THE MEMORIAL SERVICES

In Honor of the Soldier Dead as Carried Out in Chelsea.

The threatening weather of Sunday afternoon and the rain of Monday made the observance of Memorial Sunday and Decoration day anything but what it was hoped and expected it would be for the members of R. P. Carpenter Post and W. R. C., and was a sore disappointment to the devoted band of men and women who annually delight in decorating the graves and participate in services in honor of the comrades who have passed away.

The Methodist church was about two-thirds full Sunday afternoon when the members of the post and corps assembled to listen to the annual memorial sermon. It was preached by Rev. E. E. Caster, pastor of the church, and was preached from the text found in Joshua II, 22: "And the land rested from war." The sermon was based on the thought that conflict is the school in which individuals and nations are taught. The speaker showed how this had been illustrated all through history. Political corruption had always served to bring on conflict and purification had to come at length in national wounds. It was so before the civil war, and a similar condition exists today. Men are seeking the offices instead of the office seeking the man. This results inevitably in corruption, and that in turn breeds conflict.

It was shortly after 2 o'clock Monday afternoon when the Decoration day exercises were opened in the town hall by Comrade T. E. Wood reading the general orders issued from national and department headquarters of the G. A. R. "The Dear Old Flag" was then sung by a quartette of Messrs. George and Floyd Ward, Louis Burg and George Milspaugh. Prayer by Rev. E. E. Caster followed, and then another selection of music by the quartette and Miss Pauline Burg.

Comrade Wood then introduced the speaker of the day Rev. C. S. Jones, who gave a splendid address and one which fired the blood of the old veterans who heard him when he vividly described a few of the scenes and incidents of some of the great battles. He spoke of it as probably the last speech of the kind he would ever deliver to a Chelsea audience.

After a selection of music by the quartette and Miss Burg the benediction was pronounced by Rev. P. M. McKay and the audience dispersed. The members of the post then assembled in procession and headed by Fifer E. A. Ward and Drummers Geo. Ward and Louis Burg playing the old familiar airs of '61-'66 they marched to Oak Grove cemetery where the ritual service of the G. A. R. was said at the soldiers' monument, after which the graves of deceased comrades in the two cemeteries were decorated.

Two Chelsea Boys' Good Work.

The two Chelsea boys, Clayton and Herbert Schenk, who entered the interscholastic track and field events at Ann Arbor last Saturday distinguished themselves in a very signal manner taking into consideration the fact that they were thrown into competition with the best high school athletes in Michigan and Illinois. They made a total of 8 points and carried off two silver medals and one bronze medal.

In the 100 yards dash Clayton Schenk took second place against Hogganson, of Lewis Institute, who has been on the track for the past six or seven years and on whose account the team came very near being barred out of the meet. The time of the winner in this race was 10 2-5 seconds. In the 220 yards dash Herbert Schenk carried off third honor, also in competition with Hogganson, who took first place. The winner's time in this race was 23 seconds. In the discus throw Clayton Schenk took second place, hurling the plate 93 feet 9 inches.

ENTERTAINED THEIR FRATERS.

Chelsea Lodge, K. of P., Banqueted the Rowena Lodge Boys From Jackson.

As royal entertainers the Chelsea fraternal organizations have always stood in the front rank, and the Knights of Pythias second to none. Last night Chelsea Lodge, No. 194, K. of P., had invited their brother knights of Rowena Lodge, Jackson, to visit them, and it was considerable of a disappointment to them to see the very small delegation that put in an appearance. But, as one of the Chelsea speakers said, Chelsea boys do not need a crowd of outsiders to help them to have a good time, so they set to and fairly outdid themselves in entertaining those who did come.

It was about 9 o'clock when the 60 gentlemen present marched into the Maccabee hall and sat down to the tastefully decorated tables, laden with good things, and served by a number of willing Ladies of the Maccabees, who had the supper in charge and who have attained an enviable fame as caterers for such occasions.

After the wants of the inner man had been satisfied to the fullest extent by all, B. B. Turnbull, C. C. of Chelsea Lodge, in the capacity of toastmaster, began his duties. He first called on H. D. Witherell to make the address of welcome, which was replied to by Chancellor Commander Wildt, of Rowena Lodge. Then followed short speeches by Col. Payne, Dr. Waite and Mr. Ulrichson, of Jackson, H. Lighthall and J. G. Webster, of Chelsea.

The feature of the evening's entertainment, however, was the fine singing of Miss Mildred Atkinson, Garrett Conway and Floyd Ward. The two first named sang their numbers with such sweetness of tone and good effect that they had to respond to hearty encores. Mr. Ward never sang better, and his choice of songs was excellent and suited to the occasion. "My Own United States" aroused the patriotic feelings of all and was vociferously applauded. In response he sang the comic song "It Was the Dutch," and for a second encore he gave a very pretty ballad. Miss Mabel Bacon played the accompaniments and some pretty selections during the supper hour in excellent style.

At the end of this program the knights adjourned to their own hall where the time was pleasantly passed until the hour for going home arrived. It was a pleasant occasion most pleasingly carried out.

The Woman's Guild Concert.

The program for the concert to be given at the Congregational church tomorrow evening, June 4, is of a sufficiently varied nature to promise an excellent entertainment. The ladies and gentlemen who take part in it are musicians of skill and ability and it should receive a good patronage from the members of the church and the public generally. ## A NAME IN THE SAND.

Alone I walked the ocean strand:
A pebbly shell was in my hand;
I stooped and wrote upon the sand
My name—the year—the day.
As onward from the spot I passed,
One lingering look behind I cast;
A wave came rolling high and fast,
And washed my lines away.

And so, methought, 'twill shortly be
With every mark on earth from me;
A wave of dark oblivion's sea
Will sweep across the place
Where I have trod the sandy shore
Of time, and been, to be no more,
Of me—my day—the name I bore,
To leave nor track nor trace.

And yet, with Him who counts the sands,
Aid holds the waters in his hands,
I knew a lasting record stands,
Inscribed against my name.
Of all this mortal part has wrought;
Of all this thinking soul has thought,
And from these fleeting moments caught
For glory or for shame.
—Hannah Flagg Gould.

REFLECTIONS and REPENTANCE

BY EPES W. SARGENT

Bennington looked after Lucy Alton's retreating form with amazement. Only the night before she had promised that she would marry him in the spring and had sealed the bargain with a kiss. She had been tender and loving then.

This morning she walked past him with no sign that she was aware of his presence save a haughty "Sir!" when he had raised his hat in salutation.

The more Bennington thought it over the more inexplicable it became. He and Lucy had been more than friends for a couple of years. She had so clearly shown her preference for his society that none had sought to dispute his position.

He could imagine no rival who might have poisoned her mind against him in so brief a time as had elapsed since the night before. He puzzled his brain until it whirled, but still no satisfactory explanation presented itself.

Then he decided upon a very foolish action. He left town.

Not even his most intimate friends knew where he had gone, and for several weeks the set in which he moved wondered at his hurried departure. Then they decided that Lucy Alton had refused him after all, and they gave the matter no further thought.

As for Bennington, he was seeking to dispel his ennui in Paris, and only succeeded in discovering that gay capital to be a most dispiriting place. A week later he was arguing with the customs officials on the familiar pier in New York.

His man was too well trained to exhibit any surprise when his master walked in. He silently placed a huge pile of letters upon the library table and went out to attend to the trunk.

Bennington turned the letters over idly. Suddenly he gave a start. There was one little square envelope addressed in a handwriting, the sight of which made his heart beat faster. He tore it open.

"Dear Jack," it ran, "what has become of you? It is not nice, sir, to leave one's fiancée in this abrupt fashion. Have you already repented your proposal? I don't like to think that. Come in, Jack, and tell me what the trouble is. I did so want to see you last night."

It was signed "Lucy," and bore a date one day later than his experience on the avenue.

A second note was in Mr. Alton's handwriting. This was dated a week later. In vigorous terms her father told Bennington what he thought of his actions.

"I learn that you are abroad, sir," he wrote. "I should advise you to remain there. I cannot be answerable for the circumstances should we meet."

If Lucy's letter had been a puzzle, this was even less understandable. There was no mistaking the out direct he had received. In the face of that, why should she write a day later, as though nothing had happened, and why should her father brand him as a scoundrel and a cad.

"Sir!"

The quickest way to find out would be to drive around to the Altons. He called a cab and in ten minutes he was holding converse with Judson, the Alton's butler. Judson was polite, but very evidently scared.

"Please don't insist, Mr. Bennington," he pleaded. "Mr. Alton is not strong, sir. If he were to see you, the excitement might kill him."

"See here, Judson," persisted Bennington hotly, "what's the matter? Why should the excitement kill Mr. Alton? What have I done?"

Judson coughed ever so slightly. He was too well trained to admit that he knew the family secrets.

"I'm sure I don't know anything," declared Judson respectfully. "Only Mr. Alton declared that you were not to see Miss Alton, and Dr. Sommers ordered me to be careful that Mr. Alton did not see you. I am very sorry, sir."

There was a slight pause, and before he could gather his senses Ben-

"Are you sure you will never make the same mistake again?" Bennington found himself outside the closed door.

