WEDDING BELLS.

Howe-McGuire and Howlett-Bachman Marriages Solemnized This Week.

HOWE-McGUIRE.

The marriage of two popular young people was consummated at the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Tuesday morning, Oct. 27, when Mr. Thomas Henry Howe, son of Mrs. Thomas Howe, of Waterloo, and Miss Alice Teresa McGuire, daughter of C. McGuire, of Dexter township, were united in wedlock by Rev. W. P. Considine. The bride was accompanied by her sister Miss Catherine McGuire, and the groom's best man was his brother Martin Howe, of Chicago. After the ceremony a bountiful wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's father. Handsome gifts were received from the numerous friends of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Howe went on a wedding trip to Toledo and on their return will take up their residence on the Howe farm in Waterloo.

HOWLETT-BACHMAN.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Bachman Wednesday evening, Oct. 28, when their only daughter Florence N. was united in marriage to Dr. George Anstin Howlett, of Ann Arbor, only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Howlett, of Lyndon.

The house was tastefully decorated with carnations and roses. The bride elect, gowned in silver Aeolian silk, and Dr. Howlett received the guests.

Promptly at 6 o'clock the bridal couple preceded by Dr. E. E. Caster entered the front parlor where the impressive ring ceremony was performed. After a sumptuous wedding supper had been served, the bridal couple left for a trip in Ohio.

The bride received many beautiful and costly gifts. About 100 guests were present. Among those from out of town were Charles and Seymour Bachman, of Grand Rapids; Mr. Clark, wife and daughter, and Mrs. Talmage, of Jackson; Messrs. and Mesdames Luther Ives, Herbert Yocum and Spencer Howlett and daughter, Wm. Nichols, Sumner Bird, J. Asquith and Wm. Stevens, of Stockbridge; John Bachman and wife of Manchester; Messrs. and Mesdames B. J. Howlett, Norgate, Geo. Smith and daughter, of Ann; Miss Dora Harrington and Mrs. Andrew Congdon, of Detroit.

Dr. and Mrs. Howlett will reside in Ann Arbor.

The Princess Chic.

The patrons of all that is best in comic opera seem to have been awaiting the engagement of "The Princess Chic" which will be seen at the Athens theater on Saturday, Oct. 31, matinee and night. This delightful opera comique, played by the Kirke La Shelle Comic Opera Co., is also from the versatile pen of Kirke La Shelle. Julian Edwards wrote the score, and the success of the piece throughout the east would indicate the correctness of the extraordinary claims made for the production and the company. Although "The Princess Chic" aims higher than the average musical piece, still, the ambition of the librettist to supply a theme of unusual beauty and historical interest has not lessened the comic element, which is uproariously assertive at times. Vera Michelena sings the title role, that of the Princess, while Forrest Huff's rich baritone is heard in the part of Charles the Bold. The company contains other names well known to the American operatic stage. Complete returns of the Mich-Minn. football game will be received by special wire at the afternoon performance.

Broke Into His House.

S. Le Quinn, of Cavendish, Vt., was robbed of his customary health by invasion of chronic constipation. When Dr. King's New Life Pills broke into his house, his trouble was arrested and now he's entirely cured. They're guaranteed to cure. 25c at Glazier & Stimson's drug store.

Music and Elocution.

The Misses Frances Caspari and Florence M. Galpin assisted by Miss Minnie M. Davis, of the University School of Music, pianist, and Miss Helene Steinbach accompanist, will give a musical and elocutionary entertainment at the opera house next Wednesday evening, Nov. 4.

Miss Caspari's ability as a soprano singer is known to Chelsea people, she having sung in some of our churches at different times. Miss Galpin is a young lady with fine elocutionary ability although she is unknown to a Chelsea audience. And Miss Davis has played in Chelsea so often that she has become a favorite of those who have heard her.

The program that has been arranged is as follows:
Valse, Caprice—Miss Minnie M. Davis.

When the Heart is Young—Miss Frances E. Caspari.

Scene I. Timothy's Quest—Miss Florence M. Galpin.

(a) Twilight. (b) Selected.—Miss Caspari.

(a) Rustle of Spring. (b) Hungarian Dance—Miss Davis.

(a) On the Other Train. (b) Aunt Hetty—Miss Galpin.

Good Bye—Miss Caspari.

Must Dig Up Another $300.

The case of Dan Corey vs. the Village of Chelsea was on trial in the circuit court the past week. The plaintiff claimed damages in the sum of $5,000 for alleged injuries from a defective sidewalk. Mr. Corey was walking along South street, he claimed, with his hands in his pockets, when he and his companion came to some loose boards. His companion stepped on one of them, the board flew up, Corey caught his foot and fell. He claims permanent injury to his stomach. The jury went out at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and yesterday morning at 8 o'clock brought in a verdict for $300 against the village.

A Well Known Mason Dead.

Hon. Arthur M. Clark, probably the best known Mason in Michigan, died at his home in Lexington Tuesday, aged 70 years. Mr. Clark was past grand master of the grand lodge of Michigan, F. & A. M., and was grand visitor and lecturer of the order for 25 years, during which time he visited every section of the state many times. He was a regent of the University of Michigan for 10 years, being elected in 1883 on Democratic ticket by 8,000 majority. He was also U. S. consul to Sarnia, Ont., during President Cleveland's second administration.

Are Not in the List.

The Michigan Bulletin, the organ of the Michigan Press Association in its October issue has the following: "J. H. Wickwire, who recently became connected with the Albion Leader, started many Michigan papers in days gone by, those on the list being the Dexter Leader, Chelsea Herald," etc. The Bulletin is in error in this statement, Mr. Wickwire never had anything to do with either of these papers. The Dexter Leader was started by J. M. Allen, and the Chelsea Herald was established by Andrew Allison in 1871, from whom the writer bought it in 1899. Retract, Mr. Bulletin, retract.

Early Snowfall.

The first snowfall of the season came Friday morning. It was neither heavy nor lasting, but it was remarkable from the fact that it fell without being preceded by a killing frost. Flowers were still in full bloom and the grass was as green as at any time during the year. The record of the first snow of the season for the past six years as kept by a Jackson man is as follows: 1898, Oct. 26; 1899, Nov. 2; 1900, Nov. 5; 1901, Oct. 17; 1902, Oct. 14; 1903, Oct. 23. The frost came Friday night, however, and next morning all vegetation was wilted and blackened.

CLOSED THEIR LABORS.

Washenaw's Supervisors Recommended the Establishment of a Contagious Disease Hospital.

The board of supervisors last Thursday re-elected Marvin Davenport junior, and decided that the county would pay its share of paving Fourth avenue, opposite the court house.

The board reconsidered its action fixing Judge Kinne's salary at $5,000 a year, and on motion of M. L. Raymond, of Sharon, fixed it at $4,000.

The school commissioner was denied an increase of $100 a year in salary.

A motion to increase the salary of the probate register $400 a year was lost.

County Clerk Blum was granted $180 a year to act as clerk of the board of auditors.

The committee appointed to look into the contagious diseases hospital question reported that such an institution would be a matter of economy and of great public benefit, and recommended that the question of bonding the county for $30,000 be submitted to the voters at the election to be held the first Monday in April, 1904, for the purpose of building such a hospital.

Probate Judge Watkins appeared before the board and made a speech, in which he claimed that the probate judge was not a county officer and was not obliged to render a report to the board of supervisors, although he might do so through courtesy. He also held that the resolution of the board taking away the probate register's $400 a year was null and void. The board he said, could increase the allowance but not diminish it. No one made any remark concerning the judge's talk and the board did not in any way refer to it.

A Masterly Speech.

Representative Doliver's speech in the House in support of the war revenue bill deserves a place among the most noble and eloquent utterances that either branch of Congress has heard in recent years. Masterly in its treatment of the subject immediately at issue, and magnificent in its expression of patriotic sentiment, this splendid effort of the brilliant young leader from Iowa will live in the records as a fadeless gem of American oratory.—New York Mail and Express.

It is seldom that we have an opportunity to hear men like Senator Doliver and no one in Chelsea should fail to attend his lecture. Don't wait until he comes but buy a season ticket at once.

Death of Mrs. C. J. Monroe.

Mrs. Lovina Monroe, wife of Claude J. Monroe, died Sunday, Oct. 25, at her home on South Main street, of consumption, after a lingering illness, aged 33 years. Her death is a peculiarly sad one as she leaves a family of three little children, the oldest not yet 5 years old. Besides these she is survived by her husband, her father John Conaty, and one sister Miss Anna Conaty, of Detroit. The funeral services were held at the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart yesterday morning and were conducted by Rev. W. P. Considine. Interment was in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Contagious Diseases Hospital.

The county at the spring election, will vote upon a proposition to bond the county for $30,000 for the erection of a hospital for contagious diseases, the same to be run by the medical department of the university, the physicians and nurses being supplied by it. This was unanimously agreed upon by the board of supervisors Friday and it should have just such an unanimous support from the voters, when the very large amount the county has this year alone paid out on account of contagious diseases is taken into consideration.

