HIS 18th ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. W. P. Considine Has Been Rector of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart Since 1885.

Sunday, Nov. 15, was the 18th anniversary of Rev. W. P. Considine's pastorate of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, he having celebrated his first mass as pastor of this church on Sunday, Nov. 15, 1885.

The event was observed by Fr. Considine giving a dinner Monday to a number of his clerical friends. Those present were the Revs. E. D. Kelly, of Ann Arbor, J. P. Ryan, of Dexter, D. McLaughlin, of Manchester, C. Schenkelberg and V. Ducat, of Jackson, Wm. Kilroy, of Lennox, and J. Hallissy, of Hudson.

A number of pretty gifts and handsome bouquets of flowers were presented to Fr. Considine by his friends and added not a little, by their testimony to his worth as a pastor, to the pleasure of the occasion. The reverend gentlemen's many friends hope to see him celebrate many more anniversaries in Chelsea.

Schultz-Hinkley.

A pretty home wedding was celebrated in Chelsea last evening, Nov. 18, when Miss Agnes M. Hinkley and Mr. David Schultz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schultz, were married at their home on Madison street, by Rev. Geo. Gordon, of Waterloo. The bride was dressed in white and carried a bouquet of white carnations, and the bridesmaid, a sister of the bride, also wore white and carried a similar bouquet. The best man was Mr. Herbert Bird of Ann Arbor. After the ceremony 45 guests partook of the bountiful wedding supper that was served. Mr. and Mrs. Schultz will reside in Chelsea, and they have the best wishes of their many relatives and friends for their future happiness in life.

Detroit Free Press' Onward March.

The Detroit Free Press has just installed a new printing press, the first of its kind to be put in a Michigan printing office. It is known as a Goss straight line printing press and it will turn out 24,000 four, six, eight, ten or twelve page papers every hour. It is also a color printing press and will be used to print the colored supplements of the Sunday Free Press, printing four colors at a time. Its introduction is a long step forward and puts the Free Press in the front rank of metropolitan newspapers. It is a long distance from Sept. 28, 1835, the date of the first issue of the Daily Free Press to the present and the passing years are full of the improvements that have been made in it.

St. Mary's Literary Club Outing.

Tuesday evening last the St. Mary's Literary Club and their invited guest Mrs. D. B. Hayes, of Detroit, took a trolley ride to the home of Miss Rose Conway and were royally entertained. After the transaction of the usual routine business, the hostess invited the ladies to partake of the splendid refreshments that had been prepared for the occasion, to which all did ample justice. Following this the Conway family entertained their guests with an excellent program of vocal and instrumental music. The club returned to Chelsea on the 9:30 car having spent a very pleasant evening.

A Mammoth Holiday Issue.

The December Delineator (Christmas number) represents the high-water mark of beauty and utility, and possibly of circulation also, in a woman's magazine, having a first edition of more than a million copies. It contains 240 pages. To produce this mammoth edition 728 tons of paper and 49 presses working 25 days were required. In addition to exquisite color work, clever fiction and strikingly illustrated articles, the number includes a display of charming winter fashions covering 42 pages, letters from the foreign fashion centers and illustrated articles on the fashionable fabrics and trimmings, millinery, etc. There are many beautiful art features, among them four pages in colors representing Babyhood, Childhood, Girlhood and Motherhood. For the children there are entertaining games and stories, and for the housewife many practical suggestions in cookery and other departments of the home, for the Christmas season.

A Brief Chronicle of All Important Happenings

ECROES FROM PANAMA.

The U. S. battleship Maine has arrived at Colon.

Gen. Reyes, Holguin and Ospina, leaders in Colombia, have been sent to Panama on a peace mission to try to induce the isthmians to return to the Colombian federation. The privileges of a United States warship have been offered to Gen. Reyes to reach Panama should he so desire.

The president's yacht, Mayflower, has arrived at Panama with Rear Admiral Walker, who is to investigate the situation for the president; Rear Admiral Coghlan, who is to take command of the United States fleet on the Atlantic side, and Consul General Gudgeon. The latter was given an enthusiastic reception by the Panamanians.

Strange Finds of Stolen Goods.

Several hundreds of dollars worth of plunder was found in the streets and alleys of Bellefontaine, O., Sunday morning, and the police attribute it to the search which has been inaugurated by the Big Four railway into the wholesale thefts of merchandise from cars between Bellefontaine and Indianapolis, and which has resulted in the arrest of a half dozen conductors, brakemen and switchmen at Indianapolis.

The police think that the plunder was brought during the night by railroad employes, and dumped about over town to avoid suspicion from other quarters. In the lot of goods found there were shoes, shirts, military and almost every sort of merchandise.

Officials of the Big Four say the arrests at Indianapolis are not all that will be made, and predict that the investigation will extend over all parts of the system.

New Find of Jesus' Words.

Biblical students are greatly interested in the archaeological discoveries of Dr. Bernard Grenfell, who has unearthed certain papyri buried in a Ptolemaic necropolis, south of Cairo. These papyri consist of a collection of sayings of Jesus Christ and are apparently addressed to St. Thomas. Because of the fact that they are at some variance with accepted texts, much discussion has been fomented. Dr. Grenfell at a meeting of the Egypt Exploration fund today, made public some of the documents. They are in general introduced with the word, "Jesus saith."

The ends of the lines are in most cases obliterated. One of the sayings reads, "Let not him that seeketh ease from his search until he find and when he finds he shall wonder; and when he reaches the kingdom he shall have rest."

Daring Escape.

Four prisoners escaped from the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus by climbing to the roof of a cell block, through a ventilator, and sliding down a rope made of strips of leather belting to the lawn in front of the prison.

The escape of the prisoners was a daring one. The cell block from which they made their exit is in the front of the big prison, and the men dropped to the ground beneath a window in the warden's office, where the lights were burning brightly. A trusted prisoner, seated at a desk near the window, saw the last man, who fell before he reached the end of the rope, limp away in the darkness. The alarm was given and a posse of prison guards, armed with Winchester, immediately started in pursuit.

Dowie to Build Another Zion City.

"I have just received an offer of 4,000,000 acres of land on which to build another Zion City, but the site must be kept secret at present," said John Alexander Dowie, speaking to his followers in Shiloh tabernacle, Zion City, Sunday. "What is more," Dowie continued, "I have an offer of 10,000 acres of land within thirty-five miles of New York city for the same purpose. That does not look as if our New York trip failed, does it?"

"I am going abroad January 3 after men and money," he said. "When I get back in June I will have planned a number of Zions. Then all Zion will start its work for building up Jerusalem."

Professional beggars are being driven out of eastern cities like New York, Boston and Philadelphia, by the Charity Organization societies. Hundreds of the worst characters have been photographed for identification. St. Louis is said to be the objective point of most of the exiles.

The sensational sermon preached by Rev. R. A. Ellwood at Wilmington, Del., in which he justified the lynching and burning of George White, the negro who ravished and murdered Miss Helen Bishop last June, has been taken up by the presbytery and Rev. Ellwood will be tried on January 19.