It would never do to make a scene on the front steps. Bennington was determined to get at the bottom of the mystery, but this was not the place. He jumped into the cab again and was driven around to Mrs. Graves', who had been his mentor since his mother's death.

"I'm sure I don't know what the matter is, Jack," she said sympathetically. "There is a report around that Lucy would not have you, and that you took a broken heart out of sight until it mended again."

"How can I find out?" he urged. "I can't go along like this. It will drive me crazy."

"Come to the tableaux vivants to-night," said the matron. "Lucy will be taking part and we will try to see her."

It was hard upon Bennington to face the curious gaze that evening at the charity entertainment. It seemed to him as though every one in the room were discussing him.

Still, he bore it bravely, sustained by the hope of seeing Lucy. She was to appear in the last picture, and the program line read:

"Reflections, Miss Alton, Miss Carter."

Miss Carter. That must be Mabel Carter, Lucy's cousin from the west. When the curtain went up, there was no sign of Miss Carter. It merely disclosed Lucy standing in front of a mirror admiring her reflection. Then, suddenly, the reflection stepped through the mirror frame and a great light dawned upon Bennington. He remembered now that Miss Carter was supposed to exactly resemble Lucy. The resemblance must have been so strong as to have deceived even the eyes of love.

Headless of Mrs. Gray's detaining hand, he pushed his way through the crowd to the door leading to the improvised stage. Lucy was just coming down the steps from the temporary platform. He caught her wrist.

"Lucy," he cried, "can you ever forgive me for having been such a fool? I thought your cousin was you, and she cut me. I did not have the heart to stay and see you again. If you will forgive the error I promise never to do so again."

"Are you sure you will never make the same mistake again?"

"I assure you that it will not happen again," he declared eagerly.

He sought to take her in his arms, but she skillfully evaded him, and a voice from the platform, cried out: "See here, Jack! I don't mind your making love to Mabel if you think it's me—but I draw the line at proxy kisses."

Then Miss Carter very thoughtfully hurried to her dressing room, while Jack had to make apologies again to the real Lucy.

She has accepted a ring as a certain means of identification. It is a circlet of plain gold.—Boston Globe.

DELAYED THE WEDDING TRIP.

Transvaal Bride and Groom Worried by the Elements.

Thrilling adventures get into the society columns of the Transvaal newspapers sometimes. A Johannesburg paper tells of a marriage at Lydenburg. It says: "The bride wore her traveling gown and immediately after the ceremony the marriage trip of thirty-eight miles to Pilgrim's Rest was begun in a cart drawn by eight mules. When about half the distance was made it was found that the Ohrigstad river was in flood and passage was impossible. The route was retraced for about ten miles and temporary accommodation secured at a farmhouse. Next day, however, the river proved just as impassable, and thus for four days the honeymoon couple were 'held up' by the elements. On the third day a traveler attempted to cross with a cart and two horses, but the attempt proved disastrous, for the horses and cart were swept away and were never seen again. The passenger probably owed his life to the fact that he became entangled in a barbed-wire fence. Two days after this, the river having subsided somewhat, the help of some transport drivers was requisitioned and the cart and team were floated across, with the help of strong ropes at the other side."

KEPT "BOY" IN CHECK.

Centenarian Restrained Spirits of His 76-Year-Old Son.

Senator Depew tells of attending a commemorative dinner given to Chevreul, the famous French chemist, on his 100th birthday, apropos of having himself recently arrived at the age of 70.

"Chevreul ascribed his longevity," said Mr. Depew, "to the fact that being sure of his position in the factory of the Gobelins tape-ries so long as he might live, though his position was a modest one, he never worried about finances, never had serious troubles, and never had touched tobacco or alcohol. He had lived most temperately and drank the muddy waters of the Seine."

"Beside him was a gentleman who enjoyed the dinner to the utmost and was hilariously and rather uproariously proposing the health of everybody at the table. The old gentleman every little while would place his hand upon this neighbor and check his levity."

"Why does Chevreul take so much interest in his lively neighbor? I inquired of my escort."

"Because he is his son," was the reply.

"How old is the boy?" said I.

"Seventy-six," answered my polite escort.—Washington Post.

He Couldn't "Recover."

A young clergyman in making his weekly visits among the poor of his parish in a nearby country village quite recently learned of a poor, sick man who recently came from Ireland with his wife and one child. When the minister called at the house he was given a most hearty welcome and on reaching the bedside of the sick man was surprised at finding him apparently well. The day being warm the clergyman suggested that he get out of bed and spend an hour under a shade tree in the garden.

"It may do you good," he added. The wife, who was present, said her husband had better remain in the house until the following day and then take a little recreation. When the clergyman returned a week later he found the husband still in bed.

"Haven't you been out of bed since I was here?" asked the man of the cloak.

"No, sir, he has not," replied the wife. "I don't like to tell you, sir, but the doctor gave my husband up a week ago and we sold his clothes. That's the reason he didn't go to the garden."—Philadelphia Press.

Vain Endeavor.

A man once saved his money in a very prudent way: He put a little by for fear there'd be a rainy day. He heeded all the maxims about thrift, and work, and health, and economy, which is the source of wealth. He made some small investments, and some larger after while. And listened for applause, when he assumed a better style. But some of those who knew him sneered, while others simply sighed. He had practiced all the virtues, but they weren't satisfied.

He looked the situation over with sadness and dismay. And said, "I guess I'll go ahead and give the stuff away."

He built a lot of buildings and sincerely strove to find a way to spend his money that would benefit mankind.

But people looked askance at him and said, "I told you so. The art of spending money is a thing he doesn't know."

It's scandalous to contemplate such ostentatious pride."

He did his best to please them; but they weren't satisfied.

—Washington Star.

Scotch Sabbath Observance.

Sir Archibald Geikie's examples of the rigid Sabbatarianism of the Highlands are interesting. One is of a lady who rose early on Sunday, and carried her canary down into the cellar to keep the bird quiet. Another is of a young clergyman whose orthodoxy was suspected because he was seen standing at his window on the Lord's Day "dandling his bairn." A third story was told by the late Lord Playfair, who heard the nurse quieting his little boy one Sunday in this wise: "Whist, whist, my bonnie lamb; it's the Sawbath, or I wud whistle ye a sang, but I'll sing ye a paraphrase."

He Needs No Sleep

"How is it that some persons want much sleep, some can do on little, while there are still others who can get along without any sleep at all?" asked a writer in the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "Now here is a problem, a solution of which might prove a vast benefit to humankind. I am reminded of the importance of the subject by a case to which my attention was recently called in New Jersey. Albert Herpin of Trenton, born in France, a hostler, declares that he has not slept a wink for ten years, and his statement, according to the New York Herald's correspondent, is borne out by the physicians who have at different times treated him for insomnia.

"Of his case Herpin says: 'I have been to hospitals, where they attempted to drug me in order to produce sleep, but I would not undergo that sort of treatment. I have given up the idea of sleeping for the rest of my life; in fact, I'm so used to it that I think no more about the matter. I've heard of people going insane that were troubled with insomnia, but I never will. I am well and eat three meals a day.'

"It would seem from this that sleep is not one of life's essentials. Is sleep absolutely necessary to healthful existence? Is it possible for men to live to the reasonable and average age without sleep? These are large questions and they ramify in many ways when one begins to deal with them speculatively. In the first place much will depend upon the type and temperament of the man. Persons whose mental capabilities are of a low order, whose receptive powers are limited, and who are without the affluence which gives a rich poetic color to the things of this life—persons who are sluggish mentally and temperamentally, and who feel only when pricked and prodded by the sharp exigencies of the struggle for existence, the 'dumb, driven cattle' of the world, must needs sleep much, whereas the men and women of a sensitive mold, whose minds are as fragile and responsive as the most delicate of photographers' plates, who catch and hold, and love the images as they flit in variant shadings—the men and women who mentally trace the very finest of the nuances and absorb much of the forces which play upon them—such as these may do on less sleep than persons of the dull, unresponsive and unpoetic type. Napoleon required but little sleep; but, as a great American who was once reminded of the fact remarked, all men are not Napoleons. I have known many men, well advanced in years, who actually slept less than younger and more vigorous men."

Centers of the Brain

Biologists admit that psychic centers are localized in the cortex of the brain. The function of language, for example, is perverted or suppressed when a certain portion of the frontal lobes of the brain is altered or destroyed. Dr. Grasset, in a recent work on "Spiritism," holds that the centers of automatism and sub-consciousness form together a kind of polygonal area. In the Revue de Philosophie he also discusses the question of an immaterial soul and its relation to these psychic centers of the brain, and he concludes that the two conceptions are not incompatible. Intelligence, he argues, is a faculty of the soul. One cannot localize it in an organ. The psychic function, however, is more complex. It comprises the immaterial intelligence and the thought expressed, associated as we observe it in human life. For this psychic function a material organ or instrument as well as the immaterial intelligence is required, and this organ is the cortex of the brain. Whether the psychic center of the cortex only serves to clothe the idea, to express the thought, or intervenes otherwise, what does it matter to the biologist so long as he can localize the center? These centers of the brain are as indispensable for the expression of the highest intelligence as for the lowest automatism. Consequently the biologist may endeavor to localize the centers of higher as well as of lower intelligence. This quest, however, is distinct from the study of the principle of intelligence. Hence psychology should not become a department of biology. Psychology is the science of will and conscience. Biology is the science of the cerebral instrument whose intervention is necessary for the regular working of that will and conscience. Each of these two sciences has its own domain, and there is no contradiction between them. It is curious to find that after going from one extreme to the other, from the notion of a purely immaterial to a purely material mind, to a brain "secreting thought" as an electric battery secretes electricity, scientific thinkers are coming round to the union or conciliation of the two conceptions—namely, a brain which is the material organ of an immaterial soul.—London Globe.