Raised $132,302.022.

The state tax commission has completed the figures on its work in all counties of the state where reviews were held during the past year, showing that the total increase in assessments for the year was $132,302,022.

Table with columns: County, Increase, Decrease. Lists counties like Barry, Berrien, Calhoun, Cass, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Clinton, Delta, Kalamazoo, Mackinac, Manistee, Ionia, Jackson, Lapeer, Lenawee, Livingston, Mecum, Menominee, Montcalm, Oakland, Shiawassee, St. Clair, Wayne.

It Comes High.

Appropos of the many kicks heard against the state tax commission from all quarters, these figures showing what the commission costs the taxpayers will prove interesting: During the fiscal year ending June 30 the salaries and expenses of the state tax commission was $48,463.01, and the expenses of the board of railway assessors amounted to $16,394.98, the total cost for the year being $64,857.99.

A Sweet Complaint.

Sugar factories all over the state are complaining about the losses sustained by the improper topping of beets this year. Owing to the moist weather, the beet tops are unusually luxuriant, and the growers evidently dislike to cut so much off. But the beets tested for tare at the factory are carefully topped, so that the farmer loses this anyway, while the almost worthless beet tops threaten to injure the factories by causing frequent stops to change the slicing knives. So serious has this evil become that the factories have appealed to their beet growers to change their methods.

The Baker-Adams Case.

The trial of the Baker-Adams breach of promise case in Grand Rapids draws crowds to hear the unprintable love letters read. Miss Adams, with tear-filled eyes, said that she felt herself degraded. In a fit of violent grief and in a faltering voice the plaintiff said without any question having been asked her that she knew she was not suitable now to become another man's wife. Much of the testimony given by the young woman was unfit for publication. The plaintiff during all the time she was on the stand looked completely crushed and her voice was full of pathos.

City Hall Burned.

Fire gutted Cheboygan's city hall Wednesday morning, leaving nothing but the bare walls standing. The building was erected in 1887 at a cost of $35,000, and the upper portion was used for an opera house. The origin of the fire is attributed to electric wires, and the supposition is that the fire smoldered for some time before eating its way to an air vent. The insurance on the building and furnishings amounts to $27,000. It is thought the old walls will do to rebuild on.

Fool and Gun.

Seraphin Vizna, of Ellenville, was shot with a rifle in the hands of Pat Connors. There was a social at Connors' home Saturday night, and about 2 o'clock the men were joking, when Connors took down a 22-caliber rifle and pointed it at Vizna, not thinking it was loaded. The ball entered the corner of Vizna's eye and lodged in the bone near the surface. He is expected to recover.

Strange Case of Typhoid.

The doctors have just discovered that typhoid germs have a strange faculty of storing themselves in the system for months, and then breaking forth unsuspected into burning fever. This peculiarity is shown in the case of John Terrill, a university student from Escanaba. He was in Escanaba last summer during an epidemic when hundreds were stricken, but came here in September a well man.

A Fenville fruit raiser disposed of $20,000 worth of fruit from his farm this season.

Bill No. 1, dated August 6, 1886, the first issued by the First National bank of the Soo, was taken in with some other bills over the bank counter recently.

Lets Prisoners Loose.

Under a decision in the case of John Harney, of Battle Creek, handed down by Justice Carpenter, of the Supreme Court, the others concurring, many state prisoners will be released at once.

Harney was serving a ten-year sentence for burglary, and he had served so much of it that he should have been released some weeks ago by reason of "good time." The prison officials denied that he was entitled to "good time" as he was a third termer. He had served sentences in Ionia for assault and battery. Harney argued that he was illegally sentenced to Ionia, as it was beyond the jurisdiction of either a justice of the peace or a circuit judge to send him to Ionia for such an offense. The Supreme Court coincided in this view.

Harney's case was first submitted to Judge Peck, of the Circuit Court, on a writ of habeas corpus. Attorney-General Blair, when addressing Judge Peck on the writ, said: "The prison officials of this state have been acting under an opinion of ex-Attorney-General Oren to the effect that a term in Ionia reformatory was to be considered whether or not the man had been sent there illegally, the mere fact of his servitude being enough."

A considerable number of prison inmates are in the same position as Harney. A peculiar feature of the case under consideration was the fact that Harney was illegally sentenced to serve a term in Ionia for assault and battery by no less a person than Judge Hooker, who has since been elevated to a seat on the supreme bench. On three other occasions, the same thing was done by Battle Creek Justices. Had Oren's opinion based on such sentences, held good, Harney would not be set at liberty until Dec. 14, 1904.

The Prophetess Speaks Again.

Mrs. Ellen White, who poses as a prophetess of the adventist faith, has been saying things again, and this time it is Dr. Kellogg's new book, entitled "The Living Temple," which has come under the ban. Dr. Kellogg is the leader of the intellectual faction of the adventists, and for some time there has been friction between him and the "prophetess." Now she calls upon adventists to keep their children away from the big sanitarium, the only institution of the sect left in this city, saying they should not accept employment there in any capacity, "as there is tenfold more danger now in our youths going there than in any period in the past." The more intelligent class of adventists laugh at the prophet's command, but the split between the factions will no doubt be widened.

NEWS OF THE WORLD

A Brief Chronicle of All Important Happenings

TEN WERE KILLED.

Workmen in New York Rapid Transit Subway Killed by Cave-in.

While working in the rapid transit subway excavations near St. Nicholas avenue and Dykeman street, Saturday night, between thirty and fifty men were entombed under a tremendous mass of stones and debris which fell with a roar that shook buildings and terrified all residents within a radius of a mile.

With a roar that resembled an earthquake the high embankment, rendered unstable by the recent storm and but weakly supported by frail wooden scaffolding, gave way shortly before midnight and the great mass weighing nearly a thousand tons, crashed down on the men. They were working by electric light and were some twenty feet under ground when the catastrophe occurred.

Despite heroic efforts and desperate attempts of the police, assisted by residents who were attracted to the scene, the work of uncovering the victims was slow. The small army of rescuers were goaded to work faster by the muffled groans which penetrated from the living tomb.

It was impossible to learn the exact number of workmen in the subway at the time of the landslide, but residents who have been watching the progress of the work said that fully fifty men were tunneling at that point. Six men, two dead and four in a critical condition, were taken out of the black hole by rescuers after an hour of spading and shoveling.

Extra Session Is Called.

The president today issued a proclamation calling the fifty-eighth congress in extraordinary session on Nov. 9, at 12 o'clock. The proclamation states that the purpose of the session is to consider the commercial convention between the United States and Cuba, which requires the approval of congress.

United States Consul-General Steinhart, at Havana, says: "Cuba is now importing from us at the rate of $30,000,000 a year, and I confidently believe that in six months after the passage of the treaty the total will be doubled. Most of the increase will be in cotton goods and in rice. With prices declining in the United States it should quickly regain the Cuban market and sell much more to the island than ever before."

Bryan Says Issue Is Dead.

Prof. James W. Bradshaw, of the Iowa Commercial college, reasserts the truth of his recent statement that Bryan, in an interview with him, had declared the silver issue dead and quotes the apostle of 16 to 1 further to this effect: "Had I dropped free silver in 1896 I would have been elected president." Bryan, Bradshaw repeats, not only admitted that free silver would not be an issue before the convention of 1904, but gave it as his opinion that it never again would be a national problem in the United States. Bradshaw says Bryan based this theory on the fact that the nations of the world had settled down to a gold basis and it would be impossible to change the current of the ways.

Squire Mabry, of Decatur, says corn does not mix from the tassel. This season he planted a few white kernels of pop corn and while the corn was growing, he cut the tassels off the ears with the result that the kernels grew twice the size of the seed kernels.

NO WONDER.

John A. Scott, cashier of the London Assurance Co., New York, is an embezzler to the amount of $25,000, and his lawyer made the plea that he had robbed his employers while under the hypnotic influence of a very prominent man, who was the sole beneficiary.

Tearing up $25,000 to avoid family enmity was the rarely generous act of Otto Seidel, of Fort Wayne, Ind., the youngest and favorite son of Edward Seidel, who left an estate of $325,000 with Otto as sole trustee. The envelope containing the will also contained a deed for $25,000 worth of property. This he destroyed before all the other heirs.

Accused of stealing $45 from the firm for which he was confidential clerk, Charles S. Hanaw, aged 26, of New York, stepped into another room on a pretext and shot himself. He was soon to have married a wealthy young woman.

A Great "Grift"

According to admissions of officials of the department of the interior, the investigation of the public land scandal, now going on in the states of the Pacific coast, involves the most tremendous of all government "grifts" and causes the "hot air" affair in the postoffice department to pale into insignificance. The present investigation, which has been going on over four months, is entirely independent of the Indian land scandal, and involves money-making transactions to the extent of between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000 and collusion between organized "grifters" and state and federal authorities in the matter of land allotments in some 54 "forest" reserves, which cover altogether 60,175,000 acres of land. Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock alone knows the full extent of the frauds now under investigation.

