WASHTENAW SUPERVISORS

Sat Down Upon Judge of Probate Watkins Rather Hard.

The board of supervisors met in annual session Monday morning at the court house, Ann Arbor. Supervisor Walter, of Bridgewater, was elected chairman of the board.

The long established custom of visiting the county house and farm in committee of the whole, accompanied by numerous friends (for the day), and partaking of a bountiful dinner was finally knocked on the head by a vote of 13 to 12. A committee of five supervisors will do the work of inspecting the farm and buildings this year. The committee is Supervisors Lutz, Fischer, Raymond, Donnelly and Kitson.

The following standing committees were appointed:

Equalization—Warner, Schumacher, McCullough, Haist, Raymond.

To Settle with County Officers—Miner, McGuire, Landwehr.

Apportionment of State and County Taxes—Schumacher, Lawson, Holmes.

Public Buildings—Fischer, Munn, Oesterlin.

Rejected Taxes—Lutz, Shankland, Wheeler.

To Examine Accounts of Superintendents of Poor—Bilbie, Gorman, Holmes.

Finance—Jedele, Kitson, Hutzel.

Fractional School Districts—Detting, Sweetland, Grosshans.

Draughts—Donnelly, Haist, Gorman.

Printing—Damon, Wheeler, Schumacher.

Salaries of County Officers—Landwehr, Miner, Taylor.

To Prepare Statement of County Expenses—Oesterlin, Lawson, Holmes.

Per Diem—Grosshans, Donnelly, Hutzel.

At yesterday's session, the board got after Probate Judge Watkins for his interference with the action of the board last year when it ordered the hands of the court house clock turned to standard time. Some days after the board adjourned last year the clock was set to local time, and it was claimed it was done by order of Judge Watkins. The building committee met and decided that the order of the board should be obeyed and the clock was again set to standard time.

The next move was the filing with the county clerk by Judge Watkins of a protest against paying any bills authorized by the building committee. The bills were not paid till the county auditors came into office, while bills authorized by the janitor were paid.

At yesterday morning's session the board abolished the $400 clerk hire allowed the judge of probate. During the past year the legislature raised the salary of the judge of probate $300. The board by cutting off the $400 allowance, leaves the compensation at $100 less than it was before the legislature met. The vote on the motion was very decided.

Miss Josephine Hoppe, of Sylvan, was elected a member of the board of county school examiners.

The Democrats of the board have caucused and decided upon J. D. Ryan for county auditor to succeed himself, James Taylor, of Chelsea, for superintendent of the poor, D. W. Barry for county drain commissioner, and Marvin Davenport for janitor.

Those Electric Line Merger Rumors

All this week the Detroit daily papers have been printing rumors of a merger of the Hawks-Angus and Boland electric lines. The rumors have been of a very contradictory nature, and while they may have some element of truth in them, look a good deal like so much wind. J. D. Hawks is quoted as the authority for the statement that such a merger will be made. This morning's papers give a statement from W. A. Foote, secretary of the Boland lines, that there is no truth whatever in the reports. The only thing for the public to do is to wait with patience until the smoke clears away and then they may hear what is really doing in electric line circles in this section of the state.

Wedding Bells Yesterday.

NICOLAI-BAUER.

Yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother Mrs. Catherine Bauer, on South Main street, Mr. Albert Nicolai and Miss Christina Bauer were united in marriage, Rev. Albert Schoen, pastor of St. Paul's church, performing the ceremony according to the ritual of that church. After the ceremony refreshments were served. Mr. and Mrs. Nicolai have gone on a wedding trip to Detroit and Buffalo and on their return will take up their residence with Mrs. Bauer.

LOWRY-HELLER.

Mr. Earl Lowry and Miss Clara Heller, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Heller, of Lima, were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. A. Schoen. A large company of the relatives and friends of the couple were present. After the ceremony a fine wedding dinner was served. The numerous presents were very pretty and of a useful character. Mr. and Mrs. Lowry have gone on a brief wedding trip to Detroit and on their return home will go to housekeeping on the Mark Lowry farm in Lima.

Forty Hours' Adoration Services.

The Forty Hours' Adoration opened in the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart last Sunday at high mass and the attendance was very large and gratifying. Rev. Father Scott, of Detroit, and Rev. Father Needham, of Jackson, preached very eloquent and instructive sermons. Rev. Father Kilroy, of Richmond, Mich., also assisted the Rev. Pastor. The altars were beautifully decorated with choice flowers and plants. The solemn high mass on Tuesday morning was very impressive. Rev. Wm. Kilroy was the celebrant, Rev. Philip Scott, C. S. R., was the dean, and the Rev. W. P. Considine was sub-deacon. The music during the Forty Hours was especially devotional, and the altar boys deserve high commendation for their services.

St. Mary's Literary Club.

At the annual meeting of St. Mary's Literary Club held Tuesday, Oct. 7, the following officers for the ensuing year were elected:

President—Mrs. J. E. McKune.

Vice President—Mrs. Margaret Hindelang.

Secretary—Miss Stella Miller.

Treasurer—Miss Frances Hindelang.

Parliamentarian—Miss Mabelle McGuinness.

Pianist—Miss Mamie Clark.

Four new members were added to the roll at this meeting. The next meeting of the club will be held with Mrs. John Liebeck.

Death of Mrs. Acie Blackney.

Mrs. Acie Blackney, of St. Johns, a former resident of Chelsea, died at the home of her daughter near Grand Rapids, Sunday morning, Oct. 11, at 5:30 o'clock. Her remains were brought to Dansville Wednesday and interred by the side of her husband. Mrs. Blackney was about 83 years old. She leaves six children, Adelbert and Adie Blackney, of St. Johns, William, of St. Charles, Mo., Mrs. Libbie Williams, of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Fred Pulling and Mrs. Wm. Butler, of Dansville. Mrs. Blackney's maiden name was Sarah Ann Freer, of Lima.

Townsend Is Optimistic.

Detroit Tribune: "Who is King of Washtenaw?" was asked of Congressman Townsend the other day.

"Let me see. King of Washtenaw? We ought to have a king but really haven't. I am afraid the monarchy has been overthrown and a republic has been set up."

The Herald is glad the congressman is so optimistic, and hopes his idea may be the correct one, but there is a man still left who would like to rule the Republican party in Washtenaw if the Republicans do not block the wheels of his chariot.

Francesca da Rimini.

The poetic spirit which prevades Geo. H. Broker's dramatic tragedy, "Francesca da Rimini," which will be presented at the Athens theatre, Ann Arbor, on Saturday, Oct. 17, commends it to the appreciation of the thinking people, even when simply read, instead of acted by a company of ability of Porter J. White's production. In every line of the drama, Dante's theme is retained, with enough changes to meet the requirements of the dramatic representation, but the poetic lines and warmth surrounding are the products of the dramatist's own literary art. In Mr. White's engagement the production of "Francesca da Rimini" is seen at its best. Mr. White has invested the drama with stage pictures thoroughly in keeping with the Italian warmth and poetic spirit of the tragedy. The company associated with him is equal to the difficult task of interpreting the lofty spirit of the play.

On account of the football game and the large crowd of outside parties that will attend the performance on that evening, out of town patrons are requested to send in orders for choice locations at once. The lower floor prices will be 75c and $1. All orders should be accompanied by postoffice or express money order and addressed to Dean M. Seabolt, Ann Arbor.

Football Game.

The local football season will be opened here next Saturday at 3 p. m. at McLaren-BeGole park with a game between the Ann Arbor Juniors and the Chelsea High School. The local team has been putting in a lot of time in practice and it is predicted the boys will make a good showing in their first game. The Ann Arbor team averages 135 pounds, and the locals about 140. The squad together with their weights are given below. The team will be picked from the following:

C. Schenk 170, A. Raftrey 160, H. Schenk 154, Kelly 152, Beeman 150, B. Snyder 150, Cooper 145, Light-hall 150, Hindelang 140, McLaren 139, L. BeGole 129, H. Conway 120, R. Snyder 148.

The following are recent real estate transfers in this vicinity:

The following increases are shown over report of June 9, 1903: In loans, discounts, stocks, bonds and mortgages, $3,350,968.84; in deposits, $4,067,006.67.

THE NEWS OF MICHIGAN.

The U. of M. Rush.

The assault on the police Friday night by a number of Ann Arbor students after the annual rush, has aroused the authorities and they are determined to put an end to the rowdiness. Ray Baker, of Adrian, who is alleged by Officer Collins to be the student who struck Officer Isbell over the head with a club, was arraigned in justice court on the serious charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder. Examination was set for Oct. 14, and he was released on $500 bail. E. Merriman, of Dayton, O.; Henry Cook, of Owosso; Fred Ealsasser, of Niles, and James W. Rice, of Dayton, the other four students arrested, were arraigned under the ordinance for disturbing the peace and each were fined $15 and $5 costs, besides paying $7 each for carrying away stuff from the Y. M. C. A. building for a bonfire.

Wayne County Taxes.

The state tax commission in making an increase of about $30,000,000 in the assessment of Wayne county, boosted the real estate of the Solway Process Co., on the 100 acres on which most of the buildings are erected, from $445,000 to $1,204,000, and on another piece of property from $66,000 to $115,000. A reduction was made in the personal assessment of the company of from $550,000 to $250,000.