Capt. Hobson has lost a gold medal studded with diamonds and worth $1,500, which had been presented to him by a southern society. It was in a purse of his sister Margaret, who was attending another sister in a New York sanitarium, and purse and all disappeared. Hobson has asked the police to find his trophy.

Broke Kitchener's Leg.

Lord Kitchener, commander-in-chief of the British forces in India, met with a serious accident while riding home alone from a country house near Simla, India. As he was passing through a tunnel his horse became frightened and collided with the walled side. One of Lord Kitchener's legs was broken in two places. Some time afterward, coolies passing through the tunnel found the commander-in-chief lying there helpless and brought him to Simla. He is now reported to be doing well.

The Queen Mother to Quit Spain.

It is rumored that the queen mother has decided to leave Spain and settle in Austria. She will probably go within the next two months. Her departure is due to the frequent quarrels with King Alfonso, who charges his mother with meddling in state affairs with a reactionary result, causing a growth of Republican sentiment in the country. At the recent local elections such growth was plainly apparent, nearly 1,000 Republicans being elected.

Forty Men Were Killed.

Thirty-nine negroes and one white man were killed and 23 others injured in a rear-end collision on the Illinois Central road at Kentwood, eighty miles from New Orleans. The local which leaves New Orleans at 3:30 o'clock picked up two carloads of negro section hands and was waiting at the Kentwood switch for the late northern express train to pass it from the north. The train, going at forty miles an hour, crashed into the rear of the local train and the two coaches filled with negroes were demolished.

Plunder Gang in Alaska.

Col. Marvin Grigsby, formerly commander of Grigsby's "rough riders," arrived in Washington from Juneau. He comes to refute the charges of corruption against him as United States district attorney for Alaska. Grigsby says a number of officials in Alaska are organized into a gang for personal profit. He refused to join them and the charges were then trumped up.

Colombia Said to Be Sending Troops.

Gen. Plaza, president of Ecuador, who cabled to President Marroquin, of Colombia, sympathizing with him in the recent events on the isthmus of Panama, has received a reply from him expressing his thanks, and adding that Gen. Reyes, Caballeros, Ospina and Holguin are marching on Panama with a large army to subdue the isthmians.

CONDENSED NEWS.

A midwinter blockade along the whole Pacific coast from British Columbia to southern California has resulted from a fierce snowstorm which has prostrated all telegraph service and tied up railroads.

Smugglers at Boston have unloaded Uncle Sam to the extent of $200,000 through collusion between them and employes of the customs office. Such is the report of special treasury officers.

Wilbur B. Ash was arrested at Buffalo for the alleged theft of $2,000 in cash and papers and jewels valued at $3,250, from Charles N. Rapp. Rapp's attorney located Ash in Marquette and he agreed to waive extradition.

Practical Jokers took a horse belonging to Mrs. Green, a Poughkeepsie widow, out of the stable, and while she was trying to trace the thieves they were taking it into her parlor. When she returned from her hunt she found her parlor a wreck.

Phillip Dolliver, foreman at the Harry E. colliery, Wilkesbarre, was arrested as a burglar and was liberated only when the daughter of the house he was supposed to be burglarizing, admitted that he was her lover and had come to see her.

William F. Peasley, of Bradock, Pa., finding his wife in conversation with John Beardsley, stepped up to the latter and cut his throat. Beardsley had been expecting trouble and was carrying a revolver, but before he could use it he fell dead.

Dazed by blows struck by men who had insulted the young woman he was escorting, Rudolph Ludwig drew a revolver in Chicago and fired two shots. Both struck Frank Sanders, his companion, who was struggling with the crowd, and inflicted two fatal wounds.

Roland B. Molineux cannot recover photographs and Bertillon measurements, constituting the prison identification record of him while he was under sentence of death for the alleged murder of Mrs. Kate Adams. So the New York appellate court has decided.

With her own clothes ablaze as a result of the explosion of a can of naphtha, Mrs. Mary Werckheiser, of Brooklyn, thought only of her children, and by the time she had extinguished the flames enveloping them she was fatally burned.

Russell Sage has been ordered by the supreme court of New York to pay $2,500 to the Roberts Brokerage Co., as profits on a transaction he made with them for the sale of certain shares, a transaction which he repudiated when he learned he could make $2,500 more by selling to someone else. The court decided the profits belonged to the company.

THANKSGIVING AT LONESOME HOLLOW

"Seems awfully lonesome to eat a Thanksgiving dinner all alone," said Milly, looking over at the young fellow who sat mending a harness strap beside the blazing hearth. "I haven't the heart to get up a big dinner for just us two."

"I don't see what else we can do. No neighbors to invite except old Pete Sprat, and he wouldn't come. We might send him something by way of being neighborly."

"And be turned away for our pains," the woman laughed.

"You can't even go out on the highways and hedges and gather in stragglers like the ancient host of Bibles fame. Maybe it is just as well not to have all the work of getting up a Thanksgiving dinner, for it seems to me that you look tired, Milly. What's the matter?"

"Nothing, Jim, I guess I need a little outing. I'll take a run across the hollow and be back before supper."

Milly put on her cloak and went out into the crisp autumn afternoon. The woods were bare except for a few torch-like flames of red which marked the presence of an occasional gum tree. The sky was clear, cold and pallid, tinged with a greenish glow

Heard the sound of chopping, where the dark forests rimmed the far horizon. Not a sign of human habitation was visible, and not a sound broke the vast stillness save the steady tap-tap of a woodpecker. The loneliness oppressed Milly strangely. For two years she had endured it in cheerful silence, working patiently at whatever her hand found to do in the rough little shack which had gradually assumed a cozy, homelike appearance. They had left the busy, grinding east in quest of health for her young husband, who was slowly regaining his lost strength and vigor in the bracing climate of Colorado, which alone kept Milly's heart light and hopeful, but in spite of that joyful fact she could not dispel a shiver of loneliness when she thought of the long, dreary winter before them.

"I'm getting morbid simply for the want of a little company," she said, as she walked down the untraveled road in the face of the crisp north wind. "That will never do for you, Milly Bernet. For Jim's sake you mustn't give way to such foolishness."

Suddenly Milly's ear caught the sound of chopping, which seemed to come from the hollow beyond the divide. She turned and made her way easily through the leafless thicket, walking briskly over the hill and down the opposite descent until she distinctly heard voices. Further on, at the edge of a natural clearing, she came upon a party of travelers camped beside a newly kindled fire, where a lean, gaunt, appearing fellow busied himself with preparations for the evening meal. They were eight in all, a rough, unkempt lot in leathern jackets and rusty boots. Beside the cook lay a bag of flour, a rasber of bacon and two jugs stopped with corn-cob.

Milly stopped abruptly when she found herself observed by the curious eyes of eight strangers, then changed her mind and crossed the icy little brook and made her way toward the fire.

A big, black-whiskered man dropped his armful of horseshoes and looked at her piercingly. "Lost?" he asked brusquely.

"No. I live two miles up the divide. I happened to hear you chopping, and stopped out of curiosity."

The man's insistent gaze annoyed her, but the forlorn, gaunt appearance of the little group incited a little throb of pity and made her think gratefully of her own cozy, cheerful little shack, with Jim waiting for her beside the glowing hearth.

