Hooper was led to take the action because he had to nolle prosse the Helmer case in the circuit court. The case went through a long examination in the justice courts and cost the county a lot of money, but the contestants finally agreed to dismiss it. In such cases only one person can make the complaint and the complaining witness can drop the case at any time regardless of the prosecutor. The county is often stuck for heavy costs merely to collect a bad debt or hecause of some neighborhood row.

ONE HUNDRED-MILLION DOLLAR FIRE AT BALTIMORE, MD.

HUNDREDS OF BUILDINGS IN THE HEART OF THE BUSINESS DIS-TRICT HAVE BEEN DESTROYED.

The flire broke out a few minutes before 11 o'clock Sunday morning in the wholesale dry goods house of John E. Hurst & Co. and raged with unrestrained fury continuously, and at midnight was unchecked but steadily eating its way, eastward on Baltimore street, after having destroyed almost all of the large stores and warehouses in the wholesale district a total of about twenty blocks of the most modern and substantial buildings in Baltimore, involving a loss which cannot now be estimated but which has certianly already reached thirty o forty millions of dollars.

A great many writers in the last few years have written short sketches of Mr. Lincoln's birth and early history, none of which agree in all particulars. For the want of proper informajumped at conclusions.

First of all was the shameful, damaging report that Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks were never married. They lived in Hardin county, Ky., now Lauer county, and were supposed to have been married there. No marriage license could be found on record, hence the false report-no mar-years old." Frequent mention has been made, too, in articles or sketches referred to of Mr. Lincoln's associates in Larue county. These could have been truebut for facts in history. Mr. Lincoln was born in 1809, and his parents moved to Indiana in 1816. There was an uncertainty about Mr. Lincoln's birthplace, claimed in Larue county, and on inquiry of Mr. Lincoln about it he said he was not born at the place suggested in letter; was told by his parents it occurred at another place, and his recollection was of the Knob Creek place.

An article of recent date about "Lincoln's Neglected Birthplace" says: "There never would have been any question about the place if it had not been for a fact which is perhaps generally unknown. There is no record in Hardin county or Larue of Thomas Lincoln as a land owner."

It says they claim a document in the form of a bond for $100 from Thomas Lincoln for the support of Nancy Hanks.

Now the facts are these as related by Mr. W. F. Broker and William Hardesty-Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks were married in Washington county, Ky., June 10, 1806, at the nome of Richard Berry. Thomas Lincoln did not realize the importance this marriage could be to his son and failed to impress upon him the date and place. It had been forgotten and the prominence of Mr. Lincoln brought it to the recollection of the few living when it came to be a matter of great

To Mrs. C. H. Vawter of Indianapolis, Ind., must belong all the honor for the finding of the marriage license of Thos. Lincoln and Nancy Hanks. First she visited an old lady, Mrs. Litsey, living near Buchland P. O. and sot a statement from her of the marriage of Thomas Lincoln to Nancy Hanks. This was the first statement ever published in regard to the marriage. Mrs. Vewter, then Miss Charlotte Hobart, boarding in my father's house and teaching school in Washington county, continued her pleading for a search in the clerk's office for said license until they were found.

Mrs. Vawter wrote the first article in vindication of Nancy Hanks when it was stated she was never married. Twenty years after this she received a letter from a lady in Cambridge. Mass., saying she had done more to In a letter to me last fall she says;

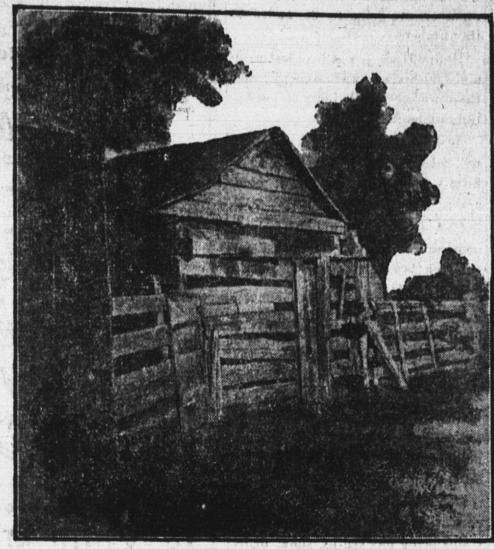

This information was furnished by concerned about what his grandson Wm. Hardesty, an old man living near the Lincoln home. He told of the year in which the marriage took place between Thos. Lincoln and Nancy tion many of these writers have Hanks, and Dr. Graham, whose statement has been published, says Mr.