The Trust's Plan.

The steel trust has adopted a new plan. It is believed, to cow its employees into submission and prevent a strike. Fearing labor troubles at the Illinois Steel Co.'s plant at South Chicago the open hearth department was suddenly closed down without warning and without explanation, throwing 1,200 men out of employment. The employees laid off are greatly discouraged. To be thrown out of employment as winter is coming on, without knowing how long the plant is to be closed, makes them uneasy. If the remaining 4,000 employees are forced out, great hardship is predicted for South Chicago this winter. It is believed that the move was intended as an object lesson and that should any trouble arise 4,000 more men will be made idle.

Resume Work at the Soo.

It is said to be planned to have portions of the consolidated Sault plants started up. The plants are gramin wood, wood pulp mill, charcoal plant, sawmill and veneer mill. They will employ in all nearly 350 men, not including those getting out the raw material in the woods. The sulphite pulp mill may be started a little later. For the immediate present the plants will depend for raw material on that already on hand, or that in the woods cut, which men are now being sent to bring out, but the course of events is likely to see the work of cutting timber in the woods again going on. The operation of these four plants means also that a portion of the Algoma iron works will have to be put into use again, for with them there is constant rebuilding and repairing of machinery.

Dowie Saving Something.

A Boston special says: "Dowie has returned to New York after a brief visit to this city, and a story is doing even more startling than the one that 'Ehjah' was in flight. It is no less than that Dowie has shipped from the country in the care of his wife and son negotiable securities to the total of $7,000,000 to be in a safe place when he rejoins his family. A large strong box, which was closely guarded while being placed in Mrs. Dowie's stateroom just before the steamer sailed, is said, contained the securities.

ONE MAN THAT SHOULD KNOW DENIES LOVE IS A DISEASE

LORIN FARR

Lorin Farr, head of the largest family in the world, bitterly opposes the theories advanced by Dr. A. C. Cotton, dean of Rush Medical College, Chicago, that love is a disease due to a microbe.

Mr. Farr has had six wives, 39 children, 231 grandchildren and 56 great-grandchildren. He has seen his 230 or more descendants married and bearing children, and then, too, his experience as the husband of six wives, and living with all at the same time, makes him an authority on the question of love.

There is no fine spun mysticism or sentimental poetry in the mind of this father of thirty-nine children. His definition of love was unmistakably plain.

"Love!" he said, without hesitation,

"love is the natural affection between man and woman that has its foundation in the desire to perpetuate the race. That's love, but oh, how many there are to-day who marry with different thoughts in their minds."

For a few minutes the old man seemed lost in reveries of years long gone.

"Did I tell you that I agree with Roosevelt's views on the marriage question?" he asked. "His thoughts meet mine exactly.

"Love often comes at first sight," he continued. "With my first wife it did. It is not always, though, that this feeling comes at first sight. But love comes as soon as the man and woman are well acquainted. If they love each other they do not have to keep company for years to find it out."

MISER'S CHART IS MISSING.

Paper Showing Location of Buried Wealth Suddenly Disappears.

The recent settlement and distribution of the estate left by Joseph Conatser, a miser, has again set the people of Whitman (Wash.) county guessing as to what became of a chart showing the location of various places where Conatser had buried his money.

Just before death Conatser gave Thos. Keyes, his closest friend, a plat which contained a number of marks, dots and figures, and pointing from the window of his cabin, showed the spot where much money was buried. He asked Keyes to dig it up, and in an old tin can the latter found $260 in gold coin. Conatser gave Keyes to understand that each spot on the chart marked a place where the coin was concealed.

When it was found necessary to move the old man to a hospital this chart and his other papers were sewed inside of Conatser's vest. After his death all the papers were turned over to the court, with the exception of the chart.

The mystery which surrounds the lost chart may never be explained, and the accumulations of Joseph Conatser, the Sunset miser, may remain buried forever.

Victory Due to Lost Key.

An amusing incident occurred at Oakhaven during some landing maneuvers which were being carried out by the German fleet.

An adversary's fleet was supposed to be attempting to force the entrance to the Elbe, which was defended by troops on shore. The first attack of the "enemy" had been repulsed during a severe storm. The troops on shore retired to their bivouac, and to protect the rifles from the rain, they locked them up in a small wooden house.

Suddenly the alarm sounded, but on rushing to get their weapons the key of the house was not to be found. When after considerable delay, the rifles were distributed, it was found that the "enemy" had forced the entrance and thus gained the victory."

Why He Was Not Surprised.

Glen MacDonough, who wrote the libretto for the comic opera "Babes in Toyland," was sitting in a New York cafe recently with Victor Herbert, the composer, when a waiter approached to take his order. The waiter smiled at Mr. MacDonough and said: "You don't remember me, do you? I used to sing in one of your companies." "I remember you very well," said Mr. MacDonough. "Are you surprised to see me here as a waiter?" asked the waiter. "Not a bit," replied the librettist cheerfully. "You know, I have heard you sing."

PREACHER TELLS FUNNY STORY.

Dr. Parkhurst Narrates Anecdote of a Converted Savage.

Dr. Parkhurst delivered himself of a story in the course of his sermon in the Madison Square Presbyterian church at New York on a recent Sunday. This is the story:

"An African chief became converted and moved to London, where he wore fashionable clothes and behaved in every way as an irreproachable man. One day he was giving a lecture in a church on the advantages of a peaceful, civilized life. His collar did not fit well, and in attempting to adjust it he tore open the buttonhole.

"The ripping shirt band brought back all his old savagery, and he shouted out that civilization was all a sham, and he wished he was back in his old life. Whereupon he pulled off his collar, his coat and trousers and finally stood in the garb of the unadorned savage. Then he set fire to the church and took to the woods.

"If his buttonhole had been a little stronger," added Dr. Parkhurst, "he would probably have remained an irreproachable man the rest of his life. That's the way with much of our civilization and virtue. A very small thing will reveal the real conditions."

Denounced by Dying Woman.

A dramatic scene was enacted in a dingy room of a New York East Side tenement, where an aged woman in her dying moments identified Patrick Shea as the murderer of William McMahon. The crime was committed last May, and was a typical Cherry Hill murder. Shea escaped and after a long chase was run down in Philadelphia. Mrs. Catherine Brown, who had known Shea from childhood, was the only witness, and she could not go to court, so the court went to her. Propped up by pillows, she told the magistrate that she saw Shea, who stood manacled beside the bed, walk up behind McMahon and deliberately shoot him down. Cross-examination failed to change her statements, and she finished by roundly denouncing Shea.

"Your mother," she exclaimed, shaking her head at him, "was a decent woman. Be off; I never want to see you again."

Wealthy Residents Displeased.

Wealthy persons who own estates in and about the fashionable Tuxedo Park colony, near New York, are not at all pleased at the announcement that a convent of Sisters of the Good Shepherd is likely to be established near the park. Negotiations are practically closed for the sale of a large piece of property adjoining that of St. Ann's, a syndicate, which for the present will hold it in trust for the Catholic order named. An old mansion is to be remodeled and turned into a school for girls whom the sisters are trying to reform.

WHEN BANK CLERKS SMOKE.

Forbidden While Doors Are Open, But Permitted After They Close.

In every bank in this city there is a rule against smoking, and it is doubtful if any depositor or visitor to any banking institution in the town ever saw a coil of tobacco smoke drifting through the atmosphere in the big counting houses—that is, no visitor who is excluded from the building promptly when the bank closes. But if the curious could squeeze their way through those closed portals in the afternoon they would be treated to a very different sight.

The rules against smoking in all the big banks of the city apply only during banking hours. After the doors are closed and locked one can transform himself into a human volcano with perfect freedom—and he does. And "he" is legion.

The favored one who is allowed to remain within the locked doors of such an institution as the National City bank is treated to an unusual spectacle. At least 150 clerks are employed in this bank, and of that number there are probably not a score who do not indulge in the "weed."

As the hands of the clock approach closing time 150 pairs of eyes search for the form of the superintendent of the building. As he approaches the door, hands reach into pockets with military unison of movement. The hands rest there until the lock clicks in the door. Then, in a twinkling, cigarettes, cigars and pipes are produced, and in another second there is a fusillade of striking matches. Before a minute passes a dense blue vapor begins to rise behind the bright glass partitions and before the clerks have finished their day's work the usually immaculate counting room has all the appearance of a good old-fashioned smoker, the scratching of pens being substituted for the clink or steins.—New York Times.

HOW THEY WERE MISTAKEN.

Little Girl's Artistic Longings Were Not Troubling Her.

A little girl, whose father was a poet, and whose mother was an artist, was thought by relatives to be therefore surely destined to do some great and beautiful thing in the world.

