Showing What's Doing In All Sections of the State ********************

The Grand Rapids Scandal.

The story of the Lake Michigan water deal with all its sensational details vas told Monday in the Grand Rapids police court by Laut K. Salsbury, former city attorney, on the examination of State Senator David E. Burns, who is charged of receiving a bribe of $200. Salsbury's recital occupled two hours, and was made coolly while looking into the very faces of the men with whom he says he planned the most wholesale and remorseless robbery ever attempted upon any community. He talked easily and without hesitation, just as though he was telling the most simple story in the world. He placed the di-vision of the money as follows:

The Greatest Game.

It was simply a glorious game of football which the University of Michigan played in Chicago on Thanksgiving day before 18,000 spectators, defeating the University of Chleago 28 to 0. A snow storm delayed the game, and when the grounds were cleared of the snow and straw, the gridiron was walled in by snow breast high, Hammond, of Chicago, who played on the U. of M., covered himself with glory and gave his home crowd an exhibition of playing that was startling to them. Thirteen of the 28 points were made pension, by him, Heston, the Californian, did great work as a ground gainer. It was that he steals the chimneys off the son, and Michigan University still holds the championship. Rah!

Holbrook Acquitted.

After being out for nearly twelve John Herisch, of Calumet, asked for hours, the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty in the case of John Holbrook, charged with attempting to bribe one of the jurors at the trial of Eli Sutton for conspiracy in 1900. One of the principal causes of the verdict. it is believed, was the general unreadiness of the jurors to accept any of Sutton's testimony as the truth. The secret manner in which the case against Holbrook was worked up also had its effect. Prosecuting Attorney McArthur was considerably surprised at the verdict, but will not say whether there will be any further prosecutions in the

The parents are nearly crazed with grief at the terrible occurrence.

The Farmers' Meeting.

The annual meeting of the State Farmers' Clubs association will be held in Lansing during the meeting of the State Grange next week. Ex-Senator Horatio S. Earle will address the farmers on the good roads question, and State Superintendent of Public Instruction Fall will talk on educational matters. The program includes a number of interesting papers, but there is no hint that political questions will be taken up, as in the past.

Slaughter of Deer.

The burters are just returning from their harvest, and all come in pretty well sat'sfied. This year has seen some great slaughtering in the woods, nearly every hunter bringing his "limited three." A party of hunters, numbering 90, G. A. R., a check for $31.73. This 10, brought in 27 deer, a good snowfall materially belping the slaughter. A hunter once finding a track, it would ter, be almost impossible for the deer to get away.

Millions of Eggs.

The annual take of fish eggs for the Northville fish commission station will be completed this week. Superintendent Clark and his assistants have been hustling for some weeks to secure the supply and have so far brought in 25,000,000 lake trout eggs, 150,000 Loch Levin and 6,000 brook trout eggs. The $1,320,000 whitefish eggs taken by troit river will be taken to the Detroit station for hatching.

Hours passed before the heavy eye fids of the child were raised. A pair of wondering blue eyes looked up at the white-capped nurse. Steadily they regarded her and then in an awestruck whisper he said, "Is you an angel? Is this heaven? Where's God and mother?" Nurse Jennings stroked the little white face as she answered tenderly, "No, dear! You are not in beaven, you are in St. Michael's hospital. You were hurt by the cars and they brought you here to make you well. Our kind Dr. Peyton saw you when the car struck you. Just lie still and do as we tell you, and you will soon be well."

"Where's Jinny?" whispered the child. "Did she come, too?" "Who's Jinny?" smilingly asked the