Hardesty was present at the wedding. During Mr. Lincoln's presidency this Mr. Hardesty and a great granddaughter of Richard Berry, Miss Jennie Redding, were passing the old Lincoln home, talking of the President, and Miss Jennie said: "Mr. Hardesty, history says Mr. Lincoln was born in Larue county." He replied, saying: "I don't care what history says-I know better."

would be."

Mr. Lincoln had a mission to perform, and he seemed conscious of it. He started in the race with a heavy burden upon him. He was never rid of it. There were those who could have given him relief, but he knew them not. He was looking forward, not backward-mindful all the while of "what the grandson should be."

Mr. Lincoln was making historynot writing it. He did not live to see the end, but few, if any, great leaders ever do. They leave names to be honored and places in history of remembrance. Washington county, Kentucky, comes in for a large share in

MAKES MONEY ON MOUSE FARM. Woman Embarks in Business

Breeding Fancy Rodents.

Breeding white, piebald, black and Japanese mice is the latest household industry which is receiving attention. A woman living on the northern out skirts of the city has embarked in the business quite extensively. The mice sell wholesale at the rate of $10 per 100, and regularly, once every week, she delivers fifty of them to the leading bird and animal dealer, who sends them out to his customers in this and other cities. In this way she earns $5 every week, and $21 and $22 per week from the other sales of her mice. It would be hard to imagine easier money than the $5 which she receives weekly for her "dwarf cattle." The rearing of fancy mice involves little or no work, and the proceeds are for the most part pure gain. She has at her home part of a large room partitioned off, and the floor covered with straw and earth. This is her mouse farm. It must be cleaned up now and then, and new straw and earth put in for the mice, but aside from this, her only care is to feed them twice a day and keep their basin full of fresh water. The mice increase at such a rapid rate that by selling fifty every week she is able to keep the number down to about the original limits.-Washington Post.

MENELIK A REAL MONARCH.

Abyssinian Ruler's Chief Interest Lies in Military Affairs.

Menelik of Abyssinia is a man of dark complexion, grizzled whiskers and beard, a pleasant smile and a very determined jaw. The general expression is amiable and intelligent and confirms the general opinion that he is the most liberal-minded and progressive man in his dominion.

He is evidently not given up to effeminate luxury, and the nearest way to his heart is said to be through the latest invention in military weapons. He has thoroughly subjugated the entire country and turned it from a mass of petty tribes and chieftains to a united and powerful country in which he holds undisputed sway.

The name of Menelik commands respect to the uttermost end of his wide dominions, and not a leaf falls without his consent. His great aim has been to get his country well armed and ammunitioned and of war supplies of all sorts he is said to have a goodly supply stored in the interior.

Over the bridge our procession passes and in a moment is lost in the labyrinthian depths of the native city. This is a city of blood and dark mysteries, a city from which even Chinamen flee to escape the robbery and murder which follows in the train of the mob and the private edicts of the mandarins. This is the city of starving poverty and plundered wealth, the city from which 97 per cent of the Chinamen in the United States have emigrated.

Our chair-bearers shout to other coolies, burden-bearers, peddlers and merchants to clear the way, and as the poles of our chairs advance, the crowds give way and stand scowling or merely curious to see the occupants of the chairs. There is much good nature, however, for this is famthe upper river and the American consul has given away stores of rice, and so the people say America is their very good friend. Some laugh at our clothes, or our fair skins, but there is no shouting or insult. To-morrow some rumor may set fire to the city and make the streets impassable to foreigners.