They felt confident, too, that they saw signs of this when she was very young, and interpreted all sorts of things the small girl did to mean much more than the child herself ever dreamed of.

One summer evening on grandpa's farm all the family went to the hill-top to see a wonderful sunset. The little girl's papa looked poems and her mamma likened the sky to the colors of great canvasses, and lay members of the family expressed their admiration in various terms. Only the little girl said nothing.

"Look at her," whispered an adoring aunt. "What exquisite feeling there is in her face!" Everyone looked, but it was the old farmer grandfather who spoke.

"What's the trouble?" he asked of the small person sitting disconsolately by herself.

"Nothing," was the reply, "except everybody's so taken up with the sunset and I did so badly want to see the pigs get their suppers."

Failure.

By experience I found my plan for getting the money did not work. One young man told me that I would be in better business if I were collecting money for the debt on his new house. Nearly every one seemed to think I was holding him up.

Then came the following: "I am instructed to write you with reference to your pledge of one hundred dollars. I shall be glad to have an expression from you within a few days so that I may report to the committee. We are in special need of funds at present, and of course nothing would be more acceptable than the money. Very truly yours, Secretary." To which I replied: "The plan I had for getting that hundred dollars has been rattled and it is not wise for me to promise when I can pay it, though I have not abandoned it."

Trouble.

When the secretary saw me he twitted me of repudiating my signature. At another time I hinted that he was using the lowest form of commercial promotion, jollying, in securing signatures. We had plenty of arguments pro and con. Finally we decided that he should write me a letter such as he thought that I should have written him, and then I should reply to it as I thought he should have written me. This is what he sent me: "Mr. Secretary: Dear Sir—I write you concerning the pledge I made to give or raise one hundred dollars toward removing the floating debt. When I made this pledge, about a year ago, I thought I had a plan whereby the amount could be easily secured. The plan has fallen through, however, and I only succeeded in getting three dollars. I regret very much that I am unable to comply with the conditions of my pledge and must confess somewhat to a feeling of chagrin that I have fallen so far short of meeting my obligations. I still consider myself bound to keep the agreement, however, although I am obliged to ask you to grant me an extension of time. It is impossible for me to say just when I will secure the money but as I am troubled very much about the matter you may be sure that it is my purpose to do this work at the earliest possible moment. Please tell me what you think of this, and I should also be grateful for any suggestions you may make as to how I could go about raising such a sum of money. I have not had much experience soliciting money and not being very well acquainted with your work and the reasons why business men should contribute to it, I found myself handicapped to a considerable extent. Trusting you will appreciate the spirit in which I write this letter, I remain, very truly yours."

The Other Letter.

In the sample letter I sent him there were blank spaces left for special information for me from him. The following is the complete letter: "Dear Sir—Your favor of the 6th inst. concerning your pledge of one hundred dollars to the debt fund is received. We are simply experiencing what many others have been through, and I am as anxious to assist you in making your plan to secure one hundred dollars succeed as I am to get the one hundred dollars. In reply to your question concerning the indebtedness which now rests upon us the most of which is funded, would say this was created as follows: The present building was erected on the site of the old building. During its erection our work was interrupted and the membership was greatly reduced as there were few

This survey review department is for the collection of information on the amount of easy errors and friends of forethought, to reduce mutually expensive mistakes. It is for mechanical, commercial and professional people; the individual employer, employe and customer; and consists of extracts taken by permission from the copyrighted letters, the lectures, notebooks and libraries of Carl M. Frost, Oak Park, Illinois. It is being the whole world over for information of every day use to you, and he regrets his inability, personally to reply to contributors. So far as possible he wishes to have in this space the very ideas you would like to find here. You are at liberty to send him any suggestion you may care to. His collection was started in 1927 and now contains unpublished information dating back to 1796. Your short story of some example of forethought given to him may prove to be your most valuable gift to others.

A HUNDRED-DOLLAR DINNER.

A couple of years ago there came to me a beautifully printed invitation reading as follows: "The committee of management requests the pleasure of your company at dinner on Thursday evening. Important plans will be presented relating to the approaching celebration." I went, I saw and was conquered. The banquet was in the interest of an old debt. During the dramatic appeals and after the many courses of gastric endangers, I remarked that I thought the friends of my department would give them a hundred dollars. The two secretaries in charge of the subject replied that they would help me if necessary get that amount.

Commercial Value.

Every business man should have a part in maintaining such a work. Second it is a work of prevention, an ounce of which we are told is worth a pound of cure. Most business men prefer to give ten dollars to keep a young man from going wrong than to be taxed a hundred dollars for taking care of him after he has gone wrong. That kind of a proposition appeals to a business man. Third, it provides a suitable place for young men to spend their leisure hours. An employer of young men is not worried about the honesty, sobriety and faithfulness of those employees who he knows are members of our work, and spend their leisure time at our building. They are anxious about the young men who patronize questionable resorts and lead a life where the temptation to live beyond one's means is often responsible for loss by theft and defalcation. These men know this and spend much money for private detectives to study the habits of their trusted employes to find out just how they spend their time and money. Finally, as to the methods of soliciting, I would say it is best to ask for what you would like and take what you can get. Most solicitors make a mistake by not asking for a large enough sum and in a way that suggests that they are extending a privilege rather than asking a favor, or perpetrating a hold-up. Try to find men who have money and who are not common marks for every one with a subscription paper. It is better and more economical to cultivate a few intelligent givers for large amounts than a great number of givers for smaller sums. The whole question of getting a man to give money is an extremely difficult one. Some men seem to be naturally inclined for this work, but it is also clear that others can acquire it. I am confident that if you do not consider yourself in the first class you will soon be numbered among the second. Very truly yours, Secretary."

Correcting Errors.

"Let mud dry before brushing it off from your clothing."

This sentence is from Spurgeon, I believe, and as near as I can give it. My friend the desk editor of a trade magazine and the bookkeeper were just discussing correcting errors. The bookkeeper thinks you are likely to make things worse by paying attention to errors. There is certainly a right time to do it if it is to be done. The editor recently got a sarcastic letter from a man to whom he had written a polite inquiry regarding an office error. The bookkeeper thinks it is best to ignore errors all you can. If they are likely to cause trouble if not corrected it seems to me the right time and method should be found for correction. The bookkeeper says that calling attention to errors is likely to cause coolness which would not otherwise occur.

But by not correcting some errors you are likely to cause something worse than coolness. That is what I think—what is your opinion?

NEW TO HER.

A Philadelphia woman was recently breaking in a new servant, a Swedish girl, who had not been very long in this country. She was fortunate enough to own a house which had a bath room for the exclusive use of the servants.

"Now, Freda," she said, as she pointed out this room, "this is to be your own bath room. There's the tub, and I want you to use it often."

"Yat! Gt in dat place?"

"Why, certainly."

"Yit water in it?"

"Of course."

"Vy, ma'am, if I vas to go in dere I vud git wet all over; an' I vas never wet all over in my life."

Salsbury's Resolve.

Lant K. Salsbury, formerly city attorney of Grand Rapids, and Stilson V. MacLeod, formerly paying teller of the Old National bank of the same city, will be released from the Detroit House of Correction Thursday, Nov. 5, after having served 30 months of their two years' sentence as federal prisoners for violating the banking laws. The case grows out of the Grand Rapids water scandal. During their confinement the men have been exemplary prisoners and each receives the benefit of the four months' good time. Their liberty may be short lived, however, as the municipality of Grand Rapids still has the boodle case against them, on which Salsbury has been convicted principally on MacLeod's turning state's evidence. Salsbury says: "I'm going back to Grand Rapids and make a mighty effort to retrieve myself. I received many honors at the hands of the people of that place, but I am now in disgrace, at the bottom of the ladder socially, financially and every other way. I realize that I have a mighty task on my hands, but my strength and courage will not fail me and I will go to work with a will."

LaGrippe Caused Heart Trouble, Nervous Prostration and Dyspepsia.

My Friends Know Heart Cure Cured Me.

Mrs. C. O. Hurd, 118 W. Third St., Muscatine, Ia., is well known throughout her section of Iowa as an ardent worker in the M. E. Church. She says "LaGrippe left me with a severe case of nervous depression and nervous dyspepsia, which soon affected my heart. I suffered from sleeplessness, headache, extreme nervousness and twitching of the muscles. The slightest exertion would cause shortness of breath, a numbness of my body and hot flashes with pain. I will tell you what I am constantly telling my friends—that Dr. Miles' Heart Cure cured me so that all these disagreeable symptoms left me. I may add that for severe pain I have never found anything to equal Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills and think the Nerve and Liver Pills are a wonderful stomach remedy."

