the sun arose and set; the haze hung more dense and thick over the mountain peaks. No rain fell; nothing happened. Nothing happened until-

"Thank you; our garden didn't amount to much," Dolores said, gravely. She looked at her neighbor without a sign of interest in her face; she spoke in her usual listless manner; but under the listnessness and apparent carelessness was the con sciousness like a sharp sword, that the gift was the forerunner of something to follow else than her pleasure. She emptied the berries out of the basket into a dish and stood regarding them. Mrs. Smith said afterward she looked as though she were trying. to discover if they might be "tetched." In reality the girl did not even see them.

She was wondering vaguely what the woman would say about the mare, That she had come for some purpose outside of bringing the fruit was clear to her. She waited with a sink ing heart and strained ears for what the woman would say. She knew well that something must follow. That it was in regard to the mare of young Green she ...ad not a doubt. Perhaps the suspicion in regard to the guilty party had become a fact. Perhaps this woman had come to tell herperhaps-

Through the drawn curtains of a They listened in silence to the dull tottage which squatted in the right angle formed by the intersecting stead of the usual thunderous burst as tracks, a hundred yards or more from the train swept by, and the trembling the station, a light shone dully. In-side, a young woman with a book in her lap sat beside a sick-bed. On the bed lay a young man of perhaps thirty. They were not of the type which prevailed in Valley Junction. The rug-

Sylvia, you must go. It is your duty. The superintendent gasped and stared at the young woman. She stood with her dilating eyes fastened upon her husband, her chest rising and falling, and blood red tongues of returning color shooting through her cheeks. Yet even in that critical moment something in Sylvia's cye-something hard and stubborn-fixed the skeptical superintendent's attention. Sylvia, with twitching nostrils and swelling throat, turned upon him almost desperately.

"I will go," she said, in a low voice, 'but someone must stay here with him."

"This young man will attend to all that, never fret," cried Howard gally, turning to the night operator.

Sylvia returned from an inner room after an absence of scarcely sixty seconds. She bore herself with the firm, subdued mien of one who knows the gravity of her task, yet has faith in herself for its performance. One of. her husband's caps was drawn tightly over her thick hair and she had slipped into a short walking skirt. Without hesitation she stepped to the bedside and kissed her husband goodby.

HIS FIRST WIFE'S VIRTUES.

Second Wife Tired of Them and Showed One of Her Own.

"We have all heard of the man who is constantly telling his wife how his mother used to do things, and most wives, principally because others before them-their grandmothers and mothers-have stood it, consent to do so, too," said an F street lawyer. "But when it comes to the thing of being reminded of the first wife's virtues at every turn you make, it must be another matter-a fact which was forcibly illustrated by a client of mine in court. The woman had been arrested under the charge of disorderly conduct, and immediately sent for me. I was at once acquainted with the facts, and experienced little difficulty in having the charge dismissed with only a light fine. In explaining her conduct she said:

"'It's always "you don't cook like my first wife, you don't wash and iron like my first wife; fact is, you don't seem to catch on where she left off." stood it as long as I could for peace's sake, until one day my patience gave out when the same old story of what his first wife had done began, and when he told me again that I did not move around as Jane, the first wife, had done, I was in the act of making his bread, and I up with my rolling pin and beat him over the head, telling him I was now doing what Jane had neglected to do.' "The attitude of the court seemed to agree with her. At any rate, the fine was light, and from all accounts peace reigns in the before unhappy domicile and Jane's accomplishments are a subject no longer discussed."-Washingtor Post.

MERICA is the land of ner-A vous women.

The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease.

Mrs. Emma Mitchell, 520 Louisiana street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes : "Peruna has certainly been a blessin in disguise to me, for when I first began taking it for troubles peculiar to the sex and a generally worn out system, I had little faith.

"For the past five years I have rarely been without pain, but Peruna has changed all this, and in a very short time. I think I had only taken two bottles' before I began to recuperate very quickly, and seven bottles made me well. I do not have headache or backache any more, and have some interest in life. I. give all credit where it is due, and that is to Peruna.-Emma Mitchell.

By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused directly by catarrh.

The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one bundred are nothing but catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever mistakable gentleness of birth, and the dark eyes which rested mctionless upon the further wall, were thoughtful and liquid with intelligence. The young woman was yet more striking. Her loose gown, girdled at the waist with a tasseled cord, only half concealed the sturdy, sweeping lines of the form beneath .. Her placid, womanly face was crowned with a mass of burnished auburn hair. Her blue eyes, now fixed solicitiously upon her husband's face, were dark with what seemed an habitual earnestness of purpose, and her sweet mouth drooped seriously. After a moment, ithough, she shook off her pensive mood. "What are you thinking of, dear?" she asked, ith a brightening face.