Hongkong is unknown in Canton, as the streets are paved with uneven and irregular stone flags, and are scarcely seven feet wide. In the widest parts two chairs can barely pass.

Down these narrow lanes one passes under brilliant signs in gold and crimson and between shops crowding into every available space. Many are open to the street, but those with valuable stocks are closed with heavy gratings guarded by a servant. When there are many soldiers in town who might be expected to indulge in their favorite pastime of looting, even the small shops are hastily barricaded until the imperial troops pass on. No shopkeeper will open his doors to a Chinese soldier or sailor in uniform.

As the city fades into the sunset horizon astern one feels that he is not much nearer an understanding of Chinese life and character. Here are people who venerate their ancestors and mourn their dead for decades, but are absolutely indifferent to the death of their neighbors; people who have maintained a great empire since the dawn of history, but are ignorant of ine time in the crowded provinces of the road to the next province. They are a sure cure for headache and neuralgic pains. Only this morning I recommended them to a friend with a severe headache and in a half hour he came into the store smiling. The headache was gone. We use them in the family and find them excellent for the women folks. This high albunde makes them very nervous. Grandma says I should tell Dr. Miles she could not live here were it not for the Anti-Pain Pills that she takes occasionally."—L. B. Morris, Helena, Montana.

The Manchester grange, at its meeting last night, discussed the question "Resolved, that we raise by taxation on the county the sum of $30,000 to build a contagious disease hospital at Ann Arbor." As this question will be voted on at the coming spring election, it seems to us that it would be a good thing for all our granges and farmers' clubs to discuss this question at one of their meetings between now and election day, Monday, April 4. It is a question that means a great deal to the taxpayers either way it is decided.

Secretary of State Fred M. Warner's published statement to the public as to his views on the primary reform movement has much of interest for the voting classes, inasmuch as he is the candidate of the machine men for the Republican nomination for governor. In this statement he says, "Personally, I believe a law should be passed." That is to say the gentleman is lukewarm on the subject. He does not care which mary reform or not, so long as he the southwest states and territories. on and snow is deep. can secure the nomination for governor. He knows that the political about as much grit as the best of such a law enacted, and so he temporizes and says "Personally, I believe a law should be passed," and if elected he would work for its enact-

The people have been slipped up once on just such specious promises as that, and they should look well to it that they are not again floored by any such methods. Mr. Warner is no more a primary reform man than are the senators who killed the primary reform bill in the last legislature, and he is not the timber of which to make a good people's candidate. He is a machine man out and out, always has been and always will be, at least during the coming campaign.

Since the above was put in type the sheep's skin has been torn from the wolf's shoulders and Mr. Warner stands revealed in his true character of an anti-primary reform man. In an interview with a Detroit Tribune representative he was driven to the wall and in answer to a leading question as to just how he stood on the question of a primary reform law he said, "I am emphatically opposed to the direct vote for the nomination of state officers. I am opposed to the abolition of state conventions." All of which proves conclusively that Mr. Warner is not a proper person to be a people's candidate for governor of Michigan, as we said before.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The Way of a Maid. The Halfway House was an oasis in the desert. To-day it was an oasis and a battle ground. Franklin watched on the top of the wall, while Buford Mary Ellen as she, passed, quietly built under them with sods. It was about the long, low room, engaged in no small weight that he upheld. As deftly as any servant. He compared these rude necessities with the associations amid which he knew this girl had been nurtured, and the thought and rebellion. Presently he rose, and excusing himself, went out to join Buford at the corral.

"Come," said the latter, "and I'll show you around over our improvements while we are waitin' for a bite to eat. if ever this land comes to be worth anything at all, we ought to grow into something worth while."

"Yes," said Franklin, "it will make you rich," and as they walked about be pointed out with Western enthusiasm the merits of the country.