Other large increases that were made are: Conrad Clifford estate, $8,900 to $36,140; Consolidated Rolling Stock Co., real estate $14,000 to $21,500, personal $10,000 to $18,000; Michigan Carbon Works, real estate $200,000 to $405,000, personal $120,000 to $217,000; Thos. Forman Co., Ltd., real estate $35,000 to $55,700, personal $25,000 to $36,400; Fischer Hughes Gelatine Co., real estate $7,000 to $30,000, personal $20,000 to $23,000.

Convict at a Funeral.

With a deputy sheriff watching his every movement John Harney attended the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Kate Harney, in St. Philip's church in Battle Creek Wednesday and heard Rev. Fr. Sadler say the words committing her body to earth. Harney is serving a 10-year term in the state prison at Jackson for burglary. Postmaster Latta and others interceded with Gov. Bliss and got permission for the man to attend the funeral. He was an hour late in arriving, and the funeral was delayed on that account. He is known as "Pup" Harney, and has borne a bad reputation.

The Governor's Leniency.

Gov. Bliss has commuted the sentence of Milton M. Wolfe, who has been out on parole for a year, so that it expires at once. Wolfe was sent from Chippewa county two years ago for four years in Marquette for larceny. The governor has issued paroles to Daniel McCabe, sent from Van Buren county in 1897 for 10 years in Jackson for criminal assault; and to George E. Webster, of Chippewa county, sent to Marquette in 1902 for two and a half years for assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

The Blockade at the Flats.

The steamer John N. Glidden, sunk in St. Clair Flats canal by the barge Magna, of the steel trust fleet, will be a total loss and may be blown up by the government as an obstruction to navigation. The work started by the Magna Friday morning when she crashed through the bow of the boat and carried away everything back almost to the pilot house and nine feet down from the main deck was completed by six other boats which struck the wreck in passing and practically broke her to pieces.

Shipping Blocked.

A steamer blockade that will mean the loss of many thousands of dollars at the bag end of the marine season is on at the Flats canal, one of the three difficult points in the line of great lakes traffic. All traffic between upper and lower lakes of vessels loaded to draw more than 10 1/2 feet must be suspended, but for that which squeezes through a 75-foot passageway. The huge hulk of the steamer John N. Glidden reposes peacefully in the narrow ship canal, prohibiting practically all passage.

Smallpox Still Working.

Two Bay City boarding houses, one the Park City Hotel, with 25 inmates, and the other a private place with 15 persons, are quarantined. Six cases of smallpox have been found in the latter place, and two in the former. In spite of every effort made by the board of health and the contract physicians, new cases spring up as soon as others are disposed of. With an expense account of about $35,000 in two years on account of smallpox, the supervisors are making all kinds of howls for economy.

Killed in a Runaway.

William Moreland, a wealthy farmer, living about four miles from Caro, was killed by his team running away and throwing him out of the wagon. He was one of the jurors on the first civil case tried in justice court in this township in 1890, was about 67 years old, and was an uncle of D. W. H. Moreland, the deceased commissioner of public works, Detroit. A neighbor who was riding with him was also thrown out, but not seriously injured.

An Ill-Treated Woman.

Great indignation has been aroused in Niles by an accusation made against William Putnam, a local mail carrier, who is chaplain of the state association of mail carriers. He is charged with having ill-treated his grandmother, Mrs. Margaret Brown, aged 90 years. Mrs. Brown has made oath that Putnam struck her twice and then ordered her from his home, telling her to go to the poorhouse or somewhere else.

Brevort township, Mackinac county, has raised 5,000 bushels of peas this season.

Apples Will Be High.

Before December 1, 30,000 barrels of apples will be laid away in Detroit storage houses, for use later in the winter, according to reports now rife. The apples that the commission men are salting away for future sale to grocers are the high-grade ones, Baldwins, greenings, and northern spies, nominally quoted now at from $2.50 to $2.75 a barrel. A storage charge of 50 cents a barrel for the season is made, with the privilege of withdrawing the apples from storage at any time. Later in the winter these fancy grades will bring from $4.50 to $5.50 a barrel, so that the commission men make a nice profit by holding them back. Apples are reported to be unusually plentiful in Michigan this year, and half a dozen of the largest commission houses in Detroit who supply the trade have contracted with the farmers to take their whole orchards. As fast as they come in from the country the poorer grades, quoted at from $1.25 to $1.50 a barrel, are sold to the retailers, and the better ones added to the supply in the storage houses.

Can't Borrow Money.

Judge Wauty has refused to allow Receiver Frankenthal to borrow money to pay the men formerly employed by the Michigan Lake Superior Power Company. His reason for doing this, as he announced is that the first mortgagees have not expressed themselves as consenting to this arrangement, and it is they who have first say on the matter. The announcement has aroused an ugly feeling among the men employed on the American side of the river, and various threats are heard which have resulted in the police department of this city carefully guarding all the works of the company. It was stated that the men had threatened to lower the head gates of the canal, thus emptying it, and a guard has been placed there to prevent anything of the kind occurring.

Used Dynamite.

During Tuesday night somebody blew up a section of the Algoma Central track near the brickmaking plant of the Consolidated company on the Canadian side. Dynamite was used. The police are working on the case but have been unable to get any clue that leads to identity of the guilty persons. It cannot be learned where the explosive was obtained. It is thought to have been the work of persons engaged in the recent riots. No trains were running at the time, so it could not have been done to cause a wreck.

Run Was Needless.

Because two of the directors had resigned and it was rumored that four others had done likewise, there was a little run on the Muskegon Savings bank Monday, though the state bank examiner had just made a very flattering report on the institution's condition. The other banks offered to help out in the emergency, but no assistance was needed.

The Mortgage Failure.

Charles Montague, of Caro, filed a petition Monday morning to be discharged from bankruptcy. Jacob Zerga, however, said he had a claim of $500 against Montague, and as several other creditors wanted to examine him further Judge Swan withheld the discharge for 15 days.

Menominee farmers who planted sugar beets extensively are lucky, as beets are the only crop which has survived the heavy rains of that section. Edward Duford and Philip La Vare, well known woods cooks, sent from Menominee Sept. 1, to Louisiana, have not arrived at their destination. Foul play is feared.

Charles O. Frank, of Port Huron, who had stolen systematically from the store of his former employer for four years, was fined $25 and costs after he had paid $200. The employer had before refused to hush the matter up for $500. Judge Tappan said that Frank's disgrace and the loss of his position as a customs officer were almost punishment enough.

The 5-year-old daughter of Gus Melow, of Carney, was playing with matches when her dress caught fire, and she was so badly burned about the head, arms and shoulders that her recovery is doubtful. She probably inhaled fumes as well.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD.

War Is Threatened.

There has been no change for the better in the situation in the far east. If anything the outlook is more warlike, and the news which reaches England indicates a condition that is most equivalent to open war. The most significant point in the day's news is to the effect that Japan is either landing or preparing to land troops in Korea. If this proves to be correct, it is almost equivalent to a declaration of war. As if in reply to this news comes the information that a powerful Russian fleet has left Port Arthur under sealed orders, presumably for Korean waters, to prevent this landing. There is no doubt the Japanese government will be backed up by a unanimous public opinion, no matter to what lengths she may go in opposing Russian aggression.

Turkish Atrocities.

A Dublin correspondent says: A young Turkish officer, Zelfonia Bey, who had been married only a month, was sent to the village of Bitoli by Simla Pasha. He soon became disgusted with the uncontrolled brutality of the soldiers. His troop took 20 children, aged between 6 months and 7 years, hung them head downwards, arranged according to their size. While their parents were compelled to stand near, the soldiers began shooting the children. Zelfonia Bey suddenly uttered a terrible cry, drew his sword and ran amuck among the soldiers, who fled. Zelfonia killed two and wounded many of his soldiers before he was overpowered. He was sent to Constantinople, where he is now in a lunatic asylum.

An Empire Wanted.

The secret of M. Lebaudy's attempt to found an empire in Africa is out. The young French millionaire, who is now in London on business, desires first to obtain the consent of the European powers who claim to have influence over the territory on which he has designs, to establish along the northwest coast of Africa an empire larger than Rhodesia to be entitled the United States of Liberia. It is alleged he intends to found a state peopled by negroes from America, who would receive grants of land and be encouraged to found a country of their own. If M. Lebaudy obtains all the territory he desires he will have a country rich in minerals, india rubber and coffee.

Cranks Are Numerous.

Another crank tried to get to the president Wednesday morning. About 10 o'clock a stranger was observed by one of the officers on duty at the White House wandering about in the north lobby. He had sneaked in the front door without being noticed. On being questioned he gave his name as John Decker, and his home in Norwich, Conn. He merely wanted to see the president, he said. The officer thereupon turned him over to the police. He was not armed and made no hostile demonstration, according to the statement of the officer in charge. On orders from Secretary Loeb the attaches of the White House are no longer permitted to give out information regarding such callers for fear that the notoriety will attract others.

The Postoffice Gratters.

The federal grand jury, which for months has been working on the post-office department "graft" cases, completed its work by returning 15 more indictments, making a total of 29 in all. A very pathetic touch is added to the latest list, which includes James N. Tyner, former assistant attorney-general for the postoffice department. Judge Tyner will never be tried, because he is said to be dying, slowly but surely. His case is especially sensational, because Tyner was himself postmaster-general during the last year of Gen. Grant's administration.

THE SEASON'S CHANGE.

The Last of the Good Old Summer Time.
From the Minneapolis Tribune.