The Horses of Mexico

Although at the time of the conquest horses were unknown in Mexico, that country to-day boasts of some of the finest of the species. The horses of Cuba that were taken to Mexico as well as the horses that went to the River Plate on a similar errand of conquest are believed to have been of Andalusian breed, and Cunningham Graham, the famous British author and traveler, who knows from personal experience both Mexican and Argentine horses, holds that we must look to Barbary for the progenitors of the Cordobese horses.

"Most horses," he says, "in fact, all breeds of horses, have six lumbar vertebrae. A most careful observer, the late Edward Loxson, a professor in the Agricultural college of Santa Catalina, near Buenos Ayres, has noted the remarkable fact that the horses of the Pampas have only five. Following up his researches, he has found that the only other breed of horses in which a similar peculiarity is to be found is that of Barbary."

So Cunningham Graham, who has ridden the horses of the Moors in Morocco as well as the horses of Mexico and the Pampas, is of the opinion that these horses are evidently descended from those of Barbary.

Of late years thousands of American horses have been imported into Mexico, often thoroughbreds, and undoubtedly the type of the Mexican horse of to-day has changed somewhat through the infusion of new blood. Some one competent and with leisure (and it is indispensable that he be a lover of horses) should take up this theme of the Mexican horse and make a big book on the subject.

Anyone who has ridden the wiry and long enduring little Mexican horse will not need to be told of its good points. Not infrequently is he a "wind drinker," like the horses of the African desert, full of speed and tireless. Given a grassy plain of a league or more, a "caballo bravo," a horse of mettle, the crisp air of the tableland morning in autumn or even in March and a man may taste one of the joys of paradise, for who may say that our horses will not meet us gladly over there in the good country where go the noble riders and lovers of swift steeds?

Cupid Ever at Work

Long ago the silly odium that attached to old-maidship disappeared, but even in the days when popular notion made a spinster of 40 a hopeless old maid, records show that there was no age limit to matrimonial hopes.

For instance, so long ago as 1774, Miss Jane Hodgson of Stepney, England, was wedded to Henry Hulton, of the same place, when she had reached her 32d summer, and the bridegroom was two years older, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

More remarkable was the wedding of John Jackson and Annie Bates, on March 22, 1796, the 101st birthday of the bridegroom, who was three years older than the bride. It was his fourth marriage within two years, and 10,000 persons escorted the couple to the church.

A youth of 19, a son of Mr. Graves, of Balcock-on-Herts, married "Miss Lake, spinster, aged 70." April 20, 1731, and in August of the same year, at Bath, Capt. Hamilton, aged 30, married Miss Manson, a blushing bride of rank, fortune, and 85 years.

More than half a century ago a Yorkshire belle, who had so many suitors she could not choose among them, told one of the most persistent that if he would ask her 50 years later she would marry him. He waited loyally and faithfully for the 50th anniversary, and she, too, kept her word.

A celebrated French artist, who fell in love in his student days, was told by the maiden that she would never marry so long as her mother lived. "They waited half a century before they were united."

Only two years ago a wealthy maiden lady in an English county provided a delightful sensation by marrying the curate of her parish church, a young man exactly 60 years her junior. An astonishing feature of this marriage was that as a girl the aged bride had been engaged to the curate's grandfather, and perhaps it was the memory of this ancient romance which inspired a sentimental regard for the youthful clergyman, who under other conditions might have been her own grandson.

AT GATE OF JERUSALEM.

Active Business Is Carried on by Small Hucksters. Jerome Hart gives the following sketch of street scenes in Jerusalem: "Just outside the gate, on the Jaffa road, there is a multitude of booths of small dealers and rows of native cafes where laborers sit on stools smoking. There are also large numbers of donkey drivers waiting with their animals for hire. Although the wall is a massive structure and the gate some fifty feet high, the entrance is narrow, with a right-angled turn—one of the methods adopted in the old days for defense. Through this narrow gateway there pours an endless stream of camels, donkeys and footmen all day long. Without the gate you see jostling camel drivers and camels kneeling to receive their loads. Scores of hucksters are squatting on the ground behind their heaps of oranges, dates, lemons, onions, radishes and other vegetables. There are also many vendors of bread—a staple in Jerusalem, as in all the eastern world; it is piled up in stacks, very much as we handle cordwood here, and with about as much attention to cleanliness. Many of these hucksters have a stock so small as to be pitiful—some two or three pounds of wormy figs, for example, worth perhaps five cents."

A Happy Mother.

Maple Hill, Ia., May 30.—A very remarkable case occurred here recently. The people here have never seen anything like it and it may interest many others.

From his infancy, Verne, the little five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Barfoot of this place has been sickly. His mother consulted a doctor, but he did not begin to improve till some one suggested that she try a remedy called "Dodd's Kidney Pills." From unmistakable symptoms she had always believed that his kidneys were the first cause of all the trouble, so she bought a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and began giving little Verne two pills a day.

In two or three days she noticed an improvement and she kept on till he had used about two boxes when to her great joy he was all right. Everybody remarks how much better Verne looks and Mrs. Barfoot always explains, "Dodd's Kidney Pills saved his life."

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me. I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily, and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—Mrs. FLORENCE DANFORTH, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.—$5000 forfeit. ## The Ward of King Canute

A Romance of the Danish Conquest.

By OTTILIE A. LILJENCRANTZ, author of The Thrill of Life the Lucky.
Copyright, 1903, by A. C. McCLURG & CO.

For such a stroke there was no parry. Canute threw his shield before him, but the blade cleft wood and iron, and golden plating like parchment, and falling on the horse's neck, bit it to the bone. Rearing and plunging with pain, the animal crashed into those behind him, missed his footing and fell, entangling his rider in the trappings. Bending over him, the ironside struck again.

But the son of Lodbrok had still his left arm. Bearing his shield, it shot out over the body of his king. The falling brand bit this screen also, and lopped off the hand that held it, but the respite was sufficient. In a flash Canute was on his feet, both hands grasping the hilt of his high-lunged sword.

It was a mighty blow, but it fell harmless. A sudden surge in the tide of struggling bodies swept the ironside out of reach and engulfed him in a whirlpool of Danish swords. He laid about him like mad, and was like to have cleared a passage back, when a second wave carried him completely from view.

Canute cursed at the anxious faces that surrounded him. "What means it, this swaying? Who are flying?"

"The English!" bellowed Rothgar. "The English are flying—Edmund's head! Yonder!"

Frode's daughter had Viking blood, but she hid her face with a cry. There it was, high upon a spear-point, dripping, ghastly. Could the sun shine upon such a thing?

To stare before him, Rothgar let the blood pour unheeded from his wounded arm. "Yonder Edmund rides now!" he gasped. "You can tell him by his size—Yonder! Now he is tearing off his helmet—"

"Her wide bright eyes sought his, with the terror of a snared bird."

Nor was he mistaken; within spear-throw the mighty frame of the ironside towered above his struggling guard. As he bared his head, they could even distinguish his face with its large elegantly-formed features and Ethelred's prominent chin. Brandishing his sword, shouting words of reassurance, exposing his person without a thought of the darts aimed at him, he was making a heroic effort to check the rush of his panic-stricken host.

Randall stared about her, doubting her senses. But light had begun to dawn on Canute. He wheeled sharply, as Thorkel pushed his horse to their sides.

"Whose head was that?" he demanded.

Thorkel's face was a lineless mask. "I believe his name was Osmaer," he answered without emotion. "It was unheard-of good fortune that he should be so like Edmund in looks."

The young king's face was suffused with bitterness. "Good fortune! Am I a fool or a coward that I am never to win except by craft or good fortune? Had you let me alone—"

But what else he said Randall never knew. Some unseen obstacle turned in their direction the stream of rushing horsemen. In an instant the torrent had caught them in its whirling eddies, and they were so many separate atoms borne along on the food. To hold back was to be thrown down; to fall was to be trampled into rags. The battle had changed into a hunt.

Thundering hoof-beats, crashing blows, shrieks and groans and falling bodies—a sense of being caught in a wolf pack—took possession of the girl; and the feeling grew with every side-long glance she had of the savage, long glances of blood-clotted hair, the sweating, dust-grimed faces, the battlement-madness was upon them, and they were no longer men, but beasts of prey. Amid the chaos of her mind, a new idea shaped itself like a new world. If she could but work her way to the edge of the herd, she might escape down one of those green aisles opening before them.