"I suppose you are simply camping here for the night," she ventured, looking about at the meager comforts of the camp.

"Well, no," answered the black-whiskered man who impressed her as being spokesman of the party. "We came down to prospect for such luxuries, for all those fancy-fixings are luxuries in Colorado," Blaisedale remarked significantly.

"Yes, I count myself one of the luckiest men in the world. I owe everything to Milly, even my life. I was a poor law student when we were married, and when my health broke down she simply took all responsibility into her own hands. It was her money that enabled me to come here. It's her bit of money that we're living on now. All that she has in the world is in the little bank at Sunrise, where she goes once a month to draw the necessary sum for our provisions. But now that I've got to work we're making our way along without much help from the bank. I tell you I hated to use that money bad enough, but if it hadn't been for that the Lord only knows what would have become of me."

Milly blushed deeply and becomingly. "Why, it doesn't amount to that," said she with a snap of her brown fingers. "All the money in the world would be worthless to me if I didn't have Jim."

"I've heard a saying about a 'good wife being a treasure,'" Blaisedale remarked. "Your wife proves the truth of it."

The dinner was a great success. Blaisedale, who seemed to exert a mysterious influence over his fellows, grew very talkative and entertaining. He told stories of queer places and queerer people which savored of familiarity with lawlessness and lawbreakers, but which kept Jim breathlessly interested until the eight strange guests made their adieus. When the company had filed out of the little cabin door Blaisedale, who was last to go, turned at the threshold and held out his hand to Milly.

"You remind me of one I once knew," he said, simply, "and for her sake I'd like to shake hands with you. Thank you for your hospitality. You won't regret your kindness, by the way."

"Queer fellow, that one," Jim remarked, as he watched the gang recede down the wintry road. "You may be sure he has a strange history behind him."

That night when Jim and Milly sat talking beside their cheerful hearth, a scrap of white paper crept mysteriously under the door. Jim rose hurriedly and threw back the door, but no one was in sight, and not a sound broke the deep stillness of the icy night.

Milly read the note over his shoulder, and this is what it said:

Some curious whim prompts me to tell you that it was our intention to break into and rifle the little eggshell bank at Sunrise before quitting these diggings, but for the sake of Milly's "bit of money" it shall go unharmed. Thanking you for a pleasant hour.

An Indian's Thanks.

T. M. Buffington, principal chief of the Cherokee Nation, when he issued his Thanksgiving proclamation began it this way:

"Let us again commemorate the custom of our forefathers, which prevailed since time immemorial, and adopted by the Pilgrims, and their descendants, by celebrating a day devoted to festivity and praise for the goodness of the Great Spirit, after the joys and sorrows of another year, and harvests have been gathered."

Some may be disposed to think the chief has assumed overmuch when he claims for his people precedence in giving thanks once a year, but he is really correct. The "Green Corn Dance" of the Indians which was annually celebrated when the corn was ready for food, was the occasion of a much more ceremonious rejoicing than is usual among the whites on Thanksgiving Day. It was the Indians' manner of showing their gratitude to the Great Spirit for the blessings of their grain and they made it one of the greatest and most memorable of their annual ceremonies. — Montgomery (Ala.) THE KING'S THANKSGIVING TART

By HOLMAN F. DAY

There once was a king, so minstrels sing, who ruled with a kindly sway, And his subjects true were allowed to pursue their own sweet, easy way.

He guided them, of course, But by no display of force

Did he arrogate, but was wont to state from them was his power's source. Now it chanced one time, so runs the rhyme, his subjects fancied tarts.

No other food seemed half as good—on tarts they set their hearts. They ate them early, they ate them late—just tarts for all their meals.

Until they grew all cold and blue, anaemic from head to heels.

Now, the goodly king had a war on hand and he wanted his men to fight, And he used to wish they would drop that dish that was making them thin and white.

He frequently would implore That they'd tough meat and gore,

But they hugged to their hearts their love for tarts, and ate them more and more. Now, the gracious king of whom they sing was a king who was very wise,

And he issued decree that his folks should be indulged in their vagaries; He wished to steer as his people dear preferred that he hold the helm.

So he ordered a poll of every soul that occupied his realm. And the count was made afire.

All the people sang one tune, Their king vouchsafed a boon.

"Since all have shown," spoke he from the throne, "that tarts are all they wish, I here proclaim that very same shall be the nation's dish."

My job as your king is nice, smooth things—I've had a real good year, And 'twill please me much to set 'em up, as Thanksgiving day is here.

So, my subjects dear, I now and here do issue my decree, And invite you all, both great and small, to have a tart on me."

So he issued commands and summoned his bands, and called a multitude Of baker men, who there and there contrived and mixed and stewed.

And with skill and art they built a tart that was big as half-a-dozen. With crust so high that it hid the eky, amountain of fell its core

They baked an oven tight, They baked a day and night;

Then there it stood, all fresh and good, an appetizing sight. Then the king gave forth command, and thereto set his hand.

That none might eat of fish or meat in all that loyal land. He placed his royal lock

On granary bin and flock, And he let them start on the public tart at exactly twelve o'clock.

His subjects cheered till their throats were seared, then each backed up his part, And, gracious my! how all did vie in loading up with tart.

They ate one week, they ate one month, as much as they did like, And voted their king the smoothest thing that ever came down the pipe.

They rendered praise and blessed his days, but the second month, alas! They all agreed on a change of feed, if 'twas nothing else but grass.

So they sought the kindly king, To him explained the thing,

Allowed his tart just reached the heart, as he'd heard them often sing. But they humbly begged he would lift the ban he had placed on things to eat,

And grant each grace to stuff his face with 'taters, corn and meat. With a twinkle in his eye,

His good king made reply That the tart had cost a lot of cash and could not be thrown by.

"So it's up to you, my subjects true; you know I've a kindly heart, But so long's it's there I'll tell you fair, you just must eat that tart!"

They ate for a week, but I must not speak of the scenes that did ensue. —So like the scenes on a storm-tossed ship on the breast of the ocean blue.

And at last they tore to the king once more, and beat their breasts and wept, And groveled and groined; and writhed and moaned, and on their stomachs crept.

With sighs and sobs of woe, They asked if they might, oh

Please burn the part of the dratted tart they really couldn't "go." With a kindly look their king he took compassion on their plight,

And passed decrees that the tart should be blown away—west that night.

Then his subjects carved some good, thick steaks, and chawed on rare, red meat, And they loudly swore that nevermore would they tackle a tart to eat.

And the good wise guy, their king, Made a moral from the thing.

And the moral holds to-day: If a Good Thing comes your way,

I beg you'll go discreetly slow ere the deuce and all's to pay.

Of else your plight may be like that of the folks of whom they sing, —Those chaps of old who tried to hold too much of a Real Good Thing.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I have convened the congress that it may consider the legislation necessary to put into operation the commercial treaty with Cuba, which was ratified by the senate at its last session and subsequently by the Cuban government. I deem such legislation demanded not only by our national honor, but by our national interest.