Great Britain's Imports.

The reports of the London board of trade shows an increase in imports for September of $13,438,500 and a decrease in exports of $2,401,500. The imports are the highest on record for the month of September, the food accounting being upwards of $12,500,000 of the increase, of which $5,000,000 is for grain and flour. The exports have only twice been exceeded, namely in September, 1902, and September, 1900. The decrease in exports occurred chiefly in iron manufactures, cotton fabrics and new ships.

The statue of Nathan Hale in the New York City Hall park was found draped with a British flag and the motto, "Lest We Forget." It is believed to have been done by some patriotic citizens because of the visit of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company of London.

Conductor John Mullin and Tourist Agent Charles Thomas have been exonerated in Port Huron from blame for the attempt to smuggle a Chinaman and a case of whisky from Canada in a Pullman car, by Porter W. N. Crawford, who admits the whisky, but repudiates the Chinaman, who is held.

THE COMPOSITE HOUSE.

When Mr. Subbute's built a nest
In which to house his bride,
He borrowed from his friends the best
Ideas they had tried.

He borrowed here, he borrowed there—
Smith's frieze and Green's veneer;
He borrowed Johnson's porte-cochere
And Cooper's chandelier.

He borrowed Wilson's water tank,
Park's pantry, Grady's grill;
And then he borrowed from the bank
The cash to pay the bill.

In Three Parts
PART I

"Old" Barrett, trainmaster, held that when an engineer had once gone, un-killed, through a head-end collision, he was never so much a man of courage afterward. But Nat Shandon's theory a refutation so marked that I, for one, never heard the "old man" "chew" that argument more.

It was Shandon, you know, who sat on the right hand side of the cab of the old 200, going up Angel Pass, when Jerry Burns came down with the big 722 and piled the gulch with ruin. Jerry was not at fault, for he couldn't hold seventeen cars of steel rails on a slippery mountain track when something was wrong with the brakes. Jerry and the fireman of the colliding engines jumped, with natural and calamitous results; but Shandon stuck, and saw the supreme vision.

Shandon was a large man, or perhaps, to put it more precisely, a big boy. When his hand was on the throttle and the machine was going fast, he was sometimes sober and looked his age; but for the most part he was "cutting up." As I remember him, he stood more than six feet in flat-heeled shoes, was powerfully fashioned in body and limb, slightly stooped in the shoulders, with head and face nearly handsome, but almost too small for his frame, and medium-sized gray eyes that looked square into the eyes of other people and danced with bantering smiles.

Round Hill, the division station, was a "wet" town, for what town beyond the line of the Rockies could hope to excite the envy of its rivals unless its saloons outnumbered its stores? Perhaps it was for this reason, or because it was agreed that an aggregation of Western railroad men could perforce not be else than in need of grace, that the drums and tambourines of the Salvation army startled its main street habitues one February evening. The "Hallelujah People" had arrived.

Nat Shandon was passing, on his way to his engine, that first evening, and paused a moment to see what was going on. Three persons, fronting a crowded sidewalk, were singing in gleeful fashion. Two of the singers were girls, and each of them rattled a tambourine. The third was a middle-aged man, clean shaven and happy looking, but with the frassery of out-lived dissipation thick upon his face.

Shandon began racking jokes as he laughingly looked over the heads of the crowd toward the singers. But a moment later one of the girls stepped upon a box at the edge of the sidewalk and looked round on the torch-lit faces of the curious concourse. Instantly Shandon was a serious man.

The young woman was small and had a face thin, faintly olive in tone, delicately featured, with dark, sorrowful eyes that dominated the countenance. As she looked down on the faces of the crowd a little smile ran about her lips, an engaging yet pathetic gleam of appeal which somehow mingled friendship and pity curiously. Shandon felt the look and the spirit of the face enter him as something that passes to the heart of matter and leaves no sign or wound. He drew in a deep breath, glanced up at the clear stars overhead, dropped his eyes to the crowd and made a movement as if to go. His world had suddenly changed. Then he turned toward the face again. "Shut up!" he said to a noisy fellow at his elbow, unconsciously ending the girl's command with an oath.

The girl was speaking. Shandon looked at her with a earnest eyes. To Shandon the personality of the speaker was far more than the story. Her delicate figure, clad in plain brown; her pathetic, tender face, in its frame of black bonnet and dark ribbons tied under the chin, sent something like a cry of pity through his great body. Why should she subject herself to such publicity? Why should brutal people be permitted to leer at her? A tipsy brakeman a few feet from him was interrupting the speaker with loud remarks and drunken gestures. Shandon reached in and pushed him roughly from the crowd. The girl paused, and looked after them oddly, pityingly. The crowd roared with laughter.

Shandon looked down a moment at

"Then you'll come to our meetings?"

God bless you," you said. The outline of the fallen man. "Get up and go to your boardin' house," he growled. "Don't you disturb the meetin' again." The girl stepped down from the box and took her tambourine from the hand of her sister worker, a blonde young woman wearing the insignia of a cadet, while the lieutenant mounted the box and began speaking.

The little brown captain drew toward Shandon a few steps and lifted her sorrowful eyes. Then she came nearer to him and put out her hand. He took it, timidly, feeling himself suddenly touched with a kind of trembling. "I want so much to thank you, but I shouldn't," she said. "It wasn't right to use the man roughly to take him away. It is such as he that Christ is seeking; poor blind soul, he is so much to be pitied!" There was something like tears in her voice.

The big engineer grew confused. "I didn't know—I didn't understand—I'm sorry," he stammered. "But, Miss," with a sudden clinching of his fists, "you can't expect a man to let any one disturb or insult you. I won't stand that; 'tain't right and proper."

"The Savior didn't mind such things," she said softly. "He loved the erring; when they maltreated him he strove the more to help them. We try to feel as he did."

"Well, I'm not—not religious; I don't understand the feeling; 'tain't hardly human, seems to me. Anyhow, no—no man shall break up your meetings when I'm 'round," he said, with a flame in eyes and cheeks.

She put out her hand again, and it clung a moment in his, while a gratitude she could not suppress shone in her eyes. "Then you'll come to our meetings? God bless you," she said. "I don't know; maybe," he stammered, and hurried away toward the round house.

When he had gone a hundred feet or more he turned and listened an instant. The lieutenant was telling how, after years of dissipation, he had elected to end all in suicide, when the Salvationists brought him to know God's love, and that had freed and saved him. "Hallelujah!" came the voice of the little captain, and she and the cadet broke into pealing song. (To be continued.)

FACES OF MEN AND WOMEN.

Are the Former More Likely to Show Defects Than the Latter?

After they had held down a bench on Riverside Drive for an hour, during which time 500 people had passed, one of them wound up his disconnected comments with this:

"Have you ever noticed how few women you see with any deformity in their faces? You may watch the crowd in any street and every tenth man will have a broken nose, or a disfigured mouth, or deformed chin, or some mark which indicates a misfortune. But not one woman in fifty is so marked."

"You see ugly women, women with telltale lines in their faces, and plenty of good-looking women, but, as I say, not one in fifty—I have made the count frequently and that is the average—has a scar or an abnormal mark on her face."

"I asked a doctor about it, and his explanation was that women being out of doors less than men, are more protected from accidents. But that is not satisfactory if you study the proposition."

"You may stand at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn Bridge in the rush hour, as I have done, and take 100 women and then take the first twenty men afterward that pass along, men and women who you know come and go to work daily, and you will find more men marked in the face than you will find women. I am not talking about women who go shopping, but women who work in stores and shops."

"I used to be a night worker, and went home on the early morning trains which carry an army of night workers of both sexes—the women in such cases, being from the bakeshops and cafes and places where women are as much in danger as men, and rarely did I ever see a woman whose face was marred by any natural deformity, or by anything that would indicate an accident."

"The only conclusion I ever reached was that women are more careful of their faces than men, but that applies only to accidents. How about those who have been favored from birth? Why are they, proportionately, more fortunate than men?"—New York Sun.

Origin of Names of Carriages.

Omnibuses were first seen in Paris in 1827, and the name is nothing more than the Latin word signifying "for all." "Cab" is an abbreviation of the Italian word cabriolet, which was changed to cabriolet in French. Both words have a common derivative—cabriolet—signifying a goat's leap. The exact reason for giving it this strange appellation is unknown, unless because of the lightness and springiness of the vehicle in its original form. In some instances names of special forms of carriages are derived from the titles of persons who introduced them. The brougham was first used by the famous Lord Brougham, and the popular name also derives its name from its introducer, Mr. Hansom. Landau, a city in Germany, was the locality in which was first made the style of vehicle bearing that name.

Wires, Beasts and Birds.

"A strange thing is the effect of electrical energy on birds and wild beasts," says a telegraph lineman. "Woodpeckers are continually tapping telegraph poles. In the country you will find everywhere poles honey-combed by the sturdy bills of woodpeckers. The birds mistake the humming sound inside the poles for the humming of insects, and it is to get at these supposed insects that they make their perforations. Bears, on the other hand, think the humming comes from bees, and they overturn the stones at the pole's base in their endeavor to get at the honey. Wolves are afraid of the sound. A wolf won't go near a telegraph pole under any circumstances."—Philadelphia Record.

An All-Round Useful Animal.

To take an afternoon drive in a light rig drawn by a pacing cow is no unusual thing in certain mountain communities of Luzon, Philippine Islands.