"Of you," answered her husband, revely, tightening his grasp upon the and she had slipped into his. "Comaring your life in this wretched place, Sylvia, with what it was before I maryou; and thinking of that wonderthing called 'love,' which can make on content with the change."

The young woman for a little held herselif in a kind of breathless tension, her hand upon his further temple, her full, passionate lips pressed light against his cheek.

"Not content, my heart's husband, but happy," she whispered, ecstatical-After a moment she lifted herself quietly smoothed her ruffled hair. "I mustn't do that again,' she said demurely. "The doctor said you were not to be excited. Only this, Ben, papa will forgive us some day. He's good. Just give him time. Some day you'll put away your dear, foolish pride, and let me write to him and tell him where we are no matter if he did forbid it. And he'll write back, take my word for it, and say, 'Come home, children, and be forgiven.' But then, in the lull which followed, the thumping of the pump, like some great excited heart ... The sick man threw his wife a startled glance, and she sprang to the front window and drew back the curtain. She was just turning away again, when there came a quick, imperative rap at the door. Sylvia flung the door wide open, revealing three men, the foremost of whom she recognized as the night operator at the Junction.

"I will go," she said in a low woice."

"Mrs. Fox," he began with nervous haste, "this is the general superintendent, Mr. -"

"My name is Howard, madam," said the official for himself, unceremoniously pushing forward. "We are in trouble. Our engineer had a stroke of apoplexy iffteen miles back, and I want 'your husband to take this rtain. I know he's sick, but-"

"But he's too sick, sir, to hold his head up!" Sylvia exclaimed aghast. "What's the trouble?" called Fox, sharply, from his bed. An instant's hush fell over the little group at the door, and then they all, as if moved by one impulse, filed quickly back to the sick room.

"Mr. Fox, I hate to ask a sick man to get out of bed and pull a train," began the general superintendent, hurriedly, "but we're tied up here hard and fast, and every minute that train stands there the company loses a thousand dollars. If you can pull her through to Stockton, and will, it will be the best two hours' work that you ever did. I will give you five hundred dollars."

Fox had at first risen to his elbow, but he now sank back, dizzy and trembling from weakness. "I can't do it, Mr. Howard! I'm too sick!" he exclaimed bitterly. "If it weren't a physical impossibility-if I weren't too dizzy to hold my head up-"

He broke off abruptly and pressed his hand in a dazed way to his brow. Then he fixed his excited eyes upon his wife. The other men followed his gaze, plainly regarding him as out of his head. But Sylvia turned pale and ed against the wall, for support.

Remus Explains.

Why Du Chaillu Was a Bachelor. The late Paul du Chillu was on one occasion asked why he had never married. "Well, once upon a time," he answered, without a smile, "an old African king who was very fond of me offered me my choice of 853 women as a wife. 'Your majesty,' I replied, 'if I should marry one of these beauties of yours there would be 852 jealous women here.' 'Well,' replied the king, 'that is easily settled. Take them all.' That was a little too strong for me, however, and, as I have never had such a field to choose from since, I am still a bachelor."

Harcourt Deceived Gladstone. Gladstone hated tobacco in every form, and while premier of England said once reproachfully to a close personal friend, "You have been smoking this morning." The reply was, "I have been sitting for half an hour in the room of Sir William Harcourt, who is a great smoker." Mr. Gladstone said, with surprise, "I never knew he smoked. He must be always very careful in changing his clothes before he comes up to me." Harcourt being a member of the Gladstone cabinet.

A Good Story.

Frederika, Ia., July 13th .- Mr. A. S. Grover of this place tells an interesting story showing how sick people may regain their health if they will only be guided by the experience of others. He says:

"I had a very bad case of Kidney Trouble, which affected my urinary organs so that I had to get up every hour of the night. I could not retain my urine and my feet and limbs began to bloat up. My weight was quickly running down.

"After I had tried many things in vain, I began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills, a medicine which had cured some other very bad cases.

"This remedy has done wonders for me. I have gained eight pounds in two months. The bloat has all gone from my feet and legs, and I don't have to get up at night. I took in all about ten boxes before I was all sound."

Those who suffer as did Mr. Grover can make no mistake in taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, for they are a sure, safe and permanent cure for all Kidney urinary disorders.