We cannot with propriety abandon the course upon which we have so wisely embarked. When the acceptance of the treaty amendment was required from Cuba by the action of the congress of the United States, this government thereby definitely committed itself to the policy of treating Cuba as occupying a unique position as regards this country. It is not possible for the island to become a free and independent republic she should stand in such close relations with us as in certain respects to resemble our system of international policy, and it is necessary to a certain degree become included within the lines of our economic policy. Situated as Cuba is, it would not be possible for this country to permit the strategic abuse of the island by any foreign military power. It is for this reason that certain limitations have been imposed upon the island's financial policy and that naval stations have been conceded by her to the United States.

The negotiations as to the details of these naval stations are on the eve of completion. They are so situated as to prevent any idea that they are a concession ever to use them against Cuba, or otherwise that, for the protection of the country from the assaults of foreign forces and for the better safeguarding of American interests in the waters south of us.

These interests have been largely increased by the consequences of the war with Spain. It is still further increased by the building of the Panama canal. They are both military and economic. The granting to us by Cuba of the naval stations above alluded to is of great importance from a military standpoint, and is proof of a good faith with which Cuba is treating us. Cuba has made great progress since her independence was established. She has advanced steadily in every way. She already stands high among the sister republics of the new world. She is loyally observing her obligations to us, and she is entitled to like treatment by us. The treaty submitted to you for approval secures to the United States economic advantages as great as those given to Cuba. Not a main in Cuban market is secured by our producers, which is already large, which is capable of great expansion and development of our export trade. It would indeed be short-sighted for us to refuse to take advantage of such an opportunity and to force Cuba into a position of disadvantage with other countries to our disadvantage.

This reciprocity treaty stands by itself. It is demanded on consideration of broad national policy as well as by the economic interests. It will do no harm to our industry. It will benefit many industries. It is in the interest of our people as a whole, both because of its importance from the broad standpoint of international policy and because economically it directly concerns us to develop and secure the rich Cuban market for our farmers, artisans, merchants and manufacturers. It is a desirable as a guaranty of the good faith of our nation towards her young sister republic to the south whose welfare must ever be closely bound with ours. We gave her liberty. We are knit to her by the memories of the blood and the courage of our soldiers who fought for her in war, by the memories of the wisdom and integrity of our administrators who started her on the path of peace and who started her so well on the difficult path of self-government. We must help her onward and upward, and helping her, we shall help ourselves.

The foregoing considerations caused the negotiations of the treaty with Cuba and its ratification by the senate. They now, with equal force, support the legislation by the congress which is necessary to render it operative. A failure to enact such legislation would come perilously near a repudiation of the pledged faith of the nation.

I transmit herewith the treaty as amended by the senate and ratified by the Cuban government.

SHERWOOD'S Sheep Tick Remedy.

Farmers, Attention!

We wish to call your attention to the necessity of getting ticks off sheep and lice off cattle in the fall of the year. If you will do this, you will not have ticks or lice in the winter or spring. A saving of fat and a good growth of lambs and fat sheep and cattle. Don't you think you can afford to expend a little money now to save dollars in growth and fat in your sheep and cattle in spring? Your Sight

TEST YOUR EYES.

Do you see objects as through a haze? Does the atmosphere seem smoky or foggy? Do spots or specks dance before your eyes? Do you see more clearly some days than others? These and many other symptoms will lead to blindness.

A SEA SHELL.

It's small and frail and dainty,
And when the sunshine plays
Upon it bright, it glimmers
With opalescent rays.

Entranced by the moonbeam,
It murmurs of the sea,
Interpreting its music
And all its witchery.

So delicate its beauty,
Of carved curve and line,
It seems a wistful fancy
Wind-fashioned of the brine.

THE LOST OPPORTUNITY

PART 3

In Three Parts

"Good morning," said Dittenhoeffer at length, and the little man's high-browed head nodded dismissively.

Dittenhoeffer hastened back to the Exchange. At the entrance he met his partner, Smith—the "Co." of D. D. Dittenhoeffer & Co.

"Bill, I've just got an order from Greener to sell 50,000 shares of Federal Telegraph."

"Wh-what?" gasped Smith. "Greener sent for me, asked me whether I'd accept an offer from him. I said yes, and he told me to sell 50,000 shares of Telegraph and I'm—"

"You've got him, Dan! You've got him!"

"You've got him, Dan; you've got him," exultantly.

"I'm going to cover my 20,000 shares with the first half of the order and sell the rest the best I can."

"Man alive, this is your chance! Don't you see you've got him? Smilie of the Eastern National Bank tells me there isn't a bank in the city will lend Greener money, and he needs it badly to pay the last $10,000,000 to the Indian Pacific bondholders. He's bit off more than he can chew, damn him!"

"Well, Bill, we'll treat Mr. Greener as we do any other customer," said Dittenhoeffer.

"But," began Smith with undisguised consternation; he was an honest man when away from the Street.

"Oh, I'll get him yet. This won't save him. I'll get him yet," with a confident smile.

It would have been very easy for him to take advantage of Greener's order to make a fortune. He was short 20,000 shares which he had put out at an average price of 93. He could have taken Greener's block of 50,000 shares and hurried it bodily at the market. Not even a gilt-edge stock could withstand the impact of such a fearful blow, and the price of Federal Telegraph doubtless would have broken 15 points or more, and he could easily have taken in his shorts at 75, or possibly even at 70, which would have meant a profit of half a million of dollars and a loss of a much-needed million to his arch foe, Greener. And if he allowed his partner to whisper in strict confidence to some friend how Dan was selling out a big line of Telegraph for Greener the "Room" would have gone wild and everybody would have hastened to sell, and the decline would have gone so much further as to cripple the little Napoleon possibly beyond all hope of recovery. Had Greener made the most colossal mistake of his life in giving the order to his enemy?

A score of madmen were shouting.

post, where a score of madmen were shouting at the top of their voices the prices they were willing to pay or to accept for varying amounts of the stock. He gave to twenty brokers orders to sell 1,000 shares each at the best obtainable price, and he himself, through another man, took an equal amount. On the next day he in person sold 20,000 shares, and on the third day the last 10,000 shares of Greener's order. This selling, the Street thought, was for his own account. It was all short stock; that is, his colleagues thought he was selling stock he didn't own, frustrating later on to buy it back cheaply. Such selling never has the depressing effect of "long" stock, because it is obviously that the short seller must sooner or later buy the stock in, insuring a future demand, which should exert a lifting influence on prices; for

He who sells what isn't his'n Must buy it back or go to pris'n.

And Dittenhoeffer was able to get an average of $36 per share for Greener's 50,000 shares of Federal Telegraph Company stock, for the Street agreed, with many headshakings, that Dan was becoming too reckless and Greener was a slippery little cuss; and the short interest must be simply enormous and the danger of a bad "squeeze" exceedingly great. Wherefore, they forebore to "whack" Telegraph. Indeed, many shrewd traders saw in the seeming weakness of the stock a trap of the wily little Napoleon and they "fooled" him by astutely buying Federal Telegraph.

With the $4,300,000 which he received from the sale of the big block of stock, Greener overcame his other troubles and carried out all his plans. It was a daring stroke, to trust to a stock broker's professional honor. It made him the owner of a great railroad system. Dutch Dan's attacks later did absolutely no harm. Greener had made an opportunity and Dittenhoeffer had lost one.

