THE MACCABEE SUPPER.

The Defeated "Reds" of Chelsea Tent Banqueted the Victorious "Whites" and Their Friends.

In the recent contest for membership between the "Reds" and the "Whites" of Chelsea Tent, K. O. T. M. M., the "Reds" were defeated and according to the terms of the agreement had to set up a supper for the victors. The supper came off Monday evening and a party of over 400 Maccabees, their ladies and friends partook of the bountiful spread in the town hall, which was served up for their delectation by the defeated "Reds."

It was a jolly, happy gathering such as the Maccabees always have, and mirth and enjoyment ruled supreme. After the supper a nice musical program was rendered by the Misses Ethel Bacon, Mildred Atkinson, Hazel Speer and Pauline Burg.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a $25 Maccabee pin to Fred H. Fuller, the captain of the "Reds," the presentation speech being made by R. D. Walker. Mr. Fuller responded in a few well meant words expressive of his appreciation of the gift and his willingness to do all he knew how for the advancement of the Maccabee cause.

WANTS HIS RIGHT OF WAY.

Frank Staffan Asks That the Circuit Court Prevent Mr. Glazier's Encroachment Upon It.

Frank Staffan has commenced suit in the circuit court against F. P. Glazier over the right of way in the alley back of the Chelsea Savings Bank building, and which during the past few days has been in process of conversion into a private park by the defendant.

Mr. Staffan claims that Mrs. Maria Frey conveyed several lots to Veleda and George Staffan and that from them they descended to himself. She also sold some adjoining property to Mr. Glazier, and Mr. Staffan claims that she reserved a right of way through it, and that this right of way has been assigned to himself. He states that Mr. Glazier has threatened to block up the right of way by a curbing, and he wants the circuit court to grant an order allowing him the right of way.

A Lyndon Boy's Fine Record.

John P. Miller will graduate from the Detroit College next Tuesday, June 21, with the degree of bachelor of arts. Mr. Miller stood third in a class of 16 and was second best in the philosophy class and was well up in all the other branches of his studies. He has also attained other distinction aside from his studies, having been first baseman and one of the best players on the college baseball team and was president and director of the mandolin club. Rev. W. P. Cousidine, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Miller, the Misses Mary, Margaret, Amelia, Anna and Lena Miller and Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Wood will attend the commencement exercises next Tuesday. Lyndon has reason to be proud of her bright boys and girls, many of whom have attained to good positions of trust in the professional and mercantile world. The Herald hopes it will be Mr. Miller's good fortune to do likewise.

A Non-Harmonious Convention.

The Republican county convention at Ann Arbor Friday last was not the harmonious gathering some people would have one believe it was. Col. H. S. Dean and Capt. E. P. Allen made strong speeches against the scheme to allow F. P. Glazier to name the delegation to the state convention at Detroit, but to no avail. The office seekers and their following were too strong for them and after two hours' discussion the advocates of fair dealing were defeated 151 to 29, and Mr. Glazier named the delegation. He also invited all present at the convention to go to Detroit on the special train June 30.

TWO CHELSEA WEDDINGS.

A Quartet of Young People Embarked on the Voyage of Matrimony the Past Two Days.

SPIEGELBERG-STEGER.

A quiet home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Steger, on South Main street, Tuesday evening, June 14, at 6 o'clock, when their eldest daughter Miss Lulu Steger was united in marriage with Mr. Harvey Spiegelberg, by Rev. E. K. Caster, D. D.

The ceremony took place in the parlor which was prettily decorated with roses, carnations, ferns and potted plants. The couple were unattended. About 40 of their relatives were present. After the ceremony and congratulations the party sat down to a dainty wedding supper. The presents were numerous and were mainly of a pretty but useful character, among them being gold and bank notes, silverware, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Spiegelberg went at once to housekeeping in their cosy home on West Summit street which was already for their occupancy. They are a well known and popular couple of young people who have lots of friends who wish them every good wish in their married life and in this the Herald joins.

BLISS-WOOD.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. William I. Wood on East street was at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the scene of a very happy event when their only daughter Edith Ione was married to Mr. Roy B. Bliss, of Marshall. The wedding was necessarily a quiet one on account of the recent death of Mrs. Wood's mother, and only relatives of the parties and one or two friends were present.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. S. Jones, the couple being unattended. After the ceremony a dainty wedding luncheon was served for which Miss Nan Wilkinson did the catering. The presents were numerous, consisting of silverware, linen, etc. The furniture for the home was the gift of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss left on the Grand Rapids express and went direct to their home in Marshall where they will be at home to their friends after July 1.

KING OF THE GRIZZLIES IS DEAD.

Biography of "Old Mose."

Age, 45 years.
Weight, 1,000 pounds.
Killed: 4 men, 800 head of cattle, horses, colts, etc.
Shot over a hundred times.
Reward offered for him for thirty years.
Cost of his depredations, $30,000.
Identified by toe missing on right hind foot.

"Old Mose," the most dreadful grizzly bear in the United States, met death befitting his long life of murder and outrage on a recent Saturday evening. His last stand was made in a quaking asp draw within the confines of his home among the broken rocks at the northwest corner of Black Mountain. He died befitting his rank and lay down in his last sleep with imposing grandeur.

Shot through and through times without number, baited with every device and cunning known to the trapper; chased by demon posses of cowboys and ranchers bent upon his extermination—in all this he has met them with superior generalship, cunning unexcelled, and knowledge supreme for thirty-five years by actual record of the cattlemen of the middle southern Colorado country. His taking away is due solely to years of training of a pack of incomparable bear dogs, who know their quarry, his habits, mode of attack, and retreat as well as this magnificent animal himself. He was handicapped by this band of intelligent trailers and knew not their circling, pinching, running away tactics.

The talk of the dogs brought the old monarch to a standstill with wonder and amazement. He did not even strike at them, but sat still, and seemed to ponder and try to unravel their unknown and untried quality. So he sat and looked and looked without a growl or even a passing of the murderous paws. J. W. Anthony knew the language of his pack with wonderment, this hunter with over forty bear pelts to his credit, and his amazement grew as he watched the unusual action of the monstrous grizzly.

"Now, what in thunder is that old fellow figuring on? Never in my life did I see such an attitude of utter indifference by any bear toward my dogs," muttered Anthony.

"I'll just take a shot—lemme see—about eighty yards."

Bang went the carbine, carrying a soft nosed 30-40. Old Mose ignored the shot, although it went through his jaw and cut a quaking asp on the other side. "Too low—damn that dog that was in the way."

The bleeding wound did not even interest the massive animal, and he did not as much as look toward the man with the gun. His interest was centered upon the four dogs snapping around his immense bulk. Likely he said to himself, "You are not the first that has put bullets in me. I'll attend to you later—at present I must investigate these funny acting little dogs."

The second shot went into the left shoulder and passed clearly through, and still he stood speculating upon the little fighters—merely glancing at the man who was firing the death dealing missiles into his body.

The third shot brought the seeming inanimate body into lightning activity. The bullet struck a quaking asp and threw splinters in his face. A sweep of his mighty paw directed at one of the dogs cost him a claw, and, missing the dogs, he uprooted an aspen that was six inches in diameter. But never a snarl nor a growl from this king of all grizzlies. In a leisurely manner, without even condescending to notice the dogs, he started at a slow walk toward Anthony.

The hunter fired his fourth shot, which went a bit high through the shoulders, and Old Mose turned and went back to the point where the dogs had stopped him and sat up for a moment, apparently surveying the country, and acted as though there was neither man nor dogs within a thousand miles. The fifth and sixth shots were hurled into the carcass, both taking effect through the shoulders—and never a howl, growl or snarl did he make.

He took his medicine in the same manner as he had administered his power for thirty-five years—neither giving nor asking quarter. The sixth shot did not bring forth the expected, the awful death cry of the bear, nor did he by sign or symptom show cowardice or anger.

Looking steadfastly at the man refilling the magazine of his rifle for a few short seconds, he at last made up his mind that it would be policy to first kill him and then pursue his interrupted analysis of these strange dogs that had the courage to snap at him and tear bunches of fur from his incomparable coat. Slowly he started toward the hunter, never leaving the awkward, slow walk of his species.

His eyes burned as with fire and his coming was terrorizing to any but the seasoned bear killer. When sixty feet away he lowered his head with an unsounded challenge, and, as his head was bended low, the hunter drew bead at the point between the ears, and, taking a long breath, gently pressed the trigger.

Slowly, as the mountain pine begins to fall under the woodman's ax, Old Mose, the terror of all man and beast alike, began to settle down. Slowly, slowly, with neither sound nor quiver, the massive king gave up his life as he had lived it, in blood and violence. He met his death with honor, willing to the last to measure his great strength and cunning in mortal combat with that of the hunter who dared to stand before him and dispute his reign.