In appearance these animals resemble ordinary cows. A casual observer could not tell them apart, but above the shoulder a fleshy growth the size of an apple marks a slight difference in specie, denoting some relationship to the Indian zebu.

A farmer will often drive to town behind the cow he has just milked to exchange the milk and cream cheese for store goods and home provisions.—New York Press.

MARRIAGE IN TURKEY

All a Matter of Arrangement

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)

No one who has lived in Turkey and had an opportunity of acquainting himself with the domestic life of the people could fail to recognize the important part women play in Turkish society, says a traveler who has just returned from the land of the Sublime Porte.

Especially is this true of the "old woman," who, unless she is incapacitated by age or sickness, leads a life of great activity and usefulness. Young women look upon her with a great respect as an experienced adviser, and men are afraid of her tongue. Gray hairs, however, are regarded as a crown of honor, and to a Turk his mother is his truest friend; he pets her tenderly, goes to her for counsel in all his difficulties, and relies upon her to watch for opportunities to advance his worldly affairs when out "gossiping."

But the main business of the old women of Turkey is match-making; they talk of weddings wherever they go, and they negotiate all the preliminaries of a marriage. The bride hunter for a man relative is called a geurde (one who inspects). When she visits a house where there are marriageable girls she immediately announces her mission, and while the maidens are being made ready she is served with coffee. Then come various civilities, such as "Your daughter is like a full moon," and the match-maker puts a series of questions to the mother, who thereupon proceeds to descant on her daughter's eyes, plumpness and accomplishments. The visit ends with the assurance on the part of both women that "if fate so wills it" they will be happy to arrange a marriage.

The match-maker reports to her son about the "lovely angel," and the next step is to ask the consent of the girl's parents in writing. This petition is usually accompanied by a gift of fruit and flowers, and then a day is appointed, when the lover is to ride by the young woman's house and be examined by her through the window grating. The result of this inspection is reported by the parents, and if it is favorable the lover, if wealthy, makes a gift to the girl of about $1,000; this counts as the bride's first instalment of pin money. A few days later a formal betrothal takes place at the home of a priest. In the interval between betrothal and marriage the lover is not allowed to see the girl of his (mother's) choice, but he is not forbidden to send presents to her. However, this interval is a matter of a few days only.

On the day of the marriage the house and grounds of the bride's parents are thrown open to the public, and a mob of both sexes floods to the garden to see the bridegroom appear in his "best" on horseback. To ap-is therefore constantly growing. At Breslau a druggist's shop has just changed hands for $15,000, including $2,000 for the license alone. At Danzig a druggist's business recently realized $2,500, including $3,000 for the license. It was sold a fortnight later for $9,800, including $25,000 for the license.—London Answers.

A Hardware Talk.

"Yes," said the nut to the nail, "I gave me a terrible wrench to part from him, but I knew it would be only a matter of a few days before he would bolt, anyway."

Saving the Crops.
In Amelth and surrounding places in Bay county, the women are in many instances donning men's trousers and assisting their husbands in attempting to save crops still standing in the fields. Twenty-four hours of rain transformed the already soaking ground into a sea of mud in the lower sections, and farmers are pulling sugar beets out of the ground by hand, so soft is the earth, and they sink, meanwhile, knee deep. The last rain was the straw that counted, and hundreds of acres of beets will be abandoned. The estimators predict a shortage of 33 1-3 per cent in the crop.

The schools in the village of Vetsy are closed so pupils may assist in harvesting the potato crop. The potatoes are said to be rotting in the ground on account of the wet weather, and the schools have been shut for two weeks while the tubers are being harvested. Even with all the school children engaged in the work there is a scarcity of help, and when the moon is not obscured by clouds each day's work is extended far into the night.

Mr. Pearce's Wanderings.

W. J. Pearce, the well known Pontiac public works commissioner and florist, who suddenly disappeared from Detroit August 18, arrived home Thursday morning. He was accompanied by Marshal Toynton, of Pontiac, who went to Elgin to bring him home, and by his son, Hubert, who met them in Chicago. Pearce is unable to remember an incident in his long and wearisome trip. He does not even remember leaving Pontiac, and is as much in the dark about his actions in Detroit, August 17 and 18, as he is about his later wanderings. "At first, he could remember but little and could only recall people after I had mentioned their names," says the marshal. "The same $25 that was said he had when he left was still in his watch pocket. On the way home he picked up a good deal, and by the time he reached Pontiac he seemed to be quite like his old self."

Typhoid Raging.

Lansing physicians are treating approximately 75 cases of typhoid fever, according to statements obtained from them in a canvass yesterday, though it is rumored that there are really 90 cases. The city physician's reports to the state board of health have never shown the existence of more than 20 cases, but it is known that there have been many cases that were not reported to them, and a strong effort has been made to hide the fact that the disease was raging. Lansing doctors have no cases in the country, but in proportion to the population it is believed that the disease is just as widespread there as in this city.

Taxes Boosted.

Ionia county's assessments were elevated by the state tax commission. Real estate was raised 5 per cent in Ionia city, 15 per cent in Belding, 18 per cent in Easton, 8 in Ronald, and 6 in Berlin. The valuation of John F. Bible's wagon company was increased by $45,000, that of the Ionia Gas Co. by $35,000 and the Belding Hall Co.'s by $18,000, and so on.

Coldwater has no electric cars yet, but hopes to sometime.

Although thousands of dollars' worth of potatoes have rotted throughout the thumb, it is believed that if the fine weather of the past week continues two or three weeks more the bulk of the crop will be saved. Beans, too, are in the main in good shape, except on very low lands.

Fits.

Baby Had Two to Six Every Day.

Suffered Terribly—Doctors Failed.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Cured Him.

Weak, nervous, fretful, puny children require a treatment such as only Dr. Miles' Nervine affords. When neglected these symptoms lead to epileptic fits or spasms. Every mother should strengthen her own and babies' nerves with Dr. Miles' Nervine, a true specific in all nervous disorders. Read the following:

"When my little boy was 18 months old he had cramps in his gut and hands. They would be drawn out of shape for two or three days. At first liniment seemed to help but in about two weeks nothing did any good the doctor gave him. We called another doctor but his medicine did no good so we changed to another who called it spinal disease. By this time the child's body was drawn out of shape; his backbone was curved to one side and his hands and feet out of shape. His sufferings were terrible, and he was having from two to six fits a day. I was taking Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for nervous trouble and saw it was recommended for fits, so I thought I would see if it would help him. All three doctors had given him up. One-half bottle stopped the fits and his limbs straightened, and another bottle cured him. He is now a strong, healthy boy going to school. I have waited to see if the old trouble returned, before writing you, but it never has. I cannot praise Dr. Miles' Nervine enough, as I know it saved my boy's life."—MRS. URAH NELSON, Lansing, Iowa.

POETIC TRIBUTE

To the St. Mary's Ladies' Literary Society at Chelsea, Michigan.

BY MONROE GUY CARLETON.

They haply stroll where Knowledge points the way,
Gracious of mien and with hearts joined in love;
Fair as the flowery bloom of sunny May,
And e'er soul-trustful of their King above;
Through immemorial years they wander back,
Scanning the mighty wonders of the past,
Or traverse Time's more glorious modern track,
Beholding triumphs brilliant, strange and vast.

On Galilee's blue tide they trace their way,
To whose mad billows Christ said "Peace, be still!"
Sweet-thoughted walk in sad Gethsemane,
And over Calvary's consecrated hill,
Jerusalem they view with pitying eyes,
God-hallowed once, now of His favor bare,
Where Islam's minaretted shrines uprise,
Whence the muezzin calls to alien prayer.

Their feet 'mid Karnac's hoary ruins stray,
Stray where keen suns golden the pyramids,
And where the Gizeh sphinx looks far away;
O'er sandy stretches through his stony lids,
They stand where Carthage, empress of the main,
Once raised her haughty splendors to the sky,
But find the glories of the ancient plain
Low sepulchred in mound or tumuli.

And, fancy urged, in wave-kissed shallows sail
Away to isles insperched in sapphire seas,
And there the nereids watch, of olden tale,
Sporting round Neptune's barge in calm and breeze.
Their shells soft blowing, or with trancing song,
Luring witchéd mariners to abyssal tombs,
Or view them comb their dripping tresses long,
Enrobed in surge-lace white from coral looms.

Surveys this sisterhood the latter Past
They mark the Vikings as from Norland seas
They southward sail and their dread anchors cast
In Albion's goodly bays and Normandy's;
Or to Italia's affluent coasts repair
With hand remorseless to strike down and slay,
Or devastate with flame, abduct the fair,
And priceless classic treasures bear away.

Steed borne and gallant knights enmailed they scan
Combatting in gay joust and tournament;
And wars in which the Hun and Saracen
On the destruction of the True Faith bent,
Found the undaunted Catholic their foe,
Whose arm intrepid smote their legions
With such a God-impelling, crushing blow,
As from their menace His bless'd cause to free.

And eras later still they ponder well—
The fate of empires, rise and fall of kings;
The ocean search for lands wherein might dwell
Nation and tribe with heathen hamperings,
And fruitage of high enlightenment,
And thought-expansion, philosophic lore,
Of joys Arcadian ripening man's content,
And rights that are his glory evermore.

From volumed Pisaghs they all lands behold,
Behold the cleft grandeur of the earth,
Its rivers, seas, broad deserts, mountains bold,
The elder realms where first mankind had birth;
The skies they roam to eternity's great doors,
The astral spaces search all through the blue;
The suns explore that gem high Heaven's floors,
And love the more their God the more they view.