A little opening showed on her right. Though she could not see the ground before her, she took the risk and swung her horse into the breach. His forehead came down upon the body of a fallen man, but it was too late to draw back. The man turned over with a yell, and used his one unbroken arm to thrust upward his broken sword. The blade cut her leg to the bone, and she shrieked with pain; but her startled horse had no thought of stopping. Making his way with plunges and leaps, he carried her out of the press sooner than she could have guided him out. Once on the edge, he broke into a run. The agony of the shaken wound was unbearable. Shrieking and moaning, she twisted her hands in the lines and tried to stop him. But her strength was ebbing from her with her blood. By and by she dropped the rein altogether and clung to the saddle-bow.

They reached the wood at last, cool and sweet, and hushed in holy peace. The frantic horse plunged into one of the arching lanes, and the dir of the hunt dies behind her; silence fell like a curtain at their heels; even the thudding hoof-beats were softened on the leafy ground. Randall lay along the horse's neck now, and her senses had begun to slip away from her like the tide from the shore. Somewhere, there was the soft thud of a falling body; then the cool greenness closed around her and held her tenderly, a crumpled leaf that the whirlwind had dropped from its sport.

CHAPTER VI.

Taken Captive.

Lying drowned in cool silence, the girl came slowly to a consciousness that someone was stooping over her. Raising her heavy lids, her eyes rested on a man's face, showing dimly in the dusk of the starlight.

He said in English, "Canute's page, by the saints! Were I a Pagan Dane, I would run my sword through him. But I am a Christian Englishman. Let to cut away the blood-stiffened hose. Darkness closed around Randall again, darkness shot with zigzag lightnings of pain, and throbbing with pitiful moans.

She came to herself to find that soldiers were lifting her up to the horseman, where he sat again in his saddle. She recognized the squareness of his shoulders; and she knew the gentleness of his touch as he slipped his free arm around her and drew her carefully into place, making of his stalwart body a support for her weakness. No strength was in her to struggle against him; only her wide bright eyes sought his, with the terror of a snared bird.

Meeting the look and understanding a small part of its question, he said in a reassuring word in his pleasant low-pitched voice: "Be of good cheer, 'rangling; there is no thought of eating you. I will bring you to a cup of wine before moonrise, if you hold fast."

It is doubtful if the girl so much as heard him. Her eyes were passing from feature to feature of his face, as the stars revealed it above her—from the broad, comely brow to the square young chin, from the clean-cut fine-tempered mouth to the clear, true eyes. One by one she noted them, and shade by shade her strained look of fear relaxed. With eyes still turned up toward his face, her lids drooped and fell; and her head sank upon his breast and lay there, in the peace of perfect faith.

Tap—tap—tap—tap, like water dripping slowly. Drop by drop the sound filtered through the thick wrappings of Randall's slumber, till she knew it for the beat of horses' hoofs, and stirred and opened her eyes.

The silver shimmer of starlight falling through purple deeps had given way to the ruddy glare of a camp fire, and she was lying just beyond its heat, cloak-wrapped, on a bed of leaves. Above her, interlacing beech boughs made an arching roof, under which the shadows clustered as swallows under eaves. Within the sylvan gloom, some four-score battle-stained warriors were taking their ease after a hard day. Through the fog of her drowsiness Randall recognized them slowly. Yonder was the Englishman who had found her in the bushes. Beyond him, across the fire, the soldiers who had lifted her up to the horseman. Here, just in front of her, was the leader himself. Her gaze settled upon him dreamily.

He had finished his meal, if meal it could be called, and was making some attempt at toilet. His captive's eyes were not the only ones upon him, and he was laughing a little at the comments his performance drew forth from three old knights lounging near him.

"These are soft days, comrades. The last time I followed the old chief, of honored memory, we held our war-council standing knee-deep in a fen. We had neither eaten nor drank for two days, and three days' blood was on our hands."

The young chief took it with careless humor.

"When you leave off eating, in memory of that brave time, I will leave off washing," he returned. "I tell you, nothing but a warrior's life becomes ethel-born men, nor sluggishness nor junketings, but day under fire and nights among the Wise Men of council. By Saint Mary, I feel that I have never lived before! One week at the heels of Edmund Ironside is worth a lifetime under the banner of any other king."

A pause met his warmth somewhat coolly; and the warrior who broke the silence lowered his voice to do it.

NOT EQUAL TO POSITION.

"Groom of the Feather Cloak" Fell from Grace.

When King Kalakaua of Hawaii visited Japan twenty years ago he was very anxious to exhibit to the Japanese his famous royal feather cloak. It did not look well draped over the regular costume of the king, which was based on European military models. It was out of the question to wear it draped over brown cuticle, as was the ancient fashion. Finally it was decided to let Robert, one of his attendants, wear it. William N. Armstrong, the king's attorney-general, says: "This additional service delighted Robert, who now, according to a confidential statement made to his Japanese attendant, 'groom of the royal standard,' 'groom of the feather cloak' and 'valet in ordinary.' While in the Imperial car, on the way to Tokyo, the king's suite had suddenly seen Robert, sitting in state in the luggage car, dressed in a silk hat, white gloves and with the gorgeous royal cloak hanging over his shoulders, the tableau being completed by a group of Japanese attendants who were standing before him, lost in admiration." But Robert was scarcely equal to the dignity that was his. In his capacity of valet he preceded the party to the palace assigned to them, and discovered there abundance of wines and spirits, which he consumed until they arrived. He was found asleep in the king's bed chamber, with the silk hat far down over his head and the gorgeous cloak askew on his shoulders. He was at once deposed from his office of 'groom of the feather cloak.'"

"What ho! Does the Lord of Ivarsdale go there?"

He whom they had called the Ethelreding drew himself up alertly. "I make no answer to hedge-creeper," he said. "Come out where you can be seen."

"I am the messenger of Edric of Mercia. Misgreet me not. Before cockcrow we shall be sworn brothers. I bear a message to King Edmund."

The Ethelreding's anger leaped out like a flame; even in the starlight it could be seen how his face crimsoned.

"No, as God lives!" he answered swiftly. "It is not to Edmund alone that the Gainer is lawful. Should he pass the King's sword, a hundred blades wait for him, mine among them. Seek what he may seek, he shall not have peace of us. Take yourself out of reach if you would not be sped with arrows."

A jeering laugh was the only answer but the tramping of hoofs suggested that his advice was being taken.

When the sound had faded quite away, the Lord of Ivarsdale breathed out the rest of his resentment in a hearty imprecation, and, turning, came on his patient. With a touch as gentle as it was strong, he put aside her resisting hands and began swiftly

U. S. SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA Recommends Pe-ru-na For Dyspepsia and Stomach Trouble.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Catarrh of the Stomach is Generally Called Dyspepsia—Something to Produce Artificial Digestion is Generally Taken.

Hence, Pepsin, Pancreatin and a Host of Other Digestive Remedies Has Been Invented.

These Remedies Do Not Reach the Seat of the Difficulty, Which is Really Catarrh.

EX. U. S. Senator M. C. Butler from South Carolina, was Senator from that State for two terms. In a recent letter to The Peru-na Medicine Co., from Washington, D. C., he says: "I can recommend Peru-na for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine besides a good tonic."—M. C. Butler.

The only rational way to cure dyspepsia is to remove the catarrh. Peru-na cures catarrh. Peru-na does not produce artificial digestion. It cures catarrh and leaves the stomach to perform digestion in a natural way. This is vastly better and safer than resorting to artificial methods or narcotics.

Peru-na has cured more cases of dyspepsia than all other remedies combined, simply because it cures catarrh wherever located. If catarrh is located in the head, Peru-na cures it. If catarrh is located in the throat or bronchial tubes, Peru-na cures it. When catarrh becomes settled in the stomach, Peru-na cures it, as well in this location as in any other.

Peru-na is not simply a remedy for dyspepsia. Peru-na is a catarrh remedy. Peru-na cures dyspepsia because it is generally dependent upon catarrh.

T. W. MINGAY, Editor and Proprietor.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY
for $1.00 per year strictly in advance.

ADVERTISING RATES

For long or short time contracts made known on application.

Cards of thanks and resolutions of respect will be charged for at the rate of 5 cents per line.

Announcements of entertainments, socials, etc., for which a regular admission fee is charged, 5 cents per line per insertion, unless other arrangements are made with the editor.

Notices of church services free.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1904.

It is reported that Ypsilanti township has a candidate for sheriff on the Republican ticket who should be a winner. His name is Joseph E. Warner, and he proposes, if he should get the nomination and be elected, to turn over to the county treasurer all monies above $2,000 a year received as fees. When it is remembered that the sheriff's office has cost the county as high as $10,000 in a single year, the significance of this proposition as a money saver is obvious.

The postoffice appropriation bill, as signed by the president, fixes the compensation of rural carriers at $720 a year from July 1, and says: "And on and after said date said carriers shall not solicit business or receive orders of any kind for any person, firm or corporation, and shall not, during their hours of employment, carry any merchandise for hire. Provided, that said carriers may carry merchandise for hire for and upon request of the patrons residing upon their respective routes, whenever the same shall not interfere with the proper discharge of their official duties, and under such regulations as the postmaster-general may prescribe."