The "bite to eat" was in time duly ennounced by a loud, sonorous note that arose swelling upon the air. Aunt Incy appeared at the kitchen door, her fat cheeks distended, blowing a conch as though this were Tidewater

The long table was spread in the lerge room of general assembly, this room being, as has been mentioned, excavated from the earth, so that, as they sat at table, their beads were perhaps nearly level with the surface of the ground. The short side walls, topped with a heavy earthen roof, made of this sort of abode a domicile rade and clumsy enough, but one not lacking in a certain comfort. In the winter it was naturally warm, and in the summer it was coot, the air; aught at either end by the gable of the room, passing through and affording freshness to the somewhat cellarlike interior. Cut off from the main room were three smaller rooms, incinding the kitchen, from which Aunt Lucy passed back and forth with mas-

Franklin, standing upon a chair, put his shoulders under the sagging beams and lifted them and their load of disarranged earth up to the proper level he stood he caught an upturned telltale glance, a look of sheer feminine admiration for strength, but of this he could not be sure, for it passed fleetly as it came. He saw only the look of unconcern and heard only the conventional word of thanks.

As Mary Ellen stepped into the buggy for the return home her face had lost its pink. One of the mysterious revulsions of femininity had set in. Suddenly, it seemed to her, she had caught herself upon the brink of disaster. This tall and manly man, she must not yield to this impulse to listen to him! She must not succumb to this wild temptation to put her head upon a broad shoulder and to let it lie there while she wept and rested. To her the temptation meant a personal shame. She resisted it with all her strength. The struggle left her pale and very calm. At last the way of duty was clear. This day should settle it once for all. There must be no renewal of this man's suit. He must go.

It was Mary Ellen's wish to be driven quickly to the house, but she reckened without the man. With a sudden crunching of the wheels the buggy turned and spun swiftly on. headed directly away from home. "I'll just take you a turn around the hill," said Franklin, "and then we'll go in." ming indistinct in the fall ing twilight. As the vehicle turner about, the crunching of the wheels started a great gray prairie owl, which rose almost beneath the horses' noses and flapped slowly off. The appari tion set the wild black horse into a sudden simulation of terror, as though he had never before seen an owl upon the prairies. Rearing and plunging he tore loose the hook of one of the singletrees, and in a flash stood half free, at right angles now to the vehicle instead of at its front, and struggling to break loose from the neckroke. In a flash Franklin saw that he was confronted with an ugly accident. He chose the only possible course, but handled the situation in the best possible way. With a sharp cut of the whip he drove the attached horse down upon the one that was half free, and started the two off at a wild race down the steep coulee, into what seemed sheer blackness and immediate disaster. In some way, stumbling and bounding and lurching, both horses and vehicle kept upright all the way down the steep descent, a thing which to Franklin later seemed fairly miraculous. At the very foot of the pitch the black horse fell, the buggy running full over him as he lay lashing out. From this confusion, in some way never quite plain to himself. Franklin caught the girl out in his arms, and the next moment was at the head of the struggling horses. And so good had been his training at such matters that it was not without method that he proceeded to quiet the team and to set again in partial order the wreck that had been created in the gear. In time he had the team again in harness, and at the bottom of the coulee, where the ground sloped easily down into the open valley, whence they might emerge at the lower level of the prairie round about. He led the team for a distance down this floor of the coulee, until he could see the better going in the improving light which greeted them as they came out from the gullylike defile. He did not like to admit to his companion how great had been the actual danger just incurred, though fortunately escaped. Franklin was humiliated and ashamed, as a man always is over an accident.

"Oh, it's no good saying I'm sorry," he broke out at last ... "It was my fault, letting you ride behind that brute. Thank God, you're not hurt! I'm always doing some unfortunate, ignoble thing."

"It wasn't ignoble," said the girl, and again he felt her hand upon his arm. "It was grand. You went straight, and you brought us through. I'm not hurt. I was frightened, but I am not hurt."