"Jinny's my sister-she's nine and I'm ten and the baby's three. I take care of them," said the child with a faint touch of pride in his voice. "We live under the Larimer street viaduct. Mother's dead and father's in jail for bein' drunk. Poor father-he felt so bad when mother died he ain't been home much since, so I sell papers and Jinny takes care of the baby and Mis' Marini's twins, next door, while Mis' Marin! washes. We have lots to eat cause Mis' Marini gives us all the veg'tables we want-what's stale, you know, when Mr. Marini gets thre' drivin' his veg'table wagon. Oh, I must get well soon. Please let Jinny know where I am, 'cause she'll worry and the baby'll cry for me." There was an exultant thrill in his weak young voice as he said, "She calls me her 'Daddy Dimmie." The nurse saw a sudden pallor overspread the young face and she said hastily, "I will send word to Jinny, but you must not talk any more. Go to sleep now." face became pale as marble as she gazed at Jimmie and she suddenly darted forward to the bedside and dropping upon her knees buried her face in the snowy coverlid. "Oh. Jimmie," she wailed, "is you agoin' to leave me and the baby and go to find mother? Don't go, Jimmie! Stay with me and baby! Oh, don't go, Jimmie! don't go!" Strong but tender hands lifted the child to her feet and hurried her sobbing from the roomfor the excitement might be fatal to the little sufferer who lay on his bed not knowing why it was that he could not "feel his feet," as he said, in his ignorance that both limbs had been amputated ha'ow the knees. "Please can I say good-bye to Jinny before she goes," he whispered. The brave, little lad looked up at his sobbing sister with such a wealth of love in his blue eyes as he said feebly, "Don't cry, Jinny. They're awful good to me here! I 'most thought I was in heaven at first. You tell Mis' Marini I'll be well soon and come home all right -and Jinny"-he whispered in a scarcely audible voice-"don't tell father bout me, he might worry. Kiss me, baby-kiss Dimmie," and as the children were led from the room the wan little face was turned to the wall with a sigh of content.

The afternoon waned and night came. A slight flush crept into the pale face and the hot blood surged through his veins. Now he was warm and happy as stood on the streets in the clear bright sunshine calling "News" and "Publican." Then he heard the rumble of the cruel car that had almost crushed out his young life as he fell. Again he was in the little room at home eating the simple food that Jinny was able to prepare. "Come and kiss your little brother good-bye," said the nurse as she softly led them to the bedside. Out from the hospital went Jinny with her young heart so bruised and sore, and her young eyes so dim with tears that she could scarce see her way as she walked homeward leading the baby.

Night and its solemn quiet brooded over the great hospital. Dr. Peyton and Nurse Jennings sat by the little bed in "number thirteen." Suddenly the eyes of the child opened and from their questioning depths he gazed up into the faces of the doctor and nurse. "Where's Jinny and the baby? I got a quarter hid away in my shoe to buy the baby some new red shoes for Sunday-did you put it away?" he said appealingly. The nurse's eyes were moist but she said soothingly-"Yes, Jimmie, your money is all safe. I'll take care of it." A smile of content curved the child's lips and he closed his eyes-dozing fitfully as the night wore on. At midnight the change came. The child babbled of "mother" and "heaven" and "Jinny and the baby." "Jinny," he called softly where is you? I can't see you! Mother's here, and she's calling us to go to her. There's music like they have at church, and tall lilles like we saw at Easter. I can 'most smell the lilies. Ain't the music just grand Jinny? Oh, where's the baby, Jinny! Have you got her red shoes? And "Dad dy Dimmie" had gone in at the open door.

A STUDY OF SHE.

Philosopher's Moralizing on the "Eter nal Feminine."

The more we study She the more we don't understand how it is that Che is able to twist us around her little finger whenever She feels like it. But She is.

For whom is it that in childhood's happy days we tight with a boy three sizes larger than ourselves, and get so severely punished that we can't sit up for a week? Why, for She-and She only laughs at us for our pains.

Who is it that devours all our spare change in the shape of candies and flowers, and calls for more and gets them, too? She.

For whom do we linger at stagedoors with boquets, to purchase which we have to endure a fortnight's martyrdom in lieu of lunch? She.

Who is it that at the railway restaurant deels out the soul-destroying saedwich and the death-dealing bun? 'Tis She every time. If it were He we would slap him on the spot and glory in the deed.

Who accepts our hard-earned gold on the pretense of being a first-class cook, and then breils our steak in a frying-pan and boils our coffee an hour? She.

Who is it that accepts our theater tickets, our suppers, our boquets, and our devotion, and then goes off and marries another fellow? She-and for this we cught to forgive her a good deal.