This means that on and after July 1 the carriers cannot act as agents for business houses, canvassers for newspapers, or engage in anything but carry the mails during the hours they are on duty, although they can carry parcels to patrons on their request. The increased salary and the judicious restrictions provided for in the bill should result in even better service to patrons than they have already had.

Worst of All Experiences.

Can anything be worse than to feel that every minute will be your last? Such was the experience of Mrs. S. H. Newson, Decatur, Ala., "For three years," she writes, "I endured insufferable pain from indigestion, stomach and bowel trouble. Death seemed inevitable when doctors and all remedies failed. At length I was induced to try Electric Bitters and the result was miraculous. I improved at once and now I'm completely recovered." For liver, kidney, stomach and bowel troubles Electric Bitters is the only medicine. Only 50c. It's guaranteed by Glazier & Stimson, druggists.

Michigan Central Excursions.

Special Sunday Round Trips—Rates one and one half cents per mile each way every Sunday, until otherwise advised, to any point on M. C. R. R. west of the Detroit river to which journey in both directions can be made by trains scheduled to reach the selling point on return trip at or before midnight of date stamped on back of ticket.

Driven to Desperation.

Living at an out of the way place, remote from civilization, a family is often driven to desperation in case of accident, resulting in burns, cuts, wounds, ulcers, etc. Lay in a supply of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the best on earth. 25c. at Glazier & Stimson's drug store.

ITEMS OF LOCAL INTEREST.

The biennial convention of the Michigan Christian Endeavor Union will be held at Lake Orion from June 28 to July 1.

An interesting letter from Rev. G. W. Gordon, descriptive of the St. Louis exposition, was received too late for publication this week.

A new cement walk is being laid around the Durand-Hatch block much to the gratification of everybody, particularly the tenants of the building.

The Detroit Evening News, the Detroit Journal, the Ann Arbor Argus and the Ann Arbor Daily Times have all raised the price of their papers from one cent a copy to two cents a copy, or 10 cents a week. The change in price went into effect June 1.

After considerable correspondence with the post office department, Postmaster Hoover has secured for the Chelsea office the privilege of sending a locked mail pouch on train No. 36 going east at 8:29 a. m. This added service will be a great convenience.

Some time ago the Michigan department, G. A. R., offered prizes for the best essays on Memorial day and kindred patriotic subjects written by pupils of the public schools of Michigan. Nearly 200 pupils submitted essays, and the judging committee made its awards of five gold medals, five silver medals, and five bronze medals Tuesday. The first gold medal was won by a Washtenaw county girl Miss Leah E. Pew, of Ypsilanti.

Announcement.

Kantlebr Bros. wish to announce that they will open up a first class grocery in the Staffan Block, South Main Street, on or about June 15th, where they will be pleased to see all their old friends and as many new ones. Having had thirteen years experience both in wholesale and retail grocery business, we will be able to take care of your wants in a satisfactory manner.

Mrs. Louis Ernest, Evansville, Ind.—Hollister's "Rocky Mountain Tea" is splendid. Makes sick people well. Cured me after others failed." Tea or tablet form. 35 cents. Glazier & Stimson.

Republican County Convention.

The Republicans of Washtenaw county will meet in the court room at the court house in the city of Ann Arbor on Friday, June 10, at 11 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of electing 21 delegates to the state convention, called to meet at Detroit, Thursday, June 30, and to elect 21 delegates to the state convention called to meet at Saginaw, Wednesday, Sept. 7, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to extend one heartfelt thanks to our many friends, who, in our deep affliction, came to us with tender sympathy and loving kindness; and also for the many beautiful floral offerings.

H. S. HOLMES MERCANTILE CO.

Mr. Holmes insists on being released from any active interest or part in the running of the business of this firm. In order to continue at all we have formed a new corporation to take over the business just as soon as the stock and investment is down in size to where the new company can handle it. This means cutting down the stock of goods a great many thousand dollars at once—quick, and entirely without regard to profits. We are forced to make prices that will turn all kinds of merchandise into cash quickly. It is not a question of profits, but simply a question of turning a big stock of merchandise out of the store at once.

By a late ruling of the Michigan state board of health, consumption has been placed under the same heading with diphtheria, smallpox, scarlet fever, etc. The assembling of friends at the home where death from consumption has occurred, for the purpose of holding a funeral, is prohibited unless the house is first thoroughly famigated and disinfected.

Startling Evidence.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from T. J. McFarland, Bentonville, Va., serves as example. He writes: "I had bronchitis for three years and doctored all the time without being benefited. Then I began taking Dr. King's New Discovery, and a few bottles wholly cured me." Equally effective in curing all lung and throat troubles, consumption, pneumonia and grip. Guaranteed by Glazier & Stimson, druggists. Trial bottles free, regular sizes 50c and $1.00.

THE NEWS OF MICHIGAN.

A Tax Wrangle.

The Bessemer Equalization Board has held the longest and stormiest session in the city's history. Resident taxpayers made a demonstration in a body before the board to get city real estate either reduced in proportion to the reduction on the mines, or the mines placed back where they were last year, but could make no impression, as the board is said to be constituted of mine employees and local politicians depending on mine support to hold their offices. The several mines in the city stand equalized as follows, being at total reduction of $114,000 from last year: Tilden, $275,000; Palms, $27,250; Colby, $35,000; West Colby, $40,000; Jack Pot, $6,000; Vinona, $6,000; Electric Light Co., $18,000; total $407,250.

The total valuation of city, including mines, real estate and personal, $850,000.

Local taxpayers will appeal to state tax commission for rehearing in the matter.

The Search for Stevens.

The Detroit police department has sent out circulars containing a picture and description of Wm. Stevens, alias Walter Shepherd, charged with the murder of Ralph Calkins, who was shot to death in Bowman's saloon Thursday evening, May 19, 1904.

Stevens is described as follows: 28 years old, 6 feet tall, weight about 200 pounds, fair complexion, black hair, steel blue eyes; smooth shaven but can grow heavy beard. Metal polisher by trade. Home in Chicago, where he has served time for robbery. Detectives have been in Traverse City secretly working on the case and looking up his wife, who is supposed to be living there. The local officers are unable to locate the woman and believe she is not in the city, but in some nearby town.

The Lake Tie Up.

The Lake Carriers' association has sent out an ultimatum from Cleveland which further complicates the trouble between that body and the Masters & Pilots' association. The association says that as long as the masters have resorted to expulsion and heavy fines in endeavoring to prevent and intimidate licensed officers from manning vessels, their executive committee has decided, in order to protect the men now at work, and to settle positively the question of the management of vessel property, that no captain will be employed who retains membership in the Masters & Pilots' association.

Hunting Stevens.

The report from Detroit that Wm. Stevens, the alleged murderer of Bartender Calkins, of that city, had written a letter from Bay City caused much excitement among the local sleuths, and a searching investigation by city and county authorities resulted. They failed to discover the least evidence that Stevens had been there, or even passed through the place, although he may have covered his tracks. Menger description makes identification difficult. Every sleuth, professional and amateur, in Michigan, is on the scent, and Stevens ought not to escape.

Brand New Citizens.

During the term of circuit court for Houghton county, last week some 200 aliens became citizens of the United States. The reasons advanced for this are that this is a presidential year, and also because of the war in the far east. A great majority of the men who became citizens were former subjects of the czar, nearly all of them Finns, and it is believed that many of them listened to the security of the American flag for fear Emperor Nicholas might call them home for army service.

Poisoned Sheep.

Polish people in Bronson and vicinity are again stirred up over the alleged murder by arsenical poisoning of John Ludwick by his wife, Katie, to whom he had only been married three weeks; now the victims are 15 sheep belonging to Frank Yish, a prominent farmer. Nearly all were ewes with lambs by their sides, but few of the lambs seem to have been affected. The indication is that the poison used was strychnine. The officers have no clue as yet.

Going Back.

The novel sight of an emigrant train leaving Ironwood with its load of emigrants for the old country can be seen now almost daily. Thursday night some 200 Italians and Finns were packed in one train and destined for their own country and carrying with them their hoarded accumulations of a few years of prosperity. Every day now sees crowds of these people at both the railroad depots leaving for their homes across the sea, as mine after mine shuts down.

Cooked His Flesh.

John Allmendinger, Jr., son of John Allmendinger, the bridge contractor, was terribly scalded Saturday morning by a blow-out in the boiler of a pile driver at work in the Benton Harbor canal. The burns may prove fatal. The young man was working in the boiler room and was caught in the stream of boiling water pouring from the hole. The flesh on his back and legs was literally cooked.

New Tax Commissioner.

The resignation of Angus W. Kerr, Calumet, as a member of the state tax commission has been received and accepted by Gov. Bliss, and Robert H. Shields, of Houghton, has been appointed to fill the vacancy. Kerr's term would have expired on December 31 of this year and it is stated that he resigned in order to run for prosecuting attorney of his county.

While crazed by religion Mrs. Chas. Page, of Niles, tried to kill herself by inhaling and then swallowing chloroform.

Memorial Day.

Despite the bad weather throughout Michigan Memorial day was appropriately observed. In most places the parades were made and addresses delivered as had been previously arranged, and every possible honor paid the memory of the soldiers and sailors who fought and fell for the preservation of the union in 1861-65.