Customs of the Arabs.

Among the Arabs an interesting department of woman's duty is dairy work. This, like all other operations, is carried out on an old-fashioned and patriarchal plan. To make butter, for instance, a small sheepskin is filled with milk and tied to a ring in the wall. The woman then sits flat on the floor and rocks it to and fro till little balls of butter begin to form within. These grow larger and larger and accumulate and are finally brought out as one big lump. The remaining milk is then boiled on the fire with bits of meat. The male members of the family now come together, a large dish of cooked rice is placed before them and the boiled milk poured over it. Then, making balls of the mixture with his hands, each member quickly swallows his share and rises to wash his hands. This done, the girls and mother sit down and eat what the men are pleased to leave.

Threw the Judge Off.

Mortimer Menpes, the English artist, in a recent book on India tells of the burial conduct of some British soldiers toward the natives. He writes: "One day a subaltern got into a first-class railway carriage and found sitting there a 'colored gentleman.' In a fit of rage he seized the poor man of the shoulder and shouted out to him, 'Out you go, you black beast!' pitched him and his portmanteau on the platform. This, to his great astonishment, caused considerable disturbance; and when he inquired what the people meant by putting themselves out over a black man, an Englishman who was passing by answered: 'Well, perhaps, you don't know it, but you have thrown one of her majesty's judges out of the train.'"

Stampeded the Audience.

In the third century a Greek company of actors came to a city in Spain where plays had never been seen before. The honest country people were struck dumb with amazement and secret horror on seeing the tragedian advance on the stage with his mighty body and immovable face with the enormous open mouth. But when he lifted up his voice and began to speak with the sonorous clang of the tragic declamation there was a general panic among the public. All rushed out of the theater horror-stricken, as if he had been a demon.

WAS TREATING BOTH FAIRLY.

No Discrimination in the Decision of This Judge.

In an inquiry at La Plata this week before Mayor William H. Johnson and the board of aldermen, the mayor won a reputation for even-handed justice. The town marshal was before the mayor on a charge of permitting swearing on the streets and general negligence. Both sides put in objections and exceptions as if before a circuit judge. When the case was well under way, Mr. Park, who talked for the accused town marshal, commented on the mayor's ruling, as follows:

"It looks to me, Your Honor, like you're deciding these objections turn about. First you rule my way and then you rule for Jack Barker. That ain't no way to try a case."

"Ain't, eh? Suppose you want me to rule twice for you and once for Jack?" suggested the court, sarcastically.

"No, not that; but—"

"Ain't I let you argue half an hour over every darned objection?"

"You've been very considerate about that, Your Honor, but I've noticed it didn't do any good to argue unless it was my time to get the decision. And that's what I'm objecting to."

"Well," said the mayor, "this is your time to be overruled. Proceed with this here case."—Kansas City Star.

IN CARNEGIE'S EARLY DAYS.

When He Swept the Office as Part of His Daily Duties.

Andrew Carnegie told the other day of one of those little things in his early life which, as seen in the light of the great ironmaster's career since then, are so clearly indicative of the man and of the qualities which have made him so marked a figure of the times. It was of his start that he was speaking, his very earliest start, when he was sweeping out an office to begin his day.

"Yes," he said, "I was one of the sweepers, and who do you suppose were my fellows at that work? David McCargo, now superintendent of the Allegheny railroad; Robert Pitts, who was to rise so deservedly high in the service of the Pennsylvania road, and Moreland, who was to be one day city attorney of Pittsburgh."

"We all took turns, two each morning did the sweeping, and I well remember that Davis was so proud of his clean white shirt bosom that he used to spread over it an old silk handkerchief, which he kept for that sole purpose, and we other boys thought he was putting on airs. He was, as a matter of fact, for none of us had a silk handkerchief."—Philadelphia Press.

He Couldn't Make Up His Mind.

He thought of a hundred ways to rise, but he couldn't make up his mind; it was great to be rich and grand to be wise.

But he couldn't make up his mind; He thought he would cease to putter some day.

And bravely go forth to the furthest fray, Where worth proudly carries the honors away.

But he couldn't make up his mind.

He thought he would cease to go slouching around.

But he couldn't make up his mind; There were plenty of chances that might have been found.

But he couldn't make up his mind; He feared to try this and of that he said "No."

One way seemed so hard and another so slow.

He longed to win honors; he never did, though.

For he couldn't make up his mind.

He puttered on, thinking some time he would start.

But he couldn't make up his mind; The horse that once filled him shrank up in his heart.

He had never made up his mind; He walked with drooped shoulders, his hair became gray—

In a poor little corner they left him one day—

He had finally started, had left the old way.

At last he made up his mind. —S. E. Kiser.

How an Actor Trains.

One of the English actors who visited the United States first two years ago became so popular as a matinee hero, in spite of his obesity, that it seemed as if the day of the fat actor might have arrived at last. But the star evidently lost confidence in his ability to hold his audience if he grew any stouter. He returned last month thinner by thirty pounds than he had been. To retain these glimmering proportions no jockey ever went through more strenuous training than he. He takes a Turkish bath daily, and when there are matinees may be found in the hot room as early as 10 o'clock in the morning. He lingers there as long as health will permit and has his reward in looking many pounds lighter and some years younger when he steps on the stage. But the treatment is heroic and the actor expresses his own doubts as to the length of time he will be able to keep up such a sacrifice for the sake of his looks.

Why "Can Not" Is Popular.

"Have you ever noticed," said the man who finds fault, "how many people avoid the contraction 'can't' nowadays, and make use of the two words 'can not'? I have been so much struck by the prevalence of the latter expression that I took pains to inquire into the cause of it."

"I find that many people have adopted the double term because, having been brought up in a locality where the short sound of 'a' prevailed, they find it almost impossible to twist their tongues around 'can't,' and since they believe that plain, everyday 'can't' stamps them as being of inferior origin, they cultivate 'can not.'"

"That requires no short 'a,' and although its persistent use may save of affectation, it strikes the persons who can not get around 'can't' as a great improvement on the short 'a' 'can't.'"

We must practice now if we are to keep our eyes open in the hereafter.

As far as possible he wishes to have in this space the very idea you would like to find here. You are at liberty to send him any suggestion you may care to. His collection was started in 1872 and now contains unpublished information dating back to 1796, with systematic plans extending to 1952. Your short story of some example of foresight gives to him may prove to be your most valuable gift to others.

EASY TO KEEP WELL IF YOU KNOW YOURSELF.

Keeping well is mechanical. Eating, working, sleeping, temperate enjoyments and becoming animated over some useful subject cover the field. It is better to pay a doctor to tell you how to keep well than to treat you after you are sick. But so few do this the doctors hardly know what to say when one tries the plan.

A suggestive fact is that a woman with continually poor health will take a sick house plant and bring it up into a flourishing state, and a man who never sees a well day will take a sick horse and cure him. This illustrates the power of special knowledge applied. But there are people with special tendencies and inherited diseases, who break all rules of treatment and preventive science, though these exceptions are so few that no one need place himself in the list till he has tried a modern course of systematic exercise with proper diet and right remedies.