Who, we ask, is it that when we employ her as typist spells summer with one "m" and February with only one "r," and yet escapes without censure? It is She. Ah, yes! It is She.

Mistake of French Diplomats. It is the custom in Abyssinia for all foreign missions to bring presents to King Menelik. The French some years ago brought a lot of Parisian mechanical toys-sheep that squeaked, pigs that ran about on their hind legs and dolls that talked. They thought such things would be certain to tickle the fancy of a dusky king Menelik looked at them for a moment with disgust and rage, then he thrust them aside. "Do you think," he asked, "that I am a child or a savage, that I should delight in toys?" The Russian and English emissaries showed a truer insight into his character. They brought him Mauser pistols, revolvers and the latest and best rifles they could buy. He was delighted. "These are gifts worthy to be received by a warrior and a king," he declared. The influence of the Russians and English over Menelik dates from that lucky incident

Little Child Played Peacefully With a Deadly Copperhead.

Horror-stricken, Mrs. Edward Alpaugh of Washington, N. J., fainted when she went into a neighbor's yard and saw her little daughter, Ruth, 5 years old, feeding a copperhead snake three feet long.

Mrs. Alpaugh took her little daughter with her when she went to make a call on Mrs. Richard Valentine, one of her neighbors. Little Ruth went into the yard to play. After a while she was missed and the two women went to look for her.

Ruth was finally found seated upon the ground in a patch of sunflowers. In her lap was the snake with its body coiled and its head standing up close to the child's face. She was handling the reptile, unconscious of danger. Mrs. Alpaugh screamed aftrightedly and fainted.

Mrs. Valentine, more composed, ran to the woodhouse and got a hatchet. The snake, which had been quiet before the commotion, started to get away when Mrs. Valentine approached. She pluckily attacked it and chopped off its head.

Painter's Fearful Fall Ends Up in Hysterical Laughter.

George Sofelous, a young painter, sat in a swinging chair painting the city water tower at Vineland, N. J., 135 feet above the earth, while a big crowd watched him. Suddenly the crowd sent up a cry of dismay. One of the hooks which held the painter's flimsy seat broke and let him slide down with sickening rapidity.

The spectators turned their heads to shut out the sight, but they were aroused by a loud hysterical laugh from Sofelous. In his descent the seat of his trousers caught in the sterp prongs of an iron railing which ornaments the outside of the tower about half way up, and there he hung. Wriggling about gingerly, the young man managed to pull himself up to the railing and make his way to the

THE BENEFIT OF WHISTLING.

Writer in Medical Journal Advocates Making of Melody.

When the throes of indigestion and 'ployed at the Fallas factory. the qualms of dyspepsia are making your life miserable, just purse the lips and whistle a brisk, merry tune, says Medical Talk.

Not a muffled, doleful, half hearted whistle, but a whistle so deep and voluminous that the whole house will be filled with the sound.

Don't be afraid somebody will hear you. Let them hear you. It will do them good. It will enliven and cheer them while it cures you.

Indigestion and dyspepsia always make one feel gloomy and depressed and morbid and gloomy. Everything seems to go wrong and doubtless you won't feel one bit like whistling. But no matter, whistle anyhow.

If possible, go out into the fresh air and do your whistling. If you can't go outdoors, just open the window wide and whistle with all your might. Any old tune will do, so you put life and vigor into it.

Whistle, whistle, Wheep it going. Don't get tired. Go on with all your might. Harder, harder.

The first thing you know the stomach will have righted itself, the liver will be working good and strong, the blood will be bounding through your veins, your brain will be clear and vigorous, and you will feel twenty years younger.

Diseases Caused by Measles.

Dr. Miles' Restorative Tonic and Nervine Cured After Thirty-one Years.

"I was a perfectly healthy young man up to February 1865. When my regiment was in Camp Randall I was taken sick with the measles and I did not enjoy good health up to the time I used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Tonic in 1896. Doctors have told me it came from inactivity of the liver. I cannot say how many physicians did treat me but have had all kinds. Dieting has never helped me. Biliousness, attacks of headache, rheumatism, nasal catarh, hay fever, asthma, and chronic diarrhoea; have all taken their turn with me. Thanks to the Nervine and Tonic I am completely restored to health. I have also used Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills with good results and I think that the Dr. Miles Remedies are perfect."—Rev. Hiram Bender, Sparta, Wis.