Reports from various places in the United States are of the usual observance of the day. At Gettysburg President Roosevelt delivered the address.

Raised the Salaries.

Increases in salaries of presidential postmasters in Michigan, in effect July 1, are announced as follows: Sault Ste. Marie, $1,000 to $1,100; Sault Ste. Marie, $1,000 to $1,100; South Haven, $2,200 to $2,300; Sparta, $1,300 to $1,400; Standish, $1,300 to $1,400; Sturgis, $1,800 to $1,900; Thompsonville, $1,000 to $1,100; Three Rivers, $2,300 to $2,500; Vermontville, $1,000 to $1,100; Wyandotte, $1,800 to $2,000; Yale, $1,400 to $1,500.

The Montague Case.

Charles Montague, the former Caro banker and capitalist, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed last July, was granted a final discharge by Judge Swan Thursday. Mr. Montague's compromise with his creditors on the basis of 50 cents on the dollar, accepted by all his creditors, was ratified by the court. Mr. Montague says he has done everything in his power to satisfy his creditors, even to mortgaging his homestead at Caro.

Hard Prospect.

The farmers in the immediate neighborhood of Boyne are in despair. Too much rain; no crops are in and present indications do not give them any hope. Since the 22d over two inches of rain has fallen, causing incalculable damage. Roads are washed out, cellars flooded and fields drowned out. Thursday noon and evening witnessed the heaviest rainfall in years.

A Missing Fisherman.

Absolutely no trace can be found of Sam Helopaa, a fisherman, who left Calumet three weeks ago for Hancock, to purchase an outfit for his season's work. The police have made strenuous efforts to locate the man, and it is possible he met with foul play. A wife and several children were dependent upon him for a living.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD.

The Japs Forcing Fighting.

That the active Japs are doing things all the time to the Russian army is evidenced by the movements, skirmishes and battles that have been taking place with such rapidity during the past ten days. Port Arthur is receiving a fierce bombardment, and its fall is almost certain. Dalney has been taken with the Russian garrison, as late reports state, and the Japs are said to have reached Si Wa Tze, at the very gates of Port Arthur, which now is closely invested. Gen. Oku is reported to be giving his men a rest after the fearful fighting of the past three days while he awaits the arrival of his heavy guns, which are being hurried forward with characteristic Japanese energy.

The Japanese loss in killed and wounded is estimated here at not less than 5,000, while the Russians, in killed, wounded and captured, are believed to have lost nearly as many, including the Dalny garrison.

Admiral Togo keeps up a constant bombardment of the Port Arthur fortifications, and so close is the blockade maintained that it would be difficult for a rowboat to pass.

The Japanese assault on Nan Shan hill was one of the fiercest and bloodiest affairs in modern warfare. In the earlier rushes of the engagement every man participating was shot down before he reached the first line of Russian trenches. It was found necessary to stop these infantry charges and renew the artillery fire from the rear before the final and successful assault on the Russian position could be made. The success of this assault was brought about by one detachment of Japanese troops, more intrepid than their comrades, who succeeded in piercing the Russian line.

On to Port Arthur.

The Japanese army swept the Russians from Kin-Chou Thursday evening, and in a desperate night attack stormed the almost impregnable position of the Russians on Nanshan hill, west of Tachenwan.

The battle raged in the hills all through the night and fragmentary telegrams from the Japanese headquarters report that the engagement is still in progress and that the Japanese are still pursuing the Russians south from Nanshan and the head of Tachenwan bay.

The Russians had made elaborate preparations to check the Japanese movement south on the Liao-Tung peninsula toward Port Arthur.

Vice Admiral Togo has established a complete blockade around the southern end of the Liao Tung peninsula. This completely envelops Port Arthur from the seaward and probably marks the opening of the final investment of the town and its fortifications.

The Japanese troops have swept all the Russians from their defenses west of Tachenwan bay. It is now improbable that the latter will be capable of offering any further serious resistance in the territory north of Port Arthur.

The Russian officials claimed that the lights behind Kin Chou furnished the key to the situation in the upper part of the peninsula, and these have now been stormed by the victorious Japs. The Russians were formidable entrenched and had made elaborate preparations to hold the hills, which they were naturally almost impregnable. The night assault of the Japs has, however, taken away Russia's last bulwark near Port Arthur.

Japs Mobilizing.

A dispatch from Yin Kow says a Japanese third army is mobilizing at Hiroshima. A change in the Japanese plan arising from the naval disaster involves the utilizing of the second army for reduction of Port Arthur, and therefore the first army is intrenching at Feng-Wang-Cheng.

The London Post's special Shanghai correspondent says it is reported Russians are removing stores and provisions to Harbin, and that 100 locomotives and 800 cars are collected at Liao-Yang in readiness to convey passengers and goods.

Liao Yang reports the Japanese camps are infested with cholera and that there is an average of 100 deaths daily.

Kin-Chou Captured.

A dispatch to the Central News from Tokio says the Japanese have stormed and captured the town of Kin-Chou, about 32 miles north of Port Arthur.

In an earlier message the Tokio correspondent of the Central News cabled that Japanese spies had ascertained that the Russians had 30 guns at Kin-Chou and numerous mines and wire entanglements at all the points where a Japanese attack was expected.

War Notes.

According to reports, which have reached the Russian headquarters at Liao-Yang, from Chinese sources, the Japanese have made a land attack on Port Arthur, but have been repulsed with heavy loss. The truth of the reports is questioned in St. Petersburg.

The report that Rear-Admiral Jensen, finding it impossible to save the protected Russian cruiser Bogatyr, which went ashore recently in a fog on the rocks off Vladivostok, caused her to be blown up, is confirmed.

Dominick Bills and two other Italians were killed in Myersdale, Pa., Sunday by an unknown Italian, ordered by Bills to stop picking dandelions in his yard.

Detroit was left out of the list of cities selected for episcopal residences by the Methodist Episcopal general conference now sitting in Los Angeles, Cal. The cities selected are New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Nashville, Buffalo, Cincinnati, Chattanooga, St. Louis, Chicago, Minneapolis, Denver, Portland, Ore., San Francisco, Zurich, Switzerland, Buenos Ayres and Shanghai.

Senator Quay is Dead.

Col. Matthew Stanley Quay, senior senator from Pennsylvania, died peacefully in death on the 23rd at his home in Beaver, Pa., after an illness which had been more or less persistent for the past year, which took a turn for the worse ten days ago, and which the doctors diagnosed as chronic gastritis. He was born in Dillsburg, near Harrisburg, Pa., on Sept. 30, 1833. His father was a Presbyterian minister. Young Quay was graduated from Jefferson college at the age of 17, and immediately began the study of law in the offices of Penney & Sterret, at Pittsburgh. His health failing, he went south, lost what little money he had, and with an old school friend traveled about the country giving magic lantern shows and picking up a precarious living. He fought the Comanche Indians, having enlisted in the army. He returned to Pennsylvania when he completed his law studies and began his remarkable career. Mr. Quay held successively over a dozen offices, becoming in turn lieutenant of reserves, assistant state commissary-general, lieutenant-general of state, governor's secretary, colonel of the One Hundred and Thirty-fourth Pennsylvania volunteers, state agent at Washington, military secretary of the state, representative and state senator, twice secretary of the commonwealth, recorder of Philadelphia, state treasurer and United States senator.

He went to the war in 1861 as lieutenant of the Eleventh Pennsylvania reserves. He later resigned from the regiment, and had staff assignments. His entire war service lasted less than five months, and most of that time he was ill with typhoid fever.

Attempt to Kill the Czar.

The Lokal Anzeiger reports an attempt to assassinate the czar during his majesty's recent trip through Russia. The attempt was made in the form of a well laid plan to wreck the imperial train near Krenmentschug by tearing up the rails. The plan was frustrated. A pilot train was sent in advance of the imperial car to clear the way. This advance train was wrecked 10 minutes before the czar's train was due on the spot.

Reducing the Working Force.

The reduction of the working force of the railroads in this country is more extensive than was thought, a month ago, would be necessary. Estimates are that not less than 75,000 employees have been dropped from the railroad pay rolls. A large proportion of these employees are losing their jobs under orders from company headquarters to dismiss from the freight departments every person not absolutely needed. Train hands, station men and clerks have been receiving notices to quit since April 15, and by June 10 it is expected that the weeding out process will have been completed.

The main cause of this wave of railroad economy is the falling off in freight shipments within the last six weeks.

General Tyner Acquitted.

A verdict of not guilty was rendered in the Tyner-Barrett conspiracy case Wednesday afternoon. The jury was out only 25 minutes.

Gen. Tyner broke down completely when the verdict was announced. Several of the jurors wept with him, and all of them shook hands with him.

The Tyner-Barrett case was the first of the scandals in the postoffice department to come to light. Tyner was the attorney for the department, and decided all questionable cases for the admission of matter to the mails, and was accused of making rulings favorable to get-rich-quick concerns, notable among which was the turf swindle promoted by "Baldy" Ryan and others. Barrett was his nephew and assistant.

Rev. J. M. Driver, Chicago, declares the Reed Smoot inquiry was only a Mormon advertising dodge.

CONDENSED NEWS.