"Our son was stricken down with heart trouble in his twentieth year. For two months we got no sleep with him at night, so we commenced to use Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nerve and the Nerve and Liver Pills and today he is sound and well. In fact he passed a physical examination since his sickness and is with the Army in the Philippines. I desire to add that Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills have certainly been a boon to me. I am frequently troubled with sick and nervous headaches and I have never found anything that would relieve me so quickly and leave me feeling so well thereafter."—Mrs. Alice Moad, Buffalo, Mo.

Come in and try on the coat for yourself, and see how much more justice it does you than the ordinary ready-made kind. It will help you look your best—and a prosperous air is half the battle, these days. You can pay twice as much to a custom tailor, but you cannot get better value. Suits and overcoats, $10 to $25. A Plain Talk

On an Important Subject.

One of the great problems of life is to dress in good taste at all times, but with many it's a hard proposition to do this at a moderate cost. Those who have learned our methods have solved the problem, but those who have not, should immediately investigate them. There is not a Suit, Overcoat or other article in our store, that is not in perfect style this season, whatever its price, and there is not a Suit or Overcoat that will not give you full value for your money, and as a matter of fact, others will charge you more than we do for exactly the same quality and style.

When you visit our store ask to see the superb productions of

"PRINCE HENRY" COPYRIGHT 1903 MICHAELS, STERN & CO. ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Messrs. MICHAELS, STERN & CO., of Rochester, they are worthy of your best attention.

Take for example the stunning Overcoat that we are selling at..... $18

It is made by one of the most famous clothing manufacturers in the country, and has all the attributes of a high class custom made garment that would cost at least $35 or $40.

Another good example is a collection of Suits that we are selling at..... $15

If made to your measure they would cost $30 or more, and other stores will sell them ready-to-wear at $18 or $20.

It's the Same in Our Boys' Department.

We offer values far above other houses and each garment is accompanied by our absolute guarantee. Furthermore, shopping is a pleasure here for the little fellows.

DOING WITHOUT.

There's beautiful art that is sadly neglected,
And daily I wonder to see it rejected.
By some who'd be healthy and wealthy and who
By just condescending to open their eyes
And look at things fairly with never a pout—
I refer to the fine art of doing without.
Can't do as you like? Then do as you can;
I'm sure you will find it the very best plan.
Can't have what you want? Take what you can get;
No better device has been patented yet.
'Tis the bravest and blithest and best way by far.
Not to let little losses your happiness
mar.
'Tis an art that needs practice, of that there's no doubt,
But 'tis worth it—this fine art of doing without.

That evening he passed along Main street on the less frequented side. A larger crowd than ever was at the old point of meeting. In their midst he saw Hallelujah on the speaker's box, a white bandage across her forehead, preaching with a glow of light on her face. The town marshal stood not far from her, a cordon of big fisted men from the railroad shops stood about her, men who had sworn that Round Hill should not be again humiliated by having a woman stoned in its streets. Shandon tried to listen, but could not for the tender, aching, strangling thing at his heart. "God bless her," he faltered, and went onward, out through the town into the still valley, under the big white stars. At seven in the morning he mounted the 99, and took the express east, and the drama of Muley Fork was played under that span of the sun.

Shandon went carefully. His train should have been at Midgley at 11:30; it was 2 in the afternoon when they made the Grand. A chaos of ice lay piled against the center pier of the bridge. Shandon got down and walked across. Momentarily tremors ran through the iron structure, but it seemed firm. Above the bridge the river had a heaped, swollen look, and was filled with grinding masses of ice. Shandon mounted the engine, and pulled slowly across. The last coach had hardly left the eastern span when, with a tearing crash, the span broke from the crumbling center pier and plunged into the flood.

At Midgley they found a red signal out and a freight train on the siding. Looking eastward they saw the cause: Muley Fork, mad with its burden, was pushing a moving, grinding ridge of ice clear across the track into the northern canyon wall. Looking up the mountainside, they saw the whole out of the reservoir streaming, a long veil of glittering glass. Would the dam hold? What if the snow on the steep, open slope to the left of it would break and sweep into it, irresistible in force, incalculable in weight? The Grand, freed in a measure at the bridge, was climbing its banks, momentarily backing up from the gorge at the mouth of Muley Fork. Midgley and the express and the freight lay in a frightful trap.

Shandon got down and looked about him. The conductor came running forward. There were crying and hysteria along the track. A hundred people or more, the populace of Little Midgley, were waiting for the train. Six or seven sick persons, on improvised stretchers, lay on the platform. There were three sick people on the train. What was to be done? The mile and strong might possibly escape up the mountains; but the reservoir and the snow, the women and the children, and—the sick.

"I seem to see—somehow—a little," he said desolately. "I want only you."

"We must clear the gorge and take 'em over Angel Pass into Peaceful Valley," said Shandon, half to himself. "Lots of folks goin' to lose their lives here. To think of the sick and helpless and any sort of people in trouble. Say, Phil," he shouted to the engineer of the freight, "run down ahead and let me kick my train in on the siding; then you hook on to the coaches and stand ready to follow me through. I'm going to cut the ice-pack in two."
The conductors of the freight and passenger both protested. Nothing but destruction for the engine and death for the man who drove her could result, they declared. But Phil Lyon, chewing hard on a piece of tobacco, said coolly: "All right, Nat; only you'd better let me buck the ice first."

"No, I have the right of way; it is my duty, not yours, Phil. Pull down quick and let me kick in. There will be forty feet of water in this gulch in twenty minutes if that gorge ain't broken," said Shandon.

Then there was wild hurrying, the clashing of drawheads and the hissing of steam, rough shouting and crying, and moans from the sick who were being carried abroad. The Grand was lipping the rails of the main line,

"No, I have the right of way; it is my duty, not yours, Phil."

Its waters heaped with groaning and grinding windrows of ice, as Shandon backed the great 990 for the charge. He sent her back clear to the fallen bridge before he reversed for the terrible charge. Ridley had gotten off at the station, and Shandon sat alone in the cab. There was a babble and clamor of echoes through all the canyon. He drew in his breath, and held it an instant, then threw the throttle wide. The huge engine leaped forward with a roar from stack and exhausts. Beautiful and mighty she swept down the perilous stretch, her iron skull set for the mountain ridge of ice. What the people heard as he passed was a long roar of thunder; what they saw was a glimmering monster flash by with a gray iron face at the window. Then there was a booming crash, a great gush of water and ice blocks in the air, and the monster was gone.

Lyon opened his engine's valves and the express rushed after her, plowing onward through water and crashing ice into open ground. What Lyon did not see some one on the rear coaches saw, a sublime and terrifying spectacle on the mountain side—the smoking rush of a thousand tons of snow into Midgley reservoir. With the impact half the water of the inclosure seemed to gush outward over the dam's crest like a gigantic silver banner, bending downward as the structure burst. And tiny Midgley? Well, no human life was there.

They found Shandon's engine 300 feet beyond the ice pack, lying on her side. Stack, bell, sand tank, cab—everything was gone. Battered and stripped she lay, a hissing wreck. They pulled Shandon from some wreckage rearward from the engine. He was hurt beyond mortal help. As he hung in Lyon's arms he spoke but once. "Tell Hallelujah," he murmured, "the little captain—back in Round Hill—you know—tell her I tried to love and save 'em all—but I—loved her—the best."

That was all. They laid him on cushions in the baggage car and pulled onward around the curve up Tudor Gulch, over Angel Pass, and down into Peace Valley.
He was buried there.

Smart Tramp
While walking up Eighth street one afternoon not long ago, says a Philadelphia real estate agent, I was stopped by a man who had the appearance of being a tramp.
"Say, mister," he said, "have you two nickels for a dime?"
I took out my pocketbook and found I had the required change.
"Yes," I replied, "now where is your dime?"
"Oh," he answered, "I don't want any dime changed; but I'd be much obliged if you would give me a nickel to buy a cup of coffee. Every other person I asked said they had no change."

HORTICULTURE

A Disease of the Privet.

Some of the privet hedges of Stillwater are being greatly damaged, if not destroyed, by a fungous disease of a sort which is called "anthracnose." The fungus of this disease attacks and kills the bark and wood of the stems, says a report of the Oklahoma station. Starting at a point on the stem, it spreads through and around the stems. When the leaves of the plant first begin to wither, the place attacked by the fungus may often be located just below the lowest of the withered leaves and above the green ones, if there are any such on the shoot. Close inspection reveals the fact that the bark is slightly shrunken at the point of injury, and if the stem be elced lengthwise, the diseased wood and bark will be found to be discolored, while that below, if healthy, will be fresh, and that above simply seasoned. The wood above the point of the first attack dries out, and the fungus seems to spread down the stem to the crown of the plant, and from there to all the roots and stalks. About the point of first attack black spots appear on the bark, and when the bark thus spotted is scraped or cut, it is found that these spots are the openings of spore-bearing postules. Hedges which have not yet been injured by this disease should be closely watched, and at the first sign of attack by this disease all the injured shoots should be cut off below the affected part and burned. If the crown or roots are affected the plant should be removed bodily and burned. In case the hedge is badly damaged it will probably be best to remove it entirely and not plant privet in the same place, as the soil is likely to be infected with the spores of the fungus. Diseased hedges are a menace to healthy ones in the neighborhood. It has been recommended that the hedges which are exposed to infection by this anthracnose be sprayed with Bordeaux mixture, especially in the spring, at the time when the buds are swelling and expanding, and while the new shoots and leaves are tender.