"I want to say a few good words for Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. I have been troubled very much with insomnia since I made the change to the new paper and on account of this have tried various remedies without relief. I was finally induced by a wholesale druggist, a personal friend of mine, to try Nervine. I can assure you it has done me a lot of good. I do not find it necessary to use it regularly now but occasionally when I find that I am excessively nervous and restless I again take it up as I always keep a supply on hand. It has never head, Ned! Git up his head! The murderin', haythin' brute! Kill him! Ride him out!"

And ride him out Franklin did, perhaps as much by good fortune as by skill, though none but a shrewd horseman would have hoped to do this feat. Hurt and jarred, he yet kept upright, and at last he did get the horse's head up and saw the wild performance close as quickly as it had begun. The pony ceased his grunting and fell into a stiff trot, with little to indicate his hidden pyrotechnic quality. Franklin whirled him around and rode up to where Battersleigh and Curly had now joined. He was a bit pale, but he pulled himself together well before he reached them and dismounted with a good front of unconcern. Battersfeigh grasped his hand in both his own and greeted him with a shower of welcomes and of compliments. Curly slapped him heartily upon the shoulders.

"You're all right, pardner," said he. "You're the d-dest best pilgrim that ever struck this place, an' I kin lick ary man that says differ'nt. He's yore horse, now, shore."

"And how do ye do, Ned? God bless ye!" said Battersleigh a moment later. after things had become more tranquil. "I'm glad to see ye; glad as ivver I was in all me life to see a livin' soul! He took counsel of Curly. to ride it out if it lay within him so the cowboy, who proved guardian and benefactor. Curly forthwith produced a workman, a giant Mexican, a half-witted moso, who had followed the cow bands from the far South west, and who had hung about Curly's divil to a finish, me boy! Git up his own place as a sort of menial, bound to do unquestionably whatever Curly bade. This curious being, a very colossus of strength, was found to be possessed of a certain knowledge in building houses after the fashion of that land-that is to say, of sods and earthen unbaked bricks-and since under his master's direction he was not less serviceable than docile, it was not long before the "claim" of Battersleigh was adorned with a comfortable house fit for either winter or summer habitation.

Even in the "first year" the settler of the new West was able to make his living. He killed off the buffalo swiftly, but he killed them in numbers so desperately large that their bones lay in uncounted tons all over a desolated empire. First the hides and then the bones of the buffalo gave the settler his hold upon the land, which perhaps he could not else have Franklin saw many wagons coming and unloading their cargoes of bleached bones at the side of the railroad tracks. There was a market for all this back in that country which had conceived this road across the desert. Franklin put out a wagon at this industry, hauling in the fuel and the merchandise of the raw plains. He bought the grim product of others who were ready to sell and go out the earlier again.

Franklin wiped his forehead as he replied to Battersleigh's running fire of salutations.

"Well, Battersleigh," he said, "I must say I've been pretty busy ever since I got here, and so far as I can tell at this date, I'm much disposed to think this is a strange and rather rapad sort of country you've got out

CHAPTER VIII.

The Beginning.

Franklin's foot took hold upon the soil of the new land. His soul reached out and laid hold upon the sky, the harsh flowers, the rasping wind. He gave, and he drank in. Thus grew the people of the West.

"Think you, Ned, my boy," said Battersleigh, one day, as they stood at the tent door-"think you, this old gray world has been inhabited a million years, by billions of people, and yet here we have a chance to own a part of it, each for himself, here, at this last minute of the world's life! Do you mind that, what it means? Never you think a chance like that'il last forever. Yet here we are, before the law, and almost antedatin' the social ijee. It's the beginnin', man, it's the very beginnin' of things, where we're standin' here, this very blessed day of grace. It's Batty has traveled all his life, and seen the lands, but never did Batty live till places. Not sinless was this society tained to the love of the Almighty, gling street. These new edifices were for the most part used as business places, the sorts of commerce being but two-"general merchandise," which meant chiefly saddles and firearms, and that other industry of new lands which flaunts under such signboards as the Lone Star, the Happy Home, the Quiet Place, the Cowboy's Dream and such descriptive nomenclature. Of fourteen busines houses, nine were saloons, and all these were pros-