The Presbyterian general assembly at Buffalo, in a close vote, has rejected a committee's report advising against the indiscriminate remarriage of divorced persons.

While being pursued by a detective, two men, thought to be freight robbers, jumped into the river at Cleveland, and it is supposed they were drowned or killed.

More than 200 delegates are in attendance at the meetings of the national convention of the Roman Catholic Knights and Ladies of America in Louisville, Ky.

The large village of Iskorosh, Russia, has been burned down. The fire is estimated at $1,000,000. The loss was started by children playing with matches. The whole of the population is homeless and reduced to beggary.

For extraordinary heroism in the recent explosion on the battleship Missouri, the following named enlisted men have been made warrant officers: Michael Higgins, chief boatswain's mate, appointed as acting boatswain; Mons Messen, chief gunner's mate, appointed acting gunner; Geo. Crofton, chief machinist, appointed acting warrant machinist.

Dr. Max Elshorn, a distinguished stomach specialist from New York, consulted with Dr. Wilson and Drs. Lichtfeld and Murdoch of Pittsburgh on the condition of Senator Quay at his home at Beaver, Pa. It was agreed that the senator has an excellent chance of recovery. Senator Quay is suffering from chronic gastritis.

Policy gaming was hit a hard blow by the police at Chicago. Officers, under the direction of Assistant Chief of Police Schuetter, raided five large policy clearing houses, made 108 arrests, seized $4,700 in cash, a number of large checks, and secured evidence on which to base several additional raids.

MAGNETIC TRAIN THAT INVENTOR CLAIMS WILL HAVE SPEED OF 400 MILES AN HOUR

According to the plans of Prof. Albert C. Albertson, president of the Electro-Magnetic Railway Construction company, New Yorkers are soon to see something in the way of dizzy speed over the rails that will make the Empire State Express and Twentieth Century Flyer look like local freights. The mere matter of eighty miles an hour will be comparatively slow that the passengers are like-and Twenty-sixth street. He has a miniature railroad there, on which he chases a toy train of one car and the queer-looking motor every day. In order to perfect the mechanism. The inventor says he can burn up the rails with it, and is really afraid to let it reach its maximum.

Prof. Albertson says that he himself does not yet know the exact maximum of speed that his invention community from a wreck. The wheels are to run on the rails, and then, to make sure that they cannot jump the track, the magnets will run along the under the rails. No difference how high is the rate of speed attained, Prof. Albertson says this mode of construction will effectually prevent the train from leaving the track.

"The principle of the invention is so simple that even a layman may to ask the conductor what's detaining them.

By July 1 Prof. Albertson plans to have in operation the first magnetic train the world has ever seen. His company is about to begin the construction of a railway between Midland Beach and South Beach, S. I. The road will be one and eight-tenths miles in length and the rolling stock will be one little motor of the Albertson patent and, at the most, three cars. There will be no necessity for more than a single train for, at the lightning speed that the inventor purposes sending it over the right of way, two trains would be cumbersome.

Fifteen seconds will be the schedule time from terminal to terminal, if Prof. Albertson realizes his hopes. He said yesterday that he had figured it all out and made his estimates of the speed with the little models he has in his workshop at Eleventh avenue can attain, but is convinced that it can haul a train along a straight track at more than four hundred miles an hour.

The railroad between Midland Beach and South Beach is to be a sort of a toy elevated structure. The rails will rest on a steel framework eight feet above the ground. The object of this is to give the train what the inventor regards as absolute im-readily understand it," said the inventor. "I have given seven years of my life to its study and perfection. The time is not far distant when the railroads not only of this country but of every one in the civilized world, will be compelled to adopt the electro-magnetic motor. It will revolutionize speed and reduce the cost of operation."

"Although a speed of 400 or more miles an hour sounds extravagant at the present, it is no more fabulous than the rate of speed attained to-day by fast trains appeared to the inventive world forty or fifty years ago."

"The short line is to be constructed chiefly for the purpose of demonstrating that under the proper conditions a phenomenal rate of speed may be obtained with perfect safety. We expect to have the best engineers in the world here to see the initial tests."—New York World.

PERILS FACED BY CREWS OF "DESTROYERS"

"Put a 30-knot destroyer into a rough sea," says Sir William White, "and the limit of speed she can make is what she can bear—what the people on her can bear."

Traveling at a 30-knot speed is going at the rate of a little over thirty miles an hour. You can travel at that speed in a railway train with comfort—in fact, it is about the speed of the ordinary train. But imagine a runaway horse dragging your carriage over a rough country road at thirty-four miles an hour and you get an idea of what it means to go thirty knots an hour in a torpedo boat. Good for the digestion, maybe, but rough on the nerves; and if anything gives way, disaster complete and overwhelming.

The average age of the commanders of the battleships in the United States navy is about 57 years. In selecting officers to command torpedo boats it is endeavored to get men of about 30 or under. Torpedo boats are the bucking bronchos of the sea, and it takes a young man to ride them successfully.

COOKERY IN ANCIENT TIMES.

Wonderful Concoctions Told of in Centuries Old Book.

An old volume, the "Noble Boka of Cookery, for a Prince Houshold or any other Estate Householder," written about the year 1467, contains many rare and curious recipes in use 430 years ago, not only for ordinary dishes, but those to be eaten on fast and fish days. It is curious, in reading this cookery book, to find that there are the same birds, beasts and fishes, the same courses, and sometimes the same names to dishes as in a modern one; but although the names are often the same the ingredients and the preparation are very different. For instance, their "blanche mange" was composed of lamprey, or other fish, and their custards contained fresh pork minced small. Here is one recipe from the book: "To make mon amy, take and boll cows' cream, and when it is boiled set it aside and let it cool; then take cow curds and press out the whey; then bruise them in a mortar, and cast them in the pot to the cream and boll together. Put thereto sugar, honey, and may butter, colour it up with saffron, and in the setting down put in yolks of eggs, well beaten and do away the strain, and let the potage be standing, then arrange it in dishes, and plant therein flowers."

The Dreamer's Dream.

With many a furrowed trace of life's wind-fretted deep, Here lies a common face—an aged man asleep. Just off the dusty way whereon the sun-gleams break, Amid the drowse of day, a casual nap he takes.

Only a poor old man; yet whence, through all disguise Of years of toil and tan, steal over his These gleams, soft as a kiss, which to the face impart A beauty and a bliss—the youthfulness of the heart?

By magic race and blest the scars have been annealed; The waves are all at rest; an inner peace revealed, That lends each furrowed trace of life's wind-fretted deep A tender, childlike grace—on this old man asleep.

German Publications.

Of the 12,703 newspapers and periodicals published in Germany, more than 27 per cent are in other languages than German, 9 per cent being in English alone.

TRAIT OF KING LUNALILO.

Dusky Monarch, When in Liquor, Would Use Only English Tongue.

William N. Armstrong, who was attorney-general under King Kalakaua of Hawaii, has written an amusing volume about that monarch. He says in it: "It is a singular trait of the Hawaiians to avoid the use of English when sober, but when drunk to use it with much volubility. The king's immediate predecessor on the throne, Lunaliilo, when in liquor would often refuse to converse with his native relatives in the native language, but addressed them in English, and directed an interpreter to translate his speech; and, on the other hand, required a translation into English of their conversation in Hawaiian. The king's remarkable memory furnished him with a considerable vocabulary of uncommon words; alcohol seemed to open that part of his brain where they were stored, especially when, like the moon, he was at the third quarter and coming to the 'full.' On one occasion the use of the words 'hippodramatic performance' secured to him the prestige of a learned man."

Damaged Amherstburg.

What is said to be the worst cyclone in the history of Ontario visited Amherstburg on Thursday. That no lives were lost or no persons even injured is a miracle. Their escape was doubtless due to the fact that they had ample warning of the storm, its approach being noticed more than 30 minutes before it broke over the town. Consequently, everybody had a chance to secure places of safety. From their retreats they saw the wind uproot buildings, uproot trees and level the telephone and telegraph poles to the street, cutting off the town's communication with the outside world. It is estimated that the total loss will not be more than $10,000.

Only Seven Escaped.

The tow boat Fred Wilson was torn into fragments, ten men were blown into pieces and sixteen others injured by a tremendous explosion of the boat's boilers Thursday, on the Ohio river. Of the thirty-three persons aboard the boat, only seven escaped unhurt. Of the injured, one will probably die. The force of the explosion was so great that it shattered windows and awakened the occupants of houses in Louisville, four miles from the scene.

Severe Blow to the Town.

The large sawmill belonging to J. I. Butler & Co., at Moorestown, in the northwest corner of Missaukee county, which was totally destroyed by fire, together with about 1,500,000 feet of lumber and three cars, two loaded with lumber and one with potatoes, caused a loss which will reach $30,000, with no insurance. Practically the whole population of the town is thrown out of employment until a new mill can be built.

Cut Down $1,000,000.

The Jackson supervisors thought the figures of the tax commission, so far as they referred to that city, were too high, so they have slashed off $1,000,000, reducing the total valuation to $15,000,000. This action is likely to raise serious questions with the appropriations, as they are all based on the figures made by the state tax commission.

Lilly's Big Ranch.