Jake Ratcliffe, an old time bear hunter, camped on his trail for years and years. In 1886, with a party of hunters, he got on Old Mose's trail. For ten days they followed fresh signs all the time. Up in a rough gulch on Tallahassee Ratcliffe found his den, and while peering down into the box gulch fell. In a second Old Mose came out of the rocks, twenty-five feet away, and charged the intruder.

Ratcliffe fired his Old Henry. He was unable to load and fire again. The bear took one fell swoop of his iron arm and paw and Ratcliffe fell to the ground, his scalp torn completely from his head and five gashes down his back, stripping the flesh from the bones. He fell fainting and Old Mose walked away.

When he revived he began to call and his companion heard him, but, unfortunately, so did the bear, and with another rush he was upon his victim and began his murder. Ratcliffe was cuffed and bit until he was a mass of broken bones and mutilated flesh. Old Mose hit the trail, and when the hunters found their friend they gave up all thought of the bear. The last words he uttered were: "Boys, don't hunt that bear."

On Cameron mountain a skeleton was found with a rusty rifle beside it and Old Mose was credited with the death. Last summer a skeleton was found on Thirty-Nine-Mile Mountain, that of a cowboy, the boots and spurs were beside the bones, and as this was the stamping ground of this mammoth he was duly credited with the murder.

Old Mose received his appellation from the manner in which he moseyed toward men he would happen upon—his slowness in leaving a carcass when fired upon and his general habit of just plain "mosey." He has caused no small amount of trouble and many are the partly eaten steers that this bear has pulled down—of course, he was always known by the missing toe of the right hind foot, and could be easily identified.

A strange thing comes to light with the passing of the king. There has been following in his wake of murder a cinnamon bear that, measured from the reach on their several rubbing posts, showed but a difference of eight inches in this cinnamon's height and that of the dead bear. This bear has never consorted with the old bandit, but has carefully followed him and taken the leavings. But never have their trails crossed; Mr. Cinnamon has invariably been in the rear.

A Federal Case.
In a bloodless assault made by 150 militiamen and deputies, led by Adj. Gen. Sherman M. Bell, on the Portland mine, Thursday, the mine was indefinitely closed, to be reopened later on terms which will prevent any workmen securing work without presenting satisfactory working cards from the Mine Owners' association. Gen. Bell says the mine was closed because of "military necessity," as the men working in it were contributing to the support of the strikers and thereby continuing the present conditions in the district. His proclamation also states that dangerous men in the mine should be held.

The closing of the mine will probably be the means of reaching the federal courts with a case to test the power of Gov. Peabody to vest in the military absolute power in the district declared to be under martial law.

Sheriff Made a Mistake.
Gov. Bailey, of Kansas, when seen at the world's fair grounds today, had not been informed officially of the deporting of the ninety-one union miners from the Cripple Creek district. Gov. Bailey therefore made no official statement, but said:

"I have no opinion to express in regard to the merits of these reports, but as a general proposition, Kansas welcomes all men who come there for the purpose of becoming citizens and obeying the laws. Until they have violated some law, it is presumed that they are law-abiding citizens, and we believe we are abundantly able to maintain law and order. I believe Sheriff Brady made a mistake in turning the miners out of the state, unless they had committed some unlawful act. Doubtless he believed he had good reason for doing what he did."

Serious Problems.
Supplying the wives and children of the union members in the Cripple Creek district with provisions, and taking care of the deported men are serious problems before the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners at the present time. At the meeting of the board Saturday it was decided that commissaries immediately shall be established at Cripple Creek, Victor and Anaconda. Whether the miners win or lose in the present strike, the board is determined that their wives and children shall not suffer.

Another issue of bonds for $20,000,000 is contemplated by Cuba to pay off the claims of revolutionary soldiers.

Thrift in Sheep.
In the raising of sheep sight must at no time be lost of the necessity for keeping them thrifty. Some human beings may go without their breakfast and get along on a half ration, but this rule must not be applied to the sheep. The thrifty sheep is a healthy sheep, and one that can and will resist disease, because it is thrifty. Thrift means that there can be an increase in productiveness and in growth because the internal organs are working well. Both quantity and quality of gain come out of thrift. There is no better way to stave off away intestinal parasites than by keeping it thrifty. This should be the first object of the intelligent flockmaster. Not only is the amount of mutton made governed by this matter of thrift, but even the quality of the wool is affected. The elements that go to make thriftiness in sheep are, first, good feed, and all of it that the sheep will eat and digest; second, good and pure water and enough of it; third, good shelter, which means a shelter not too close nor too open; and lastly, attention by the shepherd. One would think these to be self evident truths and that no attention would need to be called to them. Yet in the matter of food we know that it is quite a common custom on many of our farms to allow the sheep to care for themselves in the summer, even when the drouth has dried up the pasture so that it is a most difficult task for these animals to get enough to eat, to appease their hunger. We have known such sheep pastured on the tops of mountains, where it was a long distance to any water supply, and the sheep would, of course, become very thirsty before taking their long journey to the foot of the mountain. In such a flock there can be little profit either in mutton or in wool. This condition is more likely to occur in late summer and early fall than at any other time. The shepherd will then be hardly likely to notice the lack of thrift, as the wool is increasing slowly on the backs and sides of the sheep and the shrinking carcass is not seen. At this time of year too there is a tendency for the wool to grow long on account of the approaching cold weather, this being a provision of nature to protect the sheep against the cold of the coming winter. A flock so kept will be a disappointment to the farmer, for he will not be able to get either the weight of wool or of carcasses he expected. His greatest disappointment will come when the carcasses are weighed, and he will fail to understand why sheep that seemed to be all right while on pasture should shrink so on dressing. If the pastures do not furnish enough feed at all times to keep the flock thrifty, it will pay well to watch the decadence of the feed in the pasture and supplement it by feed given at the barns.

The Power of Heredity.
Man has greatly modified the forms and habits of all the animals that have been domesticated by him, yet he has not been able to eliminate certain traits that have come down through thousands of generations from the remote past. Even the house dog, furnished a bed to his liking, will turn round a number of times before lying down, just as did the wild dog, his remote ancestor, who had to do that to break down the tall grass for his bed. Even the cow on the range has not forgotten the habits of her remote progenitors and hides her calf in the bushes, though the careful herdsman will take care of it, and the cow knows it. Even the custom of the mare in nursing her foal a little at a time, but often is believed to come from habits developed by thousands and thousands of years of experience when the mare had to depend on herself to keep out of the way of ravenous animals. The colt would not be able to run fast with a full stomach and so the mother was watchful to give him a little at a time and keep him in running trim. If we have not been able in some thousands of years to eliminate such traits, how long must have been the period during which they were forming?

The Good Feeder.
The hide of the easy feeder should be of medium thickness and should be soft and mellow. The hair should be fine and thick, as this indicates good respiratory and circulatory organs within. The skin tells a more truthful tale of the ability of the steer to make the best use of food than most of us suppose. When the digestive organs lack strength and the circulation is poor and sluggish, the hide becomes thick and unyielding to the touch, and the hair is harsh and wiry. The head should be short, measuring from a line drawn across the eyes to the nose, and should be broad. This indicates the ability to masticate food. The large mouth is indicative nearly always of an ability to take care of a great deal of food. The nostrils will generally be large in an easy feeder, this indicating good-sized organs for breathing. This is of importance, as it is by means of the lungs that the carbon in the body of the animal is changed into carbonic acid gas, thus producing force in the change. Skillful feeders declare that steers that do not have these characteristics seldom give a good account of themselves in the feed lot, and, when sent to market, are a disappointment.

Married Life in Abyssinia.
In Abyssinia, a husband who can afford the expense is continually adding to his household of wives. As soon as his favorite begins to pall on him he deposes her for another. The new wife rules the house, dictates orders to the other wives, who, strange as it may seem, obey her without open remonstrance. If any of the former favorites ever cared for their lord they soon cease to be jealous of his affections. They know, too, that the time will surely come when they will be turned out into the streets to look for another master.

Show Surgical Operations.
Cinematograph records are now made of all operations performed by a certain famous physician and surgeon in Paris. He entered some time ago into an arrangement with an operator of the bioscope, who has taken pictures for the doctor on several occasions. It is stated that the records in question are invaluable as scientific documents. One of the surgeon's operations which has been cinematographed was that by which the link of flesh connecting the Hindu twins, Redica and Doodica was severed.

Old Soldier's Story.
Sonoma, Mich., June 13.—That even in actual warfare disease is more terrible than bullets is the experience of Delos Hutchins of this place. Mr. Hutchins as a Union soldier saw three years of service under Butler Barke in the Louisiana swamps, and as a result got crippled with rheumatism so that his hands and feet got all twisted out of shape, and how he suffered only a rheumatic will ever know. For twenty-five years he was in misery, then one lucky day his druggist advised him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Of the result Mr. Hutchins says:

"The first two boxes did not help me much, but I got two more, and before I got them used up I was a great deal better. I kept on taking them and now my pains are all gone and I feel better than I have in years. I know Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure rheumatism."