"You've pluck," said Franklin, Then, scorning to urge anything further of his suit at this time of her disadvantage, though feeling a strange new sense of nearness to her, now that they had seen this distress in common, he drove home rapidly as he might through the gathering dusk, anxious now only for her comfort. At the house he lifted her from the buggy, and as he did so kissed her cheek. "Dear little woman," he whispered. "good-bye." Again he doubted whether he had heard or not the soft whisper of a faint: "Good-bye!"

"But you must come in," she said "No, I rrust go. Make my excuses," he said. "Good-bye!" The horses sprang sharply forward. He was

In her own little room Mary Ellen sat, her face where it might have been seen in profile had there been a light or had the distant driver looked round to see. Mary Ellen listened-listened until she could hear hoof and theel no more. Then she cast herself upon the bed, face downward, and lay motionless and silent. Upon the little dresser lay a faded photograph, fallen torward also upon its face, lying unnoticed and apparently forgot.

Finish what you are at before you let it get away from you.

A publisher of a weekly religious newspaper told me that one of the most useful habits he had formed is to finish what you are at while you are at it-complete it while it is up, if possible, so that it will be forever

A general manager recently told me that he was helped by the way an express agent-station agent-telegraph operator at a little town held his three positions after the town got a boom and grew into a big business center. This agent was the only one in the boom territory towns that held

The way he did it was to keep cool and never let a letter or order out of his hand until attended to. Some people do their best when they have to crowd hours into minutes and some others do their worst, as in one case an order filler was a reliable worker on two hundred orders a day, but when he tried to do three hundred orders a day he went to pieces and fumbled.

In some kinds of work when orders are slow or business is dull, poor work is done. Only when things are hustling is the work done as it should be. Exercises will help both conditions. Poor work during dull spells is due to a lack of mental exercises, and poor work during rush times is due to low vitality and should be overcome by physical exercises.

The manager who told me about the station agent also told me about his own work, which frequently came to him in a way to prevent closing up a subject while he had it up, and he claimed that he was irritable on account of it.

Resourcefulness, which enables one to influence for better methods the beginners of poor methods, is in demand, and obtainable. Irritation is a to counteract it.

There are liquid colors which are able to saturate a human body through and through. There are individualities which will benefit all who are in any way connected with the firm and all customers of the firm. This individuality can be analyzed and cultivated if thoroughly desired.

The Window Warner. Just as I finished the City Sawmill item I noticed a window washer on the outside of another building. He was cleaning the windows of

He certainly has nerve to do this. but nerve without appliances is safer than appliances without nerve.

> Soon after this that same farmer lost his big barn by fire and the fire was reported due to lightning and a broken lightning rod; therefore is not a broken rod worse than no rod? If you have a rod on your building see that it is in good shape. But does lightning ever strike a tin roof? Years ago I read or heard that it does not, and if you have a case in your knowledge showing that it has I would like to know about it.

> The man is washing windows yet, and seems to be just as much at ease as if he were on the ground.

> > She Got Up.

The elevated car was full of men and women when an old man in plain clothes came in and stood up with his hand in the strap.

A woman with cheeks too fleshy and red to appeal to an artist was near the old man who was standing. Before any of the men could or did offer him their seats, she got up, motioned to him, and he sat down.

Her face was too highly colored, but she gave the old man a chance to sit down. Her hands were not very graceful in proportions, but she gave the old man a seat.

She could have learned much of the better dressed men and women sit- recreation, reliable health, accuracy, perfect, healthy tone. I carry it will ting near her, but she gave all of them forethought, useful originality and me when I travel, otherwise I good sermon when she gave the old man a seat.

Some of those near her knew the latest hint from Paris, but she gave them a later hint from the heart when she gave the old man a seat.

If her life here is not lengthened by her letting the old man sit down, may her joys in the next world be increased by it.

Profit in loss is worth watching, as it may library is for prove a valuable thought mine.

The first of the year many bookkeepers are studying on profit and loss, but all of us all the year can devote time to profit in loss.

A passenger missed a train and in waiting for the next train lost so much time he decided to try to regain some of it by a branch car to save a half-mile walk.