Dr. Sipper, of Chicago, has just completed a deal for the Alex. Runnels ranch of 2,500 acres. He will clear the land and get it into clover and then put cattle upon it. Next spring he will build a cheese factory which will be a boon to the farmers of Lilly and vicinity who expect much from the venture in ranching.

CONDENSED.

Natives in Johannesburg and vicinity, South Africa, are reported on the verge of rebellion.

Gen. Miles, speaking at the dinner of the Massachusetts Reform club, in Boston, advocated the independence of the Philippines and reciprocity with Canada.

Charges against Judge Advocate-General Lemley, of the navy, have been made by John Smith, a former seaman, who asks that Lemley be court-martialed for alleged false representation against Smith in a case appealed by the latter to the supreme court from the court of claims.

Admiral Walker, president of the isthmian canal commission, says that if work on the canal is limited to American labor, it would, it is believed, prevent the construction of the waterway. The admiral thought that at the beginning the work would be prosecuted by negro labor from Jamaica, but that later Chinese coolies would be secured. At present about 700 persons are employed on the canal.

The United States transport Kilpatrick, which arrived in New York Sunday, brought the bodies of 94 soldiers who died in the Philippines.

Chili's Chief Port and Its People

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

The man who selected the site and laid out the town of Valparaiso played a costly joke on future generations. He must have been crazy or drunk, although the records do not offer any such suggestion by way of explanation or apology for the rash act. Valparaiso means "the valley of Paris," and that is where the joke comes in. Instead of being a valley, the place is located on hills that are so steep they make one's head swim. Several long streets ramble aimlessly along the water front, and then, to get anywhere else, one must take to a row boat or an elevator.

The Chileno are called the Yankees of South America, and are praised a

Several of us were waiting outside while one of the party was making some purchases in a store. Presently our friend came out, red in the face, and swearing like a trooper. "What do you think? That fool in there won't take American money. I told him he was crazy—that it was the best money in the world. He looked it over carefully, remarked that it was very pretty, but said he couldn't do anything with it. Wouldn't that jar you?"

Other members of the party got jarred at Antofagasta. The small delegation that went to ask a question of the American consul got routed as unceremoniously as if they had been great deal for their energy and their thrifty qualities. They do look better and move faster than their neighbors. The foreign element here is responsible for this improvement, but it is likely to prove disastrous in the end, because it has made the native ambitious beyond his possibilities. He is making more show than he can afford. The country is being rented out to the foreigners; its resources are being leased and the rent is being spent faster than it comes in. Some day there won't be any more resources. Then the foreigner will go back where he came from and the native will find himself sitting up with a corpse.

Chili is living over the history of Peru. Its northern part is desert, its central portion is vineyards, and the southern region agricultural lands and forests. The nitrate deposits in the northern desert are yielding the country 75 per cent of revenue. The foreigner is making the bulk of the profit from these rich fields and he is sending it home. When he winds up his work and goes away, as he must eventually, the native will find himself without means of subsistence. He is making no provision whatever for the rainy day that is certain to come to all men and all nations.

Years ago Peru had a golden goose in its guano islands and nitrate fields. It derived millions from them and spent those millions recklessly and without thought of the future. One day the guano deposits gave out, and then, as if to prove that misfortunes never come singly, along came Chili and took away the nitrate fields by main strength and awkwardness.

Cathedral and Plaza.

Since that time Peru has been in sackcloth and ashes a year for every one she lived in riotous opulence. And now Chili is making poor use of her ill-gotten gains.

American money does not circulate in Chili. It is not accepted in either banks or stores. It must be traded off to brokers, much after the fashion of unused railroad tickets at home. In either instance one has to take whatever is offered. The money changers, like the ticket scalpers, have an agreement, and one of them will not give more than another.

It is said that Americans are very proud and boastful, and it is doubtless true, because they have a young and growing country, and youth is generally vain of its strength, but it takes the wind out of Mr. Yankee's sail the first time his pretty gold money is pushed back at him. I was with a party when this happened. It was at Antofagasta, one of the nitrate ports of the north of Chili.

the bartenders have to cater to the fiercest thirsts on earth.

On one side of the lead colored buildings along the wharf, the word nitrate is spelled out in big black letters. This explains the presence of the white people, and of the town itself. Were it not for nitrate the lizards would soon be left in possession of the shifting sands of Antofagasta. The white people have taken much treasure from the desert, but they have had to pay for it. High up on the mountain are the gleaming shafts of an overgrown graveyard. The thickly studded headstones flash in the sun as if to signal you the desert warning and its challenge. It is no easy thing to live where your drinking water must come through a pipe 180 miles long. We forgive the consul.

Wise men are instructed by reason; men of less understanding, by experience; the most ignorant, by necessity; and beasts by nature.—Cleora.

Dragging Pains

2825 Keeley St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groin. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had blinding headaches and rushing of blood to the brain. What to try I knew not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it pleasant to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood seemed to course through my veins and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Maudie Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

AFTER THE C. M. B. A.

An Old Member of the Association Objects to the Raise in Assessment Rates.

Michael Williams, of Ann Arbor, has commenced an important test case in the circuit court against the Catholic Mutual Benefit Association, which will have a direct bearing on the action of the company last October when it voted to raise the assessment rates of the older members. In consequence thereof Williams finds that his assessment on a $2,000 policy has been increased from $39 a year at the time he entered the order at 49 years of age to $75 a year on his present age, 65 years. Being too old to enter another order, he asks the court to establish his life membership in the association. The contention is that the policy is a contract, and that the company have no right to make any changes in the rates. The association has 62,000 members.

Caucus.

Strawberries Grown by Gas.

The remarkable gas "electroid," for which its inventor, Prof. Rychnowski, claims that it can be condensed into greenish-blue balls, which are elastic like India rubber, would apparently be the very thing for automobile tires. The gas is self-luminous, and lamps would, therefore, be unnecessary at night, while in its genial rays vegetation sprouts surprisingly. To run through country lanes in winter, leaving ripe strawberries on the banks in one's wake, would be a pleasing experience. The automobilist would be welcome everywhere.

IF YOU KNEW

that by paying a few cents more a gallon you could get a paint that would last several years longer, would you not pay it? Considering that the cost of applying the paint is the same, whether it lasts one year or five years, you will see that it is no economy to save a few cents on the paint and go to the expense of renewing it every year or two.

ROGERS PAINT

is guaranteed to last five years. In most cases, it will last as long again. We have known of cases where it lasted twenty years. Remarkable Effect of Change of Newspaper Headlines.

Capt. Edgar S. Dow of New Haven, to whom was given the honor of piloting President Roosevelt's yacht into New Haven harbor on his visit to Connecticut's metropolis last fall, is an entertaining old salt, who can always go a story-teller one better. Appropos of the humorous mistakes that printers make, the captain lately told the following of his own observation: "Years ago," he declared, "I used to take a New York paper that printed its shipping news on the same page with the obituaries. You can imagine the shock it gave me one morning to find the captions exchanged, and a long list of respectable names printed under the marine heading. 'Passed Through Hell Gate Yesterday.'"

Rat Killer.

Prof. Koch of Germany has discovered a successful method for the destruction of rats which frequent the holds of ships. An experiment has been conducted on board the Bulgaria at Hamburg. The rats were placed in cages in the hold. An apparatus was then used to fill the hold of the ship with a gaseous substance. When this was concluded the cages were brought on deck, and all the rats were found to be dead. The new system will in future be used in the German navy and on the big German steamship lines.

A Puzzled Youngster.

"Mamma," said a little boy, "when were George Washington and England married?" "Why, Lawrence," answered the mother, "what do you mean? Washington was a man and England is a country. They could not be married, my dear." "Then," replied the youthful philosopher, "I don't see why they call Washington the Father of his Country and England the Mother Country, if they were not married."

TRIAL BOTTLE FREE TO ALL.

Suffering women who will use Zoa Phora will suffer no longer. It has cured and has never failed to cure all others who have used it, and will cure you. Be discouraged no longer. There is hope and health and happiness for you now. All women who have used Zoa Phora endorse it without reservation and of their own accord. It has brought so much happiness into their lives that they refuse to be silent and want all women sufferers to know of their great relief and joy. Zoa Phora cures leucorrhoea, suppressed and painful periods, displacement, flooding, piles, kidney, liver and bladder troubles, makes child birth easy and regulates the change of life. Here is one letter of many thousands. Mrs. Mary Simmons of Millington, Mich., writes under date of March 5, 1903: "I can truly say that your medicine is the best I have ever used. It will do all you say, and more. It will cure any ill a woman may have, and I know this to be true because I have used the medicine myself, and know of others who have used it with the best of results. I think your medicine is a blessing from God, and I shall praise it as long as I live." Write the Zoa Phora Co., Kalamazoo, Mich., for a free trial bottle and copy of their illustrated medical book, "Dr. Penzance's Advice to Women." The doctor will gladly give free medical advice when needed. Zoa Phora is for sale at 10c a bottle by

Your Sight

TEST YOUR EYES.

Do you see objects as through a haze? Does the atmosphere seem smoky or foggy? Do spots or specks dance before your eyes? Do you see more clearly some days than others? These and many other symptoms will lead to blindness.