Monster Sea Snakes.

Sea serpents, date back to the days of Aristotle, who wrote: "The serpents of Libya are of enormous size. Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over. "Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health. I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. CHAPTER VII.—Continued.

Voices rose in angry questioning. Randalin was too fear-beumbed to understand what they said. Norman's keen eyes were turned upon her, and recognition was dawning in their gaze.

"The boy from Avalcomb! I would have sworn to it that I had separated his life from his body not eight-and-forty hours ago." A gleam of eagerness came into his face, and he bent over her. "You shall serve my purpose by your obstinacy," he said under his breath. "You shall tell me where your sister lies hidden, and it may be that I will grant to you a longer life."

Her stiff lips could not have spoken an answer had her paralyzed brain been able to frame one. She could only gaze back at him in helpless waiting. Through the hush a quiet voice spoke.

"You are eager in rising, my lords," it said.

From the shelter, half cave, half bower, which had been contrived amid the bushes, a warrior of mighty frame had emerged and stood examining the scene. The light that revealed the protruding chin had no need to pick out the jeweled diadem to mark him as Edmund Ironsides. He repeated his inquiry, "What is the amusement, my thanes? From the clamor which awakened me, I had some notion of an attack."

Norman of Baddeby bent in a reverence. "Your expectations are to this degree fulfilled, my royal lord," he made answer. "Behold the enemy!" Stopping, he raised the red-cloaked figure by its collar and held it up in the firelight. As a murmur of laughter went around he lowered it again and spoke more gravely. "A hand needs not be large to get a hit under its gripe, however. The young wolf is of northern breed. He seeks my life because in a skirmish, a few days and yeoman-soldiers, singly and in groups, filtered quietly through the shadows and placed themselves at their chief's back.

But though the king's brows had met for an instant in a lowering arch, some second thought controlled him. When he spoke, his words were even gracious: "I think the Lord of Ivarsdale has the right of it. The crime the boy purposed was not carried out; and in each case, Lord Sebert was his captor. I am content to trust to his wardship."

Sebert's frank face betrayed his surprise at the complaisance, but he gave his pledge and his thanks with what courtliness he could muster, and releasing his passive prisoner, pushed her gently into the safekeeping of the old cnit. Yet he was not so obtuse as to step back, as though the incident were closed; he read the king's infection more correctly than that. Holding himself somewhat stiff in the tenseness of his feelings, he stood his ground in silent alertness.

A rustle of uneasiness crept the round of the assembled nobles. Only the monarch's bland composure remained untroubled. Advancing with the deliberate grace that so well became his mighty person, he seated himself upon a convenient boulder and signed the figure in the shadow to draw nearer.

As it obeyed, every one of the yeomen-soldiers strained his eyes in that direction, as though hoping to surprise in the great traitor's face some secret of his power, the power that had made three kings as wax between his fingers! But just short of the fire-glow the Gainer paused, and the hooded cloak which shrouded him merged him hopelessly into the shadow. Only the hand that rested on his sword-hilt protruded into the light. It was a broad hand, and thick-fingered as a butcher's, and it was milk-white and weighted with massive rings.

"You shall tell me where your sister is."

gone by, I had the good luck to kill his father. If it—"

He said more, but Randalin did not listen to him. All at once Sebert of Ivarsdale reached out, and taking her by her cloak, drew her gently to his side, interposing his sword arm between her and the others. Her head drooped against his arm, and her hands, ceasing their struggles, rested in his grasp like folded wings.

It had not taken a moment; the instant Norman finished his explanation the Etheling was speaking quietly: "As the Lord of Baddeby says, King Edmund, it was I who stayed the boy's hand, and it was I also who fetched him into camp. I found him after the battle, bleeding his life out in the bushes, and I brought him in my arms, like a kitten, and dropped him down by my fire. Waking in the night and missing him, I traced him thither. With your consent, I will attend to it that he does no more mischief."

A momentary cordiality came into the king's manner. "My lord of Ivarsdale! I am much beholden to you. Had any chance wrought evil to the Lord of Baddeby while under my safeguard, my honor would have been as deeply wounded as my feelings."

The words of the Earl's thane fairly grazed the heels of the king's words: "The imp can do no otherwise than harm, my sovereign. Should he bring his tongue to Danish ears, he could cause the utmost evil. I entreat you to deliver the boy up to my keeping."

"I am no less able than the Lord of Baddeby to restrain him," the Etheling said with some warmth. "If it be your pleasure, King Edmund, I will keep him under my hand until the end of the war, and answer for his silence with my life. The life of my captive is mine, and I am the last man to permit it to be taken because he sought a just revenge. I know too well how it feels to have a father's murderer." He shot a baleful glance toward a half-seen figure that all this time had stood motionless in the shadow behind the king.

There was a sudden indrawing of many breaths, followed by a frightened silence. The only sound that disturbed it was a growing rustle in the bush around them, which was explained when the old cnit Morcard and some two-score armed henchmen

Meanwhile the king was speaking affably: "As you did not favor us with your presence among the Wise Men, my lord, it is likely that you do not know of the good luck which has befallen our cause. This prudent Earl, who before the battle had concluded with himself that England had so little to hope for from our reign that he was willing to throw his weight against us, has found his victory so without relish that he has become our sworn ally."

"In former days I think there was some hostile temper between the earl and you. But I expect you will see that under the stress of a foreign-war all lesser strife must give way. So I desire that you will repeat in my presence the truth already plighted by these others."

He made a slight gesture, and the Gainer took a step forward. Hesitating, the Etheling went from red to white. Then, with a swift motion, he unsheathed his sword and stretched it out, point foremost.

"King Edmund," he said, "in no other way does my hand go forth toward a traitor."

The sternness that had underlain the king's manner rose slowly and spread over the whole surface of his person, as he drew himself up in towering offense.

"Lord of Ivarsdale, bethink yourself to whom you speak!"

"King of the Angles, the right of open speech has belonged to my race as long as the right to the crown has belonged to yours. So my father's fathers spoke to yours under the council tree, and so I shall speak to you while I live."

Every eye was fastened upon the two by the fire. Freeman and his leader, or feudal lord and his dependant? For the moment they stood forth as representatives of a mighty conflict, and every breath hung upon their motions.

Then there was no longer any doubt concerning the position of Ethelred's son. He saw with deliberate emphasis, "The only policy which concerns those of your station is obedience."

"We of Ivarsdale do not profess such obedience, King Edmund. Our land we hold as our fathers held it—from God's bounty and the might of our swords. When we have paid the three taxes of fort-building and bridge-building and field service, we have paid all that we owe to the state."

At last they stood defined, the first of the feudal lords and the last of the odal-born men. Even through the king's loftiness it was suddenly borne in that, behind the insignificance of the revolt, loomed a mighty principle, mighty enough to merit force.

"I observe that the men of your race have not been of great importance in the land. It appears that Ethelred was able to do without the rebel Lord of Ivarsdale."

"I admit that he was able to lose his crown without him," the rebel's son retorted swiftly.

The king's wounded dignity bled in his cheeks; he was stung into a movement that brought him to his feet.

"This is insufferable!" he cried.

It was evident that the crisis had come. Several of the thanes laid their hands upon their swords. At an almost imperceptible sign from the old cnit, the henchmen made a noiseless step nearer their master.

But the blood of Cerdic, once fired, burned too rapidly for policy. Edmund's jaw was set in savage menace as he turned and beckoned to his guard. Had he spoken the words on his lips, there is little doubt what his order would have been.

Interruption came from an unexpected quarter. Even as his lips were opening, that white taloned hand reached out of the shadow and touched his arm.

"Most royal lord! If it may be permitted me?" Earl Edric said swiftly.

His voice was very low, and every roughness had been filed away until it flowed like oil. Upon the King's wounded temper it appeared to fall as softly as drops of healing balm. With his mouth still set he paused and bent his ear. There was a murmur of whispered words.

What they were no one ever knew, and each man had a different theory; but their result was plain to all. Slowly Edmund's knitted brows unraveled; slowly his mouth relaxed into its wonted curves. At last he had regained all his lofty composure and turned back.

"Lord of Ivarsdale, I am not rich of time, and my present need is too great to spare any of it to the chastising of rebellious boys. Go back to your toy kingdom, and lord it over your serfs until I find leisure to teach you who is master." Making a disdainful gesture of dismissal, he turned with deliberate grace and entered into conversation with the Mercian.

At the moment, it is likely that the young noble would have preferred arrest. The utter scorn of word and act lashed the blood to his cheeks and the tears to his eyes. With boyish passion, he snatched the sword from its sheath, and breaking it in pieces across his knee, flung the fragments clinking into the dead embers.

But if he had hoped to provoke an answer, it was in vain; the king deigned him no further notice. Resuming his seat, Edmund continued to talk quietly with the earl, a half-smile playing about his complacent chin.