To Check the Apple Worm.

Spraying alone, though successful within its own limits, cannot ensure the fullest product of perfect apples without the concurrent practice of other methods looking to the final reduction of the numbers of the codling moth. The most important of these associated methods is the banding of the trees and the destruction of the attracted worms every ten days from the fall of the first wormy apple till the fruit is all in the bin. The second is the immediate destruction of all fallen wormy fruit, and the third is the destruction of as many as possible of the worms wintering over in bark scales, in old birds' nests, in cracks in apple bins or barrels, or elsewhere in the fruit room. These associated practices are not to be expected to show their full results in the season in which the work is done, though the immediate value of the first is considerable as a means of reducing the number of worms of the second or later broods of the same season.—E. A. Poppend.

Great Realm of Horticulture.

A prominent writer on horticulture says: From the horticultural side of the business, there are three great series of questions with which the nurseryman has to deal. These are the whole question of soil, the whole question of propagation and the whole question of varieties. Any one of these fields is large enough to occupy an investigator profitably during a lifetime. The probability is that if any man were to devote his life to either of these series of questions, he would feel at the last that he had touched only the borders of it.

The Hoghouse.

The first requirements in the hog industry is a good hoghouse, says John Cowine. You can't get along without that. In the old times we had them gathered around the straw-stacks, lying around fence corners, and sometimes quite successfully. But there is too much risk from loss unless you have proper shelter for both brood sows and young hogs. They must have protection, and so I say that the first requirement is a good hoghouse. In my hoghouse I have an alley running down the center. I would have the alley four feet wide, with pens on each side six or eight feet and a window to each pen. No outside door but I would have a door opening into each pen from the alley and a window to allow light and ventilation for the hogs at all seasons of the year. I would set the hoghouse north and south, so that the morning sun would strike one side and the afternoon sun the other, so that during the day, when the sun was shining every pen would be warmed and lighted, and lit up with the sunlight, every corner of it. Have a gate to each pen. That is important. When I first built a hoghouse I had it all built with movable partitions, my belief at that time being that the hogs had to be all together for fattening purposes, and I put in partitions for fattening time. There is no objection to partitions, whether the apartments be large or small. If divided into pens the hogs will never pile in one place and smother each other. Pens are absolutely necessary for fattening time. Your sows, after being bred, are allowed full access to the building.

HABITS OF JAPANESE SAILORS.

Simple Characteristics of the Mikado's Fighting Men.

Japanese sailors on the mikado's warships are thus described by Archibald S. Hurd: "These sailors of the far east take things very much as they find them with a stoical calm. They face danger with much the same spirit with which they take their pleasure; and in spite of the rapid strides which civilization has made in their country their luxuries are few and they are contented and happy. They are devoted to simple sports, to fencing and to acting; no one can ever forget the dramatic entertainments on board Japanese men-of-war who has been privileged to witness them. Nor does the memory soon become dim of one of these ships when decked out in gala dress, with chrysanthemums, cherry blossoms and other blooms typical of Japan enlivening the grim aspect of the decks. The men are adepts in the making of imitation paper flowers, which so closely resemble the handiwork of nature that at a casual glance one hardly notices the deception."

Cause and Effect.

Dr. Francis R. Lane, until lately director of the high schools of Washington, is fond of repeating the following extract from a composition submitted to him for approval during the days when he was a worker in the school-teaching ranks. The extract runs as follows: "Beings are divided into names according to that which they feed on. The lion eats flesh—the lion is carnivorous. The cow eats grass—the cow is herbivorous. Man eats everything. Therefore man is omnivorous."—Saturday Evening Post.

The McBride Case Again.

St. John, Kans., Oct. 26.—Mr. and Mrs. William McBride and Jesse L. Limes, M. D., have gone before Mr. George E. Moore, Notary Public, and have sworn and subscribed to written statements confirming the story of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. McBride.

Dr. Limes is particularly emphatic in his statement, and there does not now seem to be any room for doubt as to the fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills, and nothing else, saved the little boy. "It was so bad that he had Epileptic spells which seized him with increasing frequency. He was semi-paralyzed in the right side, and his mind was badly affected."

In their sworn statement, Mr. and Mrs. McBride say:

"The very day we began to use Dodd's Kidney Pills our boy had twenty-seven of these Epileptic spells or fits. In less than a week he ceased having them entirely."

The case has caused a great sensation in the neighborhood. The sworn statements have confirmed the whole story.

MIGHT MAKE A STATESMAN

"Uncle Joe" Thought Youngster Showed All the Symptoms.

A woman who lives at the hotel where "Uncle Joe" Cannon always makes his home while in Washington was recently talking to the next speaker of the growing incorrigibility of her youngest son. "I don't know what has come over little Dick," said the worried mother. "Do you know, he is forever inciting his playmates to all manner of mischief. Then he leaves them to fight it out among themselves." "Well," remarked "Uncle Joe," with a grim smile, "I wouldn't be excessively anxious on his account. Let him alone. It looks as if he might have the making of a statesman in him some day."

In Praise of the Apple.

The apple is the most democratic of all fruits. The pomegranate is priestly; the grape is royal; the orange is luxurious; the peach and pear are plutocratic, but the apple belongs to the populace. It is symbolic of the country store and the corner grocery. It breathes the free spirit of the American township and village. It has a flavor of old New England and yet a pungency as of the South and the middle West. It is mild, palatable, nourishing and promotive of good fellowship and long life.—Atlanta Journal

DUSY DOCTOR

Sometimes Overlooks a Point.

The physician is such a busy man that he sometimes overlooks a valuable point to which his attention may be called by an intelligent patient who is a thinker.

"About a year ago my attention was called to Grape-Nuts by one of my patients," says a physician of Cincinnati.

"At the time my own health was bad and I was pretty well rundown but I saw in a minute that the theories behind Grape-Nuts were perfect and if the food was all that was claimed for it it was a perfect food so I commenced to use Grape-Nuts with warm milk twice a day and in a short time began to improve in every way, and now I am much stronger, feel 50% better and weigh more than I ever did in my life."

"I know that all of this good is due to Grape-Nuts and I am firmly convinced that the claims made for the food are true. I have recommended and still recommend the food to a great many of my patients with splendid results, and in some cases the improvement of patients on this food has been wonderful."

"As a brain and nerve food, in fact as a general food, Grape-Nuts stands alone." Name given by Postum Co. Battle Creek, Mich.

IN THE AUSTRALIAN BUSIN.

Pathetic Story of the Fate of a Lost Child.

Zack Bedo was one of the tender-hearted, ready-handed pioneers whom Mrs. Campbell Praed has described in her book, "My Australian Childhood." When Ryman, the fencer's boy, got lost in the bush, it was Zack Bedo who tracked him for three days and two nights, and brought the little shoe the child had worn and a lock of hair back to the mother, and cried like a child when he gave them to her.

He dug out the boy's grave with his own hands and a tomahawk, and buried him quickly, before the father could get to the place, so that the poor mother might never hear described what he, Zack Bedo, had seen. And because he could think of nothing better, and could not bear to lay what the hawk had left in the ground without a prayer, he said the only thing that came into his mind at the moment—the remembrance, perhaps, of something his own mother had taught him—"Suffer little children to come unto me, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

That was the excuse he made when chaffed at the hut one night for having a prayer-book in his possession. "It was awful awkward," he said, "not to know any words for burying." He could recollect the Lord's prayer, he added, "but that hadn't seemed quite right, somehow."

Lucky Horseshoes Discarded for Pieces of Bursted Tires.

A young woman whose superstition formerly led her to make a collection of picked-up horseshoes, which she wrapped in ribbons and hung at the foot of her couch, over her cheval mirror and upon the walls of her bedroom, has discarded them all and put in their places sections of burst or worn-out tires from the automobiles of her friends.

"So far," she said, "I have not noticed any change in my luck, but I don't expect much until I get my thirtieth section of burst tire. I hope to reach that number before the beginning of next year which is, as you know, divisible by four."

New Use for Automobiles.

At the trial in Paris recently of an automobilist for fast running it turned out that the offender desired to marry the daughter of the gentleman, his partner in business, who, along with the lady herself, was riding in the vehicle with him. At a certain point in the ride the lover started the machine at breakneck speed, and when the father entreated him to stop he steered the machine for an obstruction, and declared he would slow up only on condition of being promised the girl's hand in marriage. When stopped by the police and taken before a magistrate the lover was fined a small amount. The wedding is to be celebrated shortly.