At times their spirits sweep on wings of thought
Along the luent, star-embazoned way
To th' Ineffable City, glory-fraught,
Where rules the Blessed Lord in Endless Day,
And gaze upon its gem-enrusted towers,
On pave of fretted gold, on palace dome,
On saints with palms, hosts radiant, holy bowers,
And hope they may there find their final home.

BAD BLUNDER OF COUNSEL.

Virtually Last Lawsuit Brought by Whistler, the Painter.

Whistler, the painter, once brought suit against John Ruskin for writing of him: "I have seen and heard much of cockney impudence before now; but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask 200 guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face." One of the most amusing features of the trial that followed the publication of this criticism was the exhibition in court of some of the "nocturnes" and "arrangements" which were the subject of the suit. The jury of respectable citizens, whose knowledge of art was probably limited, was expected to pass judgment on these paintings. Mr. Whistler's counsel held up one of the pictures. "Here, gentlemen," said he, "is one of the works which have been maligned." "Pardon me," interposed Mr. Ruskin's lawyer, "you have that picture upside down." "No such thing," "Oh, but it is so," continued Ruskin's counsel; "I remember it in the Grosvenor gallery, where it was hung the other way about." The altercation ended in the correctness of view of Ruskin's lawyer being sustained and the fact that Mr. Whistler's own counsel did not know which was the top or bottom of the picture had more to do with Ruskin's virtual victory than all the arguments of counsel or the evidence of art experts. The jury awarded the artist one farthing damages, which he hung on his watch chain and used to exhibit with sardonic pride.

HIS SECOND BAD "BREAK."

Departing Visitor Meant Well, But Was Unfortunate.

De Jinks always wanted to say the right thing, but somehow he never could. He had been spending a couple of weeks in a Wisconsin town, and on the evening set for his departure met Miss De Vercy, a very pretty young lady, to whom he had been introduced when first he arrived in the place. "And are you going to-night, Mr. De Jinks?" she said. "I'm so sorry, we haven't seen more of you during your stay."

"Pray, don't mention it," he returned with an excess of gallantry. "Indeed it has been all my fault, Miss De Vercy."

A few moments later he saw his mistake, but could find no chance to atone for it, until, as he was about to leave for the depot, one of his friends suggested:

"You haven't said 'Good-bye' to Miss De Vercy, have you?"

Here was a chance that was not to be lost. Turning to the fair damsel, with the sweetest and most gracious smile, he said:

"Indeed, I have, old boy. I had the pleasure of saying 'Good-bye' to Miss De Vercy first of all."

And then he went his way, believing he had "done himself proud."—Brooklyn Eagle.

POPE'S CHOICE OF TITLES.

Events Which Have Influenced Pontiffs in Their Selection.

New popes are sometimes influenced by incidents of their boyhood in selecting the titles by which they desire to be known. Thus Leo XIII. when in his teens, presented an address to Leo XII., and the event so stamped itself upon his memory that it determined his choice of a title when he was called to the chair of St. Peter. Some similar recollection, it is likely enough, suggested the decision of Cardinal Sarto, and not as has been too readily assumed, a desire to give an indication of his predilection for the policy of Pius IX. Between the last pontiff who bore the name of Pius and the present one there is a striking resemblance musically, for Pius IX. was also a proficient player on the piano and organ and possessed an excellent baritone voice. His singing of mass was a musical treat, but he suffered agonies while his intimate friend Cardinal Manning was similarly engaged. Englishman can sing mass decently, was his criticism on one of these occasions.

Broncho of the Seas.

Luff an' reef, my bloomin' lan'man,
Here's a shot across your bows,
Whillet I stan' an' tells ye civil
O' the properest thing in scows.

Ye may jaw, ye looney lubber,
'Bout your bronzo yachts trig an' tight,
An' your little top-fool raters,
As what gives a chump delight.

But heave to, my poor lan' lubber!
God's truth, 'twixt you an' me,
Ye know nothin' 'bout vessels,
An' still less about the sea.

Take your very stiffest sea-bo's
That blue water ever fanned,
They ain't in it with a dory
In a living gale o' wind.

An' the gamest, narriest hooses
That is raised upon the land
Can't compare with ontamed dorries
Full o' mettle, sarsie, an' sand.

Honest, when it comes to business,
An' the combers 'round ye flow,
There ain't nothin' like a dory,
Ridin' out a 'tarnal blow.

If so be ye pulls to wind'ard
With a blizzard gin your back,
A hundred thousand hell dogs
Frothin' growlin' in your track.

It's the devilish, duckin' dory
Buried in the flying foam,
As what fills a man with ginger,
An' what makes him feel to home.

So the properest bo't, you lubber—
If ye're pleased, or if ye ain't—
Is the one that saves a sinner
From becommin' of a saint.

An' I 'lows the ablest critter
In a screechin' slewin' breeze
Is the bouncin' buckin' dory,
Tricky broncho o' the seas.

Can a house of moderate cost meet more than the practical needs of the day? This question is answered in a convincing affirmative by the house which is described and pictured in the November Delineator. In spite of the limitations prescribed by economy, this house possesses a distinctive charm and refinement, in addition to the usual conveniences and comforts of the modern home. The interior finishing contributes a touch of originality, and the furnishings are artistic, while in certain portions of the house, to further the ends of economy, housewifely ingenuity has evolved some unique features. The illustrations of interior and exterior will be suggestive to home builders.

Reading Hustler: It is said a Hillsdale minister, who goes to church from his home in a carriage on Sundays, received an anonymous letter recently calling his attention to the fact that the Lord never rode to church in a carriage. The U. of M. freshmen-sophomore rush at Ann Arbor last Friday night wound up with a clash with the police officers, and five students were arrested and jailed. Four of them were heavily fined, but the fifth may be held to the circuit court on the charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm less than the crime of murder. He struck Patrolman Istell over the head with a club. It is said that the university authorities will put a ban on all future rushes, which is a right move in the right direction.

THAT GIRL of JOHNSON'S

By JEAN KATE LUDLUM.

Author of "At a Girl's Mercy," Etc.

Entered According to Act of Congress in the Year 1890 by Street & Smith, In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Allen was in an adjoining room reading to Mrs. Green. Mrs. Green was a woman one could love at a glance and love always; her sweet old face was flushed with pink, her brown eyes were soft and gentle, her silken white hair was brushed in waves back from her face and softened by a cap of lace; her voice was what a woman's voice should be, sweet but firm, low but perfectly modulated. She took Dolores right into her motherly heart, knowing every word of her history as far as her son knew it, knowing, too, without being told, that this was the girl her son loved. And the slender, silent girl seemed to melt toward her as toward no one else, though at first it was very bitter this having to accept hospitality from the mother of the man who had been so wronged. She had been forced to accept the hospitality of his mother—been forced with no excuse to place the acceptance out of the question, because there was no excuse she could offer when they took her father from the little house, bearing him carefully to the carriage waiting for him at the gate, soft with cushions and pillows of down, to the station and the city some thirty miles below the town down the valley, with Doctors Dunwiddie and Grey and her uncle. They had everything that money could buy to gain comfort for him. A car was reserved for him on the train; everything absolutely was done that could be for his comfort. And then they had forced upon her the acceptance of this hospitality.

Mrs. Green was watching Dolores through the open doorway, leaning back on the cushioned sofa, her soft hands folded in her lap at this her "rest time" of the day, as she listened to Mrs. Allen's reading, her thoughts somehow tangled with that and the girl at the western window in the sunset lights and the boy of her heart—their only child, the best son, she often said, laughing, that a mother ever had. Dora was partly in shadow though her face, too, caught the glow from above. The silence that had followed Dolores all her life seemed to fall like a veil around her, and even to her cousin for the time. The sunset lights faded and died; a mellow darkness enveloped the eastern slope of the mountain; the road that wound up its side was like a slender thread in the darkness. Suddenly the sound of a church bell smote the air, and Dolores started, turning from the window.

"What is it?" she asked of Dora, and Dora arose as she answered her: "Church bells, Lorie," touching the hand nearest her shyly, as though she were half afraid. "This is Wednesday evening, and the bell is ringing for prayer meeting."

Dolores made no further remark on the subject. She knew nothing of prayer meetings or church bells; they had little interest for her; her thoughts were with her father, with young Green, with many things outside of this commonplace subject. She turned from the window, however, bringing her face into shadow. Mrs. Allen had ceased her reading, and was watching the girls with an inscrutable expression in her eyes. Had she failed after all her planning? There seemed no difference in the friendship between this girl and the son of their host. And as she could not win Dora from her cousin she could at least make this stupid girl feel some of the bitterness she held in her own heart. That, at least, was worth planning for. She was so deeply buried in these thoughts that she started nervously when Mrs. Green called the girls in her soft, low voice.

"My dears," she said, "are you not ready to join us now? We have watched the picture you make until now we wish yourselves. There is room for each of you beside me here on the sofa, or will Dora play something sweet and low to charm away the darkness while Lorie and I sit here together?"

Before they could answer her, however, quick steps sounded on the piazza, the outer door was opened, and young Green entered the room where the elder woman sat. Mrs. Green arose in haste, her face suddenly paling.