The old cnit bent forward and whispered in his chief's ear: "Make haste, Lord Sebert; they will be cheering in a moment, the churls; so pleased are they at the thought of going home. Hasten with your retinue."

It was a clever appeal. Forgetting, for the moment, humiliation in responsibility, the young leader whirled to his men. A gesture, a muttered order, and they were drawing back among the trees in silent retreat. A few steps more, and the bushes had blotted out the Ironsides and his thanes.

Keeping Voters from Polls.

Some years ago an Englishman, when traveling in Spain, fell in with a member of the national parliament who opposed the government. There had been a dissolution of parliament and the Englishman asked the Spaniard if he would be re-elected. "Oh, no," he said, "there is not a chance of it." Presently they arrived at the principal town of this gentleman's constituency and he received a regular ovation on his way to the hotel. "Surely," said the Englishman, "you are mistaken; you seem extremely popular here." "Oh, yes," was the reply, "I am very popular, but I won't get in, nevertheless." "How will the government prevent your getting in?" was the rejoinder. "Oh, they have all kinds of methods. I will tell you one. They will fix a polling place in such and such a barn. A large and very fierce mastiff is kept there and when any one likely to vote for me makes his appearance they will let the beast loose."

Inventor of Ice Cream.

A French chef who prepared a snow-like dish for the Duc de Chartres in 1774 is said to have been the first to make that cool luxury known as ice cream. Lord Bacon was possessed of the knowledge that there was a process of congelation by means of snow and salt; but to him this was a scientific fact, and he little dreamed of the idea that in after years this congelation would prove such a delightful refreshment. Iced drinks and water ices were known to the Parisian epicures fully a century and a half before they were introduced into England. These dainties, it is thought, probably came from the Far East by means of some traveler, who probably had tasted sherbet.

CATARRH IS THE CAUSE OF MOST KIDNEY DISEASES.

PE-RU-NA CURES CATARRH.

Samuel R. Sprecher, Junior Beadle Court Angelina, 422 I. O. O. F., 205 New High St., Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

"I came here a few years ago suffering with catarrh of the kidneys, in search of health. I thought the climate would cure me, but found I was mistaken. But what the climate could not do Peru-na could and did do. Seven weeks' trial convinced me that I had the right medicine, and I was then a well man. I know of at least twenty friends and members of the lodge to which I belong who have been cured of catarrh, bladder and kidney trouble through the use of Peru-na, and it has a host of friends in this city."

SAMUEL R. SPRECHER.

Catarrh of the Kidneys a Common Disease—Kidney Trouble Often Fails to Be Regarded as Catarrh by Physicians.

Catarrh of the kidneys is very common indeed. It is a pity this fact is not better known to the physicians as well as the people.

People have kidney disease. They take some diuretic, hoping to get better. They never once think of catarrh. Kidney disease and catarrh are seldom associated in the minds of the people, and, alas, it is not very often associated in the minds of the physicians. Too few physicians recognize catarrh of the kidneys. They doctor for something else. They try this remedy and that remedy. The trouble may be catarrh all the time. A few bottles of Peru-na would cure them.

Pe-ru-na Removes the Cause of the Kidney Trouble.

Peru-na strikes at the very centre of the difficulty by eradicating the catarrh from the kidneys. Catarrh is the cause of kidney difficulty. Remove the cause and you remove the effect. With unerring accuracy Peru-na goes right to the spot. The kidneys are soon doing their work with perfect regularity.

Thousands of Testimonials.

Thousands of testimonials from people who have had kidney disease which had gone beyond the control of the physician are received by Dr. Hartman every year, giving Peru-na the whole praise for marvelous cures.

Pe-ru-na Cures Kidney Disease.

Peru-na cures kidney disease. The reason it cures kidney disease is because it cures catarrh. Catarrh of the kidneys is the cause of most kidney disease. Peru-na cures catarrh wherever it happens to be located. It rarely fails.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

ITEMS OF LOCAL INTEREST.

The receipts of the Sharon band social held at J. W. Dresselhaus home June 3 amounted to nearly $45.

It is expected that before the year 1904 closes 12,500,000 people will be served by rural mail carriers, requiring 25,000 routes.

Dean M. Seabolt and Oswald Dietz, of Ann Arbor, have organized the Jackson Amusement Company, which will give high class vaudeville entertainments at Wolf Lake casino commencing June 20.

Dr. F. Ward Howlett, of Jackson, and Miss Mary Louise Bunker, were married at the home of the bride's parents in Ann Arbor Tuesday, June 14, Rev. Henry Tatlock officiating. They will reside in Jackson where Dr. Howlett has a fine dental practice.

The July Delineator is a magazine of beauty, interest and utility. The display of summer fashions is exquisite and complete, the fiction bright and entertaining, the special articles clever and informative, and the number is rounded out by a series of practical papers on domestic topics.

At a recent eighth grade examination in Monroe, the Record says one of the questions was, "What are the principal duties of the governor?"

And a certain scholar wrote as an answer "To pardon criminals." The scholar was a wise geezer, for sure, in the light of events during the last eight years.

Chas. M. Davis was a witness in the circuit court Monday in the chancery case of Wm. Pitt Meachem vs. Minnie Blaess et al. over 80 acres of the Leopold Blaess farm in Lodi, on the ground that John Geddes, deceased, his grandfather, had conveyed to his daughter, Prudence Meachem and the remainder to her children. Complainant is her only son.

The Great Camp of the Maccabees last Thursday decided to adopt the county plan of representation for the next review, giving one delegate to each 300 Maccabees. If the increase of the order for the next two years is as large as expected this will make the next convention number about 500 delegates. The change is made to cut down the size of the convention, which is so large as to be very expensive.

The annual meeting of the Washenaw Pioneer Society held at Saline, Wednesday, June 10, was attended by 150 of the members. It was an interesting meeting, but the necrologist's report showed a harrowing decrease in the ranks of the old pioneers of the county during the past year through death, 66 men and 77 women having passed away. Ten of these were over 90, and 40 over 80 years old.

Grass Lake Farmers' Club.

Through the invitation of E. E. Brown, editor of the Grass Lake News, and his wife, we had the pleasure of attending the June meeting of the Grass Lake Farmers' Club at his home in Grass Lake Friday afternoon. The club is formed of the cream of the farmers, ex-farmers and their wives and families in that section and the meetings they hold are good ones. About 50 people were present at this one.

Arriving late in the afternoon, just before the meeting closed, we only heard one question discussed, "Crop Rotation," but it was well presented and intelligently discussed.

A bountiful supper followed which was as well looked after as the "Crop Rotation" question was. After a brief season of visiting the guests departed for their several homes. We hope to have the pleasure of meeting with the club on some future occasion.

A FEAT OF MEMORY.

Wonderful Accomplishment to Which the Mind Was Trained.

Some light is thrown on the possibilities of memory culture by an interesting recital contained in the autobiography of Robert Houdin, the famous conjurer. He taught his son to glance at, say, a shop window and to memorize accurately, as in a brain picture, the window's contents. Then he would ask him to describe the contents, checking and correcting him as he went on. On one occasion Houdin was commanded to the Tuilleries to give a performance before the French court. As he passed through an ante-room to the salon he bade his son to note the arrangement of the rooms and the contents of the bookcases. Then at the close of the entertainment Houdin astonished his audience by giving what he called a "second-sight" test. Declaring his unfamiliarity with the Tuilleries, Houdin, blindfolding his son, asked him to send his gaze through the wall of the room to the chamber beyond, to describe the arrangement of the chamber and to read the titles of the volumes on the shelves of the bookcases. This feat the young lad accomplished, to the astonishment of the court.

Ready for Death.

A man, being seriously ill, asked his wife to send for the minister, who came, and talked some time with the good old man. On leaving he tried to comfort the wife, saying that while John was very weak he was evidently ready for a better world. Unexpectedly, however, John rallied and said to his wife: "Jenny, my woman, I'll maybe be spared to you yet." "Na, na, John," was the reply; "ye're prepared and I'm resigned. Dee noo."

THE NEWS OF MICHIGAN.

Mrs. Collins Convicted.
Mrs. Caroline Collins, of New Lothrop, is guilty of murder in the first degree, and faces a sentence of life imprisonment. The verdict of the jury in her case was "guilty as charged," and was rendered Wednesday evening after about four hours' deliberations. The crime for which Mrs. Collins was convicted was the murder by arsenical poisoning of her hired man and alleged lover, George Leachman, who died in terrible agony on Oct. 23, 1903. The motive, according to the prosecution, were the facts that she owed him about $400 and that he stood in the way of a union with Col. Northwood. Other deaths which are popularly credited to Mrs. Collins are those of her husband, Nicholas Collins, her daughter, Mrs. Adolph Weissberger, her 16-year-old nephew, Ira Wright, and Mrs. Northwood. The trial lasted 30 days and has cost the county about $6,000. Had there been a disagreement there would probably have been no new trial, as sentiment is strong against the expense. A stay was granted to permit a move for a new trial.