One by one, then in a body, as though struck by panic, the white tents of the railroad laborers vanished, passing on yet farther to the West, only the engineers remaining at Ellisville and prosecuting from the haven of the stone hotel the work of continuing the line. The place of the tents was taken by vast white-topped wagons, the creaking cook carts of less nomadic man. It was the begin- | master used to come home. ning of the great cattle drive from the Southern to the Northern ranges, a strange, wild movement in American life which carried in its train a set of conditions as vivid and peculiar as they were transient.

Ellisville lay at an eddy in the Plains and gathered toll of the strange driftwood which was then afloat. Though the chutes at the railway were busy, yet other herds of cattle passed Ellisville and wandered on north, crowding at the heels of the passing Indians, who now began to see their own cattle to be doomed. The main herd of the buffalo was now reported to be three or four days' drive from Ellisville, and the men who killed for the railroad camps uttered loud complaints. The skinhunting still went on. Great wagons, loaded with parties of rough men, passed on out, bound for the inner haunts, where they might still find their prey. The wagons came creaking back loaded with bales of the shaggy brown robes, which gave the skin-hunters money with which to join the cowmen at the drinking meeting. CHAPTER IX.

The New Movers Far away, across the wide grav plain, appeared a tiny dot, apparer ly in unimportant fixture of the landcape. An hour earlier it might not have been observed at all by even the keenest eye, and it would have needed yet more time to assure an observer even now that the dot was moving object. Presently an occasional side-blown puff of dust added a certain heraldry, and thus finally the white-topped wagon and its plodding team came fully into view, crawling ever persistently from the East to the West.

Meantime, from the direction of the north, there came traveling across the prairie another cloud of dust more rapid than that stirred up by the slownoving emigrant wagon. Sam, the stage driver, was crossing on his regular buckboard trip from Ellisville to Plum Centre, and was now nearly half-way on his journey. Obviously the courses of these two vehicles must intersect, and at the natural point of this intersection the driver of the faster pulled up and waited for the other. "Movers" were not yet so common in that region that the stage driver, natural news agent, must not pause for investigation.

The driver of the wagon, a tall dark man, drew rein with a grave salutation, his tired horses standing with drooping heads while there took place one of the pregnant conversations of the plains.

"Mornin', friend," said Sam. "Mornin', sir." said the other. "Which way you headin', friend?"

asked Sam. "Well, sir," came the answer, slowly, "I rather reckon you've got me. I've just been movin' on out. I want to locate, but I reckon my team could travel a little further if they had to." This with a certain grimness in his smile, as though he realized the whimsicality of the average motive which governed in that day in quests like

When I saw the word "weird' printed where the word "three" should have been the only thing I could do was to invest it in this kind of a re-

From past experience I have found that investment of trouble is an economic way of handling it. A man sold me a fifty-cent microscope for three dollars. When I found out the value of it I told the story for a New York magazine and they sent me $2.85. That was fifteen years ago, and ever since then I bave felt that troub!e might in some cases be a key which would open a door to desirable opportunities. Soon after the microscope experience I found a log in a path which led from a railway station to my home. If the train happened to be late I would use that path in the night, and if the night happened to be dark that log was apt to make me trouble.

When my people found out about the price of the log and the quality of the wood they felt that I needed some kind of an education that I had not secured. But when that New York magazine sent me 60 per cent more for the written report than I paid for the log, my people began to think that I did know something.

The other day I went to a suburban station at 1:30 p. m., and the day was Thursday. I soon found that the 1:35 train which I had come to take ran Saturdays only. This made me feel like framing a sentence for my own use, and I soon saw that the information at the top of a column is as important as the train time in the col-

> Recently, while at a hotel in a southwestern town, I went to the letter box late in the evening to post some mail. The box was near the clerk's desk in the hotel, and on it hung a card. The hook which held the card was a large piece of hoop iron bent at both ends. I had read the card before, and yet at the time I was so thoroughly occupied with some foreign subject that with considerable effort I pulled down the shutter and dropped in my mail.