"Charlie, what is the matter?" "Don't be frightened, mother," Charlie said, hurriedly with a quick glance around the room, taking his hands in his. "Sit down. Where is Miss Johnson and her cousin? Dunwiddie wires that Johnson has had a relapse and can live but twenty-four hours. Dolores—Dolores must not know—yet. She can not get to him, and it would do no good."

A dead silence reigned through the rooms for a moment, then the lace curtains were drawn aside from the distant window, and Dolores came out; she had unconsciously pushed Dora's hands from her arm and stood alone with the darkness around her, the light of the faded sunset setting her in outline against the window. She crossed the room with no sign of haste, and stood before Mrs. Green.

"I must go to my father," she said. Her voice was perfectly even, but the words were slow, as her lips were stiff.

"God forgive me!" young Green exclaimed, under his breath, clenching

"We have him safe and sure," his hands at his side. "Mother, why did you not tell me? Why did you not tell me?" turning fiercely upon Mrs. Allen in the darkness, in sudden distrust of her, her subtle words returning to him, losing half their meaning.

Mrs. Green took the girl's hand in hers, and her voice was tender as a mother's when she spoke.

"Lorie," she said softly. She liked the tender name. "Lorie, my dear—"

Dolores interrupted her.

"I must go to my father," she repeated, in the same set voice, her eyes not moving from Mrs. Green's face.

"How can I go?"

"You cannot go," Mrs. Green said, gently, "dear; not just now; there is no way to go until midnight, then the train will be due here, and Charlie and Mrs. Allen will take you there."

"I must go to my father," she said, "at once. Tell me how to get there, please."

"There is no way but the train at midnight," he replied.

"But I must go now," she said, gravely; "if there is any way. Could we not go on horses? I must go."

He shook his head slowly. "Even starting now and taking the fastest horses in the stables we could get there only half an hour sooner, and the ride would be too exhausting for it to pay. We will wait, Miss Johnson, and take the train and be in time—I am sure we will be in time. Do not worry. I would get you there if it were possible, believe me—Dolores."

It was the old voice and the old tone of uttering the sad name. She gave no sign that she heard, but she heard. She said nothing as she turned from him, and went out of the room like one in a dream—went out of the room and up the stairs to her room, but the tone and the one low word followed her, like a note of tenderness, through her stony sorrow. And when she had gone young Green turned to his mother, like a boy, in his sore distress, and she, understanding, comforted him.

Then he left the room and Dora went up after Dolores, and the time dragged on leaden feet ere the time came for them to go to the train, when Dolores came down the wide staircase like a spirit in her trailing black dress and bonnet, her face more pallid than the light of the moon on the mountains. Dora was behind her, but she seemed to notice no one, but passed out on to the steps of the piazza where young Green and Mrs. Allen were waiting for her as though she were moving machinery and not through any wish of her own.

"Such an unheard of thing, going off like this in the dead of night," Mrs. Allen said, sharply, showing her heart for the moment in her anger. "Thank heaven Dora isn't like her."

"Hush, Nurse Allen. If I were half as brave as Lorie I would be the proudest girl in the world. I could not do what she has, for my father for all I love him as I do." And Dora's soft hand was on the woman's mouth, and her pleading face turned to her. And these words out of all the others seemed to reach Dolores' mind. She stood for a moment silently on the moonlit steps, her face immovable and pallid against the dead black of her gown, then she turned to Dora and cried in sudden fierceness born of pain—a pain her gentler cousin could never understand.

"And your father loves you, Dora—every one loves you. And no one—has ever—loved me."

CHAPTER XXI.

Even in Death.

As they were whirled along through the night and the darkness young Green's mind was full of the one thought he must tell Dolores about the trial in court that afternoon, before they reached the station, and away from Mrs. Allen's hearing.

"Miss Johnson—Dolores," he said, presently. Her head was leaning against the back of the seat and her eyes were closed, but he was pretty certain she was not asleep. "Dolores, you remember the laming of my mare just after I first met you, and the excitement and indignation among us because of it, and our inability to catch the fellow, though suspicion pointed strongly in one direction?"

She roused with a sinking at heart when the young man spoke; she shook off every other thought and sat waiting for what might be coming upon her.

"Dolores," he said, and he tried to keep his voice steady, for her sake as well as his own; "we have been following up every clue, letting nothing slip us in this matter, as doubtless you have heard, no matter how trivial it might appear. Just before the deed was committed Hal and I disturbed two fellows in the act of stealing the mare. It was a dark night, and they had her out of the stable, her hoofs bough to deaden the sound, but she would whinny in her excitement and terror of the rough men, and that saved her. We were late home that evening from the house of a friend, and hearing Bess we went at once to the stables. One of the fellows we caught, but the other made good his escape."

"We tried our best to get the fellow we had to tell where his comrade was," the young man continued, his voice steady now and natural; "but he was silent as the grave; I give him credit for that. There is an honor among even these rough, lower men that one must respect. Then we waited for your father, as you know, depending considerably upon his evidence, for he knew the condition of the mare's hoofs when he shod her, and that there was nothing wrong then save a slight lameness from going too long without shoes over the rough road. But even without his evidence we have succeeded even better than I had dared hope."

Dolores did not move. She did not quite understand this that he was telling her. How could they succeed without her father, and how could they get the guilty man—

"It was only yesterday," Green went on, and there was a touch of pleasure in his voice that Dolores caught with a dull sense of dead pain. "It was only yesterday that we caught the fellow, but we have him safe and sure enough now."

Surely they had not—Dolores caught her breath, and her swift, terrified eyes flashed upon his startlingly. His own eyes darkened as though with troubled thought.

"The men we sent out in search of him found him yesterday, Dolores, not a stone's throw from where your father fell on the opposite mountain. The first fellow we have sentenced to five years for attempted horse stealing, and the other has had his trial to-day. It was sharp and swift, I assure you. Such a dastardly deed deserved the severest penalty the law allows."

Find Ancient Scotch Bridge.

Laborers engaged in digging a trench for the new drain along the White Sands recently disclosed an arch, pier and buttress of the Old Bridge, which tradition says was first erected at Deverogilla, though in 1620 it was reconstructed after having been wrecked by the flood. At a much later period, when the New Bridge was built and Buccleuch street opened up through the Castle Gardens, and the level of the old Sand Beds raised over which the river used to spread, some of the arches of the Old Bridge at the Dumfries end were buried by the road being brought over them. It is one of these, the one next to the bridge as it is now seen, that was disclosed. It is in good preservation, except that the crown of the arch, which is only about a foot and a half below the level of the pavement, has been broken through. At nine feet down in the cutting for the drain the gravel of the old bed of the river was turned up.—The Scotsman.

Stop Slaughter of Elephants.

The British government is taking steps to stop the indiscriminate slaughter of elephants in its African possessions. Many thousands are killed every year for the sake of their ivory. The governors of the various colonies have been directed to prohibit by every means in their power the killing of the huge animals, as it is feared that unless prompt measures are taken elephants in Africa will soon become very scarce.

Valuable Old Coins.

George J. Laporte of Shrewsbury, Mass., has three old coins which he has picked out of the earth where he has been at work on the grading around the new Howe memorial library. The three coins are a penny made in 1817, and a half-dollar with the date of 1803 plainly stamped on it. The third piece of money is a three-cent silver piece badly mutilated and the date cannot be made out.

Egyptian Cigarettes.

In a recent German report on the Egyptian cigarette industry, it is stated that all the tobacco from which these cigarettes are made comes from Turkey, Macedonia, Smyrna and Greece.

CHARLES CARROLL'S BRAVERY.

There is one episode in history which made a great impression on me the first time I remember hearing about it, and that impression has not been lost or even become fainter in the years that have passed since.

It happened in July, 1776, when a group of men, the representatives of the American people, were gathered together about a table, signing their names to that great work known as the Declaration of Independence.

Among the last to come forward was a man from Maryland, and after writing his name, Charles Carroll, one of the others said to him, "If England ever gets us in her power we are sure to be hung as traitors. But there are other men in the colonies by the name of Charles Carroll, so you have more of a chance to escape."

For a moment there was silence, then Carroll picked up the pen and after his signature wrote the words: "Of Carrollton"—the only man in all those fifty-six to tell the name of the town in which he lived.

Other things, perhaps, of far more importance to the world have taken place than when Charles Carroll wrote the name of his town after his own, but the remembrance of his unselfishness and bravery will ever be treasured in my mind as an evidence of those qualities which I most admire.—St. Nicholas.

INDIAN LEMONADE.

The sumac shrubs, whose reddening foliage and pyramidal clusters of crimson fruit are a conspicuous feature along our country roadsides and in neglected fields in the late summer and throughout the autumn, have a Western cousin which goes by the unusual name of Indian lemonade. It is a sturdy looking bush, with stout, leathery leaves, resembling in texture those of the well-known India rubber plant of our homes, but smaller, and bears amid the foliage small clusters of flat-topped berries, which are coated with a sticky crimson skin. This covering is as sour as a lemon, and if some of the berries are allowed to soak awhile in a vessel of water the result is a very pleasant, thirst-quenching drink.

The Indians of the arid regions where this sumac grows discovered long ago that this, in default of ice, was a good way to make warm drinking water palatable, whence the popular name of the shrub and of the beverage. Children, with their omnivorous appetite for wild provender, are fond of munching the ripe berries, though one would think the acid dose would make their little jaws ache beyond bearing.—Philadelphia Record.

A FISHING ADVENTURE.