Five Years in Court.
When Judge Waukey, of the United States court at Grand Rapids, in whose jurisdiction the railroad taxation case was started and is now pending, receives the testimony taken at various times since early last fall, he will have a mass of technical stuff to wade through, undoubtedly bigger than he has ever tackled before. As was usual in such cases, to save the time of the court, the matter was referred to a special master in chancery, Charles L. Fitch, of Grand Rapids, and he was given a roving commission that authorized the production of witnesses before him in any part of the United States. It will be at least a month before the testimony is passed up to the court of appeals and the United States supreme court for four or five years.

Prisoners at Large.
Though the woods over a wide radius have been searched and the roads watched, the convicts who escaped from the Marquette penitentiary Wednesday noon are still at liberty. Asa Taft, George Wilson and George Taylor, all long-termers from lower Michigan, constitute the trio. Their escape was cunningly planned, was made possible by building operations in progress as the result of fire last winter, and was not discovered until last night. The escape is laid to Taft, who, as librarian, has considerable freedom within the walls and who undoubtedly found an opportunity at odd times for cutting through and concealing his work till it was completed.

The Floods Came.
A miniature Johnstown flood poured down through the valley Tuesday, says a Traverse City report, as the result of the washing out of the dam at the head of Brewster lake, two miles above Kingsley. The waters of both Brewster and Cedar lakes formed a torrent which swept orchards, outbuildings, telephone and telegraph poles away and drowned considerable live stock. Nicholson creek, the natural outlet of the lakes, was swollen to several times its natural size. It is almost a miracle that no lives were lost, though there were many narrow escapes. Owners of fruit farms are particularly heavy losers.

W. B. Comstock Hurt.
William B. Comstock, the well known Alpena, Mich., capitalist and railroad owner, who is building an interurban trolley line between Rochester and Geneva and through Canandaigua, N. Y., was injured in a collision on the eastern and uncompleted end of the line Sunday Mr. Comstock, P. W. Walker, H. A. Haigh, of Detroit, and others of the company were on board two work trains that came together and all were badly shaken and sustained minor injuries. Mr. Comstock's were the most serious injuries and his physicians fear internal complications.

Claimed He Was Swindled.
A man registered at the Wayne hotel as George Andrews of Kansas, was arrested near the Michigan Central depot, Detroit, Sunday night at the instance of ex-Congressman F. W. Wheeler, who alleges Andrews swindled him out of $6,000 some time ago. Mr. Wheeler was walking on the street when he saw Andrews. On being seized by a policeman the prisoner tried to chew up and swallow a letter giving the police many pointers when they secured it. The officers claim Andrews is an important capture.

No Beets to Be Grown.
It is reported that the Tawns sugar factory, completed by the sugar trust last year at a cost of nearly three quarters of a million dollars, will not be operated this season owing to inability to secure beet acreage. Contracts for only 2,000 acres have been secured, and plans are being made to ship these to the Bay City factory owned by the trust, and which has also had difficulty in securing a sufficient acreage.

Commissioner Atwood reports that the Michigan earnings of railroads for April were $4,354,055.15, this being an increase of $356,961 over April, 1903. The total Michigan earnings for the first quarter of this year were $14,678,462, being a decrease of $690,598, or 4 1/2 per cent, as compared with the first quarter of 1903.

Jail Delivery Stopped.
A general jail delivery was prevented Saturday by the help of the servants at the Ingham county jail. Three criminals, among them Jack White, alias Dell Anderson, had been transferred from the steel cages to the tramp department of the county jail that they might bathe and wash their clothing. White watched his opportunity and soon cut the top of the grating to one of the windows, bent the bars enough to crawl through, was seen to scale the high board fence in the rear of the lot and escape. The sheriff and his son were soon in hot pursuit and White was soon returned to the bastille, being found in an apple tree about a mile east of the city. The other prisoners who tried to escape were kept in the jail at the point of a revolver until the return of the sheriff.

Detroit Murderer Caught.
William Stevens, who is wanted in Detroit for the murder of Ralph Calkins, a bartender in Bowman Bros.' Gratiot avenue saloon, on the night of May 13, has been captured in St. Louis while, it is claimed, he was perpetrating a hold-up similar to that in which he is alleged to have shot down Calkins.

After being in jail a week his true identity has been established through the Detroit police receiving photographs and identifying them as those of Stevens. In St. Louis he went under the name of Bert Pierson. The authorities declare they will not hand over Stevens to the Detroit police until he is tried on the charges against him there.

Shot His Tormentor.
Matt Wilson, about 35 years of age, was shot by a shoemaker named Thos. Doonin at Corrine Friday night. Wilson was brought to Manistique hospital, and died at midnight. Doonin is about 70 years old. He was bothered by young men, took a shotgun loaded with buckshot and fired. Seven shot took effect in Wilson's left side above the hip. Wilson was a Canadian and had no relatives in this vicinity. Doonin gave himself up.

Two Hundred Homeless.
The village of Nahma, 35 miles east of Escanaba, had a $40,000 fire Friday, in which 18 buildings were burned and 200 people rendered homeless. Little was saved from the burning buildings. A new water works system was finished a month ago, and had it not been for this the entire village would have been wiped out. The entire village is owned by the Bay De Noc Lumber Co., whose head offices are in Chicago.

THE NEWS OF THE WORLD.

IN CRIPPLE CREEK.
Some Will Hang for Dynamite Outrage—Late Phases.

The committee of safety was in session nearly all day Saturday holding examinations. A number of men have stated that they were willing to live up their unions cards as there was no longer any union, but they were not willing to take out a permit to work from the Mine Owners' association, but preferred to leave town. The committee states that it has extremely damaging evidence against a number of persons, connecting them with the Independence dynamite outrage and it is likely some very important evidence will be introduced when the trial comes up. A member of the court of inquiry says: "We have evidence that will hang five and possibly double that number, and enough to fill the penitentiary. We have unearthed a state of things that the public will be slow to believe; that we ourselves are appalled at, even knowing, as we have, that they are bad. We would be doing a wrong to turn these people loose. They must be punished, and will be, now that the laws are enforced."