It took one doctor a long time to learn that bread with coffee or fruit with bread did not agree with him. He found that potato and fruit or coffee went all right together. You must know yourself and then do as well as you know.

A Chicago doctor tells me that a cold salt water bath before breakfast is a favorite with him. He thinks more of soups than meats. Recently radishes and lettuce gave him such severe indigestion that it required a milk diet for days to restore his stomach. But for some people milk is almost a poison, and for diet they eat Graham wafers or dry toast.

Another doctor tells me he can eat anything but liver and does not pay much attention to himself except to eat and sleep regularly. He has natural force, physical harmony, latent energy, and lives healthily automatically. It is just as important to have a little reserve strength as it is to have emergency money.

Some people seem to draw money and health toward themselves continually, while others appear to frighten these blessings off. There are few general rules. Some really need medicine often, but many will never be healthy as long as they continue dosing. It surely requires a clear head to decide for each case aright. Some are built to walk many miles a day and some are always injured by a common stroll. One man told me that muscular exercise always destroyed his appetite and that a couple hours' work in his study made him as hungry as a bear.

Many eat too much. A few do not eat nearly enough. Light foods and no cold drinks for summer. Keep away from very hot air if you are going into very cold air winters. Be extra careful about clothing during spring and fall. Plain food gives rich blood. Do not experiment with your appetite. If you know by experience useful information that would add to this or have a question you would like answered send it on. Eat for strength. Speak for truth. Live to spread good news.

The Pleasures of Memory.

Why does an old doctor, who is visiting the city and calling at a medical college, smile at the students and their zeal? He sees the old times over again when he may have wondered whether to go without his laundry or skip a meal. He sees the humorous experiences and the sweating times in store for these students. The first case one doctor had was an unusual one, difficult and requiring instant action.

The Old and New.

A publisher was ready to attend a convention. I thought of an idea useful to him in his work at the convention, but I felt that he had known it longer than I had. Finally I decided to give it to him anyway and then I found it was new to him and he was very thankful to me for it. Since then I have been braver.

Agents as Educators.

If you have time, listen and learn. Was not Washington a book agent? The person who would sell to you may grow famous and may not. By asking a few questions and being polite though you buy not you will know more and give for next door deal or hope to the one who is trying to earn a living.

HELP TO BETTER METHODS.

The daily sources of the elements of success are the places to look for profitable originality.

It is the restudying of a subject which brings out new thoughts having qualities of a winning nature. Self-control, independent good judgment, executive ability and good health are cardinal forces worthy of attention. The day is here when we must go into all the world and collect better methods, more effective ideas and profitable experiences for professional and commercial workers.

Win the heart, and the eye will read agate type. Study the people's needs and they will knock at your door. But it requires greater skill to successfully handle the people than it does to interest them.

Who is greater than the individual able and willing to speak to others for their benefit and his profit? Put your finger on some thought which you have read, heard or created about which you can say, "That is worth framing," and send it. What one person will throw into the waste basket another may hang on the wall or paste in his note book and perhaps put under a desk glass. We are not all alike on details, but many of us are willing to vote in favor of a correct motive, a clear head, a strong body and a belief that it is not necessary to be poor in order to be happy.

For Your Vacant Time.

You may not ride on trains very often—some do four to six times a day. You may not have lunch—some try to eat a lunch every day—some others always have breakfast, dinner, supper. But whoever you are, you have a minute a day vacant time and I would like to be able to coax you to devote that minute to studying with me for better methods in common life.

Inherited Inaccuracy.

A manufacturer tells me that his teamster took a dray load and two men three miles in the wrong direction because of transposition of numbers in the address. The father of the man who made this error, makes the same kind of errors when he goes to the telephone. But I know that accuracy exercises will conquer inherited inaccuracy.

Things Worth Re-reading.

A few years ago an Ohio newspaper of national fame had a request for a certain poem and readers were asked for a copy of it. A great many copies were sent in and as I remember it the paper reprinted the poem the second time on request of readers. It is personally helpful to re-read useful articles.

Hitting the Wrong Man.

One employee shoved a block so it fell on the head of another employee. The latter blamed an innocent person and without listening to explanations pitched into him. The innocent man proved to be the best fighter and came out victorious, and all the observers saw a first-class sermon illustrated.

Queer Disappointment.

When a person succeeds along favorite lines why is it that some friends who have predicted failure appear to be disappointed over the success, no matter how useful the work may be? We do not enjoy having our predictions go wrong and the apparent disappointment may be surprise.

Hopeful Imaginations.

A messenger boy was ordered to deliver several valuable books. No. 13 of the series was reported lost, as party to whom sent had not received it. During the search for it and until it was found the person most interested had just as much right to imagine cheerful as dismal results.

Special Day Resolutions.

Right now is a good time to get ready for next New Year's promises. I may have told you that the New Year's resolution most successful in my experience was made and practiced during December. Any day is the best day if it is the beginning of your successful work.

Are You Guarding?

Whether you are making a thousand dollars a day or a thousand dimes a year it is well to remember Gladstone's method and by exercise and stern self-denial seek to correct the inroads on the health which either idleness or hard work are bound in the long run to make.

When We All Whine.

When you get impatient with another person for whining, repeat to yourself that at times all whine. Some do it more than others, but all do it some. Charity suffers long and is kind because all of us at times are in need of charity.

Thoughtful Intoxications.

When I saw a porter push a drunken man out of a building and into the muddy gutter I wondered what other things than alcoholics people get intoxicated on. Useless ideas and foolish schemes rule in many heads. Past error is good building material for future use.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Mrs. Pare, wife of C. B. Pare, a prominent resident of Glasgow, Ky., says: "I was suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. Besides a bad back I had a great deal of trouble with the secretions, which were exceedingly variable, sometimes excessive and at other times scanty. The color was high, and passages were accompanied with a scalding sensation. Doan's Kidney Pills soon regulated the kidney secretions, making the color normal and banished the inflammation which caused the scalding sensation. I can rest well, my back is strong and sound and I feel much better in every way."

Queer Street Names.

Many British towns have distinctive and interesting names for their streets. London's Cheapside and Abchurch Lane are more than matched by oddities many times stranger. Bootle is a street in York, and Botchergate in Carlisle. Norwich is assertive of distinction in Gentleman's Walk, and Shrewsbury may stand almost at the head of a list of peculiarities with a street labeled Dogpole, which may or may not be related to Newcastle's Dogleap Stairs; but then Newcastle has Pudding Chare, and what may that signify?

The new train which was inaugurated November 8th, leaving St. Louis 8:20 p. m., and arriving Hot Springs 8 a. m., makes the run in less than twelve hours, which beats all previous records between these points. The turning train leaves Hot Springs 7:30 p. m., arriving St. Louis 7:10 a. m. Thoroughly up to date equipment. For tickets and further information write any agent of the Iron Mountain Route, or H. COOL IN FACE OF DANGER.

Woman's Presence of Mind That Fled the Burglar.