The next train came and he boarded it. When the branch car station was reached he left the train for the car just in time to see the car go without him. This made him lose time, money, and gave him a chance to lose his head. In place of the latter he opened his eyes to see how he could learn something worthy of the trouble. Had he lost his head he might not have observed an old acquaintance standing a few yards away waiting for a car on a third line. He went over, shook hands and secured useful information. Had he lost his head he might not have noticed the bright little girl on the branch car that finally came and carried him to his appointment late. But he did notice the little girl on account of her executive ability. She was with her mother and brother and two sisters and she managed the crowd. She found her mother a vacant seat and got her the length of the car to it. This little Miss Executive attracted attention so that a man gave his seat to her larger sister and a lady moved enough to permit her to sit on the edge of the seat by her and remarked that she was the conductor of the car. She was the conductor of the family and as happy as a lark in doing so. When near their destination she saw a young man by a house watching for them and notified her family that Jim was there by the back door. Jim went in, as soon as they began getting off the car, it may be to notify the kitchen to dish up the New Year's feast. Miss Executive was running through the front gate as the family reached the sidewalk from the car three rods away. The passenger who saw this as compensation for lost time and money reached his place late, but the other person in the appointment was later and all ended well. We all hope Miss Executive did not eat too much dinner, but such active people are not likely to.

A man decided to take his furnisignal to be up and doing something I ture out of the storage warehouse and Reep house again. The day he did it such a snow storm came up that he is sure it cost him twice as much to move as it would had the weather been reasonable. Now this man likes rugs and the extra expense he was put to on account of the weather would have bought a rug. He blames that snow storm a rug's worth and to him that is a good deal. He feels ugly. In his mind the price of a rug in a rug is a great deal bigger than the price of a rug in the bank. You and I are that way on some things. If I were to lose the price of a fine blank book I would think less about it than if it were a fine blank book or if I thought of the money in a fine blank book.

The poor people do not know money as money. We do not respect it as stored up energy. To love it and disrespect it are both errors. We should learn how to look at it in an intelligent manner, but while our personal wants exceed our financial ability we will think of money in some desired object.

While talking with a furniture dealer in Buffalo I saw him shock himself by thinking what the money he had spent during the year for a certain object would mean if represented by furniture. Can you see value whether in money, old iron or diamonds? It may be dangerous for us to look at money through some special object.

Employe vs. Seller. Here is a gain I have made during the first week of 1904. In place of using the word employe

I am using the word seller. Buyer and seller mean employer, employe and customer.

The words employer and employe do not wear well with me. The so-called employer is a buyer, and the so-called employe is a seller of time, strength, skill, information. The one who does the work sells, just the same as the one who has the work done sells after it is done. So my new statement is that my Arcade Index library is a central bureau for the collection, exchange and promotion of information personally useful to the individual, either buyer or seller, in mechanical, commercial and professional lines. The subjects are food, clothing, always keeps the digestive organs in Animal's Instinct Better Than the Observation of Man.

When Thomas McGuiness, a wellknown horseman of Philadelphia, went to Europe some time ago, he took a blooded horse with him. The animal was in a specially prepared stall on deck and enjoyed the trip despite the rough weather. When Mr. McGuiness thought land should soon be sighted, he asked the captain how far the ship was from the Irish coast. The commander of the steamer, in his usual gruff manner, replied: "Your horse will tell you; watch him."

The owner of the animal could not understand what the captain meant, and he was not particularly pleased with the answer. Finally, however, a couple of hours before land was observed, the horse, which was a magnificent bay, poked his head through the grating and, stretching his neck, whined loudly. "There you are," said the captain to Mr. McGuiness; "your horse smells the land."

The captain, in explaining the odd occurrence, said that the thoroughbred detected the odor from pasture lands that was wafted far seaward. and that horses on board ocean steamers always give the first signal when iand is near.