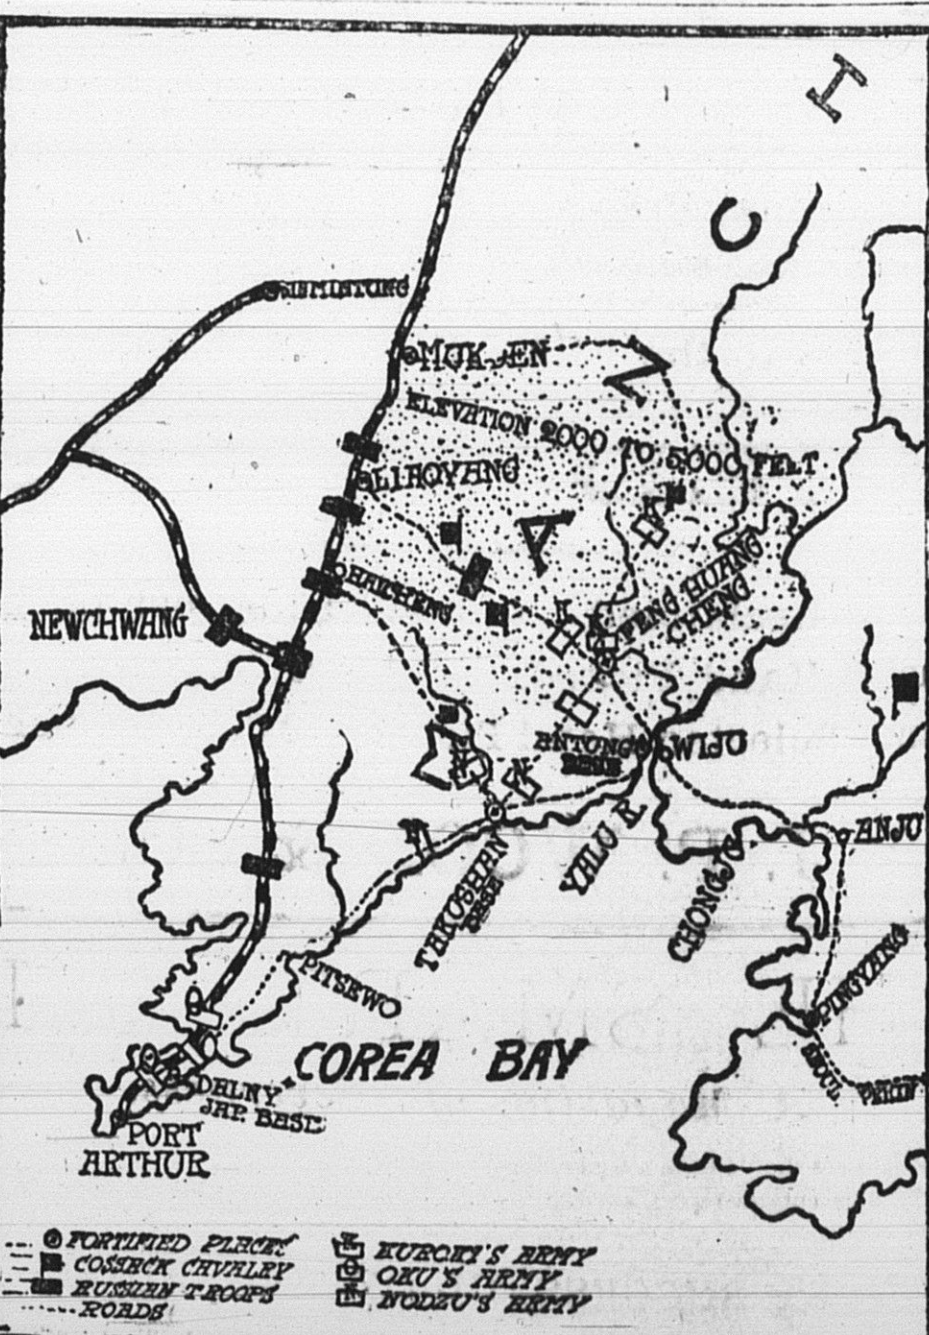

Gen. Bell says: "I have indisputable evidence which will lead to the conviction of a number of union men for the murder of the non-union miners who were killed in the Independence depot explosion. We have between thirty-five and forty men in the bull pen who will swing for this crime. We are only waiting to capture two or three more men before we tell what our evidence is." He has announced that the troops will not be needed much longer as the civil authorities have control of the situation and the people are looking forward to a speedy end of the military rule.

In following up the determination to exterminate the Western Federation of Miners, from the district, Gen. Bell, as military commander of the district, has issued a proclamation similar in wording and intent to that concerning the Portland mine, directed to the operators of the Pride of Cripple Creek district mine and the Winchester & Morgan lenses. These were prepared to be operated with men who are alleged to be a menace to the welfare and safety of the good people of the county and a hindrance to the restoration of peace and good order, and their arrest was ordered as a military necessity. The reopening of the mines continues, and by the end of next week practically every mine conforming to the military necessity restriction will be working full force.

No Legal Power.

President Roosevelt has received a telegram from W. D. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, urging him to institute an investigation of the present serious condition of affairs in the Cripple Creek mining district of Colorado. At least twice heretofore, in the last six months, the president has been asked to interfere in the Colorado troubles, but declined, after mature consideration, because he had no legal power to take action in the matter. It is regarded by those in close touch with him to be unlikely that the president will interfere in any way with the action of the constituted authorities of the state of Colorado.

Secretary Shaw, of the treasury department, has notified the St. Louis fair that he will take charge of all receipts if the interest is not promptly paid on the government advance of $4,000,000.

Punishing the Russians.
Information was received in New Chwang Monday night through reliable channels that part of the Japanese force left at Pu-Lan-Tien to checkmate the Russians' southward movement to relieve Port Arthur was attacked southeast of Shum gnamo Sunday.

After slight fighting the Japanese made a false retreat, the Russians hotly following them, when the Japanese made a flank movement, catching the Russians in a trap. The Russian losses are placed at 800 men. They then fell back on Kai-Chou and began to retreat along the Baimatgu-Tsachou road.

About 2,000 Russian infantry from Kai Chou passed through New Chwang, accompanied by a large supply and hospital train. The troops appeared fagged out and showed every indication of a long forced march.

The officers refused to furnish any information, but a non-commissioned officer told a correspondent that all of the troops were retreating from Tsachou. Before he could say anything further he was reprimanded by a captain. Stragglers are closely watched by non-commissioned officers to prevent them from talking.

The Russians have abandoned the ground mines eight miles south of New Chwang. A native messenger just in from the Russian camp east reports that there are many wounded men there.

The Courageous Japs.

Wounded officers who have returned to Japan give interesting details of the battle of Nanshan hill. After the first ineffectual attack on the hill Japanese scouts discovered that there were mines at the foot of the hill. It was determined that they could be definitely located only by the sacrifice of some men. Hundreds volunteered to go to what appeared to be certain death. They led the second advance and found that heavy rains had washed away the covering of earth and had exposed the mines. Engineers cut the connecting wires. The volunteers were nearly all killed by the subsequent ineffectual attack on the hill.

The Osaka men from the right wing, while advancing through the water along the shore, encountered a body of Russians also in the water. A fierce fight ensued, both sides being waist deep in the sea. When the Russians finally retreated the water was literally crimson. Both sides lost heavily.

Rockefeller in Copper.

The announcement is made of a combination of mining interests of America, with John D. Rockefeller at its head. The capital of the merged companies, it is said, will be $2,500,000 and the purpose is to control the mineral output of the United States with the possible exception of the Calumet & Hecla copper mine in Michigan.

Knox Is Senator.

Gov. Penhynacker, of Pennsylvania, officially appointed Mr. Knox successor to the late United States Senator Quay. Gen. Knox said: "My retirement from the cabinet will in no way affect the policy of the administration. Mr. Roosevelt stands for certain principles. Upon my resignation he will experience no difficulty in selecting a man who will continue to represent those principles and carry out the national policy as set down by him."

BESSIE'S FISHING

One morning when spring was in her teens,
A morn to a poet's wishing,
All tinted in delicate grays and greens,
Miss Bessie and I went fishing.

I in my rough-and-tumble clothes,
With my face at the sunning's mercy;
She with her hat tipped down to her nose,
And her nose tipped vice versa.

I with my rod, my reel, and my books,
And a hamper of luncheon recesses;
She with the bait of her comely looks,
And the seine of her golden tresses.

So we sat down in the shade of a dyke,
Where the white pond lilies teeter;
And I went to fishing like quaint old Ike,
And she like Simon Peter.

All day I lay in the light of her eyes,
And dreamily watched and waited;
But the fish were cunning and wouldn't rise,
And the baiter alone was baited.

So when the time for departure came,
My bag was as flat as a flounder;
But Bessie had nearly hooked her game—
A hundred-and-eighty-pounder.

"FIGURING IT OUT"

BY RUBY DOUGLAS

"I can never thank you, Miss Carew," began Tom Stanton for the sixth time within half an hour.

He stood in front of the big, open fireplace in the Carew sitting room, very wet and disheveled. His overcoat and hat, soaked likewise, hung on the back of a chair before the fire. A pair of skates lay on the floor.

"In only one way, you may," answered Diana, at last.

She spoke as if she had suddenly determined to say something upon which she had been pondering. Each time Stanton had tried to thank her she had artfully turned the conversation into foreign channels and ignored his expressions of gratitude.

"Give me your solemn oath," she continued, "that you will never ask me to marry you, and I am fully thanked for what I have done. Yes, I know that sounds presumptuous, Mr. Stanton, but nowadays persons labor under the delusion that if a girl does some—O some little thing like I did—for a man, that he is in honor bound to ask her to marry him. I won't have it, so promise."

She looked as well as he did in heavy wet clothing and with his hair curling recklessly about his broad, white forehead.

"But you save—" he began, but was interrupted.

"Don't—don't dare to say it! I did not!" And Miss Carew stamped her foot emphatically.

"But you did; you saw me floundering about among the chunks of ice and you ran all the way, at a great risk to yourself, and pulled me out. I was foolish to skate on such dangerous ice. I could never have crawled out before I was frozen—so there! I must refute your denial. What do you call it, Miss Carew?"

"Never mind, only give me your promise. It was mere luck that I happened to be in the window of my room and saw you go in. I know the air holes in the slough, living so near. Your promise?" she said interrogatively.

"Is that quite fair?" he asked. "Suppose—"

"No, I won't! I would never, never marry a man who thought I had saved his life even if it were years and years afterwards. I should always feel that he asked me out of gratitude."

"But I won't feel that way," said Stanton, honestly feeling it might be true, but smiling down at the look of despair she gave him.

"There you are, this very minute," she argued, "before you have known me an hour, already contemplating it. O please promise!"

Diana was so earnest that Stanton

"Don't—don't dare to say it!"

stopped smiling and turned his other side to the fire before answering.

"I'll promise on the condition that you will permit me to continue our acquaintance—if I may come to see you and learn to be friends. I could not thank you in a lifetime for what you have done, so we will let that pass. It was brave and—"

He was going to say sweet, but restrained wisely. Neither did he tell her he had the wet belt and the which she had knotted together. He would keep that always.

"Very well, now promise," she said, extending her hand.

He took it in his. "I promise, Miss Carew, never to ask you to marry me out of gratitude," he said.