With that act my mind dropped the foreign subject, and seemed to be card on the box, which said, "Hand mail to the clerk for trains east and Just how I could get that shutter

A CHEMISTRY ANALYSIS.

Men can be divided into personal qualifies just as a grain of wheat can be divided into elements.

There is organic and inorganic chemistry, and we might have a third chemistry dealing with the elements of personality.

The only reason for giving these elements of the man himself is to state the subjects to be studied. The fruitful part of research is the finding of useful information on the daily sources of the desirable qualities.

In an aggressive effort to grow desirable forces the undesirable are overcome, displaced, crowded out and starved.

Few men are perfect, "rather no man is perfect," few men approach perfection. Are not the strong tempted to be dishonest and the weak tempted to inactivity?

Certainly men should learn to work together, to help each other, to look to each other for each other's wisdom. The plunger and the over-conservative should recognize peculiar qualities of each other and unite to make a strong and very successful team.

Inherited tendency, environment and education compound a man just as a chemist would compound a product of the laboratory.

Desire and reason enable a man to resist, counteract and conquer enemies within and around him. Have to Dodd's Kidney Pills all the crods you noticed that some very strong for his restoration to good health." men physically are most particularly tempted to be mental imitators, moral cowards and treacherous friends? In going among all classes of work ers and all degrees of mental altitude, I find some men are unconscious spe cialists in the management of them selves. They have had the companionship of wise men and absorbed wisdom and thus acquired intuition. Some become wise also by getting down and helping others up.

A young man alighted from a train and had just twenty-five cents in his pocket. This money he paid the hackman to carry him to his uncle's home.

The young man's father was a poor business man. The uncle was a good business man. The young man became a good business man and a very successful lender and collector of money

The young man's mother may have given him commercial elements of success, but the uncle's instruction. year after year, must be recognized as of great value. A banker told me that a certain amount of executive ability could be acquired by instruction and attention.

An advertising concern starts with a half million dollar capital and loses it. Another concern starts with three thousand dollars and makes a half million. Why and how should be worthy of careful investigations and beginners should respect reports that are unbiased.

A man comes to town with four million dollars and loses all of it. Another man starts on four dollars and builds up a successful business. The details of the elements of such cases contain basic truth men should know more about. And to all such these letters are endeavoring to reach. Some days the climbing is slow and the products small, but the latter are beginning to amount to something. What you put down in black and white and add to will help you see more and see it better also. Why not start a blank book for basics for yourself to-day?

Twenty-Three Key. One of the most famous torture chambers of the Middle Ages is situated at Cuenca, East Spain. It was widely known throughout the country as No. 23. So great was the dread of the particular room that the fatal number 28 was synonymous for many bird's song is never heard. Prior to years with unspeakable cruelty. The door of the room was locked with a key whose face formed the numerals The key, which is still preserved, is a very ponderous affair.-New York Herald.

Underground Marvels.

Particulars have just been published of a wonderful series of underground caves in the Stalden district of Canton Schwyze, in Switzerland. The existence of these places had be fore been vaguely known, but they have now for the first time been fully explored by a party which went down provided with 5,000 yards of rope ladders, acetylene lamps, rugs and provisions for eight days. They were through vast halls, brilliant with stalactite and other crystals, and with other great recesses branching from them. There were also found swift subterranean torrents, powerful enough to work great industrial undertakings.

CARED LITTLE FOR DRESS.

William E. Gladstone Never & Leader of Fashion.

Of Gladstone a recent writer says: "No premier in the last half century paid less attention to his clothes than did Mr. Gladstone. His hats were particularly shabby, his frock coats of uncertain age and his nether garments much bagged at the knee with sitting at a desk. This disregard, however, extend only to periods when he was out of office. When in Downing street he dressed almost smartly for a man of his age. How many years' service Mr. Gladstone extracted from his famous Inverness cape we do not know. Anyhow, he started with it on his first Midiothian campaign and he was still wearing it after the general election of 1892. In Ediaburgh he appeared to wear the same hat year after year, but it may have been fetched north for the occasion as a mascot, as he generally drove about bareheaded and very few of his constituents ever saw him with his head covered."