When All the World was Sad. "Was there ever a time in your life," a gushing young lady once asked a popular comedian, in tores of the tenderest sentiment, "when all the world appeared to you a dreary waste, when your heart sank as lead within you, when all the sweet springs of your life seemed turned to bitterness, when all light was dark and all friends false, and death seemed the greatest boon the gods could offer?" The actor took a mental but unsentimental journey into the realms of his past life and replied gloomily: "Indeed there was, and I can remember it as though it were yesterday. I was only 12 years of age at the time, and I resolved from that moment never to smoke another cigar until

The Dum-Dum Bullet.

Military officials who advocate the dum-dum bullet are now contending that it is really a humane projectile, inasmuch as it knocks a man out once for all, instead of boring a hole through him so minute that it does not interfere with his continuing the fight or returning to it after a brief Mr. H. Haggins of Melbourne, Fla. absence at the field hospital. It is writes, "My doctor told me I had conargued that the modern small-caliber bullet is the one that is really inhumane, as it tends to prolong war. ME FINISHED THE SENTENCE.

Startling Description Cut Over Door

J. T. Trowbridge, the aged author, is writing his autobiography at his home in Arlington, Mass. Mr. Trow-bridge was born in Ogden, N. Y., The other day be said:

"From Ogden I went to school at Lockport in my boyhood, and there was a Lockport stonecutter whom used to like to talk to, for he had a mind as simple as a child's. I remember a job that he once undertookthe job of cutting a sentence from Scripture over the door of a little stone church. The committeemen who intrusted him with this job didn't comprehend his childlike, unreflecting nature, or they wouldn't have couched their order in the terms they "They wanted the sentence, My house shall be called a house of prayer.' He told them they had better write it down for him. But they said it would only be necessary to write down the chapter and verse, and he could copy the sentence out of the good book. "Well, our Lockport stonecutter copied the sentence, but he didn't end where he should have ended. He went right on to the sentence's conclusion. The result was that the legend over the church door read: "'My house shall be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a cen of thieves."

GOAT HAD PAPA'S HAT.

But Former Owner Had No Further Use for It.

From Rockaway comes a sad tale involving a pearl-gray hat, a billy goat, a small boy, a fond papa and the sea. The fond papa owred the pearlgray hat, and it really was a thing of beauty. One day he was promenading the beach with his little son and the wind cruelly swept the hat intothe ocean.

Two days later the small boy saw a young man driving a miniature laundry wagon drawn by a sturdy billy goat. On the goat's head was a pearl-gray hat, a trifle dilapidated, with holes pierced to admit the passage of the goat's horns. The small boy recognized that hat.

"Hold on, there," he shouted. "That goat's got my papa's hat."

The driver stopped and the fond papa came up to see what was the "Papa, the goat's wearing your

"Well," said the fond papa, as he gazed ruefully at his lost headgear, "I've bought a new hat, but the goat can have that one. The devil himself wouldn't take it—and he wears horns, too, I've heard."-New York Press.

REBUKE FOR AN UPSTART.

Attorney General Griggs Was Afraid of Turning His Head.

When John W. Griggs was attorney general in President McKinley's cabinet he broke a long-established precedent in his department. He determined to break his callers of the babit they had of addressing him as "general." "I have no claim on the military title," said Mr. Griggs.

One insistent politician paid no heed to the attorney's request. He considered "general" a good jolly, and by this means persuaded Mr. Griggs, as he thought, to find a position for a friend. "How does your friend like his job?" asked the president's legal adviser a few days later. "When I told him what you offered," said the politician. "he turned up his nose. Haven't you something better for him, General?"

"I have," and the attorney general smiled as does a man whose opporunity has come, "but I cannot offer it. If this position has turned your friend's nose a better one will turn ais head."

Thereafter the politician and his friend referred to him as Mr. Griggs.

Dummies and Dummies. Francis A. Several of them had been making graceful dives at tackling the dummy, which stood Restaurant & Lunch Room at one corner of the field, and the professor was much interested in the display of gymnastics. "I used to play football myself," he said to a student, "and I know that I tackled better than that." "Won't you show us how it ought to be done?" was asked. "No, thank you," was his quick re-