According to a San Francisco exchange a lady whose husband had gone out for the evening was about to retire for the night with her infant child when to her amazement she perceived the foot of a man beneath the bed. Instead of calling for assistance she coolly went to the child's cot and sat and sung till the little one went to sleep. Two hours then remained before her husband came home. He was surprised to find her waiting up, but when his wife handed him an envelope saying, "You might run and post this," the cause of her waiting was revealed. Instead of a letter the following was written on the envelope: "A burglar is under the bed, run fetch the police." The husband returned in a few minutes with a policeman and the man was arrested. The burglar had no idea that the lady knew he was there until the policeman pulled him out.

A Story With a Moral.

A parrot and a dog were left in a room together. The parrot, out of chief said to the dog, "Sit him." The dog, seeing nothing else, went for the parrot and tore out about half his tail feathers before he escaped to his perch. The parrot, after looking himself over and reflecting a moment said: "Poli, you talk too much. There are many people, old and young, who would do well to remember this story."

AN OLD TIMER.

Has Had Experiences.

A woman who has used Postum Food Coffee since it came upon the market eight years ago knows from experience the necessity of using Postum in place of coffee if one values health and a steady brain.

She says: "At the time Postum was first put on the market I was suffering from nervous dyspepsia and my physician had repeatedly told me not to use tea or coffee. Finally I decided to take his advice and try Postum and got a sample and had it fully prepared, finding it delicious to the taste. So I continued its use and very soon its beneficial effects convinced me of its value, for I got rid of my nervousness and dyspepsia."

"My husband had been drinking coffee all his life until it had affected his nerves terribly. I persuaded him to shift to Postum and it was easy to get him to make the change for Postum is so delicious. It certainly worked wonders for him."

"We soon learned that Postum does not exhilarate or depress and does not stimulate, but steadily and most effectively strengthens the nerves and the stomach. To make a long story short our entire family have now used Postum for eight years with complete satisfying results as shown in our fine condition of health, and we have noticed a rather unexpected improvement in brain and nerve power. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich."

Increased brain and nerve power ways follow the use of Postum in place of coffee, sometimes in a marked manner.

THE GIRL AT THE HALFWAY HOUSE

A STORY OF THE PLAINS
BY E. HOUGH, AUTHOR OF THE STORY OF THE COWBOY
Copyright, 1908, by D. Appleton & Company, New York

Franklin looked about him at the buildings of the little town, at the black loam of the monotonous and uninviting fields, at the sordid, set of undeveloping lives around him. He looked also at the white wagons lying with the sun. It seemed to him that somewhere out in the vast beyond the Missouri there beckoned to him a mighty hand, the index of some mighty force, imperious, forbidding pause.

The letter of Battersleigh to his and Captain Franklin fell therefore on soil already well prepared. He read it again and again in its somewhat formal dictation and informal orthography, was as follows:

My Dear Ned—I have the honor to state to you that I am safely arrived at well established at this place, and am fully disposed to remain. I must tell you that this is a great market for Western goods. Great numbers of these cattle are now coming in to this country from the far South, and since the Ry. yet unable to transport these animals as they arrive there is good numbers of them in the country here-out, as well as many strange persons curiously known as Cowboys or P-wumpers, which the same I may call a purely Heathen sort. These for the most part resort at the Cottage hotel, and there is no peace in the town at this present writing.

"For myself I have taken entry on one hundred and sixty Acres of land, and live a little way out from the town. Here I have my quarters under tent, following example of men, for as yet there are scarce a dozen houses within fifty miles. I have chosen this point because it was the furthest one yet reached by rail. I have been advised that it is highly desirable to be in at the beginning in this country if one is to Quixote, but he never forgets a friend. Buffalo and Indians, railroads and hotels—it must at least be a land of contrasts!"

CHAPTER VI.

Edward Franklin, Lawyer.

Edward Franklin had taken up his law studies in the office of Judge Bradley, the leading lawyer of the little village of Bloomsbury, where Franklin was born, and where he had spent most of his life previous to the time of his enlistment in the army. Judge Bradley was successful, as such matters go in such communities, and it was his open boast that he owed his success to himself and no one else.

Thirty-five years earlier, a raw youth from old Vermont, Hollis N. Bradley had walked into the embryonic settlement of Bloomsbury with a single law book under his arm and naught but down upon his chin. He pleaded his first cause before a judge who rode circuit over a territory now divided into three congressional districts. He won his first case, for his antagonist was even more ignorant than he. As civilization advanced he defended fewer men for stealing hogs and more for murder and adultery. His practice grew with the growth of the population of the country about him. He was elected county attorney, local counsel for the railroad, and Judge of the Circuit Court. He was mentioned for gubernatorial honors, and would perhaps have received the party nomination but for the breaking out of the civil war. Not fancying the personal risks of the army, he hired a substitute, and this sealed his political fate, for Illinois at that time did not put in power men who sent substitutes to the war.

It was an immemorial custom in Bloomsbury for the youth who had aspirations for a legal career to "read law" in Judge Bradley's office. Two of his students had dropped their street lay in perspective before the window, and along it, out beyond the confines of the town, there reached the flat monotony of the dark prairie soil. A dog crossed the street, pausing midway of the crossing to scratch his ear. The cart of the leading grocer was hitched in front of his store, and an idle citizen or two paused near by to exchange a morning greeting. All the little, uneventful day was beginning, as it had begun so many times before here in this little, uneventful town, where the world was finished, never more to change. Franklin shuddered. Was this, then to be his life?

There came a regular tread upon the stair, as there had always for years come at this hour of half past seven in the morning, rain or shine. Judge Bradley entered, tall, portly, smooth shaven, his silk hat pushed back upon his brow, as was his fashion. Franklin turned to make the usual morning salutation.

"Good morning, Ned," said the judge, affably.

"Good morning, Judge," said Franklin. "I hope you are well."

"Yes, thank you. Nothing ever the matter with me. How are things coming?"

"Oh, all right, thank you."

This was the stereotyped form of the daily greeting between the two. Judge Bradley turned as usual to his desk, but, catching sight of the letter still held in Franklin's hand, remarked carelessly:

"Got a letter from your girl?"

"Not so lucky," said Franklin. "From a friend."

Silence resulted. Judge Bradley opened his desk, took off his coat and hung it on a nail, after his custom, turned over the papers for a moment and remarked absentmindedly, and more to be polite than because the matter interested him, "Friend, eh?"

"Yes," said Franklin, "friend, out West," and both relapsed again into silence. Franklin once more fell to gazing out of the window, but at length turned toward the desk and pulled over his chair to a closer speaking distance.

"Judge Bradley," said he, "I shouldn't wonder if I could pass my examination for the bar."

"Well, now," said the judge, "I hope you can. That's nice. Go in to hang out your shingle, eh?"

"I might, if I got my license."

"Oh, that's easy," replied the other; "it's mostly a matter of form. No trouble about it—not in the least."

"I am clear in my own mind that I don't know much about law," said Franklin, "and I should not think of going up for examination if that ended my studies in the profession. If I were intending to go into practice here, sir, or near by, I should not think of applying for admission for at least another year. But the fact is, I'm thinking of going away."

"Go in away?" Judge Bradley straightened up, and his expression if anything was one of relief. He had his own misgivings about this grave-faced and mature young man should he go into the practice at the Bloomsbury bar. It was well enough to encourage such possibilities to take their test in some other locality. Judge Bradley therefore became more cheerful. "Go in away, eh?" he said.