Wild Woman in the Alps.

The discovery of a wild woman of the mountains in the Bernese Alps is reported. She was found by an English hunter in a lonely spot more than 10,000 feet above the level of the sea, starving and very scantily clad. She tried to escape, and both before and after being fed showed great terror at all persons who approached her. She talked a language which nobody could understand. Her identity is still a mystery, though she is supposed to have been deserted by some band of roving gypsies and to have been wandering in the Alps for many months.

Teach Names of Wild Flowers.

A public museum at Brighton, England, has adopted a custom which should be followed elsewhere. Persons are encouraged to bring in fresh bunches of local wild flowers culled during their walks to one of the officials, who arranges the specimens each morning in glass vases containing water and affixes both the botanical and English name. Thus visitors are made acquainted with the flowers which they have seen growing wild, but regarding which they have had no information.

J. V. Walls, Superintendent of Streets of Lebanon, Ky., living on East Main street, in that city, says:

"With my nightly rest broken, owing to irregularities of the kidneys, suffering intensely from severe pain in the small of my back and through the passages of abnormal secretions, I was anything but pleasant for me. No amount of doctoring relieved this condition, and for the reason that nothing seemed to give me even temporary relief I became about discouraged. One day I noticed in the newspapers the case of a man who was afflicted as I was and was cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. His words of praise for this remedy were so sincere that on the strength of his statement I went to the Hugh Murrey Drug Co. store and got a box. I found that the medicine was exactly as powerful as kidney remedy as represented. I experienced quick and lasting relief. Doan's Kidney Pills will prove a blessing to all sufferers from kidney disorders who will give them a fair trial."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine, which cured Mr. Walls, will be mailed to any part of the United States on application. Address: Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

THAT GIRL of JOHNSON'S

By JEAN KATE LUDLUM.

Author of "A Girl's Mera," Etc.

Entered According to Act of Congress in the Year 1906 by Street & Smith, In the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington, D. C.

"You," he said, gently, "I know he is dead, Dolores, but after death all things are made straight. He knows now better than he ever could have known from your telling, and I know he has forgotten us."

There were sweetness and solemnity in the young man's voice as he bent above the beautiful old face that caused Dorá to catch her breath in sudden comprehending of the depth of the kindly heart, as he slowly repeated, the touch on the girl's hands very tender, the light in the loving eyes entering into her very soul:

"There is no death. What seems so is transition; This life of mortal breath Is but a suburb of the life elysian, Whose portal we call death."

CHAPTER XXIII

"That Girl of Johnson's."

Dora was standing at the well at Dolores' old home with her husband, waiting for Dolores and Charlie Green, who had gone at the girl's request to the opposite mountain. It was a strange freak of Dolores', but with the usual simple acquiescence in any wish of hers they had gone, and here Dora and her husband were waiting for their return at the girl's old home.

But it was not the home of the girl's remembrance. The garden was in fine order and the fence well built; as long as did the gate swing on its rusty, rickety hinges. The enterprising chickens were scratching among the shrubs at the back of the house, but not a chicken dared show its face at the front of the neat little house where Jim Lodie and Cinthy lived—the two young people who had always had a kindly thought for its former mistress.

Dora was standing at the well watching her husband as he swung the bucket down among the cool shadows, her sweet face, grown more womanly and holding a deeper meaning in every delicate line. She stood on tiptoe to look down and follow the flight of the bucket, but even standing so she scarcely reached to his shoulder. She turned her pretty head on one side as a bird might do, and said, with an air that convulsed her husband, though there was a deeper and more tender meaning to her words that he would not let her know he understood.

"The course of true love never did run smooth—and look at that poor bucket, Hal. You are fairly beating the life out of it against the sides of the well."

"Poor thing! said the big fellow, in a tone that implied scant sympathy for the luckless bucket. "You had better say that Charlie is eating his heart out because your cousin will not love him, Dot. Is she never going to be good to him for his faithfulness, dear? He deserves a good life and a good woman, Dora; even your cousin cannot deny that."

"Don't talk of Lorie as though she were heartless, Harry," Dora said, softly, with one of her swift wistful glances up to his face. "Lorie is not like other girls."

The other two having passed down out of the settlement, followed by the half scornful eyes of the men at the tavern, crossed the rotten bridge over the river and ascended the opposite mountain slowly among the bent bushes and mysterious mists that held in their hiding the snares of death and the pitfalls that lay in waiting.

"That goes that gal o' Johnson's," Tom Smith said, with a rough break of laughter in his deep voice. "What on their world she's goin' ower yander fer beats me holler."

"Goin' ter say her prayers ower her feyther's grave, I reckon," joined in Bitam Sadler, coarsely, but the answering laughter on Smith's lips never passed them as Jones turned his indignant eyes upon them, removing his side from his lips to make reply.

"It 'pears to me," he said, slowly, with an emphasis that hushed their mirth, "that ye might hev gained a mit o' respect an' kindly feelin' arter all these years' sence Johnson died."

"Lorie is not like other girls," he do' hear ter me 't ye might keep yer mouth shut of ye ken only say such spiteful things. Iee only got show ter say ter ye, Sadler, an' ter ye, no, Smith—of ye 'sant' say kind things o' the gal o' Johnson's arter all she's done an' a still doin' fer us ye ain't so welcome ter this tav'n as ye were. An' ye ken take et as ye will. That's all I've got ter speak, an' now my mind's better'n when I sot hyar list'nin' ter yer men talk."

A flush came even through the tan of rough Sadler's face, and Smith shuffled his feet upon the gravel and knocked the ashes from his pipe as he said slowly:

"Thank 'ee, Jones. Wes been frien' nigh onter fo'ty year, an' fer my part I ain't a-goin' ter 'low sech triflin' words ter kem atween we. Hyar's my hand on 't. I ain't mebbey so onfrin' to 'rd D'lores es ye 'pear ter think. Wes all say things 't wes don't mean, an' mebbey that's ther way of us. Eh, Sadler?"

Sadler nodded his grisly head slowly. He wasn't so frank spoken as Smith nor perhaps so kind-hearted under his rough speech. Smith said many rough things, but he would have done much also.

And young Green, holding Dolores' warm hand closely in his to assist her up the rough, seldom trodden path under the bending boughs and ghastly mists, was thinking of the many years she had lived there in the stolid settlement with not one friend in all the world save, it might be, the rough, unspoken kindness of Jim Lodie and Cinthy. And with his kindly eyes upon the grave, beautiful face he could but wonder how such a life could yield such a marvel of womanliness and tenderness.

It was a strange freak of hers, no doubt, this wish to once again stand upon the brink of her father's death, but how could he, loving her, dissuade her from a desire so intense as this was shown by the pleading of the dark eyes? And so they had come, and, standing in the very place where she stood years before, with the misty, mysterious gulf at her feet and the broken glimpses of blue heaven through the floating mist, a touch of grief and pleading and tenderness came over the pure, pale face that caused this man, loving her, to bow his head as one involuntarily bows the head before the chance of with the touch of an indescribable holiness brooding above. And he removed his hat, standing so, with his hand upon her round arm as she stood immovably searching the terrible death below her, as though for the solving of the bitterness of her life, as though for the solving of her own harsh heartlessness in accusing her father when none other save the man at her side and others with wicked intent, charged him with crime. And there was an agony dawning over the pallid face and wide eyes that hushed all other thought for the time in the heart of her friend—all thought save an intense desire and longing to take her into his arms and soothe this agony of bitterness and shield her all her life long from any touch of pain, any touch of life's harshness. But he waited silently with bent head, his hand upon her arm, while she fought—and won—perhaps a struggle that few are called upon to fight, that few would conquer. Then the eyes, widened with agony, were lifted from the depths of horror and mystery seeking the broken bits of blue heaven through the mist of the tangled pines upon the height, and an indescribable grandeur and beauty gradually grew upon the lifted face and in the depths of the grave eyes as though the peace sought had been won, and the bitterness of years was buried never again to be resurrected in all the life before her, never again to shadow, as it had done, the love and life of this friend beside her. And he, guessing in part the thoughts in her heart, made no movement save a more tender hold upon the steady arm he held. And he waited for her to speak.

All her life passed her in review as she stood there conscious even though the bitterness of this warm, kindly friend at her side—all the bitterness and pain and humiliation and struggle of her life, all the thoughts and sorrows and struggles, and when at last she turned facing this friend, the change upon her face was as though an angel had touched her standing there, and life's suffering had passed from her, life's struggles and pain, and left only the touch of heavenly fingers upon the eyes and mouth.

One of her slow, radiant smiles broke the sadness of her face as she laid her hand upon the hand on her arm as she said softly, a new intonation even in the low voice:

"You mustn't be so good to me, Charlie; I ought to suffer alone sometimes. You cannot realize how much I deserve it."

He laid his other hand warmly over this soft hand on his arm, a new light on his face, and in his eyes that caused a sudden drooping of the face in the light of the sunset.