SINGING OF THE ANTHEM.

Elderly Philadelphian Was Little Impressed by It.

The Messiah was sung recently in Philadelphia, and one of the anthems rendered by the chorus had as its theme, "We have turned everyone to his own way." As anthems go this sounded somewhat as follows: "We have turned, turned, turned-we have turned every one, every one to his own way-to his, to his own way, own way-every one to his own way." The anthem involved several pages of music, and every time the chorus sang "we have turned, turned, turned." they proceeded to turn over to the next page, and then burst out again with "we have turned, turned!" A certain plain citizen, rather elderly, who sat well in the rear, not appreciating the delicate sentiment, was heard to mutter, disgustedly, "Well, when you get through turnin', turnin' them gol-darned pages, suppose you shet up about it!"

The Mocking Bird Sits Meaning.

During the period of dog days, say old residents of Florida, the mocking that time he is almost an incessant singer from morning until night. Even on moonlight nights one seldom awakes but the soft, sweet warble of this bird can be heard. During the forty days of extremely hot weather naught but a low chirp is heard. He moans about in a subdued manner, as though he were ashamed of his ability to sing; indeed, he seems to have divested himself of his accustomed frivclous, flirty ways, and one may imagine he is doing penance for his past hilarity.

Consumption Curable.

The established fact that consumption is a preventable disease, when treated in time, cannot be too strongunderground for two full days, pene ly impressed upon the public. A Bostrating for a distance of 2,500 yards ton physician writing to a medical journal observes that the press reaches thousands where bulletins issued by boards of health only reach hundreds, and its services should be enlisted in urging upon all the importance of seeking medical advice in case of a continued cough. The best time to regulate the disease is before the system is much disturbed by it, a quick cure being often accomplished at such times,-Boston Globe.

Fasting for Health.

Thousands of years before it was practiced as a religious rite fasting was practiced as a health measure in Egypt, India and China. Contemporary to Cicero was Asclepiades, a Greek physician, who strongly advocated this idea, and 1,000 years after his day Ibn Sina, philosopher and medical sage, argued the virtues of temporary abstinence on the ground that it came easier than constant modera-

BANK OF ENGLAND'S MUSEUM.

Curious Collection of Notes of Historical Interest.

The bank of England has a curious museum in which the principal ex hibits are its own notes. Among them is a note for a penny, which was issued by mistake and bought back by the bank for $25. Another is a note for a million pounds.

A third is a banknote, which was found theide a codfish caught off the Newfoundland banks, and a fourth is a note which was in circulation for over a century and a half before it was presented for payment.

There are many forged notes in the museum, their value aggregating many millions of dollars, and there are also some notes which were recovered by divers from the sunken wreck of the British warship "Eurydice."

Raised Purse for Guide's Family. The English tourists at Pontresina contributed $2,000 for the support of the family of the guide, Sebastian Platz, who lost his-life on an expedition up one of the most dangerous peaks of the Engadine. He was the favorite of the English who visit that part of Switzerland, partly because of his ability and also because he spoke English. His employer, an English clergyman named Hartley, who was also killed, had been married only a few months, and his wife was at Pontresina awaiting his return. 222 South Peoria St., CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902. Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pro-nounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

Frank Storms has decided to quit farm ng and will sell the whole of his personal property at auction on the Geo. Boynton farm 4 miles south and 1/2 mile cast of Chelsea, on Tuesday, Dec. 8, 1903, com mencing at 10 a. m. The stock consists of 4 horses, 17 head of cattle, 22 sheep. 8 hogs, wagons, carriages, binder, mower, reaper, drill, hay tedder, cultivators, plows and all the tools usually found on a farm. Also a quantity of corn, oats, hay, and household goods. Lunch at noon. Geo. E. Davis, salesman.

Many farmers remark how greatly pleased they are with the rural mail service and that they could not get along without it. This service is a great convenience and the farmers should show their appreciation by making their roads more passable. There is room for a vast improvement in this direction.