Upon one occasion in Northern Michigan I was trout fishing in company with a veteran timber cruiser, a man who knew everything about the rough back life. In time we reached a bend in the stream where a lot of small logs had jammed during the spring freshet. My comrade unconcernedly ventured upon the logs, and before I could follow by some mischance he stepped upon a loose one and instantly disappeared. Had I not been looking at him it is likely I should have imagined he had crossed and gone into the brush upon the further side. One log of all the mass was rolling and a hand showed at one side of it. To dart across and seize the hand occupied very few seconds, but to my horror I could not pull him up through the narrow space through which he had slipped. To set a foot upon the log either side the opening and shove with all strength was the only hope. For seconds I clung to the wrist and strained mightily. Slowly the logs separated and up he came till he was able to twist upon his stomach across a log. Half drowned as he was he had not lost his nerve. "Don't let 'em squeeze back on me!" he gasped, and a moment later he was on his feet. Most men would have weakened then, but he was iron. He had swallowed a lot of water, had been cheek by jowl with an awful death, yet he had no idea of proving false. The logs were slowly slipping further apart and I was standing like a certain large gentleman of Rhodes, and unable to stand much more spreading of to spring to either side, while of course to slip into the water meant to enter the trap he had just escaped. In a few seconds he seized my hand and one quick haul carried me to firm footing. The logs at once closed like a gigantic trap. When we reached solid ground my comrade almost collapsed, and for half an hour he was a very sick man. Later he said: "I held my breath as long as I could, calculating you might try to get me, an' pardner, I'll never forget that little turn. I reckon I was in a mighty tight place."—Edwin Sanders, in The World's Work.

THE GOLDSEEKER.

Half a dozen Mexican cowboys rode into Douglas, Ariz., having in charge a wild man whom they had captured in Sonora, twelve miles below Cos. The man's hair was long and disheveled, his eyes were set far back in his head and his clothes were torn into shreds. The cowboys came upon him in the mountains near a pool of water, and had great difficulty in capturing him. When he was finally caught with a lasso the cowboys bound him hand and foot, tied him on a horse and rode with him to Frontiers, where he was given food and clothing. Later the cowboys brought him to Douglas and turned him over to American authorities.

A party of four white men left Douglas three months ago for the new gold fields near Bacoach, and the wild man was found to be Fred Russell, a member of the party. He evidently became lost from his companions and wandered in the hills without food and water and in an intense heat until he went mad. No information can be obtained from him, as he is violent. He will be taken before the probate judge at Tombstone, and will without doubt be committed to the territorial insane asylum.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BIG THINGS OF THE WEST.

In Southern California the vegetation is often remarkable for its size. At Santa Barbara is a grapevine which covers several hundred square feet, says the Scientific American, the vine itself resembling a tree, said to be the largest vine in the world, though this is open to doubt, for some of the old vines of Spain are of enormous size.

The Eastern heliotrope grows in the form of a vine reaching twenty feet upward, covering the fronts of houses, in some way resisting the frost if at all protected by overhanging roof. In the city of Pasadena a potato, which was trained to grow upon a trellis, assumed the form of a lusty vine over twelve feet high, producing an extraordinary number of potatoes.

Some of the photographs of fields of pumpkins taken in the fall in Southern California might well be considered open to suspicion, so numerous are the productions. One pumpkin exhibited in Los Angeles was so huge that a calf was held in the interior. Another colossal pumpkin raised in 1901 weighed two hundred and thirty pounds, and when dug out after the jack-o'-lantern fashion afforded a playhouse for the rancher's little daughter. If we may judge by the picture. In the old days California pears were famous all over the civilized world for their size, but to-day this reputation applies to all fruits. Strawberries grown there are sometimes so large that three or four would fill a plate. Sweet potatoes are often mammoth—four feet in length.

The School of Journalism.

As the profession of journalism now exists the code is somewhat of the Spartan. Enthusiastic aspirants flock to it and try to master it, but they are weeded out one by one in the workshop until only the newspaper men who were "born that way" remain. Perhaps the school of journalism can do that quicker. It may not require years of additional experience. The school may be a good test of a talent start.—New York Commercial.

ALL TIRED OUT.

The weary, worn out, all-tired feelings come to everybody who taxes the kidneys. When the kidneys are over-worked they fail to perform the duties nature has provided for them to do. When the kidneys fail dangerous diseases quickly follow, urinary disorders, diabetes, dropsy, rheumatism, Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills cure all kidney and bladder ills. Read the following case:

Veteran Joshua Heller, of 706 South Walnut street, Urbana, Ill., says: "In the fall of 1899 after getting Doan's Kidney Pills at Cunningham Bros. drug store in Champaign and taking a course of treatment I told the readers of the paper that they had relieved me of kidney trouble, disposed of a lame back with pain across my loins and beneath the shoulder blades. During the interval which had elapsed I have had occasion to resort to Doan's Kidney Pills when I noticed warnings of attack. On each and every occasion the results obtained were just as satisfactory as when the pills were first brought to my notice. I just as emphatically endorse the preparation to-day as I did over two years ago."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Heller will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Medical advice free; strictly confidential. Address: Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 25 cents per box.

WANTED TO IMPROVE RACE.

Eccentric French Millionaire Laid Money for Giants' Downy.

M. de Saint Ouen de Pierrecourt, an eccentric French millionaire, died a short time ago and left the greater part of his fortune to his native city of Rouen, stipulating that the municipality was to found an annual prize of $20,000 as a dowry for a giant and a giantess in order to regenerate the human race. An amicable arrangement has now been made between the heirs and the city of Rouen. The family attacked the will on the ground that the "giant clause" was impossible of execution. By the arrangement now made the city of Rouen will pay the heirs $600,000, while out of the residue it undertakes to found an undertaking, "inspired by the idea of protecting, preserving and improving the human race, but which shall not cost more than $160,000." The details of this undertaking have not yet been divulged.

ORIGIN.

Of a Famous Human Food. The story of great discoveries or inventions is always of interest.

An active brain worker who found himself hampered by lack of bodily strength and vigor and could not carry out the plans and enterprises he knew how to conduct, was led to study various foods and their effects upon the human system. In other words before he could carry out his plans he had to find a food that would carry him along and renew his physical and mental strength.

He knew that a food that was a brain and nerve builder, (rather than a mere fat maker), was universally needed. He knew that meat with the average man does not accomplish the desired results. He knew that the soft gray substance in brain and nerve centers is made from Albumen and Phosphate of Potash obtained from food. Then he started to solve the problem.

Careful and extensive experiments evolved Grape-Nuts; the new famous food. Grape-Nuts contain the brain and nerve building food elements in condition for easy digestion. The result of eating Grape-Nuts daily is easily seen in a marked sturdiness and activity of the brain and nervous system, making it a pleasure for one to carry on the daily duties without fatigue or exhaustion. The food is in no sense a stimulant but is simply food which renews and replaces the daily waste of brain and nerves.

Its flavor is charming, and being fully and thoroughly cooked at the factory it is served instantly with cream.

The signature of the brain worker spoken of, O. W. Post, is to be seen on each genuine package of Grape-Nuts.

Look in each package for a copy of the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Men, Methods and Work.
The manager, for a very successful money maker, said that he worried over the big things, while his employees worried over the little things.
The manager got along with the employees and the details better than the proprietors did, but the proprietors got along with the whole business much better than the manager could. Some men can keep anything running, lovely if some one else will only see that pay day is passed in good shape. The man able to attend to pay-day requirements might rattle the whole concern if he were to see to little things.
A man able to make a hundred dollars an hour may be able to hire for a hundred dollars a month a man who can do some things better than the employer can do them.
Few are able to get a living doing just what they want to do, and very few are willing to limit their efforts to the things they can do the best.
One man told me that more men failed in his line of work for lack of ability to handle men than for any other or all other reasons.
Few men know how to interest, animate, educate, and keep on good terms with other men. In some cases the more you know the more in the background you have to go, due it may be to having more knowledge than skill.
In one case, of an unpopular foreman going on a vacation and a popular workman taking his place for the day, the product was over twenty per cent more than usual.
If ten thousand men of all kinds should find themselves out of work, one might create ideas, another execute them, another organize and manage the others.
Some could do some parts of the detail work twice as well as some of the others could. One would be a good buyer of material and another a good collector of accounts.
Some would win honors and some would get disgraced, but they would finally drift or climb, fall or jump, to positions just as we find them to-day.
Only this difference—the successful might make better use of their success and the failures profit by their extensive experiences more than they have been doing during this century.
If this possibility were to be accomplished the next century would be more than a hundred years ahead, and the common humdrum life would be quite ideal.
If our best intelligence were to accompany our every action much would be done. We all know why things are not better than they are.

Old or new or both. What are two or three of the difficulties you have to contend with in your work?

Lending Money.
Years ago I read that a young man should be satisfied with a low and safe rate of interest and take the advice of those more experienced—to not know it all. I have been very fortunate in not losing money lent to friends. Frequently I give small sums to old friends who are now deadbeats and wish to borrow for a few hours or days. I never get such sums back and never expect to when I let it go. But whenever I have lent $50, more or less, to a friend and expected it back it has come. I think this is due to my use of a discriminating judgment before lending. Once it cost me a good deal over a thousand dollars cash to disobey my better judgment and go into a side-line business with a friend. I did not get the counsel of those to whom I should have gone, and I refused to follow my own feelings. I was "roped" in by talk.