"You deserve to suffer!" there was an intensity in his voice born from watching the suffering on her face, and from the suffering in his own soul. "You deserve to suffer, Dolores Johnson! If there is need for your suffering how much more should I suffer who was equal with you in thinking the unkind thoughts? Come away from this terrible place, Dolores—leave all these old bitter memories here in the weird shadows and mists here only fit for them, and give your life only fit for them, and give your life to my keeping, tell me you love me as I love you—give me the answer to the question I asked so long ago, Lorie, under the light of your heavens, under the tender light of your stars, you left me for your new life and possible forgetfulness."

She met his eyes gravely and squarely, though the new light of tenderness was still in them as she said, slowly, with almost her old slowness:

"The happiness of a man's life does not altogether depend on the love of a woman, Charlie."

"To a great extent, darling."

"But even if I should tell you 'no,' you would be happy after a while, Charlie. Time heals everything."

"Not everything, Lorie."

"Yes, everything," she said, decidedly. "You know that time heals everything, Charlie—even the old pain of unforgiveness."

"Hush!" he said, swiftly, and his hands on both her arms as he held her facing him, were trembling with the wish to hold her free from pain. "You are never to say such things again, dearest. Let those things pass. You have suffered enough for them, and God will lay His great tenderness over them."

She was silent a moment, as though reading his inmost thought, the lifted eyes grave and searching and tender. Then she turned from the gruesome chasm buried at her feet in its treacherous shroud of mist, and said, softly, with a tenderness that touched him deeply:

"I am sure I want you."

"God is very good, Charlie. I cannot doubt his tenderness. All my life I will leave in his hands as you say—all my life, past as well as future." Then presently she added:

"Let us go, Charlie. I leave her buried in the heart of His mountains the bitterness that has shadowed not only my life but the lives of those who love me. The mountains are His and my life is His."

But as they paused for an instant on the rotten bridge with the waters sobbing at their feet, black with the slime and smoke of the town, she laid her hand earnestly upon his arm, and lifting her grave face to his, flushing with its new tenderness, she added, softly:

"You have been so good to me always, Charlie! Are you sure—sure you do want nobody but that girl of Johnson's? I come with empty hands, you know."

He smiled into the quivering face and wide, searching eyes and he answered her, taking her two hands in his closely as though he would never again let them go from him:

"I am sure, sure that I want you, Dolores Johnson, more than any woman in God's beautiful world. Your hands may be empty hands, but they are beautiful in the work they do and have done for others, for even these cruel people here who would have ruined your sweet life, and the woman who, now your uncle's wife, would have stained her hands forever for the darkening of your heart."

And what could she say? And the lights of the sunset were very tender over them as they crossed the bridge and passed up along the road through the settlement where the changes of her working had given an air of neatness and home life and widening of view, with its school and church and kindly touch of neighborliness; and as they passed the tavern where Jones and his comrades still sat with their pipes in lazy enjoyment, the men gave greeting with a new touch of kindness that went to the heart of the girl who had lived her twenty years among them uncared for and unloved. And the eyes of her lover were brilliant with the depth of his thought for her, and his arm was strong to guide and guard her through any pain the future might bring, and never again could this pale, beautiful girl of Johnson's suffer alone or bear her life's burdens outside of the pale of tenderest love.

Possibilities of Radium.

Mr. Hammer, who was formerly a coadjutor of Edison, has produced with radium a partial paralysis of the fish known as the electric ray, so that it could give no further shocks. He has, with the radium, paralyzed small fish as that they have been drowned, or at least died. In talking of this experiment, Mr. Hammer called attention to the experiments of Prof. Curie and others recently in Paris, in which guinea pigs, mice and rabbits were paralyzed and later killed by placing radium near the spinal column. "It is perfectly reasonable to suppose," said Mr. Hammer, "that people's brains might be paralyzed by putting powerful radium near their heads, say on a pillow at night, or near the spinal cord, and thus produce paralysis as in the case of the animals."

A PROMINENT CHURCH WORKER SAYS SHE OWES HER LIFE TO PE-RU-NA.

HER GREAT FORTUNE.

A Woman Saved From Life-Long Misery and Made Happy and Useful.

A woman confined to the house for several years with a chronic female derangement had finally given up hope of being cured.

She had tried physician after physician, and remedy after remedy, without any permanent improvement.

Her treatment had cost her husband, who was a poor man, hundreds of dollars. They had been obliged to deny themselves many comforts of life in order to get money enough to pay the physicians.

The woman had become weak, nervous and wretched, and scarcely able to keep out of her bed. Her children were growing up neglected and ragged because of the want of a mother's care. Her husband was becoming discouraged and broken down with overwork.

Picking up the paper one day she happened to read an item which contained the news that Dr. Hartman would treat such cases free of charge by letter. She immediately wrote the doctor describing her case, and giving him all her symptoms.

She soon received a letter telling her exactly what to do, and what medicines and appliances to get. She began the treatment (the principle remedy being Peruna) at once, and in a few weeks she was well and strong again, able to do her own work.

This offer of free home treatment to women is still open to all who may need the services of this eminent physician. All letters applying for treatment will be promptly answered, and be held strictly confidential.

Miss Annie Hoban, First Vice-President of Yemassee Council of Red Men (Women's Branch), writes from 872 Eighth Ave., New York:

"Three months ago I was troubled with backache and a troublesome heaviness about the stomach. Sleep brought me no rest for it was a restless sleep. The doctor said my nervous system was out of order but his prescriptions didn't seem to relieve me. I was told that Peruna was good for building up the nervous system. After using it for two months I know now that it is. I want to say that it made a new woman of me. The torturing symptoms have all disappeared and I feel myself again. Peruna did me more good than all the other medicines I have taken."

ANNE HOBAN.

Miss Mamie Powell, Lake Charles, Louisiana, writes:

"I sincerely believe that Peruna is woman's best friend, for it has certainly been that to me. I had had headaches, backaches and other aches every month for a long time, but shortly after I began taking Peruna this was a thing of the past, and I have good reason to be grateful. I take a bottle every spring and fall now, and that keeps my health perfect, and I certainly am more robust now than I have been before and am weighing more. I do not think anyone will be disappointed in the results obtained from the use of Peruna."

MISS MAMIE POWELL.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Mrs. Hattie La Fountain

Mrs. Hattie La Fountain, Treas. Protected Home Circle and Catholic Ladies of Ohio, writes from Galion, O., as follows:

"After my first child was born I suffered for several months with bearing down pains accompanied by dreadful headaches. I was afraid my health was ruined for life, and felt very downcast about it. One day when a friend was visiting me she told me of Peruna and what it had done for her when she suffered with irregular menstruation. My husband procured a bottle the same evening and I began to take it daily according to directions. Before the first bottle was used I was entirely well, and you certainly have one grateful woman's blessing. I have also advised my friends to use it."

Secretary Woman's State Federation Says: "Pe-ru-na Does More Than is Claimed for it."

Mrs. Julia M. Brown, Secretary of the Woman's State Federation of California, writes from 131 1/2 Fifth St., Los Angeles, Cal., as follows:

"I have never known of any patent medicine which did what it professed to do except Peruna. This remedy does much more than it claims, and while I have never advocated any medicine, I feel that it is but justice to speak a good word for it because I have found it to be such a rare exception

Looping the Loop.

While the Immortals are drowsing over their National French dictionary, the law courts have been adding, officially, a new word to the French language. In an action brought by the Olympia Music Hall company against the Casino de Paris for an injunction restraining the latter from advertising an exhibition of "Looping the loop," the court held that "looping the loop" now belonged to all languages and consequently was an ordinary French word of description.

Bad Case of Catarrh of Womb Cured.

Horton, Mich., Sept. 16, 1903. Dr. E. L. Wilkinson: I suffered awfully with catarrh and ulceration of the womb for seven years before I called on you. During that time six different doctors failed to give me any relief after extended trials. Before going to you I could not turn over in bed, neither could I lie down in a recumbent position on account of pain; therefore I had to sleep in a partial sitting position. I commenced treating with you last October, and from the very beginning you gave me relief, and in four months I was entirely cured, all womb symptoms have disappeared entirely. I feel very grateful to you for what you have done for me. Respectfully, MRS. IDA KOONS.

THE CHELSEA HERALD

ARE YOU A PRISONER? THOUSANDS of men are prisoners of disease as securely as though they were confined behind the bars. Many have forged their own chains by the weakness of youth, exposure to diseases or excesses. They feel they are not the men they ought to be or used to be. The vim, vigor, and vitality are lacking. Are you nervous and despondent? tired in the morning? have you to force yourself through the day's work? have you little ambition and energy? are you irritable and excitable? eyes sunken, depressed and haggard looking? memory poor and brain fagged? have you weak back with restlessness at night? weak mentally and physically? you have Nervous Debility and Physical Weakness.