"No, no, no!" she cried, hopelessly, and taking her hand abruptly from him. "Promise never, under any circumstances, to ask me to marry you."

He hesitated while he looked earnestly into her eyes. And because he saw a troubled, eager expectancy in her expression he took her hand again and said, "I promise." But he was sorry the moment the words had left his lips.

Now that she had extracted her promise Diana chatted on merrily with

"Is it all figured out?"

Stanton, and long before he was dry enough to go out of doors she had learned why she had never seen him before.

He had only the night before come to Cedar Rapids and, in wandering about to get his bearings in the town before taking up his duties with his firm, had come upon the Little Slough. He had secured some skates at a nearby shop and—Diana knew the rest.

In due time he came to call. Only one subject was tabooed when they were together, and that was the skating accident and the promise.

"Diana," said Tom one night—he had called her Diana for some time. "I did not promise to refrain from telling you I love you, and I do! I love you better than anything in life, and if you can't figure out some way out of my difficulty, I shall be sorry your were in your window that morning. I shall, Diana!" He tried to take her hands and to force her to look at him.

"Tom Stanton, don't you dare!" she said, laughing at his seriousness. "You are dangerously near breaking your promise, and I won't pull you out if you go over the brink as I did on the ice."

Almost a year after Diana had extracted her promise from Stanton she came into the room where he was waiting for her and sat down beside him on the couch.

"Have you a pencil and paper, Tom?" she asked. "I want you to figure something for me." She moved close to him.

"But first, Tom, are you quite, quite sure that you love me—that you would have loved me anyway? No—" she said, repelling his attempt to take her hands. "Tell me."

"Yes, positively sure, Diana," he said, earnestly. "Are you going to release me?"

"Nonsense!" she cried. "I just wanted to be sure; I will never release you from that promise."

Silence fell between them for a moment. He was thinking of how many times within the year she had raised his hopes, only to dash them to the ground again. And yet he loved her.

"Now put down the figures I tell you," she said, after a minute, "and don't ask questions. One."

He put a figure one on the paper. "Beside it a nine," said Diana. He did it.

"Naught! Four!" said Diana, excitedly.

"Very well," said Tom.

"Now divide it by four," she said.

"Four hundred and seventy-six," he read, when he finished. "Well, what of it?" He was mystified beyond expression.

"Is it all figured out?" she asked.

"Yes."

"And can't you see that 1904 is divisible by four and that it's leap year, and—O, Tom, I love you so. Won't you marry me? Please do," she cried.

And if taking her in his arms and holding her as if he would never let her go again was giving a positive answer, Diana's leap year proposal was accepted.—Ruby Douglas, in Boston Globe.

GARDEN OUT OF PLACE.

Mistake Was in Locating It on Baseball Diamond.

Henry Turner Bailey, until recently State Supervisor of Art of Massachusetts, says there is a wrong and a right way to induce the children to love the beautiful, and he tells the following story as an illustration. A superintendent of schools, during the vacation period, made a beautiful garden in a school yard, thinking that if he made it beautiful enough the boys would not destroy it. With September a lot of energetic boys came back to school, and in a few weeks the garden was trampled down and ruined. The townspeople were indignant at the ruffianly behavior of the schoolboys, and spoke of them in rather harsh terms. Early in the spring there was a change of superintendents, and the new man heard almost immediately of the spoiled garden. He went up to the school and made friends with the boys, and then he said, "You boys don't like flowers, do you?" They declared emphatically that they did.

"Then why did you ruin that flower garden?" he asked.

"Well," said the spokesman of the crowd, "they ought to have known better than to make it on our baseball diamond."

COULD NOT FOOL DARWIN.

Great Scientist at Once Settled Status of the Bug.

Miss Daisy Leiter has brought back from London a story about Charles Darwin.

"Two English boys," said Miss Leiter, "being friends of Darwin, thought one day that they would play a joke on him. They caught a butterfly, a grasshopper, a beetle and a centipede, and out of these creatures they made a strange, composite insect. They took the centipede's body, the butterfly's wings, the grasshopper's legs and the beetle's head and they glued them together carefully. Then, with their new bug in a box, they knocked at Darwin's door.

"We caught this bug in a field," they said. "Can you tell us what kind of a bug it is, sir?"

Darwin looked at the bug and then he looked at the boys. He smiled slightly.

"Did it hum when you caught it?" he asked.

"Yes," they answered, nudging one another.

"Then," said Darwin, "it is a hum-bug."

The World Beautiful.

Oh, dwellers on the lovely earth,
Why will ye break your rest and mirth
To weary us with fruitless prayer?
Why will ye toil and take such care
For children's children yet unborn.
And needs his fellow little more
Than these blue waves that kiss the shore.

Oh, fools! when each man plays his part,
And needs his fellow little more
Than these blue waves that kiss the shore.
Take heed of how the daisies grow,
Oh, fools! and if ye could but know
How fair a world to you is given,
O brooder on the hills of heaven.

When for my sins thou drawest me forth,
Hast thou forgot what this was worth,
Thine own hand made? The tears of men,
The death of three score years and ten,
The trembling of the timorous race—
Thine own hand made, thou couldst not know.

To what a heaven the earth might grow,
If underneath the earth were laid,
If hope failed not, nor love decayed.
—William Morris.

Wooling Done by Music.

Among the Yao Midos, one of the many Burmese-Tartar people, the young men woo their wives absolutely without words, but to the sound of music. On the first day of winter they have a great feast, at which all the marriageable girls gather and listen to the music made by the bachelors, who sit under the "desire tree," each playing his favorite instrument. As the maiden he loves passes him the youth plays louder and more feelingly. If the girl ignores him and passes on he knows that she will have none of him; if she steps up to him and lays a flower upon the instrument he jumps up, grasps her by the hand, taking care not to drop the flower, and they go away together.

How Did He Do It?

Charles M. Schwab is still telling his friends his amusing experiences while abroad. One of these relates to an inscription he saw on the placard fastened to the breast of a beggar in Paris. Here is the literal translation:

"Gentlemen and Ladies—Kindly assist a poor man who has lost both his arms and is compelled to hold out his hands for alms."—New York Times.

Stoddard's Modesty.

As is not the case with many present-day celebrities, no one could justly accuse Richard H. Stoddard with being puffed up with an exaggerated idea of his own greatness.

"Well," said a friend to him several years before his death, "the papers will say a lot about you when you die."

"My friend," was the poet's quiet reply, "I will scarcely be mentioned."

TRAPPIST MONKS* HOKKAIDO

(SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE)

I begin this letter in the monastery established by the Roman Catholic monks of La Trappe, near the village of Tobetsu in Hokkaido. As nothing is said of this remarkable institution in any of the guide books of Japan, I think I may dwell somewhat in detail on my experiences here.

The monastery, which is visible from the landing place, is not a building of any architectural pretensions. It consists of a white, barnlike, one-story structure, about 200 feet in length and facing the sea, this main building being flanked by two higher buildings, whose gables are turned toward the visitor and cut in two equal parts by an entrance door, behind which rises a church steeple sixty or eighty feet high, bearing on the summit a cross, and near the summit a large terra cotta image of the Madonna and Child.

The effect of this severe edifice, standing out against a bleak mountain, is austere. Before reaching the mon-visitors would rather serve to amuse them. This, I suppose, is why this custom has been abandoned.

Next the two religieux invite the visitor, by signs only, to follow them to the church "parce que le Maître de la maison, c'est Dieu." On returning to the hotel, one of the two takes up a religious book and reads a chapter of it for the benefit of the newcomers. "Le chapitre que vous entendez lire parait toujours avoir été écrit pour vous."

As I have already remarked, my friend and I were conveyed directly to the hotel, and, as it was near noon, the lay brother who had taken charge of us from the beginning, and who seemed to have charge also of the guests' quarter, hastened to order tiffin for us, deploring at the same time that we had not warned him beforehand of our coming so that he might have had something really nice ready for us.

This lay brother was, strange to astery one passes a long, low building, used as an orphanage, and a more pretentious building used as a school.

A good deal of the land about the monastery seemed to be cultivated by the monks, but their waving fields of corn contrasted strongly with the uncultivated and apparently uninhabited country around about, while the deserted appearance of the gloomy building in front of us was heightened by the entire absence of life and movement. It was not till we had arrived at the entrance gate that there was any indication that the place was not deserted. A busy, bustling little brother in a brown monk's robe, with a hood and a leathern girdle, then rushed out to welcome us. His head was bare, his grown beard, long and flowing, his face rather handsome, with aquiline nose and bright, vivacious eyes, but rather pale and worn. He insisted on carrying our luggage himself to the guests' quarter on the right, which contained by far the most comfortable rooms in the house.

Everything our eyes encountered was monastic. The entrance hall contained large statues of the Sacre Coeur, Notre Dame de Lourdes, and St. Joseph. The long cloister along which we passed was hung with sacred texts and pious maxims in Latin and Japanese.