Health Helps Money Making.
I began talking with a man soon after we left the morning train, and some remark brought up the subject of his health.
He said: "I have not been feeling well for three weeks."
"Your health is generally good, isn't it?"
"Yes, I am usually as strong as an ox, but I have been working too hard and I wish my vacation came to-day in place of a month from to-day."
"How to take care of yourself while you overwork is a pretty good subject to study."
"Yes, I should say it was. I sleep pretty well, although I dreamt last night that I was a cashier in a bank and was taking an inventory of the stock when the papers in the safe caught fire."

The Man Himself Studies.
"What is the cause of criminal carelessness?" Two years ago a man asked me the above question. He had been having trouble and I have been thinking about the subject ever since. It may be due to ignorance. Some claim that people are not as good nor as bad as they appear to be—if we knew more we would be better. But we will know more if we are any good and have our goal in the right place. The idea that experience is a dear school but fools will learn in no other, might be revised to read: It is a wise man who learns by experience; fools never learn. Though a man is not to be blamed for being born ignorant, he can be blamed for remaining ignorant, and continued or repeated carelessness may be called criminal.

One's Sphere of Usefulness.
One of the most important things for us to learn early, is what we are able to do and not to do. As for myself, I believe I was born without a sense of money value, and as I look back and note my expenditures and investments, I feel that I might have had a nice little property to-day had I put my wasted dimes and dollars regularly in some trustworthy place. It has taken me a quarter of a century to recognize my inability to lend money commercially, or in a wise way socially, and I feel like saying to all young people the quicker you can find out what you can do well, and what you are unable to do well, the better it will be for you.

Hard to Believe.
1. That any one would try to start an orchard by planting dried apples.
2. That any one would stock a multi-stock farm with mules.
3. That people would make a hole in the ground to fill another and keep on till they ran the hole out of town.
4. That a man would move his office furniture and also his telephone without notifying the telephone company and then complain to the company that the telephone was no good—that it had not worked since he moved. But this last act is on record and duplicated.

Statistics say that Monday is the careless day of the week and the day for mistakes and accidents. This must be due to people using Sunday to get untuned rather than to become better tuned. How is it with the violin and strings? Is it better to loosen the strings when not in use or should the instrument be kept all the time in tune? I may select Sunday for a subject in order to learn how to use the day to my profit. I heard Woody say that he had learned by experience that he could not preach seven days a week and keep free from headaches. The teacher and preacher have the longest of any class of workers, so the hint from Mr. Moody is worth remembering. What do you know about Sunday recreation?

How is This?
Mistakes may be due to coaxing a person to promise or try to do something not possible for him to accomplish. Weak people are easy promises and some people can coax the birds out of the bushes, so every time your heart beats some one has promised to do an impossibility, and thus the list of blunders and breaks grows.
It may be due to bad example. Can an employer who is careless have employees who are careful? Can a poor worker keep good workers under him any length of time? If as I recently read thirteen in every hundred think let them think on the last question.

An author says: "The three degrees of a lawyer's progress are getting on, getting honor, getting honest."

ADMIRAL SCHLEY ENDORSES PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio:
Gentlemen:—"I can cheerfully say that Mrs. Schley has taken Pe-ru-na and I believe with good effect."—W. S. SCHLEY, Washington, D. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY, one of the foremost, notable heroes of the Nineteenth Century. A name that starts terror in the heart of every Spaniard. A man of steady nerve, clear head, undaunted courage and prompt decision.
Approached by a friend recently, his opinion was asked as to the efficacy of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy. Without the slightest hesitation he gave this remedy his endorsement. It appeared on later conversation that Peruna has been used in his family, where it is a favorite remedy.
Such endorsements serve to indicate the wonderful hold that Peruna has upon the minds of the American people. It is out of the question that so great and famous a man as Admiral Schley could have any other reason for giving his endorsement to Peruna than his positive conviction that the remedy is all that he says it is.

MAKING HER FEEL SMALL.

New Yorker's Tact That Comforted the Fat Woman.
A woman who looked to weigh about 400 pounds, but probably fell a little short of that figure, was descending from a Twenty-ninth street car the other day, when a man, who looked to weigh about seventy pounds, but might pull down a hundred, sought to ascend. They met. They bumped. They gazed at each other in a cold, glassy way. Neither would retreat for the moment. Then the man's natural gallantry asserted itself, and he said:
"Oh! I am in your way."
"I am in yours, rather," she replied.
"Oh, not at all. If I wasn't so fat I could move quicker. I often envy you people who move about so lively."
She looked into his face, imagined that he was serious; and her efforts to strike a girl's mincing gait as she moved to the curb provoked a platform passenger into saying:
"That didn't cost him a cent and it did her a thousand dollars' worth of good."—New York Press.

Cathedral Project Not Popular.
Bishop Potter of New York is experiencing much difficulty in raising the great sums necessary for the construction of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Many clergymen and laymen of the diocese regard the project as medieval and a decided waste of money. So strong is this feeling that the bishop has been much disappointed at lack of contributions. Rich parishioners seem to have closed their pocketbooks for a time at least.

Still Another Case.
Frankville, Wis., Oct. 12th.—Many remarkable cures are being reported from all over the country but there is one right here in Frankville which is certainly worth publishing, and which has not as yet been given to the public.
Mrs. Louis Markison of this place had been a sick woman for quite a long time and could not find anything to give her any help. She suffered all the painful symptoms of what is generally known as female weakness. Every woman who reads her story will understand these distressing conditions which combine to make the lives of many women one long burden of weakness and suffering.

Mrs. Markison chanced one day to hear of a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, that was said to be a splendid medicine for women's weakness. She determined to try some and soon found herself getting better. She kept on with the pills and was cured. Speaking of her case, Mrs. Markison says:
"I can and do praise Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for female weakness. They are the best medicine I have ever known, and have done me a great deal of good."

Injurious to the Eyes.
Looking into the fire is very injurious to the eye, particularly a coal fire. The stimulus of light and heat united soon destroys the eyes. Looking at molten iron will soon destroy the sight. Reading in the twilight is injurious to the eyes, as they are obliged to make great exertion. Reading or sewing with a side light injures the eyes, as both eyes should be exposed to an equal force of light. Those who wish to preserve their general health by correct habits of living, and give their eyes just work enough, with a due degree of light.

An Overblessed Father.
"There are two things," said Josh Billings, "for which a man is generally unprepared. They are—twins." Still less is a man prepared for twins born in two different years. In the house of one of the well-known inhabitants of Chicago a child was born shortly before 11 o'clock on the last night of the old year, and soon after midnight a second came into the world. The result is that though the children are twins they will have birthdays on different days, for the one will have to be celebrated on December 31 and the other on January 1 of the following year.

Fear of being an old maid induces many a girl to choose the wrong husband.
A woman's face is her fortune and some man's misfortune.—New York Press.

The fact is Peruna has overcome all opposition and has won its way to the hearts of the people. The natural timidity which so many people have felt about giving endorsements to any remedy is giving way. Gratitude and a desire to help others has inspired thousands of people to give public testimonials for Peruna who heretofore would not have consented to such publicity.

Never before in the annals of medicine has it happened that so many men of national and international reputation have been willing to give unqualified and public endorsements to a proprietary remedy. No amount of advertising could have accomplished such a result. Peruna has won on its own merits. Peruna cures catarrh of whatever phase or location in the human body. This is why it receives so many notable and unique endorsements.

On a Limited Train to California.

Luxurious service between the East and California has come to stay. Each year the equipment on the leading trans-continental lines is a little better than the year before. The traveling public demand the best and are willing to pay for it.

The Santa Fe announces that daily service of its California Limited train for season of 1903-1904 will be resumed November 29; until then it is semi-weekly. The California Limited runs between Chicago on the East, and Los Angeles, San Diego, and San Francisco on the west—a straight-away flight of more than two thousand miles. The time to Los Angeles is less than three days from Chicago. The route is through New Mexico and Arizona, south of the region of heavy snows, and traversing a land of enchantment, where the traveler sees Indian pueblos, canyons a mile deep and peaks two miles high.

The train itself comprises compartment, observation and drawing-room Pullmans, dining-car and buffet-smoker. Equipment as fine as money can buy, and service absolutely highest class. Perhaps the meals, under management of Mr. Harvey, are the most notable feature of the California Limited. They have a national reputation and are faultless.

The fact that this is the eighth season for the Limited ought to mean something to travelers who seek the best way to reach California.

Work of Historian Klopp.

Onno Klopp, the historian, who died recently in Vienna, at the age of eighty-one, wrote perhaps the longest history of the Stuarts in existence. He was in the service of the King of Hanover, till 1866 and was marked for his bitter hatred of the Prussians. That prevented his completing his edition of Leibnitz's works, as the Prussian government, after the war, refused to let him consult the library and archives at Hanover, where the Leibnitz manuscripts are.

Dr. Wilkinson:

For the benefit of all persons afflicted with gonorrhea, I wish to state that I had a gonorrhea on both sides of my neck, each one larger than a hen's egg, for over two years. You said you could stop its growth and reduce its size, but would not promise to remove all the enlargement, but I am glad to state that you did more than you promised. The enlargement has entirely disappeared. It has now been over four months since I was cured and there are no signs of the growth returning.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers, The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

ROCHELLE, GA., Jan. 30, 1902.

Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is the best I ever tried. Our stock was looking bad when you sent me the medicine and now they are getting so fine. They are looking 20 per cent. better.