"Where to?"

"Out West," said Franklin, unconsciously repeating the phrase which was then upon the lips of all the young men of the country.

"Out West, eh?" said the judge, with still greater cheerfulness. "That's right, that's right. That's the place to go to, where you can get a better chance. I came West in my day myself, though it isn't West now; and that's how I got my start. There's ten chances out there to where there's one here, and you'll get better pay for what you do. I'd advise it, sir—I'd advise it, yes, indeed."

"I think it will be better," said Franklin calmly.

The Diet Fad.

Appropos, the diet craze of the last two or three years may not and does not perform all that it promises for those who listen to the voice of the medical or other faddist, says the London World, but from its extravagances may come ultimate good, and another generation may reap happily where we have sown. The time may come, a great continental doctor believes, when the science of dieting will be so perfected that we shall not merely be able, as we do now, to keep people alive much longer, but we shall like- wise keep them in a useful condition. Octogenarians will retain their faculties to the full, senility will be avoided, and, if perhaps, grandfathers and grandmothers do not contrive to preserve their youthful appearance to the end, they will at least, so we are assured, be as clear-brained at 77 as at 27, and thus, with the advantage of ripe experience, they will help on the work of more youthful brains and temper the follies of the rising generation.

A Man's Time to Die.

When a man appeared the other day before Justice Blume, in Chicago, and asked for protection against some neighbors who had threatened to kill him, the justice refused to grant the request. When asked for his reasons he said that when it came a man's time to die he would die, and not before. He announced himself as a fatalist and said belief came from his own experiences. He says he has passed through seven accidents, three hold-ups, one fire, two drownings, 150 falls, pneumonia, concussion of the brain, and all the dangers of several battles of the civil war. "If all those things won't kill a man," said the justice, "there is a special Providence looking after him."

ARTIST KEPT FUR MANTLE.

Valuable Fur Garment a Reward for Successful Duplicity.

The late artist, Hans Canon, once painted a Russian prince in a magnificent fur mantle, which took his fancy so completely that he endeavored to hit on a plan by which he might retain possession of it. On sending home the portrait he omitted to return the garment and to the letter requesting him to do so he made no reply. One day, when looking out of a window, he saw the prince coming toward his house. Hastily slipping into the garb, Canon sat down in an armchair near the fire. The prince, who had come for his coat, started on seeing Canon groaning and trembling at the fireside. "What is the matter with you?" he asked. "Oh," groaned Canon, "I don't know what it is, but I feel so weak and wretched, and I cannot get warm. Two days ago my brother died of smallpox and I am a bit nervous about myself." The artist kept the coat.

The Value of Nitrogen.

The chemists of the agricultural department have shown that ability to fix the nitrogen, which is infinitely abundant in the air and apply it to the worn-out fields of the world, will enable mankind to cultivate what is practically virgin soil forever. The only available nitrogen is the nitrate of soda beds in the rainless strip between the Andes and the Pacific, which is owned or controlled by the Chileans. This niter is a product of guano, there being no rain to dissolve it out. A plant at Niagara Falls is taking nitrogen from the air by electrolysis, but not yet in commercial quantity.

The Doctor's Statement.

St. John, Kan., Nov. 16.—This town has a genuine sensation in the case of a little boy, the son of Mr. and Mrs. William McBride. Dr. Limes, the attending physician, says:

"Scarlet Fever of a very malignant type brought this child very near to death and when the fever left him he was semi-paralyzed in the right leg and right arm. He also lost hearing in his right ear, and his mind was much affected."

"His parents tried another treatment for a time and when I was recalled I found that he was having spells very like Epilepsy and was very bad and gradually growing worse. I advised the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills and in a short time the child began to improve. Inside of a week the nervous spasms or epileptic seizures ceased altogether."

Mr. and Mrs. McBride have made a sworn statement of the facts and Dr. Jesse L. Limes has added his sworn statement saying that Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else cured the fits.

Bible in Walnut Shell.

A wonderful curiosity was the little Bible in a walnut shell the size of a small hen's egg, an account of which has been preserved among the Harleian manuscripts, and which Mr. Disraeli quoted as "a rare piece of work brought to pass by Peter Bales, an Englishman and a clerk of the Chancery." It was quite unreadable without a magnifying glass, but contained as many leaves as a large Bible, and as much reading matter on each page.

Soldiers and a Girl.

A little French girl has become the pet of her father's regiment. Her father was called up for service as a reservist in the Third engineers at Arras, and, being a widower, he arrived carrying his little daughter, who, he said, had no one but himself to care for her. The colonel gave orders that the little one should be provided for and the soldiers have christened her "the daughter of the regiment."

The Deadly Mosquito.

The mosquito which injects yellow fever with its proboscis bites by day as well as by night, and is called the day or striped mosquito. It is found chiefly in cities, where it breeds in any chance receptacle of water. The eggs are laid in standing water, and, although the receptacle may dry up, the eggs do not desiccate, but will hatch as soon as it again contains water. The larvae resemble those of other mosquitoes, and are readily killed by a kerosene film on the surface of the water.

VASELINE.

Everybody knows the great value of this remedy in the household, but everybody does not know that the imitations of it, which some second class druggists dishonestly palm off on their customers, have little or no value. What should be understood by the public is, that it is not a mere question of comparative value between "Vaseline" and the imitations, but that the imitations do not effect the wonderful healing results of the world renowned "Vaseline," and that they are not the same thing nor made in the same way. Besides this, many of the imitations are harmful, irritant and not safe to use, while true Vaseline is perfectly harmless.

Perfect safety therefore lies in buying only original bottles and other packages put up by the Chesebrough Manufacturing Co. Attention is called to their Capsicum Vaseline advertised in another column.

AN ANECDOTE OF GLADSTONE.

Demonstrating His Concern for the Amenities of Life.

In his life of Gladstone Mr. Morley quoted a quaint letter written by the premier to Lord Granville in 1886 after the former's Irish home rule policy had alienated most of the peers of England. There was to be a dinner in honor of the queen's birthday, and the Prince of Wales was to come and to bring Prince Albert Victor with him. "But," wrote Mr. Gladstone, "his position would be very awkward if he comes and witnesses a great nakedness of the land." Could Lord Granville help by persuading dissentient peers to put in an appearance for this occasion only? Mr. Morley, with perhaps the suspicion of a smile between the lines, records that "the prince was unable to be present and so the great nakedness was by him unseen."

Mrs. Rosa Adams, niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A., wants every woman to know of the wonders accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot tell you with pen and ink what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me, suffering from the ill peculiar to the sex, extreme lassitude and that all gone feeling. I would rise from my bed in the morning feeling more tired than when I went to bed, but before I used two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began to feel the buoyancy of my younger days returning, became regular, could do more work and not feel tired than I had ever been able to do before, so I continued to use it until I was restored to perfect health. It is indeed a boon to sick women and I heartily recommend it. MRS. CECILIA STOWE, Orator, Entre Nous Club. 176 Warren Avenue, CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 22, 1903. For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.