It seems that we were not received exactly according to the manner laid down in the rules, but it can be easily understood of course that some unimported changes in matters of detail may be advantageously made in this country. According to the old rule of the order two religieux present themselves first of all before the visitor and prostrate themselves flat on the floor, remaining in that position a few seconds, their foreheads pressed against the threshold. This is, as may be seen, exactly similar to the ordinary everyday method of salutation in use among Japanese tea-house girls, and far from impressing Japanese ter water is frozen in the chapel, even at a short distance from the stove.

The wind, too, is sometimes very strong, and on that account there are double windows in at least one chamber, a chamber set apart for guests.

The monks get seven hours' sleep. They go to bed at 8, rise at 2, and sleep for an hour after the midday repast, which is the only meal they take, excepting a light collation in the evening.

Old Bell in Hokkaido.

Old Bell in Hokkaido.

Occasionally Verestchagin, in his efforts after realism, made some strange mistakes. There is, for instance, a picture of his representing the execution of rebels during the Indian mutiny which is very powerful. Unfortunately, however, the artist had not apparently known of the change in British military costume, and in consequence the British soldiers in the picture are represented as wearing the helmets which did not come into use in the army for more than a quarter of a century after the mutiny.

FRENCH LOVE OF SHOES.

Well Illustrated by Incidents of the Early Republic.

Albert Vaudan, a French writer, tells this story of the early days of the French republic, which followed the downfall of Louis Napoleon: "One day there came to Tours a hundred volunteers from the south, wearing enormously broad-brimmed felt hats and dressed in sable garments all over. They looked like funeral mutes, and they were evidently determined to act up to their appearance, for, wondrous to relate, they marched through the principal streets without opening their lips—a proceeding somewhat different from that of the rest. As a matter of course, the crowd was tragically impressed. The impression, however, did not last long. The volunteers felt thirsty, and their chief, who wore a still more enormous hat than his men, signaled to them in the middle of the Rue Royale to halt for refreshment. That spoiled the whole tragic part of the business, for when these southerners had opened their mouths there was a difficulty of closing them again. The moment drink was in speech was out. They informed their admirers that they had come from the department of Gers and that they had made a terrible pact. A hundred and one, including their leader, they had started from their homes; a hundred and one they would return. If one of them was killed the whole would perish in their efforts to avenge him."

SAVED BY CLEVER RUSE.

How Lunatic Asylum Doctor Escaped Threatened Ducking.

The doctor of a lunatic asylum was in the bathroom one day watching a number of his patients bathe, when one of them called out suddenly, "Let's duck the doctor." The cry was taken up at once, "Let's duck the doctor!"

Seeing his danger, the doctor, with great promptitude, said—

"All right, boys; but suppose, now, you give the doctor a cheer before ducking him."

This reasonable proposition was at once acceded to, and a ringing cheer resounded through the building, which at once brought the keepers, as the doctor expected, and he was saved.

The Use of Flowers.

God might have made the earth bring forth

Enough for great and small,
The oak tree and the cedar tree,
Without a flower at all.

We might have had enough, enough
For every want and curse,
For luxury, medicine, and toll,
And yet have had no flowers.

The one within the mountain mine
Requ shore not to grow;
Nor doth it need the lotus flower
To make the river flow.

The clouds might give abundant rain;
The nightly dew might fall;
And the herb that keepeth life in man
Might yet have drunk them all.

Then wherefore, wherefore were they made?

All dyed with rainbow light,
All fashioned with supremest grace,
Uprising day and night—
Springing in valleys green and low,
And on the mountains high,
And in the silent wilderness
Where no man passes by?

Our outward life requires them not—
Then wherefore had they birth?
To minister delight to man,
To beautify the earth?

To comfort man, to whisper hope,
—Where'er his faith is dim,
For whose careth for the flowers,
Will much more care for him.

—Mary Hewitt.

Doctors' Ailments.

Some statistics just published in Austria throw an interesting light on the ailments from which doctors suffer. One fact is instructive. The medical profession contributes only 7 per cent to the mortality from tuberculosis, which speaks volumes for the efficacy of intelligent precaution. On the other hand, for some reason not very apparent, 40 per cent of doctors die from diseases of the heart or of the nervous system, while also 40 per cent of Austrian victims of the morphia habit are medical men. The average age of Austrian doctors is 60.

Fair Japanese Smoke.

Smoking is almost a universal custom among Japanese women. The empress uses a silver pipe with a stem ten inches long. The bowl is small—in fact, only a quantity of tobacco sufficient to give the smoker two or three whiffs can be put into it. Then the ashes are knocked out and the pipe is carefully cleaned before it is refilled. To an American this form of smoking seems to involve too much work. A pipe is cleaned many times in the course of an afternoon. The Japanese word for smoking means, literally, "drinking tobacco."

Cause of Imperfect Feet.

Savages readily discern that the most curious deformity achieved by civilized people is produced in their feet by means of the civilized shoe. Col. Henry, a medical officer, asserts that a large proportion of the volunteers for the United States army have to be rejected on account of imperfect feet. Savage peoples do not distort their feet. They wear sandals or moccasins or fur boots, but their footgear always conforms to, and does not have to be broken in by, the foot.

Error of Verestchagin.

Occasionally Verestchagin, in his efforts after realism, made some strange mistakes. There is, for instance, a picture of his representing the execution of rebels during the Indian mutiny which is very powerful. Unfortunately, however, the artist had not apparently known of the change in British military costume, and in consequence the British soldiers in the picture are represented as wearing the helmets which did not come into use in the army for more than a quarter of a century after the mutiny.

Startling Evidence.

Fresh testimony in great quantity is constantly coming in, declaring Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds to be unequalled. A recent expression from T. J. A Promising Chimpanzee.

A chimpanzee taken to England lately from the United States is said to be on the point of talking. It already makes guttural sounds which its attendants can understand. But a dog can do as much as that. When it was shown at the Buffalo exposition a German doctor who had to do with deaf-mutes said that a slight operation upon one of the ligaments of the tongue would enable the animal to speak. At that time the chimpanzee was under contract. But it will probably now be taken to Germany for the operation. It can even now use a typewriter and play the piano. But these professions are overcrowded. A talking chimpanzee would make an excellent living, even though, like many other talkers, it said nothing worth hearing.

A Marvelous Watch.

A marvelous watch is that of which a gentleman in Berlin is the proud owner. It is less than a quarter of an inch in diameter, the face being about the size of the head of a small drawing-pin. The case is of gold, and the whole watch weighs under two grains (the two hundred and fortieth part of an ounce, troy). The works and hands are of the finest tempered steel, and the "jewels" consist of minute fragments of diamond. But even this does not exhaust its marvels. It actually has a tiny dial to mark the seconds, just as so many large watches have. The hand of this dial is less than one-sixteenth of an inch long. It is a keyless watch of the latest pattern, and the owner would not sell it for five hundred pounds. Probably there is no finer timepiece in the world. Its marvels of workmanship can only be properly appreciated with the aid of a microscope.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Not Taking Anything.

"Have you taken anything for your trouble?" asked the doctor of a long, lank, hungry-looking man, who complained of being "run down." "Well, I haven't been taking much of anything; that is, nothing to speak of. I took a couple of bottles of Pinkham's Bitters a little while back, and a bottle of Quicken's Invigorator, with a couple of boxes of curem's pills, and a lot of quinine and some root bitters. I've got a porous plaster on my back, and I'm wearing an electric belt, and taking red clover four times a day, with a dose or two of salts every other day; excepting for that I'm not taking anything."

What They Were Good For.

Sir Thomas Lipton and Nikola Tesla were discussing the future of Ireland, over a companionable glass and a good cigar, in the Waldorf-Astoria last week. The baronet was not inclined to share the inventor's opinion, and finally, with a little impatience, he asked: "Well, Mr. Tesla, what do you think Irishmen are good for, anyway?" "They're good for what might be made out of them," was the quick reply, and Sir Thomas smiled and kept silence.—New York Times.

Wise Shoemakers.

The shoemakers at Madrid recently combined to encourage dancing, with the object of wearing out as much shoe leather as possible. They hired several dancing halls and charged sixpence admission. Each admission ticket bears a coupon, twenty of which entitle the owner to a new pair of shoes free of charge at the union store.

Vanity Fair Rig.

A thief near Rossie made up a rig from several farms. He secured a horse from one pasture, a harness from the barn of another farmer, and a carriage from still a third. After driving a short distance the thief left the whole outfit in a desolate part of the road.—Franklin County (N. Y.) Forum.

When Guests are Expected.

In preparing a room for a guest, if only for a few days, do not neglect to place a variety of books at his disposal, says the Washington Star. If there is no bookshelf in the room, books and magazines should be placed on a low table near the window. Many a visitor has gone through tortured, sleepless nights in a strange house, with not a line of reading matter to be got at.
